κεκρύφαλος [m.] 'hair-net of a woman, envelopped by the ἀναδέσμη' (Il.), also 'part of the head-stall of a bridle' (X., Att. inscr.), 'pouch of the belly of a hunting-net' (X., Plu.); 'the second stomach of a ruminant, reticulum' (Arist.; Strömberg 1944: 63f.). See Marinatos 1967: B 22. ◄PG► •ETYM Technical word of unknown, perhaps Asiatic origin, that may have been reshaped after κρύφα, κρύπτω. Unacceptable IE (κρύπτω, κορυφή, κρόκη) and Semitic etymologies in Bq. No doubt Pre-Greek.

κέλαδος [m.] 'sound, noise, sharp sound' (Il.; on mg. and spread see Trümpy 1950: 155). ◄?►

•COMP Rarely in compounds, e.g. κελαδο-δρόμος 'who runs in the noise' (Orph.; of Artemis), δυσ-κέλαδος 'with terrible noise' (Π 357); on Ἐγ-κέλαδος s.v.
•DER κελαδεινός (Aeolic -εννός Pi.) 'noisy, sounding' (Il.; Chantraine 1933: 195f.); κελαδῆτις 'id.' (γλῶσσα, Pi. N. 4, 86); κελάδων, -οντος 'id.' (Il.), also a river name (H 133; see Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 2 (1950-1951): 236; Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 3 (1951-1952): 162), rather a secondary formation in -ντ- (cf. on ἱμάς) than from a denominative *κελάδω (Schwyzer: 723, Bechtel 1914 s.v. κέλαδος). Denominative κελαδέω 'to sound, make noise' also transitive 'to sing of' (Il.), aor. κελαδῆσαι, with κελάδημα (E.).
•ETYM Formation like ὅμαδος, χρόμαδος, ῥοῖβδος, etc. (Schwyzer: 508, Chantraine 1933: 359f.). Not related to καλέσαι, κλητός, which is from kelh_1-* and would give -ελε-. It has been compared with ► κελαρύζω.

κελαινός [adj.] 'black, dark' (Il.). ◄?, PG?►
•COMP As a first member e.g. in haplological κελαι(νο)-νεφής 'with black clouds', of Ζεύς (Hom., Pi.); also of αἷμα (Hom.), of πεδίον, σκότος (Pi.); explanation in Leumann 1950: 202ff.
•DER Denominative verbs: κελαινόομαι 'to get dark' (A. Ch. 413, lyr.), κελαινιάω 'to be black' (Opp., Nonn.), after the verbs of disease in -ιάω, Schwyzer: 732.
•ETYM Morphologically isolated and therefore difficult to assess. For the ending, cf. περκνός, ἐρεμνός, et al., but κελαι- remains unclear. Assuming a suffix -ιο-, we arrive at an n-stem kel-n-*, which may be found in Lat. colum-ba 'dove' (after its color). See further ► κηλίς. One might think of Pre-Greek kelan^y-o-*, with a palatalized nasal.

κελαρύζω [v.] 'to babble, murmur', of water (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Only present stem except aor. κελάρυξε (Lyr. Adesp. 90, 1).
•DER κελάρυσμα 'murmuring' (Opp.), κελάρυξις 'id.' (H.).
•ETYM Expressive sound-word in -(ρ)ύζω, like τονθορύζω, γογγύζω, ὀλολύζω, κλύζω, probably related to κέλωρ· φωνή 'voice' (H.) (also κελωρύειν, -ρύσας H.), first from an adjective *κελαρός, -ής (as ὕδωρ : ὑδαρής; see Bechtel 1914 s.v.), or from a by-form *κέλαρ (cf. τέκμωρ : τέκμαρ; cf. Bq and Benveniste 1935: 17); otherwise, from κέλαδος? Certainly not related to καλέσαι.

κελεα [f.] name of an agon for youths in Sparta (Lacon. inscr., imperial period), cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 376. ◄PG► •VAR Also ntr.pl.? Also -εια, -ηα, -οια; καιλοῖα, -υα.
•ETYM A hypothesis by Laum in Wahrmann Glotta 17 (1929): 242. The variation suggests a Pre-Greek word; cf. on ► κειρία. See DELG s.v. κελοῖα.

κελέβη [f.] 'vase with a big opening, kind of mixing bowl' (Anacr., Theoc., Call.). ◄PG?►
•DER κελεβήϊον (Antim. 17).
•ETYM Hebr. koeloeb 'vase' was compared by Lewy 1895: 104, but the Semitic word does not exist; see E. Masson 1967:107f. Cf. also Kretschmer Glotta 11 (1921): 284. Acc. to Güntert 1932: 27², it is related to Lat. calpar; see on ► κάλπις. Schröder Germ.-rom.

Monatsschrift N.F. 10 (1960): 184 compares λέβης with 'movable κ-'. More probably, the word is Pre-Greek (though a suffix -εβ- is unknown).

κελεβρά [n.pl.] · λεπτὰ καὶ νεκρὰ κτήνη 'weak and dying herds' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The gloss is reminiscent of κενέβρεια. Is it corrupt?

κελεῖς · ἀξίνη 'axe' (H.). ⇒κελεός.

-κελεμν- ⇒ἀμφικέλεμνον, κελέοντες.

κελένδρυνον [?] · δρύινον, κελαιόν. λέγεται δὲ καὶ μυσκέλενδρον (?)· καὶ τὸ μακρόν (H.); κελενδρύονα· ἀπὸ τοῦ κελέοντος καὶ τῆς δρυὸς ὡς μακρὸν καὶ δασύ (Phot. 154, 4). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM These glosses are probably corrupt. The word(s) look Pre-Greek.

κελέοντες [m.pl.] 'the beams of the standing loom' (Ar. Fr. 795, Antipho Fr. 11, Theoc., Ant. Lib.), acc. to H. also τὰ ὁπωσοῦν μακρὰ ξύλα, δοκοί, ἱστοί 'wood that is long in some sense, beams, masts or looms'. ◂IE?▸ •ETYM Acc. to Frisk IF 49 (1931): 97f., originally a pres.ptc. of *κελέω, which would be a denominative of *κέλος and mean "rising up" vel sim. Formally, the latter could be compared with OCS čelo 'forehead', and further connected with ▸κολωνός. It does not belong to κελοί = ξύλα (H.); cf. on ▸κελεός. Fur. 245 assumes a pre-form *κελέϝοντες as a variant of *κελεμος, which stands beside -κελεμνο- seen in ▸ἀμφικέλεμνον.

κελεός [m.] 'green woodpecker, Picus viridis' (Arist.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM For the suffix see Chantraine 1933: 51. Perhaps it belongs to ▸κολάπτω, ▸κόλος, together with κελοί = ξύλα (H.) as "chopper, cutter" vel sim. (see ▸κελέοντες)? Some recognize a diminutive in κελεῖς· ἀξίνη (H.), "hacking". Bechtel KZ 44 (1911): 357 connected Lith. kùlti 'to thresh', but acc. to Huber 1921: 16, the variae lectiones καλιός, κολιός, etc. are a sign of foreign origin. It is probable that these variations are due to Pre-Greek origin.

κελέτρα [f.] a term of land (IG 9(2), 521 [Larissa III^a]). ◂?▸ •ETYM The precise meaning is unknown. Frisk Symb. Oslo. 11 (1932): 64ff. analyzed it as 'drove', connecting it with ▸κέλομαι, ▸κέλλω. Unclear.

κέλευθος [f.] 'road, path, course, journey' (Il., also IG 5(2), 3: 23 [Tegea IV^a]). ◂?▸ •VAR Also ntr.pl. -α.
•COMP Rarely as a first member, e.g. κελευθο-ποιός 'making a path' (A.), more often as a second member, e.g. ἱππο-κέλευθος 'making the road on a chariot, chariot-fighter' (Il., of Patroclus); ▸ἀκόλουθος 'following, attending'.
•DER κελεύθειἄ [f.] 'goddess of the road', epithet of Athena in Sparta (Paus. 3, 12, 4), after the nouns in -ειᾰ; κελευθείας· τὰς ἐνοδίους δαίμονας 'the divinities [whose statues were situated] on the way' (H.); κελευθήτης 'voyager' (AP 6, 120), after ἀγυιήτης, πολιήτης et al.
•ETYM The difficulty of finding a parallel for the suffix -θ- within Greek resulted in attempts to connect κέλευθος with the root ἐλευθ- (in ἐλεύσομαι, etc.). For these old attempts, see Frisk s.v. Specht 1944: 254 and 280 suggested direct connection with κελεύειν, comparing th in Skt. pánthāḥ 'road' (see on ▸πόντος) and in Lith. keliũta 'road'. Since the latter is clearly built on kēli-as 'road, street, course', it has no direct connection with κέλευθος; cf. Fraenkel KZ 72 (1955): 177. The word therefore remains without etymology. On κέλευθος and its relatives, see Ruijgh 1957: 123f.

κελεύω [v.] 'to urge, drive on, exhort, command' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. κελεῦσαι.
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. παρα-, δια-, ἐπι-, ἐν-.
•DER Derivations from compounded verbs are frequent, but are not indicated separately here: κέλευ(σ)μα 'exhortation, command' (IA), also 'call of the κελευστής', κελευσμός (IA), κελευσμοσύνη (Hdt.), κέλευσις (Att.) 'id.'; κελευστής 'commander of the rowers' (Att.; on the mg. see Richardson Class. Quart. 37 (1943): 55ff.); κελευστικός 'exhorting' (Att.). Enlarged ptc. κελευτιόων, -όωντε (-άων, -άοντε) 'stimulating, inciting' (N 125, M 265), the model for which is unclear, cf. Schwyzer: 732^5.
•ETYM If from ▸κέλομαι 'to incite, set in movement', the -ευ- remains unexplained; it may be the same element as in κέλευθος 'road', and perhaps also in ▸τελευτή, but we do not know.

κελεφός [adj.] 'leprous' (Cat. Cod. Astr. 8 (4), 189). ◂LW Sem.▸
•COMP As a first member in κελυφο-κομεῖον 'hospital for lepers' (BMus. Cat. Copt. MSS. p. 453, Nr. 1077).
•DER κελεφία 'leprosy' (Cyran. 15).
•ETYM Synonymous ἀλφός 'lepra' has the same word-ending. Benveniste RPh. 38 (1964): 7ff. argued that the word was taken from Semitic, e.g. Syrian qəlāfā 'cortex, squama, putamen', qəlāfānā 'lepra'. Strömberg 1944: 99 thinks it is just a phonetic variant of κέλυφος 'shell' (with oppositive accent), which is semantically possible but seems improbable to me. See ▸κέλυφος.

κέλης, -ητος [m.] 'runner' (ι 371), cf. Delebecque 1951: 49f.; also a fast-sailing ship (IA). ◂IE? *kel- 'run'▸ •VAR Also Lacon. κέληξ 'runner' (IG 5(1), 213 [Sparta V^a]).
•DER κελήτιον 'sloop, shallop' (Th., App.); κελητίζω [v.] 'to ride on race-horses' (O 679), κελητιᾶν· κελητίζειν, ἱππεύειν 'to be a horseman' (H.).
•ETYM Perhaps a derivation in -ητ- (or -ηκ-) from ▸κέλομαι 'to incite'. From Greek, Lat. celēs, celōx (after vēlōx) 'fast-sailing ship' was borrowed.

κελλάς [adj.] · μονόφθαλμος 'one-eyed' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM A remarkable semantic identity as well as formal similarity are found in OIr. coll, Skt. kāṇá- 'one-eyed'. These may represent IE *kol-no-. The geminate -λλ- may go back to -λν-, which in turn could be derived from an n-stem. The ending of κελλάς is different; Frisk and DELG suggest that it could be the feminine of κελλός, which H. glosses as στρεβλός, πλάγιος 'twisted, athwart'. The fact that the proposed cognates have o-vocalism casts doubts on the comparison (or could it point to an old n-stem?). Fur.: 354 connects it with κίλλιξ (H.), which is rather improbable.

κελλίβας ⇒ κιλλίβας.

κέλλω [v.] 'to drive, incite' (both trans. and intr.), 'to pull (a ship) ashore, to land' (Od.). ◂IE? kel- 'drive, incite'; (ὀ)κέλλω PG?▸
•VAR The present only attested in grammarians. Aor. κέλσαι (Od.), fut. κέλσω (A., E.), κελῶ (H.).
•COMP One asssumes a prefix ►ὀ- in ὀκέλλω [v.] 'to pull ashore' (IA), aor. ὀκεῖλαι, but this is unlikely (see ►ὀ-). Rarely with preverbs ἐπι-, ἐγ-, εἰσ-, συγ-κέλσαι (epic, Hp., Ar.); ἐπ-έκειλα Act. Ap. 27, 41.
•DER κέλομαι [v.] 'to drive on, exhort, call' (Il., Dor.) rarely with ἐπι-, παρα-; reduplicated aor. (ἐ)κέκλετο (Il.), to which a new present κέκλομαι (A. R.), also aor. (ἐ)κελήσατο (Pi., Epich., Epid.), fut. κελήσομαι (κ 296). Athematic κέντο (Alcm. 141) < *κέλτο with dialectal Laconian devopment. See also ►κέλης, ►κελεύω; doubtful is the appurtenance of ►κλόνος.
•ETYM It is often assumed (e.g. DELG) that κέλλω 'to spur' and κέλλω 'to drive ashore' (in unprefixed form; the latter occurs only in grammarians) are cognate, and that ὀκέλλω continues an old prefix ὀ-, also assumed in ὄζος 'branch' < Hosdo-. For the meaning 'to call' of κέλομαι, one has to assume that it secondarily developed from 'to drive on, summon, request'. However, this meaning is also reminiscent of καλεῖν, so we may also envisage two separate words for Greek: 1) (ὀ)κέλλω 'to haul ashore', which is Pre-Greek ("prothetic" vowel, and a technical term), and 2) κελ- 'to drive, summon'. The question remains, then, whether some or all forms of the latter derive from $*kelh_1$- 'to call' (thus, LIV[2] s.v. kel- connect the reduplicated aorist (ἐ)κέκλετο with καλέω).
Connections with other languages are scarce and rather doubtful. Semantically, the secondary present Skt. kalayati (kāl-) 'drives' is close to Greek, but its appurtenance is uncertain (it could belong to kerH- 'to strew', acc. to LIV[2] l.c.). In Tocharian, we find PTo. kəl- relflected in ToB 3sg.pres.med. kalṣtär 'goads' (only twice in this meaning), from which perhaps the pres. ToB kalṣäṃ 'to bear, endure', pret. keltsa developed. Not connected is PTo. $*kəl^a$- 'lead, bring' from $*k^welh_1$- 'to turn'; although it fits well semantically with the present root, its seṭ-character precludes comparison with κέλλω 'to drive'. A comparable nominal formation is Lat. celer 'quick'.
The meaning of (ὀ)κέλλω 'to run a ship aground', the usual way of landing (except in a harbor), is so concrete that I would assume a separate Pre-Greek verb; but I see no further indications for substrate origin.

κέλῦφος [n.] 'husk or skin of fruit, skin of an onion, eggshell' (Ar. V. 545 [lyr.], Arist., Thphr., AP). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •DER κελύφιον (Arist.), κελύφανον 'id.' (Lyc., Luc.), κελυφανώδης 'like a shell' (Thphr.); also κολύφανον· φλοιός, λεπύριον 'bark; husk, skin., etc.' (H.), perhaps with -ο- after κολεός, etc.
•ETYM For the neutral gender, which is rare in derivations in -φ-, cf. the synonyms σκῦτος, νάκος, δέρος, etc. On account of the semantic and formal similarity, κέλυφος has been connected with the group of ►καλύπτω. Since the latter is Pre-

Greek, the same must be true of the present entry. Note -υφ-, which may be a Pre-Greek suffix. Cf. on ►κολέον.

κέλωρ 1, -ωρος [m.] 'descendant, son' (E. Andr. 1033 [lyr.], Lyc.). ◂IE? kelH- 'rise', kelH-ōr▸ •DER κελώριον· παιδίον 'young child' (H.).
•ETYM The ending (cf. ἔλωρ, τέκμωρ) suggests an original neuter 'descendance'. Perhaps it arose from *κέρωρ by dissimilation, from the root $*k̑erh_3$- 'to grow, create' in Arm. ser 'generation, descendance' (cf. ►κορέννυμι and ►κόρη). Alternatively, Fur.: 212[50] suggested Pre-Greek origin, comparing other forms in -ωρ like ἄχωρ, ἴχωρ, βιάτωρ, λείτωρ, ψόθωρ, but there are no further indications in this direction. Indo-European origin seems likely, and derivation from kelH- 'to rise' seems quite possible, cf. Lith. kiltis 'clan'.

κέλωρ 2 [m.] · ἐκτομίας, γάλλος, σπάδων 'eunuch' (H.). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM If dissimilated from *κέρωρ, the word may derive from ►κείρω 'to cut'. However, given the meaning, one would rather expect a foreign word.

κέλωρ 3 [?] · φωνή 'voice' (H.).
•DER κελωρύειν· κεκραγέναι, βοᾶν 'to cry aloud, shout' (H., Phot.), κελωρύσας· φωνήσας, βοήσας 'having produced a sound, cried aloud' (H.). ⇒ κελαρύζω.

κεμάς, -άδος [f.] 'young deer, young dog' (K 361, A. R., Call.). ◂IE $*k̑emh_2$- 'without horn'▸ •VAR Also κεμμάς (Q. S., AP, H.; hypocoristic gemination?) and κεμφάς (H.), perhaps after the animal names in -φάς, -φος, like γρομφάς.
•COMP κεμαδο-σσόος 'hunting young deer' (Nonn.).
•DER κεμήλιος epithet of Dionysus (Alc. G 1, 8); other interpretations in Risch IF 33 (1913/1914): 195 (see also on ►κειμήλιον). Note also ►κέμων.
•ETYM A derivation in -άς, probably from an o-stem *κέμος = Skt. śáma- 'without horn' (cf. λίθος beside λιθάς). Cf. the Germanic word for 'hind, doe', e.g. OHG hinta [f.] < PGm. hin-ðī < IE k̑em-ti- (enlarged like hund 'dog' < PGm. hun-ða- < IE k̑un-tó-; see on ►κύων). Lubotsky 1988: 76 assumes a root $*k̑emh_2$-. The zero grade of the root is found in Lith. šmùlas 'without horn'.

κέμμερος [m.] · ἀχλύς, ὁμίχλη 'mist, fog' (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

κέμων [adj.] · ἑτερόφθαλμος 'one-eyed' (H.). ◂IE? sk̑em- 'mutilated'(?)▸ •ETYM Unknown; cf. perhaps Pok. 929 sk̑em- 'mutilated'. DELG suggests it is a mistake for κέλλων; cf. on ►κελλάς.

κενέβρεια [n.pl.] 'carrion, especially of dead cattle' (Ar. Av. 538, Erot., Phot.); also 'dog-meat market' (Erot.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also sg. (Ael. NA 6, 2).
•ETYM Unknown. Cf. ►κινάβρα. It looks like a Pre-Greek word.

κενεών 'hollow between ribs and hip, flank'. ⇒ κενός.

κενός [adj.] 'empty, idle' (Att.). ◂IE *k̑en- 'empty', *k̑en-u-▸ •VAR Epic κενε(ϝ)ός (also IA, Cypr. and Epid.), epic Ion. κεινός (since Il.).
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. κενε-αυχέες [voc.pl.] (Θ 230), -έα (AP), κεν-αυχής (Plu., AP) 'empty, vain' (the second member belongs to αὐχέω 'to boast', if it was not reshaped after this for earlier -ευχέες after εὖχος, ►εὔχομαι; see Wackernagel 1916: 65); κέν-ανδρος 'empty of men' (A. Pers. 119 [lyr.], S. OC 917), whence -ία (A. Pers. 730 [troch.]), cf. Sommer 1948: 191; κεν-εμβατέω lit. "tread on emptiness", 'lack a solid foundation, reach a cavity', whence κενεμβάτησις (Plu., medic.), as if from *κεν-εμβάτης (after other derivatives in -βατέω derived from compounds with -βάτης).
•DER κενεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'the hollow space between hip and ribs' (epic Ion., X., LXX); κενεότης (-νότης) [f.] 'emptiness' (IA); κενήριον = κενοτάφιον (Hell.), probably after ἠρίον, if not composed with it; thence ψευδήριον 'id.' (Lyc.). Denominative κενόω, -νεόω [v.] 'to empty, make desert' (IA), whence κένωσις, -νέωσις 'emptying' (Ion. poet., Att.), κενώσιμος (Anon. apud Suid.), κένωμα, -νέωμα [n.] 'empty space' (Hell.), κενωτικός [adj.] 'emptying' (Gal.).
•ETYM Att. κενός and Ion. κεινός, both from *κενϝός, may be compared with στενϝός. Further, κενεϝός is reminiscent of ἐτεϝός. We should assume an old υ-stem *κενύς (it is not found in De Lamberterie 1990: 187f.). Ruijgh Minos 20-22 (1987): 537 compares the ablauting pair with ὀλοός << *ol-ewo- and οὖλος < *ol-wo-. The root correspondence between κενός and the Arm. o-stem sin, gen. sn-oy 'id.' < IE *k̑en-o- is noteworthy. See Clackson 1994: 138-9 on this lexical correspondence.

κεντέω [v.] 'to sting, goad' (Pi.). ◂IE *k̑ent- 'sting'▸ •VAR Aor. κένσαι (Ψ 337), κεντῆσαι (Hp.), κέντασα (Theoc. 19, 1), pass. κεντηθῆναι (Arist.), fut. κεντηθήσομαι (Hdt.), κεντήσω (S.), κεκέντημαι (Hp.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. κατα-, παρα-, ἀπο-, δια-.
•DER 1. κένσαι < *κέντ-σαι points to a root κεντ-, which developed to κεσ- before dental. Thus κεσ-τός < *κεντ-τός 'stitched' (epic); κέσ-τρον 'pointed iron' (Plin.), κεστρωτός and κέστρωσις (H.), presupposing *κεστρόω, κέσ-τρος 'kind of arrow, etc.' (Plb., D. H., H.), diminutive κεστρίον (Attica) and κέστρειον 'stock of arrows (?)' (Delos III[a]); κέσ-τρα [f.] 'sharp hammer, arrow' (S., Ph. Bel., Hero), also a fish name = σφύραινα (Ar.; after the shape of the body, see Strömberg 1943: 35); κεστρεύς 'mullet' (IA) and κεστρῖνος, -ινίσκος 'id.' (com.). 2. κέντρον 'sting', as a geometrical technical term also 'leg of a compass, centre of a circle' (Il.), perhaps a reshaping of κέστρον after κεντέω; thence many compounds and derivatives, e.g. κεντρ-ηνεκής 'driven by a goad' (Il.; cf. δουρ-, ποδ-ηνεκής); substantive ►κέντρων; adjectives like κεντρικός, κεντρώδης, κεντρήεις; fish and plant names like κεντρίνης, κεντρίσκος, κεντρίτης; denominative verbs κεντρόω 'to provide with a sting, to sting' (IA), κεντρίζω 'to sting' (X.); from κέντρον as a back-formation κέντωρ [m.] 'stimulator, driver' (Il., AP). 3. From κεντέω (κεντῆσαι, -σω): κέντημα 'stitching, mosaic' (Arist., inscr. Smyrna [imperial period]), κεντητής 'mosaic-worker' (Edict. Diocl.), κεντητήριον 'picker' (Luc.), κεντητικός 'stingy' (Thphr.), κεντητός 'stitched, with mosaic' (Epict., pap.). 4. κοντός [m.] 'pole, crutch, staff to spur on cattle' (ι 487), which was borrowed into Lat. contus, percontor; thence κοντά-κιον, -άριον, -ίλος, -ωτός, etc.; κοντός 'short' (Adam.) arose by reanalysis of κοντο-μάχος, -βόλος, -βολέω, where κοντός was taken as 'short'; likewise in κοντο-πορεία (Plb.).
•ETYM The sigmatic aorist κένσαι < *κέντ-σαι is old; the formation of the present κεντέω is unclear (one would expect *κοντέω); thence κεντῆσαι, κεντήσω, etc. were created. Other languages have only isolated nominal formations: OHG hantag 'pointed', derived from PGm. handa-* (identical formation with κοντός), Latv. sīts 'hunting spear' < IE *k̑n̥t-o-. Celtic words like Bret. kentr 'spur', W cethr 'nail' were probably all borrowed from Lat. centrum.

κέντρον 'sting, goad, etc.'. ⇒κεντέω.

κέντρων 1, -ωνος [m.] 'rogue' (S. Fr. 329, Ar. Nu. 450).
•ETYM From κέντρον; see ►κεντέω. Originally meant "who bears the mark of the κέντρος".

κέντρων 2, -ωνος [m.] 'piece of patchwork' (Hell.). ◂LW Lat.▸
•DER κεντρωνάριον (pap. -όριον) mg. unknown (POxy. 2, 326 [I[p]]).
•ETYM From Lat. centō 'id.' and adapted to κέντρον. It cannot be established whether ►κέντρων 1 had any influence.

κέπφος [m.] name of an unknown water-bird, mostly identified with the stormy petrel, Thalassidroma pelagica, but without sufficient reason (Arist., Thphr., Lyc., Nic.); also metaph. of a simple man who can easily be deceived (Ar., Call.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER κεπφόομαι 'to be deceived easily, be simple' (LXX, Cic.).
•ETYM A by-form is κεμπός· κοῦφος, ἐλαφρὸς ἄνθρωπος 'stupid person' (H.), where the prenasalization shows that the word is Pre-Greek. For the semantics, cf. the description of the bird κέπφος in H.: εἶδος ὀρνέου κουφοτάτου, etc., so 'a featherlight kind of bird'. Solmsen IF 30 (1912): 7[1] compared Lat. hebes 'blunt', but the bird name is no doubt primary. See Thompson 1895 s.v. See ►κάμπος.

κεραΐζω [v.] 'to destroy' (Il.). ◂IE *k̑erh$_2$- 'damage', intr. 'fall apart'▸ •VAR Aor. κεραΐσαι (Hdt.), -ῗξαι (Nonn.), fut. inf. κεραϊξέμεν (Π 830 for κεραϊζέμεν acc. to Bekker).
•COMP Also with ἐκ- (Call., AP).
•DER κεραϊστής 'destroyer' (h. Merc. 336; Zumbach 1955: 7), κεραϊσμός 'destruction' (D. H.).
•ETYM The secondary present κεραΐζω, which stands at the basis of the group, may have replaced an older primary verb. Skt. retains a nasal present in śr̥ṇā́ti 'breaks', but the etymological connection (thus Frisk) with OIr. ar-a-chrin 'to fear, perish' is not followed anymore in Matasović 2009. The disyllabic stem κερα- has an exact counterpart in the Skt. aorist aśarīt and in the OIr. preterit do-cer 'he fell', from IE k̑erh$_2$-. In Greek, this stem is also seen in ἀ-κέραιος 'unhurt', and possibly also in ►ἀκήρατος 'id.' (η perhaps by metrical lengthening; cf. s.v.). The form ►κεραυνός is an independent formation; ►κήρ does not belong here.

κεραΐς [f.] 'black radish', acc. to Thphr. a medical name of the wild radish, ῥάφανος ἀγρία. ◂LW Balkans▸ •VAR Only acc. κεραῒν (Thphr. HP 9, 15, 5; cerain Plin. HN 19, 82); the accent given by Frisk is probably wrong.

•ETYM The agreement with the Slavic word for 'horse-radish, Cochlearia Armoracia' (e.g. Ru. xren, Cz. křen) is due to a loan from a common source. See Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 55.

κεραΐς [f.] 'a small bird' (Lyc. 1317). ◂IE? *ḱerh$_2$-u- 'horn'▸
•VAR Acc. -ΐδα
•ETYM Acc. to the sch., the name of a small bird that was put beside Medea in the passage cited. The gloss κεραΐς· κορώνη (H.) also refers to this. Originally a feminine of κεραός 'horned', and therefore a bird of the Bucerotidae, says Frisk. However, note that this pre-form would have to yield a short -α-, while DELG gives a long α (s.v. κεραΐς, but not s.v. κεραός).

κεράμβυξ, -υκος [m.] 'longicorn beetle' (Nic. Fr. 39, H.); on the mg. see Goossens Ant. class. 17 (1948): 263ff. ◂PG(S,V)▸ •ETYM Cf. σήραμβος, κόλυμβος, κόρυμβος, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 261) and βόμβυξ, ὄρτυξ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 383 and 397). Another formation is κεράμβηλον, glossed as κάνθαρος 'beetle' by H. and others; cf. πέτηλος, κίβδηλος, etc. The form cannot be derived from κέρας 'horn'. If the word has prenasalization, which seems probable, it is of Pre-Greek origin. Moreover, -ηλ(ο)- and -υκ- are Pre-Greek suffixes. Fur. (passim) compares κᾶραβος, καρά(μ)βιος, and καραβίδες, as well as *σκαραβαῖος (all names of beetles); the form with κερα- may have been adapted to κέρας by folk etymology.

κέραμος [m.] 'potter's earth, tile, earthen vessel, jar, wine-jar, pottery' (Il.), in E 387 denoting a (subterranean) dungeon, a use which is Cyprian acc. to the scholiast (on this topic Leumann 1950: 270[17], 273, and Latte Glotta 34 (1955): 200ff., who compares σιρός· πίθος, δεσμωτήριον 'large wine-jar, prison' (H.) for the semantics. ◂PG?▸
•DIAL Myc. ke-ra-me-u /kerameus/.
•COMP κεραμουργός 'potter' (Hell.).
•DER A. material adjectives: κερά-μινος (Hdt.), -μικός (IA), -μεος (Pl.), -μεοῦς (Att.; after ἐρεοῦς to ἐρέα), -μοῦς (Hell.), -μαῖος (Plb.), -μιος (Str.), -μήϊος (Nic.), -μῖτις (Hp., Plu.). B. Substantives 1. κεραμεύς 'potter' (Il.), to which Κεραμεικός [m.] "potter's market" (X.), also as an adjective = -μικός, κεραμευτικός 'belonging to the potter' (D. S.), κεραμεῖον 'pottery' (Att.), κεραμεύω [v.] 'to make out of potter's earth, be a potter' (Att.), with κεραμεία 'pottery' (Pl.). 2. κεράμιον 'earthen jar, vase' (IA), κεραμύλλιον 'small pot' (Delos, pap., III[a]). 3. κεραμίς [f.] 'roof-tile' (IA), κεραμίδιον (late) and κεραμιδόω [v.] 'to cover with tiles' (Arist.). 4. κεραμ(ε)ών 'pottery' (Ar. Lys. 200, Hdn. Gr. 1, 32; 40). Denominative verb κεραμιόω [v.] 'to cover with tiles' (Att. inscr.), whence κεραμωτός (Plb., Str.), κεράμωσις (Epid. IV[a]).
•ETYM No certain etymology. Connection with κεράσαι, κεράννυμι 'to mix' is formally unproblematic, but semantically not very convincing. A verb *kerH- 'to burn, glow' (Pok. 571f.), which is found in several Baltic and Germanic nominal derivations, e.g. Lith. kárštas 'hot, glowing, burning', Go. hauri [n.] 'coals', OHG herd 'hearth', would be better from the semantic side. However, among the words in -(α)μο-, several are suspected of being loans (Chantraine 1933: 133f., Schwyzer: 493f.). Therefore, this technical term for tile-making may well be Pre-Greek (or Anatolian). The Carian TN Κέραμος should be noted in this connection (Kretschmer Glotta 11 (1921): 284, Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 694).

κερανίξαι [v.] · κολυμβῆσαι, κυβιστῆσαι 'to dive, tumble head first' (H.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Also κρανίξαι· ἐπὶ κεφαλὴν ἀπορρῖψαι 'to throw away on the head' (H.).
•ETYM The last word seems to be a denominative of κρανίον, and κερανίξαι would then be a reshaping after κέρας. This seems improbable. The variation might point to a Pre-Greek form. There is no (direct) connection with Lat. cernuus 'head foremost'.

κεράννυμι [v.] 'to mix, mix up' especially of wine with water, 'to temper', of the climate, etc. (com., Hyp.). ◂IE *ḱerh$_2$- 'mix'▸ •VAR Also κεραννύω (com., Hyp.), κεραίω (I 203, Delph. V[a]), κεράω (Od.; subj. κέρωνται Δ 260), κίρνημι, -νάω (Od.), aor. κεράσ(σ)αι (Il.), also (ἐπι-)κρῆσαι (η 164, Hp.), pass. κρᾱθῆναι, κρηθῆναι (IA), also κερασθῆναι (Att.), perf. med. κέκρᾱμαι, -κρη- (Sapph., Pi., IA), also κεκέρασμαι (Arist.), fut. κερῶ (Att.), κεράσω (Them.), pass. κρᾱθήσομαι (Att.).
•DIAL Myc. ka-ra-te-ra /krātēra/.
•COMP Also with prefix, especially συν-.
•DER A. From monosyllabic κρᾱ- (κρη-): 1. κρᾶσις, κρῆσις (σύγ-, etc.) 'mix' (IA), with *κρᾱσίον > MoGr. κρασί 'wine'. 2. κρᾶμα (rarely also κρᾶμμα, after βάμμα, etc.), Ion. κρῆμα, 'mix, alloy', also 'mixed wine' (Ion., Hell.), whence κραμάτιον (Dsc.) and κραμ(μ)άτινος 'consisting of an alloy' (pap.). 3. κρᾱτήρ, κρητήρ [m.] "mixer", 'mixing bowl', also metaph. 'crater' (Il.), whence κρατηρία 'id.' (Dsc.) and the diminutives κρατήριον, κρη- (Hp.), κρατηρ-ίδιον (Boeot., J.), -ίσκος (Delos III[a], Ath.); κρατηρίζω [v.] "to drink a bowl", 'to intoxicate oneself' (Sophr., D.). 4. compounds like ἄ-κρᾱ-τος (-η-) 'unmixed' (Il.), αὐτο-κρη-ής "mixed with itself", i.e. 'unmixed' (Nic. Al. 163), αὐτό-κρας 'id.' (Poll.).
B. From disyllabic κερᾰ-: κατα-κέρασις 'mixing (with water)' (Arist.), κέρασμα 'id.' (Hell.), συγ-κερασμός 'id.' (gloss.), κεραστός (εὐ-, ἐγ-κέρ.) 'mixed' (D. H., Plu., APl.), κεραστής 'mixer' (Orph.), ἐπι-, κατα-κεραστικός 'causing a (real) mix' (medic.), μετά-κερας [adj., n.] 'tempered, lukewarm' (com.), αὐτό-κερας [adj., adv.] 'unmixed' (Poll., Phryn.; cf. on αὐτοκρηής). See also ►ἀκήρατος 2. In the mg. 'unmixed' (οἶνος; Dsc. 5, 6, 10), ἀκέραιος is a reinterpretation of ἀκέραιος 'undamaged'; see ►ἀκήρατος 1.
•ETYM The seṭ-character of the root *ḱerh$_2$- is apparent from the verbal adjectives (ἄ)-κρᾱτος and corresponding Skt. ā́-śīr-ta- 'mixed'. Gr. κίρνημι is from *k^{ə}rnāmi, which contains a schwa secundum and therefore did not vocalize the *r̥. The nasal present found in Skt. śrīṇā́ti rather belongs with *ḱreiH- 'to shine, excell', acc. to Narten KZ 100 (1987): 270-96. On the other hand, Av. sar- 'to unite' does belong here, e.g. OAv. sārəṇtē [3pl.pres.]. The old aorist κεράσαι gave rise to analogical innovations κεραίω, κεράω, κεράννυμι, just like κερῶ, κεράσω, κερασθῆναι, κεκέρασμαι (with analogical σ); older forms are κρᾱθῆναι, κέκρᾱμαι.

κεραός [adj.] 'horned', secondarily 'made of horn' (Il.). ◄IE *ḱerh$_2$- 'head, horn'► •ETYM *κεραϝός is identical with several words for 'deer' and other horned animals: Lat. cervus (like κεραός from IE *ḱerh$_2$u̯-o-), MW carw 'deer' < IE *ḱr̥h$_2$u̯-o-, Alb. ka 'ox', Ru. koróva, SCr. krȁva 'cow' < *ḱorh$_2$ueh$_2$ with centum-treatment of *ḱ from the zero grade, which must consequently have been present in the paradigm), Lith. kárvė 'id.'; also, with palatalisation and zero grade, OPr. sirwis 'roe'. We have to assume an original paradigm *ḱerh$_2$-u-o-, *ḱrh$_2$-eu-o-. A parallel formation is the Germanic name of the deer, e.g. OHG hiruz, from QIE *ḱeru-d-. All words derive from a word for 'horn', e.g. Av. srū- [f.]; see Nussbaum 1986: 19-47 and 139-157. See ►κέρας.

κέρας [n.] 'horn for blowing and drinking', metaph. 'branch (of a river), part of an army, top, etc.'. ◄IE *ḱerh$_2$-s- 'horn, head'► •VAR Gen. epic -ραος, Hdt. -ρεος, Att. -ρως, -ρᾱτος, dat. epic -ραϊ, Hdt. -ρεϊ, Att. -ρᾳ, nom.acc.pl. epic -ρα(α), Hp. and Att. -ρᾱτα, gen. epic -ράων, Att. -ρῶν, -ρᾱτων, dat. -ρᾰσι, epic also -ράεσσι; late epic gen.sg. -ρᾱ́ατος, nom.acc.pl. -ρᾱ́ατα (further forms in Schwyzer: 515).
•DIAL Myc. ke-ra-a /keraha/ [nom.pl.].
•COMP As a first member in κερασ-φόρος 'with a horn' (trag.), also κερατο-φόρος 'id.' (Arist.); κεραο-ξόος 'polishing horn' (Δ 110, AP), thematically reshaped e.g. in κερο-φόρος (E.), also κερε-αλκής 'with strong horn' (A. R.). As a second member mostly -κερως [m., f.] < -κερα(σ)-ος, seen in ὑψί-, ἄ-κερως, etc.; special feminine form ὑψι-, καλλι-κέραν [acc.] (B.); isolated -κέρᾱτος, e.g. ἀ-κέρατος (Pl., Arist.; τῆς ἀκεράτου beside τὴν ἀκέρων Pl. Plt. 265b, c), also ἀ-κέρωτος (AP), -κερος e.g. in νή-κεροι [pl.] 'hornless' (Hes. Op. 529); δί-κερας [n.] 'double horn' (Callix.) and the plant names αἰγό-, βού-, ταυρό-κερας [n.] (after the shape of the fruit, Strömberg 1940: 54); also αἰγο-κέρως 'Capricornus', with metrically conditioned gen. -κερῆος (Arat., Q. S.).
•DER Diminutives: κεράτιον 'little horn' (Arist., Hell.), 'name of a weight and a coin, "carat" (Hero) = Lat. siliqua (inscr. and pap.); τὰ κεράτια 'the fruits of the carob-tree' (Ev. Luc. 15, 16, Dsc.); thence κερατία [f.] 'carob-tree' (Str., Plin.), also -τέα (pap., Gp.; after other tree names in -έα), κερωνία 'id.' (Thphr., Plin.), contaminated form κερατωνία 'id.' (Gal., Aët.).
Further substantives: κερασ-τής [m.] 'horned being' (S., E.; of ἔλαφος, Πάν, etc.), name of a snake 'Cerastes cornutus' (Nic.), fem. -στίς (A; cf. Fraenkel 1912: 209); also epithet of the island of Cyprus (Hdn. 1, 104, 15: ἀπὸ τοῦ πολλὰς ἄκρας ἔχειν, 'because it has many capes'); κερατῖτις (μήκων) 'kind of poppy' (Thphr., Dsc.); κεραΐτης [m.] = Lat. cornicularius (Lyd. Mag.), κεραΐτις [f.] "Hornpflanze" = τῆλις (Redard 1949: 41 and 72, Strömberg 1940: 54); κεραΐτης and κεραΐτις, however, rather belong to κεραία (see below); κερατίας [m.] name of Dionysus (D. S.), also name of a comet (Plin.; Scherer 1953: 107); κεραία [f.] name of several horn-like objects, e.g. 'yard, beam, cornucopia', as a sign of writing = Lat. apex (Att., Hell.); diminutive κερᾴδιον (Attica, Delos; or κεραΐδιον?); κερατών, -ῶνος [m.] name of an altar on Delos (Hell.); originally "place adorned with horns"; after the place names in -ών. Adjectives: κεράτινος 'made of horn' (X., Pl. Com.), κερατίνης [m.] 'the fallacy called the Horns' (D. L., Luc.); κερατώδης 'hornlike' (Thphr.); κερόεις 'horned' (Anacr., Simon.); κερέϊνος 'id.' (Aq., Sm.).
Denominative verbs: 1. κερατίζω 'to but with the horns' (LXX); thence κερατιστής (LXX), κεράτισις (Apollod. Poliorc.); κερατισμός 'loss upon exchange of solidi in ceratia', as if from κερατίζω *'to change in ceratia' (pap. VI^p, Lyd. Mag.); 2. κερατόω 'to change into horn' (Ael.); 3. κεράω 'to provide with horns' (Arat.), 'to form a wing' (Plb.). Cf. also ►κεραός, ►κεραΐς, ►κερανίξαι, ►κερουτιάω, ►κέρνα.
•ETYM Beside the full grade root in κέρας 'horn' < *ḱerh$_2$-es-, we find a zero grade in *καρασ- in κάρᾱ, κάρηνα 'head, top' < *ḱrh$_2$-es-, which also gave Skt. śíras- [n.] 'head', and *κρᾱσ- < *ḱr̥h$_2$s- in κρᾱνίον 'skull'. Cf. on ►κάρᾱ. The s-stem was enlarged with a suffix *-ro- in Lat. cerebrum 'brain' < *keras-ro- < IE *ḱerh$_2$(e)s-ro-. Full discussion in Nussbaum 1986. The original meaning was probably 'horn', whence 'horned animal-head' and 'head' in general. Further related forms are discussed s.v. ►κάρᾱ, ►κρᾱνίον, ►κρήδεμνον, ►κράνος.

κέρασος [m., f.] 'bird cherry, Prunus avium' (Xenoph., Thphr.). ◄PG?►
•VAR κερασός (acc. to Hdn. Gr. 1, 209).
•DIAL Myc. PN ke-ra-so /kerasō/ [f.], see Heubeck Kadmos 4 (1956): 138-145; Chantraine 1968: 575.
•DER κερασία, -έα 'id.' (Gp.), cf. κερατία, -έα s.v. ►κέρας; κεράσιον 'fruit of the κ.' (Hell.), *κεράσινος [adj.] in Lat. cerasinus 'cherry-colored', as a subst. κεράσινον [n.] 'cherry-colored paint' (PHolm.).
•ETYM As the improved cherry came from the Pontos area (cf. Κερασοῦς "rich in cherries", town on the Pontos), the name is probably Anatolian as well. Given its intervocalic σ, the form must be Anatolian or Pre-Greek. For the suffix, cf. ►θίασος, ►κάρπασος, which too are of foreign origin. Assyr. karšu has also been adduced. Cf. on ►κράνον 'cornelian cherry'. Gr. κέρασος, -ία, κεράσιον were borrowed into many languages: Asiatic names of the cherry-tree and the cherry, like Arm. keṙas, Kurd. ghilas, and in the West, Lat. cerasus, -ium, VLat. cerasia*, ceresia*, -ea; from Latin came the Romance and Germanic forms like MoFr. cerise, OHG chirsa > Kirsche. Lit.: Olck in PW 11: 509f. and Hester Lingua 13 (1965): 356.

κεραυνός [m.] 'thunderbolt, lightning' (Il.). ◄IE *ḱerh$_2$- 'shatter, smash'► •COMP ►τερπι-κέραυνος, ἐγχει-κέραυνος 'who has the thunderbolt as a spear' (Pi.), after ἐγχει-βρόμος 'who thunders with the spear'; also κεραυνο-εγχής 'id.' (B.).
•DER κεραύνιος [adj.] 'belonging to the thunderbolt', also 'struck by a thunderbolt, hurling the thunderbolt' (trag.), also κεραυναῖος (AP 7, 49; Steph. -ειος); κεραύνιον name of a mushroom 'Tuber aestivum' (Thphr., Gal.), conceived as protecting against thunder, or as arisen from a thunderbolt; likewise κεραυνία = ἀείζῳον μικρόν (Ps.-Dsc.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 79f.; also name of a stone κεραυνίας, -νίτης (PHolm., Clem.). Denominative κεραυνόομαι [v.] 'to be struck by lightning', -όω 'to slay with a thunderbolt' (Hes.); κεραύνωσις 'thunderclap' (Str., Plu.).
•ETYM Thematic transformation of an r/n-stem *κερα-ϝαρ, κερα-υν- 'shattering', from a verb 'to shatter' that was replaced by ►κεραΐζω. For the formation, cf. on ►ἐλαύνω. Not to be included here are Skt. śáru- 'arrow' and Gm. words like Go. hairus 'sword'.

Κέρβερος [m.] 'name of the dog that guarded the underworld' (Hes. 311, where he has fifty heads). ◄PG?► •ETYM Traditionally connected with Skt. karbara-, śárvara- 'spotted', as an adj. śabála- of the two dogs of the lower world (RV 10, 14, 10). This is doubted by Mayrhofer KEWA s.v. karbaraḥ, where, after Kuiper, an Austro-Asiatic origin is considered for the Skt. word (see also Mayrhofer EWAia 3: 297). Thus, it has nothing to do with the Greek word. Lincoln JIES 7 (1979): 273-285 follows Schlerath, who showed that there were two hellhounds in the IE conception; this is most clear in Armenian, where Spitak 'white' is the dog of life, Siaw 'black' the dog of death. He ends with unfounded speculations. The dog may come from the East, he may as well be Pre-Greek; for neither do we have any evidence.

κέρδος [n.] 'cunning, wiles; desire to win, gain, profit' (Il.); plur. also 'good advice' (Hom.). ◄IE? k̑erd-* 'cunning'► •COMP Rarely as a first member, e.g. κερδο-φόρος 'bringing gain' (Artem.), as a second member in αἰσχρο-κερδής 'full of lowly craving, greedy' (IA).
•DER Diminutives κερδάριον, κερδύφιον (gloss.). Further κερδοσύνη 'ruse' (Hom., Cleanth. Hymn. 1, 28), κερδώ [f.] "the cunning one", i.e. 'fox' (Ar., Babr.); PN Κέρδων, -ωνος (D., Argolis), whence Lat. cerdō 'ordinary artisan'; also Κερδέων epithet of Hermes and Κερδείη Πειθώ (Herod. 7, 74); Κερδῷος epithet of Apollo (Thessal., Lyc.), after Λητῷος; also of Hermes (Plu., Luc.), also said of the fox (Babr.); κερδητικός 'greedy' (gloss.). Further κερδαλέος 'greedy' (Il.) and κερδαίνω [v.] 'to gain, have profit' (Pi., IA), aor. κερδῆναι, -δᾶναι, -δῆσαι. Comparative forms κερδίων 'more profitable' (Il.), κέρδιστος 'the most cunning' (Hom.). The positive has now been recognized in ►κορδύς.
•ETYM The only connections outside Greek are a few Celtic words: OIr. cerd 'art, handwork', also 'aerarius, figulus, poeta' < IE k̑erd-h₂-*, MW cerdd 'song'. The gloss κήρτεα· τὰ κέρδη (H.) is doubtful. R. Schmitt Glotta 51 (1973): 94-95 convincingly connected it with κορδύς· πανοῦργος 'crafty' (H.).

κέρθιος [m.] name of a small bird with a clear voice, perhaps 'treekreeper, Certhia familiaris' (Arist. HA 616b 28). ◄PG?► •ETYM Unexplained; the word hardly belongs to ►κρέξ. Perhaps Pre-Greek.

κέρκα [?] · ἀκρίς 'locust' (H.). ◄PG?►
•VAR κέρκαξ· ἱέραξ 'hawk, falcon', κέρκνος· ἱέραξ ἢ ἀλεκτρυών 'cock' (H.).
•ETYM Fur.: 127 compares κερ-κ- with ἀ-κρ-ιδ-, comparing for the morphology γελ-γ-ιθ- beside α-γλ-ιθ-; doubtful at best. The words hardly belong to ►κέρκος 'tail', as per Frisk. The word is rather Pre-Greek.

κερκάς [?] · κρὲξ τὸ ὄρνεον 'ruff, corncrake' (H.).
•VAR κερκιθαλίς· ἐρῳδιός 'heron' (H.). ⇒ κρέξ.

κέρκηρις, -εως [?] name of a water-bird (PCair. Zen. 388b, III[a], BGU 1252, 30, II[a]), Lat. cerceris (Varro LL 5: 79). ◄?►
•DER Cf. ►κερκίων [m.].
•ETYM Compared with Lat. querquēdula, which is paraphrased with κερκήδης (gloss. 3, 319, 13, etc.). It is uncertain whether κέρκηρις belongs to κέρκος or to the group of κρέξ.

κερκίς -ίδος [f.] 'weaver's shuttle' (Il.); metaph. of comparable objects, e.g. 'great bone of the leg, tibia' (A. R., Heroph. Med.), 'wedge-shaped division of the seats in the theatre' (Hell.); as a tree name 'asp, Populus tremula, etc.' (Arist., Thphr.). The mgs. are discussed by Martin REGr. 80 (1967): 319f. ◄PG?►
•COMP As a first member in κερκιδοποικὴ (τέχνη) 'the art of a κερκιδοποιός' (Arist.); as a second member in παρα-κερκίς [f.] 'splint-bone' (Poll.).
•DER Diminutives κερκίδιον (pap.); κερκιδιαῖον 'wedge-shaped spool' (Attica); κερκίζω [v.] 'to use the weaver's shuttle' (Pl., Arist.), κέρκισις 'weaving' (Arist.), κερκιστική (τέχνη) 'art of weaving' (Pl.), κέρκιστρα [n.pl.] 'weaver's wages' (pap.). Further also κερκάδαι [pl.] 'the weavers', name of a society of weavers (Argos).
•ETYM Unclear. A technical word that seems to be Pre-Greek. Vendryes REGr. 25 (1912): 461 took it as a diminutive of ►κέρκος, assuming an original meaning 'stave, rod'.

κερκίων [m.] name of an Indian speaking bird, kind of mynah (perhaps Acridotheres tristis or Gracula religiosa; Ael. NA 16, 3; see Thompson 1895 s.v.).
•ETYM The suffix of κερκίων is found in πορφυρίων, ἀκανθίων, and other bird and animal names. Frisk derives it from κέρκος, following Ael., who argues ἐπειδὴ καὶ αὐτὸς διασείεται τὸν ὄρρον, ὡς ποιοῦνται οἱ κίγκλοι 'because it wags its tail itself too, like the κ. do'.

κερκολύρα ⇒ κρέκω.

κερκορώνους [acc.pl.m.] name of an unknown Indian bird (Ael. NA 15, 14). ◄?► •ETYM Thompson 1895 s.v. assumes haplology for *κερκο-κορώνη.

κέρκος [f.] 'tail of an animal' (com., Pl. Phdr. 254d, Arist.), 'penis' (Ar., Herod.). ◄?► •COMP κερκο-φόρος 'with a tail', ἄ-κερκος 'tailless' (Arist.); on ►κέρκουρος and ►κέρκωψ s.v.
•DER Diminutive κερκίον (Aq., Sm., Thd.); cf. ►κερκίς. Also the animal names ►κέρκα · ἀκρίς 'locust' (H.), κερκώπη name of a cicada (Ar.), see Strömberg 1944: 16 and cf. on Κέρκωπες, probably also ►κέρκαξ · ἱέραξ (H.) and ►κέρκνος · ἱέραξ, ἢ ἀλεκτρυών (H.). κέρκωσις 'tail-like growth' (medic.); κερκέτης· τὸ μικρὸν πηδάλιον 'small rudder' (H.; Paus. Gr. Fr. 118).
•ETYM As opposed to ►οὐρά, κέρκος seems to come from the lower stratum of the language and may originally have meant 'stave, rod' (but see on ►κερκίς). Origin unknown.

κέρκουρος [m.] 'light vessel' (Hdt., Hell.), originally Cyprian; also name of a sea-fish (Opp.; cf. Strömberg 1943: 48). ◄?►

•COMP Compounds ταυρο-κέρκουρος, κερκουρο-σκάφη names of different vessels (Hell., pap.).
•DER Diminutive κερκούριον (AP 5, 43; also [f.] PN); κερκουρίτης 'sailor on a κ.' (Hell., pap.).
•ETYM Properly a bahuvrīhi, 'having a κέρκος-like back', unless it is a folk-etymological adaptation of a foreign word (cf. the animal names in -ουρ-, Pre-Greek (suffixes). Semitic hypothesis by Movers in Lewy 1895: 152. See Chantraine 1928: 13f. Latin borrowed cercūrus as a fish name (Ov., Plin.).

Κέρκωπες [m.pl.] 'name of two mischievous dwarves', which were fettered by Heracles (Hdt.), metaph. [sg.] 'teaser, rogue' (Aeschin.); name of a long-tailed ape (Manil.). ◂PG(S)▸
•DER κερκωπία 'trickiness' (Semon.), κερκωπίζω [v.] 'to tease, joke' (Zenob., H.). Also, with ā-stem-enlargement, κερκώπη· τέττιξ θήλεια μὴ φωνοῦσα 'female cicala producing no sound' (H.).
•ETYM Interpreted as 'with tail-like figure', from ▸κέρκος and -ωψ (Schwyzer: 426[4]). Gil Emerita 25 (1957): 312 considers κερκώπη 'τέττιξ' to be a compound *κερκο-ϝωπ-η 'with shrill voice', but this does not fit H.'s explanation above. Rather, -ωπ is the ending of several Pre-Greek names.

κέρνα 1 [n.pl.] 'transverse processes of the vertebrae' (Poll. 2, 180). ◂?▸
•VAR Also -ναι [f.pl.].
•ETYM Mostly analyzed as kers-nā* (cf. κάρηνα < karasna*). An exact parallel to this form seems to be found in the Germanic word for 'brain', e.g. OHG hirn(i) (< IE kers-n-i̯o-* beside ON hjarsi < k̑ers-on-). However, the formation was k̑erh$_2$-s-n- with root-final -h$_2$, which makes this derivation impossible. See Nussbaum 1986: 192. It is semantically tempting to compare κέρνα with ON hvern 'the two boat-shaped white bones in the brain of a fish', but like Go. ƕairnei 'skull', this derives from initial IE *k^w- and belongs to ON hverna 'cooking utensils', etc.; cf. on ▸κέρνος.

κέρνα 2 [?] · ἀξίνη 'axe-head' (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Acc. to von Blumenthal 1930: 40, it is from κείρω, and to be separated from κέαρνα (see on ▸κεάζω). DELG even proposes to read κέαρνα here.

κέρνος [n.] 'earthen vase with nipples all around, used in mystery cult' (sch. Nic. Al. 217; Ammon. and Polem. apud Ath. 11, 476f and 478c; H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Plur. κέρνεα· τὰ τῇ μητρὶ τῶν θεῶν ἐπιθυόμενα 'that which is sacrificed to the mother of the gods' (H.); also -να (Poll. 4, 103); on the mg. Nilsson 1941(1): 128, 270f., 726.
•COMP As a first member in κερνο-φόρος (Nic., Ath.), to which κερνο-φορέω (sch.); short form κερνᾶς (AP 7, 709).
•DER Diminutive κερνίον (Att. inscr., Theognost.).
•ETYM Several unsuccessful IE etymologies have been proposed: relation to κέραμος, Skt. carú- 'kettle', ON hverna 'cooking utensils'; to Lat. scrīnium 'chest', to Skt. śárāva- 'plate' (see the relevant litt. in Frisk). The by-forms κέρχνος (IG 1^2, 313: 17, 314: 23), with κερχνίον (IG 2^2, 1533: 19; 23), show that the word was Pre-Greek, as Chantraine already saw (DELG).

κερουτιάω [v.] 'to toss the horns or head' (Ar. Eq. 1344). ◂IE *k̑erh$_2$- 'head, horn'▸ •DER κερουτιασμός (Phot.).
•ETYM A denominative in -ιάω from *κεροῦττα 'provided with horns', which is genuine Attic for κεροῦσσα (S., E.) or κερόεσσα (Anacr.), an epithet of the deer. It may originally have meant "to behave like a κεροῦσσα (ἔλαφος)". On the formation, where we expect *κερατ-, see Nussbaum 1986: 153.

κέρσα [?] · Ἀσιανὸν ὄνομα 'an Asiatic name' (H.). ◂LW OP▸ •ETYM Schmitt 1999: 53-57 states it is a loan from OP krš, a Persian weight, which perhaps derives from k^{w}els-* 'to draw furrows'.

κερτομέω [v.] 'to taunt, insult, mock, ridicule' (almost only poetic, Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aor. κερτομῆσαι (rare).
•COMP Also with ἐπι-. Compound φιλο-κέρτομος 'loving mockery' (χ 287, Theoc., APl.).
•DER κέρτομος 'insulting, slandering' (Hes. Op. 788, poet.), with κερτομίαι [pl.] 'mockery, slander' (Hom.); also with suffix -ιο-κερτόμιος 'id.' (Hom., S. [lyr.]), κερτόμησις (S. Ph. 1236). From ἐπικερτομέω: ἐπικερτόμ-ημα (Demetr.), -ησις (Hdn.) and, as a back-formation, ἐπικέρτομος (Q. S.).
•ETYM Prellwitz assumed a univerbation of κείρειν and τέμνειν, a type of formation which remains hypothetical. Fur.: 349 refers to καρτομιστής· χλευαστής 'mocker' (H.). The varying vocalism points to Pre-Greek origin.
The root has been connected with Lat. carināre, and the words cited under ▸κάρνη 'punishment'. Schrijver 1991: 429 is right to connect it with the group of σκερβόλλω, -βολέω, κερβόλλουσα 'to insult, mock, slander', which in turn is connected with (σ)κέραφος, σχέραφος. All these words are clearly Pre-Greek, a conclusion which Schrijver also reaches. It is unknown what the second elements were, or even if the words were compounds at all. Fur.: 349[46] suggests comparison with Hitt. kartimii̯e/a-^{zi} 'to be angry', kartiminu- 'to make angry', which is possible, though the meanings are not the same. For a different but less likely proposal: Perpillou RPh. 75 (2001):145f.

κερχνηΐς, -ίδος [f.] a kind of falcon, probably 'kestrel, windhover, Falco tinnunculus'. ◂?▸ •VAR Also -ῄς, -ῆδος (Ar. Av. 304, 589); also κεγχρηΐς, -ρίς (Arist., Ael.), κέγχρη (Arist.), κέρχνη (H.).
•ETYM From κέρχνος 'raw voice, hoarseness', with the same variation as in χλωρηΐς epithet of the nightingale (to χλωρός), etc. (see Chantraine 1933: 345f.). Also κέρχνη, after the feminines in -η-. Did κεγχρηΐς, etc. arise through metathesis? Hardly after κέγχρος 'millet' (defended by DELG); see Thompson 1895 s.v. κεγχρηΐς.

κέρχνος [m.] 'raw voice, hoarseness' (Hp., S. Ichn. 128), 'raw surface, rough excrescence' (S. Fr. 279), also = ὁ τῶν ἀργυρίων κονιορτός 'silver dust' (Poll. 7, 99). ◂PG?▸

•COMP ἄ-κερχνος 'without hoarseness' (Aret.), αἱμό-κερχνον [n.] 'cough with bloody sputum' (Hp.; substantivized bahuvrīhi). From ἄκερχνος and κέρχνω the adjective κέρχνος (κερχνός?) 'raw (of the voice), hoarse' (Gal.) [??].
•DER κερχνώδης 'raw, hoarse' (Hp.), κερχνασμός 'rawness, hoarseness' (Gal.). Denominative κερχνόομαι [v.] 'to be raw or uneven', -όω 'to make uneven, engrave' (H.), whence κερχνώματα [pl.] 'unevennesses, elevated, embossed work' (H.); to be read as well in E. Ph. 1386 for κεγχρώμασι - cf. on κέγχρος; κερχνωτός 'embossed, engraved' (H.); also κέρχνω [v.] 'to be or make hoarse' (Hp.). κερχαλέος 'raw, hoarse' (Hp.), also κερχναλέος (Hp. v.l., Gal.). On ►κερχνηΐς, see s.v.
•ETYM The derivation κέρχνος < *κέρκ-σνος has been proposed, but the bird name κρέξ hardly seems comparable. Perhaps the word is onomatopoeic in origin; cf. Skt. ghar-ghara- [m.] 'crackling, rattling', as well as, independently, Lat. hirriō 'to grumble', OE gierran 'to crack, creak, coo', etc. (Pok. 439). If we connect these, we could assume κέρχνος < *g^her-g^hr-o-; κερχαλέος would be analogical after ἰσχνός : ἰσχαλέος vel sim. Fur. 340 compares κάρχαρος. If the word is Pre-Greek, it could simply be *KerK-no-, with automatic aspiration before the *n (cf. Fur. 110).

κέσκεον [n.] 'tow' (Herod. 9a). ◄PG?(S)►
•VAR κέσκι<ον>· στυπεῖον, τὸ ἀποκτένισμα τοῦ λινοῦ 'what is combed from flax' (H.).
•ETYM Mostly analyzed as *kes-kes-o-, from a root *kes- 'to comb, hackle, scratch' in OCS česati, 1sg. češǫ, Hitt. kiš-^{zi} 'to comb, card', with the verbal nouns Cz. pa-čes 'tow', Lith. kasà 'plait, braid' < IE *kos-h_2-, OIr. cír [f.] < *kēs-rā (for the apparent lengthened grade, see the discussion in Matasović 2008 s.v. *kīsrā). See also ►ξέω, ►ξαίνω, ►ξύω. A reduplicated formation *kes-kes- is an improbable structure in IE terms. Word-final -εον may be the Pre-Greek suffix *-ay- (Pre-Greek Suffixes sub -αι-/ ε(ι)-).

κεστός [adj.] 'stitched'. ⇒κεντέω.

κεύθω [v.] 'to conceal', also 'to be hidden' (Il.). ◄IE (s)keu-d^h- 'conceal, hide'► •VAR Also κευθάνω (Γ 453), κυνθάνει· κρύπτει 'hides, conceals' (H.), fut. κεύσω, aor. κεῦσαι, also κύθε (γ 16), reduplicated subj. κεκύθωσι (ζ 303), perf. κέκευθα.
•COMP Also with ἐπι- (ἐνι-, ἀμφι-).
•DER κεῦθος [n.] 'hiding, cave, depth' (Il.), often plur. -εα; κευθμών, -μῶνες 'id.' (Od.), κευθμός, -μοί 'id.' (N 28, Lyc., Call.); also κευθῆνες· οἱ καταχθόνιοι δαίμονες 'subterranean deities' (Suid.).
•ETYM A close relative to κεύθω is found in Germanic in the OE yod-present hȳdan, MoE hide. A further comparandum is Arm. suzanem 'to dive, hide', but this would presuppose an initial palatal *ḱ, which does not fit with the other words adduced, like Skt. kuhū́- [f.] 'new moon' ("the hidden one"), kuhara- [n.] 'cave', etc. (rejected by Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. kúha). Beside the words from IE *keud^h-, several forms with root-final *t are found; see ►κύτος. See also on ►κύσθος, ►κύστις, and ►σκῦτος and ►σκῦλα.

κεφαλή [f.] 'head, the uppermost or top part, source, etc.' (Il.). ◄IE *g^heb^h-l- 'head'►

•COMP Several compounds, e.g. κεφαλ-αλγία 'headache' (Hp.), also -αργία (Luc.) by dissimilation; βου-κέφαλος 'with cow-head' (Ar.); also as a plant name (Strömberg 1940: 54); as a PN Βου-κεφάλᾱς [m.] the personal horse of Alexander the Great (Str., Plu.).
•DER Diminutive κεφάλιον (Att. inscr.), -ίδιον (Poll., pap.), κεφαλίς [f.] 'bulb of an onion, toe-cap of a shoe, capital of a column, etc.' (Arist.), κεφαλὶς βιβλίου 'scroll' (LXX); κεφάλαιον [n.] 'the main thing, capital' (Pi., Att.); rarely adjectival κεφάλαιος (Ar. Ra. 854, PMasp. 151, 16, VI^p), with κεφαλαιώδης (adv. -ωδῶς) 'regarding the main point' (Hp., Arist., Hell.) and the denominative κεφαλαιόω [v.] 'to summarize (the main points)' (Att.), whence κεφαλαίωμα 'sum, total' (Hdt. 3, 159), -αίωσις 'summary' (sch.), -αιωτής = Lat. capitularius, also -τία (pap. Rom. Emp.); κεφαλαία [f.] 'chronic headache' (medic.); κεφαλώδης 'head-like' (Thphr.), κεφαλικός 'belonging to the head, to life' (pap., Dsc.); κεφαλίτης λίθος 'cornerstone, headstone' (H.), κεφαλίτης γλήχων probably 'Mentha aquatica' (Hippiatr.); κεφαλίνη 'root of the tongue' (Poll.); κεφαλῖνος fish name = βλεψίας (Dorio apud Ath.), see Strömberg 1943: 41, also κέφαλος 'Mugil cephalus' (Hp., com., Arist.), on which extensively Thompson 1947 s.v.; κεφάλωμα 'sum' (Messen., Delph.); after ἀνάλωμα acc. to Bechtel 1921, 2: 156, but cf. also κεφαλαίωμα above; κεφαλωτός 'with a head' (Arist., Hell.), as a plant name 'thyme' (Ps.-Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 50; -ωτόν (sc. πράσον) 'onion' (pap.); κεφαληδόν 'per head' (Priene IV^a). Denominative κ]εφαλίζω [v.] 'to behead' (BGU 1, 341, 9); in a different mg. κεφαλισμός 'table of multiplication' (Arist.); κεφαλόω in κεκεφαλωμένος 'provided with a head' (comm. Arist.); κεφαλιόω in ἐκεφαλίωσαν (Ev. Marc. 12, 4), which may mean either 'to beat the head' or 'to behead'. Furthermore hypostases προσ- (Dor. ποτι-), ὑπο-κεφάλαιον 'head cushion' (IA), ἀποκεφαλίζω [v.] 'to behead' (LXX, Phld.), -ισμός, -ισμα, -ιστής.
•ETYM Old word for 'head', also found in Tocharian and Germanic: ToA śpāl 'head', OHG gebal [m.], MHG gebel 'skull', OHG gibilla [f.] 'id.'; additionally, in the sense of 'front', OHG gibil [m.], Go. gibla [m.] (n-stem), and ablauting ON gafl [m.] 'side of a facade'. This points to an IE l-stem *ǵ^{h}eb^h-l-, but it is unclear from which root it is. The Greek suffixal -α- is difficult to explain. Cf. also γαβαλάν· ἐγκέφαλον ἢ κεφαλήν (H.) and Macedonian (Illyrian?) κεβ(α)λή s.v. ►κεβλή.

Κέως, -ω [f.] one of the Cyclades (inscr., Str.). ◄PG(V)►
•DER Κεῖος, Ion. Κήϊος inhabitant of Keos (IA); Κέος [f.] place on Salamis (Hdt. 8, 76).
•ETYM Solmsen 1901: 125 suggests derivation from *κῆϝος 'fire' (to ►καίω), which must be wrong, as it is a Pre-Greek name. Fick 1905: 59 compares Κέως Κήιος Κεῖος with Τέως Τήιος and Κόως Κῶιος and Cret. Λάτως Λάτιος, and notes as older forms Κήως Τήως Κώως.

κῆβος [m.] 'monkey with a long tail' (Arist., Str., Gal.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also κῆπος (Agatharch., v.l. in Str. 16, 4, 16, Ael., where also κεῖπος) and *κηφος because of Lat. cephus (Plin. Nat. 1, 18, 28 and 8, 70; cef(f)us Sol. 30, 22); in Lat. also ceppus (Pol. Silv.), caepus (v.l. Plin. Nat. 8, 70 = *καῖπος?); cf. Fur.: 176, 232, 235.

•ETYM The Greek, but also the Latin variants (see Fur.: l.cc.) point to a Pre-Greek word. It was previously compared with Skt. kapí-, Hebr. qōf, Old Eg. qefi 'ape of the land Punt' and assumed to be a loan from an unknown source (acc. to Frisk, the vowel suggests Egyptian origin), see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. kapí-, E. Masson 1967: 87[5], and Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 244.

κῆδος [n.] 'care, mourning, funeral rites; connection by marriage, affinity' (Il.). ⊲IE ḱeh$_2$d-s- 'care, grief; hate'⊳ •VAR Dor. κᾶδος. Primary superlative κήδιστος 'closest, most dear' (Hom.).
•COMP As a second member in ἀ-κηδής 'careless, unburied' (Il.), to which ἀκήδεια, -ίη, ἀκηδέω, -ιάω; also ἀ-κήδεσ-τος 'id.' (Il.), προσ-κηδής 'careful, related by marriage, friendly with' (φ 35, Hdt. 8, 136, A. R.); on formation and mg. see Sommer 1948: 110[2], Levin Class. Phil. 45 (1950): 110f. As a first member in Κηδι-κράτης (IV[a]), perhaps after Ἀλκι-, see Bechtel 1917b: 236.
•DER 1. κηδεστής [m.] 'relative by marriage' (Att.), κηδεστ(ε)ία 'connection by marriage', κηδέστρια [f.] 'nurse' (pap.); also κηδέστωρ 'educator' (Man.). 2. Adjectives: κήδε(ι)ος 'worth caring for, beloved, relative' (Il.), ἐπικήδειος 'belonging to a corpse, belonging to grief' (E., Pl. Lg. 800e), κηδόσυνος 'dear' (E. Or. 1017) and κηδοσύνη (dat.pl. -σύνῃσι) 'grief' (A. R.). 3. Denominative κηδεύω [v.] 'to care for, bury, marry' (Att.), to which κήδευμα 'connection by marriage' (S., E.), -ευσις 'care' (Ael., Plot.), -ευτής 'who cares for' (Arist.), -εία 'relatedness, burial' (E., X.), whence κηδειακός 'who buries the dead' (Pergam. II[p]).
Primary verb κήδομαι 'to care, be cared for' (Il.), aor.ipv. κήδεσαι (A. Th. 139 [lyr.]), fut. κεκαδήσομαι (Θ 353), perf. κέκηδα (Tyrt. 12, 28); also with prefix, e.g. περι-, προ-; also act. κήδω, fut. κηδήσω 'be grieved' (Il.); κηδεμών 'who cares for, educator, protector' (Il.), after ἡγε-μών (Schwyzer 522), to which κηδεμονία 'care', -μονικός 'caring for' (Hell.), -μονεύω [v.] 'to be protector' (Just.); metrical enlargement κηδεμονεύς (A. R., APl.).
•ETYM A related r-stem is supposed in Av. sādra- [n.] 'grief, pain, disaster', so from PIE ḱeh$_2$d-s-, ḱeh$_2$d-ro-. Thieme 1938: 158f. recognized the s-stem in the obscure word Skt. riśā́das-, which he took to mean 'caring for the foreigner'. This was recently defended by Pinault Bulletin d'études indiennes 17-18 (1999-2000): 466ff., but remains uncertain. Further nouns have been adduced from Italic, Celtic, and Germanic: Osc. cadeis 'malevolentiae' [gen.sg.], MIr. cais 'hate, love' (perhaps from older 'care'), MW cawdd 'offensa, ira, indignatio', Go. hatis [n.] 'hate, anger'. The Germanic words all have the zero grade of the root, so we have traces of a PIE s-stem with root ablaut. There is no parallel to the verb κήδομαι in the other languages.

κηθίς, -ίδος [f.] 'ballot box, dicebox' (Poll. 7, 203; not quite certain). ⊲PG(V)⊳
•DIAL Perhaps Myc. ka-ti /kāt[h]is/, which Neumann Glotta 39 (1961): 176 thinks is Luwian.
•DER Diminutive formations: κήθιον, -ειον, -ίον (Hermipp. 27, Poll., H.), κηθάριον (Ar. V. 674), κηθίδιον (Poll.); also with metathesis of aspiration χείτιον beside κείθιον (Eust. 1259, 36), and with loss of aspiration κητίον (Alciphr. 1, 39, 8, Ath. 11, 477d). Cf. κάθος· σπυρίς 'large basket, creel' (H.), also ►κάθιδοι (for -ίδες?)· ὑδρίαι 'jars' (H.).
•ETYM Comparison with κώθων 'beaker' is improbable. If κητίον is reliable, it points in the direction of Pre-Greek origin. The change of aspiration is Ionic, but the interchange η/ ει is also typical of Pre-Greek (see Fur.: 352).

κηκάζω [v.] 'to abuse, revile', only aor. subj. κηκάσῃ (Lyc. 1386). ⊲ONOM⊳ •VAR κηκαδεῖ (-άζει?)· λοιδορεῖ, χλευάζει 'abuses, scoffs' (H.).
•DER κηκασμός 'abuse, scorn' (Lyc.); κηκάς, -άδος [f.] 'abusing, scorning' (γλώσσῃ Call. Fr. 253), also as an epithet of ἀλώπηξ (Nic. Al. 185).
•ETYM Originally onomatopoeic; cf. the bird name κήξ (see ►καύαξ) and ►καχάζω; see also κακός and kāk-* in words for 'crow, raven' (Pok. 521). The comparison with OHG huohōn 'to mock, scorn', huoh 'mockery' (Frisk) is senseless.

κηκίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'anything gushing forth, ooze', of blood, purple, pitch, fat (A., S.), 'dye from oak gall, oak gall' (Hp., D., Thphr.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •DIAL Dor. κακίς.
•DER Diminutive κηκίδιον (medic.). κηκίω [v.] 'to gush forth' (Il.), κακίω· ἱδροῦν ἄρχομαι. Λάκονες 'begin to sweat (Lac.)' (H.), only present-stem, also with ἀνα-. It appears to be a denominative to an ι-stem.
•ETYM Traditionally compared with Lith. šókti 'to jump, dance', as if from IE ḱeh$_2$k-. The gloss καγκύλας· κηκῖδας. Αἰολεῖς is compared with Lith. šankùs 'nimble', but this cannot be connected here if the root was IE ḱeh$_2$k-. The form κηκίς, -ῖδος is either from an iH*-stem (suffix -ῑδ-, but this is also a Pre-Greek suffix), or a back-formation from κηκίω. At any rate, the connection with šókti must be abandoned, and the word is Pre-Greek, because of the prenasalization in καγκύλας. Thraco-Phr. σίκιν(ν)ις 'dance of the satyrs in honor of Dionysus' (S., E.) does not belong here either.

κῆλα [n.pl.] 'arrows, projectiles (of the gods)' (Il., Hes., Pi., Orph.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM It has been compared with some Skt. words meaning 'cane, arrow', like śará- [m.], śárya- [n.], śáryā- [f.], śalyá- [m., n.], and further MIr. cail 'spear', ON hali [m.] 'tail' (n-stem). However, all these words go back to a root with short vowel, as opposed to κῆλα with long vowel. Connection with ►κᾶλον 'wood' is rejected by Frisk and DELG. For further suggestions, see Pok. 552f.

κηλᾶς, -ᾱ [m.] name of an Indian stork, 'Marabu, Leptopilus argala' (Ael. NA 16, 4). ⊲LW Ind.⊳ •ETYM Formation like ἀτταγᾶς, ἐλεᾶς (Chantraine 1933: 31f.), probably from Indic (cf. perhaps Hindi hargēla). Thompson 1895 s.v. suggests that the word was reshaped after κήλη 'tumor, hump', because the bird had a great crop. On the accent, see Björck 1950: 63[2].

κηλάς ⇒ κηλίς.

κήλαστρος [f.] 'holly, Ilex aquifolium' (Thphr.). ⊲PG⊳

•VAR Also -ον [n.]; κηλάστραι· σκαφίδες, ἀγγεῖα ποιμενικά. ἢ δένδρα 'bowls, vessels of shepherds; trees' (H.).
•ETYM Formation like ►δέπαστρον, ►κάναστρον, ►ζύγαστρον; the suffix is Pre-Greek (see Pre-Greek: Suffixes).

κηλέος [adj.] 'burning' (Hom., Hes.). ◂IE? keh_2u- 'burn'▸ •VAR Only in πυρὶ κηλέῳ (disyllabic), always verse-final except in Θ 217 and Ο 74 (πυρὶ κηλείῳ).
•DER περί-κηλος (Od.), κηλόν· ξηρόν 'dry' (H.) and καυαλέον ἢ καυαλές· ὑπὸ Αἰολέων τὸ αἶθος, ἢ κατακεκαυμένον κτλ. 'fire (Aeolian); burnt completely, etc.'.
•ETYM If Delph. ►κηυα is correctly compared (which is quite uncertain; s.v.), κηλέος has to stand for *κηϝαλέος (Shipp 1967: 54 suggests that κηϝαλέον πῦρ was originally verse-final, like αἰθόμενον πῦρ, etc.); Aeol. *καϝαλέος would then have a different ablaut grade (perhaps keh_2u- beside kh_2u-). The form κηλείῳ may have replaced the suffix -εος with -ειος. The forms περί-κηλος and καυαλές were reshaped as well, after the adjectives in -λο- and -ής. See further ►καίω and ►κηώδης.

κηλέω [v.] 'to charm, bewitch' (IA). ◂IE? keh_2l- 'enchant, deceive'▸ •VAR Aor. κηλῆσαι.
•COMP Also with κατα-, ὑπερ-, ἐκ-.
•DER Verbal nouns: κηληθμός 'enchantment' (λ 334 = ν 2), κήλησις 'id.' (Pl.), κήλημα 'charm' (Ibyc., E.), κήληθρον 'id.' (Phryn., H.); Κηληδόνες [f.pl.] name of mythical singers who resembled the Sirenes (Pi.), κηλήτωρ 'enchanter' (Orph.), -ήτειρα [f.] (Hes. Op. 464 εὐκηλήτειρα; = ἡσυχάστρια 'she who soothes' H.), κηλητήριος 'enchanting' (S., E.), -ητικός (Ath., Ael.).
•ETYM Bugge Curtius Studien 4 (1871): 331f. compared a Germanic deverbative with deviant meaning: Go. (af)holon 'to slander, συκοφαντεῖν', OE hōlian 'id.', OHG huolen 'to deceive' < keh_2l-, from which we may also mechanically derive the Greek verb. Lat. calvor, -ī 'to deceive', calumnia 'trickery, false accusation, malicious prosecution' is formally different, but semantically it matches the Germanic words well. Schrijver 1991: 95, 113 reconstructs kh_2l-u- for Latin, while LIV² s.v. $\acute{k}elh_1$- 'verlocken, betören, betrügen' assumes a Narten present *$k\bar{e}lh_1$- / $kelh_1$-, presumably because they want to connect it with $\acute{k}leh_1$- 'to call', which is unwarranted.

κήλη [f.] 'tumor; rupture, hernia' (Hp., AP), 'hump' (Eup., Arist.). ◂IE keh_2u-l- 'tumor, stalk'▸ •DIAL Att. κάλη (Arist., gramm.).
•COMP As a first member in κηλο-τομία 'operation for hernia'; as a second member in ἐντερο-, σαρκο-κήλη (medic.).
•DER κηλήτης [m.] 'hernia patient' (Str., Gal., Phryn.), Att. καλήτης; (ἐντερο)-κηλικός (Dsc., Gal.); κάλαμα· ὄγκος 'distension' (H.), see Chantraine 1933: 186f.; denominative verb καλάζει· ὀγκοῦται. Ἀχαιοί 'is distended (Achaean)' (H.). On κηλᾶς bird s.v.
•ETYM The difference between Ion. κήλη and Att. κάλη (where the α is long, acc. to gramm.) is unexplained. 'Rückverwandlung' of PAtt. η > ᾱ cannot be accounted for, and it is unattractive to assume different ablaut forms *κᾱϝ-ελ-ᾱ > κήλη, *κᾰϝ-ελ-ᾱ > κάλη as late as Proto-Ionic-Attic. Björck 1950: 70 therefore suggested that κάλη was taken by Attic from another dialect, but there is no proof for this.
A remarkable correspondence is found in the Germanic term for 'groin rupture', ON haull [m.], OE hēala [m.], OHG hōla [f.] < PGm. haula(n)*-, -ō(n), and in Balto-Slavic: CS kyla, Ru. (dial.) kilá (which also means 'knag on a tree'), Lith. kū́las 'navel rupture', kū́la 'thickening, swelling, knag'. All forms mentioned must go back to an ablauting l-stem keh_2u-l-, $k(e)h_2u$-el-, kh_2u-l- (cf. on ►ἥλιος). The precise derivation of the Greek forms, however, remains unclear.

κηλίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'stain (of blood), spot, defilement' (trag., Antipho, X., Arist.). ◂IE? keh_2l- 'white spot'▸ •DER κηλιδόω (καλ- Ecphant. apud Stob. 4, 7, 64) 'stain, soil' (E., Arist., Ph.), κηλιδωτός (Suid., gloss.). Further κηλάς, -άδος [f.] epithet of storm clouds (Thphr.), acc. to H. also χειμερινὴ ἡμέρα 'stormy day' and αἴξ, ἥτις κατὰ τὸ μέτωπον σημεῖον ἔχει τυλοειδές 'goat having a knob-like sign on its forehead'; also κηλήνη· μέλαινα 'black; (also) name of a disease' (H.).
•ETYM Formation like κληΐς, κνημίς, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 347), derived from a noun. In Italic, we find an adjective with comparable meaning: Lat. calidus 'with a bless on the head' = U (buf) kaleřuf 'boves calidos', where it is unknown whether the Lat. a is long or short. To the same semantic sphere also belongs Lith. kalýbas, -ývas 'white-necked (of dogs)' and OIr. caile 'stain' < IE kh_2l-io-. Nussbaum 1999: 381f. suggested that the Latin word was borrowed from a Greek pre-form kālad-*.

κῆλον 'arrow, projectile'. ⇒κῆλα.

κήλων, -ωνος [m.] 'stallion, male ass' (Archil., Cratin., Ph., H.) often metaph. 'swing-beam (for drawing water), swipe' (Delos III^a, pap.). ◂?▸
•DIAL Dor. κάλων.
•COMP As a first member in κηλωνο-στάσιον 'support or base for the swing-beam' (PBerl. Leihg. 13, 14).
•DER κηλωνεῖον (Ion. -ήϊον) 'machine for drawing (water)' (Hdt., Ar., Arist.), κηλωνεύω [v.] 'to turn the swing-beam' (Hero, Ath. Mech.).
•ETYM A secondary formation in -ων (Chantraine 1933: 161f.). Vendryes REGr. 25 (1912): 461 proposed to start from κῆλον in the unattested sense of 'penis', but this cannot be further substantiated.

κημός [m.] 'muzzle, plaited lid of the balloting urn, fyke for fishing, cover for nose and mouth, etc.' (A., S., Ar., X.); on the mg. Schenkl WuS 5 (1926): 172ff. ◂PG(V)▸ •DIAL Dor. κᾶμός.
•COMP As a second member in εὐκαμία· ἡσυχία, ἤτοι εὐφημία 'quiet, silence' (EM, H.), as if from *εὔκᾶμος.
•DER κημόω [v.] 'to muzzle' (X., 1 Ep. Cor. 9, 9, sch.), κήμωσις· φίμωσις 'silencing' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Connection with Arm. k'amem 'to press (out)' (LIV² s.v. kem-*) is formally possible, but is incompatible with the probable basic meaning of the Greek word, 'wicker'; the same holds for the Balto-Slavic and Germanic group meaning 'to press, etc.', e.g. Lith. kāmanos pl. 'harness with bit', Ru. kom 'clump', MHG hemmen, hamen 'to restrain, bind, hamper'. Fur.: 220 connects the adjectives χαβός and χαμός (both H.); the connection with ►χάβος 'muzzle' is self-evident, and the interchange μ/ β points to Pre-Greek origin (see Fur.: 203-227). It seems evident to connect κημός as well, and all variants derive from a pre-from kām-*. Lat. cāmus 'muzzle' was borrowed from Dor. καμός; Osman., Arab. ğem 'bit, mouth-piece of the harness, bridle' (which later gave rise to MoGr. τὸ γέμι 'bridle') are from κημός. See ►κῶμος, ►κώμυς.

κῆμος [f.] a plant, λεοντοπόδιον or Evax (Dsc., Orph.). ◂?▸
•ETYM No etymology. See André 1956 s.v. cēmus.

κήξ ⇒ καύαξ.

κῆπος 1 [m.] 'garden, orchard, plantation' (Il.), 'uncultivated piece of land' (Cypr.). ◂IE? keh₂p-* 'enclosure', EUR?▸
•VAR Dor. κᾶπος.
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. κηπουρός 'gardener' (Att., Hell.) < *κηπο-ϝορός, also κηπ-ωρός (Archipp.), probably after θυρωρός (see ►θύρα); κηπο-λάχανον 'garden of vegetables' (pap.) of the type ἱππο-πόταμος, see ►ἵππος and Strömberg 1944: 7, also κηπο-λαχαν-ία 'id.' (pap.); κηπ-εργός 'gardener' (Corycus), for -ουργός (Poll.) after ἔργον. Also as a second member, e.g. περί-κηπος [m.] 'garden around the house' (Ptol. pap., D. S.), probably after περί-χωρος; ἀγρό-κηπος (Att. inscr., Rom. Emp.), ἀγρο-κήπιον (Str.) 'field worked as garden'.
•DER Diminutives κηπίον (Halic. V[a], Th.), -πίδιον (Plu., D. L.), -πάδιον (pap.); κηπαῖος 'of the garden' (Arist.), κηπεύς 'gardener' (Philyll. Com. 14, AP), Dor. καπεύς; κηπίδες Νύμφαι 'garden Nymphs' (Aristainet.). Denominative κηπεύω [v.] 'to work in the garden, cultivate' (E., Eub., Arist.), whence κηπεῖαι [f.pl.] 'gardens' (Pl. Lg. 845d), plur. κηπεύματα 'products or fruits of the garden' (Ar. Av. 1100), κηπευτής = κηπεύς (gloss.), κηπεύσιμος 'grown up in a garden' (Alex. Trall.), after φυτεύσιμος, see Arbenz 1933: 86.
•ETYM Except for the ending, PGr. kāpo-* could be identical with a WGm. word of comparable meaning, OHG huoba, OS hōba, MoHG Hufe, Hube [f.] 'piece of land of a certain size', MoDu. hoeve 'farm', from IE keh₂p-h₂-*. Alb. kopshtë 'garden' (with suffix -shtë-) also belongs here. Further connections are either uncertain or wrong (►κάπετος, Lat. capiō, OHG habaro 'oats'). Could the word be from a European substrate language?

κῆπος 2 'ape'. ⇒ κῆβος.

κήρ, κηρός [f.] 'death, doom, goddess or demon of death' (Il.), plur. 'types of death, accidents'. ◂PG▸
•COMP κηρεσσι-φόρητος 'driven (into death) by the Keres' (Θ 527), κηρι-τρεφεῖς 'brought up for death' (ἄνθρωποι, Hes. Op. 418), κηρο-τρόφος 'deadly' (ὄφις, Nic. Th. 192); ἐπί-κηρος 'fallen to death' (Hp., Arist., Hell.); also ἀκήρατος, with ἀκηράσιος and ἀκήριος 'unharmed', see ►ἀκήρατος 1 and Sommer 1948: 152.

•DER κηρέσιον· ὀλέθριον, νοσηρόν 'deadly, diseased' (H.), after θεσπέσιος; κηραίνω [v.] 'to damage, destroy' (A. Supp. 999, Ph.), after πημαίνω; κηρόομαι [v.] 'to be injured' (EM).
•ETYM The main question is whether the long α in Alc. (κᾶρι B 6 A 7) and Alcm. (κᾶρα Fr. 56; κάραν was handed down) points to PGr. kā̆r*. We may compare the glosses κάρ· θάνατος 'death' (H.), καριῶσαι· ἀποκτεῖναι 'to kill', and ἐκαρίωσας· ἀπέκτεινας (H.), where α was probably long. Further evidence is provided by the Attic proverb θύραζε Κᾶρες, οὐκ ἔτ' Ἀνθεστήρια. It has been suggested that Κᾶρες meant 'Carians', i.e. 'slaves', but this is clearly an aetiological story made up in order to explain the α. See also Brunel RPh. 41 (1967): 81-104. On the other hand, κῆρες and κήρ occur both in Pi. Fr. 277 and in the choral songs of tragedy. In order to explain this, an ablauting paradigm κήρ, *κᾰρός has been suggested, from which a secondary nom. κᾱ́ρ was formed, but this cannot be maintained. The most likely conclusion is that the long α is original, and that the IA development η spread over a large area. Since there was no IE root kār-, the most likely conclusion is that the word is Pre-Greek. See Beekes MSS 63 (2003): 7-10.

κῆρ 'heart'. ⇒ καρδία.

κηραφίς ⇒ κάραβος.

κηρός [m.] 'wax' (Od.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP Frequent as a first member, e.g. κηρό-δετος 'fixed together with wax' (Theoc.), κηρο-πλάστης 'wax sculptor' (Pl.), κηρο-τακίς [f.] 'hot plate' (to keep wax paints hot) (PHolm. 6, 33; cf. Lagercrantz 1913: ad loc.).
As a second member e.g. in πισσό-κηρος [m.] 'propolis, a mix of resin and wax by which bees stop up their hives, bee-bread' (Arist., Plin.); also κηρό-πισσος 'ointment from wax and resin' (Hp.), cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 58, μελί-κηρος 'bee-wax' (pap.); μελι-κήριον 'honeycomb' (Sm.), μελι-κηρίς 'id.', metaph. 'cyst or wen' resembling a honeycomb (Hp., pap.), the same metaph. in μελί-κηρᾰ [f.] 'spawn of the murex' (Arist.).
•DER 1. κηρίον 'wax-cake, honeycomb' (IA, h. Merc. 559), κηρίδιον (Aët.), κηριώδης 'like a honeycomb' (Thphr.), κηρίωμα 'tearing eyes' (S. Fr. 715), κηριάζω [v.] 'to spawn', of the murex, as its spawn resembles a honeycomb (Arist.). 2. κήρινος 'of wax' (Alcm., Att.), κηρίνη (sc. ἔμπλαστρος) name of a plaster (medic.); 3. κήρινθος [m.] 'bee-bread' (Arist., Plin., H.); 4. κηρίων, -ωνος 'wax-candle, -torch' (Plu., Gal.); 5. κηρών, -ῶνος 'bee-hive' (sch.); 6. κηρίς fish name, perhaps = κιρρίς (Diph. Siph., Alex. Trall.; see ►κιρρός), probably after its yellow color; cf. Strömberg 1943: 20f., Thompson 1947 s.v. 7. κηρῖτις (λίθος) 'wax-like stone' (cerae similis, Plin. HN 37, 153); 8. *κηροῦσσα in Lat. cērussa 'white lead' (Plaut.).
Denominative verbs: 1. κηρόομαι [v.] 'to be covered with wax', -όω 'to cover with wax' (Hp., Herod., AP), whence κήρωσις 'bee-wax' (Arist.); κήρωμα 'wax-ointment, -plaster' (Hp.), cf. Lat. cērōma, with -ματικός, -ματίτης, -ματιστής; κηρωτή 'id.' (Hp., Ar., Dsc.), κηρωτάριον 'id.' (medic.); 2. κηρίζω [v.] 'to look like wax' (Zos. Alch.).
•ETYM Baltic has a similar word for 'honeycomb': Lith. korỹs, Latv. kâre(s); however, these point to a pre-form kāri-, and comparison with κηρός is doubtful because all Greek evidence points to PGr. kēro-. As there is no evdience for Indo-European apiculture, we have to reckon with foreign origin for κηρός, cf. Chantraine 1933: 371. From κηρός, Latin may have borrowed cēra (details in WH s.v.); from Lat. cēreolus, Greek took κηρίολος 'wax candle' (Ephesus II[p]). The word κήρινθος 'bee-bread' seems Pre-Greek.

κηρύλος [m.] name of a bird, identified with or compared to the kingfisher ἀλκυών (Alcm., Archil., Ar., Arist.); see Thompson 1895 s.v. ◂PG?(S)▸ •VAR In Ar. Av. 299f. it is written κειρύλος, as a nickname referring to κείρειν.
•DER κηρύλος· ἄρσην ὄρνις συνουσιαστικός 'sociable male bird' (H.).
•ETYM No etymology. With the root κηρ- (or perhaps κηλ- with dissimilation), it has been compared with Skt. śārá- 'motley', śā̃ri- a kind of bird, but such comparisons amount to nothing. The suffix -υλο- occurs in Pre-Greek words.

κήρῡνος [m.] a throw of the dice (Eub. 57, 2). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also κάρυννος (Phot.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Probably Pre-Greek.

κῆρυξ [m.] 'herald, messenger', also 'trumpet-shell' (Il.). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •VAR Accented κῆρυξ in Hdn. (cf. Schwyzer 391); Dor. Aeol. κάρυξ, -ῡκος.
•DIAL Myc. ka-ru-ke /kārūkes/.
•COMP As a second member e.g. in δρομο-κῆρυξ 'courier' (Aeschin.).
•DER 1. Feminine: κηρύκαινα 'heraldess' (Ar. Ec. 713), cf. Chantraine 1933: 108; 2. Patronymic Κηρυκίδαι [m.] 'descendants of the Athenian family of the Κήρυκες' (Poll.). 3. Adjectives: κηρύκειος 'belonging to the herald' (S.), mostly ntr. κηρύκ(ε)ιον, Dor. κᾱρ-; Ion. κηρυκήϊον 'herald's wand' (IA Dor.); borrowed into Lat. cādūceum, -eus, cf. WH s.v., also as a constellation (Scherer 1953: 200); 'auctioneer's fee, tax on auction sales' (Hell. inscr. and pap.); Καρυκήϝιος Boeotian name of Apollo (Tanagra, Thebes, VI[a]); κηρυκικός 'regarding the herald' (Pl.), -ινος 'belonging to the herald' (pap., Suid.), -ώδης 'like the trumpet-shell' (Arist.).
Denominative verbs: 1. κηρύσσω 'to be herald, broadcast, announce' (Il.), Att. -ύττω, Dor., etc. κᾱρ-; κήρυγμα 'herald's cry, announcement' (IA), κηρυγμός (sch.), κήρυξις (D. C.) 'id.'; 2. κηρυκεύω [v.] 'to act as a herald, announce' (Att.), whence κηρυκεία, -ηΐη 'herald's service' (IA), κηρύκευμα 'announcement' (A. Th. 651), -ευσις 'id.' (Suid.).
•ETYM Traditionally compared with Skt. kārú- 'singer, poet'. However, Beekes 2003: 109-116 showed that Greek does not have an 'enlargement' -κ- (the examples in Schwyzer: 496 are few and doubtful); furthermore, in this manner, the long ῡ could not be explained. Words in -ῡκ- all have very different meanings and are probably non-IE. Therefore, the word is most probably Pre-Greek. In this way, the gloss κορύγης· κῆρυξ. Δωριεῖς (H.), hitherto unexplained, can also be understood: Pre-Greek a* interchanging with o* before a following u*. The a* that we must assume for the gloss was short, so this is another variant of the same word.

κῆτος, -εος [n.] 'big sea-animal, sea-monster' (Il.), 'whale' (Arist.); also name of a constellation (Arat.; Scherer 1953: 187). ◂PG?▸

•COMP κητό-δορπος (συμφορά) 'giving the κήτεα their evening meal' (Lyc.); μεγα-κήτης 'with big κήτεα' (Hom.), epithet of πόντος, also of δελφίς = '(being) a big κῆτος', thence also of ναῦς (cf. Sommer 1948: 184f.), βαθυ-κήτης (πόντος) 'having κήτεα in the deep' (Thgn. 175), πολυ-κήτης 'with many κήτεα' (Theoc. 17, 98).
•DER κήτειος 'belonging to the κῆτος' (Mosch., Nonn.), κητώδης 'belonging to the whale' (Arist.); κητεία [f.] 'catching of κήτεα (tunnies)' (Str., Ath., Ael.), after ἁλιεία; κήτημα 'salted tunnies' (Diph. Siph. apud Ath. 3, 121b; uncertain), κητήνη· πλοῖον μέγα ὡς κῆτος 'large ship, like a sea-monster' (H.) (cf. ἀπήνη 'wagon', and the ship name Πετήνη); κητόομαι [v.] 'to become a κῆτος' (Ael.). See ▸κητώεσσαν.
•ETYM Unexplained. Probably a Pre-Greek word.

κητώεσσαν [adj.] epithet of κοίλην Λακεδαίμονα (B 581, δ 1; verse-final), generally taken as 'full of crevices, abysses', later said of the wooden horse (Q. S. 12, 314) and, by confusion with κήτειος, κῆτος, said of πώεα, φάλαγξ (Nonn.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Not well explained. Zenodotus (sch. on δ 1) read καιετάεσσαν in its place, and understood it as 'καλαμινθώδη', derived from καιέτα· καλαμίνθη. Βοιωτοί (H.) or καιετας (unaccented, Apoll. Lex. s.v. κητώεσσαν) = καλαμίνθη, a sweet-smelling plant. Call. (fr. 639 Pf.) calls the river Eurotas καιετάεις. Other informants (see Str. 8, 5, 7 and Eust. 1478, 41) connected it with the gloss καιετοί· οἱ ἀπὸ τῶν σεισμῶν ῥωχμοί 'clefts due to earthquakes' and καιέτας = ▸καιάδας. This may be a learned guess, but it is difficult to explain κητ- from it. Bechtel 1914 s.v. assumed a word κῆτος 'crevice, abyss'. For κητώεσσαν, a metrical lengthening of *κητόεσσαν was assumed, but this is unnecessary if we follow Ruijgh Lingua 28 (1971), who posits a pre-form *κητοσ-ϝεντ-, with Achaean ω as a result of the first compensatory lengthening.
It seems evident to connect καιέτας, καιάδας 'crevice in Sparta'. Fur.: 180[6] points to the gloss ἄμυσσος· κῆτος. Λάκωνες (see ▸βύθος), which shows that a crevice could be called κῆτος.

κηυα [?] in θυεν ... τρικτευαν κηυαν (Delph., IG 2[2], 1126: 34 [IV[a]]), meaning unclear. ◂GR?▸
•ETYM τρικτευαν could belong to τριττο(ι)α, τρικτύα 'sacrifice of three animals'. Then κηυαν may be an adjective belonging to καίω 'to burn', perhaps from *κηϝ-ιαν 'destined for burning' (cf. κηώδης and κήϊα, κεῖα· καθάρματα H.). The opposite analysis (κηυα as a substantive) may also be considered; cf. Schwyzer: 459[7], 349 (assuming *κήϝ-ᾱ). Unclear.

κῆϋξ name of a sea-bird. ⇒καύαξ.

κηφήν, -ῆνος [m.] 'drone', often metaph. 'lazy vagabond' (Hes.), also used for Asiatic peoples by the Anatolian Greeks, e.g. for the Persians (Hdt. 7, 61), like in Slavic languages, Némec 'German' originally means "someone dumb". ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Also καφάν (H.).
•DER Diminutive κηφήνιον (Arist.); κηφηνώδης 'drone-like' (Pl.). Further Κηφεύς (Hdt.) and several short names like Κῆφις, Κᾶφις, Κάφων, Καφώ; differently Bechtel 1914 s.v. ▸κεκαφηώς.

•ETYM Perhaps a substantivization in -ήν, -άν of an adjective κᾱφός, whence κωφός 'dumb, deaf' with ablaut. Mechanically, one could reconstruct a root ke/oh$_2$b^h- or g^{h}e/oh$_2$b^h-. However, it is impossible to connect Lat. hebes 'dumb', not only because of its e-vocalism (as opposed to ā, ō in καφάν, κωφός), but also because of the vowel quantity (g^{h}Hb^h*- would vocalize as hab- in Latin). DELG notes that ablaut ā/ō* is rare in Greek; note that a suffix -ᾱν is rare, too. The insect name may well be original; the chances are high that the word is Pre-Greek. Cf. on ▸κεκαφηότα.

κῆχος [?] only in the question ποῖ κῆχος, which acc. to some grammarians stands for ποῖ γῆς, acc. to others for ποῖ δή (Ar. Fr. 656, Pherecr. 165). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Also κῆγχος, κηγχός •ETYM The prenasalization clearly shows the Pre-Greek character of the words.

κηώδης [adj.] 'full of perfume, sweet-smelling' (Z 483, after it D. P. 941). ◂IE? keh$_2$u*- 'burn'▸ •VAR By shortening of the vowel κεώδης· καθαρός 'clear, pure'; κεῶεν ὄζει· εὐωδεῖ (H.).
•DER κηώεις (Hom., AP, Nonn.).
•ETYM For earlier *κηϝώδης and *κηϝόεις (with metrical lengthening), the words have been derived from a neuter κῆϝος 'fire, incense', from the root of ▸καίω. However, provided that this etymology is correct, the lengthened grade kēu- assumed by Frisk and DELG is wrong; the word is based on kāwV*- > keh$_2$uV*-. Beside the s-stem kāwos*-, Greek also had kāwion* in κήϊα and in κεῖα· καθάρματα 'purifications' (H.), cf. τεῖχος : τειχίον, and further, a form with -l- in ▸κηλέος 'burning'. For the interchange of suffixes, cf. ▸ἔτος / ▸ἔταλον, ▸ἄγκος / ▸ἀγκάλη.

κιάθω ⇒ κίω.

κίβδηλος [adj.] 'false, fake, tampered' (of gold, coins, etc.), 'deceitful' (Thgn., Pi. fr. 70b 3, IA). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Fur. 316 quotes κίβαλος· ὁ λῃστής 'pirate' (Su.) (but = διάκονος 'servant' H.); the connection is unclear (not mentioned by DELG).
•COMP Negated ἀ-κίβδηλος 'untampered' (Hdt., Pl. Lg.).
•DER κιβδηλία, -ίη 'falsification, deceit' (Hp., Ar.); denominatives: 1. κιβδηλεύω [v.] 'to falsify' (E., Ar., Arist.), whence κιβδήλευμα, -λεία 'falsification' (Pl. Lg.);, 2. κιβδηλιάω [v.] 'to look like forged gold; to have jaundice' (Arist.), after the verbs of illness in -ιάω. Besides κίβδης· κακοῦργος, <κά>πηλος, χειροτέχνης 'malefactor, huckster, artisan' (H.), κίβδωνες = μεταλλεῖς 'miners' (Poll., Moer.), κιβδῶνες (Phot.). The basis is κίβδος 'dross of metal' (Poll.); in the same mg. also κίβδηλις (H.), see κιβδηλιῶντας; on the suffix -ηλο- see Chantraine 1933: 242.
•ETYM It remains uncertain whether κίβαλος belongs here. In spite of Frisk, there appears no basis to connect ▸κίβον · ἐνεόν. Πάφιοι 'dumb (Paph.)' (H.). Of course, the word is Pre-Greek (Fur.: 316); on the suffix -ηλο-, see Fur.: 115[5]. In the root κιβδ-, -βδ- was most probably one phoneme, for which we propose (the voiced representative of) PG p^y*. A final -δος is also found in λύγδος 'white marble' and ▸μόλυβδος 'lead'. Von Blumenthal finds a related verb in κίψει· κακοποιεῖ 'does wrong' (H.).

κίβῑσις [f.] 'sack, pack' (Hes. Sc. 224, Pherecyd., Call.). Acc. to H. Cypr. for πήρα 'leather pouch'. ◂PG▸ •VAR Also κίβησις (Suid., Orion), κύβεσις, κυβησία (H., see Fur. 365); besides, probably as a popular hypocoristic form with gemination, κίββα· πήρα, Αἰτωλοί (H., see Fur. 305); further κίρβα· πήρα (cod. πεῖρα), διφθέρα. Αἰτωλοί 'leather pouch (Aetolian)' (H.), MoGr. κιρβέλλα 'small sack'; see Kretschmer Glotta 11 (1921): 247.
•ETYM Given the variants, most probably of Pre-Greek origin. See ▸κιβωτός.

κιβώριον [n.] 'seed-vessel of the Egyptian water lily (κολοκασία)'; metaph. 'cup; tomb' (Hell.). ◂LW Eg.▸ •ETYM Probably a loan from Egyptian (thus H.), but not attested there; see Meyer 1896: 140, Nencioni Stud. ital. fil. class. 16 (1939): 11. Lat. cibōrium was borrowed from the Greek; cf. E-M s.v.

κῑβωτός [f.] 'wooden chest, box, cupboard' (Hecat., Simon., Att.), also of Noah's ark and of the alliance (LXX). ◂PG▸
•VAR On the gender see Schwyzer 1950: 34[2].
•DER Diminutives κιβώτιον (Ar., Arist.), -ίδιον (Delos IV[a]), -άριον (Hero).
•ETYM Perhaps cognate with ▸κίβισις 'sack', thus probably Pre-Greek. A shorter form κίβος (κῖβος?) is found in Suid. Semitic hypotheses in Lewy 1895: 99f. From κιβωτός, Syr. qēbūthā and MoP kēbūt 'box' were borrowed (cf. Bailey TPS 1933: 50). Lat. cibus perhaps also belongs here; see WH s.v.

κίγκασος [?] · κυβευτικός τις βόλος 'a cast of dice', also κίκκασος· ...καὶ βόλου ὄνομα 'name of a cast of dice' (H.). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Fur.: 281 assumes that the interchanges are due to "spätgriechische Geminatenauflösung", referring to Schwyzer KZ 61 (1934): 230. Still, the word must be Pre-Greek because of its suffix.

κιγκλίς, -ίδος [f.] 'latticed gate', especially those through which knights or counsellors entered the court of justice or the meeting hall (Ar., Luc., Plu.), also θυρο-κιγκλίδες (Attica). ◂PG▸ •VAR Mostly plur. -ίδες.
•ETYM Technical word without a certain etymology. Strömberg 1944: 15 assumed a back-formation from κιγκλίζειν 'to wag the tail, change continuously' (Thgn. 303); see on ▸κίγκλος. It seems to be a reduplicated form with prenasalization κι-γ-κλιδ-. Probably Pre-Greek.

κίγκλος [m.] 'dabchick', acc. to H. ὄρνεον πυκνῶς τὴν οὐρὰν κινοῦν 'a bird often wagging its tail' (com., Arist.); details in Thompson 1895 s.v. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also as a fish name κίγκαλος (Numen. apud Ath. 7, 326a), perhaps after the color, cf. Strömberg 1943: 116.
•COMP As a first member in κιγκλο-βάτᾱς 'going like a dabchick' (ῥυθμός, Ar. Fr. 140).

•DER κιγκλίζω [v.] 'to change constantly' (Thgn. 303), perhaps originally "to move like a dabchick", with regard to the tail (cf. H. on κίγκλος: κιγκλίζειν, ὅ ἐστι διασείεσθαι 'which means: to be shaken'), also trans. with δια- (Hp., Ar.) and ποτι- (Theoc. 5, 117); thence κίγκλισις (Hp.), -ισμός (Hp., Men.). Cf. on κιγκλίς.
•ETYM The variation κί(γ)χλος, κίγκαλος, κέγκλος, etc. in the tradition shows that the word is Pre-Greek. Not from *κέγκλος, related to Skt. cañcala- 'movable, uncertain', which rather derives from cal-cal-a-* (with dissimilation), and belongs to cálati = cárati 'to move' (see ► πέλομαι).

κίδαλον [?] · κρόμμυον 'onion' (H.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Cf. σχιστά· τὰ γράμματα. καὶ τὰ κρόμμυα 'letters, also onions' (H.); the words are probably Pre-Greek.

κίδαρις [f.] name of a turban-like headgear, worn by the Persian kings only (Ctes., Ph., Plu.), also of the turban of the Jewish high priest (LXX); name of an Arcadian dance (Ath. 14, 631d). ◂LW Orient.▸
•VAR Also κίτ(τ)αρις; gen. -εως.
•ETYM Grimme Glotta 14 (1925): 16 supposes Hittite or Oriental origin; Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 63 mentions Hebr. ktr mlkwt and Aram. kitrā.

κίδαφος [?] = ἀλώπηξ 'fox' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Fem. κιδάφη; also κινδάφη, κι(ν)δάφιος; further σκίνδαφος [f.] (Ael.), σκιδάφη (Arc.).
•DER Adjectival: κίδαφος = δόλιος 'cunning', κι(ν)δάφιος = πανοῦργος 'knavish' (H.). Denominative κιδαφεύειν· πανουργεῖν 'play the knave' (H.).
•ETYM Animal name in -φο- (see Chantraine 1933: 263); the adjectival function is clearly secondary. Wood Class. Phil. 3 (1908): 76 compares it to Lith. skíedžiu, skíesti 'separate', etc. as "the cunning one". Another variant is ► κίραφος; all these variations show the Pre-Greek character of the word.

κίδναμαι 'to be spread out'. ⇒ σκεδάννυμι.

κιδνόν [adv.] · ἐνθάδε. Πάφιοι '(to) here, (to) there (Paphian)' (H.). ◂IE? ḱo, ḱe* 'this'▸ •ETYM From the deictic particle PIE ḱi* in Lat. ci-s, Gr. ► ἐκεῖ, etc., but unclear in detail. Bechtel 1921, 1: 349 assumes a derivative in -no- from a neuter ḱid*, by comparison with Go. und hit-a 'ἕως ἄρτι'. Pisani AnFilCl 6 (1953-54): 213ff. identifies *κιδ with Go. hita as well, but -νον would be from νῦν 'now' (cf. Hitt. kinun 'now') with Cyprian development of υ to ο. Blanca Prósper KZ 108 (1995): 75-83 explains the word as from ki-dinom* 'at this day here'.

κίδραι ⇒ χῖδρον.

κιέλλη [f.] · φέγγος, αὐγή, φῶς· πάχνη· ὁμίχλη 'light, sunlight; hoarfrost, frozen rain; mist' (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

κιθάρα [f.] 'lyre' (IA). ◂PG▸

•VAR Ion. -ρη; also κίθαρις, -ιος [f.] (Il.).
•COMP κιθαρο-αοιδός (com.), usually contracted κιθαρῳδός (IA) 'lyre-singer', whence κιθαρῳδέω [v.], etc.; ἀ-κίθαρις 'without lyre' (A.).
•DER κίθαρος [m.] 1. 'thorax' (Hp. Loc. Hom.; after its shape); 2. name of a flatfish (com., Arist.; after the shape); κιθάριον (Ptol. Euerg.); also κιθαρῳδός name of a fish in the Red Sea (Ael.; after the patterning of the colors; Thompson 1947 s.v., Strömberg 1943: 38).
Denominative κιθαρίζω [v.] 'to play the lyre', also of string instruments in general and of the accompanying songs (Il.; on the mg. Diehl RhM N.F. 89 (1940): 96f.), with several derivatives: κιθαριστύς [f.] (Il.), κιθάρισις (Pl.), -ισμός (Call.) 'playing the lyre, the art of the lyre'; attempt at semantic differentiation in Benveniste 1948: 69, see also Porzig 1942: 181; κιθάρισμα 'piece of music for the lyre' (Pl.); κιθαριστής 'lyrist, etc.' (h. Hom. 25, 3, Hes.), -ίστρια (Arist.), also -ιστρίς (Nic. Dam.), -ιστικός (Pl.), -ιστήριος (Hell.) 'belonging to lyre-playing'.
•ETYM Pre-Greek. Earlier explanations from IE and Semitic in Bq. are incorrect.

κίθρα [f.] a vase for preserving grapes (Herod. Med.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM See Rh. Mus. 57: 100 and 110. On κύθρα, see ► χέω.

κῑκᾰμα [acc.pl.n.] name of a plant, acc. to H. (cod. κικαμία) similar to the καυκαλίς (Nic. Th. 841). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Formation like βάλσαμον, σήσαμον, etc.; further unknown. No doubt Pre-Greek.

κῖκι [n.] 'castor oil' (Hdt. 2, 94, Pl. Ti. 60a, pap.), which is oil from a tree, the 'wonder-tree, Ricinus communis' (Str., Dsc.). ◂LW Eg.▸
•VAR Gen. -ιος, -εως; indeclinable in Mayser 1906-1938, I: 2: 24; also κίκι (Hdn. Gr. 1, 354; 2, 766). In the last mg. also κικέα (Aët., Paul. Aeg.); after συκέα, etc.
•COMP As a first member in e.g. κικιο-φόρος 'producing ricinus oil', of γῆ (pap.).
•DER κίκινος 'originating from the ricinus', of ἔλαιον (Dsc., Gal.); κίκιον 'the root of the ricinus tree' (Gal.).
•ETYM An Egyptian word, acc. to Hdt. 2, 94; cf. Hehn-Schrader 1911: 207 and Mayser 1906-1938, I: 1: 37. Perhaps the Egyptian word was têqi; cf. Hdt. τῆκι (Loret in Legrand [ed. Hdt.] ad loc.). See also Nencioni Stud. ital. fil. class. 16 (1939): 9.

κικίβαλος [m.] a kind of shell-fish (Epich. 42); reading uncertain. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR κικοβαυλιτιδες· κογχυλίου τι γένος μέλαν· καὶ τὰ ἐκ στέατος σκωλήκια 'species of dark mollusk; little worm-shaped cakes of flour or spelt' (H.).
•ETYM Pre-Greek. The variants point to *kikVbal*ʷ*-it-*.

κίκιννος [m.] 'curly hair, lock of hair' (com., Theoc., AP). ◂PG(V)▸
•DER PN Κικιννᾶς, L. Robert 1963: 268.
•ETYM See Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 420, who assume a foreign cultural word (Aegaean or Anatolian). From Greek came Lat. cincinnus (cf. WH s.v.). Fur.: 278 is probably right in assuming a prenasalized form *κιγκιννος as a source for the Latin word. Pre-Greek origin must be asssumed.

κίκιρρος [m.] · ἀλεκτρυών 'cock'; κίκκα· ἀλεκτορίς 'hen'; κικκός· ἀλεκτρυών 'cock' (H.). ◄ONOM► •DER PN Cicirrus, see WH s.v.
•ETYM Onomatopoeic words; cf. MoHG kikeriki, imitating the natural sound of the cock, etc. Osc. Cicirrus, cognomen of Messius (Hor. Sat. 1, 5, 52), probably originally meant 'game-cock', referring to the cock-masks used in lower Italy (WH s.v.).

κικκαβαῦ [exclam.] natural sound of the screech-owl (Ar. Av. 261). ◄PG(V)► •DER κικκάβη 'screech-owl' (sch.) and κικκαβάζω [v.] 'to cry like an owl' (Ar. Lys. 761, conj. Dobree for κακκαβάζω, -βίζω). Further κικκάβη (gloss.), κίκυμος, -υβος (H.), κικυμωΐς (Call. fr. 318), -ωνίς acc. to Latte 'id.'; cf. Heubeck Würzb. Jb. 4:2 (1949-1950): 208ff. Note κικυμωνεῖν· δυσβλεπτεῖν 'to see badly' (H.). Further κίκυμος· λαμπτήρ 'lantern'· ἢ γλαυκός· ὁμοίως καὶ κίκυβος 'little owl, Athene noctua' (H.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic words; on the suffix -β-, see Chantraine 1933: 261. Cf. ►κακκάβη and ►κίκιρρος; see also ►κίκκαβος and ►κύμινδις; also, WH s.v. cucubiō, the sound of the screech-owl. The words κικυβ/μος show the Pre-Greek interchange β/ μ (note, however, the doubts in Fur.: 221). There is also Lat. cicuma 'screech-owl'. There is no explanation for the interchange α/ υ in, e.g., κικκ-αβ- / κικ-υμ-.

κίκκαβος [m.] comic name of a small coin in the Underworld, an eighth of a ψωθία = three obols (Pherecr. 1, 167 apud Poll. 9, 83); also 'niggard' (Phot. s.v. κίμβικας). ◄?►
•DER κικκάβι(ο)ν· ἐλάχιστον, οὐδέν 'very small, nothing' (H.).
•ETYM Ending like in ►κόλλυβος with related meaning; as per Pisani Paideia 6 (1951): 291ff., it is perhaps derived from the screech-owl, κικκαβαῦ or κικκάβη, after the owl which was depicted on the back of the Athenian coin. The word *κίκκος 'shell of the pomegranate' is based on a conjecture for unclear κικαῖος in H.; see Pisani l.c.

κίκκασος [m.] · ὀβόλου ὄνομα 'name for an obol' (Phot.). ◄PG►
•VAR Cf. κίκκασος· ὁ ἐκ τῶν παραμηρίων ἱδρὼς ῥέων, καὶ βόλου ὄνομα 'sweat flowing from the inside of the thighs; name for a cast of the dice' (H.).
•ETYM DELG doubts the first gloss, and for the second, compares ►κίγκασος (for which Fur.: 281 refers to 'spätgriechische Geminatenauflösung'; Schwyzer KZ 61 (1934): 230).

κίκκη [f.] · συνουσία, ἡ ἀπὸ τῶν αἰδοίων συνοσμία 'sexual intercourse, emitting the same smell(?) from the private parts' (H.). ◄PG► •ETYM See ►κίκκασος.

κικλήσκω 'to call, name'. ⇒καλέω.

κίκους [?] · ὁ νέος τέττιξ 'the young cicala'; κίξιος· τέττιξ 'cicala' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM Acc. to Gil Fernández 1959: 126f., it is onomatopoeic, reminiscnet of Lat. cicāda. The variation κ/ ξ rather points to Pre-Greek origin.

κικριβιντίς ἀνδράχνη 'purslane' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM Cf. Lat. cicirbita, a plant. The prenasalization points to Pre-Greek origin. See Fur.: 273.

κικυμωΐς ⇒κικκαβαῦ.

κῖκυς, -υος [f.] 'strength, power' (λ 393). ◄PG?►
•COMP ἄ-κικυς, -υος 'without strength, weak' (Od., Hp.).
•DER κικύω = ἰσχύω (Hdn. Gr. 2, 533).
•ETYM Meier-Brügger (apud DELG Supp.) assumes a reduplicated form of *$\hat{k}u̯eh_1$- 'to be strong' in κυέω, κῦμα. This is accepted by de Lamberterie in DELG, but the long ῑ cannot be explained in this way.

κίκω •VAR in ἔκιξα. ⇒κιχάνω.

Κίλικες [pl.] 1. 'Cilicians, inhabitants of the province in the south-east of Anatolia; 2. a people in the valley of Thebes, Θήβη, the town of Eetion, the father of Andromache, south of Troy (Il.). ◄LW Assyr.?►
•VAR Sg.msc. Κίλιξ, fem. Κίλισσα (A.).
•DER κιλικίζεσθαι· κακοηθίζεσθαι (H.), ἐγκιλικίζεατι· κακοηθεύεται, κακοποιεῖ· διεβέβληντο γὰρ ἐπὶ πονηρίᾳ οἱ Κίλικες (H.); κιλίκιον 'a coarse cloth of goat's hair' (Procop.). Κίλιξ mythical name; Κιλικᾶς PN (Cyprus, see O. Masson Κυπριακαί Σπουδαί 32 (1968): 9ff. Κιλικία 'Cilicia' (Hdt.). κιλικισμός 'Cilician behaviour, i.e. drunken butchery (Theopomp. Hist.).
•ETYM The country Cilicia (in Hittite times Kizzuwatna) was called Hilakku by the Assyrians since 858 (but the name may be local); later there were local kingdoms where hieroglyphic Luwian was used. The Greeks arrived in the 8th-7th c. On the Greek kingdom of Mopsos = Musa/us and its king Hiyawa, see now Oettinger 2008b.

κιλλίβᾱς, -αντος [m.] 'three-legged stand, frame' (Ar. Ach. 1121, Poll.). ◄PG► •VAR Usually plur. -αντες; also κελλίβας (pap.).
•ETYM Perhaps from κίλλος 'ass', with a suffix as in the synonymous ὀκρίβας (cf. Schwyzer: 448). For the development of meaning cf., e.g., ὄνος, ὀνίσκος 'winch', MoFr. chevalet 'support', MoHG Esel, Bock 'id.', etc. The suffix may be Pre-Greek; connection with βαίνω is probably folk-etymological.

κίλλιξ 1 [?] · στάμνος 'jar' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM Fur.: 132 connects it with κύλιξ 'id.'; the interchange λ/ λλ points to Pre-Greek origin.

κίλλιξ 2 [adj.] · βοῦς τὸ ἓν κέρας ἔχων διεστραμμένον 'cow with one twisted horn' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM Fur.: 356 connects it with κελλόν· στρεβλόν. πλάγιον 'twisted, athwart' (H.).

κιλλός [adj.] 'grey' (Eub. 103, Phot., H., Eust.). ◄?►
•COMP As a first member, e.g. κιλλ-ακτήρ· ὀνηλάτης, κυνηγός 'donkey-driver' (Poll., H.; Dor.), Κιλλ-άκτωρ PN (AP 5, 28; 44). As a second member perhaps in Macedonian Ἐπό-κιλλος (with ἐπο- = Gr. ἵππο-).

•DER With shift of accent κίλλος [m.] 'ass' (Sammelb. 5224, Poll. 7, 56, H.), metaph. 'cicada' (H.), after its color, cf. Strömberg 1944: 11, Strömberg 1943: 100, Gil Fernández 1959: 100. Derivative κίλλιος 'ass-colored, ὀνάγρινος' (Poll.), probably also κιλ<λ>ίας· στρουθὸς ἄρσην 'male sparrow' (H.). See ► κίλλ(ο)υρος.
•ETYM For the root vocalism, we may compare πιλνός 'grey' beside πελιός 'id.'. Formally, κιλλός is reminiscent of ► κελαινός, if this is from kel-n-io-* (but see s.v.), and if the geminate λλ derives from -ln-* (though its most straightforward explanation would be from -lj-*). In sum, there is no convincing etymology.

κίλλ<ο>υρος [?] · σεισοπυγίς 'wagtail' (H.). ⊲PG?(S)⊳ •ETYM Schrader BB 15 (1889): 127f. connected it with a Baltic word for 'wagtail', Lith. kíelė, Latv. cìelava, OPr. kylo, which would be derived from a verb 'to move' (seen in ► κινέω, ► κίω); Lith. kíelė could then be identical with Gr. *κίλλα < *κιλ-ι̯α, if this was the first compound member. Another possibility is that the wagtail was named for its grey color (see on ► κιλλός). In both cases, the second member would be οὐρά 'tail', but note that the ο is only a conjecture. Moreover, -ουρος is also a frequent suffix in Pre-Greek words. DELG connects κίγκλος, analyzing *κελ-κλος, but this is completely uncertain. On unclear Lat. mōtacilla 'white wagtail', see WH s.v.

κιμβάζει · στραγγεύεται 'loiters' (H.). ⇒ σκιμβάζω.

κίμβιξ, -ικος [m.] 'niggard, skinflint' (Xenoph., Arist., Plu.). ⊲PG(V)⊳
•DER κιμβικία· πανουργία, ἐνδοιασμός (corrected to ἐνεασμός) 'villainy, perplexity' (H.); also κιμβ(ε)ία 'stinginess' (Artist., H.).
•ETYM Reminds one of the gloss σκιπός· σκνιφός, ὁ μικρολόγος 'dim-sighted, penurious' (H.), and of σκιφία (H.) as an explanation of κιμβεία. These variants, as well as those found s.v. ► κνίψ in the meaning 'niggard', point to a Pre-Greek word (prenasalization, interchange of stops, etc.).

κινάβρα [f.] 'smell of a (male) goat' (Luc., Poll.). ⊲PG⊳ •DER κιναβράω [v.] 'to smell like a goat' (Ar. Pl. 294).
•ETYM Unexplained. Doubts about the usual connection with κενέβρειος in Schwyzer: 350. No doubt a Pre-Greek word.

κιναβεύματα [n.pl.] · πανουργεύματα (H., see also Phot. κάννα). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR κιναφεύειν· πανουργεύεσθαι 'to fabricate by ruse' (H.).
•DER κιναβεύεσθαι (-βρ- codd.)· τὸ σκευωρεῖσθαι 'fabrication, fraud' (Phot.).
•ETYM The variants show that it is a Pre-Greek word; see Kuiper 1956: 245 and Fur.: 169f., who assumes a Pre-Greek word kinapo-* 'deceiver, fraud'.

κίναδος, -εος [n.] Sicilian word for 'fox' (Call. Com. 1 D., sch. Theoc. 5, 25), 'beast, monster' (Democr. 259), of people 'cunning, rogue' (Att.); acc. to H. = θηρίον, ὄφις 'wild animal, serpent'. ⊲PG?⊳
•DER Diminutive κινάδιον (Harp.). PN Κινάδης, Κινάδων (Bechtel 1917b: 582). κινάδρα· ἀλώπηξ 'fox' (H.).
•ETYM Not related to ► κνώδαλον. Reminiscent of ► κίδαφος 'fox'.

κινάθισμα [n.] 'noise, rustling', of flying birds (A. Prom. 124 [anap.]). ⊲PG?⊳

•DER κιναθισμός 'id.' (Phot.); from κιναθίζειν· ἰδιάζειν, ἀποθησαυρίζειν κατὰ μικρὸν συλλέγοντα. ἔνιοι μινυρίζειν καὶ κινεῖν 'to devote oneself to, to hoard up for a small collection; to complain in a low voice; to move' (H.). κίναθος· θησαυρισμός 'accumulation' (Phot.), κιναθίας· κρυπτός 'hidden' (H.).
•ETYM For the initial syllable, cf. ► κινυρός. Probably Pre-Greek.

κίναιδος [m.] 'lewd man, catamite' (Pl., Herod.), also name of a sea fish (Plin.), a bird (= κιναίδιον, Gal.). ⊲PG?⊳
•COMP In compounds, e.g. κιναιδο-λογέω (Str.).
•DER κιναίδιον (-ιος) name of the ἴυγξ (H., Phot.), the wagtail (sch.), etc.; κιναιδίας [m.] a stone found in the fish κίναιδος (Plin.), -ία 'lewdness' (Aeschin.), -ώδης 'like a κ.' (sch.); κιναιδίζω [v.] 'to be a κ.' (Antioch. Astr.), κιναίδισμα (Eust.); also -δεύομαι (sch.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Acc. to Archigenes apud Gal. 12, 800, it is a Syrian word. Probably Pre-Greek.

κινάρα [f.] 'artichoke' (Hell.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •VAR Also κύναρα (S. fr. 348; also other plants); κύναρος 'white rose' (S. fr. 718).
•COMP κιναρη-φάγος (Juba).
•DER κιναρέων (pap.) 'bed of artichokes'.
•ETYM Unexplained. Does the variation ι/ υ point to Pre-Greek origin?

κίνδαξ [adj.] · εὐκίνητος 'easily moved' (H.). ⊲PG⊳ •VAR κίνδακας· εὐκινήτους (H.).
•COMP ὀνο-κίνδιος (Eup.), -δας (H.) 'ass-driver'.
•DER κινδαύει (κινδάνει, see Taillardat REA 58 (1956): 189ff.)· κινεῖται, κερατίζει 'move, butt with horns' (H.), Κίνδων name of an ὀψοφάγος (Ath. 8, 345c).
•ETYM Explanations from Indo-European, assuming a form with nasal infix *ki-n-d-, should be discarded. Fur.: 291 compares σκίναξ, implying that the word is Pre-Greek. This nicely illustrates that some forms of substrate words may closely resemble inherited material. For the variation νδ/ν, cf. Kuiper 1956: 216, e.g. ἀθήρ / ἀνθέριξ, κίδαφος / κινδάφη. See ► κίνδυνος.

κίνδυνος [m.] 'danger, risk' (Thgn., Pi., IA; on the mg. Mette Herm. 80 (1952): 409ff.). On κίνδυνος = ἡ ἐν πρῴρᾳ σελίς 'bench in the prow of a ship' (H.), whence MoGr. (Naxos) 'bed', see Andriotis Glotta 25 (1936): 19f. ⊲PG⊳ •VAR Dat. -υνι (Alc. Z 92); also gen. -υνος (Sapph. 184)?
•COMP As a second member e.g. in ἐπι-κίνδυνος 'connected with danger' (IA).
•DER κινδυνώδης 'dangerous' (Hp., Plb.), κινδυνεύω [v.] 'to wage, take a risk' (IA), whence κινδύνευμα 'risk' (S., E., Pl.), -ευτής 'dare-devil' (Th., D. C.), -ευτικός 'dangerous, adventurous' (Arist.).
•ETYM The connection with κίνδαξ, ὀνο-κίνδιος (which do not belong to ► κῑνέω; s.v.) is formally attractive. For the semantics, Prellwitz 1892 and Vendryes REGr. 25 (1912): 461f., compare Lat. solli-citus 'to be in danger' < *'to be wholly stirred'. See also Taillardat REA 58 (1956): 189-194.

Attempts at an IE etymology should be given up (thus still, e.g., Knobloch Glotta 53 (1975): 78-81), and the old etymology kun-du-no-*, κύων being an unlucky cast of the dice (older litt. in Frisk), should be discarded. The Pre-Greek character is clear in view of the ending -ῡν- in κίνδῡν (Alc., Sapph.), with its long ῡ, as seen by Kuiper 1956: 217. Debrunner in Ebert 1924-1932: 526 and Kretschmer KZ 55 (1928): 90f., too, are in favor of foreign (Pre-Greek or Anatolian) origin. Cf. Chantraine 1933: 208.

κῑνέω [v.] 'to set in movement, drive away, shake' (Il.). ◄IE $*\acute{k}eih_2$- 'set in motion'► •VAR Aor. κινῆσαι.
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, δια-, μετα-, παρα-, συν-.
•DER κίνημα, κίνησις 'movement, agitation' (IA), παρα-κινηματικός (Ph.), κινητικός 'moving, movable' (IA), see Chantraine 1956a: 101; κινηθμός 'movement' (Pi.), on the mg. Benveniste 1935: 201; κινώ = κίνησις (Emp. 123, 2; Doric acc. to H.); κινητήρ 'mover, agitator' (h. Hom., Pi.), of Poseidon; cf. Fraenkel 1910: 108; 153; Benveniste 1948: 39 and 42; thence κινητήριος (A.); κινητής 'id.' (Ar., Plb.); κίνηθρον (Poll.), -ητρον (Eust.) '(stirring) spoon'; κινητήριον 'brothel' (Eup.; from κινεῖν in an obscene sense). A back-formation from ἀπο-κινεῖν is ἀπόκινος [m.] name of a comic dance (com.). Further κῑνυμαι [v.] 'to move (oneself), κινέομαι' (Il.), only present stem, incidentally with ἐν-, ἐπι-, ὑπο- (Q. S.); an intensive enlargement in κινύσσομαι [v.] 'to be heavily moved, be excited' (A. Ch. 196; Schwyzer: 716), whence κίνυγμα 'movable or light object, ball, toy' (A. Pr. 158 [anap.]).
•ETYM Because of the athematic middle κίνυμαι, a pre-form *κινέϝ-ω << *κι-νευ-μι has been assumed for the active κινέω. The present κίνυμαι is a poetic medium tantum and means 'to move to and fro, to shake (intr.)' in Hom. (see García Ramón 1993b: 125-139), while the active κῑνέω occurs only in Attic (see Kölligan 2007: 35). The non-presentic forms κινῆσαι, etc. are analogical formations. LIV^2 s.v. $*\acute{k}eih_2$- 'sich in Bewegung setzen' follows Harðarson 1993b: 192 in assuming root final $*h_2$ on account of the gloss κίατο· ἐκινεῖτο 'moved' (H.) and Hom. μετ-εκίαθον 'followed'. See ►κίω, as well as ►σεύω.

κιννάβαρι, -εως [n.] 'cinnabar, vermilion' (Arist., Thphr.). ◄LW Orient.?►
•VAR Also -ις [m.] (Anaxandr. 14, Ps.-Dsc. 3, 143) 'serpent's blood' (painter's color); as a plant name = ἐρυθρόδανον (Ps.-Dsc.).
•DER κινναβάριον name of an eye ointment (Gal.), -άρινος 'cinnabar, vermilion' (Arist.), -αρίζω [v.] 'to be vermilion' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Foreign word from an unknown (but probably Oriental) source; cf. Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 701f. From Greek, Latin borrowed cinnabaris, whence MHG zinober, etc. A remarkable by-form is τιγγάβαρι (Diocl. Com. 9, 10, Theognost. Can. 120, H.) with τιγγαβάρινος (Dam. Isid. 203), perhaps with ki- > ḱi- > tsi-?

κιννάμωμον [n.] usually taken as 'cinnamon' (Hdt., Thphr.), but acc. to Hennig Klio 32 (1939): 325ff. some other kind of sweet-smelling substance. ◄LW Phoen.►
•VAR Rarely -ν-, also κίνναμον (Plin.), -ν- (Nic. Th. 947).
•COMP As a first member in κινναμωμο-φόρος (Str.), of γῆ; κινναμο-λόγος [m.] "cinnamon-gatherer", name of a mythical bird (Plin.), also called κιννάμωμον (Arist.); see Thompson 1895 s.v.

•DER κινναμωμίς [f.] a lesser kind of cinnamon (Gal.), κινναμώμινος 'prepared with cinnamon' (Antiph.), -μίζω [v.] 'to be similar to cinnamon' (Dsc. 5, 121).
•ETYM From Phoenician (Hdt. 3, 111); cf. Hebr. qinnāmōn 'id.'. The ending was modelled on that of the spice-plant ἄμωμον, or due to folk etymology, on that of ἄμωμος 'blameless'. See Lewy 1895: 37 and Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 695f.

κῑνυμαι 'to move (intr.)'. ⇒κινέω and κίω, as well as σεύω.

κινύρα [f.] name of a stringed instrument (LXX, J.). ◄LW Hebr.►
•ETYM Borrowed from Hebr. kinnōr 'cither' and adapted to κινυρός. See Lewy 1895: 164; also, Grimme Glotta 14 (1925): 19 and E. Masson 1967: 69[2].

κινυρός [adj.] mg. uncertain; epithet of βοῦς (P 5), of γόος (A. R. 4, 605), of πέτηλα (Nonn. D. 38, 95). ◄?►
•DER κιν[ν]υρίδες· τὰ μικρὰ ὀρνιθάρια (H.), apparently 'wailing, lamenting'; κινυρίζω [v.] 'to wail, lament' (I 612, acc. to Zenodotus), κινύρομαι [v.] 'to gnash, lament' (A. Th. 123 [lyr.], Dict. 804, Ar. Eq. 11, A. R., Call.). PN Κινύρης (Λ 20), -ρας (Tyrt.).
•ETYM The meaning was already unclear in antiquity; cf. H. on P 5: κινυρή· ἁπαλή, νέα, λεχώ, οἰκτρά, θρηνητική 'weak, young, woman in childbed, pitiable woman, inclined to lament' and (on A. R. 4, 605) κινυρόν· λεπτόν, καπυρόν, ὀξύ, οἰκτρόν 'small, crackly (of sound), i.a., sharp, pitiable'. The parallelism between κινυρός, κινυρίζω, κινύρομαι and μινυρός, ►μινυρίζω, μινύρομαι 'to twitter, complain' is clear. Other mixed forms are κιναθίζειν, -ισμός, ►κινάθισμα and κιναρύζεσθαι· θρηνεῖν μετὰ τοῦ γογγύζειν 'to lament together with grumbling' (H.), perhaps after κελαρύζειν (see Leumann 1950: 241[37]). Given the age of the attested forms, Leumann (l.c.) considers only κινυρός and μινυρίζω to be old; the other forms would have arisen by contamination, as did μύρομαι.

κινύσσομαι ⇒κινέω.

κινώπετον [n.] 'venomous animal, especially a snake' (Call. Jov. 25, Nic. Th. 27 and 195). ◄PG(V)► •COMP κινωπηστής, -οῦ [m.] 'id.' (Nic. Th. 141), see below.
•ETYM Endings like in ἑρπετόν, δακετόν, and ἑρπηστής. Probably related to ►κνώψ 'venomenous animal' (thus Persson 1891: 177). The vocalism points to Pre-Greek origin; cf. on ►πινυτός.

κιξάλλης, -ου [m.] 'highway robber, pirate, thief' (Democr. 260, SIG 38, 19 [Teos V^a], H.); Jo. Gramm. (in Hoffmann 1898: 208) has κιττάλης = κλέπτης (on the phonetics see Schwyzer: 318). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Cf. κίξας· τοὺς ἐν ὁδῷ λῃστας 'thieves on the road' (Phot.).
•DER κιξαλλεύω [v.] 'to commit robbery' (SIG l.c.), κιξαλλία· πᾶσα κακοτεχνία 'any malpractice' (H.).
•ETYM The formation is reminiscent of καβάλλης, δαμάλης, etc. Acc. to Hoffmann 1898: 612, the word was Anatolian (Carian/ Lycian), but it is a clear example of a Pre-Greek word (alternations λλ/ λ, ττ/ ξ). We could reconstruct PG $*kik^yal^y$-. See Fur.: 286.

κίρα [?] · ἀλώπηξ. Λάκωνες 'fox (Lacon.)' (H.). ◂PG▸ •VAR κίραφος· ἀλώπηξ (H.).
•ETYM Frisk IF 49 (1931): 98f. connected it with ► κιρρός = πυρρός, ἐρυθρός, ξανθός 'red, yellow', suggesting that it was adapted from κίδαφος. The form κίραφος is from κιρα, extended by the animal suffix -φος.

κίρβα [f.]? · πήρα 'leather pouch' (H.). ◂PG▸ •VAR MoGr. κιρβέλλα 'small sack'.
•ETYM Probably Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 305.

κιρκαία [f.] scil. ῥίζα, 'black swallowwort, Vincetoxicum nigrum' (Dsc., Apollod.). ◂PG▸ •VAR = ► διρκαία.
•ETYM Probably Pre-Greek; see ► διρκαία.

κίρκιος [m.] = Θρασκίας, the north-northwest wind (Agathem.), = Lat. circius. ◂PG?▸
•DIAL κιρκίας (conjecture Arist.), also κέρκιος (v.l. Arist. Mu. 394b 31), Lat. cercius (Cato).
•ETYM Unknown. Pre-Greek because of the variation? See Fur.: 356.

κίρκος 1 [m.] a hawk or falcon (Hom., A., A. R.); see Thompson 1895 s.v. ◂?▸ •ETYM Unknown; cf. on ► κρέξ.

κίρκος 2 'circle, ring'. ⇒ κρίκος.

κίρνημι ⇒ κεράννυμι.

κίρρις ⇒ ἀκιρίς.

κιρρός [adj.] 'red-yellow, yellow-brown', said of οἶνος, νέκταρ (Hp., Nic.), fem. κιρράς (Nic.). ◂?▸
•COMP ὑπό-κιρρος (Hp., Dsc., Gal.), ἔγ-κιρρος (Dsc.), κιρρο-ειδής (Apollod. Myth.).
•DER κιρρώδης (Hippiatr.); κιρρίς [f.] a sea fish (Opp.); cf. κηρίς s.v. ► κηρός (κιρρά [for κίρρα?] H.); also = εἶδος ἱέρακος 'kind of hawk or falcon' (EM 515, 15); cf. κεῖρις· ὄρνεον, ἱέραξ, οἱ δὲ ἀλκυόνα 'bird, hawk or falcon, kingfisher' (H.), whence Lat. cīris 'sea-bird', see WH s.v.; also κίρις· ... ὄρνεον (H.).
•ETYM The geminate -ρρ- also occurs in ► πυρρός. Unexplained. The comparison with Lith. šir̃mas, šir̃vas 'grey' is problematic, since Lith. -ir̃- is from a zero grade. The group of CS sěrъ 'grey' (see Derksen 2008 for a reconstruction), MIr. cíar 'dark', etc. cannot be connected either for phonetic reasons.

κιρσός [m.] 'varicocele' (Hp., Philostr.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also κρισσός (Hippiatr., H.), κριξός (Poll.).
•COMP As a first member in κιρσο-κήλη 'varicocele', κιρσο-τομέω [v.] 'to operate a varicocele', whence -ία.
•DER κιρσώδης 'varicose', κιρσόομαι [v.] 'to become varicose', act. -όω (causative mg.), whence κίρσωσις (med.).
•ETYM The variation σ(σ)/ ξ shows that the word is Pre-Greek.

κίρτος [adj.]? mg. unknown; corrected to σκίρτος (Simon. 624 P). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

κίρων [adj.] · ἀδύνατος πρὸς συνουσίαν· καὶ αἰδοίου βλάβη· καὶ ἀπεσκολυμμένος· καὶ κυρίως μὲν ὁ σάτυρος, καὶ ἐντεταμένος, ὁ γυναικίας, καὶ μὴ δυνάμενος χρῆσθαι 'unable to have intercourse; injury of the penis; stripped off; mainly used of a lewd man, one who has a penile erection, a weakling, one who is unable to use it' (H.). ◂?▸
•DER DELG cites the PNs Κίρος, Κίρων, Κιρωνίδης (cf. Bechtel 1917b: 497).
•ETYM Unknown.

-κις multiplicative suffix, in πολλά-κι(ς) 'often' (Il.), τετρά-κι(ς) 'four times' (ε 306), πεντά-κι(ς) 'five times' (Pi.), etc. ◂IE *k^wi- 'something'▸ •DIAL Epic, lyr., Dor. also -κι; Lacon. -κιν; Tarent. ἁμάτις 'once'.
•ETYM The word πολλά-κι(ς) agrees in meaning with Ved. purū́-cid 'often'. The forms can be combined if we assume that the plural πολλά 'often' replaces older *πολῦ (which is unlikely), after which *k^w was delabialized in Greek. This hypothesis is confirmed by Tarent. ἁμά-τις 'once' = Cret. ἁμά-κις (H.).
From πολλάκι(ς), the forms in -κ- spread to the numeral adverbs τετράκι(ς), etc.; cf. also οὐκί. The final consonant of -κις, Skt. cid reminds one of the correspondence ἕως 'until': Skt. yā́vat (see on ► ἕως 2); Greek added adverbial *-s (cf. δίς, τρίς). Etymologically, -κι/ -τι = Skt. cid are identical with the indefinite pronoun τι 'something'; see ► τίς.

κῖς, κιός [m.] 'weevil' (Pi. Fr. 222, Thphr., gramm.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Acc. κῖν; also nom. κίς (Hdn. Gr. 2, 925). On the accent see Schwyzer: 378 and Berger MSS 3 (1953): 8; on the quantity of the ι in κιός, etc. Schwyzer: 571.
•COMP ἀκιώτατοι 'least damaged by weevils' (Hes.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Skt. kīṭá- [m.] 'worm, insect' is unrelated; see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. Probably Pre-Greek.

κίσηρις [f.] 'pumice stone' (Ar., Arist., Thphr.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Also κίσηλις (pap., Luc.); gen. -εως, -ιδος.
•DER κισήριον (EM), κισηρο-ειδής and κισηρώδης 'like κ.' (Diog. Apoll., Hell.); κισηρόομαι [v.] 'to be changed into κ.' (Thphr.), -ρίζω [v.] 'to smoothen with κ.' (Nic. Dam.).
•ETYM On the matter, cf. Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 146. Fur.: 117 compares Car. γίσσα and Caucasian (and Basque) forms. Without a doubt Pre-Greek, in view of the variation ρ/ λ.

κίσθος [m.] 'cistus', family of low shrubs, of which the seperate types often produce the resin-like substance λήδανον (Dsc.). ◂PG▸
•VAR Also κισθός (Eup., Mnesim.) and κίστος (Hp., Gal.), κίσθαρος [m.] (Dsc.)
•DER ὑποκισθίς (-τίς) f. 'Cytinus hypocisthis', hypocist (Dsc., Gal.).
•ETYM The suffix of κίσθαρος may be compared with κόμαρος, κίσσαρος, and other plant names (Chantraine 1933: 227). The Cistus is a typical plant of the mediterranean world. Fur.: 190, 257[36] compares Ligurian kústi, MLat. custrus.

κίσιρνις [?] · ὄρνις ποιός 'kind of bird' (H.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Cf. κίσσιρις· εἶδος ὀρνέου 'kind of bird' (H.); also κίσινδις (Su.).
•ETYM Unknown. Pre-Greek has additional words with a nasal added after ρ; see Fur.: 48[126], 215[62], and 387.

κίσπρα [?] · πικρὰ τὸ ἦθος, παλίγκοτος. Κῷοι 'bitter disposition, spiteful (Cos)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Bechtel 1921, 2: 599 compares (with due reservation) Osc. kaispatar, of which the meaning is unknown. Pre-Greek?

κίσσα 1 [f.] 'jay, Garrulus glandarius', also 'magpie, Pica caudata' (Ar.); see Thompson 1895 s.v.; also = ἰχθῦς ποιός 'kind of fish' (H.); on the motivation of the name Strömberg 1943: 115. ◂ONOM▸
•VAR Att. κίττα.
•DER κισσαβίζω (-ττ-) [v.] 'to cry like a jay' (Poll.), cf. τιττυβίζω, etc.; also κισσάω, see ▸κίσσα 2.
•ETYM By comparison with νῆσσα 'duck' and other animal names (Chantraine 1933: 98), one scholar reconstructed PGr. kikịa*, derived from an onomatopoeic root. For this sound-imitation, bird names like Skt. kiki- (lex.), kikidīví- [m.] (RV 10, 97, 13, TS) 'blue jay', and Gm. names like OE higora 'magpie' can be compared; the latter were apparently not restored after Grimm's Law.

κίσσα 2 [f.] morbid longing of pregnant women, craving for strange food (Dsc., S. E., Sor., Gal.). ◂GR▸
•VAR Att. κίττα.
•DER κισσάω, κιττάω [v.] 'to suffer from κ.' (Ar., Arist.), 'to become pregnant' (LXX), whence κίσσησις (Gal.). κισσώδης 'full of κίσσα' (Dsc.).
•ETYM The age and frequency of the attestations suggest that κίσσα 2 is a back-formation from κισσάω. The form κισσάω itself is a denominative of ▸κίσσα 1 'jay, magpie', and refers to the well-known gluttony of the bird (ὄρνεον ἀδηφάγον καὶ παμφάγον, sch. Ar. Pax 496); thus, κισσάω originally means 'to behave like a magpie'. The connection with Skt. kéta- 'will, desire' must therefore be given up. The gloss κοῖται· γυναικῶν ἐπιθυμίαι 'longing of/for women' is only an incidental use of κοίτη 'marital bed, sexual intercourse'.

κισσός [m.] 'ivy, Hedera helix' (IA). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Att. κιττός.
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. κισσο-φόρος 'having ivy' (Pi., Ar.); also as a second member, e.g. κατά-κισσος 'crowned with ivy' (Anacreont.).
•DER Diminutive κισσίον = ἀσκληπιάς (Ps.-Dsc.); κίσσινος 'of ivy' (Pi., E.), κισσήεις 'id.' (Nic., Nonn.), on the formation Schwyzer: 527; κισσώδης 'enveloped with ivy' (Nonn.); κισσεύς epithet of Apollo (A. Fr. 341); κισσών 'forest with ivy' (Hdn. Gr.), κίσσαρος = κισσός (gloss.). Denominative κισσόω (Att. -ττ-) [v.] 'to crown with ivy' (E., Alciphr.), whence κίττωσις (Attica).

•ETYM Pre-Greek. See Fur.: 256, who compares κιθάρα in the sense of 'ivy' (Ps.-Dsc.); and ibid. 257[36] on the suffix -αρος in Pre-Greek words. We may reconstruct a form PG kit^y-*.

κισσύβιον [n.] name of a wooden drinking-cup (Od., Theoc., Call.), on the matter see Brommer Herm. 77 (1942): 358 and 365f. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also κισσύφιον (IG 2^2, 1424a: 265), acc. to Frisk after the diminutives in -ύφιον, but see below.
•ETYM The ancients connected it with κισσός, either after the material (Eumolp. apud Ath. 11, 477a) or after the ornamentation (Poll. 6, 97). The word is Pre-Greek because of the variation β/ φ, as seen by Schwyzer: 316 and 470; see also Debrunner in Ebert 1924-1932 4:2, §46 and Fur.: 170.

κίστη [f.] 'basket, chest' (ζ 76, Ar.). ◂EUR▸ •COMP As a first member in κιστα-φόρος 'basket bearer', -έω [v.] (Thrace, Macedon.), κιστο-ειδής 'like a chest' (H. s.v. ὀγκίον).
•DER Diminutive κιστίς [f.] (Hp., Ar.), κιστίδιον (Artem.).
•ETYM MIr. cess [f.] 'basket, causeway of wickerwork, bee-hive', OW cest [f.] gl. fiscina point to a pre-form QIE kisteh₂-*. If these are conneted with Gr. κίστη, the most likely scenario is a European loanword. From κίστη was borrowed Lat. cista, whence most European forms, e.g. Ir. ciste [m.], OHG kista, etc.

κίτριον [n.] 'citron tree (Citrus medica), citron' (Juba, J., Epidauros II^p, Dsc.). ◂LW Lat.▸
•VAR Also κίτρον 'citron' (Pamphil. apud Ath. 3, 85c).
•COMP κιτριο-ειδής (Gal.), κιτρό-μηλον 'id.' (Dsc., Gp.).
•DER κίτρινος 'belonging to the citron tree' (D. C.), also κίτρεος (pap. VI^p); κιτρέα [f.] 'citron tree' (Gp.), after μηλέα, etc.; κιτρᾶτον 'citron drink' (Alex. Trall.).
•ETYM From Lat. citrium, citrum, citreus, citrātus, which all go back to citrus 'citron tree', which itself is somehow connected with Gr. ▸κέδρος and perhaps came from Greek via Etruscan. See WH s.v. citrus with litt.

κίφος [n.] Messenian for στέφανος (Paus. 3, 26, 9). ◂PG?(V)▸ •COMP σκιφα-τόμος 'who cuts σκίφα' (IG 5(1), 212: 63 [Sparta I^a]), perhaps palms, for ψίλινοι στέφανοι.
•DER σκιφίνιον· πλέγμα ἐκ φοίνικος 'plaiting of palm' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained; perhaps Pre-Greek because of the varying anlaut.

κιχάνω [v.] 'to reach, attain, hit, meet with' (Il.). ◂IE ǵ^heh₁-* 'leave, abandon'▸ •VAR Att. κιγχάνω; several aorists: a) athem. (ἐκίχην), -χεις, (ἐ)κίχημεν, subj. κιχείω, opt. -χείην, inf. κιχήμεναι, -χῆναι, ptc. κιχείς, -χήμενος; b) them. 3sg. ἔκιχεν, 3pl. ἔκιχον, subj. κίχω, κίχησι, inf. κιχεῖν, ptc. κιχών; c) sigmatic κιχήσατο, act. ptc. κιχήσας (B. 5, 148); d) Dor. ἔκιξε = ἤνεγκε (Simm. 26, 7), ἀπέκιξαν (Ar. Ach. 869; Boeot.), κίξαντες· ἐλθόντες, πορευθέντες 'having come, been driven or carried', κίξατο· εὗρεν, ἔλαβεν, ἤνεγκεν 'found, took, brought' (H.); fut. κιχήσομαι.
•DER κίχησις· ἡ λῆψις 'taking hold' (H.).

•ETYM From a reduplicated root present *κίχημι (like τίθημι), found in κίχημεν, κιχήτην, etc. (ἐκίχεις after ἐτίθεις), which were taken as aorists when the new present κιχάνω arose. Innovations are the them. aor. ἔκιχεν, etc. and sigmatic κιχήσατο, whence fut. κιχήσομαι (Il.). Doric created a different s-aorist in ἔκιξε. The form κιχάνω arose at a recent date after the analogy of φθάνω to ἔφθην, φθήσομαι; the nasal infix in κιγχάνω was modelled on λαμβάνω, etc., on which see Schwyzer: 688[5], 698, as well as Chantraine 1942: 300, 392, 415, 446.
Except for the reduplication vocalism, *κίχημι < PIE *ǵ^{h}i-ǵ^{h}eh$_1$- corresponds nicely to Skt. jáhāti 'to leave (behind), abandon', Av. zazāiti 'to let go'; Skt. also has an old root aorist ahās. It is unclear whether the Gm. verb for 'go' belongs here: OHG, OE gān, ON gá (the same development of meaning is found in Skt. med.3sg. jíhīte, 3pl. jíhate 'to go on, go away'). Remote cognates from the same root are supposed in ►χάζομαι, ►χατέω, ►χήρα, ►χῶρος. Ruijgh and Van Krimpen Mnem. 22 (1969): 113-136 read the older meaning 'to abandon' in Myc. ke-ke-me-na /k^{h}ek^{h}emenā/ 'deserted (land)'. They suggest that the transition in meaning occurred in sporting contests, where a runner reaches and leaves, i.e. passes, another runner. LIV[2] considers κιχάνω together with Arm. gam 'I come', OE gān 'to go', and the other Gm. words under *g^{h}eh$_1$- 'kommen, erreichen' (with plain velar because of Armenian). This seems less attractive than the connection with Indo-Iranian, which is formally and semantically impeccable.

κίχλη [f.] 'thrush' (χ 468); also name of a fish, a kind of wrasse (Epich., Arist.), because it changes its color with the seasons, like the thrush; see Strömberg 1943: 116. ◄PG(V)► •VAR Younger κίχλᾰ (Alex. Trall., Gp.), see Solmsen 1909: 260; Dor. κιχήλα (Epich. 157, Ar. Nu. 339). Cf. ἴχλα· κίχλα (H.). and ἴσκλαι = κίχλαι (H.).
•DER κιχλίζω [v.] 'to giggle, laugh' (Ar., Theoc., Herod.), κιχλισμός; κιχλιδ-ιάω [v.] 'to have a desire to giggle' (Com. Adesp. 1038; not quite certain).
•ETYM Hardly belongs to ►χελῑδών. A by-form is ἴχλα (H.); the initial variation points to a Pre-Greek word. See Thompson 1895 s.v. (also on the different names of the bird), as well as Fur.: 130 on κιχήλα.

κίχορα [n.pl.] 'chicory, Cichorium intybus' (Nic. Al. 429, where ῑ verse-initially). ◄?, PG?►
•VAR κιχόρη [f.] (Thphr.), κιχόριον [n.] (Thphr., Dsc., Plin.), -ια [pl.] (Ar. Fr. 293), perhaps for -εια = Lat. cichorēa [pl.]?
•ETYM No etymology. See DNP s.v. cichorie, stating that the plant grows in the Mediterranean area. Is the word Pre-Greek? However, one type of chicory comes from Egypt.

κίχρημι [v.] 'to lend', med. 'to borrow from' (D., Plu.). ◄?►
•VAR Impv.3sg. κιχρέτω, etc. (Delph. IV[a]), ἐσκιχρέμεν [inf.] (Thess. III[a]); also κίνχρητι 'gives an oracle' (Cret. II[a]), med. κίχραμαι (Thphr., Plu., AP), aor. χρῆσαι, χρήσασθαι and fut. χρήσω, -ομαι (IA), perf. κέχρηκα (Hell.), -ημαι (D.).
•COMP Rarely with prefix δια-, ἐπι-, ἐσ-.
•DER κίχρησις (Tz.).

•ETYM Like δίδημι next to δῆσαι, δήσω (see ►δέω 1), the presents κίχρημι, κίχραμαι arose as innovations of the aorist χρῆσαι and other sigmatic forms. We must start from a middle aorist χρήσασθαι with original mg. 'to use', from which a factitive active χρῆσαι 'to give in use' = 'borrow' was created; later, χρήσασθαι also came to mean 'to borrow from'. See ►χρη.

κίω [v.] 'to set in movement', intr. 'to start to move, move away' (Hom., A.). ◄IE *ḱeih$_2$- 'set in movement'► •VAR Present 2sg. κίεις (A. Ch. 680), further only preterite and non-indicative forms: ἔκιε (κίε), κίομεν, κίον, ipv. κίε, subj. κίῃς, opt. κίοι, ptc. κιών. With enlargement -θ-: μετ-εκίαθε, -ον 'followed after, visited' (Il.), with ῑ by metrical lengthening; for the vocalism cf. κίατο· ἐκινεῖτο 'moved (intr.)' (H.).
•ETYM Except for two occurences in Aeschylus, the verb is only epic. Originally a thematic root aorist, interpreted as an imperfect, κίε received incidental present forms (see Chantraine 1942: 392f.), and it came to serve as a metrical variant for the imperfect of εἶμι (Kölligan 2007: 162f.). The nasal present ►κίνυμαι, ►κινέω was felt to be closely connected with ►σεύω. On κια- < *kih$_2$-e-, see on ►κῑνέω. Cf. Strunk 1967: 88, 100, 114. Outside Greek, the root is only found in Latin, which has a to-derivative citus 'quick', originally 'set in motion' (for which cf. con-citus, solli-citus, etc.), while the present ciēre (next to (ac)cīre) probably developed from a causative; see De Vaan 2008 s.v.

κῑών, -ονος [m., f.] 'column, pillar', also metaph. (Od.); as a medical term 'cartiledge, wart' (Hp.). ◄IE *(s)ḱiHu- 'shin, post'► •VAR On the gender see Schwyzer: 486, Schwyzer 1950: 37.
•COMP As a first member in κιονό-κρᾱνον 'capital of a column' (v.l. in Str. 4, 4, 6; D. S.) beside earlier and more usual κιό-κρᾱνον (Pl. Com., X., Delos III[a], etc.), by haplology. Further ἀκρο-, τετρα-, μετα-, προ-κιόν-ιον (Ph.).
•DER Diminutives κιόνιον (Ph. Bel.), -ίσκος (Hero, J.), -ίς 'uvula' (medic.).
•ETYM Identical with Arm. siwn 'column' < *ḱīwōn-, which like Greek reflects an n-stem. One of the traditional exclusive correspondences between Greek and Armenian, but the word has now also been recognized in other branches (see Lubotsky JAOS 112 (2002)): Skt. aṣṭhīvánt- [m.] 'shank, shin'; YAv. ascuua- [m.] 'shank, shin' < ascīua*- reflect a compound PIIr. ast-(s)čiHua*- < QIE h$_3$est-(s)kiHu- 'shin-bone'; further, OE scīa [m.] 'shin, leg', scinu [f.] 'shin' and MHG schīe [f.] 'post', OHG skena, skina [f.] 'id.' can be traced back to a PGm. paradigm skīō*, skinaz* (Kroonen 2009); finally, Balto-Slavic forms like Lith. šeivà [f.] 'spool, forearm, shin' and SCr. cȉjev 'tube, spool, shin-bone' point to PIE ḱoiH-u*-, with depalatalization of the initial *ḱ- due to the s-mobile. Note that WGm. skinō* is reminiscent of the n-stem in Gr. and Arm.; still, the semantic shift to 'pillar' may point to a common development.

κλαγγή [f.] '(shrill) sound, cry of an animal, etc.' (Il.). ◄EUR?, ONOM?►
•VAR Also κλαγγόν 'id.' (Babr.); dat. also κλαγγ-ί (Ibyc. 56; see below).
•DER κλαγγηδόν 'accompanied by crying' (B 463), κλαγγώδης 'full of sound, shrill' (Hp., Gal.). Further κλάζω [v.] 'sound, resound, cry' (Il.), also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐκ-; aor. κλάγξαι, also κλαγεῖν (B. 16, 127, h. Hom. 19, 14, E., et al.), fut. κλάγξω (A.), perf. κεκλήγοντες (Aeolizing) and κεκληγώς, -ῶτες (Hom.), see Chantraine 1942: 430f.; κέκλᾱγα (Alcm. 7), κέκλαγγα (Ar., X.), perfect future κεκλάγξομαι (Ar.). Isolated presents: κλαγγαίνω (A. Eu. 131), -άνω (S.), -έω (Theoc. Ep. 6, 5), -άζω (Poll., Porph.). To κλαγεῖν: κλαγερός 'crying' (AP).

•ETYM As a yod-present, κλάζω may derive from *κλάγγ-i̯ω, from a root noun κλάγγ- seen in the dat. κλαγγ-ί (or is this an innovation?). However, perhaps we are dealing with a primary nasal present, which took -ζω from other sound-verbs (ὀλολύζω, οἰμώζω, etc.; cf. Schwyzer: 716). The non-presentic forms κλάγξαι, κλάγξω, κέκλαγγα are innovations in any case. κλαγγή functions as a verbal noun. It is possible that κλαγεῖν and κέκληγα are original primary forms without a nasal infix, but analogical innovation with loss of the nasal is possible too.
Material for comparison is provided by Lat. clangō 'to cry' (almost only present), which has a counterpart in ON hlakka 'to cry' (kk < nk). Note that a pre-form *klag- is impossible (PIE did not have *a, and *klh$_2$g- would have resulted in Greek *κλᾱγ-). Schwyzer: 692 assumes expressive nasalization, but this does not help, as *κλᾰγ- cannot be explained in this way. Cf. Fur. 274.
Wrong analysis in Pok. 599 and LIV²; the alternations cannot be accounted for in an Indo-European framework. The root must have been adopted from a non-IE language. See ► κλώζω.

κλαδαρός [adj.] 'invalid, infirm', of δοράτια (Plb. 6, 25, 5; beside λεπτά), of κάμακες (AP 9, 322 beside ἄκλαστοι; v.l. κλαμαραί), of γραμμὴ ζωηφόρος (in palmistry, Cat. Cod. Astr. 7, 241). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •COMP As a first member in κλαδαρόρυγχος 'kind of peewit' (Ael., H.), κλαδαρόμματοι· εὔσειστοι τὰ ὄμματα 'liable to shaking in the eyes (?)' (H.).
•DER Further κλαδάσαι· σεῖσαι, κλαδάει· σείει, κινεῖ 'shakes, moves' (H.); κλαδάσσομαι [v.] 'to rustle, bubble, vel sim.', of sweet blood (τέρεν αἷμα) through the members (Emp. 100, 22); but Lobeck 1843: 89[9] corrects into κλυδάσσομαι; Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 224 assumes influence of ταράσσω.
•ETYM For the suffix, compare other expressions for 'invalid, weak', like πλαδαρός, ψαφαρός, χαλαρός, λαπαρός (Chantraine 1933: 227); κλαδαρός to κλαδάω is like πλαδαρός to πλαδάω, χαλαρός to χαλάω, etc. Ultimately, it might be related to ► κλάδος, as well as to ► κραδάω. The gloss κράδαλοι· κλάδοι 'branches' (H.) then suggests that these words are Pre-Greek, with interchange ρ/ λ.

κλάδος [m.] 'branch, twig, sprout' (IA, Arist., Thphr.). ⊲PG?, IE? *kl̥do- '(piece of) wood'⊳ •VAR Also a few cases of monosyllabic κλαδ- in κλαδ-ί, κλάδ-α, -ας, and of an s-stem in κλάδεσι, -έεσσι, -έων (perhaps after δένδρεσι).
•COMP ὀλιγό-κλαδος (Thphr.), κλαδο-τομέω (pap.).
•DER Diminutives κλάδιον (Lib., pap.) and κλαδίσκος (Gal.); κλαδεών (Orph.), κλαδών (H.) = κλάδος; κλαδώδης 'full of branches' (sch., Eust.), κλάδινος = rameus (gloss.). Denominative κλαδεύω [v.] 'to cut off branches, clip' (Artem., -έω Arr.), whence κλάδευσις (Aq., Sm., Gp.), κλαδεία (Gp.) 'cutting off branches, clipping', κλαδευτήρια [pl.] 'pruned leaves' (gloss.), κλαδευτής 'pruner' (gloss.), κλαδευτήριον, -ια 'pruning knife, pruning festival' (H.).
•ETYM Connection with *kelh$_2$- 'to hit, cut off' (see ► κλάω) cannot explain the Greek form, which presupposes a root *kld-. Connection with the Germanic word for 'wood', ON OE holt [n.], etc., to which also belongs the Slav. group of CS klada, Ru. kolóda 'log, block of wood', suggests itself. However, it may be accidental that all forms can be derived from *kl̥do-, since κλάδος can also be connected within Greek with ► κραδάω, which points to an interchange ρ/ λ and therefore to substrate origin. Kuiper 1956: 121f connected κλάδος with ► κλών, κλῶναξ, with nasalization (replacement of a stop by the nasal of that series) of the δ; cf. κλῶναξ· κλάδος (H.). Lat. clādēs 'destruction, etc.' requires *klh$_2$-d^{h}eh$_1$- and is therefore unrelated.
Independent of κλάδος is the δ-formation of ► κλαδαρός 'invalid'; further, καλαδία· ἐυκάνη 'plane' (H.; LSJ and Frisk s.v. give ῥυκάνη 'plane-tree', but this lemma does not exist), with different ablaut grade.

κλάζω 'to sound'. ⇒ κλαγγή.

κλαίω [v.] 'to lament, bewail, weep over' (Il.). ⊲IE?, PG? *klau- 'weep'⊳ •VAR Att. also κλᾱ́ω, aor. κλαῦσαι (Il.), pass. κλαυ(σ)θῆναι (Lyc., J.), fut. κλαύσομαι (Il.), κλαύσω (Theoc.), κλα(ι)ήσω (Att.; cf. Chantraine BSL 28 (1927-1928): 15), perhaps also κλαυσούμεθα (Ar. Pax 1081; cf. Schwyzer: 786), perf. κέκλαυμαι (A., S.), -σμαι (Lyl., Plu.), fut. κεκλαύσομαι (Ar.).
•COMP Rarely with prefixes, e.g. μετα-, συν-.
•DER 1. κλαυθμός 'weeping' (Il.), with several derivatives: κλαυθμώδης 'broken as if by weeping' (Hp.), κλαυθμηρός 'weeping' (sch.), κλαυθμών 'place for weeping' (LXX); κλαυθμυρίζομαι, -ίζω [v.] 'to moan' (Hp., [Pl.] Ax.), a cross of κλαυθμός and μύρομαι, with suffixation after the verbs in -ίζομαι (cf. Schwyzer: 644), to which κλαυθμυρισμός (Is., Plu.). 2. κλαύματα [n.pl.] 'moaning, lamenting' (Att.), κλαύσματα (Porph.). 3. κλαυμοναί [f.pl.] 'id.' (Pl. Lg. 792a; acc. to Stob. κλαυθμοναί), cf. πημοναί. 4. κλαῦσις 'weeping' (Hell.), whence κλαυσιάω [v.] 'to long to weep' (Ar. Pl. 1099), κλαυσί-γελως [m.] 'weeping combined with laughing' (X.). 5. κλαυστήρ 'crier' (Man.) and κλαυστικός (Apoll. Lex.); κλαυ(σ)τός (A., S.). Highly uncertain is the present κλαύθονται (PTeb. 3, 7; epigram), perhaps an ad-hoc poetic formation, cf. Schwyzer 703.
•ETYM The present derives from *κλάϝ-i̯ω, as is obvious from κλαύ-σομαι, κλαυ-θμός, etc. Alb. klan, qan 'to weep' from *klau-n-i̯ō, with a combination of nasal and yod-suffix, is the only comparison that suggests itself; cf. Mann Lang. 26 (1950): 381. If the word is IE, we may mechanically reconstruct *kleh$_2$u-. However, since there is no further connection with any IE language, the word could be Pre-Greek.

κλαμαράν [acc.sg.f.]? · πλαδαράν, ἀσθενῆ 'weak, feeble' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Also κλαμαραί as a v.l. for κλαδαραί (AP 9, 322).
•ETYM Belonging to the same semantic group as ► κλαδαρός, κλαμαρός has the appearance of an expressive innovation. The comparison with Skt. klā́myati 'to get tired' and other words mentioned in Pok. 602f. is not very attractive.

κλαμβός [adj.] 'cocked, cropped' (of ὦτα, Hippiatr.). ⊲PG⊳ •ETYM Formation like κολοβός 'id.', σκαμβός 'crooked', etc. (Chantraine 1933: 261). The similarity with Lith. klumbas 'limping, stumbling' (to klùbti 'to stumble'), OE lempi-healt 'limping', which Specht 1944: 130f. connected wih κλαμβός, is probably accidental. The word is typically Pre-Greek; cf. on ► σκαμβός.

κλαμυστῆσαι [v.] · βοῆσαι, καλέσαι 'to cry aloud, call' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM The formation in -υσ-τέω could be denominative from -υστός, ppp. to *κλαμύζω, which would be formed like κελαρύζω, γογγύζω, etc. This form was connected with Lat. clāmāre 'to call loudly, cry', OHG hlamōn 'to rustle', but this is not possible since the Greek α is short. The word looks rather Pre-Greek.

κλανίον [n.] 'bracelet' (pap. imperial period). ⊲PG(V)⊳
•VAR Also κλάνιον, κλάλιον (after ψέλιον? rejected by Fur. 131[60]); κλανία· ψέλια βραχιόνων 'bracelets for the arms', also κλαρ<ί>α· ψέλια 'armlets or anklets' (H.), probably by dissimilation. Cf. χλανίαι· περιβολαί 'garment' (Fur. 131 objects that this word belongs rather to χλανίς) and χλανίτιδες· οἱ ὅρμοι παρθένων 'maidens' necklaces' (H.).
•ETYM Connection with ► κλάω seems improbable, in spite of κλαστός 'frizzly head', ἐγκλαστρίδια 'earring'. The forms with χ- have been explained away by assuming association with χλανίς 'upper garment', but see Fur. 131, who argues that χλανίτιδες cannot be explained in any such way. The variation between voiceless and aspirate shows the Pre-Greek origin of the word. Fur. 388 further compares πλανίς· τὸ τῆς νύμφης χρυσοῦν διάδημα 'golden headband of the bride' (H.).

κλάπαι [f.pl.] 'wooden shoes' (D. C. 77, 4, Suid.); also euphemistically 'stick', as a means of punishment (sch., Tz.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Also -οι [m.pl.].
•ETYM No etymology. Perhaps sound-symbolic, after the clattering?

κλάω [v.] 'to break (off)' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR ἐνι-κλᾶν, κατ-έκλων (Il.), aor. κλάσ(σ)αι, pass. κλασθῆναι (Il.), athem. ptc. ἀπο-κλᾶς (Anacr. 17), fut. κλάσω, perf. pass. κέκλασμαι (IA).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, περι-, συν-.
•DER κλάσις 'breaking' (IA), κλάσμα 'broken piece' (Att.) with κλασμάτιον (Delos III[a]), ἀνα-κλασμός 'bending back' (Heliod.), κλάστης· ἀμπελουργός 'vine-dresser' (H.), also ὀστο-κλάστης (Cyran.), etc., κλαστήριον 'knife for clipping the vine' (Delos II[a]); secondarily κλαστάζω [v.] 'to clip the vine', metaph. 'to chastize' (Ar. Eq. 166). On ► κλών, κλωνός [m.] 'sprout' (Att.), see s.v.; on κλῶμαξ, ἀπόκλωμα see below. With different ablaut grade: ► κλῆμα 'twig, tendril of the vine', ► κλῆρος (κλᾶρος) 'lot', ► κλῶμαξ 'heap of stones', ἀπόκλωμα. ἀπολογία ἐπὶ τὸ χεῖρον 'defense on behalf of an inferior' (H.). Very doubtful is the appurtenance of Κλαζομεναί TN (Anatolia), which acc. to Fraenkel KZ 42 (1909): 256; Fraenkel KZ 43 (1910): 216 would be a "place where the waves break" (just fantasy).
•ETYM The verbal system is based on kla(s)-* and may be the result of analogical developments. There is an IE root kelh₂-* 'to hit, strike' (LIV² s.v.), to which belong Lith. kálti, 1sg. kalù 'to beat', Latv. kal̃t 'id.', OCS klati, 1sg. kolję 'to kill', Ru. kolót' 'to prick, stab', which point to Proto-BSl. kolH-*, as well as Lat. -cellō 'to hit' < -k(e)l-n-h₂-* (De Vaan 2008 s.v.). LIV² states that ἀποκλᾱ́ς may have been built on the generalized stem klā-* and replaced older athematic kalant-* < klh₂-ent-* (cf. ταλαντ-), but there are no indications for this within Greek, so it should be rejected. It is unclear how we can derive any of the above forms from a root kelh₂-. Chantraine 1942: 354 considers the present κλάω to be secondary as opposed to the aorist κλάσαι. The passive aorist κλασθῆναι seems to suggest a root klad- (Schwyzer: 761), but analogical extension of the aorist stem κλασ- is more likely (Chantraine 1942: 404f.). Since there is no good etymology, the verb may well be Pre-Greek. See ► κλαδαρός, ► κλάδος, ► κόλος.

κλεινός 'famous'. ⇒ κλέος.

κλείς [f.] 'bar, bolt' (secondarily 'rowing bench', Leumann 1950: 209), 'hook, key, collar bone' (Att.). ⊲IE kleh₂u-* 'lock'⊳ •VAR Gen. κλειδός, acc. κλεῖν (late κλεῖδα), older κλῄς, κληδός, κλῆδα (on the notation Schwyzer: 201f.), epic Ion. κληΐς, -ῖδος, -ῖδα, Dor. κλᾱΐς, -ῖδος beside -ΐδος (Simon., Pi.; perhaps Aeol., cf. Schwyzer: 465); also κλᾴξ (Theoc.), gen. κλαικος, acc. -κα (Epid., Mess.).
•DIAL Myc. ka-ra-wi-po-ro /klāwi-pʰoros/.
•COMP κλειδ-οῦχος (or κληδ-) [m., f.] 'key-holder' (inscr.), κατα-κλείς, -κληΐς 'lock, case, quiver' (Att.), from κατα-κλείω.
•DER Diminutives κλειδίον (Ar., Arist.); κλειδᾶς [m.] 'locksmith' (pap., inscr., imperial period); late denominative κλειδόω (Smyrna, pap.), whence κλείδωσις (sch.), -ωμα (Suid.).
Old denominative κλείω [v.] 'to shut, block' (often with prefix, especially ἀπο-, κατα-, συν-), OAtt. κλῄω, Ion. κληΐω (Hdt.), late κλῄζω (Hymn. Is., AP), Theoc. κλᾴζω, aor. epic Ion. κληῖσαι, κληΐσσαι (Od.), OAtt. κλῇσαι, Att. κλεῖσαι, pass. κληϊσθῆναι (Ion.), κλῃσθῆναι, κλεισθῆναι (Att.), κλᾳσθῆναι (Theoc.), fut. κλῄσω (Th.), κλείσω, perf. κέκληκα (Ar.), κέκλεικα (Hell.), med. κέκλημαι (-ῄϊμαι), κέκλειμαι, Dor. κέκλᾳνται (Epich.); after this Dor. aor. κλαΐξαι, κλᾷξαι, pass. κλαιχθείς, fut. κλᾳξῶ (Theoc., Rhod.), backformed present ποτι-κλᾴγω (Heracl.). Thence κλῄϊθρον, κλῇθρον, κλεῖθρον, κλᾷθρον 'lock, block' (IA, h. Merc. 146, Dor.), κλειθρίον (Hero), κλειθρία 'keyhole' (Luc.), κλᾴϊστρον (Pi.), κλεῖστρον (Luc.) 'lock', κλῇσις, κλεῖσις (Th., Aen. Tact.), κλεῖσμα, κλεισμός (Hell.); also ἀπόκλησις, etc. from ἀπο-κλείω, etc.; verbal adj. κληϊστός, κλῃστός, κλειστός (epic IA), κλαικτός (κλᾳκτός) 'what can be locked' (Argiv., Mess.). On κλεισίον see ► κλίνω.
•ETYM IA κλη(ϝ)ῑ-δ- and Dor. κλᾱ(ϝ)ῑ-κ- are enlargements of an ῑ-stem that is still found in denominative κληΐω. Att. κλεῖν can be explained as analogical to κλείς < κλῄς (after ναῦς: ναῦν, etc.). A corresponding formation is found in Lat. clāvus 'nail, pin', next to clāvis 'key, block', with the same meaning as the derivation κληΐς. The Latin forms presuppose an old root noun kleh₂u-, while Greek made an ῑ-stem kleh₂u-iH-, just as κνημῑ-δ- is based on κνήμη, and χειρῑ-δ- on χείρ (cf. Chantraine 1933: 346f.). Further, there is a Celtic group, perhaps borrowed from Latin, or simply inherited (which is equally possible): OIr. cló, plur. clói 'nail', MW clo [m.] 'lock, bolt'. Slavic has a number of words pointing to kleu-, which has to replace klaHu-: OCS ključь 'key', SCr. ključka 'hook, key, clamp', etc. The original meaning of the word was probably 'nail, pin, hook', instruments that were traditionally used for locking doors.

κλεισίον 'hut, shed'. ⇒ κλίνω.

κλειτορίς, -ίδος [f.] 'clitoris' (Ruf., H., Suid.). ◄IE ḱlei-* 'lean'► •DER κλειτοριάζω [v.] 'to touch the clitoris' (id.).
•ETYM A medical term, formed like ἀλεκτορίς from ἀλέκτωρ, ἀκεστορίς from ἀκέστωρ, etc. We may assume an original meaning "small hill", from *κλείτωρ 'hill' (known as the name of an Arcadian town), a verbal noun from ►κλίνω 'to lean, incline'. For the semantics, cf. κλειτύς 'slope, hill', Lat. clīvus 'hill'. See Grošelj Živa Ant. 3 (1953): 201; also, Schwyzer: 531[2] and Benveniste 1948: 34.

κλειτός 'famous'. ⇒ κλύω.

κλείω 1 'to celebrate'. ⇒ κλέος.

κλείω 2 'to lock'. ⇒ κλείς.

κλεμμύς, -ύος [f.] 'turtle' (Ant. Lib. 32, 2, H.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM The formation is similar to that of synonymous χέλυς, ἐμύς. Probably a foreign word; speculations in Frisk about folk-etymological adaptation to κλέμμα, κλέπτω 'to conceal', because turtles can hide their body under their shell. Acc. to Güntert 1914: 144, it is a cross of ἐμύς and unattested *κλωμός, which would correspond to Skt. kūrmá- 'turtle', with -μμ- from κλέμμα. This is too far-fetched. Fur.: 131 compares κρέμυς 'a fish with a hard head' and χρέμυς· ὁ ὀνίσκος ἰχθύς 'kind of gadus or cod' (H.); these variants confirm that the word is Pre-Greek. On geminates in substrate words, see Fur.: 387, where this word can be added.

κλέος [n.] 'rumour, fame, renown, reputation' (Il.). ◄IE ḱleu-s-* 'word, fame'► •VAR Phoc. κλέϝος.
•COMP Especially in PNs, e.g. Κλεο-μένης (shortname Κλέομ(μ)ις), with transition to the o-stems, beside Κλει-σθένης (from *Κλεϝεσ- or *Κλεϝι-σθένης), Τιμο-κλέϝης (Cypr.), etc.; see Fick & Bechtel 1894: 162ff., Bechtel 1917b: 238ff.; on -κλέας for -κλέης in Thess., etc. see Kretschmer Glotta 26 (1938): 37.
•DER Adjective κλεινός, Aeol. κλέεννος (< *κλεϝεσ-νός) 'famous' (Sol., Pi.), with PN Κλεινίας, etc. Enlargement after the nouns in -(η)δών (cf. Schwyzer: 529f., Chantraine 1933: 361): κλεηδών, -όνος [f.] (Od.), κληηδών (δ 312; metrical lengthening), κληδών (Hdt., trag.) 'fame, (divine) pronouncement', by contraction or adaptation to κλῄζω, κικλήσκω; thence κληδόνιος (sch., Eust.), κληδονίζομαι, -ίζω [v.] (LXX), -ισμα, -ισμός.
Denominative verbs: 1. κλείω (Il.), κλέω (B., trag. [lyr.]) [v.] 'to celebrate, praise, proclaim', Hell. also 'to call' (after κλῄζω, see below), κλέομαι 'to enjoy fame, be celebrated' (Ω 202), Hell. also 'to be called'; mostly derived from *κλεϝεσ-ι̯ω > *κλε(ϝ)έω, whence κλείω, κλέω by hyphaeresis; but see Frisk GHÅ 56 : 3 (1950): 3ff., discussing the possibility that κλέω (whence, only in epic poetry, κλείω by metrical lengthening) is a back-formation of κλέος after ψεύδω : ψεῦδος. Alternatively, κλέω, κλέομαι would be an old primary formation ḱleu-e/o-*, see Chantraine 1942: 346[3] and DELG. From κλείω, κλέω as an agent noun: Κλειώ, Κλεώ, -οῦς [f.] "she who gives fame", name of one of the Muses (Hdt., Pi.). 2. κλεΐζω [v.] (Pi.) 'to celebrate, praise, proclaim', also 'to call' (after κικλήσκω, καλέω; thence the notation κλη-), also εὐκλεΐζω from εὐκλεής (Sapph., Tyrt.); forms: κληΐζω (Hp., Hell.), κλῄζω (Ar.), aor. κλεΐξαι or κληΐσαι, κλῆσαι, κλεῖσαι, fut. κλεΐξω, κληΐσω, κλῄσω, etc.; probably from a basis *κλεϝεσ-ίζω with hyphaeresis.
•ETYM Old s-stem of the root ḱleu-* 'hear', found in several languages: Skt. śrávas- [n.] 'fame' (κλέος ἄφθιτον: ákṣiti śrávaḥ), Av. srauuah- [n.] 'word', OCS slovo [n.] 'word'; also, OIr. clú and ToA (ñom)-klyu, ToB (ñem)-kälywe 'fame', Illyr. PN Ves-cleves (= Skt. vásu-śravas- 'having good fame'; cf. Εὐ-κλῆς). The denominative κλε(ί)ω, if from *κλεϝεσ-ι̯ω, corresponds to Skt. śravasyáti 'to praise', and may therefore be old. Further forms s.v. ►κλύω.

κλέπας [adj.] · νοτερόν, πηλῶδες, ἢ δασύ, ἢ ὑγρόν 'moist, muddy or clayey, bushy, wet' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR κλέπος· ὑψηλόν, νοτερόν, δασύ 'high, moist, bushy' (H.).
•ETYM The meaning νοτερόν suggests connection with OIr. cluain 'meadow' and the Baltic group of Lith. šlàpti 'to become wet'. Acc. to Matasović 2008, PIE ḱlopni-* would have regularly given PCl. klowni-*. Still, the formation of the Greek gloss does not match that of the proposed cognates, which makes the etymology uncertain.

κλέπτω [v.] 'to steal, conceal, do secretly, cheat, deceive' (Il.). ◄IE klep-* 'steal'► •VAR Aor. κλέψαι (Il.), pass. κλεφθῆναι (Hdt., E.), κλαπῆναι (Th., Pl.), ptc. κλεπείς (pap. II[p]), fut. κλέψω (h. Merc.), perf. κέκλοφα (Att.), ptc. κεκλεβώς (Andania I[a], but cf. Schwyzer: 722), med. κέκλεμμαι (S.), κέκλαμμαι (Ar.).
•COMP Also with prefixes like ἀπο-, ἐκ-, δια-, ὑπο-. As a second member in βοῦ-κλεψ (S. fr. 318), as a first member in governing compounds, e.g. κλεψί-φρων 'guileful' (of Hermes, h. Merc.); from κλέψαι, cf. Knecht 1946: 38, Zumbach 1955: 21; on ►κλεψύδρα s.v.
•DER A. With ε-vocalism: κλέπος [n.] 'theft' (Sol. apud Poll. 8, 34). 2. κλέμμα 'theft, deceit, ruse of war' (Att.), κλεμμάδιος 'stolen' (Pl.), after ἀμφάδιος, κρυπτάδιος, see Chantraine 1933: 39. 3. κλεπία· κλοπή 'theft' (Phot.). 4. κλέπτης [m.] 'thief' (Il.), superl. κλεπτίστατος (Ar.), see Leumann Mus. Helv. 2 (1945): 10ff. Diminutive κλεπτίσκος (Eup.), -τάριον (Charis.), jocular patronymic κλεπτίδης (Pherecr.); fem. κλέπτις (Alciphr.), κλέπτρια (Sotad. Com.), formally from κλεπτήρ, see Fraenkel 1910: 75; κλεπτικός [adj.] 'thievish' (Pl., Luc.); κλεπτο-σύνη 'thievishness' (τ 396, Man.). 5. κλεπτήρ 'thief' (Man.). 6. κλέπιμος 'smuggled' (pap. III[a]), hardly to the rare word κλέπος, as per Arbenz 1933: 100, but rather from κλόπιμος with ε from κλέπτω; 7. κλεψιμαῖος 'acquired by theft' (LXX), a juridical term.
B. With o-vocalsim: 1. κλοπή 'theft, secret act' (trag., Att.), κλοπαῖος 'acquired by theft' (Att.), κλόπιμος 'id., thievish' (Ps.-Phoc.), -ιμαῖος = κλεψιμαῖος (Luc., Ant. Lib.), see above; κλοπικός 'thievish' (of Hermes, Pl. Cra. 407e; cf. Chantraine 1956a:

142); ἐπί-κλοπος 'deceitful' (Il.), ἐπικλοπίη (Nonn.); Ἐπικλόπειος epithet of Zeus (H.); on ὑπό-κλοπος see below. 2. κλοπός 'thief' (h. Merc. 276, Opp.), κλόπιος 'deceitful, thievish' (ν 295, AP, APl.). 3. κλοπεύς 'thief, secret author' (S.), κλοπεύω [v.] 'to plunder' (App.), κλοπεία (Str.; v.l. -ω-), -εῖον 'stolen good' (Max.). 4. iterative present ὑπο-κλοπέοιτο 'to hide' (χ 382), cf. ὑπο-κλέπτειν (Pi.), ὑπό-κλοπος 'deceitful, false' (B.) and Schwyzer 1950: 524.

C. With ω-vocalism 1. κλώψ 'thief' (Hdt., E., X.), whence κλωπικός 'secretly' (E. Rh. 205 and 512), see Chantraine 1956a: 119, κλωπήϊος 'id.' (A. R., Max.), κλωπεύω [v.] (X., Luc.), -εία (Att.); 2. iterative present κλωπάομαι = κλέπτομαι (H.).

•ETYM Not related to ►καλύπτω. The s-aorist κλέψαι is paralleled by Lat. clepsī, but κλέπτω is probably recent for an older thematic root present found in Lat. clepō, Go. hlifan 'to steal', although a pre-form klép-ie/o-* is also presupposed by the ToB subj. kälyp- 'to steal' (acc. to Adams 1999 s.v.). Isolated nominal derivatives may have been preserved in MIr. cluain 'deceit, flattery' < klop-ni-* and Slavic, e.g. CS po-klopъ 'cover', za-klepъ 'closure'. With a different anlaut, there is Lith. slẽpti 'to conceal', 1sg. slepiù, perhaps from skl-*, or alternatively influenced by other words with sl-; the root was preserved in Baltic, as shown by OPr. au-klipts 'concealed'. It is possible that klep-* 'to steal' is a special development in the Western languages of a root klep-* that is probably found in ToB klep- 'to grab, touch with the hand' and kälp- 'to get, obtain'; see Adams KZ 102 (1989): 242-3.

κλεψύδρα [f.] 'water clock', constructed like a sandglass (IA). ◄GR►
•VAR Ion. -ρη.
•ETYM A governing compound from κλέψαι (κλεψι-) and ὕδωρ, with zero grade of the second member (as in ἄνυδρος, etc.) and derivation in -α (on which see Schwyzer: 452).

κλέω 'to celebrate, call'. ⇒κλέος.

κληδών 'fame, call'. ⇒κλέος.

κλήθρα [f.] 'alder, Alnus glutinosa' (Od., Thphr.). ◄?►
•VAR Ion. -ρη.
•DER κλήθρινος 'of alder' (Ath. Mech.).
•ETYM It has been connected with MoHG (dial.) lutter, ludere, ludern 'Alpine alder, Betula nana', as if from QIE klādʰrā-*. Cf. Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 259, who comments on other IE names of the alder. Unclear.

κληΐζω 1 'to lock'. •VAR κλῄζω. ⇒κλείς.

κληΐζω 2 'to celebrate, call'. •VAR κλῄζω. ⇒κλέος.

κλῆμα [n.] 'twig, sprout, tendril (of the vine)' (IA); also as a plant name 'Polygonum aviculare' (Dsc.), see Strömberg 1937: 184). ◄PG?► •VAR Aeol. κλᾶμμα (Alc.), with geminate μ, see Hamm 1957: §73c). Inscr. κλαμα [n.] 'fragment, κλάσμα' (Aigina Vª), rather κλᾶμα than κλάμα.
•DER κληματίς, -ίδος [f.] 'twig of the vine, faggot' (IA), also name of several plants, like 'Clematis vitalba' (Dsc.); κληματῖτις [f.] plant name (Dsc.); κλημάτινος 'consisting of (vine-)twigs' (Thgn.), κληματόεις 'id.' (Nic.), κληματώδης 'full of twigs, like vine-branches' (Dsc., Gal.), κληματικός 'belonging to a vine-branch' (gloss.). Denominative verbs: κληματόομαι [v.] 'sprouting' (S., Thphr.), κληματίζω [v.] 'to clip vines' (LXX).
•ETYM Connected with ►κλάω, but the meaning 'break' does not fit a sprout. For κλάω, we do not find evidence for a long α, and must conclude that this verb is rather of Pre-Greek origin. The form κλάσμα may rather belong to κλάω. Cf. on ►κλῆρος.

κλῆρος [m.] 'lot, allotment, inheritance, piece of ground' (Il.), '(Christian) clergy' (Just.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Dor. κλᾶρος.
•COMP κληρο-νόμος 'heir' (IA; Dor. also κλᾱρο-), whence -νομέω, -νομία, -νομικός, etc.; ἄ-κληρος 'without lot, without inheritance, poor' (λ 490); but ναύ-κληρος, -κλᾱρος arose by dissimilation from ναύκρᾱρος (s.v. ►ναύκληρος). One also derived ὁλό-κληρος 'complete' (IA) from *ὁλό-κρᾱρος (Debrunner Phil. 95 (1943): 174ff.), but it was rather derived from the present entry, see den Boer Mnem. 3:13: 143f.
•DER Diminutives κληρίον (AP, pap.), Dor. κλᾱρίον 'notes for debt' (Plu. Agis 13); κληρικός [adj.] 'belonging to the κλῆρος' (Vett. Val.); denominative verb κληρόω, κλᾱρόω [v.] 'to cast lots, choose by lot', med. 'to draw lots, obtain by lot' (IA, Dor.), whence κλήρωσις 'election by lot', κληρωτήριον 'urn for casting lots, room for voting', κληρωτός 'who is elected by lot' (IA).
•ETYM Originallly a shard of stone or a piece of wood that was used as a lot. Formally identical with a Celtic word for 'plank, etc.': OIr. clár, OW claur; also, as an expression of the cartwright Bret. kleur 'pitch-fork of a wagon'. However, the relationship is doubtful for semantic reasons. The word is usually connected with ►κλάω 'to break off', with the same ablaut grade as in ►κλῆμα, but see doubts s.v.

κλῆσις 'call'. •VAR κλητήρ, κλήτωρ 'herald, witness', etc. ⇒καλέω.

κλῖβανος [m.] 'baker's oven', properly an earthenware or iron pot, less wide on top and provided with air holes, in which bread was baked; metaph. of comparable objects, e.g. 'pot for drawing water, rock hole, etc.' (Hdt., Epich., LXX, pap., NT). ◄PG?(V)► •VAR Also κρίβανος [m.] (com.), κρίβανον [n.] (Str., Ael.), probably with λ > ρ, see Schwyzer: 259.
•DER Mostly from κλιβ-: κλιβάνιος, -ικός 'of the baker's oven' (pap.), -ιον 'oven for baking' (pap.), -ίτης (ἄρτος) 'bread baked in a κ.' (com.), κριβανωτός '(bread) baked in an oven' (Alcm. 20, Ar.), κριβάνας· πλακοῦντάς τινας 'flat cakes' (H.); κλιβανεύς 'baker', -εῖον 'bakery' (pap.). Hypostasis ἐπικλιβάνιος (θεά) 'ruling over the oven' (Carneades). κλιβανάριος (IVᵖ) is from Lat. clībanārius (thus Frisk; short i acc. to DELG) 'armored knight', and may derive from the soldiers' language, or perhaps it is after Aram. tanûr 'oven, armor', cf. Schwyzer: 39. Acc. to Rundgren Orientalia Suecana 6 (1957): 49f., the Latin word has nothing to do with the Greek group, but derives from MP grībān 'coat of arms' (comparing grīva-pāna- 'neck-protector').

•ETYM A technical loan in -ανος (see Chantraine 1933: 200 and Schwyzer: 489f.), of unknown origin. Unconvincing proposals: Walde 1910 s.v. lībum suggested connection with the Germanic word for 'loaf of bread', Go. hlaifs, etc., as a loan from the north; Lewy 1895: 105f. proposed Semitic origin. It is unknown whether ρ or λ is original; Fur.: 387 lists the words among examples of the interchange of ρ and λ in Pre-Greek words. Substrate origin is probable.

κλῖνω [v.] 'to bend, incline, lean on, sink' (Il.). ◄IE ḱlei-* 'lean'►

•VAR Aor. κλῖναι (Il.), pass. κλιθῆναι (Od.), κλινθῆναι (Il.); see Chantraine 1942: 404[2], Schwyzer: 761; also κλινῆναι (Att.), probably for *κλι-ῆναι, see Schwyzer 760; fut. κλῐνῶ (Att.), perf. med. κέκλῐμαι (Il.), to which act. κέκλῐκα (Plb.).

•DIAL Myc. ki-ri-ta-de, /klitās-de/ [acc.pl.], ki-ri-ta-i /klitāhi/ [dat.-loc.pl.], see Meier-Brügger Glotta 68 (1990): 167.

•COMP Very frequent with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, παρα-, ἐν-, ἀπο-.

•DER 1. From the root with suffix -δ-: ►δικλίδες [f.] 'two-winged [doors]', ἐγκλίς· ἡ καγκελλωτὴ θύρα 'railed door' (EM); παρα-, ἐγ-κλιδόν 'turning aside, inclining' (Od.). 2. From a prefixed present, with ending after the s-stems (Schwyzer: 513): κατα-, ἐπι-, ἀπο-, ἐκ-, συγ-κλινής, etc. 'bending downwards, slanting, etc.' (Hp., A.), to which ἐπικλίν-εια (Heliol. Med.), συγκλιν-ίαι [pl.] (Plu.). 3. Compounds with suffix -τη-: παρα-, συγ-κλί-της 'who lies beside or together [at the table]' (X., Plu.), ἐπι-κλίν-της 'moving to the side' (Arist.). 4. κλειτῦς (also κλῐτύς after κλῖνω), -ύος [f.] 'slope, hill' (Il.), on the notation see Schwyzer: 506[7]). 5. κλεῖτος [n.] (A. R. 1, 599), κλῖτος [n.] (Lyc., LXX, AP) 'slope, side'. 6. κλίσις, mostly in prefixed compounds, e.g. ἀνά-, κατά-, ἀπό-κλισις 'leaning back, etc.' (IA). 7. κλίμα [n.] 'inclination, slope, quarter, land' (with Hell. ῐ for ει, see Schwyzer: 523), also ἔγκλι-μα, etc. (Arist.); thence κλιματίας 'inclining' (Heraclit., Amm. Marc.), κλιματικός 'belonging to a given compass point' (Vett. Val.). 8. κλῖμαξ, -ακος [f.] 'staircase, ladder, climax, etc.' (Od.), whence κλιμάκιον (IA), -ίς (Att. inscr., Hell.), κλιμακίσκοι· πάλαισμα ποιόν 'a kind of grip in wrestling' (H.); κλιμακίζω [v.] 'to use the grip called κλῖμαξ in fighting', metaph. 'to bring down' (Att.); κλιμακωτός (Plb.), -ώδης (Str.) 'like a stairway'; also κλιμακ-τήρ 'rung of a ladder' (IA), 'critical point of a man's life' (Varro), to which κλιμακτηρικός, -τηρίζω (Gell., Vett. Val.); on the formation of κλῖμαξ (with ī from κλῖνω analogical for *κλεῖ-μα) Rodriguez Adrados Emerita 16 (1948): 133ff.; on κλιμακτήρ Chantraine 1933: 327f. 9. κλισμός 'armchair' (Il., Ion. poet.), whence κλισμίον, -άκιον (inscr., Call.), 'inclination, slope' (Arist.). 10. ἀνά-κλιθρον 'back of a chair' (Ptol.). 11. κλίτα· στοαί 'roofed colonnade, storehouse', κλίταν (καὶ τάν cod.)· στοάν (H.), originally "leaning"; thence κλισία, Ion. -ίη 'pile dwelling, barracks, chapel; armchair, resting place, tomb' (Il.), κλίσιον 'annex, stoa' (ω 208, Delos III[a]), 'annex, shed, chapel' (Lys., Paus.); often written κλεισίον (inscr.), also κλεισία [f.] 'tavern' (epic), perhaps by adaptation to κλείω 'to lock'; thence κλεισιάδες (θύραι) 'doors of the κλ(ε)ισία, of the κλ(ε)ισίον' (Hdt., Ph., D. H., Plu.); details on κλισίη in Frisk Eranos 41 (1943): 59ff., Scheller 1951: 61. 12. (ἐγ-, ἐκ-)κλιτικός 'inflecting, etc.' (gramm.); to (ἔγ-, ἔκ-)κλισις. From the present: 13. κλίνη 'layer, bed, litter' (IA), cf. Chantraine 1933: 192, whence κλινίς, -ίδιον, -ίον, -άριον (com.), κλίνειος 'belonging to a κλίνη' (D.), -ήρης 'censorius' (Ph., J.); as a second member in σύγ-κλινος 'bedfellow' (Men.). 14. κλιντήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'id.' (Od.), whence κλιντήριον, -ίδιον, -ίσκος (Ar.), ἀνακλιν-τήρ 'neighbour at table' (Ps.-Callisth.); παρακλίν-τωρ 'id.' (AP); ἀνά-, ἐπί-κλιν-τρον 'back of a chair, etc.' (Erot. in Poll., Ar., inscr., etc.).

•ETYM The yod-present κλῖνω < *klin-je/o- (a Greek innovation) goes back to an older nasal present, which is found in various forms: Lat. clīnāre 'to bend', Gm., e.g. OS hlinōn, OHG hlinēn > MoHG lehnen 'to lean', Balt., e.g. Latv. sliet, 1sg. slìenu, Eastern Lith. šliñti, 1sg. šlinù 'to lean', Av. srinu-, ptc. srita- 'to lean' (Arm. linim 'to become, be', given by Frisk, is now derived from *k^w*el(h₁)-* 'to turn').
On the question of what the original form of the nasal present was (*ḱli-n-eH-, *ḱl-n-i-, vel sim.), see LIV[2] s.v. Indo-Iranian and Baltic have a thematic root present, Skt. śrayati = OLith. (also dialectal) šlejù 'to lean'. The nasal, which was originally only presentic, conquered the entire inflexion in Latin and Germanic, but did not reach the perfect in Greek (κέκλιται; cf. Skt. śiśriyé). The Greek nominal derivations are innovations except for the following: the to-ptc. (ἄ)-κλιτος = Skt. śritá-, Av. srita- 'leaning', κλίσις which is formally equal to Lith. šlìtis 'shove-shed', κλίτον, which matches OHG lit 'cover' and MoE eye-lid. The full grade of κλει-τύς is found, e.g., in ON hlíð [f.] 'slope'.

κλοιός [m.] 'collar for dogs, iron collar for prisoners' (com., E. Cyc., X., Babr.). ◄PG?►

•VAR Also κλῳός (Ar. V. 897, E. Cyc. 235).

•DER κλοιώτης· ὁ δεσμώτης 'prisoner'; κλοιωτά· δεσμοῖς διειλημμένα 'arrested in chains' (H.).

•ETYM Probably from a preform *klōwjó-, but without a good connection. Often connected to κλεῖς 'key'. Alternatively, the word could be Pre-Greek.

κλόνις, -ιος [f.] 'haunch' (Antim. 65). ◄IE? *ḱlouni- 'buttocks, hip'►

•DER κλόνιον· ἰσχίον, ῥάχις, ὀσφύς 'hip-joint, chine, loins' and κλονιστήρ· παραμήριος μάχαιρα, παρίσχιον 'dagger worn at the hips' (H.), cf. Lat. clūnāc(u)lum 'cultrum sanguinarium ..., quia ad clunes dependet' (Paul Fest. 50).

•ETYM The word resembles an old IE word for 'buttock, hip', found in Skt. śróṇi-, Lat. clūnis, MW clun, ON hlaun, Lith. šlaunìs, all from IE *ḱlouni-. Phonetically, κλόνις cannot be combined with these forms, but the word may have been folk-etymologically adapted to κλόνος (sch. A. Pr. 499: ἀφ' οὗ καὶ κλόνις ὀνομάζεται διὰ τὸ ἀεικίνητον, scil. ὀσφύς has been compared). Cf. Schulze 1892: 105[1] and Schwyzer: 38[1]; doubts in Pok. 608. Different hypotheses in Petersson IF 35 (1915): 269ff. and Holthausen IF 62 (1956): 157.

κλόνος [m.] 'excitement, throng, turmoil (of battle)' (Il.), on the mg. see Trümpy 1950: 157f. ◄PG?►

•COMP Rarely in compounds, e.g. ἄ-κλονος 'without excitement, quiet' (Gal.), of the pulse.

•DER Denominative κλονέω [v.] 'to excite, urge', pass. 'be pressed, get in excitement' (Il.), mostly present, also with prefixes like ὑπο-, συν-, ἐπι-; thence κλόνησις 'excitement' (Hp.).

•ETYM Mostly derived from κέλομαι, with a formation κλ-όνος that is also assumed in ► θρόνος. This explanation is doubtful: words in -ονος are rare, and the analysis of θρόνος is also uncertain. Rather a Pre-Greek word.

κλοπή 'theft', etc. ⇒ κλέπτω.

κλοτοπεύω [v.] only T 149 together with διατρίβειν; the mg. was uncertain already in antiquity, cf. κλοτοπεύειν· παραλογίζεσθαι, ἀπατᾶν, κλεψιγαμεῖν, στραγγεύεσθαι 'to misreckon, deceive, seek illicit love, loiter' (H.), who further cites κλοτοπευτής· ἐξαλλάκτης, ἀλαζών 'vagrant, charlatan'. ◄PG(S)► •ETYM Kuiper Glotta 21 (1933): 287ff. thought that the word was Pre-Greek, and compared ἠπερ-οπ-εύω for the suffix -op-*. The suggestion in DELG, that it is a cross of κλέπτω, κλοπή and τόπος, τοπάζω, is useless.

κλύβατις [f.] plant name = ἐλξίνη, 'bindweed, Convulvulus arvensis and Smilax aspera' (Nic., Dsc.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR By-form κουλυβάτεια [f.] (Nic.), perhaps for *κολυβατεια? See Fur.: 181. Cf. also κολύμβατος [f.] a plant (Gp.) and κολυμβάς, -άδος = στοιβή (Gal. 14, 18).
•ETYM Fur.: 207 further compares κλύμενον (Dsc. 4, 14) with dissimilation β-ν > μ-ν. The inserted -ο- may derive from PG a*, i.e. a pre-form k(a)lu(m)p-at-*.

κλύζω [v.] 'to wash (away), clean', pass. (intr.) 'to wash, surge, drench' (Il.). ◄IE ḱluH-, ḱleHu- 'wash, purify'► •VAR Iter. ipf. κλύζεσκον (Ψ 61), aor. pass. κλυσθῆναι (Il.), fut. κλύσ(σ)ω (h. Ap. 75, Pi.), aor. act. κλύσαι (IA), perf. κέκλυκα, κέκλυσμαι (Att.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-, κατα-, περι-, προσ-.
•DER κλύσις 'washing' (Hp.), mostly to the prefixed verbs: ἐπίκλυσις, etc. (IA); κλύσμα (also κατάκλυσμα, etc.) 'liquid by which something is rinsed, clyster', also 'surge, shore' (IA); κλυσμάτιον, -ματικός (Hp.); (ἐπι-, κατα-, etc.)κλυσμός 'inundation, etc.' (IA); κλυστήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'clyster-pipe' (Hdt.), whence -τήριον, -τηρίδιον. Further σύγ-κλυς, -δος 'washed together, thrown together' (Th., Pl.), κλύδ-α [acc.sg.] 'beating of the waves' (Nic. Al. 170; perhaps an archaizing innovation), κλύδ-ων, -ωνος [m.] 'undulation, surf, turmoil' (μ 421), κλυδώνιον (A., E.), κλυδων-ίζομαι [v.] 'to be thrown around by the waves' (LXX, J.), κλυδωνισμός (Hdn.), -ισμα (Suid.). Expressive enlargement (ἐγ-, συγ-)κλυδάζομαι 'to splash, etc.' (Hp.), -άττομαι (D. L.), to which κλυδασμός, (ἐγ)κλύδαξις, ἐγκλυδαστικός (Hp.). Further κλυδάω 'to be soaked, soft, moldable' (Arist.), of σταῖς, πηλός, probably after φλυδάω.
•ETYM The present κλύζω is either derived from nominal forms with -δ- (κλύδα, κλύδων), i.e. denominative klud-je/o-, or arose as an independent enlargement in -ζω, in which case κλύδων, etc. should be analyzed as back-formations (which is the preferable explanation). Germanic also had an IE enlargement in -d-, e.g. Go. hlutrs, MoHG lauter < klūd-ro-*, but we find forms without -d- in Celtic, Latin, and Baltic: W clir 'clear, pure' < klū-ro-*, and OLat. cluere 'to purify' (hapax Plin. 15, 119), cloāre 'id.' (glossed in Servius, hapax), the reconstruction of which is debated (see the discussion in De Vaan 2008 on the derivation of clo(u)āca 'subterranean drain, sewer'). For Lith. šlúoti, 1sg. šlúoju 'to weap, wipe', one would like to reconstruct PIE ḱloHu-. In Greek, there is no evidence for long ῡ, which also makes a reconstruction ḱleHu-, ḱlHu-* preferable. Greek would have generalized the zero grade ḱlHu-* (which under certain conditions, apparently, did not undergo metathesis to ḱluH-*).

κλύω [v.] 'to hear, understand, obey' (Il.), also (with εὖ, κακῶς) 'to have a (good or bad) reputation' (trag.). ◄IE ḱleu-* 'hear'► •VAR Pres. since Hes. Op. 726; aor. ἔκλυον (Il.); athem. forms ipv. κλῦθι, -τε (Hom., Pi., trag.), κέκλυθι, -τε (Hom.), also κέκλῠκε (Epich. 190), ptc. κλῠ́μενος 'famous' (Antim., Theoc.), PNs Κλύμενος, Κλυμένη (Hom.).
•COMP Rarely with prefixes ἐπι-, ὑπο-.
•DER κλυτός [m.] (also [f.], see Schwyzer 1950: 32[5]) 'famous' (Il.), often as a first member, e.g. κλυτό-τοξος 'with famous bow' (of Apollo), κλυτό-πωλος 'with famous foals' (of Hades); also Κλυται-μήστρα, -ρη (Il.), with second member derived from μήστωρ, and the first member reshaped after Κραται-, Παλαι-, etc. (see Schwyzer: 448, Sommer 1948: 147[1]). With different ablaut κλειτός 'famous' (Hom., Pi.) from *κλεϝετός (see below).
•ETYM The present κλύω is an innovation of the thematic root aorist ἔκλυον, which corresponds to Skt. śruvam [aor.]. Both languages innovated this thematic aorist from an older athematic aorist, which is still seen in Hom. ipv. κλῦθι, -τε and ptc. κλύμενος. An exact counterpart of κλῦθι (which is always verse-initial and has metrical lengthening for *κλύθι) is Skt. śrudhi. In Greek, κλῦτε was innovated after κλῦθι, perhaps for older *κλεῦτε = Skt. śróta. Reduplicated κέκλυθι, -τε may be innovations after τέτλᾰθι, etc.
The to-ptc. κλυτός seems to be an old formation, preserved in several languages, e.g. Skt. śrutá- 'heard', Lat. in-clutus 'famous', Arm. lu 'known', OIr. cloth [n.] 'fame', PIE ḱlu-tó-* (Gm. words like OHG hlūt 'loud' and ON hljóð 'hearing, etc.' continue a full grade formation ḱleu-tó-*). The forms κλεϝετός > κλειτός (cf. Schwyzer: 502) and the old verbal noun ► κλέος continue an ablauting full grade ḱleu-eto-. The other languages have various present formations, e.g. a nasal present in Skt. śr̥ṇóti, Av. surunaoiti, ToB kalneṃ 'to resound'; note the stative in Lat. cluēre 'to be called'. Further, Greek has a denominative κλέω 'to celebrate, praise'; see on ► κλέος.

κλωβός [m.] 'bird-cage' (AP, Babr.). ◄LW Sem.►
•VAR Also κλουβός (POxy. 1923, 14 [V-VI[p]], where mg. uncertain, Tz., gloss.).
•DER Diminutive κλωβίον (-ου-) 'small cage, twined basket' (Hdn. Epim., pap.).
•ETYM A Semitic loan; cf. Hebr., Syr. k[e]lūb 'bird-cage'. See Lewy 1895: 129, Grimme Glotta 14 (1925): 19, and E. Masson 1967: 108[4].

κλῶδις [m.] · κλέπτης 'thief' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. Latte thinks it could be a mistake for ► κνώψ.

κλώζω [v.] 'to cackle, clack' (D., Alciphr., Poll.). ◄ONOM► •VAR Only present stem; also κλώσσω (Suid. s.v. φωλάς, uncertain, perhaps a back-formation from κλωγμός, see Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 248).
•DER κλωγμός (Cratin., X.), also κλωσμός (Ph. 2, 599 beside -γ-, Harp.) 'cackling'.

•ETYM For κλώζω, cf. κλάζω (►κλαγγή) and, on the other hand, ►κρώζω. Like these, κλώζω is onomatopoeic.

κλώθω, -ομαι [v.] 'to spin' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Aor. κλῶσαι, -ώσασθαι (Ω 525 and Od.), pass. κλωσθῆναι (Pl.), κέκλωσμαι (com., LXX); κλώσκω (H.), cf. Schwyzer: 708.
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἐπι-.
•DER κλῶθες [f.pl.] 'spinsters' (η 197), Κλωθώ [f.] "the spinster", one of the Moirai (Hes.); κλωστήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'yarn, clew, spindle' (Att., Theoc., A. R.), κλωστήριον 'band, yarn' (Ostr. 1525 [?], Suid.); κλωστάς [m.] 'spinner' (Sparta); κλῶσμα 'thread, clew' (LXX, Nic.), κλῶσις 'id.' (Lyc.), 'spinning' (Corn., M. Ant.).
•ETYM The supposed connection with ►κάλαθος 'basket' cannot be supported in any way. Connection with Lat. colus 'distaff' has also been considered (see WH s.v. and cōlum). The word is probably Pre-Greek.

κλωκυδά [adv.] · τό καθῆσθαι ἐπ' ἀμφοτέροις ποσίν 'to be placed or seated on both feet' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM DELG reminds us of ὀκλάζω, but the word can hardly be cognate with this. It could be Pre-Greek.

κλῶμαξ, -ᾱκος [m.] 'heap of stones, rock' (Lyc. 653). ⊲PG(S,V)⊳ •DER κλωμακόεσσα 'stony, rocky' (B 729), of Ἰθώμη.
•ETYM Formation like λίθαξ, βῶλαξ, etc. (see Chantraine 1933: 379). It is usually connected with κλάω (κλῆμα, κλᾶρος) 'to break', by assumption of a verbal noun *κλῶμος 'crack, split' and comparison with περικεκλασμένος 'lying on uneven, rocky grund', said of τόποι, πόλεις, οἰκίαι (Plb.). This is unlikely, especially given the by-forms κρῶμαξ 'id.', κρωμακόεις· κρημνώδης 'precipitous' (H.), κρωμακωτός (Eust. 330, 40; Paphlagonian). Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 210 connected it to Lat. grūmus 'heap of earth, hill' as a word from the Aegaean substrate (i.e. Pre-Greek). The form with ρ could show Pre-Greek variation ρ/ λ as well.

κλών, -ωνός [m.] 'sprout' (Att.). ⊲PG(V)⊳
•DER Diminutives κλωνίον, -ίδιον, -άριον, -ίσκος (Thphr., Hell. inscr., Gp.), further κλωνίτης 'with sprouts' (Hdn.), κλῶναξ = κλάδος (H.), κλωνίζω [v.] 'to clip' (Suid.).
•ETYM Not from *κλα-ών (Schwyzer: 521), as a sprout can hardly be called 'broken'. Kuiper 1956: 221f. connected the word with ►κλάδος 'branch'. See further ►κλάω.

κλώσσω ⇒κλώζω.

κμέλεθρα [n.pl.] 'beam' (Pamphil. apud EM 521, 34, H.). ⊲PG?⊳
•ETYM The resemblance to ►μέλαθρον can hardly be accidental and strongly suggests substrate origin. Cf. on ►καμάρα.

κναδάλλεται ⇒-κναίω.

-κναίω [v.] 'to scrape, scratch' (Hp., trag. [lyr.], Att.). ⊲IE? *kneh$_2$- 'scratch, plane', PG?⊳

•VAR Only with prefixes δια-, ἀπο-, ἐκ-, κατα-κναίω; Att. inf. κνῆν, κνῆσθαι (also exists as a simplex), 1 and 3sg. pres. κνῶ, κνῇ, ipf. ἐπὶ ... κνῆ (Λ 639), also κνᾶν (Hdt.), κνᾶσθαι, κνᾷ (Hell.); further κνήθω (Arist., Hell.), also with κατα-, ἐν-, ἐπι-, etc. Non-presentic forms: -κναῖσαι, -κναισθῆναι, -κναίσω, -κεκναισμένος (Ar., E. [lyr.], Pl., Theoc.); more usual (both as a simplex and in compounded verbs) is κνῆσαι, Dor. κνάσαιο [opt.med.] (Theoc.), κνησθῆναι, κνήσω, κέκνησμαι (IA).
•DER Action nouns: 1. κνῆσις 'scratching, tickling' (Pl.), whence κνησιάω [v.] 'to wish to tickle' (Ar., Pl.), also κνηστιάω 'id.' (Gal., Jul.), after other verbs in -τιάω; κνηθιάω 'id.' (Hdn., EM), after κνήθω (cf. Schwyzer: 732). 2. κνῆσμα 'id.' (Hp., X.), rarely κνῆμα; 3. κνησμονή 'id.' (medic.), cf. πῆμα: πημονή, etc.; 4. κνησμός 'id.' (Hp., Arist.), κνησμώδης 'affected with itching' (Hp., Arist., Str.). 5. κνηθμός 'itching' (Nic.). Agent nouns and instruments: 6. κνῆστις [f.] 'knife for scratching, cheese-grater' (Λ 640, Nic., Opp.), also 'spine' (κ 161; cf. ►ἄκνηστις s.v.), perhaps from *κνήστης [m.]; 7. κνηστήρ 'scratching knife' (Nic.). 8. κνηστίς -ίδος [f.] 'hollow hairpin' (Plu.). 9. κνῆστρον 'stinging plant, Daphne oleoides, θυμελαία' (Hp., Dsc.); κνηστρίον 'scraper', (Edict. Diocl.). 10. κνηστικός [adj.] 'scratching, itching' (sch.).
•ETYM Of the presents, κνήθειν may be an innovation from κνῆσαι, etc. after πλῆσαι: πλήθω, λῆσαι: λήθω, etc.; the pair κνῆν: κναίειν matches the formation of the semantically close ψῆν: ψαίειν 'to rub, etc.'; -κναίω is probably secondary. The form κνῆν, which originally was probably athematic (see Schwyzer: 675f. and Chantraine 1942: 297 and 307), is usually connected with Baltic, Celtic and Germanic: e.g. Lith. knóti 'to peel, tear' < athematic *kneh$_2$-, OHG nuoen 'to make smooth by scratching, to make fit together' and OIr. -cná 'to bite, gnaw' < yod-present *kneh$_2$-i̯e/o-.
It has not been proposed that the words could be Pre-Greek. We may compare κναδάλλεται· κνήθεται (H.), to which belong, as variants, γνάφαλλον, γνόφαλον; these are clearly Pre-Greek (see ►κνάπτω). Is κναδ- a variant of κνηθ-? For κναδ-, no PIE pre-form can be reconstructed (cf. on ►γνάθος). The formation of κνήσων 'scratcher' (inscr. Delos II^a, see DELG) is reflected in the Latin loan cnāsonas [acc.pl.] 'scratching nails' (Paul. Fest. 52), which must have been borrowed from Hell. *κνᾱ́σων (cf. the gloss κνᾶσαι· ὀλέσαι, λυπῆσαι 'to perish, grieve' (H.), and see Leumann Sprache 1 (1949): 207). Verbs with a formation in -αίω are further unknown in Greek. See further ►κνέωρος, ►κνήφη, ►κνώδαλον.

κνάπτω [v.] 'to card, comb, full (cloth)' as a technical term, also metaph. 'to mangle, tear to pieces' (IA). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Rarely κνάμπτω, cf. ►γνάμπτω and Güntert 1914: 115f., ►γνάπτω (late Att., Hell., Ion.).
•DIAL Myc. ka-na-pe-u /knap^{h}eus/.
•COMP Sometimes prefixed with ἀνα-, ἐπι-.
•DER Late Att. has γν- for κν- in most derivatives: κνάφος [m.] 'fullers' teasel', also 'tangle; carding comb (an instrument of torture)' (Hdt., Hp., com.), κναφεύς 'fuller' (IA), also as a fish name (Dorio; on the motive see Strömberg 1943: 93); κναφεῖον, -ήϊον 'fuller's shop' (IA), κναφευτική (τέχνη) 'art of fulling' (Pl.), κναφεύω [v.] 'to full' (Ar.) and, as a late feminine formation, κνάφισσα 'female fuller' (pap.), see Chantraine 1933: 110; κναφικός 'belonging to fulling' (Dsc., pap.). γνάψις 'fulling'

(Pl.), γνάπτωρ = κναφεύς (Man.). γνάφαλλον 'cushion of wool' (pap. and ostr.), with γναφαλ(λ)ώδης 'like a γ.', γναφάλλιον, -αλλίς plant name 'Diotis maritima' (Dsc., Plin.), see Strömberg 1940: 105; also κνέφαλλον 'cushion' (com., E.; v.ll. κναφ-, γναφ-) and γνόφαλλον (Alc. Z 14, 8), beside μόλθακον. Verbal adjectives: ἄ-γναπτος (Pl. Com., Plu.) and ἄ-γναφος (NT, pap.) 'unfulled, new', ἐπί-γναφος 'fulled again', of clothes (Poll.), to ἐπι-γνάπτω.
•ETYM The initial sequence has been compared with ► -κναίω, κνῆν, ► κνίζω, ► κνύω; the ending with ῥάπτω, which also denotes a technical operation of the clothing industry (κνάφος is reminiscent of ῥαφή, etc.). The forms with γν- cannot be explained in an inherited word (even if they are mostly younger), so they point to Pre-Greek origin. Note that Schwyzer: 414 unconvincingly took κνάπτω as assimilated from γνάπτω, and also the typical ο for α in γνόφαλλον (Alc.) and the ε in κνέφαλλον, which can hardly be due to old ablaut (cf. Schwyzer: 343).
Outside Greek, a Celtic word for 'fleece' has been cited as cognate, e.g. MW cnaif [m.], OIr. cnaí [f.] < PCl. knawī* (cf. Matasović 2008, who considers a relationship with PCl. knā-i̯e/o-* 'to chew, bite' probable); forms in Germanic and Baltic are semantically farther away, e.g. ON hnafa*, pret. hnof 'to cut off', Lith. knabénti 'to pick (with the beak)'. However, the variation κ/ γ, α/ ο rather points to Pre-Greek origin (not in Fur.). See ► κνήφη, ► κνώψ.

κνάψ [?] = δάλος 'piece of half-burned wood' (Hdn. Gr. 1, 404). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

κνέφας [n.] 'evening twilight, dusk, morning twilight' (Il., X.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Gen. -αος, -ους, etc. (on the inflection Schwyzer: 514f.); secondary nom.acc. κνέφος (H., Suid., Phot.), perhaps from κνέφους, -ει.
•DER κνεφαῖος 'of the dusk, dark' (trag., com., Hippon.); κνεφάζω [v.] 'to become dark' (A. Ag. 131 [lyr.]).
•ETYM Often connected with the Indo-Iranian word for 'night', Skt. kṣáp-, Av. xšap-, which belong with Hitt. išpant- 'id.'; nevertheless, it is unknown how this comparison would work. The word ► ψέφας is a rhyming formation; cf. also ► δνόφος. The word is no doubt Pre-Greek, but the variation is not known from other examples.

κνέωρος [m.] name of a stinging plant, 'Daphne, Thymelaea' (Thphr., Dsc., Plin., H.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Also -ον [n.]; cf. perhaps κ<ν>εωρεῖν· πασχητιᾶν 'to feel (unnatural) lust' (H.), as per Fraenkel Glotta 4 (1913): 42.
•ETYM Connected with κνῆν, like synonymous κνῆστρον. Perhaps from a pre-form knā-ǭro-* (i.e. *κνή-ουρος, containing the plant suffix -ουρος), with quantitative metathesis. See ► -κναίω.

κνήθω ⇒ -κναίω.

κνῆκος [f.] 'safflower, Carthamus tinctorius' (Hp., Arist., Thphr.). ⊲?, IE? knh$_2$kó-* 'yellow (like honey, gold)'⊳ •DIAL Myc. ka-na-ko /knāko-/.

•COMP As a first member e.g. in κνηκο-φόρος 'carrying safflower' (pap.).
•DER Adjective κνηκός, Dor. κνᾱκός 'yellow, safflower-colored', usually of a goat (Thespis, S. Ichn. 358, Theoc., AP), but also of the wolf (Babr.). κνήκιον 'clover, σάμψουχον' (Dsc., Ps.-Dsc.); κνᾱ́κων, -ωνος [m.] 'he-goat' (Theoc.), κνᾱκίας [m.] 'wolf' (Babr.); κνήκινος 'from safflower' (pap., Dsc.), κνηκώδης 'safflower-like' (Thphr.); κνηκίτης (λίθος) name of a yellowish stone (Hermes Trism.); κνηκίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'bleak spot', especially in heaven (Call., Plu.), cf. κηλίς and Chantraine 1933: 347; also name of a kind of antelope (H.).
•ETYM Skt. kāñcana- [n.] 'gold', OPr. cucan 'brown', and the Germanic word for honey, OHG honag, etc. resemble words for 'yellow, etc.' or yellowish material; but the varying vocalism is unclear. The Greek word was probably originally an adjective; the plant was probably (Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 270) introduced from Egypt. The appurtenance of the Skt. word is doubted by Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. ("nicht überzeugend erklärt"), and a PIE paradigm cannot be reconstructed.

κνήμη [f.] 'part between knee and ankle, leg, shank' (Il.), 'tibia' (Gal., Ruf.), metaph. 'stem between two joints' (Thphr.), see Strömberg 1937: 48, 'spoke of a wheel' (Hom., etc. in compounds, Poll., Eust.). ⊲IE konh$_2$-m*, knh$_2$-m-* 'bone, tibia, shank'⊳ •VAR Dor. κνᾱ́μᾱ.
•COMP As a second member e.g. in ὀκτά-κνημος 'with eight spokes' (Il.), παχύ-κνημος 'with thick shanks' (Ar.). Substantivized hypostasis: ἀντικνήμ-ιον [n.] 'what is over against the shank', i.e. 'tibia' (IA).
•DER κνημίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'greave' (Il.), Aeol. κνᾶμις, κνάμῖδες [pl.] (Alc.); also κνημίδια [pl.] (Att. inscr.; mg. uncertain); see Trümpy 1950: 19f.; κνημία [f.] 'spoke' (Lys.), plur. = τὰ τῆς ἁμάξης περιθέματα 'what is put around the wheel' (H.), etc.; κνημ-(ι)αῖος 'belonging to the shank' (Hp., Gal.).
•ETYM κνᾱ́μᾱ corresponds with OIr. cnáim 'leg, bone' (i-stem), both of which derive from knām-* < IE knh$_2$m-*. A different ablaut grade is found in a Germanic word for 'shank, back of the knee': OHG hamma, OE hamm, ON hǫm, which may have assimilated from hanma-. We may therefore assume an ablauting paradigm nom. konh$_2$-m(-), gen. knh$_2$-m-os, which was thematicized in different ways. On ► κνημός, see s.v.

κνημός [m.] geographical term (Hom., h. Ap. 283, Orph. A. 465), e.g. Ἴδης ἐν κνημοῖσι (Il.), mg. uncertain, probably 'projecting part, shoulder of a mountain'; δημόσιος κνημός 'public grove' (TAM 2: 1, 64, Telmessos; not quite certain); also = ὀρίγανος (Arg., Eust. 265, 40). ⊲IE? knh$_2$-m-, konh$_2$-m- 'mountain-forest'⊳ •DER Denominative κνημῶσαι· περιχῶσαι, φράξαι, φθεῖραι, κλεῖσαι, ἐλθεῖν 'to be exceedingly angry, fence in, destroy, enclose, come'; κνημοῦμαι· φθείρομαι 'perish', κνημωθῆναι· φθαρῆναι 'id.', διεκνημώσατο· διέφθειρε 'ruined completely' (H.). In the sense 'encircle, etc.' cf. κνημός 'grove'; in the sense of φθεῖραι it remains unclear (cf. κνημίαι· φθοραί 'destruction' H.).
•ETYM The meaning of κνημός recalls MoLG hamm 'mountain forest' (cf. Fick KZ 21 (1873): 368), but this word rather belongs with MLG ham 'fenced in piece of land', MoLG hamme 'fenced in field', and therefore can be explained differently.

Connection with κνήμη as "shank of a mountain" (Eust. 1498, 42 explains it as 'what is above the foot') remains uncertain.

κνῆν, κνῆστις ⇒ -κναίω.

κνήφη [f.] 'itch' (LXX De. 28, 27, H. s.v. ξῦσμα, Suid. s.v. Ἀφροδίτη). ◂PG?▸
•DER κνηφάω = prurio (gloss.).
•ETYM Connected with κνῆν 'to scratch, itch' with a suffix -φ-, for which one compared ▸ἀκαλήφη. Direct connection with κνάφος, ▸κνάπτω is improbable. Note κνίφεα· κνίδας (H.), with an -ι- that is explainable by analogy with κνίδη, ▸κνίζω. The word σκνῆφαι (probably for ἀκαλῆφαι) as an explanation for κνῖδαι (H.) is doubtful; if it is correct, we may compare σκνίψ beside κνίψ for the variation.

κνῑ́δη [f.] 'nettle, sea-nettle' (Hp., Arist., Theoc.). ◂PG?▸
•DER κνίδειος 'of a κνίδη' (Theognost.); κνιδᾶται (κνηδ- cod.)· δάκνεται, ἴσως ἀπὸ τῆς πόας 'be stung, perhaps by a grass' and κνιδῶντες (-δοντες cod.)· κνίδη μαστιγοῦντες 'whipped by a nettle' (H.); κνιδώσεις [pl.] 'itching, caused by a nettle' (Hp.), as if from *κνιδόω; cf. the numerous formations in -(ω)σις in medical and technical terms. See Chantraine 1933: 284ff.
•ETYM Taken with ▸κνίζω 'to scratch, sting'; yet the ῑ of κνῑ́δη is long, which may point to Pre-Greek origin. See ▸κνῖσα.

κνίζω [v.] 'to scratch, pound, chop up, provoke' (Pi., IA). ◂IE? knid- 'scratch'▸ •VAR Aor. κνίσαι, pass. κνισθῆναι, fut. κνίσω, perf. pass. κέκνισμαι.
•DIAL Dor. aor. κνίξαι (Pi.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, κατα-, ὑπο-.
•DER κνισμός, κνίσμα 'scratching, provocation, etc.' (Ar.), ἀπόκνισμα 'piece' (Ar.), ἀπό-, ἐπί-κνισις 'scratching' (Thphr.). As a back-formation *κνίς, acc. κνίδα (Opp.), plur. κνίδες (LXX) 'nettle', κνίζα 'id.' (gloss.). Compound with a verbal (aoristic) second member φιλό-κνῖσος 'desirous' (AP), also κνισότερος (Ath. 12, 549a).
•ETYM The basis is κνιδ- or κνιτ-, aor. κνισ-, which points to a root that seems to be found in Baltic and Germanic verbs, e.g. Latv. knidêt 'to itch, geminate, creep', ON hníta, pret. hneit 'to push against', both from root final *-d- (also in MIr. cned 'wound' < knidā). A root-final -t- (which may also be continued by the Greek forms) is found as well, e.g. in Lith. knìsti, 1sg. knintù, pret. knitaũ, 'to scratch, itch, tickle'; a root-final -s- occurs in Lith. 1sg. knisù 'to grub up'. The forms ▸κνῑ́δη, ▸κνῖσα, with a long vowel, are probably not cognate.

κνῖσα [f.] 'steam and odor of fat, smell and savor of burnt sacrifice, fat caul' (Il., Arist., Hell.). ◂IE? kniHd-s- 'fumes'▸ •VAR Epic κνίσῃ; also κνῖσος [n.] (Com. Adesp. 608, sch.), after λίπος, etc.
•COMP πολύ-κνισος 'with rich smell of the sacrifice' (A. R.).
•DER κνισήεις (κ 10, Pi.), κνισωτός (A. Ch. 485), κνισηρός (Achae. 7) 'smelling of fat', κνισώδης 'id., fat' (Arist., Gal.), κνισαλέος (H.), κνισός (Ath. 3, 115e), = κνισήεις. Denominative verbs: κνισάω 'to fill with the smell of fat' (E., Ar.), κνισόομαι 'to be changed into the smell of fat', -όω 'to give the smell of fat' (Arist., Ph.).

•ETYM Often compared with Lat. nīdor [m.] 'smell of roasted meat, vapor, smoke', which may continue knīdōs*. This points to a neuter s-stem knīd-s-h₂* [n.pl.] for κνίσῃ, whence secondarily κνῖσα (Solmsen 1909: 238), so it is ultimately from IE knīdos-* [n.] (cf. on ▸ἕρση). Close to this form is ON hniss [n.] 'strong smell, bad taste in eating', from IE knid-to-*. This word belongs to hnītan 'to push against' (cf. Go. stigqan 'to push' = OHG stincan 'to stink'), and one assumes a comparable origin for nīdor and κνῖσα, i.e. connection with ▸κνίζω. However, for κνῑ́δη, κνῖσα, and nīdor we have to start from a form with long vowel, which is quite problematic for IE.

κνίψ, κνῑπός [m.] name of unknown insects (small ants acc. to Arist. Sens. 444b 12), that infest several trees and plants (Ar., Arist., Thphr., LXX). ◂PG?▸ •VAR Also σκνίψ, σκνῑπός, plur. also σκνῖφες.
•COMP As a first member in κνιπο-λόγος [m.] name of a woodpecker, σκνιπο-φάγος 'eating σκνῖπες' (Arist.).
•DER κνίπειος 'belonging to a κνίψ' (Zos. Alch.). Several expressive words have been put in connection to κνίψ, σκνίψ, rarely found in literature, that indicate especially avarice or different eye diseases: κνιπός (AP), σκνιπός (Anon. in EN, H.), σκνιφός (Phryn.) 'niggard'; κνιπεύω [v.] 'to be stingy' and κνιπεία (Doroth. Astrol.); further in the mg. 'feeble-mindedness, etc.': κνιπός (Semon.), σκνιφός (H.), ὑπό-σκνιπος, -σκνιφος, -σχνιφος 'slightly short-sighted' (pap.), κνιπά· πτίλη '[female] suffering from a disease of the eyelids' (H.); with κνιπότης 'eye-inflammation' (Hp. Loc. Hom. 13, Erot.), κνιπόομαι [v.] 'to be inflamed, of the eyes' (H. in κεκνιπωμένοι), also 'to be infested with mildew', of fruits' (H. ib.). Beside the names for eye diseases, etc., there are expressions for 'dark': σκνιφαῖος (v.l. -παῖος) adjunct of ὁδίτης 'who walks in the darkness' (Theoc. 16, 93), perhaps after κνεφαῖος; σκνῖφος· τὸ σκότος 'darkness' (H.). Further two denominatives: κνιπεῖν· σείειν, ξύειν μέλαθρα καὶ δοκούς 'to shake, scratch or scrape balks and beams' (H.), perhaps originally of the κνῖπες; σκνίπτειν· νύσσειν 'to pierce' (H.).
•ETYM Formations rhyming with κνίψ, σκνίψ are ▸θρίψ and ▸ἴψ. Both (σ)κνίψ and the words for 'niggard' could go back to the idea of pinching and stinging (cf. ▸σκνίπτω). Perhaps the terms for diminished sight come from closing the eyes, or perhaps from plant diseases caused by κνῖπες (see ▸κνιπόομαι). It has been compared with words for 'pinching, etc.' in Baltic and Germanic, e.g. Latv. kniêbt, knīpêt, MLDu. nipen, but these are rather European substrate words. The whole picture is that of a Pre-Greek word: very small animals, the long ῑ, the variation π/φ, prothetic σ-.

κνόος, κνοῦς [m.] 'the grinding sound of the wheel against the axle', also (A. Fr. 237) 'the sound of feet when marching'; also (by confusion with χνόη) 'axle-box, nave' (H., Phot.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Not well attested and therefore hard to judge. It is most often considered to be a full grade noun from ▸κνύω 'to scratch'.

κνύζα 1 a plant. ⇒ κόνυζα.

κνύζα 2 'scratch'. ⇒ κνύω.

κνυζέομαι [v.] 'to whine, whimper', of dogs and children (S., Ar., Theoc., Opp., Nonn.). ◂ONOM?▸
•VAR Also -ζάομαι, -ζομαι; also act. -έω.
•COMP Rarely with προσ-, ὑπο-.
•DER κνυζηθμός 'whining', also of wild animals (π 163, A. R., Opp., Ath.); κνύζημα 'whimpering of children' (Hdt., Him.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic; coincidental similarity with Lith. kniaũkti 'to miaow'. See ▸κνυζόω.

κνυζόω [v.]◂IE? kneu-g-*, -k- 'become somber'▸ •VAR Only κνυζώσω (ν 401), κνύζωσεν (ν 433), of the eyes of Odysseus, that, while earlier περικαλλέα ἐόντα, were made dim and dark by Athena.
•ETYM The basic form seems to have been preserved in κνυζοί· οἱ τὰ ὄμματα πονοῦντες 'who have trouble with the eyes', κνυζόν· ἀέρα ἐπινέφελον καὶ πνευματώδη 'cloudy and windy air' (H., unclear Anacr. 87); cf. Büchner Herm. 75 (1940): 156[1]. Connection with κνύζα 'scratch', ▸κνύω is quite probable; the correspondence with κνυζάομαι is therefore probably accidental. A remarkable parallel gives Lith. kniáuktis 'to get cloudy, cover oneself (of heaven), take a gloomy aspect' beside kniaũkti 'to miaow'; niaũras 'cloudy, somber, troubled' is comparable, as well as 'grumbling, nasalizing', niauróti [v.] 'to growl, of bears'. The word can be of independent (onomatopoeic or other) origin or show semantic analogy; this can hardly be decided.

κνύω [v.] 'to scratch' (Ar. Th. 481, Men. 1021). ◂IE? knu-* 'scratch'?▸
•VAR περι-κνύω 'to scratch round about' (Phot.).
•DER κνῦμα [n.] 'scratching (Ar. Ec. 36, Gal. 19, 112) and 'scratch'; κνύος [n.] (Hes. fr. 29, 1), κνῦσα [f.] (Herod. 7, 95 as a term of abuse; cf. δεῖσα, μύξα, etc.), κνύζα (Philox. Gramm. apud EM 523, 2, Eust.), cf. ἄζα, σκύζα, κνίζα, etc. Note the glosses in H. κνύθος· ἄκανθα μικρά 'small thorn', κνυθόν· σμικρόν 'small' (cf. τυτθός, -όν and plant names in -θος, Chantraine 1933: 367f.); back-formation κνῦ· τὸ ἐλάχιστον 'smallest', like γρῦ, βρῖ. On ▸κνόος, κνοῦς, see s.v.
•ETYM Like in the case of ▸-κναίω, κνῆν, ▸κνάπτω, ▸κνίζω, words formally comparable to κνύω can be found in Germanic and Baltic: OHG hniuwan 'to squash', ON hnjóða 'to push, hit, etc.' < kneu-*, Latv. knūdu, and knūstu 'to itch'.

κνώδαλον [n.] 'wild or harmful animal' (ρ 317). ◂PG▸
•DER κνωδαλώδης (Tz.). κνώδαξ, -ᾱκος [m.] 'pin, pivot', also 'sockets for an axe' (Hero, Ph. Bel.), κνωδάκιον, κνωδακίζω [v.] 'to hang on pivots' (Hero). κνώδων, -οντος [m.], plur. 'teeth of a sword or a javelin', sing. 'sword' (S., X.).
•ETYM The pair κνώδαλον : κνώδων recalls pairs like ἀγκάλη : ἀγκών, ὀμφαλός : Lat. umbō (Chantraine 1933: 246). Given the meaning 'teeth', κνωδον-τ- may well be secondary for *κνωδον- after ὀδοντ- (cf. Schwyzer: 526). Frisk assumed that κνώδαλον and κνώδων, κνώδαξ go back to a verbal noun *κνωδ(ο-) meaning 'tooth, biter, gnawer', belonging to κνῆν, etc. (see -▸κναίω). The glosses κάναδοι· σιαγόνες, γνάθοι 'jaws', κναδάλλεται· κνήθεται 'gnaws' (H.) belong here too. The words do not belong to Lith. kándu 'to bite', as this is formally impossible (see on ▸γνάθος); they are no doubt Pre-Greek, since κναδ- cannot continue an IE pre-form. I am not sure that κνώδαξ belongs with the other words. See also ▸κνώψ.

κνώσσω [v.] 'to sleep, slumber' (δ 809). ◂?▸
•VAR Only present stem.
•COMP Also with ἐνι-, κατα-.
•ETYM Like ▸εὕδω, without etymology. Formally, cf. the opposite ἐγρήσσω (Λ 551), related to ▸ἐγείρω.

κνώψ, κνωπός [m.] a wild animal, of snakes, etc. (Nic. Th.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER κνωπεύς· ἄρκτος. ἔνιοι κνουπεύς 'bear' (H.); also κυνοῦπες· ἄρκτος (for -οι?). Μακεδόνες 'bear (Maced.)' (H.). Further also κινώπετον 'poisonous animal, snake' (Call., Nic.), with anaptyctic vowel.
•ETYM Not a cross of κνώδαλον and another word (e.g. κλώψ, κνίψ, σήψ), as suggested by Frisk. The variant forms point to a Pre-Greek word. On secondary vowels in Pre-Greek, see Fur.: 383f.

κοακτήρ [m.] name of a servant in the Spartan mysteries. ⇒ κοῖον.

κοᾱ́λεμος [m.] 'blockhead' (Ar., Plu.), also name of a demon of stupidity (Ar. Eq. 221). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Cf. καυαλός· μωρολόγος 'speaking like an idiot' and κόαλοι· βάρβαροι 'foreigners' (H.).
•ETYM Ending like in ▸ἰάλεμος; on the phonetics, see Schwyzer: 302. Björck 1950: 46 and 258 refers to onomatopoeic κο-. The word is clearly Pre-Greek because of the variants. See ▸κόβαλος.

κοάξ interjection imitating the croaking of frogs (Ar. Ra.). ◂ONOM▸ •ETYM A sound imitation, like MoHG qua(c)k, quaken. Lat. coaxāre [v.] 'to croak' (Suet.) is probably a literary imitation of κοάξ (cf. WH s.v. coaxō). See ▸κοΐ, ▸κοΐζω.

κόαλοι [m.pl.] · βάρβαροι 'barbarians' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Perhaps related to ▸καυαλός or ▸κόβαλος. See ▸κοᾱ́λεμος.

κόβαθος [m.] a vessel (PLond.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Fur.: 346 compares κύβεθρον 'beehive' (H.) and κύαθος 'vessel, scoop'. If correct, the word is Pre-Greek.

κόβακτρα [n.pl.] · κολακεύματα, πανουργήματα 'pieces of flattery, knavery' (H.). ◂PG▸ •VAR κάβαξ· πανοῦργος 'crafty, knavish' (H.).
•ETYM The element κα/οβ-ακ- is clearly Pre-Greek.

κόβᾱλος [m.] 'rogue, mischievous knave', also (parodic) of mischievous genies (Ar., Arist., D. C.). ◂PG▸ •VAR As an adjective κόβαλον, -α [n.] 'knavish tricks' (Pherecr., Ar.).

•DER κοβαλεία (Din.), κοβάλευμα (Et. Gen.) 'roguery'; (ἐκ)κοβαλικεύομαι [v.] 'to swindle, deceive' (Ar. Eq. 270), κοβαλικεύματα [pl.] (Ar. Eq. 332), derived from *κοβαλικός (κοβαλικοῖσι is a conj. in Timocr. fr. 1, 7 Diehl). Also κοβαλεύω [v.] 'to transport' (pap., EM), MoGr. κουβαλῶ 'id.', κοβαλισμός 'transport' (pap.).
•ETYM Words from the vulgar language of comedy. Björck 1950: 46f. and 258f. assumed an original meaning 'porter, transport worker', whence contemptible 'rogue'. This original meaning would have been introduced into koine as a non-IA element. Against connection with Lat. caballus (Grégoire Byzantion 13 (1938): 287ff.; cf. on καβάλλης), see Björck l.c. The word is probably Pre-Greek.

κόβειρος [adj.] · γελοιαστής, σκωπτής, λοιδοριστής 'jester, scoffer' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR κόβειρα· γελοῖα 'jests' [n.pl.] (H.).
•ETYM Hemberg 1950: 326 refers to the grotesque pictures of the Kabeiroi in Thebes. Since α may vary with ο in Pre-Greek words (Fur. 341-5), our word must be identical in origin with ► Κάβειρος.

κόγχη [f.] 'mussel, cockle', also as measure and metaph. of several shell-like objects, e.g. 'hollow of the ear, knee-cap, brain-pan, case round a seal, knob of a shield, etc.' (Emp., Epich., Sophr., IA). ◂PG?, LW?▸
•VAR Also κόγχος [m., f.].
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. κογχο-θήρᾱς [m.] 'mussel-fisher' (Epich.).
•DER 1. Diminutives κογχίον (Antiph., Str.), κογχάριον (Str., Aret.). 2. κογχωτός 'provided with a knob' (pap. III[a]). 3. κογχίτης (λίθος) 'shelly marble' (Paus.). 4. κογχαλίζειν· πεποίηται ἀπὸ τοῦ ἤχου τῶν κόγχων '[a form] created after the sound of the mussel-shell' (H.), possibly after κροταλίζειν: κρότ-αλα: κρότος (Frisk); 5. As a back-formation κόγξ interjection, used for the sound of the sherd falling in the voting urn, etc. (H.). 6. κογχίζω [v.] 'to paint purple', whence κογχιστής 'painter' and κογχιστική 'trade of purple-dyeing' (PGrenf. 2, 87), for *κογχυλίζω, etc. (see below). 7. κογχῦλιον [n.] 'mussel', the animal and the shell, also 'murex, purpura' (Epich., Sophr., Hdt., Hp., Arist.), from κογχύλη (which only occurs as a v.l. in Ph. 1, 536 and AP 9, 214); from κογχύλιον: κογχυλίας (Ar.) and κογχυλιάτης (X., Philostr.) = κογχίτης (λίθος), see Redard 1949: 56); κογχυλιώδης 'like a κ.' (Str.), κογχύλιος 'purple-colored' (pap.), κογχυλιατός, -ιωτός 'painted with purple' (pap., gloss.); also κογχυλεύς 'purple-worker' (Korykos), either for *κογχυλιεύς or from κογχύλη, to which κογχυλευτής 'murex fisher' and κογχυλευτική 'trade of murex fishing' (Just.).
•ETYM The word κόγχος is compared with the similar Skt. śaṅkhá- [m.] 'mussel', but a common pre-form cannot be reconstructed. Latin borrowed concha, conchȳlium, conchīta from κόγχη, κογχύλιον, κογχίτης. The word is clearly cognate with κόχλος, which suggests that the forms are Pre-Greek (prenasalization); this is confirmed by thevariants κοκάλια, v.ll. -κκ- and κωκάλια (Arist. HA, see Fur.: 131). Alternatively, if the comparison with Sanskrit is correct, the word may be a common loanword (Fur.: 278). See ► κόχλος.

κόδαλα [?] · ἰχθῦς, κεστρεύς 'fish, mullet' (H.). ◂PG?▸

•VAR κοδαλεύεσθαι· ἔνδον διατρίβειν 'to waste away inside', κοδαλαύομαι· ἐνδομυχῶ 'to lie hidden', κοδαλευομένη· ἀρεσκευομένη, ἀπραγοῦσα 'obsequious, subservient; remaining quiet' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Perhaps Pre-Greek.

κοδομεύς [m.] 'one who roasts barley' (Poll., H.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Special feminine forms κοδομή and -μεύτρια (also Phot. and Suid.). Remarks on the relation between these words in Boßhardt 1942: 84.
•DER κοδομεύω [v.] 'to roast barley', κοδομεία and κοδομεῖον 'pot for barley' (Poll., H.).
•ETYM Comparison with the Slavic word for 'smoke', e.g. OCS kaditi, cannot be upheld. A similar meaning is found in κίδναι· αἱ ἐγχώριοι πεφρυγμέναι κριθαί 'barley roasted on the countryside' (H.), but this has a different vowel. Probably Pre-Greek.

κοδύμαλον ⇒ κυδώνια.

κοδώνεα · σῦκα χειμερινά 'winter fruits' (H.). ⇒ κυδώνια.

κοέω [v.] 'to remark, learn, hear' (Anacr. 4, 14, Hellad. apud Phot.). ◂IE *(s)keuh₁- 'note, see, hear'▸ •VAR Probably also in H. [cod. κοθεῖ].
•DER Also κοάω, in κοᾷ· ἀκούει, πεύθεται 'hears, takes notice'; ἐκοᾶμες· ἠκούσαμεν, ἐπυθόμεθα; ἐκοάθη· ἐπενοήθη, ἐφωράθη 'was contrived, discovered'; κοᾶσαι· αἰσθέσθαι 'perceive' (H.); ἐκόησεν (Call. Fr. 53). A primary verb seems to be found in ἔκομεν· εἴδομεν, ἑωρῶμεν, ᾐσθόμεθα 'saw, watched, perceived' (H.), see below. Verbal adjective in ► ἀνακῶς. Λαο-κόων, εὐρυ-κόωσα 'who learns from afar' (Euph. 112, H.), etc. (cf. Bechtel 1917a: 37f.).
•ETYM On κοίης, etc., see ► κοῖον. The form κο(ϝ)έω is identical in origin with Lat. caveō 'beware', which derives from covēre* < PIE kouh₁-éie-* by Thurneysen-Havet's unrounding of ou̯ in pretonic position; see now Vine KZ 119 (2006) on Thurneysen-Havet. A zero-grade primary formation is seen in Skt. ā-kúvate 'to have in view'; further forms in LIV² s.v. *(s)keuh₁- 'wahrnehmen, schauen'. The gloss ἀκεύει· τηρεῖ (H.) rather belongs to ► ἀκούω; ἔκομεν is unclear, on which see Schwyzer: 721[10] and 740. Additionally, there was (s)keuh₁- with s-mobile; see ► θυοσκόος.

κόθορνος [m.] 'high boot, footware with high base for actors, tragic cothurn' (Hdt., Ar.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Lydian, acc. to Jonkees JHS 60 (1940): 80, but more probably Pre-Greek.

κόθουρος [adj.] epithet of κηφήν or the drone, 'without sting' (Hes. Op. 304). ◂?▸
•VAR κόθουριν (cod. -οῦ-)· ἀλώπεκα 'fox' (H.).
•ETYM The formation recalls κόλουρος, fem. -ρις 'with cut (short) tail', said of the fox, etc., which is a compound of κόλος and οὐρά. Frisk connects κόθουρος "ohne Zweifel" with κοθώ· βλάβη 'damage' (H.), which is further unclear. In H., we also find κορθώ· βλάβη, which led to the assumption that κόθουρος stands for *κορθ-ουρος, and that κοθώ was back-formed from κόθουρος. Comparison of this κορθώ with Skt. kr̥dhú- 'shortened, mutilated, invalid' is formally impossible (krdʰ-u-* would have given κραθ-υ- in Greek). Fur.: 198 connects κοντός, κονδός with a similar meaning (s.v. ► κεντέω).

κοΐ interjection, imitating the sound of young pigs (Ar. Ach., Hdn. Gr.). ◄ONOM► •DER κοΐζειν [v.] 'to squeak' (Ar. Ach.).
•ETYM Like MoE squeak, Ru. kvičát' 'id.', and other sound-imitations in various languages. Cf. ► κοάξ and ► γρῦ, γρύζω.

κοιακτήρ mystery servant in Sparta. ⇒ κοῖον.

κοικύλλω [v.] 'to gape about' (Ar. Th. 852). ◄?►
•DER Κοικυλίων PN (Ael.).
•ETYM Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 96 suggested relation to ► κύλα 'bags under the eyes, eye socket'. Cf. the synonyms δενδίλλω, δανδαίνω, παπταίνω, etc., which are of similar formation. Tichy 1983: 298 corrects the meaning to 'im Selbstgespräch die Lippen bewegen, munkeln'. This would mean that the connection with κύλα is folk-etymological.

κοῖλος [adj.] 'hollow, hollowed out, spacious, deep' (Il.). ◄IE? *$\acute{k}$euH- 'hollow'► •VAR κόϊλος, see below.
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. κοιλο-γάστωρ 'with an empty stomach, greedy' (A.); on the formation see Sommer 1948: 150.
•DER A. Substantives: 1. κοιλία [f.] 'abdomen, belly, body cavity in general' (IA), κοιλιώδης 'like a belly' (Arist.), κοιλιακός 'belonging to the belly, suffering from diseases of the belly' (Plu., medic.), κοιλιτική (νόσος) 'disease of the belly' (Cat. Cod. Astr.); diminutive κοιλίδιον (Str.). 2. κοιλάς [f.] 'hollow, ravine' (Hell.), adjectival 'hollow' (Tryph. Ep.). 3. κοιλότης 'hollow' (Arist.). 4. κοιλίσκος [m.] 'hollow, scoop-shaped knife' (medic.), cf. γραφίσκος and other names of instruments in Chantraine 1933: 408. 5. κοίλωμα (Arist., Hell.), κοίλωσις (Hp.) 'hollowing, deepening', cf. κοιλόομαι below.
B. Adjectives (to τὸ κοῖλον 'hollow, cavity'): 1. κοιλώδης 'rich in cavities' (Babr.). 2. κοιλαῖος = κοῖλος (Gal.).
C. Verbs: 1. κοιλαίνω 'to hollow out, excavate' (IA), aor. κοιλᾶναι (-ῆναι), perf. κεκοίλασμαι, whence κοίλανσις (Alex. Aphr.), κοίλασμα (LXX, Hero), κοιλασία (Hero) 'excavation, etc.'. 2. κοιλόομαι, only in κεκοιλωμένος 'hollowed' (D. S., Dsc.); also κοίλωμα, κοίλωσις (if not directly from κοῖλος, see above).
•ETYM κόϊλος can be or must be trisyllabic at all Homeric attestations, except verse-initially at χ 385. The basic form *κόϝιλος is probably a derivative in -λο- from the root found in κόοι· τὰ χάσματα τῆς γῆς, καὶ τὰ κοιλώματα 'the depths of the earth, cavities' (H.) and Lat. cavus 'hollow' < *$\acute{k}$ouHo-, MIr. cúa 'hollow', and other Celtic forms. Other cognate derivatives in -l- are Arm. soyl 'cavity' < IE *$\acute{k}$eu-lo- (vel sim.), PGm. *hula- < *$\acute{k}$uH-ló- (with pretonic shortening), found in ON holr, OE, OFri., OS, OHG hol 'hollow' (G. Kroonen p.c.). The root is reconstructed with a laryngeal, because this is required by the cognate formation ► κύαρ 'eye of a needle, orifice in the ear' < *$\acute{k}$uH-r. Alb. thellë 'deep' may, like Greek, derive from a pre-form *kowilo-

(thus first Pedersen KZ 36 (1900): 332), but could be a loan from Greek. The word ► κύλα is probably not connected. See ► κῶος.

κοῖλυ [n.sg.] · τὸ καλόν 'sth. good or beautiful' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Connected with a word for 'whole, unhurt, healthy' with representatives in Germanic and Balto-Slavic, e.g. Go. hails, OCS cělъ 'whole', OPr. kailūstikan [acc.sg.] 'health' < PIE *keh$_2$i-lo- or European substrate *kailo-. Frisk and DELG rightfully doubt the appurtenance of the Greek gloss, since the definition is open to many interpretations (does it stand for κοῖλον, with Latte?).

κοιμάω 'to lay to rest'. •VAR κοιμίζω. ⇒ κεῖμαι.

κοινά · χόρτος 'pasture, fodder' (H.). ◄IE? *$\acute{k}$oino- 'grass, hay'► •ETYM The gloss corresponds nicely to a Balto-Slavic word for 'hay': Lith. šiēnas, OCS sěno 'χόρτος'. However, Latte supposes that χόρτος should be taken in the sense of 'common ground'; in that case, it is simply a form of ► κοινός.

κοινός [adj.] 'common, public, usual, impartial', τὸ κοινόν 'the community, common good, public, leading authority, league' (IA, Hes.); Hom. has ξυνός. ◄IE *kom 'with'► •COMP Numerous compounds.
•DER 1. *κοινᾱ́ων (see Chantraine 1933: 163) > Dor. Arc. κοινάν, -ᾶνος [m.] (Pi., Locris, Tegea), Att. κοινεών, -ῶνος [m.] (E. HF 149, 340), κοινών, -ῶνος [m.] (X. Cyr.) 'fellow traveler, companion', after κοινωνέω, etc.; thence Dor. κοινανέω (Dor. treaty apud Th. 5, 79, 1; Argos, Delphi), Att. κοινωνέω [v.] 'to be a participant, participate' (for *κοινεωνέω), κοινανία (Pi.), Att. κοινωνία 'community, share', κοινωνός 'companion, etc.' (probably a back-formation, see Leumann 1950: 224); thence κοινανικός (Archyt.), κοινωνικός (Att.) 'common, social'; κοινωνιμαῖος 'regarding the community' (pap.; Chantraine 1933: 49); from κοινωνέω also κοινώνημα (Pl., Arist.). Further nominal derivations: 2. κοινότης [f.] 'community, affability' (Att., Hell.); 3. κοινεῖον 'public hall, community, etc.' (inscr.); 4. κοινάριον diminutive of κοινόν (written cynarium CIL 13, 10021, 199). Denominative verb κοινόω, -όομαι 'to make communal, share', also 'to make profane', med. 'to act as member of a community, participate, ask for advice' (IA), aor. κοινᾶσαι (Pi.), κοίνωμα, -μάτιον 'joint, band' (Ph. Bel.), κοίνωσις 'intercourse' (Plu.).
•ETYM The word κοινός may be related to the preposition and prefix found in Lat. cum, com- (con-), Gaul. com- 'with, together with', Gm. ga-, from IE *kom 'together, with'. We have to assume that an adjective *kom-ió- > *koni̯ó- was formed (see Rix 1976: 67).

κόϊξ, -ϊκος [m.] a kind of palm, 'Hyphaene thebaica', and a basket made from its leaves (com., Thphr.). ◄PG?, LW Eg.?►
•VAR κόϊς (Epich., BGU 972, 5).
•DER κοΐκινος 'made of κ.' (Str.).
•ETYM Fraenkel Phil. 97 (1948): 170 thought that σκοίκιον 'vessel, receptacle' (Cyrene, Hell. pap.) was derived from this word, but it is improbable that the σ- was taken from σκεῦος or σπυρίς. This interchange σ/zero rather points to Pre-Greek origin. A by-form is ► κοῦκι [n.] (pap., Plin.), which may point to Egyptian origin, see Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 214.

κοῖον [?] κώϊον· ἐνέχυρον 'pledge' (H.). ◄LW?, PG?►
•VAR Also κοῦα, κῶα· ἐνέχυρα (H.).
•DER κοιάζει· ἐνεχυράζει 'takes a pledge from', κουάσαι· ἐνεχυριάσαι, κωάζειν· ἐνεχυράζειν, κωαθείς· ἐνεχυριασθείς (H.). As an agent noun κο(ι)ακτήρ, name of a mystery servant in Sparta (IG 5(1), 210ff.), meaning ἐνεχυρασ-τής (Fraenkel 1910: 158 after Meister)? Alternative explanations in Bourguet 1927: 112f.
•ETYM von Blumenthal 1930: 41 analyzed it as *κόϝ-ιον, related to κοέω 'to remark, pay attention', with the same semantic development as in Lat. caveō, from 'to regard, take care of' to 'to serve as a surety'. He also connects κοίης, κόης· ἱερεὺς Καβείρων, ὁ καθαίρων φονέα 'priest of the Kabeiroi, who purifies a murderer' (H.) with κοιόλης· ὁ ἱερεύς (H., Suid.), κοιᾶται· ἱερᾶται, κοιώσατο· ἀφιερώσατο, καθιερώσατο (H.). However, cf. also Lyd. kaveś (Masson Jb. f. kleinas. Forsch. 1 (1950-51): 182ff.). DELG tentatively adds κωταρχής 'priest' (Didyma). Even more uncertain is κοῖος = ἀριθμός (Ath. 10, 455e) which is supposed to be Macedonian. The group could well be Anatolian or Pre-Greek. The hypothesis connecting Hebr. kōhēn 'priest', etc. (Lewy 1895: 258) is now abandoned.

κοίρανος [m.] 'ruler, commander, lord' (Il.). ◄IE *kor(i)o- 'war, army'► •COMP Rarely as a second member, e.g. πολυ-κοίρανος 'ruling many' (A. fr. 238, lyr.) with πολυκοιρανίη 'lordship over many' (Rhian. 1, 10) but B 204 = 'the presence of many rulers' with the first member as a subject, and the second member as a verbal noun to κοιρανέω.
•DER κοιρανίδαι [pl.] 'sons of rulers, members of the ruling house' (S. Ant. 940); κοιρανῆος and κοιρανικός 'belonging to the ruling house' (late poets); κοιρανίη 'dynasty' (D. P., APl.); κοιρανέω [v.] 'to rule' (Il.).
•ETYM Derived from a word for 'army, host of warriors' found in Go. harjis 'army', Lith. kārias 'id.', MIr. cuire [m.] 'crowd, group', Gaul. ENs Tri-, Petru-corii "consisting of three/ four tribes", from IE korio-*. The Greek word seems to have a close counterpart in ON herjann, epithet of Odin, and in the Old British EN Coriono-tōtae (see Peters 1980a: 170ff., with an attempt to clarify the derivational history of these words). It is debated whether the suffix *-no- is old in the type Lat. dominus from domus, Go. þiudans 'king' from þiuda 'people', etc. In Greek, the base form kor̯io-* still existed in proper names like Κοιρό-μαχος, Κοιρατάδας. Beside IE kor-io-, there was kor(o)- in Lith. kāras 'war', OP kāra- 'army, people'. In Greek, the old word κοίρανος was replaced by the substrate words ► ἄναξ and ► βασιλεύς.

κοκ(κ)άλια [n.pl.] 'small crustacaeans (Arist. HA 528a 9). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also κωκ-.
•ETYM On the meaning, see Thompson 1947 s.v., who points to similar Italian names like cocciole, cozzule. The word should be connected as Pre-Greek together with its variant ► κόγχη.

κόκκος [m.] 1. 'kernel of fruits, especially of the pomegranate' (h. Cer., IA), cf. Strömberg 1937: 185; 2. 'berry (gall) of the kermes oak, scarlet, kermes oak' (Thphr., Gal., Dsc.), see Michell Class. Rev. 69 (1955): 246; 3. metaph. 'pill' (medic.). ◄PG?►
•COMP κοκκο-βαφής 'painted with scarlet' (Thphr.), καλλί-κοκκος 'with beautiful kernels' (Thphr.); κοκκό-δαφνον, δαφνό-κοκκον (medic.) = κόκκος δάφνης, δαφνίς (Strömberg 1944: 7).
•DER Diminutives κοκκίον, κοκκάριον (medic.); κόκκων, -ωνος [m.] 'kernel of the pomegranate' (Sol., Hp.), 'mistletoe berry' (H.), κόκκαλος [m.] 'kernel of the stone-pine' (Hp., Gal.), see Chantraine 1933: 247; κοκκίδες [pl.] 'scarlet slippers' (Herod.), -ίδα· αἴγειρον 'black poplar' (H.); κόκκινος 'scarlet' (Herod., pap., Arr.), whence κοκκινίζω [v.] 'to be scarlet-colored' (sch.), κοκκηρός 'made of scarlet' (Edict. Diocl.), cf. οἰνηρός, ἐλαιηρός; κοκκίζω [v.] 'to take out the kernel' (A., Ar.).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. Alessio Studi etruschi 18 (1945): 126 adduces Span. cuesco 'nut' and considers a Mediterranaean loan kosko-*, from which κόκκος would also derive; this is rejected by Fur.: 293[4]. Probably Pre-Greek.

κοκρύδων ⇒ κορδύς.

κόκκῡ [interj.] cry of the cuckoo; also a cry in general (Ar.). ◄PG?, ONOM► •COMP As a first member in κοκκυ-βόας ὄρνις name of the cock (S. fr. 791; codd. Eust. κοκκο-).
•DER κοκκύζω of the cry of the cuckoo and of the cock (Hes.), κοκκυσμός 'shrill cry' (Nicom. Math.), κοκκυστής 'crier' (Timo); κόκκυξ, -ῡγος [m.] 'cuckoo' (Hes.), -υγος [nom.] (Alc.), also metaph., e.g. as a fish name (Hp., Arist.), a fig (Nic.); see Strömberg 1943: 116, Strömberg 1940: 73. From κόκκυξ: Κοκκύγιον name of a mountain (Paus.); κοκκυγία· ἀνεμώνη. Κροτωνιᾶται 'poppy anemone (Krotoniate)' (H.), "cuckooflower" acc. to Strömberg l.c.; κοκκυγέα 'Rhus cotinus', a tree (Plin.; conj. in Thphr. HP 3, 16, 6). With labial suffix the PN Κόκκυψ, Κοκκουβίας (Boeot.), cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 262f. Here perhaps also κόκκυς· λόφος (H.), if to be interpreted as 'cock's comb'.
•ETYM Cf. ► κοκκύμηλον. Onomatopoeic, like Skt. kokilá- 'cuckoo', kukkuṭá- 'cock', Lat. cucūlus, MoE cuckoo, etc. On κόκκυξ, see Thompson 1895 s.v. The word could well be Pre-Greek.

κοκκύμηλον [n.] 'plum' (Archil.). ◄PG?►
•DER κοκκυμηλέα [f.] 'plum tree' (Arar. Com., Thphr.), -μηλών [m.] 'plum garden' (gloss.).
•ETYM Connection with κόκκος as 'stone fruit' seems probable (see Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 182); the -υ- would have to be folk-etymological after κόκκυξ, but no motivation for the replacement is indicated (cf. Strömberg 1940: 73). Note κοδύμαλον (s.v. ► κυδώνια). The word could be Pre-Greek.

κοκύαι [pl.m., f.] 'forefathers' (AP, Call., H.). ◄?►
•VAR V.l. κοκκ-. Cf. κουκᾶ· πάππων 'of ancestors' (H.).
•ETYM Grošelj Razprave 2: 12 and Schmidt ad loc. compared ► γυγαί · πάπποι (H.). Cf. also Pfeiffer 1949-1953 ad Call. fr. 340.

κόκχος [?] = Lat. coculum 'a vessel for cooking' (PHamb. 12, 36). ◂LW Lat.▸ •ETYM From the Latin word, which is derived from coquō 'to cook' (DELG).

κόλαβρος [m.] name of a song which accompanied the dance κολαβρισμός (Ath.), = χοιρίδιον 'little pig' (H. [cod. κοιλίδιον], Suid.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR καλαβρισμός (v.l. codd. Ath. 14, 629d). Cf. κολόβριον 'little pig' (Ar. Byz. apud Eust. 1817, 19), Fur.: 343.
•DER κολαβρίζειν· σκιρτᾶν 'to leap, bound' (H.), pass. 'to be derided' (LXX), κολαβρισμός (Ath., Poll.); κολαβρευομένη· κώλοις ἀλλομένη 'twitching with the limbs' (H.). See Lawler and Kober Class. Phil. 40 (1945): 98ff. with hypotheses on the etymology.
•ETYM Poll. 4, 100 calls the dance Thracian or Carian, so the word is probably foreign. Cf. Suid. κολαβρισθείη· χλευασθείη, ἐκτιναχθείη, ἀτιμασθείη· κόλαβρος γὰρ ὁ μικρὸς χοῖρος 'was mocked, kicked out, dishonored; for a κ. is a small pig'. Fur.: 343 compares κολόβριον 'little pig' (Ar. Byz. apud Eust. 1817, 19), which means that the word is Pre-Greek. For the dance, he compares καλλαβίς 'a passionate dance'; note the v.l. καλαβρισμός (codd. Ath.).

κολάζω 'to chastize, punish'. ⇒ κόλος.

κόλαξ, -ᾶκος [m.] 'flatterer, fawner' (Att., Hell.). ◂PG(S)▸ •COMP Often as a second member (com.), e.g. κνισο-κόλαξ; see Risch IF 59 (1949): 277.
•DER κολακεία (Democr., Pl.), κολακίς [f.] (Clearch., Plu.), κολακικός 'flattering' (Pl.) and κολακεύω 'to flatter' (Att. Hell.); κολάκευμα (X.) 'flattering', κολακευτικός 'id.' (Pl.), κολακευτής = κόλαξ (gloss.).
•ETYM A word from Attic everyday language without established etymology. As the suffix -ακ- originates from Pre-Greek, the same probably holds for this word.

κολάπτω [v.] 'to peck (of birds), strike, carve, engrave' (IA, Aeol.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Aor. κολάψαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἐν-, ἐκ-.
•DER ἐγ-κόλαψις 'inscription', ἐκ- 'obliteration' (inscr., Arist.), ἐγ-κόλαμμα 'inscription' (LXX, Priene), (ἐγ-)κολαπτός 'carved out' (inscr., LXX); κολαπτήρ [m.] 'chisel' with δια-κολαπτηρίζω 'to engrave with a chisel' (Lebadeia); also δρυ(ο)-κολάπτ-[τ]ης 'woodpecker' (Ar., Arist.; see further ► δρῦς), a compound of δόρυ and κολάπτειν with suffixal -της, similar κρᾶνο-κολάπτης name of a venomous spider (Philum.).
•ETYM Frisk and DELG assume that κολάπτω derives from an IE root $*kelh_2$-, and that it replaces a primary verb by adding -άπτω after verbs with similar meaning, like σκάπτω, δαρδάπτω, κόπτω; the resultant form perhaps replaced a primary verb preserved in Lith. kálti, 1sg. kalù 'to forge, hammer', OCS klati, kolję 'σφάττειν', Ru. kolót' 'sting, split, chop'. Several other Greek words have been connected with this root; see discussion on ► κόλος, ► κελεός, ► κλάω. Cf. LIV[2] s.v. $*kelh_2$-. However, as long as the origin of the labial enlargement is not further clarified, it is best to assume that κολάπτω is derived from ► κόλαφος and, therefore, of Pre-Greek origin.

κόλαφος [m.] 'punch, buffet' (Epich. 1 as a name of a παιδοτρίβης, H., EM). ◂PG▸ •VAR κόλαφος· κόνδυλος 'knuckle' (H.).
•DER κολαφίζω 'to punch, to box on the ear' (NT, Sammelb. 6263, 23); Κολαφίδιον Att. woman's name, see Fraenkel 1912: 86[3]).
•ETYM A lowly word without clear etymology. For the formation, it has been compared to ► κρόταφος (Chantraine 1933: 264). Frisk and DELG argued that κόλαφος derives from ► κολάπτω as a back-formation, if the two are cognate, but it remains unclear why they do not consider κόλαφος as basic. The word is no doubt Pre-Greek, with κολάπτω as the accompanying denominative. Latin borrowed the word as colap(h)us (Plaut.); see Ernout RPh. 77 (1951): 155f. It received a wide distribution in Vulgar Latin and in the Romance languages (VLat. colpus, Ital. colpo, MoFr. coup, etc.); it perhaps also appears in Go. kaupatjan 'κολαφίζειν'.

κολέα [f.] · ποιά τις ὄρχησις 'kind of dance' (H.). ◂PG?(S)▸ •VAR κολία· ὀρχήσεως εἶδος 'id.' (H.).
•DER κολιάσαι· ὀρχήσασθαι 'to dance' (H.), ipf. ἐκολίαζε (IG 12 Supp. 244; cf. Latte Glotta 32 (1953): 39f.).
•ETYM The variant in -έα suggests Pre-Greek origin.

κολεκάνοι [m.pl.] · τοῦτο ἐπὶ μήκους σὺν λεπτότητι ἐτάσσετο 'used in the case of length combined with thinness' (H., citing Strat. 64). ◂PG?▸
•VAR κολοκάνοι· εὐμηκεῖς καὶ λεπτοί 'tall and thin, narrow' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown; probably Pre-Greek.

κολεόν [n.] 'sheath of a sword' (Il.), see Trümpy 1950: 62. ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also -ός [m.], lengthened κουλ-.
•COMP Also in compounds, e.g. κολεό-πτερος 'sheath-winged (of beetles)' (Arist.), σιδηρο-κόλεος 'with iron sheath' (pap. III[a]).
•DER Denominative κολεάζοντες· ὠθοῦντες εἰς κολεόν, περαίνοντες 'thrusting into the sheath, penetrating' (H.) (likewise Ath. Mitt. 59, 66; Syrus V[a]), κολεασμός· τὸ περαίνεσθαι 'penetration' (H.). It is unlikely that κόλυθροι [pl.] 'testicles' (Arist.) belongs here too; κόλυθρον, -τρον also means 'with ripe figs' (Ath. 3, 76f.); cf. on ► σκόλυθρον.
•ETYM The suffix recalls ► εἰλεός 'hole, den, etc.'. Acc. to Meillet BSL 30 (1930): 115[1], κολεόν comes from a Mediterranean language, like Lat. culleus 'leather sack'; cf. WH s.v. Therefore, it is probably Pre-Greek. Connection with ► καλύπτω, ► κέλυφος as an inherited word (*κολεϝόν) is formally impossible; these too are substrate words.

κολετράω [v.] 'to trample on' (Ar. Nu. 552). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM Acc. to H., a term from oil preparation: ἀπὸ τῶν τὰς ἐλαίας πατούντων, ὅ δὴ λέγουσι κολετρᾶν 'after those treading olives, which is called κ.'. This presupposes a substantive *κόλετρον or *κολέτρα, which could be an instrument noun or nomen loci, but the meaning of which remains unknown. Connection with κόλος, κολάπτω, etc. does not help much. Probably a technical Pre-Greek term.

κολίας [m.] name of a mackerel-like fish, 'Scomber colias' (Epich., Ar., Arist.). ◂?▸

•DER Diminutive κολίδιον (medic.).
•ETYM Formation like ἀκανθίας, ξιφίας, and other fish and animal names (Chantraine 1933: 94); further unexplained. Cf. Thompson 1947 s.v.

κόλλᾰ [f.] 'glue' (Emp., Hdt., Hp., E.). ◂PG?, IE? kol-* 'glue'▸ •COMP As a first member e.g. in κολλ-εψός 'glue-boiler' (Att. inscr., Poll.); as a second member in ταυρό-, ἰχθυό-κολλα 'bull-, fish-glue' (Plb., Dsc.); but ποτί-, σύγ-κολλος, etc. (Pi., A.) are back-formations to ποτι-, συγ-κολλάω, etc.
•DER κολλήεντα [n.pl.] (O 389 ξυστά, Hes. Sc. 309 ἅρματα) 'well-fixed', cf. κολλητός below; κολλώδης 'gluey, sticky' (Pl., Arist.). Denominative verb κολλάω 'to glue, stick together, make one, unite' (Pi., Emp., IA), often with prefixes like συν-, προσ-, ἐν-, κατα-; κόλλημα 'what is glued together, etc.', plur. 'papyrus leaves that form a scroll', κόλλησις 'glueing together, soldering' (IA) with (συγ-)κολλήσιμος, -ον 'glued together' (pap.); (συγ-)κολλητής 'who glues together' (Ar., pap.); κολλητήριον 'glue' (Ph. Bel.); κόλλητρα [pl.] 'cost of soldering' (pap.); κολλητός 'glued together, well-fixed' (Il.), Ammann 1956: 16, κολλητικός (Dor. -ᾱτ-) 'gluey, gluing together' (Arist., Epid., pap.), κολλητικὰ ἔργα 'plumber's work' (pap.). As a second member in the back-formation πρωτό-κολλον [n.] 'the first fixed (glued) leaf of a papyrus scroll' (Just.). Rarely ἐπι-κολλαίνω 'to stick to' (Thphr.), κολλίζω (Gp.), κολλιστής (gloss.).
•ETYM κόλλᾱ may be a derivation in -i̯a from a root kol-*, but further details are obscure. The similarity with a Slavic word for 'glue' (e.g. CS klějь, klejь, Ru. klej < PSl. klějь*; klьjь*) is only apparent (there is no evidence for kъlějь*, kъlьjь* with reduced vowel). The Germanic verb MDu. and MLG helen 'stick' < PGm. haljan* is limited to a small area, and is hard to connect with κόλλα. Because of the geminate -λλ-, the Greek word could be Pre-Greek in origin, i.e. kolʸa*. It was taken over by Romance, e.g. Ital. colla, MoFr. colle, etc. See ►γλοιός.

κόλλαβος [m.] a kind of bread or cake (Ar., Philyll.); also = κόλλοψ (Luc., Iamb., H.). ◂PG▸ •DER κολλαβίζω "to play κόλλαβος", i.e. one holds his eyes, while the other strikes him, and asks him to guess by which hand he has been struck (Poll. 9, 129); the naming motive is obscure.
•ETYM Popular word in -βος (Schwyzer: 496, Chantraine 1933: 261f.) and, like so many words of the same formation, without etymology. Could the word originally mean 'buffet'? See ►κόλλοψ. Cf. further ►κόλλιξ and ►κολλύρα. The word is no doubt Pre-Greek; cf. also Guilleux RPh. 75 (2001) s.v.

κόλλιξ, -ῑκος [m.] 'round, coarse bread' (Hippon., com.), 'tablet' (medic.). ◂PG▸ •COMP κολλικο-φάγος (Ar.).
•DER κολλίκιος ἄρτος (Ath.), κολλίκιον (Greg. Cor.).
•ETYM The word is no doubt Pre-Greek, because of the suffix -ῑκ-.

κολλόροβον ⇒ καλαῦροψ.

κόλλουρος [m.] name of an unknown fish (Marc. Sid. 22). ◂PG(S)▸ •DER κολλουρίς 'marshmallow' (gloss.).

•ETYM Strömberg 1943: 48 proposes that the word replaced *κόλ-ουρος 'with stump tail', with expressive gemination; as a marsh-plant, the mallow would have been called after the fish (ibd. 25). André RPh. 45 (1971): 216f. separates κολλουρίς from the fish and and connects it with κολλ(ο)ύρα 'small, round flat bread', given the similarity of the fruit of the mallow with a cake. Probably Pre-Greek, given the geminate -λλ- (which is not a sign of expressiveness) and the suffix -ουρ(ος).

κόλλοψ, -οπος [m.] 'peg or screw by which the strings of the lyre were tightened' (φ 407, Ar., Pl., Luc.); 'thick skin on the upper part of the neck of oxen or pigs' (Ar. fr. 646 and 506, 3); 'bar by which a windlass was turned' (Arist. Mech. 852b 12); metaph. 'ἀνδρόγυνος, cinaedus' (Hell. com., AP). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •VAR Also κόλλαβος (in the first mg.).
•COMP κολλοπο-διώκτης (sch. Ar. Nu. 347, Eust., Suid.).
•DER κολλοπεύω 'to be a κόλλοψ' (Pl. Com.); other denominatives: κολλοπίζειν· καθέλκειν 'to draw. or carry down' and κολλοπῶσαι· κατακολλῆσαι 'to glue upon' (H.), with folk-etymological connection with ►κόλλα.
•ETYM A technical term, which was analyzed by H. as διὰ τὸ εἰς κόλλαν εὐθετεῖν (referring to the thick part of the neck of animals). Others have proposed relation to Lat. callum 'thick skin, callosity'; Bq suggested to connect it with ►σκόλοψ 'pole'. The word is clearly Pre-Greek because of its suffix; this is further confirmed if κόλλαβος is a variant (-οπ-/ -απ-/ -αβ- is a Pre-Greek suffix variation).

κόλλυβος 1 [m.] 'small change' (Ar., Eup., Call.), 'small gold weight' (Thphr.); 'rate of exchange' (Hell., inscr., pap., Cic.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Also -ον [n.] (Poll. 9, 72).
•DER κολλυβιστής 'money changer' (Men., NT, pap.), from *κολλυβίζω; κολλυβιστικός and κολλυβιστήριον 'exchange office' (pap. and ostr.).
•ETYM Explained as Semitic by Lewy 1895: 119f., who compared Hebr. ḥālap 'exchange'. However, the element -υβ- (which cannot be explained from the Hebr. word) rather points to a Pre-Greek word.

κολλῡ́ρα mg. uncertain, probably 'cake, tablet' (Ar., Thphr., LXX, pap.), cf. κόλλιξ and κόλλαβος. ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Also κολλούρα.
•DER Diminutives κολλυρίς and κολλύριον (-ού-) (LXX, pap.); κολλύριον (-ού-) usually 'eyesalve, salve in general', in the form of a tablet (Apoc., Arr., medic., inscr. and pap.); κολλυρικός 'made from κολλῦραι' (Plaut. Pers. 95), κολλυρίζω 'to bake κ.' (LXX), κολλυριόομαι in κεκολλυριωμένον (cod. -ρόμενον)· λευκῷ κεχρισμένον 'anointed with white' (H.); κολλυρίων [m.] name of a bird, probably 'thrush' (Arist.); also κορυλλίων (H.), naming motive unknown (cf. Thompson 1895 s.v.).
•ETYM Like other words in -ῡρα (ἄγκῡρα, γέφυρα, λέπῦρον), probably Pre-Greek (see Pre-Greek: suffixes). If the variation υ/ ου is old, this also points to Pre-Greek origin.

κολοβάφινος •VAR χολοβάφινος. ⇒ χολή.

κολοβός [adj.] 'curtailed, maimed, short' (Pl., X., Arist., Hell.). ◂PG(S)▸

•COMP As a first member e.g. in κολοβό-κερκος 'with docked tail' (LXX).
•DER κολόβιον [n.] 'jacket without sleeves' (pap.), also κολόβαξ (gloss.); κολοβώδης 'stunted, stumpy' (Polem. Phgn. [v.l.]), κολοβότης 'stuntedness' (Plu.). Denominative verbs: 1. κολοβόω 'to stunt, shorten', κολόβωσις 'mutilation', κολόβωμα 'maimed, amputated member' (Arist.); 2. κολοβίζω 'id.' (Thera I[a]-I[p]).
•ETYM An enlargement of κόλος 'id.'; see also on ►κλαμβός. Since the suffix -(ο)βο- cannot be explained in IE terms, the word is probably Pre-Greek.

κολοιός [m.] 'jackdaw, Corvus monedula' (Il., Pi., Ar., Arist.). ◄PG(V)► •DER κολοιώδης (Plu.), κολοιάω (Poll. 5, 89), -ῳάω (B 212) 'to cry (like a jackdaw)', κολῳέω 'id.' (Antim. 37); back-formation κολῳός 'screeching' (A 575, A. R. 1, 1284), κολοιή· φωνή 'voice' (H.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic origin cannot be further substantiated; neither does the word belong to καλέω. It would be highly unsatisfactory to separate κολῳάω, -ῳός from κολοιάω, -οιός, but an explanation of the notation with -ῳ- (in ἐκολῴα B 212) has not been found (cf. the hypotheses in Frisk and DELG). Cf. also κολουᾶν· θορυβεῖν 'to make noise' (H.). These variants may be of Pre-Greek origin. See ►κολοίφρυξ.

κολοιτία [f.] tree that grew on the Liparian islands 'Cytisus aeolicus', also 'sallow, Salix cinerea' (Thphr.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also κολουτέα, κολυτέα [f.] 'Colutea arborescens' (Thphr.), whence Lat. colūtea [n.pl.] 'its fruits'; in H. also κολοιτέα, κολωτέα, κοιλωτέα· δένδρον τι 'a tree'.
•ETYM Clearly a Pre-Greek word, given the variation. Cf. on ►κολοκύνθη.

κολοίφρυξ [?] · Ταναγραῖος ἀλεκτρυών. καὶ ὄρος Βοιωτίας 'Tanagrian cock; mountain in Boeotia' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM The second element is not in any way related to φάρυξ. Probably Pre-Greek.

κολόκυμα [n.] 'large heavy wall' before it breaks, said of the threats of Cleon, only (Ar. Eq. 692). ◄?► •ETYM Explained in various ways since antiquity: κόλον κῦμα 'blunt wave' (sch. ad loc.); τυφλὸν or μακρὸν κῦμα 'blind or high wave' (H.); κωφὸν κῦμα καὶ μὴ ἐπικαχλάζον 'silent wave, not gurgling' (Suid.). See the suggestion by Taillardat 1962: §343 in DELG s.v.

κολοκύνθη [f.] 'round gourd, Lagenaria vulgaris' (Hp., com., Arist., pap.). ◄PG(S)► •VAR Att. -τη, later -υνθᾰ, -υντᾰ (Solmsen 1909: 263), late also -υνθος (-υντος, -ιντος) [m.].
•COMP κολοκυνθαρύταινα [f.] 'spoon from κ.' (pap.).
•DER Diminutives κολοκύντιον (Phryn. Com.), -υνθίς 'κολόκυνθα ἀγρία' (Dsc., Gal.), -ύνθινος (-ύντινος, -ίνθινος) 'made with κ.' (pap., Luc.), -υνθιάς [f.] 'id.' (AP), -ών 'plantation of κ.' (pap.); ἀποκολοκύντωσις 'transformation into a pumpkin' (Seneca, D. C. 60, 35). Κολοκυνθώ [f.] PN; see Schulze 1933a: 309f.
•ETYM The suffix -υνθος, -ινθος, frequent in plant names, points to Pre-Greek origin. Cf. also κύκυον· τὸν σικυόν, κυκύϊζα· γλυκεῖα κολόκυντα 'sweet gourd' (H.). An informant in Ath. 2, 58f. says that it was introduced from India, but the comparison with Skt. kālinda- [n.] 'watermelon' and Kurd. kalak 'melon' is not very informative. On the names of the gourd and cucumber, see Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 652ff.

κόλον [n.] 'large intestine, ileum' (Ar. Eq. 455, Arist., Nic., Poll.); name of food preserved in a pot (PSI 5, 535, 39; 46, III[a]), acc. to Ath. 6, 262a = ἡ τροφή 'food'. ◄?►
•ETYM No convincing explanation. Bq hesitantly pointed to κυλλός 'curbed', κελλόν· στρεβλόν 'twisted' (H.); others have connected it with ►καλίδια · ἔντερα. Κύπριοι 'entrails (Cypr.)' (H.). Late Greek had the form κῶλον, influenced by κῶλον 'member'. Fur.: 131 connects χοάς 'intestines', and further χόλικες, γόλα· ἔντερα. Μακεδόνες (γόδα codd.), γάλλια· ἔντερα, γάλλος = χόλιξ; none of these is really convincing.

κόλος [adj.] 'hornless, with stunted horns', of cows and goats (Hdt., Theoc., Nic., H.), of a spear 'without point' (Π 117), of battle 'broken off' (sch.), as a name of book Θ. ◄PG?►
•COMP As a first member in κόλουρος 'with short tail' (Plu.), as a mathematical and astronomical term 'blunt' (Hipparch. Astr., Hero, Nicom.); κολουραῖος 'broken off, steep' (of πέτρα, Call.), κολούρα 'hill, etc.' (Hermione, Epid.), κολουρίᾳ· τῇ ἀποτομίᾳ 'in a piece?', κολουρῖτις· γῆ. Σικελοί 'earth (Sicilian)' (H.), κολούρωσις = κολόβωσις (Iamb.); Lat. LW clūra '(kind of) monkey' (WH s.v., Leumann Sprache 1 (1949): 206[8]).
•DER κόλ-ερος 'with short-sheared fleece' (Arist.), opposed to εὔ-, ἔπ-ερος, perhaps after κόλουρος; see on ►εἶρος; further κολόχειρ· χείραργος (H.). Derived from κόλος or closely related are two verbs: 1. κολάζω 'to wring in, chastise, punish, cut' (IA), aor. κολάσαι, rarely with συν-, ἀντι-, προ-; thence probably denominative κόλασις 'chastisement' (IA), -ασμα (Ar., X.), -ασμός (Plu.) 'id.'; κολαστής 'punisher' (trag., Pl., Lys.), also κολαστήρ 'id.' (Arr.), fem. κολάστρια (Ezek.), κολάστειρα (AP); κολαστήριον 'punishment', -ος [adj.] 'punishing' (X., Ph.), κολαστικός 'punishing' (Pl.). 2. κολούω 'to mutilate, limit' (Il.), aor. κολοῦσαι, sometimes with περι-, κατα-, ἀπο-; formation unclear (cf. Schwyzer: 683, Chantraine 1942: 374 and see on ►κωλύω). From it κόλουσις 'docking, cutting short' (Arist.), κολούσματα· κλάσματα 'fragments' (H.).
•ETYM The archaic word κόλος was replaced by κολοβός, and also by κόλουρος. It is usually taken as a verbal noun from a Balto-Slavic primary verb: Lith. kálti, 1sg. kalù 'to beat, forge', OCS klati, 1sg. koljǫ 'to butcher'. In Greek, the root may have left some traces in ►κλάω, but see s.v. In any case, connection with ►κελεός and ►κολάπτω is improbable. The barytone accent may be connected with the passive meaning (Schwyzer: 459); perhaps κόλος was originally a substantive. The fact that κολάπτω and ►κολούω are of unclear formation might point to a Pre-Greek complex.

κολοσσός [m.] 'gigantic statue, colossus' (Hdt. [only about Egypt], Hell.), also 'statue' in general (A., Hell.), 'figure, puppet representing someone absent' (Cyrene, SEG IX, 72, 117 and 122), cf. Buck 1955: 112. ◄PG► •VAR -ττ- (D. S.), -σ- [f.] (Cyrene).
•COMP As a first member e.g. in κολοσσο-ποιός (Hero).

•DER κολοσσιαῖος (D. S. [-ττ-], Ph., pap.), -ικός (D. S. [-ττ-], Str., Plu.) 'having the size of a κ., colossal'.
•ETYM Ample discussion of the word by Benveniste RPh. 58 (1929): 118ff. The element -σσ- typically points to Pre-Greek origin: it could represent PG $*t^y$ or $*k^y$, like in ►θάλασσα. Bq compared ►κολεκάνοι (also -οκ-) 'tall, meager man' (Stratt., H.), which is possible if we start from $*kolok^y$- / $*kolok^y$-n-, with depalatalization before the nasal.

κολοσυρτός [m.] 'noisy rabble, tumult, uproar' (Il., Hes., Ar.). ◂?▸
•DER κολοσυρτεῖ· θορυβεῖ, ταράσσει 'makes troubles, agitates' (H.).
•ETYM Frequently analyzed as κολο-συρ-τός (cf. κονιορτός, ἁμαξιτός, βουλυτός for this use of the suffix -τό-), of which the second member would be from ►σύρω 'to draw, sweep' (Suid. s.v.), and the first member remain unexplained.

κολούλια [n.pl.] 'gastropod mollusks' (Xenocr. apud Orob. 2, 58, 79). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also in Lat. coluthia (Plin. NH 32, 84, 147).
•ETYM Unknown.

κολούω ⇒κόλος.

κολοφών, -ῶνος [m.] 'summit, top, pinnacle', only metaph. (Pl., com. Adesp., Str.), acc. to H. also = κολιός 'green woodpecker' (i.e. ►κελεός; s.v.) and ἰχθῦς θαλάσσιος 'sea fish'. ◂PG▸ •DER κολοφωνέω [v.] 'to crown a work' (Steph. in Hp.). Also a TN, town in Ionia; Κολοφώνιος 'from K., inhabitant of K.'.
•ETYM A connection with κολωνός 'hill' via an analysis *κολαφών < IE $*kol\underset{\circ}{n}$-b^ho- is highly doubtful; the Anatolian toponym rather points to substrate origin. See Chantraine 1933: 162.

κόλπος [m.] 'bosom, lap, gulf, bay, vale, womb' (Il.), also 'fistulous ulcer under the skin', = κολπάριον 'id.' (medic.). ◂IE $*k^welp$- 'curve, vault',▸ $*k^wolp$-o-▸ •COMP As a second member e.g. in βαθύ-κολπος 'with folds of the garment falling down deep' (Il.).
•DER κολπώδης 'bosom-like, full of bays' (E., Plb.); κολπίας 'puffing up' (πέπλος, A. Pers. 1060), 'wind blowing from the bay', ἐγκολπίας 'id.' (Arist.); Κολπίτης [m.] old name of Phoenicia (Steph. Byz.), plur. "inhabitants of the coast", name of an uncivilized people living by the Red Sea (Philostr.), cf. below on διακολπιτεύω; κολπόομαι, -όω 'to puff up' (B., Hp.), κόλπωσις, -ωμα 'puff', -ωτός. Several prefixed forms in various functions, of which most are Hell.: ἐγ-, ἐπι-, ὑπο-κόλπιος, ἀνα-, ἐγ-, ἐπι-κολπόω, ἐγ-, κατα-, περι-κολπίζω, etc. However, note (δια-)κολπιτεύω 'to smuggle' (PTeb. 709, 9; 14 [II^a]), which hardly belongs to κόλπος 'bosom, etc.', but rather with the ethnonym Κολπῖται "inhabitants of the coast" (see above); likewise ἔλαιον κολπιτικόν (PTeb. 38, 12 and 125 [II^a]) 'smuggled oil'.
•ETYM If we connect κόλπος with MoHG wölben as a verbal noun to the primary verb preserved in ON holfinn 'vaulted', causative ON hvelfa, OHG (h)welben 'to vault', we have to assume dissimilation $*k^w$ ... p > κ ... π for Greek (see Schwyzer: 302, Lejeune 1972: §72[3]). Germanic also has a verbal noun ON hvalf, OE hwealf [f.] 'vault', which would be identical with κόλπος. The comparison of OE heofon-hwealf 'vault of heaven' with αἰθέρος κόλποι (Pi. O. 13, 88) is not compelling, as the Greek expression could be based on the image of a bosom and the Germanic on that of a vault. Vulgar Latin borrowed κόλπος as colphus > Ital. golfo, MoFr. golfe, etc.

κόλσασθαι · ἱκετεῦσαι 'to supplicate' (H.). ⇒κῶλον.

κολύβδαινα [f.] 'kind of crab' (Epich. 57). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Cf. κολύμβαινα 'id.', see on ►κόλυμβος. A typically Pre-Greek word, with interchange βδ/ β and prenasalization. There is no reason to assume influence of μολύβδαινα 'bull of lead'.

κόλυβος ⇒καλύπτω.

κόλυθροι 'testicles'. ⇒κολεόν and σκόλυθρον.

κόλυμβος [m.] 'little-grebe, Podiceps minor' (Ar.), see Thompson 1895: 158, also a back-formation of ►κολυμβάω. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Note κολυμφάω (EM 526, 2). In the same mg. κολυμβίς [f.] (Ar., Arist.), -άς [f.] 'id.' (Ath.), but more commonly of olives pickled in brine (Diph. Siph., pap.); κολύμβαινα = κολύβδαινα (Archig. apud Gal.), κολύμβατος name of a plant (Gp.), naming motive unknown, cf. Strömberg 1940: 113, and κολυμβάς name of a shrub (στοιβή) in Gal.
•DER Denominative verb κολυμβάω 'to dive, submerge, jump into the water, swim' (Att., Hell.), often with prefix, e.g. ἐκ-, κατα-, ἀνα-, δια-, κολυμβήθρα 'bathing place, pool, cistern' (Pl.), κολύμβησις 'diving' = 'pearl fishery' (Peripl. M. Rubr.), back-formation κόλυμβος = κολύμβησις (Str., Paus., Plu.) and -ήθρα (Hero); κολυμβητήρ (A.) and -ητής (Th., Pl.) 'diver' (cf. Fraenkel 1912: 14 and 17f.), κολυμβητική (τέχνη) 'art of diving' (Pl.); also κολυμβιστής (sch.); κολυμβιτεύω (= -ητεύω?) 'to throw into the water' (pap.).
•ETYM Lat. columba 'dove' is similar, but a common pre-form would make no sense. Apart from the suffix -υμβ-, the variant κολυμφάω proves that the word is Pre-Greek. The variation μβ / βδ is most easily explained from $*p^y$, the palatal feature of which was lost after prenasalization, giving μβ (cf. Fur.: 307^{117}, although ►μόλυβδος / plumbum must now be given up).

κολύμφατος [?] · φλοιός, λεπίδιον 'bark, capsule' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Referring to a part of a plant, the gloss must be identical with κολύμβατος (see ►κόλυμβος), with well-known Pre-Greek variation.

κολυτέα plant name. ⇒κολοιτέα.

κολχικόν [n.] name of a venomous type of saffron, 'Colchicum speciosum' (Dsc.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Named after its homeland, Κολχίς; see Strömberg 1940: 122.

κολώνη [f.] 'hill, height, heap of stones, mound, etc.' (Il., Pi., S.), also as a TN (town in Troas, Att. deme). ◂IE kolH-n- 'rise, height'▸ •VAR κολωνός [m.] (h. Cer., Hdt., X., A. R.).

•COMP As a second member in Καλλι-κολώνη hill near Troy (Il.), ὑψι-κόλωνος 'towering high' (Opp.).
•DER κολωνία· τάφος. Ἠλεῖοι 'funeral rite, tomb (Elean)' (H.), alphabetically misplaced, so perhaps for -ώνα (Schmidt); Κολωνέται [pl.] EN derived from the deme-name (Hyperid.).
•ETYM The forms κολών-η beside κολων-ός point to an old n-stem. This is also seen in Lith. kálnas 'mountain', Lat. collis 'hill' < kolnis*, OE hyll, MoE hill < PGm. huln-i-*. The n-stem kolH-n-, klH-n- belongs to a primary verb 'rise up', from which Lat. -cellō < -kel-nH-* forms a nasal present (see De Vaan 2008), and for which Lith. kélti, 1sg. keliù 'to lift' proves a root-final laryngeal. On the suffix -ώνη, -ωνός, see Chantraine 1933: 207f. and Schmeja IF 68 (1963): 36ff.; they probably arose by extending the vocalism of the nominative to the other cases.

κολῳός 'screeching'. ⇒ κολοιός.

κομάκτωρ, -ορος [m.] mg. uncertain (Rhinth. 9, Inscr. Magn. 217 [I^a]). ◂LW Lat.▸ •ETYM Probably from Lat. coactor 'exactor pecuniae' (Fraenkel 1912: 70f.). Not from Osc. comahtor*, as per von Blumenthal Glotta 18 (1930): 149.

κομαρίδες [acc.pl.f.] 'a fish' (Epich. 47). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

κόμαρος 1 [f., m.] 'strawberry tree, Arbutus unedo' (com., Thphr., Theoc.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Also κύμαρος (H.).
•DER κόμ(μ)αρι [n.] 'red paint from the root of the plant Comarum palustre' (PHolm., Alchim., etc.), also -ρις [f.], -ρον [n.]; cf. Lagercrantz 1913: 197f.; the i-stem reminds of κιννάβαρι(ς), etc.
•ETYM Strömberg 1940: 58 derives it from κόμη 'crown of a tree', with an added suffix -αρο-, for which he compares κίσθαρος to κισθός. However, the variant with κύμ- shows that it is a Pre-Greek word (Fur.: 362).

κομ(μ)άραι ⇒ καμ(μ)άρος.

κόμβα [f.] · κορώνη. Πολυρρήνιοι 'shearwater, crow (Polyrrhenian)' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Bechtel 1921, 2: 788 connects it with κόμβησαν· ποιὸν ἦχον ἀπετέλεσαν 'produced a certain sound' and κομβακεύεται· κόμπους λέγει 'brags, boasts' (H.). It has been compared with ►κόμπος 'loud noise, bragging' and ►βόμβος, which are sound-imitating words, but at the same time Pre-Greek variants. If the bird name ►κύμβη 3 is related, it is yet another variant.

κόμβος [m.] 'band, belt' (Anon. apud Suid.). ◂PG▸
•COMP As a first member in κομβολύτης· βαλαντιοτόμος 'cutpurse, footpad' (H.), κομβοθηλεία [f.] 'buckle' (sch.), from κόμβος θῆλυς (or θήλεια); also κομπο-θηλαία 'band, belt' (sch.) and κομπο-θήλυκα [pl.] (Hippiatr.), v.l. for πόρπακας, which were thought to be influenced by κόμπος 'boast', but see below.
•DER κομβίον = περόνη 'buckle' (Eust., Sch.), κομβώσασθαι· στολίσασθαι 'to equip, dress', κόμβωμα· στόλισμα 'garment' (H.), κομβώματα = καλλωπίσματα, etc. (Suid., H.). Better attested is the hypostasis ἐγκομβόομαι [v.] 'to bind on, put on' (Epich., Hell. Com., 1 Ep. Pet. 5, 5), whence ἐγκόμβωμα 'protecting upper garment worn by slaves' (Longus, Thd.); further ἀνακομβόομαι [v.] 'to gird on (intr.)' (Gp.).
•ETYM The old comparisons with Balto-Slavic words for 'hang', e.g. Lith. kabìnti 'to hang, hook on', kìbti 'to hang oneself, hook on', CS skoba 'fibula', Ru. skobá 'iron hook, clamp', and, within Greek, with σκαμβός 'crooked (legs)', are quite dubious. As Frisk remarks, "Das Resultat dieser Vergleiche ist offenbar eine sowohl lautlich wie begrifflich wenig befriedigende Approximation". MoNw. hempe 'string, strap, handle' can hardly be separated from hamp 'hemp'.
The forms κομβοθηλεία, κομποθηλαία, κομποθήλυκα clearly show that there was a variant with -π-, which points to Pre-Greek origin (confusion with κόμπος 'noise, bragging' is improbable). Also, note the variation in the suffix: -εια, -αια, -υκα, which are found more often in Pre-Greek (Pre-Greek: suffixes -αι/-ε(ι)).

κομέω [v.] 'to care for, ply' (Il.). ◂IE ḱemh₂-* 'get tired'▸ •VAR Only present-stem, with iterative ipf. κομέεσκον; prefixed with ἀμφι- (AP); further κομίζω [v.] 'to care for, attend, look after, loot, save, fetch, bring, transport' (Il.), aor. κομίσ(σ)αι, -ασθαι, Dor. (Pi.) κομίξαι, pass. κομισθῆναι, fut. κομιῶ, -οῦμαι (since ο 546), see Schwyzer: 785, Chantraine 1942: 451; Hell. κομίσω, -ίσομαι.
•COMP Very frequent with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἀπο-, εἰσ-, ἐκ-, κατα-, παρα-, συν-.
•DER (ἀνα-, ἀπο-, etc.)κομιδή 'attendance, care, support, loot, rescue, supply, escape' (Il.); dat. κομιδῇ [adv.] 'exactly, definitely, certainly' (IA); κομιστήρ, -τής 'who takes care, provider' (E.), fem. κομίστρια (AB, Orph.); κόμιστρα [n.pl.] 'reward for saving or transportation' (trag., inscr.); κομιστικός 'fit for care, for transporting' (IA); ἐκ-κομισμός 'export, burial' (Str., Phld.), μετα-κόμισις, εἰσ-κόμισμα, etc. (sch., gloss.). As a second member in several compounds -κόμος, e.g. εἰρο-κόμος 'processing wool, spinner' (Γ 387, AP), ἱπποκόμος 'who takes care of horses, groom' (IA). On the semantic development of κομίζω and derivatives see Wackernagel 1916: 219f., Hoekstra Mnem. 4:3 (1950): 103f.
•ETYM Iterative deverbative κομέω from primary ►κάμνω (type φορέω; see Schwyzer: 719), which was enlarged to κομίζω, whence as a back-formation κομιδή (Schwyzer: 421³). See further s.v. ►κάμνω.

κόμη [f.] 'hair' of the head, also of the manes of a horse (Il.), metaph. 'foliage', also of growth in general (Od.), 'tail of a comet' (Arist.). ◂?▸
•COMP Bahuvrīhi ἱππό-κομος 'covered with horsehair', of a helmet (Il.), opposed to governing ἱππο-κόμος, see ►κομέω; κομα-τροφέω [v.] 'to grow one's hair' (Amorgos, Str.), also with compositional -ο-.
•DER Diminutives κομίσκᾱ (Alcm.) and κόμιον (Arr.). Further κομήτης [m.] 'with (long) hair' (IA), 'comet' (Arist.). see Scherer 1953: 105 and 107f., also a plant-name 'τιθύμαλλος, Euphorbia' (Dsc.); κομήεις 'with leaves' (Orph.). Denominative κομάω [v.] 'to have long hair, show off' (Il.), Ion. -έω; late with ἀνα-, κατα-, etc.
•ETYM Not explained with certainty. The word κόμη may be taken as "well-tended hair", in opposition to ►θρίξ, and connected with ►κομέω 'to take care of'. Thus, it would originally mean 'care'. Schwyzer: 725¹⁰ considers a back-formation from κομάω, which could be a by-form of κομέω. However, since κομάω is always connected with hair and is never used in a different sense of 'to care', the assumprion is not very probable. Borrowed as Lat. coma; see WH s.v.

κόμμι [n.] 'gum' (Hdt., Hp., Arist., Thphr.). ◂LW Eg.▸
•VAR Indeclinable, but also declined -εως, -ει (-ιδι).
•DER κομμίδιον (Hippiatr., sch.), κομμι(δ)ώδης 'rubber-like' (Arist., Thphr.), κομμίζω [v.] 'to be like κ.' (Dsc.).
•ETYM From Eg. kemai, kema, kmjt, Copt. kommi (see Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 417). From κόμμι, Latin borrowed cummi(s), younger gummi. The other European forms came from Latin. Independent loans from Egyptian (as assumed by Fohalle 1925: 171; cf. Kretschmer Glotta 16 (1928): 166) would hardly have resulted in the same form in both languages.

κομμόομαι [v.] 'to embellish, adorn oneself' (Eup., Arist., Them.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP With ἐπι- (Them.).
•DER κόμμωμα 'ornament' (Luc.), -ωσις 'ornamentation' (Ath., H.); back-formation κομμός· περίεργος κόσμησις 'elaborate adornment' (Suid.); -ωτής 'dresser' (Arr., Luc., Plu.), κομμωτίζω· ἐπιμελοῦμαι 'to take care of' (Suid.), -ώτρια [f.] 'servant-girl' (Ar., Pl.), -ώτριον 'cleaning product' (Ar.), -ωτικός 'belonging to cleaning, polishing', -ωτική (τέχνη) 'art of cleaning' (Pl., Hell.); κομμώ· ἡ κοσμοῦσα τὸ ἕδος τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς ἱέρεια 'priestess arranging the (seated) statue of Athena' (AB).
•ETYM As a typical culture word, κομμόω is suspected to have been a fashionable innovation or a loan. The similarity with κόσμος and κομψός led to unconvincing attempts to connect these two words. Solmsen RhM 56 (1901): 501f. assumes that κομμώ is the oldest form, derived from *κομώ (to κομεῖν) with hypocoristic gemination. For lack of a clear solution, it seems best to assume that we are dealing with a substrate word.

κόμπος [m.] 'echoing noise, clattering when something is struck, any loud noise, bragging' (Il.). ◂ONOM▸ •COMP ὑπέρ-κομπος 'extremely noisy, bragging' (A., Men.).
•DER κομπώδης 'ostentatious' (Th., Plu.), κομπός [m.] 'resplendent, vaunting' (E.), on the accent see Schwyzer: 459), κομπηρός 'ringing loudly' (comm. Arist., sch.). Denominatives: 1. κομπέω [v.] 'to clash, ring' (M 151), 'to rattle, strike' (D. L.), usually 'to flaunt, boast' (Pi.), on the formation see Schwyzer: 726[5]. 2. κομπάζω [v.] 'to flaunt, boast' (B. and A.), 'to strike (a pot) to try its quality' (pap.), whence κομπάσματα [pl.] 'boasting' (A.), rarely sg., κομπασμός 'bragging' (Plu.), κομπασία 'rattling, striking' (pap.), κομπαστής 'parader' (Ph., Plu.), κομπαστικός (Poll.), κόμπασος (Hdn.), Κομπασεύς 'belonging to the district of Κόμπος' (Ar.). 3. κομπόομαι [v.] 'to show off' (D. C.).
•ETYM Probably onomatopoeic; cf. on ►βόμβος, ►κόναβος and ►κόμβα. Fur.: 380 compares κόναβος with interchange α/ zero, but there appears to be no basis for this.

κομψός [adj.] 'fine, elegant, to the point, cunning' (Att.). On κομψός as a stylistic notion see Wersdörfer 1940: 105f., 127f. ◂PG?▸
•COMP περί-κομψος 'very fine' (Ar.).

•DER κομψότης 'elegance' (Pl.), κομψεύομαι [v.] 'to be cunning or clever' (Pl.), also -εύω, with κομψεία (Pl., Luc.), κόμψευμα (Arist., Luc., Gal.) 'sth. to the point, clever remark'.
•ETYM The old connection with Lith. švánkus 'decent, reasonable, etc.', as if from ḱuonk^w-so-, is meaningless, since etyma in this kind of meaning are never old (thus Fraenkel 1955 s.v.), and since there is no suffix -so-. The latter objection also excludes connection with ►κομέω 'to take care', ►κομμόομαι 'to adorn' (as per Chantraine REGr. 58 (1945): 90ff., DELG s.v.). The word can hardly be IE, so Pre-Greek origin is probable.

κοναβέω [v.] 'to din, ring, clash, resound' (AP). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Aor. κοναβῆσαι (Hom., Hes.), κοναβίζω (Il., Orph.), only ipf. On the metrically conditioned use of the different forms see Schwyzer: 105 and 736, Chantraine 1942: 340 and 350.
•DER Probably as a back-formation κόναβος [m.] 'clang, clash' (κ 122, A. Th. 160 [lyr.]); κοναβηδόν 'with clattering' (AP).
•ETYM The ending recalls other sound-words like ἀραβέω (to ἄραβος), ὀτοβέω (ὄτοβος), θορυβέω (θόρυβος), etc. (Chantraine 1933: 260, Schwyzer: 496). Fur.: 343 assumes a Pre-Greek sound-word, comparing καναχή 'clattering, rattling, etc.' with the interchanges α/ ο and χ/ β.

κοναρόν [adj.] · εὐτραφῆ, πίονα, δραστήριον 'well-fed, fat, active' (H.). ◂?▸
•DER κοναρώτερον· δραστικώτερον 'most active, efficacious'; κονάριχον· γλαφυρόν 'hollow' (H.).
•ETYM In the sense of δραστήριος, probably related to ►ἐγ-κονέω. It is unknown whether the glosses εὐτραφῆ, πίονα refer to a different word κοναρόν; they could be different suggestions for an obscure passage. On the Thessalian PN Κόναρος, see O. Masson 2000: 145.

κόνδαξ, -ᾱκος [m.] name of a gambling game, played with a blunt dart (AP 5, 60 [sens. obsc.], Cod. Just. 3, 43, 1, 4). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM A different name for the game is κονδο-μονόβολον (Cod. Just., ibd.). Cf. κόνδοι· κεραῖαι 'horns' (H.), κονδοκέρατος 'with short horns'. The word κόνδαξ must be Pre-Greek, in view of the suffix -ᾱκ-; the structure (prenasalized consonant) fits this supposition well. On κόνδοι· ἀστράγαλοι 'vertebrae', see ►κόνδυλος.

κόνδυ, -υος [n.] 'name of a drinking-vessel (Hell.); acc. to H. = ποτήριον βαρβαρικόν, κυμβίον 'foreign drinking-cup, small cup'. ◂LW Sem.?▸
•DER Diminutive κονδύλιον (Hell.).
•ETYM Like many words in -υ, it is a loan (cf. Chantraine 1933: 119). Fur.: 181 compares κοτύλη 'beaker'; cf. κονδύλιον. Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 674 refers to late Babylonian kandu 'vessel'.

κόνδῦλος [m.] 'knuckle, joint, bony knob, clenched fist, swelling of the gum, etc.' (IA). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •COMP As a second member e.g. in μονο-, δι-κόνδυλος (Arist.).

•DER κονδυλώδης 'like a knuckle', κονδύλωμα, -σις 'hard swelling, tumor' (Hp.), κονδυλωτός 'with κ.' (Att. inscr. [IV^{a}]), κονδυλόομαι [v.] 'to swell' (Aspasia apud Aët., H.). κονδυλίζω [v.] 'to hit the face with the fist, buffet, maltreat' (Hyp., LXX), κονδυλισμός (LXX).
•ETYM Other body parts in -υλος are δάκτυλος and σφόνδυλος (cf. Güntert 1914: 116ff.); the bare stem is seen in κόνδοι· ἀστράγαλοι 'vertebrae' (H.). Most connections outside Greek, like Skt. kanda- [m.] 'tuber', kandúka- [m.] 'playball', kanduka- [n.] 'cushion' can be rejected straightaway (cf. Mayrhofer KEWA: s.vv., who considers Dravidian origin). Lith. kánduolas 'kernel' belongs to ką́sti 'to bite'; see Fraenkel 1955 s.v. The word is probably Pre-Greek because of its structure, κονδ-υλ- < ka^{n}t-ul-*. Moreover, the gloss κανθύλας· τὰς ἀνοιδήσεις. Αἰσχύλος Σαλαμινίαις (Fr. 220) 'swellings' (H.), may show variation α/ο and δ/θ (Van Beek p.c.).

κονΐλη [f.] a kind of aromatic plant, 'Origanum, marjoram' (Nic., medic., Dsc.). ◄PG(S)► •ETYM Formation like ζωμίλη, μαρίλη, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 249, Schwyzer: 483); further unclear. Borrowed into Latin as cunīla, for which Fur.: 361 assumes a Greek variant *κυνΐλη, given that o remains before n in Latin. He further compares (1972: 120) γονώνη· ὀρίγανος (H.), and perhaps γονής, κώνητες· θύρσοι (H.) (op. cit. 121), with variation γ/ κ. On -ῑλ- as a Pre-Greek suffix, see Pre-Greek: suffixes.

κόνις [f.] 'dust, ashes' (Il.). ◄IE konis-* 'ashes'► •VAR Gen. -ιος, -εως (-εος); dat. -ι, -ει.
•COMP As a first member in κονι-ορτός [m.] 'cloud of dust' (IA), from ὄρ-νυμι with suffixal -το-, MoGr. κορνιαχτός (Hatzidakis Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 70ff.); κονί-σαλος [m.] (= κονίσ-σαλος, cf. below) 'cloud of dust' (Il.), 'dust mixed with oil and sweat of a wrestler' (Gal.), also name of a priapic demon (com., inscr.) and a lascivious dance (H.); κονί-ποδες [m.pl.] 'kind of shoe' (Ar. Ec. 848, Poll.), name of the slaves in Epid. (Plu.); French parallels in Niedermann KZ 45 (1913): 182.
•DER Denominative verb κονΐω (-ίομαι) 'to cover with dust, cover oneself with sand' (Il.; on the formation below), also with ἐν-, δια-, etc.; fut. κονΐσω, Hell. κονιοῦμαι, aor. κονῖσαι (κονίσσαι), perf. med. κεκόνι(σ)μαι. Further κόνιμα (Delphi III^{a}), -ισμα (Cythera) 'dust of the wrestling arena', κόνισις 'production of dust, training at the wrestling arena' (Arist.), ἐνκονιστάς [m.] mg. unclear (inscr. Thebes), κονίστρα (Arist.), κονιστήριον (Pergam. [II^{a}]) 'wrestling arena', κονιστικός 'fond of rolling in the dust' (Arist.). Enlarged form κονίζεσθαι· κυλίεσθαι, φθείρεσθαι, κονιορτοῦσθαι 'to roll, be destroyed, be covered with dust' (H.). Further derivatives: κόνιος 'dusty' (Pi.), 'creating dust' (Paus.), epithet of Zeus, κονιώδης 'like ashes' (Hp.). κονία 'dust, ashes, sand' (Hom., Hes. Sc., A., E.), 'alkaline fluid' (Ar., Pl., Thphr., medic.), 'chalk, whitewash, plaster' (LXX, Hell.); epic Ion. -ίη, metrically lengthened -ῑη, cf. κόννα· σποδός 'ashes' (H.), which might be Aeolic. Thence κονιάω [v.] 'to plaster, whitewash' (D., Arist.), κονίαμα 'chalk, plaster' (Hp., D., Hell.), κονίασις 'whitewash' (Hell. inscr.), κονιατήρ 'whitewasher' (Epid. IV^{a}), κονιατής 'id.' (inscr., pap.); κονιατός 'whitewashed' (X., Thphr., pap.), κονιατικά (ἔργα) 'stuccowork' (pap., inscr.). Also κονιάζομαι [v.] 'to be covered with ashes' (Gp.).

•ETYM The form κόνις differs from Lat. cinis, -eris [m., f.] < kenis-* by its o-vocalism. The s-stem seen in ciner-is and cinis-culus can also be assumed for κονίσ-σαλος, κεκόνισ-μαι, κονΐω < konis-je/o-, κονί-α < konis-h_2. The word may be an original neuter is-stem, of which ToB kentse 'dust' < koniso-* is a thematisation. The basis is unknown, but ► -κναίω is unrelated.

κονίς [f.] 'eggs of lice, fleas, bugs' (Arist., Antyll. apud Orib., Hdn.). ◄IE ḱnid-* 'eggs of lice'► •VAR Mostly plur. κονίδες.
•DER κονιδισμός 'disease of the eyelids' (Cyran.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 142ff.).
•ETYM The closest cognate is Alb. thëni 'louse', which also goes back to IE ḱonid-;* the Gm. group of OE knitu, OHG (h)niz 'nit' goes back to ḱnid-*. Cf. further the BSl. group of Ru. gnída, Latv. gnīda, which may have gn- from kn- by regular development, thus knid-* (the Slavic forms with Winter's Law). Lith. glìnda 'id.' has -l-, perhaps by dissimilation from gninda*. Other forms: Lat. lēns, lendis 'id.', MIr. sned [f.] 'id.' < snidā*, Arm. anic 'louse' < Hnid-s-*, ON gnit 'louse'. Because of folk-etymological, euphemistic or taboo changes, no uniform proto-form can be reconstructed for PIE. Connection with κναίω, ► κνίζω poses a problem for Alb. thëni, which has an initial palatal.

κόνναρος [m.] name of a thorny evergreen shrub, 'παλίουρος, Zizyphus Spina Christi' (Theopomp. Hist.). ◄PG?► •VAR κόνναρον· καρπὸς δένδρου ὅμοιος (ὁμοίου?) παλιούρῳ 'fruit of a tree like the π.' (H.).
•ETYM Formation like ► κόμαρος, etc.; otherwise obscure. Probably Pre-Greek.

κοννέω [v.] 'to know, understand'. ◄PG?►
•VAR Only in κοννεῖς, κοννῶ (A. Supp. 130 and164) and κοννεῖν· συνιέναι, ἐπίστασθαι 'understand, know'; κοννοῦσι· γινώσκουσιν 'know' (H.).
•ETYM Similarity with κόν· εἰδός 'appearance' and ἔκομεν· εἴδομεν, ἑωρῶμεν, ᾐσθόμεθα 'know, see, perceive' (H.), as well as with ► κοέω 'to remark, learn', has been noticed, but the details of any of these comparisons remain unclear. With its geminate, the verb looks non-IE, and might well be Pre-Greek.

κόννος [m.] 'beard' (Luc. Lex. 5), acc. to H. = ὁ πώγων, ἢ ὑπήνη, ἢ χάρις 'beard, moustache, grace', similar in mg. to σκόλλυς, μαλλός. ◄?►
•DER Further plur., beside ψέλλια, as the name of an ornament for girls (κόνοι Plb. 10, 18, 6, -νν- Suid.). PN Κόννος, Κόννιον, Κοννᾶς, see L. Robert 1964: 168.
•ETYM Unexplained.

κοντός 'pole'. ⇒ κεντέω.

κόνυζα [f.] name of a plant with a strong scent, 'fleabane, Inula (viscosa, graveolens, britannica)' (Hecat., Arist., Thphr., Dsc.). ◄PG(S,V)► •VAR Also σκόνυζα (Pherecr.) and κνύζα (Theoc.), giving MoGr. (Calabr.) kliza (Rohlfs ByzZ 37 (1937): 53, Rohlfs 1930 s.v.).

•DER κονυζήεις 'like the κ.' (Nic.), κονυζίτης (οἶνος) 'seasoned with κ.' (Dsc., Gp.).
•ETYM Formation like other plant names, such as μώλυζα, μάνυζα, ὄρυζα, κόρυζα, etc. The assumption that it was formed from ►κονίς with this suffix -υζα, with dialectal κνύζα remodelled after κνύω, is unwarranted. The form κνύζα has also been analyzed as *knug-ja, and compared with ON hnykr 'stench' < PGm. hnuki-* < IE knugi-*. The variation rather points to a Pre-Greek word; note the prothetic σ-. See Fur.: 183, 381.

κόπις 'prater, liar'. ⇒κόπτω.

κόππα [n.] 'name of the character q, which originally stood between π and ρ in the alphabet' (Parmeno 1); also a sign for '90' (pap.). ◄LW Sem.►
•DER κοππατίας [m.] 'horse with a κόππα burned into it' (Ar.), with allusion to κόπτω, cf. στιγματίας; also κοππα-φόρος (Luc.).
•ETYM From Phoenician; cf. Hebr. qōph.

κόπρος [f.] 'excrement, ordure, dung, filth' (Il.). ◄IE ḱokʷ-r* 'dung'► •COMP κοπρο-λόγος 'dung-gatherer' (Ar.), κοπρο-φορά 'loaf of dung' (Amorgos IV[a]).
•DER A. Substantives: κόπριον = κόπρος (Heraclit., Hp., inscr., pap.) with κοπριώδης 'dung-like, full of dung' (Hp., Thphr., pap.), κοπριακός 'belonging to dung' (pap.); κόπρανα [pl.] 'excrements' (Hp., Aret.); κοπρία 'dung-heap' (Semon., Stratt., Arist.); κοπρών (Ar.), -εών (Tz.), -ιών (Gortyn) 'privy'; κοπροσύνη 'manuring' (pap. VI[p]); Κοπρεύς herald of Eurystheus (O 639); Κοπρεαῖος jocular PN (Ar.); κοπρίαι [pl.] 'buffoons' (D. C.), whence Lat. copreae.
B. Adjectives: Κόπρειος 'belonging to the demos Κόπρος' (inscr.), also referring to κόπρος (Ar.), Κόπριος 'id.' (Is.); κόπρινος 'living in κ.' (Hp.); κοπρώδης 'dung-like, dirty' (Hp., Pl., Arist.).
C. Verbs: κοπρέω 'to manure', only fut. ptc. κοπρήσοντες (ρ 299; v.l. κοπρίσσοντες); (ἐκ-, ἐπι-)κοπρίζω 'id.' (ρ 299 v.l., Hp., Thphr.), whence κόπρισις, -ισμός 'manuring' (Thphr., pap.); κοπρόω 'to defile with dung' (Arr.) with κόπρωσις 'manuring' (Thphr.), ἐκκοπρόω and -ωσις (Hp.); κοπρεύω = κοπρίζω (Chios V-IV[a]), κοπρεῦσαι· φυτεῦσαι 'to plant, bring forth' (H.).
•ETYM A thematization of an old r/n-stem PIE ḱokʷ-r*, preserved in Skt. śákr̥-t, śakn-áḥ 'dung'. A primary verb is assumed in Lith. sìkti, 1sg. šikù 'to shit' from a root ḱekʷ-. See also on ►σκῶρ, which is an old collective sk-ōr with a similar formation.

κόπτω [v.] 'to strike, smite, hew, hammer, disable, tire out' (Il.). ◄IE? kop-* 'strike, smite, hew'► •VAR Aor. κόψαι (Il.), pass. κοπῆναι (Att.), perf. κέκοφα (Att.), epic ptc. κεκοπώς (N 60 with v.l. -φώς and -πών, which may be Aeolic, Schwyzer: 772, but see Chantraine 1942: 397), med. κέκομμαι (A.), fut. κόψω (Alc., Hippon.).
•COMP Very frequent with prefix, in various shades of mg., e.g. ἀπο-, ἐκ-, προ-, περι-, συν-.
•DER 1. κόπος *'stroke' (thus perhaps E. Tr. 794 for mss. κτύπος; cf. also A. Ch. 23), 'pain, trouble, labor' (IA); κοπώδης 'tiring' (Hp., Arist., Hell.), κοπηρός 'id.' (Hdn.); κοπόομαι, -όω 'to get tired, tire' (J., Plu., etc.), κόπωσις (LXX), κοπάζω [v.] 'to get tired, leave off' (Ion. Hell.), whence κόπασμα (Tz.), κοπιάω (ἐγ-, συγ-, προ-) [v.] 'to get tired' (IA), κοπιαρός 'tiring' (Arist., Thphr.), κοπιάτης 'excavation worker, digger' (Cod. Theod., Just.), κοπιώδης = κοπώδης (Hp., Arist.), κοπίαι· ἡσυχίαι 'quietness' (H.). 2. (ἀπο-, ἐκ-, παρα-, προ-, etc.)κοπή 'hewing, etc.' (IA), κόπαιον (Alciphr.), κοπάδιον (gloss.) 'piece', κοπάριον 'kind of probe' (medic.), (ἐγ-, ἐκ-)κοπεύς 'oil stamper, chisel' (Hell.). 3. κόμμα (also with διά-, ἀπό-, περί-) 'stamp, coinage; piece' (IA), κομμάτιον 'small part' (Eup.), κομματίας 'who speaks in short sentences' (Philostr.), -ατικός 'consisting of short sentences' (Luc.); 4. κομμός 'beating the breast in lamentation, dirge' (A., Arist.). 5. κόπις, -ιδος [m.] 'prater' (Heraclit. 81 [?], E. Hec. 132 [lyr.], Lyc.), cf. ὠτοκοπεῖ· κεφαλαλγει, ἐνοχλεῖ λαλῶν 'suffers from (or causes) a headache, troubles by talking' (H.), and the expression κόπτειν τὴν ἀκρόασιν, δημο-κόπος = δημηγόρος (H.), "hitting the ears of the public", etc.; hence (or perhaps from κόπος) κοπίζειν· ψεύδεσθαι 'to be deceived' (H.); 6. κοπίς, -ίδος [f.] 'butchering knife, curved sabre' (Att.), also name of the meal on the first day of the Hyacinthia in Sparta (com.), whence κοπίζω 'to celebrate the K.' (Ath.); 7. κοπάς, -άδος [f.] 'pruned, lopped' (Thphr.), 'bush' (Hell. pap.), ἐπι-κοπάς 'land cleared of wood' (pap.). 8. κοπετός = κομμός (Eup., LXX, Act. Ap.). 9. πρό-, ἀπό-, πρόσ-κοψις, etc. from προ-κόπτειν, etc. (Sapph., Hp., Arist.). 10. κόπανον 'butchering knife, axe' (A. Ch. 890), 'pestle' (Eust.), whence κοπανίζω 'to pound' (LXX, Alex. Trall.), κοπανισμός, κοπανιστήριον (H.); ἐπικόπανον 'chopping block' (Hell.). 11. κοπτός 'pounded' (Cratin., Antiph.); κοπτή (σησαμίς) 'cake from pounded sesame' (Hell. epic), 'squill, θαλάσσιον πράσον' (Ath.), which Fur.: 318[5] considers to be Pre-Greek, also 'pastille' (Dsc.); 12. ἐπι-κόπτης 'satirist' (Timo), περι- 'stonecutter' (pap.), Προκόπτας = Προκρούστης (B. 18, 28); 13. (ἀπο-, παρα-, προσ-, etc.)κοπτικός (medic.). 14. κόπτρα [pl.] 'wages of a hewer' (pap.); 15. κοπτήριον 'threshing place' (Hell. pap.). 16. Two plant-names: κοπίσκος = λίβανος σμιλιωτός 'a kind of frankincense-tree' (Dsc. 1, 68, 1), κόπηθρον· φυτὸν λαχανῶδες ἄγριον 'wild plant of the vegetable kind' (H.). Further verbal nouns like ἀπό-, ἐπί-, παρά-, ὑπέρ-κοπος and compounds like δημο-κόπος (cf. on 5. above).
•ETYM The present κόπτω may correspond to Lith. kàpti, 1sg. kapiù 'to hew, fell', intr. nasal present kampù, pret. kapaũ 'to be cut down, get tired', and umlauted Alb. kep 'hew' < kop-eie-*. Lith. and Greek point to an IE yod-present. Further, there is a secondary formation in Lith. kapóti 'chop, hew', Latv. kapât 'id.', and the Slav. group of Ru. kopát', 1sg. kopáju 'to hew, dig'. Alternatively, if related to ►σκάπτω, ►σκέπαρνος, etc. the word might be from the Pre-Greek or European substrate, with interchange α/ ο.

κοράλλιον [n.] 'coral' (Peripl. M. Rubr., Dsc.). ◄PG?(V), LW Sem.?►
•VAR κοράλιον (S. E.), κουράλιον (Thphr.), κωράλ(λ)ιον (Att., acc. to Hdn. Gr. 2, 537).
•DER κοραλλικός 'coral-like' (Ps.-Democr.), -ίζω 'to be like κ.' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 628 considered univerbation from κόρη (κούρη) ἁλός "daughter of the sea", which would be a calque of a similar Indian expression. The varying notations κορ-, κουρ-, κωρ- are ascribed to association with κόρη, etc. Semitic etymology in Lewy 1895: 18f. (Hebr. gōrāl 'small stone'); criticized by E.

Masson 1967: 110, although it looks convincing. See L. Robert 1963: 277-283. From Greek, Latin borrowed corallium, cūralium; cf. WH s.v.

κόραξ, -ακος [m.] 'raven' (Thgn., Pi.), also Κόρακος πέτρη 'raven rock' (ν 408), often metaph. 'hook (of a door), grappling-iron, etc.' (Hell.); also as a fish name (Diph. Siph.) and the name of a constellation (Eudox.), see Scherer 1953: 191. ◄IE kor-* 'raven'► •COMP κορακο-ειδής 'raven-like' (Arist.), ὀξυ-κόρακος 'with a sharp hook' (Paul. Aeg.).
•DER Some fish and plant names, acc. to Strömberg 1943: 114f., Strömberg 1940: 119 after their color or voice, or after the place where they grow: diminutives κοράκιον 'small hook' (pap.), the plant ἱεράκιον (Arist.), κορακίσκος (gloss.), κορακῖνος [m.] 'young raven' (Ar.), but usually a fish name 'Sciaena nigra' (Epich., Ar., Arist.), fem. κορακινίς (Gp.), diminutive -ινίδιον (com., pap.); Lat. LW coracīnus > Ital. coracino, etc.; κορακίας [m.] 'chough, Pyrrhocorax alpinus' (Arist., H.), Κορακιαί [pl.] TN on Delos (inscr. $\mathrm{III}^{\mathrm{a}}$), with oppositive accent; κορακεύς· εἶδος ἰχθύος 'kind of fish' (H.); κοράκεως [m.] = κορώνεως 'fig-tree with raven-black fruits' (Hermipp. 51), cf. on ἐρινεώς s.v. ἐρινεός; κορακησία plant name (Pythag. apud Plin.), Κορακήσιον TN (Pamphylia), -ήσιος, -ησιωτικός (pap. $\mathrm{III}^{\mathrm{a}}$); on -ήσιος Chantraine 1933: 42, Schwyzer: 466; κορακώδης 'raven-like' (Arist.), κοραξός 'raven-black' (Str.), κόραξος fish name (Xenocr.), with a suffix -σο- (Schwyzer: 516, Chantraine 1933: 434); (κατα-)κορακόω 'to lock (with a door hook)' (Mon. Ant.), κοράξαι· ἄγαν προσλιπαρῆσαι. πεποίηται παρὰ τοὺς κόρακας 'to persevere excessively, built on κόραξ' (H.), probably with original mg. 'to hook oneself onto'; back-formation κόρακος [m.] 'plaster' (Paul. Aeg.)? σκορακίζω originally "to wish to go to the raven (ἐς κόρακας)", 'chase away, revile' (Att., Hell.) with σκορακισμός 'revilement, curse' (LXX, Plu.), cf. Schwyzer 413. Extensively on κόραξ, κορακίας, κορακῖνος Thompson 1895 and Thompson 1947 s.vv.
•ETYM Cognate with the different formations in Lat. corvus 'raven', Gr. κορώνη, Lat. cornīx 'crow', Gr. κόραφος bird name (H.). Greek -αξ is a productive suffix, so there is no need to derive it from -n̥-k-* and connect it with the nasal in Lat. cornīx, Gr. κορώνη. T. Pronk (p.c.) suggests that the same formation is found in Balto-Slavic, e.g., Ru. soróka 'magpie', both branches continuing ḱorh$_2$k-. The alternation between suffixes (containing) -n- (κορώνη, cornīx) and -u-* (corvus) is often found in animal names. See ►κορώνη.

κόρδᾱξ, -ᾱκος [m.] name of a dance in old comedy (Ar., Thphr.), also in the cult of Apollo (Amorgos) and Artemis (Sipylos, Elis; Paus. 6, 22, 1). ◄PG► •DER Κορδάκα [f.] epithet of Artemis in Elis (Paus. l.c.), κορδακικός 'like κ.' (Arist.), κορδακίζω [v.] 'to dance the κ.' (Hyp.), whence -ισμός (D.), -ισμα (H.), -ιστής (Amorgos, pap.).
•ETYM A Doric word (Björck 1950: 61) of uncertain origin. It is reminiscent of ►κραδάω 'to swing' and derivatives. Note that the ending -ᾱξ is typical of Pre-Greek.

κορδῦλη [f.] 'tumor, swelling' (Semon. 35, EM); name of a hairdo = Att. κρωβύλος (Creon apud sch. Ar. Nu. 10, EM); 'club, κορύνη, ῥόπαλον' (H.). Frisk notes that the mg. is the same as that of τύλη. ◄PG(V)►

•VAR Also σκορδύλη (Arist.) and κορύδῦλις (Numen. apud Ath.).
•COMP As a first member (with haplology) in κορδυ-βαλλῶδες (πέδον, Luc. Trag. 222) 'pavimentum'; 'young tunny' (Str.), cf. in Lat. cordȳla (Plin., Mart.), cordula (Apic.), on the mg. see Thompson 1947 s.v.
•DER Denominative ptc. ἐγκεκορδυλημένος 'ἐντετυλιγμένος, wrapped up' (Ar. Nu. 10).
•ETYM Formation like κανθύλη, σχενδύλη (see Chantraine 1933: 251). The mg. 'younger tunny' may go back to 'club'; see Strömberg 1943: 36. Proposals like those by Güntert 1914: 117f., who assumes a cross of ►κόνδυλος 'swelling' with κόρυς, κορυφή, κόρση, or κορύνη, are mostly incorrect. The prothetic σ-, the suffix -ῡλ-, and the anaptyctic υ (Fur.: 384) point to Pre-Greek origin. The form κορδ- might be from kard-* with ο < a* before u*.

κόρδυλος · θαλάσσιος ἰχθύς. ἔνιοι κορδύλη 'a sea fish' (H.). ◄PG► •ETYM The suffix -υλ- and the meaning make Pre-Greek origin plausible.

κορδύλος [m.] probably 'water-newt, Triton palustris' (Arist.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also κουρῦλος (Numen. apud Ath.).
•ETYM Perhaps related to κορδύλη 'swelling', after the crest on the back. Probably Pre-Greek.

κορδύς [m.] · πανοῦργος 'crafty' (H.). ◄IE? ḱerd-* 'cunning'► •ETYM Fur.: 362 proposed connection with κοκρύδων· ληστῶν, κλεπτῶν 'robbing, stealing', but this should be forgotten since Schmitt Glotta 51 (1973): 24f. argues that κορδύς is the Aeolic positive of κέρδιον (which also means 'more cunning'), κορδ-, coming from kr̥d-*. This is accepted by Minon RPh. 74 (2000): 271. See ►κέρδος.

κορέννυμι [v.] 'to satiate, fill, be satiated' (epic Ion.). ◄IE ḱerh$_3$-* 'feed, grow'► •VAR The present (also -μαι) only Them., Orph.; other presents κορέω, κορέσκω (Nic.), κορίσκομαι (Hp.); aor. κορέσ(σ)αι, -ασθαι (Il.), pass. κορεσθῆναι (Od.), perf.ptc.act. (intr.) κεκορηώς (Od.), perf. med. κεκόρημαι (Il.), κεκόρεσμαι (X.), fut. κορέω (Il.), κορέσω (Hdt.).
•COMP Sometimes prefixed with ὑπερ- (Thgn., Poll.), ἀπο- (gloss.). As a second member in ἄ-κορος 'insatiable, untiring' (Pi.), ἀκορία 'unsatiated condition, moderation' (Hp.), 'insatiability' (Aret.). διά-, κατά-, πρόσ-, ὑπέρ-κορος 'satiated, etc.' (IA); also as an s-stem ἀ-, δια-, προσ-κορής, whence the verb προσ-κορίζομαι 'to vex, annoy' (sch.). As a privative also ἀ-κόρητος (Il.), ἀ-κόρε(σ)τος (trag.). Uncertain the appurtenance of Αἰγι-κορεῖς [m.pl.], Αἰγικορίς [f.] name of one of the old Ionic phylai (E., inscr.), cf. Hdt. 5, 66.
•DER With lengthened grade: κώρα· ὕβρις 'excess, insolence' (H.). κόρος [m.] 'satiety, surfeit, insolence' (Il.). On κόρος (epic κοῦρος, Dor., etc. κῶρος) 'youth' see ►κόρη 'young girl'.
•ETYM The starting point of the whole paradigm was the aorist κορέσαι: thence pass. κορεσθῆναι (Chantraine 1942: 406), perf. κεκόρημαι, -εσμαι (Schwyzer: 773), fut. κορέω, -έσω, and finally also the presents κορίσκομαι, κορέω, -έσκω, -έννυμι, which are sparsely attested and late. The formation of κορε- (with o-vocalism) is also found in στορέσαι, θορεῖν, μολεῖν, πορεῖν, and is mostly explained from root-final *-h_3. This gave rise to the aorist *kero-s-, which apparently underwent a metathesis of some sort to yield κορέ-σ-.

In other branches, we find Lith. šérti 'to feed', the acute accent confirming the laryngeal, and Arm. ser 'origin, gender, offspring' < *ḱér-o-, serem 'to produce'. It is uncertain whether Lat. creō 'to procreate, etc.', crēscō 'to grow', and Cerēs 'goddess of the growth of plants' should be connected (see De Vaan 2008 s.vv., in which Cerēs is connected and the two verbs are separated).

κορέω [v.] 'to sweep out, purify' (υ 149, com.). ⊲?⊳

•VAR Also *κορίζω, in κεκορισμένος 'purified' (BGU 1120, 40 [Ia]); aor. κορῆσαι.

•COMP Mostly with ἐκ-, rarely with ἀνα-, παρα-, ἀπο-. As a second member in σηκο-κόρος 'groom' (ρ 224, Poll.), νεω-κόρος (Att.), Dor. να(ο)-κόρος 'warden of a temple' (inscr.), whence derivations in -κορέω, -ία, -ίη, -εῖον, -ιον (Att., Hell.).

•DER κόρημα 'dirt, broom' (com.), κόρηθρον 'broom' (Luc.), as a back-formation also κόρος 'broom' (Bion, H.). On ► ζακόρος, see s.v.

•ETYM An iterative deverbative verb, lacking a good etymology.

κόρη [f.] 'young girl, daughter' (since h. Cer. 439), metaph. 'pupil', in architecture 'female figure', also name of the daughter of Persephone (IA, Arc.). ⊲IE *ḱerh₃- 'grow'⊳

•VAR Epic Ion. κούρη (Il.), Dor. κώρα, κόρα, Arc. Cor. κόρϝα.

•DIAL Myc. ko-wo /korwos/, ko-wa /korwā/.

•COMP Some compounds, e.g. κορο-πλάθος [m.] 'sculptor of female figures' (Att.).

•DER Several diminutives: κόριον, Dor. (Megar.) κώριον (Ar., Theoc.), κορίδιον (Delphi, Naupaktos); κορίσκη (Pl. Com.), -ίσκιον (Poll.); also Κορίσκος [m.] name of an arbitrary man (Arist.), also as a PN (D. L.); κοράσιον (Hell.), whence -ασίδιον (Arr.), -ασίς (Steph. Med.), -ασιώδης (Com. Adesp., Plu.); κόριλλα, Κόριννα (Boeot.), see Chantraine 1933: 252 and 205; κορύδιον (Naupaktos).

Adjectives: κουρίδιος (Il., Ion. poet.), original mg. 'of a young lady, untouched', thence 'matrimonial, lawful' (ἄλοχος, πόσις, λέχος, etc.; on the mg. see Bechtel 1914 s.v., on the formation Schwyzer: 467, Chantraine 1933: 40; κουρήϊος 'of a young lady' (h. Cer. 108); Κόρειος 'of Κόρη', Κόρειον 'temple of Κόρη', -α [pl.] 'festival of K.' (Attica, Plu.); κοραῖος 'of a girl' (Epic. in Arch. Pap. 7, 8), κορικός 'id.' (Hell.). *Κορίτης (-τις) 'servant of Κόρη' in Κορειτῆαι [pl.], which may stand for *Κοριτεῖαι 'service of Κόρη?' (Lycosoura).

Verbs: κορεύομαι [v.] 'to pass one's maidenhood' (E.), 'to lose one's maidenhood' (Pherecyd.), κόρευμα 'maidenhood' (E.), κορεία 'id.' (D. Chr., AP); κορίζομαι 'to caress' (Ar.), originally "treat like a child", ὑπο- 'to call by endearing names, address' (Pi., Att.).

Beside κόρη, or perhaps derived from it (see below): κόρος (trag., Pl. Lg., Plu.; also Dor.), epic κοῦρος, Theoc. κῶρος [m.] 'youth, boy, son' (Il.). Compounds, e.g. ἄ-κουρος 'without son' (η 64), κουρο-τρόφος 'educating youths' (Od.); on ► Διόσκουροι s.v. Derivatives: κούρητες [m.pl.] 'young warriors' (Il.), Κουρῆτες, Dor. Κωρ- (Hes., Crete, etc.) 'Kuretes', name of divine beings who dance in armor around an infant Zeus (Hes. Fr. 198, Crete, etc.), whence Κουρητικός, -ῆτις, κουρητεύω, κουρητισμός (Hell.); on the formation of κούρητες see Schwyzer: 499, Chantraine 1933: 267. From κοῦρος also κουρώδης 'boy-like', probably also κούριος 'youthful' (Orph. A., Orac. apud Paus. 9, 14, 3), κουροσύνη, Dor. -α 'youth' (Theoc., AP), -συνος 'youthful' (AP). κουρίζω 'to be a young man or maiden' (χ 185), 'to educate a youth' (Hes.), κουριζόμενος· ὑμεναιούμενος 'singing the wedding-song' (H.).

•ETYM The more limited attestation of msc. κοῦρος, κόρος, compared with general κούρη, κόρη, seems to indicate that the msc. was an innovation from fem. PGr. *korwā. However, the Mycenaean evidence shows that the masculine is old as well. In the meaning 'boy', Greek also had παῖς and νεανίας.

It is generally accepted that κόρϝα and *κόρϝος derive from the root of κορέννυμι, but the exact semantic development is difficult to reconstruct. Perhaps an abstract formation "growth, flourishing"? The rare meaning 'sprout, branch' is hardly old for κόρος (Lysipp. 9, Hp. apud Gal. 19, 113), and may have developed from 'son' or the like; alternatively, it may derive from κείρω, for which see ► κοῦρος. Note κόρυξ· νεανίσκος 'boy' (H.) (beside κόριψ 'id.' and Κόρυψ Boeot. PN; see Bechtel 1917a: 29f.), which could continue the u-stem from which Myc. ko-wa, ko-wo were derived. See ► κορέννυμι.

κορθίλαι [pl.] in κορθίλας ποιεῖν (IG 2², 2493: 16 [IVa]), of garden work, but exact mg. unknown. ⊲PG?⊳

•VAR Cf. κορθίλας καὶ κόρθιν· τοὺς σωρούς. καὶ τὴν συστροφήν 'heaps, mass' and κορθέλαι· συστροφαί, σωροί 'masses, heaps' (H.).

•ETYM Connection with (the root of) ► χόρτος is most certainly wrong. Probably a Pre-Greek formation; cf. ► κόρθυς.

κορθίλος [m.] · ὄρνις, ὅν τινες βασιλίσκον 'a bird, ' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳

•VAR κόρθ- (cod.).

•ETYM Formation like τροχίλος, σποργίλος, and other bird names (Chantraine 1933: 249). Related to κόρθις, κορθίλαι? Fur.: 195 derives it from κόρυς 'helmet'. The form looks Pre-Greek.

κόρθις ⇒ κορθίλαι.

κόρθυς, -υος [f.] 'heap (of grain?), sheaf(?)' (Theoc. 10, 46: κόρθυος ἁ τομά); cf. κόρθυας· τὰ κατ' ὀλίγον δράγματα 'handfuls little by little' (H.); 'heap, σωρός' (EM 530, 3), of sand, ἄμμου κόρθυς (Anon. apud Suid. s.v. κορθύεται). ⊲IE? *ḱerdʰ-, skerdʰ- 'herd'⊳

•DER κορθύομαι (κῦμα I 7, ὕδωρ A. R. 2, 322) 'to form a heap or sheaf(?), rise up'; κορθύνω 'to raise high', aor. κορθῦσαι, in: Ζεὺς κόρθυνεν ἑὸν μένος (Hes. Th. 853); εὖτέ με θυμὸς κορθύσῃ (Hymn. Is. 150).

•ETYM Frisk assumes that κόρθυς and ► κορθίλαι are related. Related to Skt. śárdha- [m.], śárdhas- [n.] 'band, troop, host', and Gm. words like Go. hairda 'herd'. Connection of MW cordd [f.] 'troop, band, family' is less probable, as this may also derive from PCelt. *koryo- 'troop, tribe' (Matasović 2008 s.v.).

κορίαννον [n.] 'coriander, Coriandrum sativum' (Anacr., com., Thphr.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also κορίανδρον (gloss.), dissimilated κολίανδρον (Gp., sch.); κορίαμβλον (H.); shortened κόριον (Hp., Nic., pap.).
•DIAL Myc. ko-ri-ja-do-no, ko-ri-a₂-da-na /koriʰadnon, -na/.
•ETYM It is doubtful that the forms in -ανδρον and -αμβλον are folk-etymological, as Frisk supposes. Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971): 674 points to the comparison with Akk. huri'ānu 'id.', but this does not explain the Myc. -d-. The cluster -dn- rather points to a Pre-Greek word. It is possible that PG koriaⁿdro- dissimilated to koriaⁿdno-, with subsequent (post-Mycenaean) assimilation -ndn- > -nn- in the classical form.

κορίαξος [m.] 'a kind of fish'? (Alex. Trall.); acc. to Strömberg 1943: 115 rather 'spiced meat'. ◂PG?▸ •ETYM If 'spiced meat' is the correct translation, does it belong to κόριον, ►κορίαννον? However, the formation remains unclear in any case. Probably Pre-Greek.

κόρις, -ιος [m., f.] 'bug, Cimex lectularius' (Ar., Sor., Phryn.); also a fish (Dorio, Boeot. inscr.), see Lacroix 1938: 52; called after its flat shape acc. to Strömberg 1943: 124. As a plant name 'Hypericum empetrifolium' (Dsc., Aët.), after the shape of the leaves acc. to Strömberg 1937: 50. ◂IE *(s)ker- 'cut'▸ •VAR Gen. also -ιδος, -εως.
•DER Denominative κορίζω [v.] 'to be full of bugs' (gloss.).
•ETYM The i-stem also occurs in τρόπις, τρόφις, τρόχις, etc. (Schwyzer: 462). Identical with Ru. kor' [f.] 'moth', and traditionally analyzed as an old verbal noun from (s)ker- 'shave, split, cut' seen in ►κείρω, etc. (s.v). However, an old isogloss is highly improbable for a word of such a specialized meaning. Literature: Jouanna RPh. 50 (1976): 32-40; Gil Fernández 1959: 109.

κορκόρας [?] · ὄρνις. Περγαῖοι 'bird (Pergaian)' (H.). ◂LW Anat.?▸
•ETYM Neumann 1961: 42 connects it with Hitt. kallikalli- 'falcon', with a borrowed as o and interchange of l and r.

κορκορυγή [f.] 'dumb sound, battle cry' (A., Ar.). ◂ONOM, PG?▸
•DER (δια-)κορκορυγέω [v.] 'to fill with noise, storm, rumble' (τὴν γαστέρα, Ar. Nu. 387 with sch.); κορκορυγμός 'rumbling in the belly' (Ps.-Luc. Philopatr. 3).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic word with reduplication; the ending like in βορβορυγή, -γμός, ὀλολυγή, -γμός (see Chantraine 1933: 401). See Tichy 1983: 275f.

κορμός 'piece cut off, clump, trunk'. ⇒κείρω.

κόρνοψ, -οπος [m.] 'locust'. ⇒πάρνοψ.

κόρος 1 'satiety, surfeit, insolence'. ⇒κορέννυμι.

κόρος 2 [m.] 'youth, boy, son'. •VAR Ion. κοῦρος. ⇒κόρη.

κόρος 3 [m.] name of a measure of capacity for grain, flour, etc.; acc.to J. AJ 15, 9, 2 it equals 10 Att. medimnes (LXX, J., Ev. Luc., pap.). ◂LW Sem.▸ •ETYM A loan from Semitic; cf. Hebr. kōr, originally a round vessel (Lewy 1895: 116).

κόρση [f.] 'temple, hair on the temple', metaph. 'parapets, etc.' (Il.); mainly poetic, except in Att. expressions like πατάσσειν, τύπτειν, ῥαπίζειν ἐπὶ κόρρης; prose usually has κρόταφος 'temple'. ◂IE *(s)ker- 'cut'▸ •VAR Att. κόρρη, Aeol. κόρσα, Dor. κόρρα.
•COMP πυρσόκορσος "with red temples (hair)", i.e. 'with red manes' (λέων; A. Fr. 110), ψιλο-κόρσης [m.] 'bald-headed' (Call., Hdn.); κορσο-ειδής (λίθος) "with the color of the temples", i.e. 'gray' (Plin.); cf. MiGr. κορσίτης, see Redard 1949: 56; Κορρί-μαχος (Thess.), see Kretschmer Glotta 2 (1910): 350.
•DER κορσεῖα, κόρσεα [pl.] 'temples' (Nic.); κορσήεις = κορσοειδής (Orph. L. 498 [?]).
•ETYM Probably from kors-ó- 'that which is shaven' (H. has κορσός· κορμός 'cut-off piece' and κορσοῦν· κείρειν 'to shave'; cf. the -s- in ἀ-κερσε-κόμης, s.v. ►κουρά). This interpretation goes back to antiquity, e.g. Poll. 2, 32: καὶ κόρσας τινὲς ἐκάλεσαν τὰς τρίχας διὰ τὸ κείρεσθαι 'some called hair κόρσας because it was shaven'. However, 'hair' is not the original meaning; we have to start from 'haircut (at the temples)'. For parallels, see Frisk 1951: 14ff. Cf. Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 191-205.

κορσός, -όω, κορσωτήρ, etc. ⇒κουρά.

Κορύβαντες [m.pl.] 'Corybantes', priests of the Phrygian Cybele (E., Ar., Str.), sg. Κορύβας· 'Ρέας ἱερεύς (H.); also Κύρβαντες, sg. -ας (Pherecyd., S.). ◂PG(V)▸
•DER κορυβάντειος 'Corybantian' (AP), -αντικός 'id.' (Plu.), -αντίς [f.] 'id.' (Nonn.), -αντώδης 'C.-like' (Luc.), -αντεῖον [n.] 'C.-temple' (Str.); κορυβαντιάω [v.] 'to be filled with frenzy like the C.' (Pl., Longin.) with -ιασμός (D. H., Longin.); κορυβαντίζω [v.] 'to consecrate in the C. rites' (Ar. V. 119, Iamb.) with -ισμός· κάθαρσις μανίας (H.).
•ETYM Formation like Ἄβαντες, ἁλίβαντες etc. (Schwyzer: 526, Chantraine 1933: 269). Given their origin, a Phrygian word would be the first guess. However, the variation shows that the word was originally Pre-Greek, so Kretschmer's IE etymology connecting ON hverba 'to turn (intr.)' must be abandoned. For Kretschmer, the Phrygians were the only IE people in Anatolia; he liked to find Indo-European Phrygian etymologies, forgetting that the Phrygians borrowed much from earlier peoples in Anatolia.
It is very difficult to establish which of the two forms was original; Kretschmer thought is was Κύρβαντες (whence Κορύβ- would have arisen by adaptation to κόρυς, which seems improbable to me). Fur.: 359 holds that a sequence υ - υ became ο - υ in Pre-Greek. Therefore, he also thinks that Κύρβ- was original (giving *Κυρυβ- > Κορυβ-). Rejecting the traditional etymology from κοῦρος, he assumes a form Κορυ-β- as the stem of κόρυψ· νεανίσκος and thus explains Κορύβαντες. However, in this way he seems to forget that he took Κύρβαντες as the original form.

κόρυδος [m., f.] '(crested) lark, Alauda cristata' (Ar., Pl., Arist.). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •VAR Also -δός; enlarged forms with suffixes -ν- and -λ(λ)- (see Chantraine 1933: 360f. and 246f.). With different vocalism κάρυδοι· καρύδαλοι (H.). Cf. forms with

-θ- (like in κόρυθ- 'helmet'): κόρυθος· εἷς τις τῶν τροχίλων 'one of the Egyptian plovers' and κορύθων· ἀλεκτρυών 'cock' (H.).
•DER κορυδῶνες [pl.] (Arist. HA 609a 7), κορύδαλ(λ)ος (Arist.; v.l. -αλλός), -αλλός (Theoc., Babr.), -αλλά (Epich., inscr. Sicily), -αλλίς (Simon., Theoc.). PN Κόρυδος, -ύδων, -υδαλλός, -υδεύς (see Boßhardt 1942: 132).
•ETYM The connection with κόρυς 'helmet' may be correct, but only as a variant of the same Pre-Greek word. A suffix -δο- did not exist in Greek, and therefore the comparison with the Gm. word for 'deer' (OS hirot, OHG hiruz < QIE k̑erud-* vel sim.) does not work. On κόρυδος, etc., see Thompson 1895 s.v. κορύδαλος. The form κάρυδος is the older one: PGr. a often gives ο before a following υ (so there is no need to correct the form; Fur.: 345 had not seen the rule); therefore, derivation from κόρυς is impossible. Note that -αλ(λ)- is the Pre-Greek suffix -al^y-; see Beekes 2008. See ►κόρυς.

κόρυζα [f.] 'mucous discharge from the nostrils, rheum' (Hp., Gal., Luc.), metaph. 'stupidity' (Luc., Lib.). ◄PG?►
•DER κορυζώδης 'with a cold' (Hp.), κορυζᾶς 'id.' (Men. Fr. 1003; cf. Körte ad loc.), -ζάω 'to have a chill, be stupid' (Pl., Arist., Plb.), κορυζιᾷ· pipitat (gloss.). With intensifying βου-: βου-κόρυζα = ἡ μεγάλη κόρυζα (Men. Fr. 1003 from Suid.), βουκόρυζος· ἀναίσθητος, ἀσύνετος 'without sense, witless' (H.). Further κορύναι and κροῦμαι· μύξαι 'mucus' (H.).
•ETYM Ending like in ►κόνυζα, but without certain connection. It has traditionally been compared to a Gm. word for 'mucus', e.g. OE hrot, OHG (h)roz 'mucus', which is a verbal noun of OE hrūtan, OHG hrūzzan 'to grumble, snore' (see Pok. 571, 573). If Pre-Greek, it is from karut^{y}a*.

κόρυμβος [m.] 'uppermost point of a ship' (I 241), 'top of a mountain' (Hdt., A.), 'cluster of the ivy fruit' (Mosch., Corn., Plu.), 'hair knot; = κρωβύλος' (Heraclid. Pont.). ◄PG(S,V)► •VAR Plur. -α (next to -οι). Also κόρυμνα· κόσμιος τις γυναικεῖος περιτραχήλιος 'women's ornament worn round the neck' (H.).
•COMP κορυμβο-φόρος 'bearing fruit' (Longos), δι-κόρυμβος 'with two tops' (Hell. poetry).
•DER κορύμβη [f.] 'hair knot' (Asios), 'hairband' (Antim.). κορύμβιον 'grape' (Dsc.); κορυμβίας (Thphr.), κορύμβηλος (Nic.), κορυμβήθρα (Ps.-Dsc.) 'ivy, Hedera helix'; cf. Strömberg 1937: 91, Strömberg 1940: 53; κορυμβίτης (κισσός) 'id.' (medic., Plin., see Redard 1949: 73); κορυμβώδης 'grape-like' (v.l. Dsc. 3, 24); κορυμβόομαι [v.] 'to be tied together in a hair knot' (Nic. Dam.).
•ETYM Related to ►κορυφή, with a by-form of the suffix.

κορύνη [f.] 'club, mace, knobby bud or shoot, penis' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR The quantity of the υ varies.
•COMP κορυνη-φόρος 'club-bearer' (Hdt.).
•DER κορυνήτης [m.] 'who uses a club' (Il., Paus.); κορυνώδης 'knobby' (Thphr.), κορυνιόεις 'id.' (v.l. Hes. Sc. 289); κορυνάω [v.] 'to put forth knobby buds' with κορύνησις (Thphr.).

•ETYM Perhaps related to ►κόρυς, referring to the thick end of the instrument in question? For the formation, cf. instrument names like τορύνη, βελόνη (Chantraine 1933: 207f.). The frequently suggested connection with κορυφή, κόρυμβος is undoubtedly wrong; the word is probably Pre-Greek.

κορύπτω 'butt with the head (the horns)'. ⇒κορυφή.

κόρυς, -υθος [f.] 'helmet' (Il.). ◄PG(S)► •VAR Acc. -υθα, -υν.
•DIAL Myc. ko-ru-to /korut^{h}os/ [gen.sg.]; ko-ru-pi /korut^{h}p^{h}i/ [ins.pl.]. Also Lac. κόρυρ· θριγκός 'topmost stone' (H.).
•COMP κορυθ-άϊξ 'shaking the helmet' (X 132), from ►ἀΐσσω; -αιόλος 'id.', mostly of Hector (Il., A. R.); accent after Hdn., Eust., codd. Ven.), κορυθήκη [f.] 'helmet case' (Delos II^a; haplological for κορυθο-θήκη); τρί-κορυς 'with triple plume' (E. Ba. 123 [lyr.]), also τρι-κόρυθος 'id.' (E. Or. 1480); χαλκο-, ἱππο-κορυστής 'with bronze/red-haired helmet' (Il.).
•DER 1. Diminutive κορύθιον (gloss.). 2. κορυστής [m.] 'helm-bearer' (Il.). 3. κόρυθος· εἷς τις τῶν τροχίλων, περικεφαλαία 'one of the Egyptian plovers, helmet' (H.); to Κόρυ(ν)θος as an epithet of Apollo see below. 4. κορύθων· ἀλεκτρυών 'cock' (H.). 5. κορυθάλη, -αλίς = εἰρεσιώνη 'maypole' (EM), Κορυθαλία epithet of Artemis near Sparta (Polem. Hist., H.), also = κορυθάλη (H., gloss.); κορυθαλίστριαι· αἱ χορεύουσαι τῇ Κορυθαλίᾳ θεᾷ 'women dancing for the goddess K.' (H.), after the fem. in -(ί)στρια, cf. Chantraine 1933: 106. 6. Denominative verb κορύσσω, -ομαι 'to raise high, rise', also in general 'to arm oneself' (Il.), originally 'to take a helmet'; aor. κορύσσασθαι (Il.), κορύξασθαι (Ath. 3, 127a; also Hp. Ep. 17?), ptc. perf. κεκορυθμένος (Il.), verbal adj. κορυστός 'heaped up', of a full measure (Attica); κορυ<σ>τόν· ἐπίμεστον 'filled up' (H.). Κόρυ(ν)θος epithet of Apollo in Messenia (inscr., Paus. 4, 34, 7), appurtenance uncertain; κορυνθεύς· κόφινος, κάλαθος. ἀλεκτρυών 'basket (narrow at the base), cock' (H.), cf. κορύθων above. On κόρυς and derivatives see Trümpy 1950: 40ff., Gray Class. Quart. 41 (1947): 114ff.
•ETYM Most often connected with κέρας 'horn', but the differences of meaning and the morphological problems render this improbable. Chantraine 1932: 165ff. therefore considered Mediterranean origin for κόρυς; we now know that this must be correct, since the alternating suffixes in ►κορυφή, ►κόρυμβος, ►κόρυδος, ►κορύνη, κορυδ-ών, -αλ(λ)ος all point to a Pre-Greek word (cf. Fur.: 195).

κορυφή [f.] 'top, skull', also metaph. (Il.). ◄PG(S,V)► •VAR Dor. -φά.
•COMP E.g. κορυφᾱ-γενής 'born from the head', properly of Athena, metaph. (Pythag. in Plu. 2, 381f.), δι-κόρυφος 'with two summits' (E., Arist.).
•DER κορυφαῖος [m.] 'the main figure, leader of the chorus' (IA), secondary 'at the head' [adj.] (Plu., Hdn.), κορυφαιότης 'leadership' (Corp. Herm.); κορυφαῖον 'the upper part of a hunting-net', -φαία 'head-stall of a bridle' (X., Poll.). κορυφώδης 'with summits' (Hp.). κορυφάς [f.] 'edge of the navel' (Hp. apud Gal.); -φίς, -φών = κορυφή (gloss.), κόρυφος [m.] = κορυφή (Epid.), = κόρυμβος γυναικεῖος 'hair knot of a woman' (H.); κορύφαινα [f.] name of a fish, ἵππουρις (Dorio apud Ath.); on the naming motive Strömberg 1943: 59, on the suffix ibd. 137; κορύφια [pl.] kind of mollusks (Xenocr. apud Orib.). κορυφιστήρ = κορυφαῖον (Poll.), also 'headband' (sch.), cf. βραχιονιστήρ (Chantraine 1933: 328); -ιστής 'id.' (H.).

Denominative verbs: 1. κορυφόομαι 'to rise up high' (Il.), 'to count together, sum up' (Hell.), -όω 'to bring to the top' (medic.), κορύφωμα 'summit' (Ath. Mech.), -ωσις 'top of a pyramid' (Nicom.). 2. κορύπτω 'to butt with the head' (Theoc.), κορυπτίλος 'butting' (Theoc.), after τροχίλος, σποργίλος (Chantraine 1933: 249), probably hypocoristisc; also κορύπτης, -τόλης 'id.' (EM, H.); ἐκορυπτίας· ἐγαυρίας (H.).
•ETYM Long recognized as Pre-Greek, due to the alternation of κορυφ- with prenasalized κορυμβ-. See ► κόρυμβος.

κόρχορος [m.] plant name, 'blue pimpernel, ἀναγαλλὶς ἡ κυανῆ, Anagallis caerulea'; on the mg. Thiselton-Dyer Journ. of Phil. 33 (1914): 201. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR κόρκορος (Ar. V. 239, Nic. Th. 626). Msc. in Thphr. and Ps.-Dsc.
•ETYM A reduplicated Pre-Greek formation (see Strömberg 1940: 21).

κορχυρέα [f.] 'subterranean drain' (IG 9(1), 692: 8 [Corcyra II[a]]: περι ταν κορχυρε[αν]). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Dittenberger ad loc. IG 9(1), 692: 8 refers to ► γοργυρα, γέργυρα, γοργύριον 'id.' (Hdt. 3, 145, H.; cf. s.v.) and κορκόδρυα (κορκορρόα Lobeck)· ὑδρόρυα 'drain' (H.); the variation points to a Pre-Greek word.

κορώνη [f.] 'crow', also 'shearwater', 'Corvus corone, cornix, frugilegus, Puffinus yelkuan' (Od.). Often metaph. of all kinds of curved or hook-formed objects (cf. below): 'tip of a bow' (Il.), 'grip of a door' (Od., Poll.), 'tip of the plough pole' (A. R.), 'back of a ship' (Arat.), 'pathological tumor of the elbow, etc.' (Hp.), 'kind of crown' (Sophr. 163, H.). ◂IE kor-u/n-* 'crow, raven'▸ •COMP Rarely in compounds, e.g. κορωνο-βόλος 'shooting crows', τρι-κόρωνος 'have three times the age of a crow' (AP).
•DER κορωνιδεύς [m.] 'young crow' (Cratin. 179); κορώνεως [f.] 'tree with raven-black figs' (Ar. Pax 628), cf. on ἐρινεώς s.v. ► ἐρινεός. κορωνίς [f.] 'curved, with tail', of ships (Hom.), of cattle (Theoc.), as a noun 'crown' (Stesich.), 'curved line, ornament' at the end of a book, etc., as an orthographic sign 'end' (Hell.); also κορωνός [m.] 'curved, etc.' (Archil., Hp., EM), also PN Κόρωνος (B 746), κορωνόν [n.] 'knob of bone(s)', τὰ κόρωνα 'elbow' (medic.); κορώνιος· μηνοειδῆ ἔχων κέρατα βοῦς 'bull having crescent-shaped horns' (H.), also a month name (Knossos), κορώνιον [n.] plant name (Ps.-Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 42; κορωνίης [m.] 'who proudly bends the neck' (of ἵππος; Semon.), whence κορωνιάω [v.] 'to bend the neck proudly, be proud' (Hell.), also 'to curve oneself' (κορωνιόωντα πέτηλα Hes. Sc. 289; metrically conditioned). Denominative verb κορωνίζω 'to end, finish' (of κορωνίς; Pontos); also of κορώνη as a basis of κορωνισταί [pl.] "crow-singer", κορωνίσματα [pl.] "crow-songs", i.e. 'singing beggar', 'begging songs' (Ath.). On κορώνη see Thompson 1895 s.v.
•ETYM The Italic words for 'crow' (Lat. cornīx, U curnaco 'cornicem') suggest that κορώνη also continues an old n-stem kor-ōn*, kor-n-os*. The root is also found in ► κόραξ and ► κόραφος. A u-stem alternating with this n-stem is seen in Lat. corvus (MIr. crú 'raven' is perhaps a ghost word; see De Vaan 2008). As a name for curved objects, κορώνη, κορωνίς, κορωνός are sometimes separated from κορώνη 'crow' and connected with ► κυρτός 'curved, hunchbacked', but the unique formation of the Greek word speaks against such a separation. Moreover, the metaphorical use of κορώνη 'crow' is nothing remarkable given the use of its cognates (κόραξ, Lat. cornīx, MoFr. corbeau, MoE crow, etc.): the metaphors may have originated from the shape of the beak or the claws of the bird. From Greek comes Lat. corōna, corōnis, whence Western European loans like MoE crown.

κόσκινον [n.] 'sieve' (Semon., Democr., Att.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP A few compounds, e.g. κοσκινο-ποιός 'sieve-maker' (com.), τυρο-κόσκινον kind of cheesecake (Chrysipp. Tyan. apud Ath. 14, 647f).
•DER Diminutive κοσκίνιον (Chrysipp. Tyan.); κοσκίνωμα 'fencing' (Sm., Thd.); κοσκινηδόν [adv.] 'like a sieve' (Luc.). Denominative verbs: 1. κοσκινεύω 'to sieve' (Democr., pap.), whence κοσκινευ-τής 'siever', -τικόν 'fee for sifting', -τήριον 'place for sifting' (pap.); 2. κοσκινίζω 'id.' (medic., Aq., Sm.), whence -ίνεσις 'sieving' (pap.).
•ETYM No etymology; perhaps Pre-Greek (Chantraine 1933: 203).

κοσκυλμάτια [n.pl.] 'cuttings of leather', metaph. of the flattering words of the tanner Cleon to Demos (Ar. Eq. 49). ◂GR?▸
•ETYM Uncertain. A reduplicated formation *(σ)κο-σκυλ-μάτ-ια (Schwyzer: 423) has been assumed, related to ► σκύλλω 'to dishevel, maltreat'. The similarity with Lat. quisquiliae [pl.] 'waste, dirt' may be accidental (Walde assumed a loan from Greek).

κόσμος [m.] 'order, propriety, good behavior; ornament' (Il.), 'world-order, world' (Pythag. or Parm.; Kranz Phil. 93 (1938): 430ff.), 'government' (IA); name of the highest officials in Crete (back-formation from κοσμέω acc. to Leumann 1950: 285f.; against this Ruijgh 1957: 109). ◂IE keNs-* 'order'▸ •COMP Several compounds, e.g. κοσμο-ποιία 'creation of the world' (Arist.), κοσμό-πολις [m.] name of an official of the town (Hell.), properly a governing compound = ὁ κοσμῶν πόλιν; independent is κοσμο-πολίτης 'citizen of the world' (Hell.); εὔ-κοσμος 'in good order' (Sol.).
•DER 1. Diminutives κοσμ-άριον, -ίδιον, -αρίδιον 'small ornament' (late); 2. κόσμιος 'well-ordered, decent, quiet' (IA), 'regarding the world' (Plu., Arr.), whence κοσμιότης 'culture, civilization' (Att.); 3. κοσμικός 'worldly, earthly, of the world' (Hell.); 4. κοσμωτός 'changed in a world' (Hell.); 5. Κοσμώ [f.] name of a priestess (Lycurg.); PNs Κοσμίας, Κοσμᾶς, etc. 6. Denominative verb κοσμέω 'to order, govern, adorn' (Il.), with several derivatives: κοσμητός 'well-ordered' (η 127); κόσμησις 'order, ornamentation' and κόσμημα 'id.' (Att.); κοσμήτωρ 'who orders, commander' (Il.) and κοσμητήρ 'id.' Epigr. apud Aeschin. 3, 185), fem. κοσμήτειρα (Ephesus, Orph.; -ήτρια H.); κοσμητής 'orderer, commander, who orders, adorns', also name of an official (Att.), whence κοσμητεύω (-τέω) 'to be κοσμητής' (inscr., pap.), -τεία (pap.); κοσμητήριον 'place with toilets' (Paus.), κόσμητρον 'broom' (sch.); κοσμητικός 'belonging to adorning' (Pl., Arist.).

•ETYM The most probable reconstruction is *ḱoNs-mo-. This implies that the word is related to Lat. cēnseō 'to estimate', cēnsiō 'assessment, rating', etc., OCS sętъ 'said he', and the Indo-Iranian group of Skt. śaṃs- 'to praise', OP θah- 'to declare, announce'. Acc. to Schumacher apud LIV² s.v. ḱeNs-*, MW dan-gos- 'to show, point out' is related as well. It is probable that the element -κάς in ► ἑκάς, ἀνδρακάς, Skt. sahasra-śás [adv.] 'a thousand times' (RV+) is also related. The original meaning was probably 'to put in order (by speaking)'. The meaning 'to adorn' is probably secondary within Greek. On the semantics of this root, see García Ramón 1993a: 109-15; he also connects (ibid.: 120) Myc. PNs like ka-e-sa-me-no /kaʰesamenos/.

κόσσυφος [m.] 'blackbird, Turdus merula' (Arist., Matro, AP), metaph. as a name of the cock (Paus. 9, 22, 4; Tanagra); also a wrasse (Numen. apud Ath. 7, 305c, medic., Ael.), because it changes colors with the seasons, like the blackbird; or perhaps named after their sounds (Strömberg 1943: 116).
•VAR Att. -ττ-, gloss. -υκος. Also κόψιχος (-ικος, -υκος) [m.] (com. since Ar., Suid., Moer.).
•DER κοσσυφίζω 'to sing like a κ.' (Hero). Fem. Κοσσύφα, Doric name of a hetaira (Schulze 1933a: 707⁹).
•ETYM Previous scholars connected ► κόψιχος with the Slav. name of the blackbird, CS kosъ, etc., from kopso-*. Meillet MSL 18 (1914): 171ff. explained κόσσυφος by assuming a dissimilation from *κοψυφος. However, this does not explain the phoneme expressed by σσ/ττ, so the explanation must be given up. Knobloch Glotta 55 (1979): 76f. connects the verb κόπτω, which beside 'to blow, strike' also means 'to dig', like in OCS kopati, which would fit the bird. However, there is no element -so-* that would create agent nouns, as he states, so the formation remains obscure. Given the variants, the word is clearly Pre-Greek. Not in Fur.

κόσταί [f.] 'a fish' (Diphn. Siphn. apud Ath. 357a), occurring in a list of fish. ◂?▸
•VAR κοστίας· κοιλίας κόμορος (= κάμμαρος?) (H.).
•ETYM No etymology.

κόστος [m.] name of a plant and of its root, which was used as a spice, 'Saussurea lappa' (Thphr., D. S.). ◂LW Skt.▸
•VAR Also -ον [n.].
•DER κοστόϊνος 'made of κ.' (pap.), cf. Kalbfleisch RhM 94 (1951): 345.
•ETYM From Skt. kúṣṭha- [m.] 'id.'. Lat. costum, -us was borrowed from κόστος (-ον). See Mayrhofer EWAia s.v.

κοσυβ[άτ]ας [m.] 'sacrificer' (Gortyn V-IVª, SEG 1, 414, 10).
•VAR κοσ<ύ>βατοι (-βάται?)· οἱ ἐπὶ θυσιῶν τεταγμένοι 'appointed for sacrifices' (H.) (υ added, because it stands after κοστίας). ⇒ κοσύμβη.

κοσύμβη [f.] name of a cloak which acc. to D. Chr. 72, 1 was used by herders and countrymen; by EM 311, 5, H. and others is was explained with ἐγκόμβωμα 'kind of apron' (see κόμβος), by EM 349, 15 called an ἀναβολή 'mantle'; the mg. 'κρωβύλος' in Poll. 2, 30 (different readings) must be a hybrid with ► κόρυμβος. ◂PG(V)▸

•VAR Also κότθυβος, a piece of military equipment, perhaps περίζωμα? (Rev. Arch. 1935 : 2, 31); cf. also κοσυβάτας, which confirms the form without nasal (Fur. 283). Further Lat. gossypion, (Plin. N.H. 19, 14), -inum (ibid. 1, 12, 21, etc.), which point to *γοσσυπιον. Also κόσυμβος [m.], which acc. to H. (with -σσ-) = κοσ(σ)ύμβῃ; also 'hair-net' (LXX Is. 3, 18); thence κοσυμβωτός (Ex. 28, 35, χιτών; v.l. κόσυμβος), acc. to H. = κροσσωτός, i.e. 'with fringes'.
•ETYM Lewy KZ 58 (1931): 26ff compares Assyr. guzippu, kuzippu 'a cloak', Arab. korsuf 'cotton'. Pre-Greek origin is likely, given the prenasalization and the variants with -σ-, -σσ/ττ-, etc. This does not exclude that the word is found in Semitic too, since it may be an old culture word (Fur.: 283).

κότθυβος ⇒ κοσύμβη.

κοτίλιον [n.] mg. not certain, probably name of a vessel to preserve things (inscr. Delos 1429 B II 25 [IIª]). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Unexplained. The formal similarity with vulgar κότιλον, κοτίλλιν (Latte gives κοτίλλιον)· ἀνδρὸς αἰδοῖον 'male private parts' (and κόθημα· ἐπὶ τοῦ αἰδοίου, also κότιλον H.) cannot be denied. The variation in κοτιλ(λ)- points to a Pre-Greek word.

κότινος [m., f.] 'wild olive, ἀγριελαία' (Ar., Thphr.), on the name Strömberg 1937: 166¹. ◂PG?▸
•COMP As a first member in κοτινη-φόρος 'carrying wild olives' (Mosch.), etc.
•DER κοτινάς [f.] 'the fruit of the wild olive' (Hp.), '(olive) grafted upon a wild olive' (Poll.); on the formation see Chantraine 1933: 353.
•ETYM Probably a loan, perhaps from Pre-Greek. Cf. Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 131. From Greek was borrowed Lat. cotinus 'Rhus cotinus' (Plin.).

κότος [m.] 'grudge, hatred' (Il.). ◂?▸
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. bahuvrīhi ἔγ-κοτος 'grudging' (A.), whence denominative ἐγκοτέω [v.] 'to be full of grudge' (A.); thence ἐγκότημα, -ησις (LXX) and, as a back-formation, ἔγκοτος (Hdt.) 'grudge'; also ἐγκότιος [adj.] (Salamis on Cyprus).
•DER κοτήεις 'grudging' (E 191); -ήεις analogical for κοτόεις (A. D., EM); further (probably a denominative, see below) κοτέω, -έομαι 'to grudge' (Il.), aor. κοτέσσασθαι, -έσαι, fut. κοτέσσομαι, perf.ptc.dat. κεκοτηότι; also κοταίνω 'id.' (A. Th. 485), after θυμαίνω, etc., see Fraenkel 1906: 18 and on ► θυμός.
•ETYM It has been compared with a Celto-Germanic word for 'struggle, fight', e.g. W catu- in Catu-rīges, OHG hadu- in Hadu-brand, ON hǫd [f.] 'battle, contest' and, with a different suffix, MHG hader 'quarrel, fight', as well as perhaps Slav., e.g. CS kotora 'fight'. Further, perhaps, with palatal anlaut, Skt. śátru- 'enemy'. Machek 1958: 49f. additionally compares Cz. katiti se 'to be annoyed'. If κότος were an old s-stem (Fraenkel KZ 43 (1910): 193ff.), it would fit the u- and r-stems in catu-, hader better. All in all, not very clear.

κότταβος [m.] name of a game (Anacr., Pi., trag., com., Hell.) from Sicily, in which the player throws the rest of the wine from a cup against a target, either against a slice that is in balance on top of a stick, which falls (soc. κότταβος κατακτός), or against an empty saucer, which floats in a basin with water, and sinks when hit (κ. ἐν λεκάνῃ or δι' ὀξυβάφων). However, κότταβος indicated not only the game itself, but also several objects and movements used in it. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Ion. -σσ-.

•COMP As a second member in μεθυσο-κότταβος [adj.] 'drunken while playing κ.' (Ar. Ach. 525).
•DER κοτταβίς [f.] 'cup with two handles for throwing' (Hell.); κοτταβεῖον (-βιον) 'kottabos-basin, -stander' (Dikaiarch., Hell.), also 'winner's prize at κ.' (com.); κοτταβικὴ ῥάβδος 'κ.-bar' (Hell.). Denominative verb κοτταβίζω 'to play κ.' (Ar., Antiph.), euphemistic for 'vomit' (Poll., EM), also with ἀπο-, κατα-, συν- (X., com.); thence κοττάβισις, (ἀπο-)κοτταβισμός (late).
•ETYM As the original meaning of κότταβος is unknown, all etymologies are necessarily uncertain. Formally, it has been compared with ▸κοττίς 'head, back of the head', κόττειν· τύπτειν 'to hit, stamp' (H.), κόττος 'κύβος, etc.'. For various hypotheses, see Frisk. Lat. cottabus 'slapping blow' (Plaut.) was borrowed from Greek; cf. Friedmann 1937: 46ff. The variation ττ/σσ points to a Pre-Greek word. See ▸κοτύλη.

κόττανα [n.pl.] kind of small figs (Ath., H.). ◂LW Sem.▸ •ETYM From Semitic; cf. Hebr. qāṭān, qᵉṭannīm 'small' (Lewy 1895: 22). Also to be connected is κοτάννα [f.], acc. to H. = παρθένος παρὰ Κρησί 'maiden (Cret.)'; cf. Hebr. qāṭōn, fem. qᵉṭannā 'small, young', also 'immature boy, girl' (Lewy 1895: 65). Lat. LW cottana [pl.] 'kind of small Syrian figs' (Plin.).

κοττάνη [f.] 'name of a fishing device (Ael. NA 12, 43). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From κόττος, name of a river fish; see on ▸κοττίς.

κοττίς, -ίδος [f.] 'hairdress with long hair on the forehead', Doric for κεφαλή (Poll., H., Phot.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also κοτίς (Hp.), = ἰνίον, παρεγκεφαλίς 'occipital bone, cerebellum' (Gal.), τῆς κεφαλῆς ἡ κορυφή 'top of the head' (Erot.).
•COMP As a second member in προκοττίς· ἡ χαίτη 'loose, flowing hair' (H.) and προκόττα [f.] (Dor.).
•DER κόττικοι· αἱ περικεφαλαῖαι 'head coverings'; κοττάρια· τὰ ἄκρα τῆς κέγχρου 'ears of millet' (H.). Further κόττος = κύβος (Cod. Just.), κοττός (κόττος)· ὄρνις. καὶ οἱ ἀλεκτρυόνες κοττοὶ διὰ τὸν ἐπὶ τῇ κεφαλῇ λόφον 'bird; cocks, because of the crests or tufts on their heads' (cf. MoGr. κόττα 'chicken'); κοττοβολεῖν· τὸ παρατηρεῖν τινα ὄρνιν 'observing a certain bird' (H.). On κόττος as a name of a river fish (Arist. HA 534a 1) see Strömberg 1943: 119 (named after the cock). PN Κοττίς, Κότταλος, -άλη (Herod.).
•ETYM Connection with κοτύλη 'bowl, dish' is a mere guess. Fur.: 362 connects κοτ(τ)ίς, (προ)κόττα with σκύτη· κεφαλή 'head' (H.); the geminate is not expressive, but rather points to Pre-Greek origin.

κοτύλη [f.] 'bowl, dish, small cup' (Il.), on the mg. Brommer Herm. 77 (1942): 358 and 366, also as a measure for liquids and dry materials, = 6 κύαθοι or = 0,5 ξέστης (IA), metaph. 'socket, especially of the hip-joint' (Il., Hp.), 'cymbals' [pl.] (A.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Also κότυλος [m.] 'id.' (Hom. Epigr., com.).
•COMP κοτυλ-ήρυτος 'to be scooped with cups' (Ψ 34), ἡμι-κοτύλη 'half a κ.' (pap.), δι-κότυλος 'measuring two κ.' (Hp., pap.).
•DER Diminutives κοτυλίς 'socket' (Hp.), κοτυλίσκος, -ίσκη, -ίσκιον 'small cup' (com.), κοτυλίδιον (Eust.). κοτυληδών, -όνος [f.] name of different cup-like holes (on the formation Chantraine 1933: 361), e.g. 'sucker, suction cup' (ε 433, etc.), also as a plant name, probably 'Cotyledon umbilicus' (Hp., Nic., Dsc.), after its leaves like suckers, Strömberg 1940: 44f., whence κοτυληδονώδης 'nipple-like' (Gal.). κοτυλιαῖος, -ιεῖος 'measuring a κ.' (Hell.), Mayser 1906-1938, I: 3: 95; κοτυλώδης 'cup-like' (Ath.); κοτύλων, -ωνος [m.] 'drunkard' (Plu.). Denominative verb κοτυλίζω 'to sell per κ., i.e. in small quantities' (IA), whence κοτυλισμός, -ιστής, -ιστί (Hell.).
•ETYM A close relation is Lat. catīnus '(flat) dish'; the deviation in vowel and formation suggests that they are independent loans from a third party. A loan is probable in the case of a vessel. Fur.: 101, 181 adduces κόνδυ 'a cup', as well as κονδύλιον; he notes (op. cit. 205[14]) that -υλη is a well-known suffix in Pre-Greek.

κουβαρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'wood-louse' (Dsc. 2, 35 tit.). ◂?▸
•DER Diminutive of κόβαρος· ὄνος 'id.' (cod. ἄνθρωπος, i.e. ἀνῶς) (H.). Another diminutive formation is MoGr. κουβάρι 'clew' (Kukules Λεξ. Ἀρχ. 5: 34), with the denominative κουβαρίζω (v.l. -ιάζω) = μηρύομαι 'to wind (together)' (sch. Theoc. 1, 29, also MoGr.).
•ETYM Acc. to Kukules (see also Strömberg 1944: 12), the animal was called this way because it can roll itself together. The group itself remains unexplained.

κοῦκι [n.] name of a palm-like tree, 'Hyphaena thebaica', also used for its fiber (PBaden 35, 23 [I[P]], Plin.). ◂LW Eg.▸ •COMP κουκιοφόρον δένδρον (Thphr.).
•DER κούκεον 'fruit of the kouki-tree' (Ostr.); κούκινος 'of the kouki-tree; made from its fiber' (pap.).
•ETYM Foreign word, perhaps of Egyptian origin (but see on ▸κόϊξ). Cf. Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 244.

κουκούφας, -ατος [m.] Egyptian name of the ἔποψ (Horap. 1. 55, PMag. Berol. 2, 18). ◂LW Eg.▸
•VAR Also κοκκ-.
•DER Diminutive κοκκοφάδιον (PMag. Lond. 121, 411), cf. Dölger ByzZ 38 (1938): 213.
•ETYM Onomatopoeic word. Comparable with Skt. kukkubha- 'Phasianus gallus', Lat. cucubiō, -īre from the cry of the screech-owl. Cf. on ▸κικκαβαῦ.

κουρά [f.] action noun 'cropping', of hair, beard or wool; 'lopping, cutting' of trees and grass; also 'lock of hair, virgin wool, fur' (IA); 'cut-off end, slips of wood' (Ph.). ◂IE kers-* 'shave'▸

•VAR Ion. -ρή.
•DER Nouns: 1. κουρεύς [m.] 'shaver, barber' (Att.); also name of a bird (H.), after its sound; thence κουρεῖον 'barber-shop' (Att.), κουρεακός 'talkative' (Plb.), on the formation Schwyzer: 497; also κουρευτής 'id.' (gloss.), fem. κουρεύτρια (Plu.), κουρευτικός 'used for shaving' (sch., Olymp.). 2. κούρειον (-εον) [n.] 'sacrifice of hair, etc. on the Apaturia (S., Is., inscr.), Κούρειος epithet of Apollo (Teos), κουρεῶτις, -ιδος (ἡμέρα, ἑορτή) [f.] 'the third day of the Apaturia, on which the hair of the young boys and girls was sacrificed' (Pl., inscr.); Κουρεών (-ηϊών), -ῶνος [m.] month name in Magnesia on the Maeander (inscr.). Perhaps also in αἱμα-κουρίαι [pl.] 'sacrifice of blood to the dead' (Pi.), with faded second member. 3. κούριμος 'belonging to cropping; shaved' (trag., Plu.), also κουρεύσιμος (sch.) as if from *κούρευσις (κουρεύομαι); see Arbenz 1933: 79f. 4. κουρικός 'used for cropping' (pap.). 5. κουρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'id.', of μάχαιρα (Cratin.), also 'cleaning girl' (com., Plb.). 6. κουρίας [m.] 'who has his hair shaved' (Luc., D. L.). 7. κουράς· ἡ ἐν τοῖς ὀροφώμασι γραφή, ὀροφικὸς πίναξ ' writing on the roofs, plank for a roof' (H.); also ἐγκουράς (A. Fr. 142, H.). 8. κουρῖτις [f.] plant name, 'περιστερεὼν ὕπτιος, Verbena officinalis' (Ps.-Dsc., Ps.-Apul.); naming motive unknown.
Denominative verbs: 1. κουριάω 'to need cropping, to have long hair' (Pherecr., Plu., Luc.), after the verbs of disease in -ιάω, see Schwyzer: 732; 2. κουρίζω 'to shave, cut' (Thphr., H.), aor. -ίξαι; 3. κουρεύομαι 'to take the tonsure, have the hair cut' (Just., sch.). On ►κοῦρος and ►κουρίξ, see s.vv.
•ETYM As a primary verbal noun, κουρά continues korsā́*; the verb is seen in Hitt. karš-^{zi} 'to cut off', Lyd. fa-karsed 'cuts off', and in ToAB kärs^{ā}- 'to know, understand', as well as ToA kärṣt^{ā}-, ToB kärst^{ā}- 'to cut off, destroy'. Traces of the same verb (but with a different development of -rs-, ultimately depending on the accent) are found in Gr. ἀ-κερσε-κόμης 'with uncut hair' (Υ 39), Κόρσης nickname of a smooth-shaved man (Chrysipp.), κορσόός· κορμός 'cut-off piece' (H.), κορσοῦν· κείρειν 'to shave' (H.), with κορσᾶς [m.] (pap.), κορσω-τήρ (Call., Poll.) 'barber', -τεύς 'id.' (Ath. 12, 520e), -τήριον 'barber-shop' (ibd.). Further details under ►κόρση and ►κείρω.

κούρητες •VAR κουρίδιος. ⇒κόρη.

κουρίξ [adv.] in ἔρυσάν τέ μιν εἴσω κ. 'draw him inside κ.' (χ 188), κ. ἑλκομένη 'being drawn κ.' (A. R. 4, 18), κ. αἰνυμένους 'taking κ.' (H.); meaning uncertain. ◄GR► •ETYM From κουρά, after the adverbs in -(ι)ξ (Schwyzer: 620, Chantraine 1942: 250). Acc. to Aristarchus, it means τῆς κόμης ἐπιλαβόμενοι, 'taking by the head of hair', which would make perfect sense, though κουρά in the sense of 'head of hair' raises some doubts. Others have assumed an original mg. 'holding the hair like when shaving', which fits the usual meaning of κουρά better.

κοῦρος [m.] probably collective 'loppings, twigs lopped from a tree' (IG 2², 1362: 6 [end IV^{a}]): ξύλα ... κοῦρον ... φρύγανα ... φυλλόβολα. ◄GR► •ETYM Verbal abstract from korsó-*, like ►κουρά from *κορσά; cf. Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 238. The form κόρος 'twig, sprout' does not show a trace of -s-* and therefore rather belongs to ►κόρη, etc.

κοῦφος [adj.] 'light, easily movable, nimble, vain, empty' (N 158 and θ 201: κοῦφα and κουφότερον as adverbs); on the mg. Treu 1955: 76, etc. ◄?►
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. κουφό-νοος 'with a nimble mind' (trag.), ὑπό-κουφος 'rather light' (Dsc., Plu.).
•DER κουφοτής [f.] 'lightness' (Hp., Pl.), accent after βαρυτής, Wackernagel Gött. Nachr. 1909: 59, Schwyzer: 382; κουφεῖαι [pl.] probably 'vase shards, debris'? (PTeb. 5, 199 [II^{a}]), κοῦφον κεράμιον also 'empty vessel'; MoGr. (ἀγριο-)κουφίτης [m.] plant name 'Fumaria' (Redard 1949: 68 and 73). Denominative κουφίζω [v.] 'to lighten, mitigate, cancel, nullify' (Hp., Att.), rarely intr. 'to be light' (Hes. Op. 463, Hp., trag.), whence κούφισις (Th.), -ισμα (E.), -ισμός (Hell.) 'mitigation'; κουφιστήρ 'ring-pad' (to lighten the pressure; medic.); κουφιστικός 'mitigating' (Arist.).
•ETYM Unknown. The full grade of the stem and the barytonesis are remarkable in the case of an adjective (Schwyzer: 459), which suggests that it could originally have been a noun. The form κοῦφος replaced or pushed back the old forms ἐλαχύς, ἐλαφρός, which in the process assumed a different meaning.

κόφινος [m.] 'big basket' (Att., Hell.), on the mg. Schulze Berl.Ak.Sb. 1905: 727f., also as a measure of capacity = 9 Att. χοίνικες (Boeot. inscr.). ◄PG(S,V)► •DER Diminutive κοφίνιον (pap.); κοφινώδης 'basket-like' (sch.), -ηδόν 'per basket' (EM); κοφινόομαι [v.] 'to have a basket put over one's head' (Nic. Dam.).
•ETYM Borrowed as Lat. cophinus, whence MoE coffin, MHG koffer, etc. Fur. compares κόφος, probably 'basket-load', as well as κοψία· χύτρα 'earthen pot' and κόψα· ὑδρία 'water bucket, urn'; on the suffix, see Fur.: 129[54].

κόχλος [m., f.] shell-fish with a spiral-shaped shell, 'sea-snail, land-snail', also 'purple-snail, kohl' (E., Arist., Theoc.). ◄PG(V)► •DER Several diminutive formations: κοχλίς [f.] (Luc., Man.); also name of an Arabic stone (Plin.); κοχλία = ξιφύδρια 'shell' (H.); κοχλίδιον (pap., Epict.), -άδιον (sch.). Further κοχλίας [m.] 'snail with spiral shell', often metaph. 'waterscrew, spiral stair, etc.' (com., Arist., Hell.); borrowed as Lat. coc(h)lea, cf. Ernout 1954: 54f.; κοχλιός 'id.' (Paul. Aeg., Aët., gloss.); κόχλᾶξ [m.] = κάχληξ (LXX, Dsc.); Lat. LW coclāca (Orib. lat.), cf. Ernout l.c. Unclear κοχλιάξων (-άζων), -οντος [m.] kind of machine-screw (Orib.), perhaps after ἄξων? From Lat. coc(h)lear, -āris [n.] (derived from coc(h)lea), Greek borrowed κοχλιάριον 'spoon', also as a measure (Dsc., medic.); originally name of a spoon, of which the sharp end was used to draw the snail from its shell; cf. WH s.v. coc(h)lear.
•ETYM Connection with ►κόγχος, ►κόγχη is evident; it has (Pre-Greek) prenasalization. Note also the vocalic variation in κόχλαξ/ κά-.

κοχυδέω [v.] 'to stream forth copiously' (Pherecr. 130, 4). ◄GR?►
•VAR Ipf. κοχύδεσκεν (Theoc. 2, 107; v.l. κοχύεσκεν), pres. also κοχύζει (Stratt. 61; cod. κοκκύζει).
•ETYM Explained by Frisk as an intensive reduplicated formation from χύδην (on the dissimilated vowel, see Schwyzer: 647), with back-formations κοχύ· πολύ, πλῆρες 'much, full' (H.), κόχος 'mighty stream' (sch. Theoc. ad loc.). Are the latter words learned contructions to explain the unclear forms? Reduplication from an adverb seems very strange in Greek.

κοχώνη [f.] 'buttocks' (Hp., com., Herod.). ◄IE? *ǵ^{h}eng^h- 'step'► •ETYM The almost complete identity with Skt. jaghána- [m., n.] 'buttocks' can hardly be a coincidence, but the further analysis remains hypothetical. Since Schmidt KZ 25 (1881): 112 and 116, as well as Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 373f., κοχώνη has been explained as assimilated from *καχώνα, with *καχ- equivalent to Skt. jagh- as the zero grade of jáṅghā [f.] 'lower thigh-bone' (to Go. gaggan 'to go', IE *ǵ^{h}eng^h-). Objections by Specht KZ 66 (1939): 197ff., who separates κοχώνη from jaghána-, etc. because of προχῶναι 'buttocks' (Archipp. 41), and compares χάσκω and cognates. However, προχῶναι could be a comic distortion of κοχώνη after πρωκτός (acc. to Güntert 1914: 122). Notice, too, that the Skt. word shows no trace of Brugmann's Law. Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 563 finds no solution either.

κόψιχος [m.] 'blackbird'. ⇒ κόσσυφος.

κρααίνω ⇒ κραιαίνω.

κράββατος [m.] 'couch, mattress' (Rhinth., Criton Com., Arr.). ◄LW Macedonian?►

•VAR κράβαττος, κράβατος, also -ακτος, -ον (so-called 'reverse writing'? See Schwyzer 317[1]).

•COMP κραβατο-πόδιον = ἑρμίς 'leg of a bed' (sch.).

•DER Diminutives: κραβάτιον (Arr.), -άκτιον (pap. V-VI[p]), κρεβαττάριον (Ed. Diocl.), MoGr. κρεββάτι. κραβακτήριος [adj.] (pap. VI[p]). Unclear κραβάτριος, perhaps 'chamberlain' (IPE 2, 297).

•ETYM Cf. Lat. grabātus (-attus). Acc. to Kretschmer 1921: 91ff., it is a loan from a Macedonia-Illyrian word for 'oak', *γράβος, which is seen in ►γράβιον. Fur.: 126[41] calls this semantically arbitrary. On anlauting κ- for γ-, see Schwyzer ZII 6 (1926): 242. See further Kramer AfP 45 (1999): 205-216; the word would have been adopted independently by Greeks and Romans (likewise Fur.: ibid.). Hardly related to ►γάβαθον.

κράβυζος [m.] name of a shell-fish (Epich. 42). ◄PG?►

•ETYM Probably a substrate word; for -υζος, see Schwyzer 472[3] and s.v. ►κόνυζα. Acc. to Strömberg 1943: 121, it stands for *κραβό-βυζος, from κράβος· ὁ λάρος 'mew' (H.) and βῦζα 'eagle-owl' (Nic.); highly unlikely. Fur.: 238, 283 connects it with κράμβος 'dry', for which there seems no reason.

κραγγών, -όνος [f.] name of a small crustacean, probably 'Squilla mantis' (Arist. HA). ◄PG?►

•VAR κραγών, κράγγη (v.ll.).

•ETYM On the formation in -ών, see Chantraine 1933: 159. The meaning suggests a loan. The connection with Skt. śŕṅga- 'horn' (which belongs to ►κέρας, etc.) is rightly rejected by Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 2:1, 508. Instead of κραγγών· κίσσα 'jay', von Blumenthal 1930: 41f. proposes to read κραγών, i.e. "crying bird" (to ►κράζω), and to change κραγών· ἔνυδρον ζῷον 'water animal' to κραγγών, which would fit the alphabetical order.

κραδάω [v.] 'to swing, brandish', med. 'to tremble, be agitated' (post-Hom.). ◄?►

•VAR In Hom. only ptc. κραδάων and κραδαίνω (Il.). Also κραδεύειν (H.) as an explanation of κραδαίνειν.

•COMP Rarely with prefix: ἐπι-κραδάω (A. R., Opp.); ἐπι-, δια-, συγ-κραδαίνω (Tim. Pers., Arist.); ἀνακραδεύει· σείει, σαλεύει 'shakes, causes to rock' (H.).

•DER κράδη [f.] 'spray at the end of branches, twig, especially of figs' (IA, Hes. Op. 681), ἀπο-κράδιος 'plucked from a fig tree' (AP), ἀπο-κραδίζω [v.] 'to pluck from a fig tree' (Nic.); also 'diseased formation of small shoots in trees', whence κραδάω [v.] 'to have κράδη' (Thphr.); also name of a contrivance that shows actors hovering in the air (Poll. 4, 128, H.). Also κράδος 'blight in fig-trees' (Thphr. HP 4, 14, 4), after Thphr. l.c. also a name of the twig. Further κραδησίτης· φαρμακός 'scapegoat', ὁ ταῖς κράδαις βαλλόμενος 'who is being hit with a branch' (H.); κραδίης [m.] 'prepared with fig twigs, provided with fig twigs' (H., Hippon.); κραδιαῖος 'made of fig-shoots' (Orph.); κράδαλοι· κλάδοι 'branches' (H.); κραδαλός 'trembling' (Eust.). On κραδευταί see ►κρατευταί.

•ETYM It seems certain that κράδη and κράδος belong with κραδάω, of which κραδαίνω is an enlargement. It is probable that κραδάω is a denominative, so an original meaning 'swinging' may be assumed for κράδη. This fits well with the meanings 'crown (of a tree)' and 'suspension-machine' (cf. Fraenkel 1906: 19f.). Alternatively, κραδάω could be a zero grade iterative, derived from a lost primary verb, with κράδη, -ος as back-formations. Acc. to Schwyzer: 682 and Chantraine 1942: 356, κραδάω is an old (originally athematic) root present, but this can hardly be correct. The word ►κόρδᾱξ, name of a dance, is unrelated. The connection with Lat. cardō remains hypothetical. Schulze KZ 57 (1930): 75 supposed that the IE word for 'heart' (Gr. ►κῆρ, ►καρδία) is a very old root noun from κραδάω, but this must remain uncertain.

κράζω [v.] 'to croak, cry' (individual attestations since Ar.). ◄ONOM►

•VAR Perf. κέκρᾱγα (trag., Ar.), to which pret. ἐκέκραγον (LXX), fut. κεκράξομαι (com., LXX), κεκραγήσει· κραυγάσει 'will cry aloud' (H.), aor. κεκρᾶξαι (LXX); aor. κρᾰγεῖν (ξ 467, Pi., Antiphon, Ar.), later κρᾶξαι (Thphr., LXX) with fut. κράξω (AP, Ev. Luc.).

•COMP Also prefixed, especially with ἀνα-.

•DER κεκράκτης [m.] 'cryer' (Hp., Ar., Luc.), κέκραγμα (Ar.), κεκραγμός (E., Plu.) 'crying'; κεκραξι-δάμας [m.] 'control by crying', comic epithet of Cleon (Ar. V. 596), after Ἀλκι-δάμας (see Sommer 1948: 174); κρᾰγέτας [m.] 'crier' (Pi.), κρᾰγός 'crying' (Ar. Eq. 487 κραγὸν κεκράξεται), κράκτης 'id.' (Adam., Tz.), κράκτρια (H. s.v. λακέρυζα), κρακτικός 'crying, making noise' (Luc.).

•ETYM The original system had a thematic root aorist κρᾰγεῖν beside an intensive perfect κέκρᾱγα with present mg. (Schwyzer 1950: 263f.). The central position of the perfect is testified by the derived verbal and nominal forms κεκράξομαι, κεκράκτης, etc. Later formations are the rare present κράζω and the aorist κρᾶξαι, etc.; a further innovation was ἐκ-, ἐγ-κραγγάνω (Men., H.). As an original onomatopoeia, κέκραγα and κραγεῖν show similarity with ► κρώζω 'to croak'. The form ► κάραγος · ὁ τραχὺς ψόφος, οἷον πριών 'raw sound, like a saw' (H.) is not a regular disyllabic form beside κραγ-. See ► κόραξ, ► κραυγή.

κραιαίνω [v.] 'to complete' (Il.), intr. 'to end' (medic.), 'to rule' (θ 391, S., E.). ◄IE *ḱrh$_2$-s-n- 'head'►

•VAR κρᾱαίνω (v.l.), aor. κρηῆναι (Il.), κρααᾶναι (H.), pass. κρᾱανθῆναι (Theoc.), perf.3sg. κεκρᾱ́ανται (Od.), verbal adj. ἀ-κρᾱ́αντος (Hom.); κραίνω (Od., medic.), fut. κρᾰνέω, -ῶ (Emp., A., E.); ἐπι-κρᾰνεῖ (A. Ag. 1340), intr. κρᾰνέεσθαι (I 626), aor. κρῆναι (O 599), κρᾶναι (A., S.), pass. κρανθῆναι (Pi., trag.), perf.3sg. κέκρανται (trag.), ἄ-κραν-τος (Pi., trag.).

•COMP Also with ἐπι-.

•DER From κραίνω: κράντωρ, -ορος 'ruler' (E. [lyr.], AP), 'who fulfills' (epigr. apud Paus. 8, 52, 6), with dissimilation κάντορες· οἱ κρατοῦντες 'who are ruling' (H.); κραντήρ, -ῆρος 'ruler' (Orph.), plur. 'wisdom teeth', originally "completer" of the tooth row (Arist.), sing. 'tusk' (Nic., Lyc.); fem. κράντειρα 'governess' (APl., Orph.); on κράντωρ, -τήρ see Benveniste 1948: 46f.; κράντης 'fulfiller' (Lyc.); κραντήριοι· οἱ κραίνοντες, καὶ ἐπιτελοῦντες 'who are fulfilling, completing' (H.). Compound αὐτό-κρανος 'completing itself, self-evident' (H., EM; also A. Fr. 295f.); acc. to H. also = κίων μονόλιθος 'stone pillar', but in the last mg. rather to κάρα 'head'; see -κρανον and κρανίον.

•ETYM The variant reading κρᾱαίνω points to an old denominative *krāhn̥-je/o-, from the old n-stem found in gen. κρᾱ́ατος < *krāhn̥t-os << PIE *ḱrh$_2$-s-n-ós (cf. on ► κάρᾱ 'head'), like ὀνομαίνω to ► ὄνομα. The original meaning must have been 'to crown' (cf. καρᾱνοῦν 'to complete' to κάρᾱνον 'head'). Beside κρᾱαίνω, the aorist κρηῆναι shows Ionic phonetics. It was contracted to κρῆναι, and from this a new present κραίνω was made (cf. φῆναι to ► φαίνω), whence κρᾰνέω, etc. The form κραιαίνω may owe its root syllable κραι- to influence of the later form κραίνω (Leumann IF 57 (1940): 157).

κραιπάλη [f.] 'hangover, headache' (Hp., Ar.). ◄PG?►

•COMP ἀ-κραίπαλος 'without intoxication, liberating' (Arist., Dsc.), κραιπαλό-κωμος 'rambling in drunken revelry' (Ar.).

•DER κραιπαλώδης 'prone to drunkenness' (Phld., Plu.), κραιπαλάω [v.] 'to have a hangover' (Ar., Pl., Plb.).

•ETYM For the formation, cf. ἀγκάλη, μασχάλη, σκυτάλη, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 245ff.); further unclear. Connection to κραιπνός with interchange ν/ λ cannot be excluded semantically, but it is not evident. Latin has a LW crāpula 'id.' (yielding MoFr. crapule) with long ā, which might continue the Pre-Greek variation αι/ ᾱ (for which see Fur.: 336ff.). See also André Ant. class. 33 (1964): 92f.

κραιπνός [adj.] 'swift, rushing' (Il.); cf. Treu 1955: 6f. ◄PG?►

•COMP κραιπνό-συτος, -φόρος 'swiftly rushing, leading' (A.).

•ETYM Unknown. Cf. on κραιπάλη. Could it represent a Pre-Greek pre-form *krap^y-n- (cf. on ► ἐξαίφνης, ► ἐξαπίνης)?

κραῖρα [f.] · ἡ κεφαλή, καὶ ἀκροστόλιον 'the head, terminal ornament'; also κραῖροι· στόλοι νεῶν, μέτωπα, κεφαλαί 'prows, fronts, heads of ships' (H.). ◄IE *ḱerh$_2$- 'head, horn', *ḱrh$_2$-s-r-ih$_2$►

•COMP Further only as a second member: ὀρθό-κραιρα 'with upright standing horns or beaks' (Hom., verse-final), in βοῶν, νεῶν ὀρθοκραιράων; ἐΰ-κραιρα 'with beautiful horns', e.g. βουσὶν ἐϋκραίρῃσιν (h. Merc. 209); ἡμί-κραιρα 'half the head or face' (com., inscr.); μελάγ-κραιρα 'with black heads' (Lyc., [Arist.] Mir.); δί-κραιρα 'forked' (A. R.). Thematicized εὔ-κραιρος [f.] (A., Opp., Tryph.; v.l. in h. Merc. 209); ὀρθό-κραιρος [f.] (AP); τανύ-κραιρος [m., f.] 'with long horns' (AP, Opp.); δί-κραιρος [m.] 'two-horned' (AP); βοό-, ἰσό-, ὁμό- κραιρος (Nonn.). Reshaped after the nouns in -ης, -ητος: εὐκραίρης (Max. 84).

•ETYM The apparent simplices κραῖρα and κραῖρος have clearly been taken from compounds. The only old form is the feminine second member -κραιρα. This extremely complicated form was extensively discussed in Nussbaum 1986: 222-247, as well as in Peter's 1980a: 228-286. It has been recognized for a long time that -κραιρα belongs to ► κέρας (► κάρᾱ). As a basic form, we may posit *ḱrh$_2$-s-r-ih$_2$ > *krāh-ar-ja, where the contraction product -ā- was regularly shortened before -rj-. After the other compounded adjectives, Greek created a thematic form -κραιρος, indifferent to gender, which eventually survived.

κράμβη [f.] 'cabbage' (IA). Up till now, the word was mentioned under ► κράμβος, but it has nothing to do with it. Cf. also RPh. 71 (1997): 165, where it is noted that a reading *γάμβρη is wrong. Fur. did not split the words either (see on ► κράμβος). ◄?►

•COMP As a first member e.g. in κραμβο-κέφαλος 'cabbage-headed' (pap.).

•DER Diminutive κραμβίδιον 'id.' (Antiph.), κραμβίον 'cabbage soup' (Hp.; MoGr. forms, part of which has γρ-, in Georgacas ByzZ 41 (1941): 362); κραμβίς 'cabbage-worm' (Ael.), see Strömberg 1944: 9; κραμβήεις 'cabbage-like' (Nic.), κραμβίτας [m.] 'greengrocer' (Thess.).

•ETYM No etymology. Strömberg 1940: 24 connected the word with ► κράμβος, assuming that the plant was called after its shrunken leaves; however, the connection with the Gm. group of OHG (h)rimfan 'to shrink' must now be forgotten. Borrowed as Lat. crambē (Plin.), MoP karam̥b 'cabbage'.

κράμβος [adj.] = καπυρός, ξηρός 'loud or clear, dry', of sounds (Ar. Eq. 539, H., Suid.). ◄PG(V)►

•DER κραμβαλέος 'dry, roasted' (Ath.), after αὐαλέος, etc.; κραμβαλίζουσιν· καπυρίζουσι 'revel' (H.); κρομβόω [v.] 'to roast, bake' (Diph.). κραμβότατον στόμα 'loudest voice' (H., Suid.); as a msc. subst. 'blight in grapes, when they shrivel before they are ripe' (Thphr.), see Strömberg 1937: 167. One also connects κράμβαλα· μνημεῖα 'monuments' (H.), supposing it denotes the urn with ashes, but this is uncertain. Further κράμβωτον· ἰκτῖνος τὸ ζῷον 'kite, the animal' (H.) (perhaps after its claws, but see Thompson 1895 s.v.).

•ETYM For the structure, cf. σκαμβός, ► κλαμβός. The accent is remarkable and may point to original substantival function.

The word has been compared with OHG (h)rimfan 'to wrinkle, curb, etc.', as if from IE kremb-, kromb-. However, Fur.: 238 compares ►κραῦρος 'dry, frail, fragile', assuming it is a form without prenasalization and with u̯ for β (on which see Fur.: 228-242). This seems convincing; note Frisk's comment s.v. ►κραῦρος: "ebenfalls mit bemerkenswerter Barytonese." Fur.: 343 further adduces κόμβος· ὁ κόνδυλος. καὶ ὁ καπυρός 'ball, swelling; also dried, parched'; κρομβότατον· καπυρώτατον. κατακεκονδυλωμένον 'very dry, swollen' (H.). Further, ►κράβυζος may perhaps be added. Therefore, the word is without a doubt Pre-Greek. The further connection of κράμβωτον 'kite' with κράμβος· λάρος 'mew' (H.), Fur.: 283, is uncertain.

κραναός [adj.] 'hard, raw, rocky' (Il.), also of Athens and the Athenians, called Κραναὰ πόλις and Κραναaí (Ar.), or Κραναοί (Hdt.); also Κραναός, a mythical king of Athens. ◄?►
•COMP κραναή-πεδος 'with rocky soil' said of Delos (h. Ap. 72), -η- metrically conditioned (Zumbach 1955: 18).
•ETYM Evidenced by comparison of κερα(ϝ)ός and τανα(ϝ)ός, it probably derives from *κραναϝός. No convincing etymology. The traditional connection with words for 'hard' (see ►κράτος) makes no sense, as long as the formation has not been explained.

κρᾱνίον [n.] 'skull, brain-pan', also of the head in general (Θ 84, Pi. I. 4, 54, Att.). On the long ᾱ in Hom. see Wackernagel 1916: 225, Chantraine 1942: 18, Shipp 1967: 21. ◄IE ḱerh$_2$-* 'head, horn'► •COMP As a first member in κρανιό-λειος 'bald-headed' (Com. Adesp. 1050); quite frequent as a second member, especially in medical expressions, e.g. ὀπισθο-κράνιον 'occiput', ἐγ-κράνιον 'cerebellum' (after ἐγ-κέφαλος), but also βου-κράνιον 'oxhead' (EM), also a plant name (Ps.-Dsc., Gal.), see Strömberg 1940: 47. Adjectival hypostasis περι-κράνιος 'round the skull' (Plu., medic.). Older and more common is -κρᾱνον, e.g in ἐπί-κρανον 'capital, headband' (Pi., E., inscr.), ποτί-κρανον 'cushion' (Sophr., Theoc.), ὠλέ-κρανον 'point of the elbow' (Hp., Ar., Arist.), κιο(νό)-κρανον (see ►κίων). Also adjectives like βού-, ἐλαφό-, δί-, τρί-, χαλκεό-, ὀρθό-κρανος. Rarely as a first member: κρανο-κοπέω [v.] 'to cut off the head' (pap.); on κρανο-κολάπτης see ►κράνον.
•DER Denominative verbs: κρανίξαι· ἐπὶ κεφαλὴν ἀπορρῖψαι 'to throw (down) upon the head', κρηνιῶν· καρηβαρῶν 'being heavy in the head' (H.); hypostasis ἀποκρανίξαι 'to tear from the head' (AP), 'to cut off the head' (Eust.).
•ETYM The secondary formation κρᾱνίον goes back to a nominal basis. It seems best to start from the old oblique stem krān-* < ḱrh$_2$-s-n-* of κάρη, which was later replaced by krāhn̥t-*. In this context, note the gloss κράνα· κεφαλή (H.). See further ►κάρα and ►κέρας.

κράνον [n.] 'Cornelian cherry' (Thphr., medic.). ◄IE ker-* 'cornel'► •VAR Also κράνος [f.] (pap., Gp.).
•COMP As a first member perhaps in κρανο-κολάπτης name of a spider (Philum. Ven. 15, 1, sch. Nic. Th. 764), see Strömberg 1944: 22.

•DER More common and attested earlier is κράνεια [f.] 'cornelian cherry' (Hom., E., Thphr., Hell.), also κρανία (Hp., Dsc.), -έα (Gp.). Hence κράνειον (-ιον) 'id.' (Thphr., Gal.), κρανέϊνος 'of cornel wood' (Hdt., X.), also κρανάϊνος 'id.' (Hp., X., Str.), after ἐλάϊνος; κράνινος 'id.' (Paus.).
•ETYM Lat. cornum, -us, with the same fluctuation as to the gender, has been compared to reconstruct IE krno-*. Lith. Kirnis name of a 'god who protects cherries' is of doubtful appurtenance. Mediterranean origin is also possible, which has to be assumed for ►κέρασος in any case.

κράνος [n.] 'helmet' (IA), see Trümpy 1950: 45f. ◄?►
•COMP As a first member in κρανο-ποιέω 'to forge helmets', whence -ποιΐα, -ποιός (Ar.).
•DER Diminutive κρανίδιον (Att. inscr.).
•ETYM The word κράνος must be connected with the group of words for 'head, horn', but cannot contain a laryngeal. Connection with ►κάρυον, ►κραναός, etc. is less probable.

κραπαταλλός [m.] name of a worthless fish (Hdn., H.); also metaph. = μωρός 'dull' (H.), see Strömberg 1943: 95[2], and as a name of a coin (= δραχμή) in Hades (Pherecr. apud Poll. 9, 83). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also -αλλός (Hdn. 1, 158).
•DER κραπαταλίας· ἀνεμώδης καὶ ἀσθενής. καὶ ἀνίσχυρα λέγων, ἄμεινον δὲ ληρώδης 'vain or idle and weak; speaking without foundation, or better: frivolously' (H.) (Pherecr. 99).
•ETYM A formation in -αλ(λ)ός with variation λ/λλ (not noticed by Chantraine 1933: 245ff.). Therefore, clearly a Pre-Greek word in -al^y- (see Beekes 2008).

κράσπεδον [n.] 'edge, border of a cloth', metaph. of a country, a mountain, also of an army = 'wing of the army' (S., E., Ar., X., Theoc., NT). ◄?►
•DER κρασπεδίτης 'hindmost person in a chorus' (Plu.), opposed to the κορυφαῖος; κρασπεδόομαι [v.] 'to be bordered' (E.).
•ETYM Analyzed as an old compound of κάρᾱ 'head' (in the form κρᾱσ-) with a faded second member πέδον 'plain, ground', for which Skt. dru-padá- [n.] 'wooden post' is compared. The first member would point to an original meaning 'upper border', acc. to Risch IF 59 (1949): 14. However, Nussbaum 1986: 71 is very sceptical; there is no indication whatsoever that it would contain the word for 'head'.

κράστις 'green fodder'. ⇒γράω.

κράταιγος [m.] 'hawthorn, Crataegus oxyacantha' (Thphr.). ◄?►
•VAR Also -αιγών, -όνος.
•ETYM Connection with κρατύς 'hard' and αἰγ- in ►αἰγίλωψ explains nothing. The etymology therefore remains unknown.

κρατευταί [m.pl.] 'stone or metal blocks on both sides of the altar, on which the spits rested' (I 214, Eup., Att. inscr.), see Chapouthier REA 43 (1941): 12ff.; also 'supporting stone of the pavement' (Lebadea). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR κραδευταί (Att. inscr.), Solmsen KZ 42 (1909): 221ff.
•DER κρατευτήρια [pl.] 'id.' (Poll. 6, 89), after the instrument nouns in -τήριον.
•ETYM The formation in -ευτᾱ- is remarkable, but it does not help to assume a verb κρατεύω = κρατύνω 'to strengthen, prop'. The rare by-form κραδευταί (Att. inscr.) can hardly be explained as a folk-etymological transformation after ►κραδάω, nor does the form in -τ- point to folk etymology after κρατύς. Fur.: 181 is right in concluding to a Pre-Greek loan with δ/ τ; cf. on ►βασκευταί for the formation.

κράτος [n.] 'strength, power, authority' (Il.), on the mg. Trümpy 1950: 202ff. ◄IE kret-s-* 'strength', krt-u-, krt-ero-► •VAR Epic Ion. (Dor.) also κάρτος, Aeol. κρέτος.
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. ἀ-κρατής 'without strength, powerless', opposed to ἐγ-κρατής 'having power over, controlling (oneself)', whence ἐγκράτεια, -έω, etc.; αὐτο-κρατής 'having power over oneself, independent'; more usual αὐτο-κράτωρ 'with unlimited power' (Ar., Th.); also -κρέτης in Aeol. and Arc.-Cypr. PNs, e.g. Σω-κρέτης.
•DER Beside the noun κράτος, κρέτος, several adjectives exist:
1. κρατύς 'strong, powerful' (Hom.); only verse-final κρατὺς Ἀργεϊφόντης; κρατύνω 'to strengthen, consolidate, rule' (Il.), epic also καρτ-; thence κρατυσμός 'strengthening', κρατυντήριος 'id.', -τικός 'id.' (medic.), κρατύντωρ 'controller' (PMag. Leid.).
2. κρατερός (Il., A. Pr. 168 [anap.]), καρτερός (Il.) 'id.' (IA); also as a first member, e.g. κρατερό-φρων (Il.). Thence καρτερέω [v.] 'to be steadfast, hold out, overcome onseself' (IA), also with prefix, e.g. δια-; thence καρτερία (Pl., X.), -ρησις (Pl.) 'holding on, firmness', -ρικός (Att.); καρτερόω [v.] 'to strengthen' (Aq., Herm.).
3. κραταιός 'id.' (Il.), also as a plant name (Ps.-Dsc.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 82; rarely as a first member, e.g. κραταιό-φρων (PMag.). Thence κραταιότης = κράτος (LXX), κραταιόω 'to strengthen' (LXX, NT), κραταίωμα, -ωσις (LXX). Fem. κραταιίς (Od.), see Schwyzer: 385.
4. Grades of comparison: comp. κρείττων (Att.), κρείσσων (epic) with secondary -ει- for κρέσσων (Ion., Pi.); Dor. κάρρων < kr̥t-i̯ōn*, Cret. κάρτων; denominative κρειττόομαι [v.] 'to have excrescences', of wine, whence κρείττωσις (Thphr.). Superl. κράτιστος (Il.), epic κάρτ-, whence κρατιστεύω [v.] 'to be the best, surpass' (Pi., Att.); also -(ε)ία 'highness' (pap.), as a title. 5. Adverb κάρτα 'in a high degree, very' (Ion., trag.). 6. As a first member often κραται- (καρται-), e.g. κραται-γύαλος 'with strong breast-pieces' (T 361). Further Κρατι-, Καρτι- in PNs, e.g. Κρατί-δημος, Καρτί-νικος; also Κρατ(ο)-, Κρατε-, etc. (Bechtel 1917b: 256). Short hypocoristic names Κρατῖνος, Κρατύλος, Κράτυλλος, Κρατιεύς. On Κρεσφόντης see below.
7. Verb: κρατέω 'to control, possess, rule, conquer' (Il.), Aeol. κρετέω, aor. κρατῆσαι (post-Hom.), κρέτησαι (Sapph.), often with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-, κατα-, περι-; thence (ἐπι-, etc.) κράτησις 'power, rule' (Th., LXX), (δια-, ἐπι-) κρατητικός 'controlling' (late), (δια-)κράτημα 'support, grip' (medic.); κρατητής 'possessor' (Procl.); κρατῆρας· τοὺς κρατοῦντας 'who are in power' (H.), for κρατητῆρας (Lewy KZ 59 (1932): 182). But ἐγκρατέω from ἐγ-κρατής, ναυ-κρατέω, -τία from ναυ-κρατής, etc.; see above. Also καρταίνειν· κρατεῖν 'to rule' (H.).

•ETYM The full grade in Aeol. κρέτος interchanges regularly with the zero grade in κρατύς, κάρτα (the distribution of αρ and ρα in this root is not well understood; discussed in Schwyzer: 342). Both κράτος, κάρτος and the compounds Dor. κάρρων < *κάρσ(σ)ων < *κάρτι̯ων, κάρτων arose analogically beside the old full grade κρέσσων < *κρέτι̯ων (details in Seiler 1950: 53ff.). A zero grade of the s-stem κρέτος is supposed in Κρεσ-φόντης < *Κρετ-σ- (see Kretschmer Glotta 24 (1936): 237 and Heubeck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 5 (1954): 26).
The derivational history of the forms is unclear in some cases. The adjective κρατερός, καρτερός was supposed to contain an r-stem alternating with the s-stem (Benveniste 1935: 17), but it may also be a Greek formation in -ero- (cf. e.g. θαλερός, γλυκερός). For κάρτα, cf. e.g. τάχα, ἅμα, and see Ruijgh 1980: 189-198. The first member κραται- may have been modelled after παλαι-; thence perhaps κραταιός, like παλαιός. Acc. to Risch 1937: 126, however, κραταιός is a back-formation from κραταιή for *κράταια, the old fem. of κρατύς (comparing Πλαταιαί to πλατύς).
An exact correspondence to the group of κράτος is not found in other IE languages. The closest are Skt. krátu- [m.] '(magical) power, mind, will', Av. xratu- [m.] 'id.' (for the semantics, cf. OE cræft 'force, physical strength, power', but also 'insight, craft, etc.'). The Germanic word for 'hard', Go. hardus, etc., which is usually adduced, has Schwebeablaut (kortú-* as opposed to kr̥tú-, kret-); the connection is rejected by Strunk MSS 34 (1976): 169f.

κραυγή [f.] 'cry, loud crying' (Att.). ◄IE krau-g-* 'cry'►
•DER κραυγίας· ἵππος, ὁ ὑπὸ κραυγῆς καὶ ψόφου ταρασσόμενος 'horse that is stirred by a shout and noise' (H.) and κραυγός· δρυοκολάπτου εἶδος 'kind of woodpecker' (H.). Denominative κραυγάζω [v.] 'to cry, crack' (unknown poet apud Pl. Resp. 607b, D., Hell.), κραυγασμός 'crying' (Diph.), -αστής 'cryer' (AB), -άστρια [f.] (H.), -αστικός 'crying' (Procl., sch.). Also κραύγασος 'crier' (gloss.), see Schwyzer: 516, Chantraine 1933: 435; Κραυγασίδης (Batr.), κραύγαζος (Ptol.). A different formation κραυγανάομαι in κραυγανώμενον (Hdt. 1, 111), v.l. -γόμενον, cf. Schwyzer: 770; uncertain sch. Call. Aet. Fr. 1, 20. Further the PNs Κραῦγις, Κραυξίδας, Κραυγαλίδαι (Bechtel 1917b: 496).
•ETYM The form κραυγή could be an action noun pointing to a primary verb, corresponding to several forms in Germanic and Balto-Slavic. Thus, ON hraukr 'sea-raven' could be directly equated with κραυγός; further, with ablauting, ū Go. hruk [acc.sg.] 'crowing' and hrukjan 'to crow'. A voiceless root-final stop is found in Lith. kraũkti, 1sg. kraukiù 'to screech', and Slav. words like Ru. kruk 'raven' (krauk-o-*). Note further, with palatal final, Skt. krόśati = Av. xraosaiti 'to screem, cry'. Like the comparable sound imitations ►κράζω, ►κρώζω, κραυγή is probably an old onomatopoeia.

κραῦρος [adj.] 'dry, brittle, fragile' (Pl., Arist., Thphr.). ◄PG(V)►
•DER κραυρότης 'frailty' (Thphr., Gal.), κραυρόομαι [v.] 'to become dry' (Ph., D. C.). Further κραῦρος [m.] (Arist.) = κραῦρα [f.] (Suid., Phot., perhaps Gortyn, see Collitz 5001) 'feverish disease of swine and cattle', whence κραυράω [v.] 'to suffer from κ.' (Arist.).

•ETYM A Pre-Greek variant of ►κράμβος, with interchange ϝ/ β and prenasalization.

κρέας [n.] 'meat, piece of meat' (Il.). ◄IE kreuh*$_2$- 'flesh'►

•VAR Gen. κρέως (secondary κρέατος; Att. inscr. 338[a]); plur. nom. κρέᾰ (Il.), which must be an innovation; very uncertain κρέατα (Od.); gen. κρεῶν (IA), also κρειῶν (Hom.), probably for κρεέων, κρεάων (h. Merc. 130), dat. κρέασι (Il.), also κρέεσσι (Orac. apud Hdt. 1, 47), κρεάεσσι (late Ep.).

•DIAL Dor. κρῆς.

•COMP As a first member usually κρεο- (after the o-stems), e.g. κρεο-κοπέω [v.] 'to cut meat' (A., E.), also κρεω- (after γεω-, λεω-, etc.) as a v.l. and e.g. in κρεω-δαίτης 'meat distributor' (Phld.), κρε-άγρα 'meat pincer' (Ar.), with elision from κρεο-; κρεᾰ-νόμος 'distributing meat', whence -έω, -ία (E., Is., Hell.), after ἀγορᾱ-νόμος; thence κρεᾰ-δοτέω, -σία; κρεη-φαγέω [v.] 'to eat meat' (Hp.), analogical beside κρεο-φαγέω. Details on the inflexion in Schwyzer: 516, Chantraine 1942: 209f.; on the shape of the first member Solmsen 1901: 23[1]. Rarely as a second member: πάγ-κρεας 'sweetbread, pancreas' (Arist., medic.), γλυκύ-κρεος 'with sweet meat' (Sophr.), etc.

•DER Diminutive κρεᾴδιον (IA), κρεΐσκος (Alex. 189), κρεύλλιον (Theognost.); κρεώδης 'meaty' (Arist., Thphr.), κρεῖον 'butcher's stall' (I 206), κρήϊον (H.), after ἀγγεῖον, etc.; quite uncertain κρηστήριον (Attica IV[a]).

•ETYM Except for the accent, κρέας is identical with Skt. kravíṣ- [n.] 'raw flesh', from a base form kreuh*$_2$-s- [n.]. An s-stem is probably also continued in Lat. cruor, -ōris 'blood from a wound', as well as in OIr. crú [n.] 'gore, blood' and OCS kry 'blood', which derive from zero grade kruH-s*. Further forms: Skt. krūr-á- 'raw, bloody' < kruh*$_2$-ro-, Skt. kravyá- [n.] 'raw flesh' = OPr. krawian [n.], Lith. kraũjas [m.] 'blood', all from kreuh*$_2$-i-. See ►κρύος.

κρείττων ⇒ κράτος.

κρείων, -οντος [m.] 'ruler, prince' (Il.). ◄IE ḱreiH-* 'splendour'►

•DIAL κρέων (Pi., A. [lyr.]), -οντος.

•DER Fem. κρείουσα (X 48), κρέουσα (B.) 'ruler, princess'; PNs Κρέων, -ουσα (post-Hom.), patronymic Κρειοντιάδης (T 240).

•ETYM An inherited word from Indo-European poetic language. For example, Gonda KZ 73 (1956): 153f. compared εὐρὺ κρείων with Skt. pṛthu-śrī- 'with broad śrī-'. The Greek nt-stem (after ἄρχων, μέδων, etc.) probably replaced an older n-stem.

In Indo-Iranian, we find a noun Skt. śrī- [f.] 'magnificence, riches, splendor, fame' < ḱriH-*. Narten KZ 100 (1987): 270-96 points out that the oldest Greek forms must be those in PNs in -κρέων, e.g. Φιλο-κρέων (Cyprus). Therefore, the old connection of epic κρείων with the Indo-Iranian comparative Av. sraiiah- 'more beautiful', Skt. śréyāṃs- (with secondary e for a) 'more shining, superior' is untenable. Instead, Greek has a plain n-stem ḱreiH-ōn*, and the epic form κρείων may have metrical lengthening for κρέων. Cf. also Peters 1993b: 106-8.

κρέκω [v.] 'to weave, strike a stringed instrument with a plectrum', metaph. 'to produce a sound, raise (a song)' (Sapph., Pi., Ar. [lyr.], AP). ◄IE? kreḱ-* 'strike'►

•VAR Aor. κρέξαι (late).

•COMP Rarely with ὑπο-, δια-, συν-.

•DER κροκ- [f.] in κρόκ-α [acc.sg.] (Hes. Op. 538), κρόκ-ες [nom.pl.] (AP 6, 335), κρόξ [nom.sg.] only H., Theognost.; further κρόκη (IA) 'thread which is passed between the threads of the warp, woof, (woollen) cloth'. From κρόκη: κρόκιον 'woollen band' (Anticl. 13), κροκίς [f.] 'sundew, fly-strap, Drosera' (Apollod. apud Plin. HN 24, 167), κροκύς [f.] 'flock of wool' (IA), κροκύδιον (Gal.), κροκυδίζω [v.] 'to pluck off flocks of wool' (com., Gal.), -ισμός (Gal.); κροκόω [v.] 'to weave, envelop in wool' (Dionys. apud St. Byz., Phot.) ; κροκισμός 'cloth' (sch.); as if from *κροκίζω. κρεγμός [m.] 'sound of stringed instruments' (Epich., A. R., Poll.).

•ETYM Originally a term of weaving, κρέκω was also transferred to the playing of stringed instruments. The present κρέκω is isolated, though Germanic has several nouns pointing to a primary verb: ON hræll [m.] 'staff to fasten the cloth' < PGm. hráhila-*, OE hrēol 'reel' < PGm. hréhula-*. A trace of Verner's Law exists in OE hrægl [n.] 'cloth, garment', OHG hregil [n.] 'indument, spolium'. Several Balto-Slavic words have also been compared: Lith. krėklės 'rags, tatters', Latv. krȩ̂kls 'shirt', "Stuhl, der Teil des Spinnrockens, in dem die Beine ruhen", as well as words for 'loom', e.g. Ru. krósno. Further Slavic expressions for 'strike fire, etc.': Ru. kresít', 1sg. krešú, SCr. krèsati, 1sg. krȇšēm (thus LIV[2] s.v. kreḱ-*), which seems the most promising comparison.

κρεμάννυμι [v.] 'to hang', intr. 'to be suspended' (Att.). ◄IE kremh*$_2$- 'hang'► •VAR Other presents κρίμνημι and κρήμνημι, -άω (Pi., Hp., trag., com.), also κρεμαννύω and κρεμάω (Arist.), κρεμάζω (LXX), κρεμνάω (Demetr. Eloc.); intr.med. κρέμαμαι (Il.); aor. κρεμάσαι (Il.), pass. κρεμασθῆναι (Hdt., Att.); fut. κρεμόω (H 83), κρεμῶ (Att.), κρεμάσω (com., LXX), pass. κρεμήσομαι (Ar., Hell. pap.); perf. κεκρέμακα, -αμαι (late).

•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, ἐκ-.

•DER κρεμάθρα [f.] 'hammock' (Ar.), 'rope hung from a hook' (Arist.; v.l. -άστρα, see below); κρεμάς [f.] 'beetling, precipitous' (A. Supp. 795 [lyr.]); κρέμασις, -ασμός (Hp.), -ασμα (sch., Eust.), -ασία (gloss.) 'hanging'; κρεμαστήρ name of certain muscles (medic.), 'stalk by which a grape cluster hangs' (Gp.), -άστρα 'stalk by which a flower hangs' (Thphr.), Strömberg 1937: 116; ἐκ-, ἀπο-, περι-κρεμής 'hanging down, hanging all around', from ἐκ-κρεμάννυμι, etc.

•ETYM The original situation in Greek seems to be that of an active aorist κρεμάσαι 'to hang' (trans.) beside a medial athematic present κρέμασθαι 'to be suspended' (perhaps reshaped after the aorist?). Several secondary active presents arose subsequently: κρίμνημι, κρήμνημι (perhaps after κρημνός), κρεμάννυμι, as well as κρεμάω, -άζω, κρεμνάω. However, ►κρημνός is unrelated.

Sanskrit has a root śram^{i}- 'to become weary, tire' with a root aor. Ved. śramat 'will tire me' and a ptc. śrānta- 'tired'. The oldest meaning could be 'be flaccid, weak'. Go. hramjan 'to crucify' is better left out (it belongs to OE hremman 'lock in, hinder', ON hremma 'grasp, clench'; Pok. 623f.). See LIV[2] s.v. ḱremh$_2$-.

κρέμβαλα [n.pl.] 'clapper, castanets' (Ath. 14, 636c, Carm. Pop. 3); on the realia Weber RhM 82 (1933): 194f. ◄PG?►

•DER κρεμβαλιάζω [v.] 'to play the κ., clapper' (Hermipp. 31), Schwyzer: 735; thence κρεμβαλιαστύς (h. Ap. 162), see Zumbach 1955: 8, Porzig 1942: 181, and cf. on ►βαμβαίνω.
•ETYM The suffix -αλο- is also found in κρόταλα, ῥόπαλον and other loans; cf. Chantraine 1933: 245f. Connection with the group of sound-words with anlauting *(s)kr- (Pok. 569f.), e.g. Lat. crepō 'to creak', Lith. skrebėti, 1sg. skrebù 'to rustle', Ru. kropotát' 'to growl', is impossible, as Gr. β cannot be due to the preceding nasal (as per Schwyzer: 333). This nasal rather points to a non-IE word, quite possibly Pre-Greek (prenasalization?). A word of this meaning is likely to be a loan.

κρέμυς ⇒ κλεμμύς.

κρέξ, κρεκός [f.] name of a long-legged bird, perhaps 'ruff, Machetes pugnax', or 'corn-crake, Rallus crex' (Hdt., Ar., Arist.); also metaph. of a noisy braggart (Eup.). ◄IE? kerk-* 'bird'► •ETYM As the identification of the bird is uncertain (see Thompson 1895 s.v.), all etymologies remain hypothetical. Onomatopoeic origin is quite possible. It has been compared with other bird names, like Skt. kṛkara- a kind of partridge, MIr. cercc 'hen', OPr. kerko 'diver', Ru. kréčet 'gerfalcon' (Pok. 568). Cf. also κερκάς· κρὲξ τὸ ὄρνεον, κερκιθαλίς· ἐρῳδιός 'stork' (cf. αἰγίθαλος), κέρκος· ἀλεκτρυών 'cock' (H.); also, κέρκνος· ἱέραξ ἢ ἀλεκρυών 'hawk or cock' and κέρκαξ· ἱέραξ (H.). About the possibility of confusion with ►κέρκος 'tail of an animal', nothing can be said.

κρήγυος [adj.] 'appropriate, right, useful' (epic poet.) and, by misunderstanding in A 106, also 'true' (cf. Leumann 1950: 33f.). ◄?►
•VAR Dor. κράγυος.
•DER Adv. κρηγύως (Call.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Schwyzer Glotta 12 (1923): 18ff. thought it was a compound from κάρᾱ, κρη- 'head' (see ►κρήδεμνον) and γυῖα 'members', as well as 'hand' (sg.), in which case it would mean 'having head and hand'; highly doubtful. Fur. 105 considers the word to be Pre-Greek. See ►κάρᾱ.

κρήδεμνον [n.] 'women's head-dress, veil', metaph. 'battlements, cover, lid (of a jar)' (Il.), cf. Leumann 1950: 296[60], Haakh Gymnasium 66 (1959): 374ff. ◄IE k̑erh₂-* 'head, horn'► •VAR Often plur.
•DIAL Dor. κρᾱ́-.
•ETYM A compound from κάρᾱ 'head' and the root of δέω 'to bind', but unclear in detail. The first member could stand for κρηνο- by dissimilation, i.e. thematic enlargement of the zero grade of ►κάρᾱ (see ►κρᾱνίον), but acc. to Frisk it may also have arisen from κρησ- with loss of σ before δ (this seems unlikely, and is rejected by DELG). The word ►κράσπεδον is probably unrelated. The second member -δεμνον, -α contains a derivation dh₁-mn-* of ►δέω 'to bind', for which we may compare βέλεμνα for the suffixation (see ►βάλλω) and ►δέμνια.

κρῆθεν in κατὰ (ἀπὸ) κρῆθεν 'down from the head' (Hom.), probably false for κατ' ἄκρηθεν. ⇒κάρᾱ.

κρῆθμον [n.] 'samphire, Crithmum maritimum' (Hp., Call., Nic., Dsc.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also -ος [m.], κριθ- and κρίταμον.
•ETYM Unexplained. Probably a foreign word; cf. Chantraine 1933: 133. Acc. to Amigues RPh. 75 (2001): 272, the plant obtained its name because it has its grains like barley (thus already Dsc. II 129).

κρηματίς, -ίδος [f.] name of an instrument, probably a cup (IG 7, 3498: 15; 20 [Oropos; temple inventory]). ◄?►
•COMP In κρημιο-φόροι (beside οἰνο-χόαι IG 2², 1425: 358), the first member could stand for *κρηματιδο-φόροι, if it is not from κρῆμα.
•ETYM A diminutive of κρῆμα (Att. κρᾶμα) 'mixing, mixed drink'; cf. πτωματίς 'cup that falls down (without foot)'.

κρημνός [m.] 'steep incline' (Il.). ◄?►
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. ἀπό-κρημνος 'inclined, steep' (IA), βαθύ-κρημνος 'with steep inclination' (Pi.); rarely as a first member, e.g. κρημνο-φοβέομαι [v.] 'to be afraid of chasms' (Hp.).
•DER κρημνώδης 'slanting' (Th.); (κατα-, etc.)κρημνίζω [v.] 'to have a steep slope' (Att., etc.), -ισμός, -ισις (late).
•ETYM Traditionally considered an old verbal noun from ►κρεμάννυμι, with ablaut κρημ-: κρεμα-; however, this is impossible if the root was kremh₂-* (a zero grade kr̥mh₂-* would give *κραμα-). DELG notes that the ē is proven by Pindar, which makes the case even worse: a h₂ can never result in PGr. ē*. The present κρήμνημι is rather influenced by κρημνός than the other way around. The present entry therefore remains unexplained.

κρήνη [f.] 'source, fountain' (Il.); on the mg. as against πηγή see Wycherley Class. Rev. 51 (1937): 2f. ◄IE? krs-* 'spring, flood'► •VAR Dor. Arc. κράνα, Aeol. κράννα.
•COMP Compounds like καλλί-κρανος 'with beautiful springs' (Pi.).
•DER Diminutives: κρηνίς, -ῖδος [f.] (E., Call., D. H.; Chantraine 1933: 347), also as a TN (Str.); κρηνίον (Delos III[a], Str.), -ίδιον (Arist.). κρηναῖος 'of the/a source' (since ρ 240), κρηνήϊος 'id.' (Orac. apud Dam. Pr. 344); νύμφαι Κρηνιάδες (A. fr. 168 [hexam.], after ὀρεστιάδες), cf. Chantraine 354f.; κρηνῖτις [f.] 'of the/a source' (Hp.). TN Κραννούν (Thess.).
•ETYM The different dialectal forms (see above) point to PGr. krasnā-*. Att. -ρη- for -ρᾱ- has been explained variously (Proto-Ionic-Attic dissimilation, an Ionism or a hyperatticism; see Schwyzer: 189f.). Since Whitney Tucker TAPA 93 (1962), it has generally been accepted (as by Peters 1980a) that the dissimilation assumed for κρήνη was regular.
One hypothesis connects κρήνη with ►κρουνός 'spring', κροῦναι· κρῆναι τέλειαι (H.). The IE base forms would then be krosno-* and kr̥sneh₂-, respectively; but note that all dialects have the vocalization -ra-, so the etymon probably did not have vocalic r̥. Therefore, the explanation remains uncertain. The words κρουνός, κροῦναι may correspond to a Germanic word for 'wave, flood', except for the accent: ON hrǫnn [f.], OE hræn, hærn [f.], from PGm. hraznṓ*, IE krosn-éh₂-*.

κρηπίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'man's high boot, half-boot' (X., Theoc., Plu., Poll.), also 'groundwork, foundation, quay' (IA, Pi.). ◄PG?, IE? krh*$_2$p-ih$_2$► •COMP Some compounds, e.g. ὀπισθο-κρηπίς name of a shoe (Att. inscr., Poll., H.).
•DER κρηπῖδια [pl.] 'bordering stones' (Didyma II^a), κρηπιδαῖον (Lys.), -εῖον (Ostia) 'foundation of a house', κρηπιδιαῖος 'of the foundation' (Att. inscr.), on the formation see Chantraine 1933: 49. Denominative κρηπιδόω [v.] 'to give a basis, found, support' (D. C., Plu.), -ωμα 'foundation' (inscr., D. S., Aq.).
•ETYM Derived from a nominal base form (like κνημίς and χειρίς), or perhaps κρηπίς just took over their ending. The technical meaning suggests a loan (Chantraine 1933: 347, Schwyzer: 465). The connection with words for 'shoe', e.g. Lith. kùrpė < krHp-ih*$_2$ is formally impeccable (see ►καρβάτινος) but is rejected by Fraenkel 1955 s.v. Borrowed as Lat. crepida 'half-boot', crepīdō 'stone basis, etc.'. Note that the suffix -ῖδ- occurs in Pre-Greek.

κρησέρα [f.] 'fine sieve' (Ar. Ec. 991, medic., Poll.). ◄?, IE? kreh*$_1$(i)- 'sieve'►
•VAR Ion. -ρη.
•DIAL κραάρα· κόσκινον ἢ ὄρυγμα 'sieve; ditch' (H.), Elis.
•DER Diminutive κρησέριον (Poll.), -ρίτης ἄρτος 'bread from fine-sieved meal' (Diph. 26).
•ETYM Isolated words in -έρα (like ►διφθέρα, ►ἀσκέρα, ►χολέρα, ►κυσέρη) are likely to be loans. Theoretically, derivation from a old noun κρῆσις 'sieving' < kreh$_1$-ti- is possible, which would belong to ►κρίνω < krh*$_1$i-n-, and have the same ablaut grade as Lat. excrēmentum and crēvi.

κρησφύγετον [n.] 'place of retreat, refuge' (Hdt., D. H., Luc.). ◄?► •ETYM Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 56f. posits *χρηεσφύγετον, with contraction and Grassmann's Law. It would be a compound with suffix -ετο- (DELG), from φυγεῖν and χρῆος 'debt', so originally "fleeing from debt". Chantraine calls this proposal more ingenious than convincing. The connection with ►κάρα 'head' (Kretschmer KZ 31 (1892): 410, Solmsen RhM 53 (1898): 155f.) is semantically hardly convincing. To be rejected, Kapsomenos Glotta 40 (1962): 43-50.

κρίβανος ⇒κλίβανος.

κρίζω [v.] 'to scream, creak' (Men. 879). ◄IE krik-* 'cry'► •VAR Perf. ptc. κεκρῑγότες (Ar. Av. 1521), them. aor. ὑπο-κρῐγεῖν (S. Ichn. 171 [lyr.]), sigm. aor. (ὑπο-)κρῖξαι or -ίξαι (Ael. NA 5, 50, H.); also them. aor. κρίκε (H 470), of ζυγόν. Cf. κριδδέμεν = γελᾶν (Stratt. 47, 7; Boeot.).
•DER Verbal nouns κρῑγή (Hippon. 54), κριγμός (Zonar.) 'screaming, creaking'; κριγή· ἡ γλαῦξ 'the shrieking little owl' (H.).
•ETYM The system κέκρῑγα: κρῐγεῖν: κρίζω: κρῖξαι corresponds nicely with κέκρᾱγα: κρᾰγεῖν: ►κράζω: κρᾶξαι. The word κρίζω has a direct cognate in the root present ON hríka 'to creak' < IE krig-*. Lith. krykti (krykšti), 1sg. krykiù 'to cry, creak', and the Slav. group of Ru. kričát' 'to cry', krik 'cry' show root-final -k. An old isolated nominal formation is the Germanic name of the heron, e.g. OHG (h)reigaro, heigaro (with dissimilation), MoDu. reiger.

κριθή [f.] 'barley-corns', usually plur. 'barley' (Il.); also metaph. = 'swelling on the eyelid' (medic.), see Strömberg 1937: 192, Strömberg 1944: 63. On the mg. of κριθή, πυρός, σῖτος see Moritz Class. Quart. 49 (1955): 129ff. ◄?►
•VAR Short form κρῖ [n.], see below.
•COMP κριθό-πυρον [n.] 'mix of barley and wheat' (pap.; cf. on ►διόσπυρον), εὔκριθος 'rich in barley' (Theoc., AP).
•DER Diminutives: κριθίον (Luc., Longos), κριθίδιον, also 'decoction of barley' (Hp., Posidon.), κριθάριον (pap.). Further substantives: κριθαία 'barley soup' (Hom. Epigr. 15,7), after ἁλμαία, etc., Chantraine 1933: 86; κριθανίας [m.] name of a kind of wheat (Theophr. HP 8, 2, 3, beside σιτανίας), perhaps after νεανίας (Strömberg 1937: 91), see also Chantraine 1933: 94. Adjectives: κρίθινος 'of barley' (Ion., Hell.), κριθάμινος 'id.' (Polyaen.), after σησάμινος; κριθικός 'consisting of barley' (pap.), κριθώδης 'like barley, full of barley-corns' (Hp.).
Denominative verbs: κριθάω 'to feed oneself with barley' (A., S.), also κριθιάω (Arist.), after the verbs of disease in -ιάω, Schwyzer 732; thence κριθίασις 'surfeit caused by overfeeding with barley' (X.); κριθίζω 'to feed with barley' (Aesop., Babr.). TN Κριθώτη (-ωτή) name of a spit of land in Acarnania (Krahe IF 48 (1930): 223ff.). Epithet Κρίθων (H.) from κριθή = πόσθη (Ar. Pax 965); see Schulze KZ 29 (1888): 263.
•ETYM The epic by-form κρῖ [n.], occurring only in the nom. and acc., points to an original root noun krīt*^{h}, from which κριθ-ή is an enlarged form. Attempts to connect κρῖ with Western European words for 'barley', Lat. hordeum, OHG gersta, have failed thus far. The word κρῖ corresponds better with Alb. drithë, 'barley, wheat', of which the -ri- may come from IE -r-*. Further, Arm. gari, gen. garwoy 'wheat' < IE g*^{h}rio- also recalls κρῖ, and a similar word appears in Georgian qeri 'barley'; cf. Deeters IF 56 (1938): 140f. We may be dealing with a Wanderwort. Egyptian origin has been considered too (Schwyzer: 61, Debrunner in Ebert 1924-1932: 4, 525).

κρίκος [m.] 'ring' at the end of a carriage-pole, on a sail; 'curtain-ring, arm-ring, finger-ring, etc.' (Ω 272, Hdt. 2, 36, Arist., Thphr., Hell. inscr.). ◄?► •VAR Acc. κρίκα· κρίκον (H.). Also κίρκος (Hell.), cf. κιρκόω below.
•COMP Rarely as a first member, e.g. in κρικ-ηλασία 'trundling of hoops' (Antyll. apud Orib. 6, 26. 1).
•DER κιρκίον 'small ring' (Delos II^a), κρικέλ(λ)ιον 'id.' (Alex. Trall., sch.), like ψέλ(λ)ιον, and cf. Lat. circellus; κρικωτός 'consisting of rings' (Hell.); cf. κρικόομαι 'to be fastened with a ring' (Str.), κρίκωσις (Heliod. apud Orib.), -ωμα (Eust.); κιρκόω 'to fetter with a ring' (A. Pr. 74). Several glosses in H.: κρικάδεια· τὸ ἐναλλάξαι τοὺς δακτύλους ὥσπερ [†] κρυβούς; ἐγκρικάδεια· συναφὴ χειρῶν εἰς τοὐπίσω; ἐγκρίκια· ξύλα κεκκαμμένα. See also on ►κιρσός (and κρισσός, κριξός).
•ETYM The form κίρκος would have an impossible root structure in PIE, and, on chronological grounds, κρίκος must be original as well. Further analysis remains hypothetical. Lat. circus 'circle' is probably a loan from κίρκος (thus De Vaan 2008); from the former, and from circulus, derive all Western European words for 'circle'.

κρίμνον [n.] 'coarse barley-meal, coarse bread', plur. also 'crumbs' (Hp., Herod., Eup., Arist., pap., Lyc.). ◂?▸ •VAR Or -ῑ-? The length of the ι is unclear.
•DER κριμνώδης (Hp., Ar.); κριμνίτης ἄρτος 'coarse bread' (Iatrocl. apud Ath. 14, 646a); κριμνῆστις· πλακοῦντος εἶδος 'kind of flat cake' (H.), cf. on κυλλῆστις.
•ETYM Unexplained. The connection with κρῖ, κριθή is formally unwarranted, and an analysis as κρι-μν-ον (to κρῖνω) does not seem preferable. Fur.: 245 compares κρίνον 'kind of bread' (Ath. 3, 114f., not in LSJ), assuming kriwno-*.

κριμνός [m.] 'purple color?' (PHolm. 8, 43[written κριμμον, acc.], Ps.-Democr. Alch. p. 42B. [cod. κρημνός]). ◂LW Orient.?▸
•VAR κριμνούς· λευκάς τινας βοτάνας 'light pastures or plants' (H.).
•ETYM From Arab. qermez 'scarlet'; see Amigues RPh. 74 (2000): 272 (with complicated details).

κρίνον [n.] 'white lily' (IA), also name of a dance (Apolloph.), see Lawler AmJPh. 65 (1944): 75ff. ◂?▸
•VAR Plur. κρίνεα, -εσιν.
•COMP Some compounds like κριν-άνθεμον 'houseleek, ἡμεροκαλλές' (Hp., Ps.-Dsc.), καλαμό-κρινον 'kind of κάλαμος that is reminiscent of κρίνον' (Aët.), see Strömberg 1944: 13.
•DER κρίνινος 'of lilies' (pap., Gal.), κρινωτός 'ornamented with lilies' (Aristeas); κρινωνιά 'bed of lilies' (Suid.), 'lily' (Thphr.); see Scheller 1951: 71, and also ἰωνιά (s.v. ►ἴον).
•ETYM Foreign word; cf. Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 11 and Hehn-Schrader 1911: 245.

κρῖνω [v.] 'to separate, choose, select, decide, judge, condemn, accuse, apply' (Il.); ὑπο-κρίνομαι 'to answer' (Il.), 'to answer on stage (of the choir), to be an actor' (Att.); ἀπο- 'to answer' (Att.). ◂IE kre(h_1-)i-* 'separate, distinguish, sieve'▸ •VAR Aor. κρῖναι, pass. κριθῆναι (epic also κρινθήμεναι for metrical reasons, Chantraine 1942: 404), perf. med. κέκριμαι, act. κέκρικα (Pl. Lg.), fut. κρινῶ, epic Ion. κρινέω, Dor. -ίω.
•DIAL Thess. κρεννέμεν, Lesb. aor. κρίνναι.
•COMP Very frequently prefixed, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, δια-, ἐκ-, συν-, etc.
•DER 1. (ἀπό-, διά-, etc.)κρίσις 'decision, judgement, tribunal, etc.' (Pi., IA), κρίσιμος 'decisive, critical' (Hp., Arist.), ἀποκρισιάριος 'secretary' (pap. VI^p). 2. (ἀπό-, ἐπί-, σύν-, πρό-)κρίμα 'decision, etc.' (Hell.), κρῖμα = κρεῖμα (A. Supp. 397); σύγκριμα 'body formed by combination' (Hell.) with συγκριμάτιον 'small body' (M. Ant.), -ματικός (Gal.). 3. (ἀν-)κριτήρ 'judge, examiner' (Dor.), κριντήρ 'id.' (Gortyn), κριτής 'judge, arbiter' (IA), often from prefixed compounds, e.g. ὑποκριτής 'actor, etc.' (Att.); κριτήριον 'distinguishing mark, tribunal' (Att., Arg.), ἐπι- 'court of justice' (Crete); ἐγκριτήριος 'for admission' (Corinth II^p); further details on κριτήρ, -τής, -τήριον in Fraenkel 1910-1912 (index). 4. κριτός 'selected, excellent' (Il.), PNs Κρίτων, Κρίτυλλα; also ἔκ-, σύγ-κριτος, etc. (IA); (δια-, ἐπι-, συν-)κριτικός 'of κρίσις (judgement), etc.' (Pl., Arist.). 5. -κριδόν, e.g. διακριδόν 'separated' (Il.), διακριδά 'id.' (Opp.). 6. On ►κρίμνον, see s.v.

•ETYM The present κρῖνω derives from PGr. krin-je/o-*, unless it was innovated from the aorist κρῖναι. It has a nasal suffix which originally belonged only to the present, but was later extended to the other aspectual stems (this also happened e.g. in ►κλῖνω). Italic and Celtic have corresponding nasal presents in Lat. cernō 'to select, discern' < kri-n-oH*, MW go-grynu 'to sieve' < IE upo-kri-n-oH*. The verbal adj. κριτός matches Lat. certus 'decided, certain' < kr(H)i-tó-*, but in other respects the two languages behaved differently: the lengthened grade in (dē)crēvī, excrēmentum 'separation' < -kreh₁-* (which is an argument for reconstructing the root as kreh₁-i-* rather than krei-*) perhaps lives on in isolated ►κρησέρα 'fine sieve', but was otherwise lost in Greek.
The Greek paradigm results from large-scale levelling; only Att. κρῖμα could continue an older full grade κρεῖμα comparable to Lat. dis-crī-men. Other languages have numerous nominal formations, especially Latin, Celtic, and Germanic: e.g. Lat. crībrum 'sieve', Gm., e.g. Go. hrains 'pure', originally 'sieved'. The root must have been used specifically for sieving in PIE, given the many derivations pointing in this direction.

κρῖός [m.] 'ram' (Od.); on the mg. as opposed to ἀρνειός see Benveniste BSL 45 (1949): 103, often metaphorical, especially in the sense of 'battering ram' (X., Plb., Hell. inscr.); also name of a plant, a kind of chick-pea (Thphr., Hell. pap., Dsc.), and a sea-monster (Ael., Opp.), see Strömberg 1943: 102. ◂?▸
•COMP κριο-πρόσωπος 'with a ram's face' (Hdt.), ἀντί-κριος 'enemy battering ram' (Aen. Tact.).
•DER κριώδης 'ram-like' (Ph.); κρίωμα 'kind of ship' (Aq.), also 'battering ram' (Apollod. Poliorc.?); on the formation Chantraine 1933: 187.
•ETYM The word points to something like kriH-uo-. Connection with κέρας 'horn' < k̑erh₂-s- is formally impossible. Another attempt connected it with the Germanic name of the reindeer, ON hreinn, OE hrān < kroi-no-*, but this too is formally awkward. Closer are some Balto-Slavic words for 'curved', e.g. CS krivъ 'σκολιός', Lith. kreĩvas, kraĩvas (Eastern dial.) 'oblique, curved, bent' (cf. on ►κροιός). In case these words are related, the ram would have been named after its curved horns. Forssman IF 101 (1996): 304 recently suggested connection with Go. hrisjan 'to shake, dally', from kris-io-*. Formally, this is quite possible (there is in fact no trace of a wau). As the name of a kind of chickpea, κριός has nothing to do with Lat. cicer (Pok. 598), as the plant was named after its curved shells; see Strömberg 1937: 50.

κροαίνω 'to push, stamp'. ⇒κρούω.

κροιός [adj.] acc. to H. = νοσώδης, ἀσθενής 'sickly, feeble'; acc. to Theognost. Can. 21 = κολοβός 'curtailed'; also in Att. inscr. (IG 2^2, 244: 63 [IV^a], cf. Ἀρχ.Ἐφ. 1923: 39), of building stones (λίθοι). ◂?▸ •ETYM Compared with Lith. kraĩvas 'oblique, bent', etc. by Solmsen IF 31 (1912/13): 466f.; cf. on ►κριός. It is probably better to posit krow-jo-* 'cut off, broken off' and to connect it with ►κρούω.

κρόκη 1 'thread of the woof'. ⇒κρέκω.

κρόκη 2 [f.] 'rounded pebble on the seashore' (Arist., Lyc.). ◄?►
•VAR κροκάλαι [pl.] (E. IA 210 [lyr.], AP, Agath.) is attested earlier; unclear is κροκάλην [acc.sg.] (AP 7, 294), which could be adjectival.
•ETYM No etymology. Connection with Skt. words like śárkarā [f.] 'grit, gravel' or kṛ́śana- [n.] 'pearl' (cf. Mayrhofer EWAia: s.vv.) is meaningless. See ►κροκόδιλος, ►σάκχαρ.

κροκόδῖλος [m.] 'lizard, crocodile' (Hdt., Arist.). ◄?►
•VAR Also κορκ- (pap.), κροκύδ- (Hippon.), κρεκύδ- (Et. Gen.).
•COMP As a first member in κροκοδιλο-τάφιον 'burial place for crocodiles' (pap.).
•DER κροκοδιλίτης [m.] (Chrysipp.), of λόγος = Lat. crocodilina ambiguitas (Quint.), "crocodile syllogism", a kind of fallacy; κροκοδίλεον (Dsc., Gal.), -διλιάς (Gal., Alex. Trall.) 'Eryngium maritimum, sea-holly'; -διλέα 'excrements of the κροκ. χερσαῖος', used as an eye-salve (Plin.).
•ETYM Acc. to Hdt. 2, 69, it was originally the Ionic name of a lizard, which was transferred to the crocodile and the alligator. Frisk's etymology as a compound from κρόκη 'gravel' and δρῖλος 'worm' (with dissimilation) should be forgotten. See Diels & Brugmann IF 15 (1903-1904): 1ff. and Solmsen BPhW 1906: 758f. on variant spellings of the word, especially the itacistic writing with -ει-.

κρόκος [m.] 'saffron, Crocus sativus' (since Ξ 348). ◄LW Sem.?►
•COMP E.g. κροκό-πεπλος 'with saffron-colored cloth' (Il.), see Treu 1955: 244 and 258, Capelle RhM 101 (1958): 1ff.
•DER Especially adjectives of color: κρόκεος 'saffron-colored' (P. [v.l. -όεις], E. [lyr.]), -ήϊος 'id' (h. Cer. 178), metrically conditioned, see S. Schmid 1950: 48, Zumbach 1955: 14; -όεις 'id.' (Tyrt., Sapph., E., Ar.), see Treu 1955: 268); κρόκινος 'of saffron, saffron-colored' (Stratt., Hell.), -ώδης 'id.' (Dsc., medic.), -ηρός 'of saffron' (Gal.), after οἰνηρός, etc., see Chantraine 1933: 233; κροκίας [m.] 'saffron-yellow stone' (Plu.), like καπνίας, etc., Chantraine 1933: 94; κροκωτός [adj.] 'saffron-yellow' (Pi.), [m.] 'saffron cloth' (com., Att. inscr.), whence -ώτιον (Poll.), -ωτίδιον (Ar.), -ώτινος (pap.); κροκών [m.] 'saffron-bed' (Hdn.); κροκᾶτον [n.] 'saffron-yellow parchment' (Edict. Diocl. Asin.), from Lat. crocātus, see below. Denominative verbs: κροκίζω 'to be saffron-like' (Dsc., Plu.), κροκόομαι (κισσῷ) 'to be surrounded with saffron-colored ivy' (AP).
•ETYM Identical with the Semitic word for 'saffron', e.g. Akk. kurkanū, Arab. kurkum, Hebr. karkōm, and with Skt. kuṅkuma- 'id.' (which is MInd. for kurkuma-*); further details on the origin are unknown. Acc. to E. Masson 1967: 50, the Semitic words could be loans themselves. From κρόκος came Lat. crocus, as well as crocōta [f.] 'saffron-cloth' (from κροκωτός) and crocōtinum 'saffron cake' (: κροκώτινος); there is Lat. innovation in crocātus 'saffron-yellow' (> Gr. κροκᾶτον, see above). Another word for the same notion is ►κάγκαμον.

κρομβόω 'to roast, bake'. ⇒κράμβος.

κρόμμυον [n.] 'onion, Allium Cepa' (IA). ◄EUR?►

•VAR Also κρόμυον (Λ 630, τ 233, Philem. 122), κρόμβυον (pap.) < -μμ-, cf. Schwyzer: 231.
•COMP κρομμυο-πώλης 'onion handler' (pap.).
•DER Diminutive κρομ(μ)ύδιον (Gp., sch.).
•ETYM A similar word for onion and garlic is attested in Celtic, Germanic and Balto-Slavic, e.g. MIr. crim, MW craf 'garlic', OE hramsan [pl.], MoE ramsons 'wood-garlic', MoHG (Bav.) rams 'id.', Lith. kermùšė 'wild garlic', Ru. čeremšá 'Allium ursinum'. The e-vowel of Celtic and Balto-Slavic is also found in κρέμυον (H.) and in the TN Κρεμμυών (also Κρομμ-, near Corinth). Therefore, Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 346 assumed vowel assimilation κρεμ- > κρομ-, but this is hardly acceptable; see Van Beek fthc.b. Note that Gm. also has hram-* < krom-*.
It is difficult to reconstruct a PIE pre-form, given the alternations pointing to kremus-, kromus-, kermus-*, and also the Greek geminate -μμ-. Beekes 2000: 29 therefore considers the word to be non-IE. The interpretation of Cremōna near Venice (Krahe 1955: 104) as an Illyrian TN is speculative. On the distribution, see Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 710ff.

κρομπος [?] a piece of land. ◄PG?►
•VAR With secondary prop vowel κορομποι dat.sg. (Arcadian Orchomenos, 369ª), see *Del.*³ 664, 12; 16.
•ETYM Connection with OHG hrimfan 'to wrinkle, curb', OCS krǫpъ 'small', Lith. krumplys 'finger-knuckle', etc. (Fraenkel 1955 and Pok. 948f. apud Frisk) hardly makes sense. Fur.: 381 considers the word to be Pre-Greek, because of the anaptyctic vowel (see also Fur.: 378-385).

κρόσσαι [f.pl.] 'stepped copings of parapets' (M 258, 444), 'courses, steps of the pyramids' (Hdt. 2, 125); πρό-κροσσοι 'arranged in rows, ranks' (Ξ 35, Hdt.). ◄?►
•COMP κροσσοί [m.pl.] 'tassels, fringes' (Gal., Poll., H.); δί-κροσσος 'double-bordered' (Poll., EM), whence δικρόσσια [n.pl.] (Peripl. M. Rubr.).
•DER Diminutive κροσσίον (Hdn.); also as a plant name (Ps.-Dsc.); also κροσσωτός 'with fringes' (LXX, Lyc., Plu.), 'with steps' (Lyc. 291?), v.l. κορσ-.
•ETYM Frisk's suggestion that the expression originally derives from weaving (connecting κρόξ, κρόκη 'thread of the woof' [see ►κρέκω]) is not likely. As he notes, it seems that κροσσοί (which is late and rare) was back-formed from κροσσωτός, which is attested much earlier and better. The word κροσσωτός (also δίκροσσοι, δικρόσσια) was formed to the original κρόσσαι after θυσανωτός 'provided with tassels, fringes', and was transferred from the sphere of architecture to that of tailor-work. From κροσσωτός, the back-formation κροσσοί was formed (cf. θύσανοι from θυσανωτός).
The word κρόσσαι itself is a technical expression of unknown origin. Derivation from krok-i̯ai* and connection with Balto-Slavic words for 'bar, rod, rafters' (e.g. Lith. krākė 'rod, staff', which formally matches κρόσσα, krēklas 'rafters', Ru. krókva 'bar, club, rafters') seems rather speculative. Fur.: 257 connects ►κόρση 'temple', which is unwarranted.

κρόταφος [m.] 'temple', metaph. 'side, profile, steep mountain slope' (Il.). ◄PG?►

•VAR Usually plur. By-forms with metathesis: κόρταφος (EM, Et. Gud., perhaps also Pl. Com., see Maas KZ 46 (1914):159), κότραφος (PMag. Osl. 1, 152).
•COMP πολιο-κρόταφος 'with gray temples' (Θ 518).
•DER κροταφίς [f.] 'pointed hammer' (Att. inscr., Poll., H.), on the mg. see below, κροτάφιος 'of the temples' (Gal.), κροταφίτης 'temple muscle' (medic.), -ίτιδες πληγαί [fem.pl.] (Hp.). Denominative κροταφίζω [v.] 'to hit on the temple, box on the ear' (pap.), κροταφιστής (gloss., H. s.v. κόβαλος).
•ETYM Often derived from κρότος as "beating (of the veins in the temples)". In this case, κρόταφος would refer to the sound that is heard after being hit on the temple. Fur.: 257 connects it with ► κόρση 'temple' (like Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 258ff.) and remarks that it is unsatisfactory, from a semantic viewpoint, to separate κόρση and κρόταφος from κρόσσαι.

κρότος [m.] 'stamping of the feet, clapping of the hands, of the oars, etc.; clapping, applause' (Att.). ◅IE? kret-* 'shake'▻ •COMP Often as a second member, e.g. μονό-, δί-, τρί-κροτος 'with one, two, three rows of rowers' (E., X., Plb.), see Morrison Class. Quart. 41 (1947): 122 ff.; ἱππό-κροτος 'trodden by horses, resounding of the hoofbeat of horses' (Pi., E.), ἀπό-κροτος 'well-pounded' (Th., X.).
•DER κροτέω [v.] 'to rattle, beat, stamp' (O 453, IA), also prefixed, especially with συν-, in various mgs.; thence κρότημα (S., E.), -ησμός (A. Th. 561), perhaps after ὀρχησμός, Chantraine 1933: 141; -ησις (Pl. Ax., Ph. Bel.), -ητικός (Dosith.). κρόταλα [n.pl.] 'rattle, castanets' (h. Hom., Pi., Hdt.), [sg.] 'boaster' (Ar., E.), κροτάλια [n.pl.] '(clappering) ear-rings' (pap.), MoGr. κροταλίας, -ίτης 'rattlesnake' (cf. Redard 1949: 83), κροταλίζω 'to rattle' (A 160, Hdt.), -ίστρια, -ιστρίς 'castanet player' (pap.).
•ETYM Cf. ► κρόταφος, -φίς. The earlier and more frequent attestations of κροτέω, as compared with κρότος, point to priority of the verb. The comparison with a Gm. verb, OE hrindan, hrand, ON hrinda, hratt 'to push' (Pok. 621) should probably be rejected; note that it has an inner nasal which need not be an infix. LIV² s.v. kret-* compares OHG redan 'to sieve', Lith. krẽsti, 1sg. krečiù 'to shake' and OCS krotiti, 1sg. kroštǫ 'to tame'. Although formally impeccable, the semantics are not wholly satisfactory. See LIV² s.v. kret-*.

κροτών, -ῶνος [m.] 'tick, louse of a sheep, Pediculus ovis, Ixodes' (Arist., Dsc., Plu.), also 'tree of castor oil, Ricinus communis' and its seeds (Hp., Thphr., Hell.); acc. to Dsc. 4, 161 διὰ τὴν ὡς πρὸς τὸ ζῷον τοῦ σπέρματος ἐμφέρειαν 'because of the likeness of the seed to the animal', cf. Strömberg 1937: 50. ◅?▻
•COMP E.g. κροτωνο-φόρος, of γῆ (Hell. pap.).
•DER κροτώνη [f.] 'knag, pathological excrescence on the stem (of the olive tree), fragments of bronchial cartiledge' (Thphr., Hp., Gal.); for the formation cf. Chantraine 1933: 207.
•ETYM Unexplained.

κρούναι [f.pl.]? · τὰ ἄφορα δένδρα 'barren trees' (H.). ◅PG(V)▻ •ETYM Fur.: 120 compares γρυνός 'faggot, firebrand' and γρουνός 'dry wood, torch', so the word is clearly Pre-Greek.

κρουνός [m.] 'source, fountain, stream, torrent', also as a TN (Il.). ◅IE? kros-n-* 'wave, flood'▻ •COMP E.g. Ἐννεά-κρουνος name of a source on the Hymettos (Hdt., Th.).
•DER Diminutives κρουνίον (Hdn.), -ίσκος (sch.); further κρουν-εῖον a cup (com.), -ωμα 'flood' (Emp. 6, 3), -ῖτιδες (νύμφαι, Orph.), -ηδόν 'like a spring' (LXX, Ph.); κρουνίζω [v.] 'to bring forth a stream', -ομαι 'to catch a stream with the mouth' (com.), -ισμός 'gushing, spray' (Aq., medic.), -ισμα 'stream', -ισμάτιον 'small nozzle or spout' (Hero). κροῦναι· κρῆναι τέλειαι 'perfect springs' (H.).
•ETYM Probably from kros-nó-;* to which the group of ON hrǫnn < PGm. hraznō-* < kros-neh₂-* is compared. Within Greek, it has been connected with ► κρήνη (see s.v. for details).

κρούπεζαι [f.pl.] 'wooden shoes to press olives or to indicate the rhythm of a dance' (Paus. Gr., Poll., Phot.). ◅GR?, PG?▻
•VAR Also -ζα [sg.]. By-forms κρούπαλα (S. Fr. 44), for which cf. κρόταλα; κρούπανα (H.), after instrument names in -ανον; κρούπετα (H.), example unknown.
•COMP κρουπεζο-φόροι [pl.] name of the Boeotians (Cratin.).
•DER Diminutives κρουπέζια [pl.] (Poll., H.) and κρουπεζούμενος 'provided with κ.' (H.).
•ETYM A governing compound, analyzed as τὸν πόδα (τῷ ποδὶ) κρούειν 'to bump the foot, stamp with the foot' (Frisk s.v.), where the second member is modelled after ἀργυρό-πεζα, etc. The variant forms may also point to substrate origin: we have krou-pan/l-, -pet-*. It is not a priori certain that these are due to folk etymology.

κρούω [v.] 'to strike, stamp, knock' (Hp., Att.). ◅IE krou(s)-* 'push, bump, strike, break'▻ •VAR Aor. κροῦσαι, pass. -σθῆναι, perf. med. κέκρου(σ)μαι, act. κέκρουκα.
•COMP Very frequent with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, δια-, ἐκ-, παρα-, συν-.
•DER Special mgs. from the prefixed compounds are not especially noted: κροῦμα, -σμα 'sound made by striking: tone, melody' (Hp., Att.), κρου(σ)-ματικός (Hell.), κροῦσις 'striking (especially of the strings), string music' (Hp., Att.), κρουσμός 'id.' (Hell.); ἀνακρουσία· παιδιᾶς εἶδος ἐπὶ σφαίρας 'kind of ball game' (H.); ἐπικρούστιον name of a medical instrument (medic.), -τήριον 'hammer' (gloss.); κρουστικός 'good for striking' (Hp., Ar., Arist.); Προκρούσ-της name of a mythical brigand (X.). Instead of κρούω, Homer has the enlargement κροαίνω (Z 507 = O 264 κροαίνων 'stamping, gallopping'), imitated in Opp., Philostr.; cf. Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 43. Cf. ► κροιός.
•ETYM The Greek verbal system, including nominal derivations, is based on a root κρουσ-. The present may derive from krous-i̯e/o-* or be analogical after the aorist. Cf. on ► ἀκούω. Acc. to Frisk, it is unnecessary to assume a root variant without -s-, as he explains κροαίνω in the same way as ἀκοή < PGr. akowsā* (however, note that Homer still has ἀκουή without shortening in hiatus). The form ► κροιός may go back to krou̯-i̯o-, if it was derived after the present had already developed to krowwo-. The form κρούω is from IE krous-, and corresponds to a Balto-Slavic verb built on krous-eie/o- (cf. LIV² s.v. kreu̯s-*): OCS sъ-krušiti 'συντρίβειν, θραύειν, κρούειν', Ru.

krušít'; Latv. kràusêt 'to stamp (off)', Lith. kraušýti 'id.'. Zero grade krus-* is found in nominal derivations, e.g. CS krъxa, Ru. kroxá 'morsel, crumb', Lith. krùšti, 1sg. krušù 'to stamp, push (apart)'; an e-grade also appears in Lith. kriaũšti 'to sting'.

κρυερός •VAR κρυμός. ⇒ κρύος.

κρύος [n.] 'icy cold, frost' (Hes. Op. 494, A. [lyr.], Arist., Jul.). ◂IE? kreus-* 'shiver', kruh₂-* 'bloody'▸ •DER κρυόεις 'horrible, sinister' (Il., Hes., Pi.), 'icy-cold' (A. R., AP, Orph.), with analogical -ο-; see also on ▸ ὀκρυόεις; κρυώδης 'id.' (Plu., Poll.); further κρυερός 'horrible, sinister' (Hom., Hes., Ar. [lyr.]), 'icy-cold' (Simon., Ar. [lyr.]); cf. below. Independent formation from κρύος: κρῦμός [m.] 'frosty cold, frost, horror' (Ion., trag., Hell.), κρυμώδης 'icy-cold' (Hp., Ph., AP), κρυμαλέος 'id.' (S. E.), see Chantraine 1933: 254; κρυμαίνω [v.] 'to make cold' (Hdn.), -ώσσω 'to be stiff out of cold' (Theognost.). On ▸ κρύσταλλος, which is Pre-Greek, see s.v.

•ETYM The etymology is difficult to assess, as there are two alternatives. The most obvious connection for κρύος is that with ON hrjósa 'to shiver', OHG hroso 'ice, crust' from kreus-. This means that κρύος may represent krus-, derived from the root kreus-* 'to stamp, strike'. Lat. crusta has often been compared with κρύος; acc. to De Vaan 2008 s.v. crusta, the Latin word can be explained from a basic meaning 'hardened part' (by beating or pounding). Semantically, connection with ToB krośce, etc. 'cold' (Adams 1999 s.v.) is perfect for the Greek group, but the ToB -o- is difficult (did it arise by umlaut < kreus-tōn*, as Adams suggests?).

Alternatively, the group of Av. xrūma- 'horrible', which must be reconstructed as kruh₂-mo-* and connected with the group of kruh₂-* 'blood', could agree with κρῦμός (κρύος going back on kruh₂-s-*). This group is represented by e.g. Skt. krūrá-, Av. xrūra- 'wounded, raw, bloody, horrible' < kruH-ro-* (Lat. crūdus 'raw' is probably from not crūrus*, see De Vaan 2008 s.v.). The form κρυερός is probably a recent formation after the adjectives in -ερός.

κρύπτω [v.] 'to conceal, hide' (Il.). ◂PG?▸

•VAR Fut. κρύψω, aor. κρύψαι, pass. κρυφθῆναι (Il.), -φῆναι (S.), -βῆναι (LXX), fut. -βήσομαι (E., LXX), perf. med. κέκρυμμαι (Od.), act. κέκρυφα (D. H.), iter. ipf. κρύπτασκε (Θ 272), see Risch 240, -εσκε (h. Cer. 239), late pres. κρύβω, ipf. ἔκρυβον, -φον.

•COMP Often prefixed, e.g. with ἀπο-, ἐν-, ἐπι-, κατα-.

•DER 1. κρυπτός 'hidden, secret' (Ξ 168), κρυπτάδιος 'id.' (Il., A.), after ἀμφάδιος; κρυπτικός 'concealing' (Arist., Alex. Aphr.), κρυπτίνδα παίζειν 'to play hide-and-seek' (Theognost.); κρυπτεύω [v.] 'to hide' (E., X.), κρυπτεία 'secret service at Sparta' (Pl., Arist.). 2. (ἔγ-, ἀπό-, ἐπί-)κρύψις 'hiding' (E., Arist., Plb.). 3. κρυπτήρ "hider", name of an instrument (Delos IIᵃ, sch.), -τήριος 'serving as a hiding place' (Orac. apud Paus. 8, 42, 6), κρύπτης 'member of the κρυπτεία' (E. fr. 1126[?]). 4. κρυφῆ, Dor. -φᾶ (Pi., S., X.), κρύφᾰ (Th.) [adv.] 'secretly'; thence κρυφάδᾱν (Corinn.), -άδις (Hdn.), -ηδόν (Od., Q. S.), -ανδόν (H.) 'id.' (Schwyzer 550, 626, 631); κρυφαῖος 'secret' (Pi., trag., LXX), κρύφασος name of a throw of the dice (Poll.), see Chantraine 1933: 435. 5. κατα-, ἀπο-κρυφή 'hiding place' (S., LXX); κρύφιος 'secretly' (Hes., Pi., trag., Th.), on κρύφιος to κρύπτω see Schulze 1933a: 362; κρυφία [f.] 'hiding place' (PFlor. 284, 8 [VIᵖ]), κρύφιμος = κρύφιος (Man.), -ιμαῖος 'id.' (Ephesus [IVᵖ]), -ιώδης 'id.' (Eust.); ἀπό-, ἐπί-, ἔγ-, ὑπό-κρυφος 'concealed' (Pi., Hdt., E.), from ἀποκρύπτω, etc.; κρυφός (κρύφος) 'hiding' (Emp. 27, 3, LXX), 'secret' (conj. Pi. O. 2, 97), see Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 164f.; ἐγκρυφίας ἄρτος 'bread hidden under the ashes, i.e. baked' (Hp.), ἐγκρυφιάζω [v.] 'to hide' (Ar.); κρυφιαστής 'interpreter of dreams' (Aq.). 6. κρύβδᾰ = κρύφα (Σ 168, A., Pi.), κρύβδην, Dor. -δᾱν (Od.). 7. (ἀπο-)κρυβή 'concealment' (LXX, Vett. Val.), κρυβῆ = -φῆ (LXX); κρυβηλός· κρυπτὸς [πύργος] 'hidden [tower]', κρύβες· νεκροί 'the dead' κρυβήτας· τετελευτηκότας 'the dead', κρυβήσια· νεκύσια 'festivals of the dead', κρυβάζει· ἀποκρύπτει 'hides (from)' (H.).

•ETYM The word κρύπτω is formally and semantically reminiscent of ▸ καλύπτω; the verbs may have influenced each other. The variation π/ φ/ β may be partly analogical; cf. Schwyzer: 333, 705², 737. Although there is no formal match with κρύπτω, it does recall the Balto-Slavic group of OCS kryti 'κρύπτω, ἀποκρύπτω', Lith. kráuti, 1sg. kráuju 'to pile up' (on the meaning, see Schulze KZ 50 (1922): 275). However, since there is no good IE etymology, the word could be Pre-Greek. This seems confirmed by the frequent variations in the root-final labial stop.

κρύσταλλος [m.] 'ice' (Il.), also 'rock-crystal' [f.] (Str., D. S.), with gender after λίθος. ◂PG(V)▸

•VAR κρόσταλλος· εἶδος ὑέλου 'kind of crystalline stone' (H.), where Latte notes "h.e. κρύσταλλος (κρούστ- S.)".

•DER κρυστάλλιον 'id.' (PHolm.), also plant name = ψύλλιον (Dsc.), because of the cooling effect, see Strömberg 1940: 83); κρυστάλλινος 'icy-cold' (Hp.), 'of rock-crystal' (D. C.), -ώδης 'icy, crystal-clear' (Ptol., PHolm.); κρυσταλλόομαι 'to freeze' (Ph.), -ίζω 'to glow like crystal' (Apoc.); further κρυσταίνομαι 'to freeze' (Nic. Al. 314), probably a free analogical formation to κρύσταλλος, after other cases of the interchange ν/ λ (differently, Schwyzer: 706).

•ETYM The word has been connected with Lat. crusta 'bark, crust', but this is wrong, as the Latin word has a quite different meaning: 'the hard surface of a body, the rind, shell, crust, bark, which protects it' (Lewis and Short). The collocation with flumen, indicating a covering or crust of ice, is just an incidental use. The etymology with κρύος must therefore be given up. As Kuiper 1956: 215¹⁶ remarked, the word is Pre-Greek because of the suffix -αλλο-. All Greek words in -αλλο- are of Pre-Greek origin; there are no Greek words of IE origin with this suffix. The suffix is not -αλ- with expressive gemination (as Chantraine often states), but goes back to -alʸ-*. This is confirmed by the variant κρόστ-. The word means 'ice' and was also used for rock-crystal, because it is transparent, and in this respect looks like a piece of ice. Pliny (37, 23) still thinks it is ice. We now know that rock-crystal is a mineral; it is quartz, a silicate (SiO_2). The semi-precious amethyst and agate are varieties of it. See Beekes 2008 and also on ▸ κρύος.

κρωβύλος [m.] 'roll or knot of hair on the crown of the head' (Th., X., Antiph.), on the mg. see Hauser Jahresh. d. Österr. arch. Inst. 11 Beibl.: 87ff. ◂PG?▸

•VAR The accent after Hdn. Gr. 1, 163.
•DER κρωβυλώδης 'κ.-like' (Luc. Lex. 13); κρωβύλη [f.] 'hair-net' (Hdn. Gr. 1, 323, Serv. ad Aen. 4, 138).
•ETYM Semitic explanation in Lewy 1895: 89; cf. Knauer Glotta 33 (1954): 116[1]. Rabin Orientalia 32 (1963): 123f. points to Late Bab. karballatu and Hitt. kariulli. Fur.: 205 points to -ύλη as a common Pre-Greek suffix.

κρώζω [v.] 'to croak, creak' (Hes. Op. 747, Ar.). ◂IE? *kroh_2k-▸ •VAR Aor. κρῶξαι, fut. κρώξω.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-, κατα-, ὑπο-.
•DER κρωγμός 'croaking' (AP, Jul.), κρῶγμα 'id.' (Hdn. Epim.).
•ETYM Originally an onomatopoeic word, which differs only in the auslauting stop from Lat. crōcīre, CS krakati, 1sg. kraču. Cf. also Lith. kr(i)ōkti, 1sg. kr(i)okiù 'to ruckle, grumble' and (with -g-) kriogúoti, 1sg. kriogúoju 'to speak or cry with hoarse voice'. IE -g-* is also found in the Gm. group of ON hrókr 'crow'. Cf. ►κράζω, ►κραυγή, ►κόραξ.

κρωμακίσκος [m.] 'young pig' (Antiph. 215, dubious). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

κρῶμαξ ⇒ κλῶμαξ.

κρώπιον [n.] 'sickle, scythe' (Pherecyd. 154 J.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Better -ίον; in H. also κρώβιον (cod. also κρόπ- and κρόβ-).
•ETYM Probably derived from a noun (*κρώψ vel sim.), in view of forms like λυχνίον, χαλκίον, ἀκόντιον, and other instrument names in -ιον (Chantraine 1933: 58).
The Greek word recalls the verbal root in Lith. kiȓpti, 1sg. kerpù 'to cut, shave', Lat. carpō 'to pluck off'; see on ►καρπός 1, as well as on ►σκορπίος and ►σκέπαρνος. Further compared with Skt. kṛpāṇa- 'sword', MIr. corrán 'sickle'. However, this is not even a root etymology, in view of the Schwebeablaut kerp- / krōp- involved. Given the variation, the word must be Pre-Greek. Fur.: 148 refers to Hurrit. hurubbi 'sword'.

κρωσσός [m.] 'water pail, pitcher, salve bottle, cinerary urn' (trag., Theoc.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Also [f.] after λήκυθος, etc.
•DER Diminutive κρωσσίον (AP).
•ETYM The element -σσ-, as well as the technical meaning, points to a Pre-Greek word. Previously, Celtic and Germanic words for 'jar, pot' were compared, e.g. MIr. crocán, OE crocca, OHG kruog; see Pok. 389 and Vendryes REGr. 32 (1932): 495ff. Fur.: 369 compares Hurr.-Hitt. aḫrušḫi 'incense-pot'.

κτάομαι [v.] 'to acquire, win', perf. 'to possess' (Il.). ◂IE? tkeh_1-* 'rule, gain, acquire'▸ •VAR Ion. ipf. ἐκτέετο (v.l. Hdt. 8, 112), aor. κτήσασθαι (Il.), pass. κτηθῆναι (Th., E.), fut. κτήσομαι (post-Hom.), perf. ἔκτημαι, κέκτημαι (Hes., Att.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐν-, ἐπι-, προσ-.
•DER (prefixed compounds are not indicated seperately): 1. dat.pl. κτεάτεσσι (Hom., Pi., E.), sg. κτέαρ (Hell.) '(acquired) goods, possessions, property', whence κτεατίζω [v.] 'to acquire' (Il.), κτεατισμός (Man.), cod. κτεαν-. 2. κτέανα [n.pl.] 'id.' (Hes., also Hp.), secondary and rare -ον [sg.], φιλο-κτεανώτατε [voc.] (A 122), see Sommer 1948: 69; πολυ-κτέανος (Pi.). 3. κτήματα [n.pl.] (Il.) 'goods, landed property', also 'domestic animals' (also [sg.], ο 19), κτημάτιον (Alciphr., pap.), -ίδιον (pap. VI[p]), -ικός 'rich' (Hell.), -ίτης 'id.' (Lycurg.); as a second member, e.g. in πολυ-κτήμων 'rich in possessions' (Il.), whence -μοσύνη (Poll.). 4. κτήνεα, -νη [n.pl.] 'domestic animals' (especially Ion., Hell.), rarely -νος [sg.], probably directly from κτάομαι with a suffix -nos- (Chantraine 1933: 420); thence κτηνηδόν 'like beasts' (Hdt.), κτηνύδριον (pap.); often as a first member, e.g. κτηνο-τρόφος 'cattle-keeper' (Hell.). 5. κτῆσις 'acquisition, possession' (Il.), κτήσιος 'regarding possessions', Ζεὺς Κτήσιος as a protector of possessions (IA); diminutive κτησ(ε)ίδιον (Arr.). 6. κτεάτειρα [f.] 'who possesses' (A. Ag. 356), archaizing for -κτήτειρα, -τρια, which are found in προ-κτήτρια 'former possessor' (pap.), after κτεάτεσσι, etc.; κτήτωρ [m.] 'possessor' (D. S., pap., Act. Ap.), κτητορικός (pap.); details in Fraenkel 1912: 29f., 1, 183[1], Schwyzer: 474[3]. 7. Φιλο-κτή-της PN (Il.), compound from φίλος and κτάομαι with suffix -τη-; Att. Φιλοσκήτης (cf. Kretschmer Glotta 4 (1913): 351). 8. Verbal adjectives: κτητός 'acquired' (I 408); usually ἐπίκτητος 'newly acquired' (IA); κτητικός 'of acquisitions' (Att.). 9. Unclear is ἀκτῆνες· πένητες, ἠργηκότες 'poor, unemployed' (EM 55, 11), for which Solmsen 1909: 143 proposed *ἀ-κτη-ῆνες.
•ETYM All forms have κτη-, except for the present κτάομαι, but this is relatively rare and late; ἔγκτασις is a hyperdorism after ἔμπᾱσις; see ►πέπᾱμαι. Tichy Glotta 56 (1978): 237-245 has shown that the forms Hdt. ἐκτέατο, ἐκτέετο are due to palaeographical difficulties. An old heteroclitic stem PGr. ktē-war, -w(a)n-* must be assumed for κτεάτεσσι, κτέαρ, and κτέανα, whence secondarily κτέανον.
The old comparison with the Indo-Iranian present Skt. kṣáyati, Av. xšaiieiti, -te 'to rule, order, have power' is semantically attractive. We have to assume that Skt. kṣáyati continues tkH-ei-*, and that Skt. kṣa-trá- [n.] = Av. xša-θrəm 'dominion, rule' was formed after a root kṣa-* had been extracted from the present kṣa-ya-. If this is true, the root-final laryngeal must be h_1, which is confirmed by the fact that the Greek forms almost exclusively show -η-. Since the equation of the formations of κτάομαι and Skt. kṣáyati is less evident, LIV[2] (s.v. 1. tek-) gives up the etymology, and suggests that κτάομαι is denominative from a noun tk-eh_2- 'possessions'. See also Meier-Brügger Glotta 56 (1978): 224-236.

κτείνω [v.] 'to kill, put to death' (Il.). ◂IE tken-* 'injure'▸ •VAR Att. pres. also κτείνυμι, -ύω, Aeol. κτέννω (Hdn.), fut. κτενῶ, epic also -έω, κτανέω, aor. κτεῖναι, Aeol. κτένναι (Alc.), and κτανεῖν, epic also κτάμεν(αι) and med.pass. κτάσθαι, pass. 3pl. ἔκταθεν (epic), Hell. κταν(θ)ῆναι, perf. ἀπ-, κατ-έκτονα (Hdt., Att.), Hell. also ἀπ-εκτόνηκα, -έκτα(γ)κα, pass. -εκτάνθαι.
•COMP Att. prose mostly with ἀπο-, poet. also with κατα-. As a second member -κτόνος, e.g. πατρο-κτόνος 'who kills his father' (trag.), whence -κτονέω, -ία; rarely in passive sense: νεό-κτονος 'recently killed' (Pi.); the simplex κτόνος (Zonar.) probably from the compounds; also -κτασία, e.g. ἀνδρο-κτασία [f.] 'murder of men' (Il.), usually -ίαι [pl.], as if from *ἀνδρό-κτατος.

•ETYM The present κτείνυμι (incorrectly, -ειννand -ιvv-) has a secondary full grade after ἔκτεινα (cf. δείκνυμι to ἔδειξα, etc.). It replaces a zero grade *κτάνυμι, corresponding to Skt. kṣaṇóti 'to injure' (the sense 'to kill' of κτείνω is euphemistic). The Greek system seems to be based on an athematic root aorist sg. kten-* (cf. Gortyn subj. κατασκένε̄, with σκ for κτ; Schwyzer: 326), pl. and med. ktn̥-, which is directly continued by ἔκτατο (Il.). The present kten-je/o- > κτείνω, the thematic aorist ἔκτανον, and sigmatic ἔκτεινα go back to this formation. The ptc. *-κτα-τος (assumed for ἀνδρο-κτασίαι) corresponds to Skt. ákṣata-, OP. axšata- 'uninjured'. Without a doubt, ►καίνω is related too, but it is unclear under which circumstances the initial t-* was lost.
Literature: Harðarson 1993a: 186. Opposed to connection with Skt. akṣata is Strunk 1967: 99[265].

κτείς [m.] 'comb, comb in the loom', often metaph., e.g. 'rake, rib, finger' (Att. inscr.). ◄IE peḱt-en-* 'comb'► •VAR κτήν (Jo. Gramm. [VI[p]]), κτενός (IA).
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. κτενο-πώλης 'comb-handler' (Poll.), πεντέ-κτενος 'with five teeth' (com.).
•DER κτένιον 'id.' (Epich., pap.), κτενωτός 'with teeth' (Att. inscr.), κτενᾶς [m.] 'comb-maker, wool-carder' (Corycus), κτενωδῶς 'comb-like' (gloss.); κτενίζω [v.] 'to comb, card' (IA), -ισμός 'combing' (E.), -ιστής 'comber, hairdresser' (pap., Gal.), -ιστικός 'belonging to combing' (pap.).
•ETYM Because of Lat. pecten 'comb', the Greek word is explained as from pḱt-en-* with zero grade root and loss of the initial p-*. Several Modern Iranian forms, e.g. Pashto žmanj, MoP šāna, point to pḱ-en-* (Morgenstierne 1927: 106; see Charpentier Acta Orbis 7 (1929): 197 with a remark by Morgenstierne ibd. 199). It may be that the root was originally peḱ-*; see on ►πέκω.

κτέρας [n.] 'gift' (K 216, Ω 235, A. R. 4, 1550). ◄?►
•VAR Sing. only nom.; usually plur. κτέρεα, -έων 'gifts for the dead, sacrifice' (Il.); see Chantraine 1942: 210.
•COMP As a second member in ἀ-κτερής 'unburied' (Orac. Sibyll., H.).
•DER κτερεΐζω 'to bring gifts for the dead, bury ceremoniously' (Il.), fut. -ίξω, aor. -ίξαι (see Ruijgh 1957: 83), also with ἐν-, ἐπι-, συν-; also κτερίζω (Il.) 'id.', fut. -ιω, aor. -ίσαι; thence κτερίσματα [pl.] = κτέρεα (S., E.), -ισταί (H.) = ταφῆες, ἀ-κτέριστος (S., Lyc.), -έϊστος (AP). κτέρες· νεκροί 'the dead' (H.) is probably a constructed back-formation (Solmsen IF 3 (1894): 98 in spite of Fraenkel 1910: 68); further probably Πολύ-κτωρ (Hom.), after which Γανύ-κτωρ (Plu., Paus.), where the second member may originally mean 'giving presents' (Fraenkel and Solmsen l.cc.). Uncertain ►διάκτορος.
•ETYM No etymology. See Arena RILomb. 98 (1964): 3-32.

κτηδών, -όνος [m.] 'line of fissure, grain of wood, layers' in the body, wood, stone, etc. (medic., Theophr.). ◄IE? peḱt-en-* 'comb'► •VAR Mostly plur. -όνες.

•COMP εὐ-κτήδων, -ονος 'with strong fibres' (Thphr.); not here εὐ-κτέανος 'id.' (Theophr., Plu.).
•ETYM It has been compared with the glosses εὐθυ-κτέανον· ἰθὺ πεφυκυῖαν, εἰς ὀρθόν 'grown straight', ἰθυ-κτέανον· τὸ ἰθὺ πεφυκὸς καὶ ὀρθὸν δένδρον 'upright tree' (H.). Amigues 1989: 151f. derives it from *[π]κτ-ηδών 'in the way of a comb', metaphorically of the fissures of wood, etc.

κτίδεος 'of marten'. ⇒ἴκτις.

κτίζω [v.] 'to found, establish, build, create' (Emp.). ◄IE tḱ-ei-* 'settle, found'► •VAR Aor. κτίσ(σ)αι (Il.), pass. κτισθῆναι (IA), fut. κτίσω (A.), perf. med. ἔκτισμαι (Hdt.), act. ἔκτικα (Hell.); on the reduplication see Schwyzer: 649.
•DIAL Myc. 3pl. root present ki-ti-je-si /ktijensi/ 'they cultivate', ki-ti-me-no /ktimenos/ 'cultivated', ko-to-(i-)na /ktoinā/ 'part of land', a-ki-ti-to /a-ktitos/ mg. unclear. Also (me-ta-)ki-ti-ta /meta-ktitai/, perhaps '(transported) settlers'?
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. συν-, ἐπι-, ἀνα-.
•DER κτίσις [f.] 'foundation, creation' (Pi., IA), κτιστύς [f.] 'foundation' (Hdt. 9, 97), κτίσμα 'foundation, colony, building' (Hell.), κτισμός 'foundation' (Asia Minor [imperial period]); κτίστωρ 'founder' (Pi., E.), κτιστήρ 'id.' (Corinth [IV[a]]), fem. κτίστρια (Asia Minor [imperial period]), κτίστης 'founder, builder' (Arist.), κτίστιον (-εῖον) 'temple of a founder' (pap. [IV[p]]), older συγκτίστης 'co-founder' (Hdt. 5, 46); κτιστός 'laid out, founded' (h. Ap. 299, pap.), see Zumbach 1955: 26; subst. κτιστόν [n.] 'building' (pap.).
Several formations have the intransitive mg. 'to live, abide': ἐῢ κτίμενος 'where one can live well' (Hom.); περι-κτί-ονες [pl.] 'those living around, neighbours' (Il.), ἀμφι-κτί-ονες 'id.' (Pi.), also as a PN (Att. inscr. V[a]), also -κτύονες (Hdt., inscr. IV[a]) with unclear υ (cf. Hoffmann 1898: 290); περικτῖται [pl.] 'id.' (λ 288), after which the simplex κτῖται 'id.' (E. Or. 1621), κτίτης = κτίστης (Delph. II[a]); ἐΰ-κτιτος = ἐῢ κτίμενος (B 592), ὀρεί-κτιτος 'living in the mountains' (Pi.); but e.g. θεό-κτιτος 'founded by the gods' (Sol.).
Rhod. κτοίνα (also πτοίνα with unexplained πτ-) designates an administrative region in Rhodos and is also found as a cadastral term in Myc. ko-to-(i-)na. Thence κτοινᾶται, -έται (see Lejeune REGr. 78 (1965): 13ff.).
•ETYM The Mycenaean athematic root present ki-ti-je-si corresponds with Skt. 3sg. kṣéti, 3pl. kṣiyánti, Av. šaēiti, šiieinti 'to live', which is only used intransitively. Probably, the root tḱei-* should be analyzed as continuing an older i-present tḱ-éi-ti*, tḱ-i-énti* of the root teḱ-* 'to procreate'. The transitive meaning 'to cultivate, found' (a Greek innovation) first arose in the aorist κτίσ(σ)αι, which developed beside an intransitive root aorist still preserved in athematic κτίμενος (cf. ἔστησα to ἔστην; see ►ἵστημι). The form κτίζω, whence most derivations developed, was built on κτίσ(σ)αι. The formation of περικτῖται and Myc. pe-ri-ki-ti-ta recalls Skt. pari-kṣí-t- 'living round about', and the to-ptc. -κτιτος is mirrored by Av. (ana)-šita- 'uninhabited'. The form κτίσις has a parallel in Skt. kṣi-tí-, Av. ši-ti- 'dwelling, residence', but the deviant meaning suggests an independent formation from κτίζω.

Finally, κτοίνα can be compared with Arm. šēn, gen. šini 'inhabited (place)', if the latter continues kti-n-*. See ►κτίλος.

κτίλος [adj.] 'obedient, tame', also msc. 'ram' (Il.), acc. to H. = ὁ προηγούμενος τῆς ποίμνης κριός 'the ram taking the lead of the flock'; cf. Thompson Class. Rev. 46 (1932): 53f. ◄IE tki-lo-* 'of the dwelling place'.►
•DER κτιλίς· τιθασός, πρᾶος, ἡγεμών 'tame, leader' (H.) and the denominatives ἐκτιλώσαντο 'they tamed' (Hdt. 4, 113), ἐκτιλωμένος 'tamed' (Paus. Gr.), κτιλεύονται 'they are being tamed' (Pi. Fr. 238).
•ETYM Connected to ►κτίζω as 'belonging to the dwelling place'. The suffix is found in χωλός, φαῦλος and various expressions for defects (Chantraine 1933: 238).

κτύπος [m.] 'strong noise, cracking, stamping' (Il.). ◄PG(V)► •COMP Very frequent as a second member, e.g. βαρύ-κτυπος 'with loud noise' (h. Cer.).
•DER κτυπέω (Il.) 'to crack, rumble', trans. 'to make rumble', probably intensive; aor. κτυπῆσαι (S., E.), also them. aor. κτυπεῖν (Il.), cf. Porzig 1942: 25, often prefixed (late), e.g. ἐπι-, κατα-, ὑπο-. Thence κτύπημα = κτύπος (Critias, E.), -ητής 'one who makes noise' (Suid.), κτυπία· ὁ ἐπιθαλάμιος κτύπος 'the nuptial din' (H.).
•ETYM Reminiscent of ►δοῦπος, δουπέω, but further details are unknown. No doubt of Pre-Greek origin, with variation between voiced and unvoiced stop; see Fur.: 120. A prefix κ-, as assumed by Meillet BSL 28 (1927-1928): 117, followed by Ruijgh 1957: 148, is unknown.

κύαθος [m.] 'ladle for drawing wine' (IA). ◄PG(V)►
•DER Diminutive κυάθ-ιον (Pherecr.), -ίς (Sophr.), -ίσκος (medic.); κυαθ-ώδης 'like κ.' (Eratosth.), -ιαῖος 'measuring a κ.' (comm. Arist.), -ότης 'the idea κύαθος' (Pl.), -ίζω 'to scoop with a κ.' (com., Plb.).
•ETYM The ending appears also in ►λήκυθος, ►γυργαθός, etc. Lat. LW cyathus (Plaut.). Often connected with ►κύαρ (opposed to this, Chantraine 1933: 367; yet it is accepted in DELG s.v.); cf. on ►κύαμος. Szemerényi Gnomon 43 (1971) compares Ugar. qbʿt, Hebr. qubbaʿat 'cup'. However, the word is clearly Pre-Greek: Fur.: 237 compares the variants κόβαθος 'a vessel' and κύβεθρον 'beehive'. The sequence -υα- is also typical of 'foreign' (i.e. Pre-Greek) words.

κύαμος [m.] 'bean' (Il.), 'lot', in which those who drew white beans won (Att.), metaph. 'swelling of the paps' (Ruf., Poll.), 'woodlouse' (Gal.), name of a coin (Taurom. I[a]). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also πύανος (H.); κύμηχα· κύαμον (H.) also πύανος (H, Poll., Phot.).
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. κυαμο-τρώξ 'bean-eater' (Ar.), ὑοσ-κύαμος 'henbane' (Hp., X.), see Strömberg 1940: 31 and 155.
•DER Diminutives κυάμιον (Nubien, Eust.), -ίδες· fabacia (gloss.); κυάμ-ινος 'of beans' (com., Gal.), -ιαῖος 'as large as a bean' (Dsc., Luc.); κυαμ-ίας [m.] 'stone like a bean' (Plin.), like καπνίας, etc., see Chantraine 1933: 94), -ίτης [m.] 'god of beans = chairman of the bean market' (Paus.), -ῖτις (ἀγορά) 'bean market' (Plu.), cf. Redard 1949: 193 and 108; κυαμών, -ῶνος [m.] 'field with beans' (Thphr.), -ωνίτης 'laborer of the bean-fields' (pap.), see Redard 1949: 37).
Denominative verbs: κυαμεύω 'to draw a lot with beans' (Att.), -ίζω 'to be ripe for marriage' (Ar.). Beside κύαμος also πύανος (H., Poll., Phot.), acc. to Heliod. Hist. 3 = ὀλόπυρος, whence compound Πυαν-έψια, -όψια [n.pl.] name of a Ion.-Att. festival, whence the month name Πυανεψιών, -οψιών; also Κυαν-εψιών, -ο- (Ceos, Asia Minor) and Παν-όψια (non-Att. acc. to Lycurg. fr. 84).
•ETYM Since no IE suffix -am- is known, κύαμος cannot be derived from κυέω (root ḱuh₁-*). The word κύαμος has often been considered foreign (Chantraine 1933: 133, Schwyzer: 494, Kuiper 1956: 215[19]). The variation in κυάμος: πύανος, as well as the forms suffixed with -εψ-, -οψ-, point to Pre-Greek origin. Fur., following Kuiper l.c., remarks that the variation between κυαμ- and κυμ-ηχ/κ- proves the Pre-Greek character of the word. On the variation π-/κ-, see Fur.: 388.

κύανος [m.] name of a dark blue substance, 'enamel, lapis lazuli, blue copper carbonate' (Il.); also a bird name (Arist., Ael.), see Thompson 1895 s.v.) and a plant name 'blue cornflower' (Plin.). ◄?►
•DIAL Myc. ku-wa-no 'smalt', also ku-wa-no-wo-ko /kuano-worgos/ 'smalt-worker'.
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. κυανό-πρῳρος 'with a dark blue prow' (Hom., B.), -πρῴρειος with metrical lengthening at verse end; -χαίτης 'with dark hair' (Hom.), -πεπλος 'with dark cloth' (h. Cer., Hes.), cf. Treu 1955: 244.
•DER κυάνεος (ῡ metrically lengthened) 'made of κ.', usually 'dark blue' (Il.); on the mg. Capelle RhM 101 (1958): 10 and 35.
•ETYM Perhaps a loan from Hitt. kuu̯anna(n)- '(blue as) copper, ornamental stone' (Friedrich 1952 s.v.). Danka & Witczak JIES 25 (1997): 361ff. derive it from ḱwn̥Ho-*, which seems unlikely.

κύαρ [n.] 'eye of a needle, orifice of the ear' (Hp., Poll.). ◄IE kuH-r/n-* 'swelling, hole'► •ETYM An old r/n-stem, which is found thematicized in Av. sūra- [m.] 'hole, lacuna' < IE kuH-r-o-*, as well as in Arm. sor 'hole' if from IE ḱou-er-o-*; a thematic n-stem occurs in Skt. śūna- 'swelled up, grown up', śū́na- [n.] 'emptiness, lack', śūnyá- 'empty, hollow'. An l-stem is supposed in ►κύλα · τὰ ὑποκάτω τῶν βλεφάρων κοιλώματα 'holes under the eyelids' (H.), but see s.v. and under ►κοῖλος 'hollow' < kouHi-lo-*. The words are generally connected with the group of ►κυέω 'to be pregnant' < 'to swell', assuming a basic mg. 'curvation', whence both 'hole' and 'vaulting'.

κυβάβδα · αἷμα, Ἀμαθούσιοι 'blood (Amathousian)' (H.). ◄PG?►
•ETYM Unknown.

κυβερνάω [v.] 'to steer, head for', metaph. 'to govern, rule' (γ 283). ◄PG► •VAR Aor. κυβερνῆσαι, Cypr. inf. κυμερῆναι; Aeol. κυμερνήτης.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. δια-.
•DER κυβερνητήρ, Dor. -ατήρ [m.] 'steersman, coxswain' (θ 557, Pi.), fem. -ήτειρα (AP, Nonn.) and -ητήριος (Orac. apud Plu.); κυβερνήτης (Aeol. κυμερνήτης [-άτας] acc. to EM 543, 3) 'id.' (Il.) with fem. -ῆτις (pap.) and -ήσια [n.pl.] festival of the steersmen in Athens, in memory of Theseus (Plu.); κυβέρνησις, -ᾶσις 'steering, government' (Pi., Pl.); κυβερνητικός 'belonging to steering' (Pl.); κυβερνισμός = κυβέρνησις (Aq.).

•ETYM From κυβερνάω, Lat. gubernō was borrowed; see WH s.v. Given Cypr. κυμερῆναι, the form κυβερνάω has been thought to be due to dissimilation μ-ν > β-ν (Lejeune 1972: 152). See also Neumann KZ 100 (1987): 64-69, Neumann KZ 105 (1992): 188, and Neumann Kadmos 13 (1974): 146-155, who reconstructs a denominative from *kurb-na- from the root *k^werb- 'to turn' in κύρβις. This is highly doubtful.
As Frisk remarks, the word has no cognates. The comparison with Skt. kū́bara-, -rī́ 'pole (?)' and with Lith. kumbras 'grip on the steering oar', kumbryti 'to steer' must be given up; see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. and Fraenkel 1955 s.v. kumbrỹs. Foreign origin is probable; see references in Frisk s.v. The group -ρν- is typical for non-IE material.

Κυβέλη [f.] Anatolian goddess (Pi. fr. 8 Snell, Ar.). ◂LW Anat.▸
•VAR Κυβήβη (Hippon. fr. 127 M, Charon of Lamps. F.Gr.H. 262 fr. 9, Hdt. 5, 102).
•ETYM In Old Phrygian, she is called Matar Kubileya or Kubeleya. The exact meaning of the adjective is unknown; does it refer to a mountain? The goddess originated in Karkhemish, around 1200, where she was called Kubaba. See Laroche 1949: 113-128. Her Lydian name was Kuvava. From Locri Epizephyrii we have her name as Qubalas (end 7th c.). See now Rein 1996: 223-237.

κύβηλις, -εως [f.] acc. to H. μάχαιρα, ἄμεινον δὲ πέλεκυς, ᾧ τὰς βοῦς καταβάλλουσι· τινὲς τὴν τυρόκνηστίν φασιν 'large knife, properly an axe, with which cattle were slain; cheese-grater' (com., Lyc.). ◂PG?▸
•DER κυβηλικός 'regarding a κ.' (com.), κυβηλίσαι· πελεκίσαι 'cut off with an axe, behead' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. On ἀγερσι-κύβηλις, see Chantraine, REGr. 75 (1962): 390. Probably Pre-Greek.

κυβιστάω [v.] 'to tumble head-first' (Il., Pl., X.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Also -έω (Opp. K. 4, 263).
•COMP Also with prefix, ἐκ-, κατα-, περι-.
•DER κυβιστητήρ 'who tumbles head-first' (Hom., E., Tryph.), also with haplology κυβιστήρ (H.) and κυβιστής (Delos; uncertain; cf. Fraenkel Glotta 2 (1910): 31 n. 2 and below); κυβίστησις (Plu., Luc.), -ημα (Luc.) 'cartwheel, somersault'.
•ETYM One may consider a pre-form *κυβίζομαι for κυβιστής, if this is old; thence perhaps κυβιστάω. Further, a few words in EM are compared: κύβη = κεφαλή (κυβιστάω = εἰς κεφαλὴν πηδῶ 'to jump on the head'), κύβηβος = ὁ κατακύψας 'bent down, stooped', κυβηβᾶν = κυρίως τὸ ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν ῥίπτειν properly 'to throw on the head' (acc. to H. = θεοφορεῖσθαι, κορυβαντιᾶν 'to be inspired by a god, be enthousiastic'); further, κυβητίζω· ἐπὶ κεφαλὴν ῥίψω, κυβησίνδα· ἐπὶ κεφαλήν, ἢ τὸ φορεῖν ἐπὶ νώτου, ἢ κατὰ νώτου 'on the head; bearing on one's back; in rear' (H.).

Frisk considers connection with κύβος 'dice' and κυφός, ►κύπτω 'to stoop', assuming that the words with -β- are from a northern source (Thracian or Macedonian), with β instead of φ. However, they may rather be Pre-Greek variants, like κύμβη 'head' (EM 545, 27) and κύμβαχος 'head first', ἀνακυμβαλιάζω 'to tumble' (see Kuiper 1956: 213f.), which are prenasalized forms clearly containing the same word. Then there is a variant with κυμ- in κυμίνδαλα· καταστροφή. Ταραντῖνοι 'rotation (Tarant.)' (H.). The variants are clearly of Pre-Greek origin.

κύβιτον [n.] 'elbow' (Hp. Loc. Hom. 6), Sicilian acc. to Ruf. Onom. 72 and Poll. 2, 141. ◂LW Lat.▸
•DER κυβιτίζω 'to push with the elbow' (Epich. 213). Also κύβωλον 'id.' (Poll. l.c.), which would be a cross with ὠλένη acc. to Bq, not an independent derivation from κύβος (Solmsen 1909: 7).
•ETYM From Lat. cubitum (pace Bechtel 1921, 2: 284).

κύβος [m.] 'dice' (IA), also of the eyes of the dice (E., Pl.) and the gaming table (Hermipp. 27, pl.); metaph. of dice-like objects, 'cubus' (Ti. Locr.), 'cubic number' (Pl., Arist.), 'dice-like block of stone or wood' (Hell. pap. and inscr.), 'cake, piece of salted fish' (com.); also 'vertebra' (Rhian. 57; after ἀστράγαλος) and 'hollow above the hips of cattle' (Ath. 9, 399b). ◂PG?▸
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. φιλό-κυβος 'who loves the dice' (Ar., Arist.).
•DER 1. κύβιον 'fish salted in κύβοι' (com., pap.), κυβιάριον name of a pot related to κύβιον (pap.) 2. κυβίας 'kind of tunny' (Opp.). 3. κυβοστόν [n.] name of a fraction (Dioph.), after εἰκοστόν, etc. 4. κυβεών [m.] 'gambling house' (Tz.). 5. κυβικός 'quadrangular' (Pl., Arist.). Denominative verbs : 1. κυβεύω [v.] 'to dice, gamble' (Att.), also 'to deceive' (Arr.), whence κυβεία 'dice', κυβευτής 'gambler', -τικός, -τήριον (Att.). 2. κυβίζω [v.] 'to raise to the cube' (Hero), whence κυβισμός (Theol. Ar.). 3. κυβᾷ (H.) as an explanation of πεττεύει 'to play π.'.
•ETYM Words for dice are often loans (Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 423). Acc. to Hdt. 1, 94, the Lydians claimed to have invented the game of κύβος. Lat. cubus is from Greek. In view of the incidental meaning 'hollow above the hips of cattle', κύβος was wrongly connected with the Germanic group of Go. hups 'hip'. Lat. cubitus 'elbow' is probably derived from -cumbāre; see De Vaan 2008 s.v. On κύβος = τρύβλιον 'cup, bowl' (Paph., H.), cf. the words s.v. ►κύπελλον.

κυδάζομαι [v.] 'to revile, jeer at' (A. Fr. 94, S. Aj. 722, A. R. 1, 1337). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Act. -ω (Epich. 6; 35, 6); aor. κυδάσσασθαι.
•DER Further κύδος [m.] 'scorn' (sch.), probably a back-formation. On ►κυδοιμός 'din of battle', which is formally unclear, see s.v. Glosses κυδάγχας· μάχας, λοιδορίας 'battles, slanderings'; κυδαγχόμενα· λοιδορούμενα 'jeers'; κυδάττειν· ἐπιφωνεῖν 'call by name, exclaim'.
•ETYM Words for 'blame, revile' are found in Slav., e.g. OCS kuditi 'μέμφεσθαι, to blame', Gm., e.g. MHG gehiuze 'noise, crying, derision, insult', and in Skt. kutsáyati 'blame, revile' (rejected by Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 365), MoP ni-kūhīdan 'blame, revile' [Pok. 595]). In view of the glosses with structure κυδ-αγχ-, the Greek words are probably Pre-Greek. Moreover, κυδ-αγχ- could be the prenasalized form of *κυδ-αχ- seen in κυδαττειν. See on ► κυδοιμός, ► κῦδος.

κύδαρος [m.] name of a small ship (Antiph. 321). ◄?►
•VAR Also -ον [n.] (pap., AB, EM).
•ETYM Origin unknown.

κυδίας [?] · τὰ ἄνθη 'flowering' (= ἐξανθήματα 'eruption') τῶν ὀδόντων 'of the teeth' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Hypotheses in Pok. 956, who translates 'Zahnkeim', a tooth which has not yet erupted.

κυδοιδοπάω 'to make noise, bring about confusion'. ⇒κυδοιμός.

κυδοιμός [m.] 'din of battle' (Il.), see Schwyzer: 492 and Trümpy 1950: 158f. ◄PG► •DER κυδοιμέω [v.] 'to rage, confuse' (Il.). Unclear κυδοιδοπάω 'to make noise, bring about confusion' (Ar.), cf. on ἐχθοδοπέω.
•ETYM Unknown, but given the unusual formation, the words are without a doubt Pre-Greek. Frisk and Chantraine discuss it under ► κυδάζομαι 'to insult', but there appears to be no semantic relation.

κῦδος, -εος [n.] 'fame, honor, glory, renown' (Il.), see Trümpy 1950: 196ff., Greindl RhM 89 (1940): 220, Benveniste 1969:2: 57ff. ◄IE keud-s-* 'miraculous power'► •COMP Often as a second member, e.g. ἐπι-κυδής 'famous' (Il.); very often in PNs, e.g. Φερε-κύδης, Κυδό-νικος (Bechtel 1917b: 269f.).
•DER Caland-forms: 1. κυδι-άνειρα [f.] conventional epithet, interpreted as 'in which renowned men partake' (Il.), of μάχη, thence of ἀγορά; see Schwyzer: 447, 474; Sommer 1948: 181; with -ι- further κύδιμος 'famous' (Hes., h. Merc., Pi.). κυδιάω [v.] 'to boast, be proud' (Il., Hes. Sc., h. Cer., h. Hom. 30, 13, A. R., Q. S.), many forms with diectasis, cf. Chantraine 1942: 359.
2. κυδρός 'famous' (Il.), to which κυδρότερος (Xenoph., B.) beside primary κύδιστος (Il.), see Seiler 1950: 76, and κύδιον (E.); also κυδέστερος (Plb.) and κυδίστατος (Nic. Th. 3), -τε [voc.] for κύδιστε (Il.). Late denominative κυδρόομαι [v.] 'to boast' (Ael., Polyaen.).
3. κυδαίνω 'to honor, glorify' (Il.), aor. κυδῆναι; also pres. κυδάνω 'to glorify, boast' (Il.), see Chantraine 1942: 315; κυδνός = κυδρός (v.l. in Hes., IG 14, 2117). Here also κυδάλιμος = κυδρός (Il.), for which Arbenz 1933: 27 suggests a cross of *κυδαλέος and κύδιμος; κυδήεις (AP, Man.), Dor. -ᾶεσσα (Epid.) are late analogical formations; ὑπερ-κύδᾶς [ptc.] 'boasting' (Il.), only -αντα(ς); probably analogical, see Risch 1937: 23[189]. Perhaps here the deme name Κυδαντίδαι (Wackernagel Glotta 14 (1925): 54)?
•ETYM The word κῦδος is connected with a Slavic word for 'wonder, miracle', e.g. OCS čudo, gen. -ese, SCr. čȕdo (acute). Ablaut keuHd-os-* next to kuHd-es-* has been assumed, which would give Gr. kūd-es-* (cf. Porzig 1954a: 170). However, assuming a root keuHd-* seems superfluous, especially given that the Slavic acute accentuation can be due to Winter's Law. Meier-Brügger 1992a: 269 assumed that Greek replaced the old ablaut pattern eu / u* with ū / u*, like in the nasal presents. Thus, κῦδ- is a morphological full grade replacing older keud-*. As far as the meaning is concerned, the Slavic group has the connotation of sorcery (e.g. ORu. kudesъ [m.] 'magic, sorcery'; Ru. (dial.) kudesá [nom.pl.] 'miracles performed through an evil force'). The Greek words denote the "force rayonnante des dieux ou celle qu'ils confèrent" (DELG, following Benveniste l.c.). Any further connection with the verb 'to learn, understand, hear' found in OCS čujǫ, čuti, Gr. ► κοέω is gratuitous, as this has no root-final -d*.

κυδώνια (μᾶλα) [n.pl.] 'quinces' (Stesich., Alcm., com.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also κυδώνιαι μηλίδες (Ibyc.).
•DER κυδωνέα (-ία) [f.] 'quince tree, Pirus Cydonia' (Hell. pap., Dsc.), -ίτης (οἶνος) 'wine from the quince' (Dsc., Colum.), -ᾶτον 'drink of quince' (Aet., Paul.Aeg.), -ιάω [v.] 'to swell like quinces' (APl.). κυδωνό-μελι [n.] 'mead from quince' (Dsc., Orib.), cf. Strömberg 1944: 30).
•ETYM From an older Anatolian word still retained in κοδύ-μαλον (Alcm. 90); Greek connected the word with the famous city of Κυδωνία (on the north coast of Crete) by folk etymology. Cf. also the town Κυτώνιον on the Lydian border. The interpretation by H. in κοδώνεα· σῦκα χειμερινά. καὶ καρύων εἶδος Περσικῶν 'winter-figs; kind of Persian nut' is based on confusion with ► κόττανον. Lat. cydōneum 'quince-juice, -wine' (Ulp.) is from Greek; Lat. cotōneum 'quince' (Cato) also belongs here, but probably as an independent loan. The Western and Eastern European forms derive from cotōneum and cydōneum, e.g. Ital. cotogno, MoFr. coing (> MoE quince), OHG chutina, MHG quiten, ORu. gdunja. See Hehn-Schrader 1911: 241, Trump Herm. 88 (1960): 14-22, and Berger MSS 9 (1956): 8ff.

κυέω [v.] 'to be or become pregnant' (Il.), with τινά or τί 'with a young'. ◄IE ḱeuh$_1$-* 'swell'► •VAR κυήσω (Hdt.), κυῆσαι (IA), κεκύηκα (Hell.), κυηθῆναι, -θήσεσθαι (late); older aorist κύσασθαι (Il.), causative active κῦσαι (A.); younger present κύω (since Arist., LXX); also κυΐσκομαι, -ω (IA).
•COMP Sometimes with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-, ἀπο-, συγ-κυέομαι, -κυΐσκομαι (-ίσκω), ὑπο-κυσαμένη (Il.). Compounds, e.g. κυο-φορέω [v.] 'to be pregnant, be with young', whence -φορία, -ησις (LXX, med., etc.), -φόρος (pap., EM); ἔγ-κυος 'pregnant' (Ion., Arist.); κύ-ουρα [f.] name of a plant that was used to procure abortion (Stob.), see Strömberg 1940: 95.
•DER Verbal nouns: κύημα 'foetus, embryo' (IA), -ησις 'conception, pregnancy, embryo' (Pl., Arist., Thphr.), κύος [n.] = κύημα (Ar. Fr. 609, inscr. Ceos), κυόεις (Cos [III^a]); ἀποκυητικός 'capable of giving birth' (Astrol.), κυητήριος 'promoting pregnancy' (Hp.), κυήτωρ 'begetter' (Cyran.), of a bird; κυηρόν· ἔγκυον, ἁπαλόν, βλαστόν 'pregnant, tender, offspring' (H.). See on ► κῦμα, ► κύριος.
•ETYM The present κυέω can be equated with Skt. śváyati 'to be or become strong, increase' < IE ḱuh$_1$-éie-. As LIV[2] s.v. ḱu̯eh$_1$- remarks, the Ved. aorist áśvat may be an innovation based on the pair hváyati : áhvat. More forms s.v. ► κύριος. The words ► κύαμος, ► πᾶς, ► πέπᾶμαι are not related. On the supposed connection to words for 'hollow, empty', see ► κύαρ.

κυθνόν [adj.] · τὸ ἄκυον φάρμακον. καὶ πολύκυθνα πολύσπερμα. κυθνὸν γὰρ τὸ σπέρμα 'seed' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Because of ἀκυητήριον· φάρμακον πρὸς τὸ μὴ κυεῖν γυναικεῖον 'philter for contraception' (H.), a correction to <ἄ>κυθνον (LSJ) was assumed necessary. Frisk does not consider it necessary, and instead assumes a euphemistic ellipsis of the negation. DELG supports the correction, and refers to ἄκυθος (Call. H. Ap. 52), connecting ►κεύθω (unclear).

κῠκάω [v.] 'to stir, mix, bring in confusion' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Aor. κυκῆσαι, -ηθῆναι.
•COMP Also with ἀνα-, δια-, συν-, etc.
•DER κυκεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'mixed drink' (post-Hom.), poet. also -ε(ι)ῶ [acc.] (Λ 624, 641), which may be after the comparatives in -ω, but acc. to Risch 1937: 147 and Chantraine 1942: 212 it is an old s-stem); Dor. κυκᾶν, -ᾶνος (Epid.); instrument noun κύκηθρον 'stirring spoon', metaph. 'turbulent person' (Ar.); action noun κύκησις (Pl., Epicur.), -ησμός (S.), -ηθμός (Max. Tyr.) 'mixing'; also κύκημα· τάραχος 'disorder', κυκήθραν· ταραχήν 'disorder' (H.).
•ETYM Intensive formation in -άω (cf. Schwyzer: 719) without etymology. Pok. 597 connects it with Lith. šáukštas 'spoon', which seems unlikely. Fur.: 305 compares ►κυρκανάω (with further examples of insertion of a liquid) and concludes to a Pre-Greek form.

κύκλος [m.pl.] 'circle, ring, wheel', also metaph. of circular objects, e.g. 'circular square, wall around the city' (Il.). ◄IE k^we-k^wl-o- 'wheel, circle'► •VAR Also τὰ κύκλα, originally a collective.
•COMP Many compounds, e.g. κυκλο-τερής 'made round, round' (Il.), cf. on ►τείρω, εὔ-κυκλος 'forming a beautiful circle' (Il.); also in hypostases, e.g. ἐγ-κύκλιος 'going around in a circle, circular; general' (Att. Hell.), on the mg. Koller Glotta 34 (1955): 174ff.; on ►Κύκλωψ s.v.
•DER A. Substantives: 1. diminutives κυκλ-ίσκος (medic., Ptol.), -ίσκιον (Dsc.). 2. -ίστρια [f.] 'cyclic danceress' (Att. inscr.), after κιθαρίστρια, etc. 3. κυκλά-μινος [f., m.] plant name, 'Cyclamen graecum, Lonicera periclymenum' (Thphr., Dsc.), also -αμίς (Orph.), after the circular radical tuber (Strömberg 1940: 36; formation after σησάμινος, etc.). 4. Κυκλειών, -ῶνος [m.] month name (Ceos [IV[a]]), after the festival τὰ Κύκλ(ε)ια. 5. Κυκλεύς PN (Ael.), Boßhardt 1942: 130.
B. Adjectives: 1. κυκλάς [f.] 'forming a circle', also Κυκλάδες [pl.] TN "circle-islands", the Cyclades (IA), Lat. LW cyclas name of a circular cloth; κυκλιάς [f.] epithet of τυρός 'cheese' (AP). 2. κύκλ-ιος 'circular' (Att.). 3. -ικός 'circular, belonging to a circle' (Arist.), 4. -όεις (S. [lyr.], AP). 5. -ώδης (Hp.) 'id.'. 6. κυκλ-ιαῖος 'turning in a circle' (Att. inscr.). 7. -ιακός, in τὰ κυκλιακά, title of a treatise on the circle (late); 8. κυκλατός 'shod', of horses (pap. VI[p]).
C. Verbs: 1. κυκλέω 'to turn in a circle, surround' (H 332), whence κύκλησις 'revolution' (Pl.). 2. κυκλόω 'to make circular; surround' (IA), whence -ωμα 'rounding, round object, wheel, etc.' (E.), -ωσις 'surrounding' (Th., X.). 3. κυκλεύω 'to surround, go in a circle', e.g. of a water-wheel, 'to irrigate' (Hp., Str., pap.), whence κύκλ-ευμα 'water-wheel', -ευτήριον 'id.', -ευτής 'watcher of a water-wheel' (pap.). 4. κυκλίζω 'to turn around' (Agatharch.), -ισμός (comm. Arist.). 5. κυκλάζει· κύκλῳ περιέρχεται 'goes around in a circle'. 6. κυκλαίνει· στρογγυλοῖ 'is round' (H.).
•ETYM Old name of the wheel, preserved in several languages: Skt. cakrá- [m., n.], Av. caxra- [m.], Gm., e.g. OE hwēol [n.] (also hweowol, hweogol) > MoE wheel, from reduplicated IE k^we-k^wl-o-. With u-coloring of the reduplication vowel, due to the surrounding labiovelars, Gr. κύκλος and ToA kukäl (B kokale) 'wagon'. Related, but unclear in detail, is Phr. κίκλην· τὴν ἄρκτον τὸ ἄστρον (H.), originally 'wagon' (cf. Porzig 1954a: 183). An archaic formation with full grade and without reduplication is found in ON hvel (beside hjól = OE hwēol) and OPr. kelan, from IE k^wélo- [n.]; o-vocalism, in OCS kolo, gen. -ese 'wheel, wagon'. The word is derived from the root k^wel(H)- 'turn'; see ►πέλομαι. Given that the meaning 'wheel' (> 'wagon') is represented almost everywhere, one may wonder if the meaning 'circle' is secondary. An original meaning 'turning, turner' is suspected for the Baltic word for 'neck', e.g. Lith. kāklas < IE k^wo-k^wl-o- (?).

κύκνος [m.] 'swan' (Il.), also name of a ship, after the front part (Nicostr. Com.), and of an eye-salve, after its color (Gal.), whence κυκνάριον 'id.' (Aët., Gal.); also as a PN (Pi.). ◄IE? (s)keuk- 'lighten, be white'► •DER κύκνειος 'of the swan' (Pi., S., Hell.), fem. -ῖτις (S.); κυκνίας [m.] name of a white eagle (Paus.), cf. κορακίας, etc., Chantraine 1933: 94.
•ETYM Abundant discussion on κύκνος in Thompson 1895 s.v. Connected with Skt. śócati 'to lighten, glow', śukrá- 'light, clear, white'; the root is now reconstructed as (s)keuk- by Lubotsky Inc. ling. 24 (2001) (formerly ḱeuk-).

κυκύιζα · γλυκεῖα κολόκυντα 'sweet κολόκυντα' and κύκυον· τὸν σικυόν 'cucumber' (H.). ⇒σίκυος.

κύλα [n.pl.] 'the parts under the eyes' (Hp., Sor.), cf. κύλα· τὰ ὑποκάτω τῶν βλεφάρων κοιλώματα. τὰ ὑπὸ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς μῆλα. τὰ ὑπώπια 'the cavities under the eyelids; the swellings under the eyes; the parts of the face under the eyes' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Var. lectio κοιλ- (cf. LSJ s.v.). Also κύλλια· ὑπώπια μέλανα 'black eyes' (H.), κύλλαβοι· ὑπώπια 'parts of the face under the eyes' (H.).
•COMP As a first member in κυλ-οιδιάω 'to have a swelling under the eyes' (Ar., Theoc.), compound of κύλα and οἰδέω (οἶδος) after the verbs of disease in -ιάω; κυλοιάζειν· τὸ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἐπικλίνειν χλευάζοντα 'scornful shutting of the eyes' (Theognost. Can. 21).
•DER Diminutive κυλίδες, -άδες (Poll., Eust.); ἐπι-κυλίδες 'the upper eyelids' (Poll.), probably a hypostasis. PN Κύλων (Argos), Κύλασος (Larisa), Κύλαhος (Argos), see Solmsen 1909: 88f.; on Κυλωΐδας, -ϊάδας (Delph.) see Bechtel 1917a: 31ff.
•ETYM Not related to ►κύαρ, for we would expect long ῡ from kuh_1-l-. The connection with Lat. super-cilium 'eyebrow' is probably wrong: cf. De Vaan 2008 s.v. cilium, connected with the root ḱel- 'to hide'. The variants with κυλλ- rather show that the word is from Pre-Greek kul^y-.

κυληβίς · κολοβή 'curtailed'. ⇒κύλληβις.

κυλίνδω [v.] 'to roll, turn over' (Il.). ⋖PG⋗
•VAR Also intr. med. -ομαι; -έω, -έομαι (Att.), fut. κυλί̄σω (Att.), κυλινδήσω (late), aor. κυλῖσαι (Pi., IA), pass. -ισθῆναι (Il.), -ινδηθῆναι (Str.), perf. med. κεκύλισμαι (Luc., Nonn.); secondary present κυλί̄ω (Ar.) to κυλῖσαι < -ίνδ-σαι.
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. προ-, ἐκ-, ἐν-, ἀμφι-.
•DER 1. κύλινδρος [m.] 'rolling stone, tumbler, cylinder, etc.' (Democr. 155, Hell.), whence κυλίνδρ-ιον, -ίσκος, -ικός, -όω (Hell.). 2. κύλῖσις 'rolling, turning over' (Arist.), -ισμός 'id.' (Thd.), -ισμα 'roll, etc.' (Sm.), -ίστρα 'place for horses to roll in' (X., Poll.), -ιστός [m.] 'roll of papyrus, packet' (pap.); τρι-κύλιστος (Epicur. fr. 125) with unclear mg., see De Witt *Class. Phil.*35 (1940): 183. 3. κυλίνδησις 'rolling' (Pl., Plu.).
•ETYM The same element -νδ- is found in the synonyms ►ἀλίνδω, -έω, ►καλινδέομαι; further unclear. Most often connected with ►κυλλός 'curved, lame' "zu einer allumfassenden Wurzel (s)kel- 'bent, curved' (s. κῶλον, σκέλος)". The word is hardly IE.

κύλιξ, -ικος [f., m.] '(drinking) cup' (post-Hom.). ⋖PG(V)⋗ •VAR Note κυλίσκη, -ίχνη.
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. κυλικ-ήρυτος 'scooped with a cup' (Call.), εὐ-κύλικος 'with beautiful cups' (AP).
•DER Diminutives: κυλίκιον (Thphr.), κυλίσκη (D. H., Poll.), hardly from -ικ-ίσκη (Schwyzer: 542), -ίσκιον (Poll.); -ίχνη (Alc., Ar.), Chantraine 1933: 195; Lat. LW culigna; -ίχνιον (Ar., Hell.), -ιχνίς (Achae.); further κυλικ-εῖον 'cup-stander' (com., pap.), -ειος 'belonging to a cup' (Poll.), -ώδης 'like a κ.' (sch.).
•ETYM The word looks similar to Lat. calix 'deep bowl, cup', but a variation a/u* is unknown in Indo-European words. For the same reason, ►κάλυξ 'seed-vessel, husk' is not identical with our word. One might assume a pre-form kʷlH-ik-* in order to explain both Greek and Latin, but this is an improbable formation for PIE.
With anlauting sk-, U skalse-to 'ex patera' has been connected (by comparison with ►σκαλλίον), but it does not belong here for the same reason. As with so many names of cups, etc., we must reckon with loans. See Fur. 110, 132[65], who points to κυλί-σκ-η and κυλίχν-ιον, etc., with aspiration before the nasal. As this feature is non-IE, the word may be Pre-Greek; note that -ικ is a typical Pre-Greek suffix (Pre-Greek: suffixes), and that κυλ-ικ- is a typical Pre-Greek structure.

κύλλα · σκύλαξ. Ἠλεῖοι 'puppy (Elis)' (H.). ⇒σκύλαξ.

κύλληβις · κολοβόν[τα] . οἱ δὲ τὰ κέρατα κολόβια παρ' Ἱππώνακτι 'short horns' (fr. 122). ⋖PG⋗ •VAR κυληβίς· κολοβή 'curtailed' (H.). Cf. Theognost. 21, 19.
•ETYM Unknown. The glosses are unclear, but a variation typical for Pre-Greek may be recognized in κυλ(λ)ηβις· κολοβ- (note λ/λλ).

κυλλός [adj.] 'deformed, crippled, crooked', of hands, feet, etc. (IA). ⋖IE? (s)kel-* 'bend, crook'⋗ •COMP As a first member in κυλλο-ποδίων (-ον [voc.]) epithet of Hephaistos, 'with crippled feet, limping' (Il.), from κυλλό-πους 'id.' (Hell.) after the nouns in -ίων (Schwyzer: 487).
•DER κυλλόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to be crippled' (Hp., Gal.), -ωσις, -ωμα; κυλλαίνω (intr.) 'id.' (S., Ph.). Also κύλλαιος· βόστρυχος 'lock of hair' (H.).
•ETYM Probably connected with κελλόν· στρεβλόν, πλάγιον 'twisted, athwart' (H.); see ►κελλάς. The word ►κυλίνδω does not belong here, nor do Skt. kuṇi- 'lame (of the arm)', kuṇḍá- [n.] 'jar'; see Mayrhofer KEWA s.v. The form was recently explained differently by Meier-Brügger KZ 103 (1990): 20-23, who derives the word from kʷel-* 'turn' as kʷl-no-* 'turned outward or inward'. Vine 1999b: 566 accepted the etymology of the root, but assumed kʷol(H)-ió-, according to a variant of Cowgill's Law (o > υ before -li̯-*). In view of its semantics and problematic IE etymology, the word may as well be Pre-Greek (cf. Fur.: 354[55]).

κῦμα, -ατος [n.] 1. 'wave, breakers', also metaph. (Il.); 2. = κύημα 'foetus, embryo' (A., E., AP), 'young sprout' (Thphr., Gal.), see Strömberg 1937: 79. ⋖IE ḱuh₁-* 'swell'⋗ •COMP κυματωγή < *κυματο-ϝαγή 'breaking of the waves, beach' (Hdt.); ἀ-κύμων 'without waves' (Pi., trag.), also 'without foetus' (E.), opposed to ἐγ-κύμων (Att.); also ἄ-κυμος (E., Arist.), ἀκύματος (Trag. Adesp.) 'without waves'.
•DER Diminutive κυμάτιον 'the volute on the Ionic capital' (inscr.); κυματ-ίης, -ίας [m.] 'causing waves, stormy' (Ion. poet.), -ώδης (Arist.), -όεις (Arist., Opp.), -ηρός (gloss.) 'full of waves'.
Denominative verbs: 1. κυμαίνω 'to rise in waves, swell' (Il.), 'to become pregnant' (γαστέρα; late Epic), also with ἐκ-, etc.; thence κύμανσις (Arist.); 2. κυματόομαι, -όω 'to rise in waves, cover with waves' (Th., Luc., Plu.), whence -ωσις (Str.); 3. κυματίζομαι 'to roll with the waves' (Arist.).
Here also belongs Κυμώ [f.], name of a Nereid (Hes.); also Κύμη (Kretschmer Glotta 24 (1936): 277ff.)?
•ETYM In the meaning 'foetus', κῦμα is clearly a verbal noun of ►κυέω. The meaning 'wave', which is more common and older, may also derive from 'swelling' (cf. οἶδμα).

κύμβαχος [adj., subst.] 1. adjectival, 'falling head-first' (E 586; imitated by Call., Lyc.); 2. substantival, probably 'crest of a helmet' (O 536). ⋖PG(V)⋗ •ETYM Acc. to Leumann 1950: 231ff., the divergent meanings should be explained from an original substantival, technical sense. The formation favors this as well; cf. especially οὐρίαχος 'end of a spear', στόμαχος originally 'end of the mouth', i.e. 'throat'. The form κύμβη 'drinking cup' has been taken as the basis, but this is unconvincing. Others, e.g. Kuiper 1956: 213f., have started from a nasalized form of ►κύβη 'head', ►κυβιστάω: these forms in κυβ- without prenasalization show that the word is Pre-Greek.

κύμβη 1 [f.] 'cup, bowl' (Nic., Ath.), 'boat' (S. fr. 127). ⋖PG(V)⋗ •VAR Also κόμβος = τὸ ἔκπωμα 'drinking-cup' (H.), but does it really belong here?
•DER κύμβος [m., n.] 'hollow vessel' (Nic., H.); κυμβίον (-εῖ-) [n.] 'small cup' (Att., Hell.), 'small boat' (H., Suid.). Also κύμβαλον [n.], usually -α [pl.] 'cymbal' (Pi., A., X.), cf. κρόταλον, whence the diminutive κυμβάλιον (Hero) and denominative κυμβαλίζω 'to play the cymbals' (Hell.), -ισμός, -ιστής, -ίστρια (late). Probably ἀνεκυμβαλίαζον 'they clashed together like κύμβαλα', of δίφροι (Π 379), also belongs here.

•ETYM Previously connected with Skt. kumbhá-, Av. xumba- [m.] 'pot', and Celtic vessel names like MIr. comm, cummal. More forms in Pok. 592, WH s.v. cubō. Because of the sequence kumb^(h)-* (either with b, which did not exist in PIE, or with both voiceless and aspirated stops k - b^h, which is an impossible root structure in native Indo-European words), the word cannot be inherited. It is rather a 'Wanderwort', which fits a vessel term very well. From κύμβη, Lat. borrowed cymba, cumba 'ship' (acc. to Plin. HN 7, 208 it is Phoenician). Fur.: 284 compares κύπη 'ship, etc.' (H.) and considers the word to be Pre-Greek; likewise, DELG. See ►κύπη.

κύμβη 2 [f.] = κύβη 'κεφαλή' (only EM 545, 27). ◄PG(V)► •DER κυμβητιάω 'to fall head first' (ibd.); cf. κυβητίζω, etc. s.v. ►κυβιστάω.
•ETYM Perhaps identical with ►κύμβη 1 'cup' (cf. Lat. testa > Fr. tête, etc.). The prenasalization in the pair κύμβη / κύβη proves Pre-Greek origin. Of course, κύμβαχος 'head first' belongs here too.

κύμβη 3 [f.] name of an unknown bird, in πτεροβαμοσι κύμβαις (Emp. 20, 7). ◄PG?►
•VAR Cf. κόμβα· κορώνη. Πολυρρήνιοι 'crow, shearwater (Polyrrhenian)' (H.); κύμβας· ὄρνιθας 'birds' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. See Thompson 1895 s.v. If κόμβα is a variant, the word is Pre-Greek.

κύμινδις, -ιος, -ιδος [f., m.] name of an unknown bird (Ξ 291, Ar. Av. 1181, Arist.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR κύβινδις (v.l.); this form was borrowed into Latin (Plin. N.H. 10, 24), see André 1967 s.v. cybindis, also as cibinnus (Pol. Silv.). In Greek also κυβήναις [read κύβινδις?]· γλαῦξ[αις] 'little owl' (H.) (thus Fur.: 216[67]); v.l. κόμινδις (Procl.).
•ETYM The sch. on Ar. Av. 291 identified the bird with κικυμωΐς (Call., cf. κίκυμος, -υβος H.); therefore, it was understood as 'owl'. Clearly a loanword, because of the suffix -νδ-; perhaps of Anatolian origin, or Pre-Greek, which may amount to the same.

κύμῑνον [n.] 'cumin' (Hp., Sophr., com.). ◄PG?►
•DIAL Myc. ku-mi-no /kuminon/.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in κυμινο-πρίστης "cumin-splitter", i.e. 'skinflint' (Arist., com.).
•DER κυμινώδης 'like κ.' (Thphr.), -ινος 'of κ.', -ᾶς 'κ.-seller' (inscr. Jaffa), -εύω 'to besprinkle with κ.' (Orac. apud Luc.).
•ETYM Thought to be a loan from Semitic; cf. Hebr. kammōn, Akk. kamūnu, etc. (Lewy 1895: 38), although Kretschmer KZ 29 (1888): 440 rather saw these reflected in the plant names κάμων (Nic.) and σκαμ(μ)ωνία, -ώνιον (com., Nic.) 'kind of bindweed'. Frisk suggests that the word may have been borrowed from Semitic twice. See also Masson 1967: 51.

However, Ruijgh Lingua 58 (1982): 209 suggested that the word, with its typical Pre-Greek suffix -ῑν-, was in the first place a loan from Anatolia (or the Aegaean); Semitic could have taken it from the same source; cf. Fur.: 187[18] on βράθυ. Borrowed as the Lat. LW cumīnum, whence the modern European forms (Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 655).

κυνάμυια [f.] 'dog-fly' (Il.), usually as a term of abuse. ◄GR► •VAR Later κυνό-μυια (LXX, AP), with analogical -ο-.
•ETYM Frisk assumes older κυά-μυια from IE k̑uu̯n̥- > Skt. śuva-, with -ν- from κυνός, etc. This seems improbable, but no other solution is apparent. For the meaning, cf. Lith. šun-musė̃ 'id.'; further, Risch IF 59 (1949): 59.

κύνδαλος [m.] 'wooden nail' (Poll., H.). ◄PG► •VAR Plur. both -οι and -α.
•COMP κυνδαλο-παίκτης (Poll.), -παίστης (H.) 'κ.-player'.
•DER κυνδαλισμός 'the game of κ.' (Poll.), also called κυνδάλη (H.).
•ETYM The formation recalls that of the synonymous πάσσαλος. The word has a typical Pre-Greek appearance: prenasalization(?) and the structure CuNC-aR-*.

κυνέω [v.] 'to prostrate (oneself at), to kiss the ground, to honor by prostrating' (Hom.), also 'to throw kiss-hands' (cf. Marti Lang. 12, 272ff.). Mostly poetic (prose uses φιλέω). ◄IE ku(e)s-* 'kiss'► •VAR Aor. κύσ(σ)αι (Hom.), fut. κυνήσομαι (E.), κύσσω (Babr.).
•COMP The compound προσ-κυνέω occurs in prose: aor. προσ-κυνῆσαι (IA), -κύσαι (S., Ar.), fut. -κυνήσω (Hippon., Pl.), -κεκύνηκα (LXX.). Thence προσκύνη-σις (Pl., Arist.), -μα (Hell.) 'prostration, reverence', -τής 'adorer' (oriental inscr., NT), -τήρ 'footstool for prayer' (Mon.Ant.).
•DER From the simplex only κυνη-τίνδα (παίζειν, Crates Com.).
•ETYM Interesting for the interpretation of the Greek is the Hittite verb kuu̯ašš-^zi 'to kiss'. As remarked by Kloekhorst 2008 s.v., it is consistently spelled with a geminate -šš-, which acc. to him points to an IE pre-form Kuens-. The Greek nasal present κυνέω, which seems to go back to ku-ne-s-, may somehow reflect the same archaic formation, though admittedly the Schwebeablaut is difficult. This means that the root may be reconstructed as k̑ues-, not k̑uas- (Eichner in LIV² s.v. ku̯as-*). As has been remarked by Puhvel HED s.v., the word may be onomatopoeic in origin. This may explain the deviating initial in the Germanic word for 'kiss', e.g. OHG kus, kussen, which escaped Grimm's Law (it may also be unrelated). A formally identical root k̑ues-* (perhaps even k̑uns-;* cf. Kloekhorst ibid.) is found in Skt. śvas- 'to hiss'.

κυπάρισσος [f.] 'cypress' (ε 64). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Att. -ιττος.
•DIAL Myc. ku-pa-ri-se-ja [n.pl.] 'made of cypress-wood', probably the ethnic name ku-pa-ri-si-jo.
•DER Diminutive -ίττιον (Alciphr.); further -ίσσινος, -ίττινος 'of cypress-wood' (ρ 340), -ισσίας 'Euphorbia aleppica' (Dsc.; Strömberg 1940: 35), -ισσών, -ῶνος [m.] 'cypress forest' (Str.). Town name Κυπάρισσος (in Phocis, Β 519), also -ισσοῦς, -ισσία, -ισσιαί, -ισσήεις (of Elis, B 593), κυφαρισσινος (inscr. Aegina); also Κυπαρίσσιος epithet of Apollo (Cos), Κυφαρισσία of Artemis (Lacon., IG 5(1), 977), Κυφαρισσίτας of Pan (Crete).

•ETYM Clearly a Pre-Greek word, because of the 'foreign phoneme' -σσ-/-ττ-, and notably the variant Κυφ- in the toponym and the epithets. Latin has cupressus (note the -e-). Perhaps Hebr. gōfer is from the same source. See Fur.: 159f., index. On other names of the cypress, see Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 671.

κύπασσις, -εως [m.] name of a (short) frock, also worn by women (Alc. Z 34, 7, cf. Hamm 1957: 53, Hecat., Ion Trag., AP). ◂LW Anat.▸
•VAR Plur. -ιδες (Alc.).
•DER Diminutive -ίσκος (Hippon. 18).
•ETYM An Anatolian loanword, connected with Lydians and Persians in our sources (cf. Gow *Class. Rev.*69 (1955): 238f.). A striking agreement is shown by Hitt. kupaḫi- (von Blumenthal 1930: 27ff.), which however seems to indicate a headgear; see Friedrich 1952.

κύπειρον [n.] name of a meadow-plant with an aromatic root, 'galingale, Cyperus longus, rotundus' (Φ 351, δ 603, Thphr.), cf. Strömberg 1937: 79f. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also -ος [m.] (h. Merc. 107, com., Thphr., Theoc.); κύπερος [m.] (Ion., Dsc., Plu.), κύπαιρος (Alcm. 16), κύπερα· τὰ σχοινία ἐκ κυπείρου πεπλεγμένα 'the cords plaited from the galingale' (H.).
•DIAL Myc. ku-pa-ro /kupa(i)ros/.
•DER Diminutive κυπαιρίσκος (Alcm. 38), κυπερίζω 'to be like the galingale' (Dsc.).
•ETYM A foreign Pre-Greek word; on the varying form, cf. Schwyzer 471f. Cf. on ►κύπρος 1. The word probably reflects kupar*^{y}-, which explains the variants κυπα(ι)ρο- and κυπε(ι)ρο-; the a* was phonetically colored to ε before a palatal consonant, which also explains the lack or presence of ι. Cf. on ►Κάβειροι. See Mayer RILomb. 94 (1960): 316 and E. Masson 1967: 111f.

κῦπελλον [n.] 'bulbous drinking vessel, beaker, goblet' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Note κύφελλα 'hollows of the ears' (Lyc.).
•DIAL Myc. [ku]-pe-ra (uncertain, cf. Palmer 1963: 364).
•COMP Some compounds, notably ἀμφι-κύπελλον [n.], epithet of δέπας (Hom.), literally "with cups at both sides", i.e. 'double beaker'; acc. to Aristarchus (EM 90, 43; cf. Ath. 11, 783b) 'double-handled'; cf. Kretschmer Glotta 20 (1932): 248, Brommer Herm. 77 (1942): 358f., 366.
•ETYM Acc. to a witness in Ath. 11, 483, a κύπελλον was known to both Cyprians and Cretans; cf. Bowra JHS 54 (1934): 73. In the traditional interpretation, -ελλο- is a combination of suffixes -λ- and -ιο- (cf. Chantraine 1933: 253 and Schwyzer: 483). One may then connects κύπη· τρώγλη 'hole' (H.), with corresponding forms in Lat. cūpa 'vat', Skt. kū́pa- [m.] 'pit, hole', etc.; see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. kū́pa-. However, Furnée compares not only κύπη (H.) in various meanings (Fur.: 121), but also κύβος … τρύβλιον (H.) and κύμβη 'cup', κύμβος 'id.' (op. cit. 176 and 284). The word was a widespread 'Wanderwort', but given the variants it was probably Pre-Greek. Moreover, -ελλο- rather continues the Pre-Greek suffix -al^{y}-.

κυπρῖνος [m.] 'carp' (Arist., Opp.). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Formation like ἀτταγῖνος and other fish names (see on ►ἀτταγᾶς and Strömberg 1943: 41), derived from ►κύπρος 'henna' after the color (cf. Strömberg 1943: 20ff.). Other names for the carp are not connected (e.g. Skt. śaphara- [m.] = Lith. šãpalas, or OHG karp(f)o, etc.). The suffix -ῖν- is well-known in Pre-Greek.

κύπρος 1 [f.] 'henna, Lawsonia inermis', also a salve made of it (Thphr., LXX, Dsc.). ◂LW Sem.▸
•DER κύπρινον (of μύρον, ἔλαιον, Dsc. Aret.); κύπριον· τὸ ἀρνόγλωσσον 'plantain' (H.). Denominative verb κυπρίζω 'to bloom', whence κυπρισμός 'blooming' (of olive or vine, LXX, Eust.). On ►κυπρῖνος, see s.v.
•ETYM From Semitic; cf. Hebr. kōfer (Lewy 1895: 40f.). The word ►κύπειρον, -ος does not belong here. See also E. Masson 1967: 52.

κύπρος 2 [m.] a corn measure (Alc., inscr.); ἡμί-κυπρον (Hippon.), acc. to H. = ἥμισυ μεδίμνου 'half a medimnus'. ◂?▸
•ETYM Persson 1912(1): 104[4] compares κύπελλον, κύπη; rather a loan. Lewy 1895: 263[1] recalls Hebr. k^{e}pōr 'beaker'.

Κύπρος 3 [f.] the island Cyprus (Il.). ◂?▸
•DIAL Myc. ku-pi-ri-jo /Kuprios/.
•DER Κύπρις, -ιδος, -ιδα, -ιν [f.] name of Aphrodite (Il.); Κύπριος 'Cyprian' (IA), Κυπριακός 'id.' (D. S.).
•ETYM The similarity with Sumer. zabar 'copper' ("gleaming stone"), whence Assyr. siparru > Elam. čupar 'id.', is accidental, see Ipsen IF 39 (1917-1921): 232ff.
Neu 1987: 181f. (see also Neu 1988: 37, Neu Glotta 73 (1995): 1-7) points to Hurr. kab/pali- from a root kab/p- 'copper' as the possible origin of the name. It is remarkable, though, that this word has no -u-. The word might come from a substrate language. The word is found in a Middle-Hittite text from 1400 BC, where kup- may stand for kab/p.
Cyprus was famous for its copper in antiquity. In the Bronze Age, the island (or a part of it) was called Alaš(ḫ)i̯a; the name lives on in the epithet Ἀλασιώτης of Apollo.
It was borrowed as Lat. cuprum, older (aes) cyprium 'copper'. From Latin originate MoFr. cuivre, MoE copper, MoHG Kupfer.

κύπτω [v.] 'to bend forward, stoop, to run with the head down' (IA). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aor. κύψαι (Il.), fut. κύψομαι, -ω (Att., Hell.), perf. κέκῡφα (IA).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, ἐπι-, παρα-, ὑπο-, ὑπερ-.
•DER ἐπί-, κατά-, παρά-, πρό-κυψις 'stooping' (medic., Hell.); συγκύπται [pl.] 'rafters, sloping beams' (Ath. Mech.), παρακυπτικός 'looking inside, inspecting inquisitively' (Cod. Iust.). Adverb κύβδα 'bent forward' (Archil., com.). Enlarged present κυπτάζω 'to keep stooping, go poking about' (com.). Besides κῡφός 'bent forwards, hunchbacked' (β 16), with several derivatives: κύφων, -ωνος [m.] 'bent yoke of the plough; pillory; one who has had his neck in a pillory; curved beam., etc.' (Thgn., Archil., com., etc.); κυφώνιον a kind of salve (Alex. Trall.), -ισμός 'punishment by the κ.' (sch.); κυφότης 'being bent' (Hld.), κῦφος [n.] 'hump, hunch' (Hdn.). Denominative κυφόομαι 'to be bent, hump-backed', κύφωσις 'being hump-backed', -ωμα 'hump' (medic.); κύφω, in κύφοντα ὀφθαλμοῖς 'with downcast eyes' (LXX), perhaps a back-formation (to κυφός or κέκυφα?). With factitive mg. κυπόω 'to overthrow', only in (ἀνα-)κυπώσας (Lyc., Nic.); perhaps after τύπτω: τυπόω?

•ETYM The formation of κῦφός is isolated within Greek, and therefore it may contain the original root shape. The word κυφός has been compared with Skt. kubhrá- [m.] 'humpbacked bull', kubjá- 'humpbacked, crooked', but for these Munda origin has also been claimed. A direct comparison of κῦφος [n.] with Av. kaōfa- [m.] 'mountain, camel-hump' (Brandenstein 1956: 53) is deceptive, as κῦφος is late and was derived from κυφός within Greek. Other branches of IE show words with root-final -p-*: Lith. kuprà 'hump', OHG hovar 'id.', etc. Glosses like κύφερον ἢ κυφήν· κεφαλήν. Κρῆτες 'head (Cretan)' (H.) probably do not belong here; see ►κύμβη 2. It has also been compared with words for 'pot, jar', like Skt. kumbhá-, Av. xumba- [m.] (cf. Sturtevant Lang. 17 (1941): 10). The variation κυφ-/ κυπ- (in κυπόω) points to a Pre-Greek word. Cf. on ►κύπελλον, ►κύμβη 1, ►κύβος, ►κυψέλη.

κυρβασία [f.] name of a Persian hat with a pointed crown (Hdt., Hp., Ar.), acc. to H. = ὀρθὴ τιάρα 'upright tiara'. ⊲LW Pers.⊳ •ETYM Grošelj Živa Ant. 4 (1954): 172 compares Hitt. (Hurrit.) kurpiši- 'part of a helmet, helmet' (precise meaning uncertain).

κύρβεις [pl.f., m.] name of rotating pillars or columns, in the form of a three-sided pyramid, on which the laws of Solon were inscribed in Athens; also used of other inscribed tables (Att., Arist.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Also -ιες, gen. -εων; rarely κύρβις [sg.].
•ETYM As a technical expression, suspected of being a loan (perhaps Pre-Greek?). Of course, the older connection with ►καρπός 'hand-root' is unacceptable. Fick BB 29 (1905): 239 and Kretschmer Sprache 2 (1950-1952): 68 also adduced the ►Κύρβαντες, which would have been named after their whirling dances. Discussion in Jeffery 1961: 53f.

κυρήβια, -ίων [n.pl.] 'husks, bran' (Crat., Hp., Ar.). ⊲?⊳
•DER κυρηβιο-πώλης [m.] 'seller of clay' (Hp., Ar., Epicur.). Κυρηβίων, -ίωνος [m.] epithet (D., Ath.).
•ETYM Formation and origin both unknown. Fur.: 271 connects it with Hitt. kurimpa- 'residue, dregs', but there seems little reaon for this. On κυρηβάζω, etc., see ►κυρίττω.

κύριος [m.] 'lord, ruler, possessor', also as an adjective 'ruling, decisive, valid, decided' (post-Hom.). ⊲IE ḱeuh*$_1$- 'swell, be strong'⊳ •VAR κυρία [f.] '(lady) who rules' (Hell.).
•DER κυρία (from κυρι-ία) [f.] 'control, possession' (Arist., Hell.), κυριότης [f.] 'lordship, rule' (Christian literature); κυριακός 'belonging to the lord (= Christ), to the emperor' (imperial period); κυριεύω [v.] 'to be or become lord, to possess, obtain power' (X., Arist.), whence κυριεία, κυρεία (Schwyzer: 194) 'possession, proprietary rights' (Hell.), κυριευτικός, -κῶς 'regarding the proprietary rights' (pap.). κυρόω 'to become or make lawful' (IA), aor. pass. κυρωθῆναι, act. κυρῶσαι, whence κύρωσις 'ratification' (Th., Pl.), κυρωτής 'who ratifies' (Att. inscr.); back-formation κῦρος [n.] 'authority, confirmation' (IA). ἄκῦρος 'without authority, invalid' (Att.), whence ἀκυρόω [v.] 'to render invalid' (Din., Hell.), whence ἀκύρωσις, -ωτος, -ωσία (late).
•ETYM ἄ-κῦρ-ος 'without authority' presupposes an r-stem also found in κύριος (another example is ἄν-υδρ-ος 'without water', based on ὕδωρ). A trace of this r-stem is probably found in ἔγ-κυαρ 'pregnant' (Miletus [VI^a]), from κύαρ 'foetus' < ḱuh$_1$-r (Kretschmer Glotta 8 (1917): 250). Beside κύριος, there may have been a simple thematic derivative *κῦρος, which would correspond to Skt. śū́ra-, Av. sūra- 'hero': cf. the Skt. words for 'sun', sū́r-ya- and sū́r-a-, derived from the ntr. súvar- (an old l-stem; see on ►ἥλιος). From this *κῦρος [m.], κυρωθῆναι and κυρόω may derive as well; however, κυρωθῆναι can also be derived directly from the r-stem (cf. ἀνδρωθῆναι to ἀνήρ). Other derivations: Skt. śávīra- 'strong, powerful' (ḱeuh*$_1$-ro-), Celtic, e.g. Gaul. Καύαρος, W cawr 'giant'; the appurtenance of Κυάρη· ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ (H.) is uncertain. Further details s.v. ►κυέω.

κυρίττω [v.] 'to butt with the horns' (A., Pl., Arist.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Fut. κυρίξω.
•COMP With prefix: ἀγκυρίττει· μεταμέλεται. Κρῆτες 'repents (Cretan)' (H.); cf. Bechtel 1921, 2: 777.
•DER κύριξις (Ael.), κυρίττιλος· κορύπτης, πλήκτης 'one that butts with the head, striker' (H.). Also κυρίζω (EM); cf. κυρίζεσθε· τρίβεσθε 'are rubbed (down), worn out' (H.). An unclear by-form is κυρηβάζω (Ar., Cratin.), aor. med. -άσασθαι, whence κυρήβασις, -σία (sch.); metaphorically, it also means λοιδορεῖσθαι 'to slander': κυρηβάτης καὶ κύρηβος· ὁ ἀσελγὴς ἐν τῷ λοιδορεῖν 'sbd. brutal in slandering' (H.).
•ETYM The old connection with ►κορύπτω, ►κέρας does not explain the formation. Frisk follows Curtius and Prellwitz, who connected ►κύρω 'to hit, meet with, obtain', but this seems improbable (thus also DELG). Cf. Fur.: 363, who gives no solution; the suffix -ηβ- in κυρηβάζω is hardly inherited.

κυρκανάω [v.] 'to stir, mix, contrive' (Hp., Ar., Epin., EM). ⊲PG?⊳
•COMP Also with συν-.
•DER Backformation κυρκάνη = ταραχή (EM, Hdn. Gr.); also κυρκαίη (Suid. s.v. Ὅμηρος) for κυρβαίη, epithet of μάζα (Hom. Epigr. 15, 6).
•ETYM Expressive enlargement of κυκάω (cf. Schwyzer: 700) with infixed ρ; cf. τύρβη or φύρω. The inserted ρ may be a Pre-Greek element; cf. Fur. 305.

κύρνοι [m.] · οἱ νόθοι 'bastards' (H.), acc. to Phot. Macedonian; also as a PN (cf. Solmsen 1909: 104). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM Unexplained. Fur.: 363 compares κορινοῖος 'id.' (Marsyas Phil., 24 J.), which is also called Macedonian. Perhaps the two forms can be explained from Pre-Greek kur*^{y}n-?

κῦρος 'authority'. ⇒κύριος.

κυρσάνιος 'young man'.
•ETYM Laconian for ►σκυρθάλιος.

κυρτός [adj.] 'vaulted, rounded, bulging, hunchbacked' (Il., Hell.). ⊲?⊳
•DER κυρτότης 'vaulting, rounding, lumpiness' (Arist., Str., Plu.). Denominative verbs: κυρτόομαι, -όω 'to form a vault, belly out' (λ 244, X.), κύρτωμα (Hp.), -ωσις (medic., Vett. Val.) 'vaulting, bellying out', κυρτωτός 'hunchbacked' (Vett. Val.); κυρταίνω 'to form a vault, rounding' (PMag., Suid.).
•ETYM The word remains without direct agreement. The comparison with Lat. curvus 'vaulted, bellied, crooked' presupposes that κυρτός continues a reduced grade $k^{(w)}$r-to- with u-coloring. As a u-colored reduced grade is difficult, it is doubtful whether this comparison (and others) is valid at all. Schrijver 1997: 297 assumes an IE root kur-, but such a root structure is foreign to IE. The comparison with ►κορώνη (Frisk, DELG) is also unfounded, as this does not continue kor-ōu-n-*.

κύρτος [m.] 'weel, lobster pot' (Sapph., Pl., Arist., pap.), also 'bird-cage' (AP). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •COMP κυρτο-βόλος 'fisherman' (Smyrna).
•DER κύρτη [f.] 'bird-cage' (Archil.), 'bow-net' (Hdt., D. S.), 'strainer' (Nic.). Diminutives κυρτίς 'strainer' (Nic., Dsc., Opp.), -ίδιον 'strainer' (Dsc.); also κυρτίον name of an unknown part of a chariot (Poll. 1, 143). Further κυρτία 'wicker shield' (D. S.), κυρτεύς 'fisherman' (Herod., Opp.), κυρτευτής 'id.' (AP) and κυρτεία 'fishing with the bow-net' (Ael.), from *κυρτεύω or analogically after ἁλι-ευτής, -εία. Here further κυρσερίδες· τὰ τῶν μελισσῶν ἀγγεῖα, κυψελίδες 'honeycomb, beehives' (H.), pointing to *κυρσέρα, but this was rather not formed after κρησέρα 'fine sieve' (as per Grošelj Živa Ant. 3 (1953): 202).
•ETYM There is no convincing etymology. ►κάρταλλος, which was connected by Frisk and DELG, is clearly Pre-Greek. Müller-Graupa Glotta 31 (1951): 132 implausibly suggested that κύρτος properly means 'wicker-work', and is a substantivized form of κυρτός 'curved'. IE kr̥t-o-* (Schwyzer: 351) was traditionally assumed, based on comparison with Skt. káṭa- [m.] 'wicker-work, mat' (phonetically impossible) and a European term for 'wicker-work, hurdle': OHG hurt, plur. hurdi and Lat. crātis; however, this comparison formally points to a disyllabic root krH-ti-. The Greek word is excluded from such a reconstruction, and there is no further evidence for a root krH- in this meaning in Indo-European (kert-* 'to plait', in the Skt. nasal present kr̥ṇátti 'to spin', is formally deviant from the Latin word). In Baltic, we find OPr. corto 'hedge', which is unclear. If κυρσ-ερ- belongs here, the word could be Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 258, who also tentatively compares Hitt. kurtal(i)- 'container of wood or wicker-work'.

κῦρω [v.] 'to hit (upon), meet with, attain, obtain' (Il.), cf. Trümpy 1950: 118. ⊲?⊳
•VAR Aor. κύρσαι (Il.), fut. κύρσω (Democr., S.); later pres. κυρέω (A., S.), κυρῆσαι (Hes.), κυρήσω (Hdt., A.), κεκύρηκα (D. S.). On the inflection see Chantraine BSL 28 (1927-1928): 26f. and 38.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐν-, ἐπι-, προσ-, συν-.

•DER Few derivatives: κύρμα 'catch, booty' (Hom.); συγ-, προσ-, ἐγ-κύρησις, συγ-κύρημα 'meeting, concurrence, etc.' (Hell.), συγ-κυρία 'coincidence' (Hp., Ev. Luc.).
•ETYM No etymology. Not related to ►καιρός or ►κυρίττω.

κύσθος 1 [m.] 'pudenda muliebra' (Eup., Ar.). ⊲PG(V)⊳
•VAR κυσός· ἡ πυγή. ἢ γυναικεῖον αἰδοῖον 'buttocks; pudenda muliebra' (H.), also in the sense of ►κύστις (Herod., Call.), with long υ acc. to Pfeiffer 1949-1953 ad Call. 191, 98.
•COMP κυσθο-κορώνη = νύμφη, 'clitoris' (Com. Adesp.); κυσολαμπίς. ἡ περιλαμπομένη ταῖς νυξὶ κανθαρίς 'beetle lighting up at night' (H.); cf. Strömberg 1944: 13f.; κυσο-βακκαρις· ὁ τὸν κυσόν μυρίζων 'who is rubbing the κ. with ointment' (Com. Adesp. 1062); κυσο-λάκων = παισεραστής 'pederast' (Com. Adesp. 1066); κυσο-νίπτης· πόρνος 'catamite' (H.); κυσο-χήνη (H.); κυσο-δακνιᾷ· ψωριᾷ 'has the itch, scab or mange' (from δάκνω, with -ιάω after other verbs of disease); also κύσσαρος 'anus' (Hp., Gal., Erot.); on the formation Chantraine 1933: 226; cf. also ►κύτταρος.
•DER κυσιᾷ· πασχητιᾷ 'feels lust'; κυσανίζει (H.).
•ETYM The previous explanation, as a derivation kud^h-d^ho- from ►κεύθω 'to hide', is doubtful, as it does not explain ►κυσός. The alternation of κύσθο- with κυσό- suggests a Pre-Greek word. Perhaps κύτταρος is a further variant. Cf. the variation in μασθός, μαζός, μαστός 'breast'.

κύσθος 2 [n.] of unclear mg. (PHolm. 22, 42 ; 23, 2), see Lagercrantz 1913: ad loc. ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •VAR Also χύστος.
•ETYM Unknown. If κύσθος = χύστος, the word is probably Pre-Greek, with variation -σθ- / -στ-.

κύστις, -εως [f.] 'bladder, pouch, small bag' (Il.). ⊲IE? ḱues-* 'hiss, sigh'; PG?⊳
•VAR Gen. also -ιος, -ιδος; also κύστιγξ (Hp. apud Gal. 19, 116), perhaps after φῦσιγξ (Chantraine 1933: 400, Schwyzer: 498).
•DER κύστη· ἄρτος σπογγίτης 'sponge-like bread' (H.) and κύστιον· τὸ ἁλικάκκαβον (H.), a plant name, after the shape of the fruit.
•ETYM Wackernagel 1916: 227 analyzed it as a suffix -τι-, added to the zero grade of a root 'to blow, hiss', found in Skt. śvas-iti, ptc. śuṣ-ántam [acc.] < PIE ḱues-*. The further comparison of this Skt. root with Lat. queror is far from evident (see De Vaan 2008 s.v.). The connection is possible, but not evident; as an alternative, the suffix -ιγξ could point to a Pre-Greek word. Not to be connected are ►κύσθος, κυσός, etc.

κύτινος [m.] a flower, properly the calyx of the pomegranate (Thphr., Dsc., Gal.) also 'Cytinus hypocisthis' (Dsc. 1, 97), because of the similarity with the flower of the granate. ⊲PG(V)⊳ •DER κυτινώδης (Thphr.).
•ETYM Because of the mg. 'calyx', the word has been connected with κύτος 'hollow, vessel' (like ἄνθινος with ἄνθος). However, Fur.: 182 compares κύταρον· ζωμήρυσις 'spoon', κύδαρος, ον 'small ship', ►κύτταρος 'cell of a honeycomb', as well as 'calyx of the Egyptian bean' (Thphr.), 'calyx of an acorn' (Thphr.), κυττοί 'receptacles', κύστεροι = ἀγγεῖα τῶν μελισσῶν 'honey-comb' (H.). This points to a Pre-Greek word (variation τ/ δ/ ττ, etc.).

κύτισος [m., f.] 'cytisus, Medicago arborea' (IA). ◂PG▸ •DIAL Myc. ku-te-so /kutesos/.
•ETYM A foreign word, like ►κέρασος. The variation e/i shows that it is Pre-Greek.

κυτμίς, -ίδος [f.] a soothing salve prepared from the fat of goats (Luc. Alex. 22, 53). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Diminutive formation. Origin unknown; probably Pre-Greek.

κύτος [n.] 'rounding, vault of a shield, of a cuirass or a vessel, etc.', 'vessel, trunk, body' (trag., com., Pl. Ti. and Lg., Arist., Plb.). ◂IE? (s)kHu-t-* 'cover, skin, etc.'▸ •DER ►ἐγκυτί 'to the skin'. Uncertain is κυτίς 'cupboard, box' (sch. Ar. Pax 665), which may stand for κοιτίς.
•ETYM Best connected with the group of σκῦτος 'leather, skin', Lat. cutis 'skin', the Gm. group of OHG hūt 'hide', as well as OPr. keuto 'skin', Lith. kiáutas 'shell, rind' < keHu-to-*, ToA kāc probably 'skin' < kwāc* < (s)kuHt-i-/-es-*. The variation of long and short u in σκῦτος next to κύτος is problematic, but may be explained by assuming a root (s)kHu-* and pretonic shortening of the resulting long vowel in Latin (see Schrijver 1991: 239f.). In Greek, the sequence would undergo metathesis only in accented position, thus sk(é)Hu-t-* > σκῦτος, while kHu-t-és-* [obl.] and -kHu-tí-* would yield κύτος and ἐγκυτί.
The word is sometimes split in two: 1. 'skin', 2. 'sth. hollow', with connection of the second group to the group of ►κυέω (see Frisk), but this has to meet the difficulty that it would have to show long ῡ < IE k̑uh$_1$-*, which it does not. There seems no reason to connect ►κυέω.

κύτταρος [m.] 'cell of a honeycomb, pit in the receptacle of the searose (Nelumbium speciosum), the calyx in which the acorn is located, the male flower of the pine' (Ar., Arist., Thphr.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Also κύσσαρος 'anus'.
•DER Diminutive κυττάριον 'bee-cell' (Arist.).
•ETYM Uncertain, but probably Pre-Greek. κύσσαρος may be the Ionic form of κύτταρος, but in any case the most likely option is that both are variants of ►κύτινος, κυσός, and ►κύσθος.

κῦφελλα [n.pl.] 'hollows of the ears' (Lyc.), 'clouds of mist' (Lyc., Call.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM An Alexandrian word. Probably the same Pre-Greek word as ►κύπελλον (variation π/ φ). The meaning 'clouds' is explained by reference to Lat. cava nubes, umbra (Persson 1912(1): 195).

κυφός ⇒κύπτω.

κύχραμος [m.] name of an unknown migratory bird, which accompanies the quail (Arist.); see Thompson 1895 s.v. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also κέ-, κί- (v.ll.); κιγκράμας· ὄρνεον 'bird' (H.).

•ETYM Unexplained. Clearly a Pre-Greek word, because of the variants.

κυψέλη [f.] 'chest, box, beehive' (Hdt., Ar., Plu.), 'earwax' (com.), 'hollow of the ear' (Poll., H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also -άλη (pap.), cf. Mayser 1906-1938, I: 3: 22.
•DER κυψέλιον 'beehive', -ελίς 'bird-nest' (Arist.), 'earwax' (Ruf., Aret.), with κυψελίτης ῥύπος (EM), see Redard 1949: 112; back-formation κύψελος [m.] name of a bird like the swallow (Arist., H.), cf. Thompson 1895 s.v.
•ETYM Not related to κύπη, etc. (s.v. ►κύπελλον), nor derived from κύπτω 'to bend (forward), stoop'. Fur.: 327 compares κυψέλον· κύβερτον μελισσῶν '... of bees' (H.), etc. Clearly a Pre-Greek word, given the variants; cf. also κυβέλη 'hollow'.

κύων [m., f.] 'dog, bitch' (Il.). ◂IE k̑uon-* 'dog'▸ •VAR Gen. κυνός, acc. κύνα.
•DIAL Myc. ku-na-ke-ta /kun-(h)āgetās/.
•COMP Several compounds, e.g. κυν-ηγέτης, Dor. -ᾱγέτας, -ᾱγός "leader of dogs", 'hunter' (ι 120); see Chantraine 1956a: 83ff.; ἀπό-κυνον plant name 'Marsdenia erecta' (Dsc., Gal.); see Strömberg 1940: 65 and 143; on ►κυνάμυια s.v.
•DER Diminutives κυν-ίσκος (Hdt.), -ίσκη (Ar.), -ίδιον, -άριον (Att.); κυνώ [f.] 'female dog', also as a PN (Hdt.); κυνέη 'dog's skin' (Anaxandr.), 'cap, helmet', originally made of dog's skin, later from other materials (cf. αἰγείη, χαλκέη, etc.; Schwyzer: 37, Trümpy 1950: 40ff.); κυνάς [f.] 'belonging to a dog, dog hair, etc.' (Theoc.); κύνειος, -εος 'belonging to a dog' (Ar.), 'shameless, impudent' (Il.), κυνικός 'dog-like, cynical' (X., Men.), κυνώδης 'dog-like' (Arist.); comp. and superl. κύντερος, -ον, -τατος 'more shameless, impertinent'; κυνηδόν [adv.] 'like a dog' (S., Ar.); κυνίζω "to play the dog", i.e. 'to live as a cynic', κυνισμός (Apollod. Stoic.).
•ETYM The name of the 'dog' is preserved in most IE languages: e.g. nom. κύων, Skt. śvā́, Lith. šuō, gen. κυνός, Skt. śúnas, Lith. šuñs, etc. (the Gr. accentuation is oldest), from IE k̑uō(n), gen. k̑un-ós, etc. For Lat. canis, Schrijver 1991: 461 assumes that a development wo* > wa* in open syllable yielded an acc.sg. PIt. kwanem*. The word is also found in Anatolian: Hitt. $^{\text{LÚ}}$kuu̯an- [c.] 'dog-man', gen.sg. kūnaš, HLuw. s̩wan(i)- [c.] 'dog'. The paradigm is strange because of the lack of an old e-grade in the ablaut pattern.

κῶα · ἐνέχυρα 'pledges' (H.).
•VAR Also κώϊον· ἐνέχυρον (H.).
•ETYM See on ►κοῖον.

κῶας [n.] 'soft, hairy skin; fleece' (Il.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR κῶς (Nicoch. 12); plur. κώεα, -εσι.
•DIAL Myc. ko-wo /kōwos/.
•DER Diminutives κῴδ-ιον (Att.), -άριον (com.); κωδᾶς, -ᾶτος [m.] 'dealer in fleece' (pap.).
•ETYM Without etymology. If the group of ►κύτος < IE (s)kHu-t-* is connected, it is unnecessary to assume a lengthened grade, since koHu-es-* or keh$_3$u-es-* would do for the oblique forms. However, this does not explain the nom. in -ας. The inflection is unusual: the -ε- would fit the Myc. nom. ko-wo, but -ας can hardly be explained by analogy. Perhaps these inflectional irregularities can be understood if we assume that the inflection of a Pre-Greek word was adapted to Greek.

κῶβαξ [m.] · ὁ μέγας τέττιξ 'the large cicala' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Acc. to Gil Emerita 25 (1957): 321f., it belongs to ►καύαξ, etc. with β for ϝ. In any case, it is a Pre-Greek word.

κωβιός (-ίος) [m.] name of a fish like the goby or gudgeon (IA). ◂LW Akk.?, PG?▸
•DER Diminutive -ίδιον (com., Arist.); also as a plant name 'τιθύμαλλος, Euphorbia' (Dsc., Plin.); κωβῖτις 'kind of ἀφύη' (Arist.), see Redard 1949: 83; κωβιώδης (Plu.).
•ETYM Probably a loan from a Mediterranean language, perhaps from Pre-Greek. Lat. gōbius (c-), gōbiō (c-) is borrowed from Greek. Fur.: 328[21] compares Akk. kuppū, gubbu name of a fish.

κώδεια [f.] 'poppyhead, capsule of the grape hyacinth, etc.' (Ξ 499, Nic.), also other plants and comparable objects. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Variants κώδεα, -υια, -ύᾱ, -ία (Delos, Att. inscr., Arist., Thphr.).
•DER κώδυον 'head of purse tassels' (Thphr.), like κάρυον to καρύη.
•ETYM No cognates. Kalén 1918: 24 has shown that κώδυια is the oldest form, but this does not necessarily imply that the variants are secondary analogical creations. Fur.: 195, 198 showed that the variants point to Pre-Greek origin; he compares words for 'cup', e.g. ►κώδων 'bell', κοτύλη 'cup', κόνδυ, ►κώθων, but also Etr. qutum. Cf. Beekes 1998: 25f. and Pre-Greek: Suffixes sub -αι-/-ε(ι)-.

κώδων, -ωνος [m., f.] 'bell, (sound of a) trumpet' (IA). ◂PG(V)▸ •COMP κωδωνο-φορέω 'to carry the bell round (of inspection of the guards), etc.' (Ar.).
•DER Diminutive κωδώνιον (J.); κωδωνίζω [v.] 'to test a coin by its sound' (Ar.). Cf. Κώδαλος PN (Hippon.), Nehring Sprache 1 (1949): 166.
•ETYM Previously taken as a formation like ἄμβων, κώθων from κώδεια, -υια, analogous to αἴθων: αἴθυια (Kalén 1918: 26). As Kretschmer Glotta 10 (1920): 232 remarks, there is no corresponding verb, which makes the construction doubtful. The word has been shown to be Pre-Greek by Fur.: 198f.; see on ►κώδεια.

κώθων, -ωνος [n.] name of Laconian drinking utensils (Archil., Ar., X., inscr.), 'drinking-bout, feast' (LXX, Thasos), = κωβιός (Sicilian; Nic., Apollod. apud Ath. 7, 309c); also name of the inner harbor of Carthage (Str., App.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP κωθωνο-πλύται [pl.] 'washers of the fish κώθων (?)' (Sophr.).
•DER Diminutive κωθώνιον (inscr. V^a, etc.); κωθωνία 'deep potation' (Aret.), Scheller 1951: 41; κωθωνίζομαι 'to drink hard, carouse' (Arist., Hell.), κωθων-ισμός, -ιστής, -ιστήριον (Arist.). Also κῶθα· ποτήρια 'drinking-cups' (H.).
•ETYM Fur.: 199 compares ►κώδων. He further compares Mingrel. koto 'cup' and Georg. kotoxi 'id.'. The word is probably Pre-Greek.

κώκαλον [adj.] · παλαιὸν καὶ εἶδος ἀλεκτρυόνος 'old; kind of cock' (H.). ◂?▸
•DER PNs like Κώκαλος, Κῶκος, Κωκᾶς, etc. (L. Robert 1963: 312ff.).

•ETYM Unknown.

κωκύω [v.] 'to lament, wail' (Il., late prose). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Aor. κωκῦσαι.
•COMP With prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐπι-.
•DER κωκῡτός [m.] (Il.), κώκῡμα (trag.) 'lamenting, wailing'; Κώκυτος name of a river in the underworld (κ 514, etc.).
•ETYM It has been assumed that the verb has intensive reduplication, by comparison with Skt. káuti, kokūyate 'to wail' (intens.), but these are only attested in grammarians; as argued by Tichy 1983: 266, the word is non-Indo-European.

κωλακρέται [m.pl.] name of financial officers in early Athens, chairmen of the main treasury (inscr., Ar., Arist.). ◂GR▸ •DER κωλακρετέω [v.] 'to be a κ.' (inscr.).
•ETYM From earlier *κωλ-αγρέται with assimilation, thus originally "collector of the κῶλα", i.e. the sacrificial pieces, and an old sacral expression; for the second member, see on ►ἀγείρω. See further ►κῶλον.

κῶλον [n.] 'member (of animal or human being), body part, especially the leg' (IA), also metaphorical, e.g. of part of a period (Rhet.), often plur., e.g. in the mg. 'corpse' (LXX, NT). ◂PG?▸
•COMP Several compounds, e.g. ἰσό-κωλος 'with equal members' (Arist.), ἀκρο-κώλια 'extremities', ὑπο-κώλια 'thigh of an animal'.
•DER Diminutives κωλάριον (Ael.), κωλύφιον (Phryn., Plaut.), cf. Lat. cōlyphium; κωλέα, -ῆ (Att.), κωλήν, -ῆνος [f.] (IA), κωλεός [f.] (Epich., Hp.) 'bones of the hip together with its flesh, ham' (Solmsen 1909: 124); κώληψ, -ηπος [f.] 'hollow of the knee' (Ψ 726, Nic.); with a different suffix κώληξ 'id.' (sch.), which shows that the second member probably does not contain the root of ►ἅπτω, as assumed by Bechtel 1914 s.v.; κωλώτης [m.] 'lizard' (Hp., Arist., Babr.), cf. Lat. lacerta 'lizard' to lacertus 'upper arm' (see WH s.v.). Denominative κωλίζομαι 'to be arranged in κῶλα' (late).
•ETYM No obvious cognates. The Balto-Slavic group of OCS kolěno 'knee', Ru. koléno 'knee, stem, lineage', Ru. člen 'member, body-part', Lith. kelỹs 'knee' (root k*^{w}el(H)- 'to turn' or kelH*- 'to raise') can hardly be related because of the Greek vocalism. Specht KZ 55 (1928): 19 presumed that an o-grade aorist was found in κόλσασθαι· ἱκετεῦσαι 'to supplicate' (H.), but is this form cognate at all? The word ►σκέλος is unrelated. It should be noted that Pre-Greek has a suffix -ηξ (as in νάρθηξ, κύμηξ).

κωλύω [v.] 'to hinder, prevent' (Sapph., Pi., IA). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. κωλῦσαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. δια-, κατα-, ἀπο-.
•DER κώλυμα 'obstacle' (IA), κωλυμάτιον 'catch, clutch in a machine' (Hero); κωλύμη (Th.), κώλυσις 'hindering' (Pl., Arist.); κωλυτήρ (Archyt.), -τής (IA) 'who hinders', κωλυτήριος (D. H.), κωλυτικός (X., Arist., Hell.) 'hindering'.
•ETYM One hypothesis (which goes back to Meillet) starts from from *κῶλος in the sense of 'wooden pin': the word would originally mean "to fasten with a pin", to hinder the freedom of movement of animals; the ending would have been reshaped after λύω (hardly credible). Others (Meillet MSL 16 (1910-1911): 244, Fraenkel 1937: 357) connected it with ►κολούω 'to mutilate'. There is no etymology.

κῶμα [n.] 'deep, sound sleep' (Il.), 'lethargy, coma' (medic.). ◅?▻
•DER κωματώδης 'lethargic'; κωμαίνω, κωματίζομαι [v.] 'to lie in a coma', κωμόομαι 'to fall into a coma' (medic.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Brugmann's proposal (Brugmann-Thumb 1913: 317) to connect it with ►κεῖμαι as kōi-mn̥* is unacceptable because of the lengthened grade. Cf. Porzig 1942: 281.

κώμη [f.] 'village', as opposed to a strengthened πόλις, also 'district, part of a city' (Hes.). ◅?▻
•COMP E.g. κωμό-πολις 'town with the position of a κώμη, market town' (Str., NT), cf. Schulze 1933a: 523[2].
•DER Diminutives κώμιον (Str.), κωμάριον (H.), -ύδριον (Porph.); further κωμήτης (IA), κωμέτας (Mycenae II[a]) 'inhabitant of a village or district', κωμητικός 'belonging to a κώμη (or a κωμήτης)' (pap.); κωμαῖος 'regarding a κ.' (St. Byz.); κωμηδόν 'per village' (Str., D. S., D. H.).
•ETYM The reconstruction of a lengthened grade form k̑ōi-m-*h_2, connected with the Germanic group of Go. haims 'village' and the Baltic group of Lith. káima(s) '(farmers') village', kiẽmas 'farmstead' has now been abandoned, because such lengthened grade formations cannot be accounted for in PIE terms. Thus, the word remains unexplained.

κῶμος [m.] 'revel, carousal, merry-making of youths, Dionysiac festive procession and festive songs, festival' (post-Hom.). ◅IE? k̑omso-* 'praise', PG?▻
•COMP κωμ-ῳδός 'singer of a κῶμος' (Att.), 'comic player' (Hell.) with -έω, -ία, etc., σύγ-κωμος 'comrade of a κ.' (Att.; rather back-formation from συγ-κωμάζω).
•DER κωμικός = κωμῳδικός 'belonging to a comedy' (Aeschin., Arist., Hell.); κωμάζω 'participate in a κῶμος, drink' (post-Hom.) with κωμασία 'festive procession', κωμαστής 'drinker, member of a festive procession' (Att., pap.), κωμαστήριον 'place where κωμασταί assemble' (pap.), κωμαστικός 'belonging to a κωμαστής or a κῶμος' (D. H., Ph.).
•ETYM As the precise development of the meaning of κῶμος is uncertain, etymological suggestions remain highly hypothetical. Recently, connection with Skt. śáṃsa- 'praise, judgement' has been assumed; see e.g. Schlerath RPh. 74 (2000): 273 (discussion in Hackstein 2002: 190). I suggest that this is a Pre-Greek word.

κώμυς, -ῡθος [f.] 'bundle, truss of hay' (Cratin., Theoc.), also = δάφνη, ἥν ἱστῶσι <πρὸ> τῶν πυλῶν 'laurel, which is put in front of the gate' (H.), 'place where the reed is closely grown with the roots' (Thphr.). ◅PG(S)▻ •ETYM The formation with the suffix -ῡθ- clearly points to Pre-Greek origin.

κώνειον [n.] 'hemlock, Conium maculatum, hemlock drink, poisonous drink' (IA). ◅PG(V)▻ •DER κωνειάζομαι 'to be dosed with hemlock' (Men., Str.).

•ETYM The word can hardly be separated from ►κῶνος. The plant may owe its name to its narrow leaves with pointed teeth. On the European names, see Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 294f.; on the many Greek epithets of the plant, see Strömberg 1940: 64. Fur.: 121 connects not only ►κῶνος, but also κονή and ►ἀκόνῑτον, so it is a Pre-Greek word.

κῶνος [m.] 'fruit of the pine cone, cone' also 'pine' [f.], 'top' (Democr., Arist., Thphr., Theoc.). ◅PG(V)▻ •VAR κώνητες· θύρσοι 'thyrsoi' (H.), κώνης 'the stave of Bacchus and the Bacchantes, ending in a pine cone'. Further cf. γονής· νάρκισσος τὸ φυτόν 'narcissus' (H.); κῶνα = πίσσα 'pitch'; κώνα· βέμβιξ 'whipping-top' (H.).
•COMP E.g. κωνο-φόρος [f.] 'conifer' (Thphr.), κωνο-κόλουρος 'truncated cone', beside κολουρό-κωνος 'id.' (Hero), cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 284, Strömberg 1944: 8.
•DER Diminutive κωνίον, -ιον (Posidon., AP), κωνίς· ὑδρίσκη 'little water vessel' (H.); κωνῖτις πίσσα 'pine resin' (Rhian.), κωνίας (οἶνος) 'resinated wine' (Hp. apud Gal.; Chantraine 1933: 94 f.); κωνάω 'resinate, pitch', also 'spin' (Ar., H.), with κώνησις 'resinating, pitching' (Arist.), -ητικός 'suitable for pitching' (pap.); περι-κωνέω 'smear with pitch' (Ar.).
•ETYM Often identified with Skt. śāṇa- [m.] 'whetstone, touchstone' (assuming MInd. ṇ for n), derived from a verb 'to whet, sharpen' in Skt. śíśāti < k̑i-k̑eh*$_3$-. To this root also belongs Lat. cōs, gen. cōtis 'whetstone' and catus 'sharp, clever', OIr. cath 'wise, able', etc. Schwyzer: 458, however, considered foreign origin; this is confirmed by the variants adduced in Fur.: 121 (most notably ►ἀκόνῑτον).

κώνωψ, -ωπος [m.] 'gnat, mosquito' (A., Hdt. 2, 95. Arist.). ◅PG(S)▻ •COMP κωνωπο-θήρας· ὄρνις ὁ κώνωπας θηρεύων 'bird hunting gnats or mosquitoes' (H.).
•DER Diminutive κωνώπιον (Gal.), usually 'couch with mosquito curtains' (LXX); also -εών, -ῶνος [m.] 'id.' (AP 9, 764 tit.).
•ETYM As Frisk already remarked, the connection with κῶνος and ὤψ (ὄψ) is far from evident semantically, and formally it is also improbable. Spiegelberg KZ 41 (1907): 131 derives it from Eg. ḫamś 'gnat', with adaptation to κῶνος. The form κωνώπιον would have been remodelled by folk etymology from earlier *κανώπιον, the Egyptian town Canōpus; see WH s.v. cōnōpium. Since there is no good etymology, and since the suffix -ωπ- is frequent in Pre-Greek words, substrate origin is the only plausible option.

κῶος [m.] 'cavern, prison' (Str., St. Byz.). ◅?▻
•VAR Usually plur. κῶοι.
•ETYM A variant with long vowel of κόοι· τὰ χάσματα τῆς γῆς 'clefts of the earth' (H.); see on ►κοῖλος.

κώπη [f.] 'grip (of a sword, an oar), oar, stalk' (Il.). ◅IE k(e)*h_2*p-* 'take, hold'▻ •COMP Some compounds, e.g. κωπ-ήρης 'provided with oars' (trag., Th.).
•DER Diminutive κωπίον (Ar.); κωπήεις 'with a good grip' (Il.), see Trümpy 1950: 62; κωπεῖς [m.pl.] 'wood fit for making oars, spars' (IA), κωπεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'id.'

(Thphr.); κωπητήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'leather thong for the oar' (cf. Bergson Eranos 55 (1957): 120ff.); κωπεύω [v.] 'to row' (AP), κωπάω (-έω) in perf. med. κεκώπηται 'is provided with oars' (Att. inscr., H.). On ►κωπώ, see s.v.
•ETYM Old verbal noun from ►κάπτω, so IE koh_2p-h_2- (without a lengthened grade, cf. Hamp MSS 43 (1984): 51f.). For the meaning, cf. Lat. capulus 'grip'.

κωπώ, -οῦς [f.] 'wreathed staff used in the Daphnephoria' (Boeot.; Procl.). ◂GR▸ •DER Also as a PN.
•ETYM Personification in -ώ (Schwyzer: 478) of κώπη. Not related to κῆπος 'garden', as per Schönberger Glotta 29 (1942): 87ff. and Pisani RILomb. 77 (1943-44): 558ff.

κώρυκος [m.] 'leather sack' (Od.). ◂PG▸
•DER κωρυκίς (com., Thphr.), κωρύκιον, -ίδιον (Poll., Suid., H.) and κωρυκώδης 'sack-like' (Thphr.). Cf. the TN ►Κώρυκος, a promontory in Cilicia.
•ETYM The resemblance with Lat. corium, etc. (Pok. 939) is deceptive. Fur.: 328[21] compares Hitt. kurk- 'to retain'. The word is no doubt Pre-Greek, with the suffix -υκ-.

Κώρυκος [m.] a promontory in Cilicia (h. Ap.). ◂PG▸
•DER Also -αῖος; also Κωρύκιον ἄντρον a cave on the Parnassos, with Κωρύκιαι νύμφαι, etc. (Hdt., trag.).
•ETYM The structure of the word looks like Pre-Greek. It could represent kāruk-*, for which see κῆρυξ, but I see no way to connect 'messenger'; neither does it belong to the 'leather sack'.

κωτίλος [adj.] 'chattering, babbling' (Thgn., Arist.). ◂?▸ •VAR Also -άς [f.] Boeot. name of the swallow (Stratt.).
•DER κωτίλλω [v.] 'to chatter' (Hes., D. H.); κωτιλίζω 'id.' (Call.); κωτιλία 'chattering' (gloss.).
•ETYM Formation like ποικίλος, etc. (see Chantraine 1933: 248), but without etymology.

κωφός [adj.] 'blunt, dumb, mute' (Il.), post-Hom. also 'deaf' (h. Merc.). ◂IE?, PG?▸
•COMP E.g. ὑπό-κωφος 'hard of hearing' (IA).
•DER κωφότης 'deafness' (IA), κωφεύς 'deaf man' (Call.), κωφίας [m.] kind of snake = τυφλίας (Ael., H.); κωφεύω [v.] 'to be silent' (LXX), κωφάομαι (-άω) 'to become (make) blunt, etc.' (Clearch., Opp.), κωφῆσαι· κολοῦσαι 'to cut short', κώφησις· κόλουσις 'cutting short' (H.); κωφόομαι 'to become silent or deaf', -όω 'to silence', whence κώφωμα, -ωσις (Hp.).
•ETYM To be connected with ►κηφήν, ►κεκαφηότα; the vocalism could be reconstructed as ablauting $k/g^h(e/o)h_2b^h$-, but there is no IE comparandum. If κηφήν is Pre-Greek, the same probably holds for this word.

κώψ 'owl'. ⇒σκώψ.

Λ

λα- prefix with intensifying function. ◂?▸
•COMP Only in isolated and rare words: λᾰ-καταπύγων (Ar. Ach. 664, λᾰ- rhythmical lengthening?), λα-κατάρατος (Phot.; λακκ- cod.), λαπτυήρ· σφοδρῶς πτύων, λάφωνοι (Latte: λάφονοι?)· λίαν ἄφωνοι (H.); λαισ- in λαίσπαις· βούπαις. Λευκάδιοι (H.), also λάσπαις (Latte, codd. λαοπαις); λι- in λιπόνηρος· λίαν πονηρός (H.); cf. on ►λίαν. λαι- in PNs, e.g. Λαι-κλῆς, Λαι-σποδίας (Bechtel 1917b: 273, Bechtel Herm. 50 (1915): 317).
•ETYM Unknown. Does λαισ- represent Pre-Greek *$las^y$-?

λᾶας [m.] 'stone' (Il.). ◂PG?(V)▸
•VAR Case forms: gen. λᾶος, -ι, -αν (-α Call. 11, 4), plur. λᾶ-ες, etc.; also as an o-stem λᾶος, -ου, etc. (Hes. Fr. 115[?], S., Cyrene, Gortyn), details in Schwyzer: 578. Late also fem.
•DIAL Myc. ra-e-ja /lāhejā/ and Cypr. la-o-se show that the word did not have a -w-*.
•COMP Compounds like λᾱ-τόμος (beside uncontracted or restored λαο-) 'stone cutter', with λᾱτομ-ίαι 'quarry' (Arg., Syracus., Hell., see Ruijgh 1957: 125f.), = Lat. lātomiae beside lautumiae < *λαο- (see WH s.v.); λα(ο)-ξό(ο)ς with λαξεύω, etc. (Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 165f.), λατύπος; as a second member in κραταί-λεως (< *-ληος or *-λᾶος, see below) 'with hard rock' (A., E.), probably also in ὑπο-λαΐς, -ίδος (H. also -ληΐς) [f.] name of an unknown bird (Arist.); cf. Thompson 1895 s.v.; see also ►λαιός 2.
•DER As a TN (Laconia) Λᾶς and Λᾶ (Th., Paus., St. Byz., et al.), with Λᾶαν [acc.] (B 585). Further λᾶϊγγες [f.pl.] 'small stones' (Od., A. R.); λάϊνος, -ΐνεος '(made of) stone' (Il.); uncertain λαιαί [f.pl.] (Arist.), λεῖαι (Gal.), λεία [sg.] (Hero) 'stones used as weights to keep the threads of the warp straight in the upright loom'; unclear are λαίεται· καταλεύεται 'is lapidated' (H.) and λαυστήρ· μοχθηρός 'troublesome' ... ἢ οἴκου λαύρα 'alley [or privy] of a house', λαύστρανον· τινὲς λύκον (in the sense of 'hook', see LSJ), τινὲς φρέατος ἅρπαγα 'the hooks of a well (for drawing up buckets)' (H.).
•ETYM The unique stem formation of λᾶας is unexplained. An old neuter has been supposed, with secondary transition to msc. (later fem.) gender after λίθος, πέτρος. An IA form seems to be reflected in κραταί-λεως, but it may be an epicism.
Since the Mycenaean and Cypr. forms show that the word had no -w-, all earlier hypotheses starting from a pre-form with *-ϝ- can now be forgotten (unless the ϝ was lost between like vowels at a very early stage). The relation to ►λεύω, ►λαύρα has therewith become unclear; all we can do is assume a stem *lāh-. See Heubeck IF 66 (1961): 29-34. Fur.: 239 compares λέπας 'rock'; he considers λαίνθη· λάρναξ λιθίνη (Cyr.) to be proof of Pre-Greek origin.

Non-Greek correspondences to λᾶας are all doubtful, e.g. Alb. lerë, -a 'stone, heap of stones, stony plain, rockslope' from PAlb. leurā (Demiraj 1997), OIr. líe, gen. líac < PCl. līu̯ank-* (taken up by Matasović 2008 s.v. līwank-*).

λαβά [f.] · σταγών 'drop' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. Macedonian for λοιβά, acc. to von Blumenthal 1930: 18f.

λαβάβηρ [?] · λακανίσκη 'small dish' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. Lewy KZ 59 (1932): 187f. considers it a loan of Lat. lavābrum 'bathing-tub' by Palestinian Jews (otherwise unknown).

λάβδα [n.] the eleventh letter of the Greek alphabet (Att.); later (with secondary nasal) λάμβδα (Ar., Arist. as a v.l.). ◄LW Sem.►
•VAR Indeclinable.
•DER λαβδακισμός [m.] 'special use or pronunciation of the λ' (Quint.); cf. s.v. ►ἰῶτα on ἰωτακισμός.
•ETYM From Semitic; cf. Hebr. lāmedh. Gr. λαβδ- corresponds to Sem. lamb-; see Schwyzer: 140², 826 and Schulze 1933a: 283f. Doubts in Kretschmer Glotta 6 (1915): 307.

λάβρος [adj.] 'furious, boisterous, violent, fierce; gluttonous' (Ion. poet., late prose). ◄PG?(V)►
•COMP λαβρ-αγόρης 'fierce boaster' (Ψ 479), κατά-λαβρος 'very furious' (Eup. 293), after κατα-λαβεῖν?
•DER Fish-names: λάβρᾱξ, -ᾱκος [m.] 'bass, Labrax lupus' (Alc., com.), see Chantraine 1933: 381, Björck 1950: 262, Strömberg 1943: 34f.; Thompson 1947 s.v.; thence λαβράκιον (com.); λάβριχος (Boeot. [IIᵃ]); see Lacroix 1938: 51.
Abstracts: λαβροσύνη 'furiousness, fierce conversation' (AP, Opp.), λαβρότης 'id.' (Ath.) with λαβροσιάων· χορτασμοῦ ἀκόσμου 'disorderly feeding' (H.). Denominative verbs: 1. λαβρεύομαι [v.] 'to discuss furiously' (Ψ 474 and 478), probably after ἀγορεύω (Risch 1937: 333) or μωμεύω, ἐπι-λωβεύω (Debrunner Mus. Helv. 2 (1945): 199); 2. λαβρόομαι [v.] 'to rush violently' (Lyc.); 3. λαβράζω = λαβρεύομαι and λαβρόομαι (Nic., Lyc.), whence λαβράκτης = λαβραγόρης (Pratin. Lyr. 5); 4. λαβρύσσει· λαβρεύει, δειλαίνει 'is a coward' (H.); cf. λαφύσσω, etc. (Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 244).
•ETYM The traditional connection with λαβεῖν, λάζομαι is improbable. Fur.: 208 compares λαμυρός 'gluttonous', and further λαφύσσω 'to swallow' (op.cit. 177) and λαῦρος (as an orthographic variant of λάβρος, op.cit. 242). This is uncertain, because these alternations do not conform to a known pattern. If λάβραξ beside λάβριχος is typical, the word seems to be Pre-Greek.

λάβρυς ⇒λαβύρινθος.

λαβρώνιον [n.] 'a large, wide cup' (Men., Diph., H.). ◄?►

•VAR Also λαβρώνιος [m.], -ία [f.] (Eust.).
•ETYM Acc. to Ath. 11, 484c, ἐκπώματος Περσικοῦ εἶδος ἀπὸ τῆς ἐν τῷ πίνειν λαβρότητος ὠνομασμένον 'a kind of Persian cup, thus called after the greediness during drinking'. Folk-etymological explanation?

λάβυζος [f.] an unknown spice plant, used by the Persian king (Dinon Hist. [IVᵃ] apud Ath. 12, 514a, H. s.v. κίδαρις). ◄LW Ind.► •ETYM The hypothesis by Petersson KZ 46 (1916): 146f. (a Persian word, related to Skt. líbujā 'liane, climber') is untenable. Acc. to Charpentier MondOrbis 13 (1919): 32ff., it is rather an Indic LW, related to the Pāli plant-name labuja-. See Brust 2005: 378ff.

λαβύρινθος [m.] 'labyrinth', a great building with many corridors and turns, in Egypt (Hdt., Str.), Crete (Call., D. S.), Anatolia (inscr. Miletus), etc.; metaph. of complicated thoughts (Pl.). ◄PG(S,V)► •DIAL Myc. da-pu₂-ri-to-jo /dapʰurintʰoio/.
•COMP λαβυρινθώδης 'labyrinth-like, complicated' (Arist.).
•ETYM A Pre-Greek word in -ινθος. The traditional connection with λάβρυς (acc. to Plu. 2,302a Lydian for πέλεκυς), and interpretation as "House of the Double Axe" (a sign of royalty), is speculative. Perhaps the Carian god Δαβραυνδος also belongs here. Connection with λαύρα as a substrate word is possible, but that with λᾶας is difficult, as it has no -w-. Cf. Fur.: 397f.

λαγαίω [v.] 'to release' (Crete). ◄EUR?►
•VAR Aor. λαγάσαι; λαγάσσαι· ἀφεῖναι 'let go' (H.).
•COMP Also with ἀπο-.
•DER ἀπολάγαξις 'release' (Crete).
Several nouns, not directly depending on the verb: 1. λαγαρός 'slack, emaciated, thin' (IA), whence λαγαρότης 'slackness, etc.', λαγαρόομαι [v.] 'to get slack' (AP) with λαγάρωσις (Eust.), of στίχοι λαγαροί; also λαγαρίζομαι mg. unclear (com.). 2. λάγανον 'thin cake' (Hell.) with λαγάνιον (late) and λαγανίζω (?; Hp. Morb. Sacr. 13).
A nasal suffix is also found in semantically deviant 3. λάγνος, -νης 'lascivious, voluptuous' (on the barytone accent see Schwyzer: 489), with λαγνεύω [v.] 'to be lascivious, be lecherous', λαγνεία 'the act of coition, etc.' (IA). 4. *λαγος (*λάξ) 'slack, thin' in λαγόνες [f.pl.] (also msc.), rarely -ών [sg.] 'the hollows on the side, flanks' (IA), and also in ►λαγώς 'hare'.
•ETYM Disyllabic λαγάσαι (: λαγαρός) has a model in the synonym χαλά-σαι (: χαλαρός); λαγαίω is an innovation like κεραίω, ἀγαίομαι (see ►κεράννυμι and ►ἀγα-). A different ablaut grade is usually recognized in ►λήγω, ►λωγάνιον.
A direct correspondence to λαγος, if from slago- (see on ►λήγω), yields a Germanic adjective for 'slack': ON slakr, OS slac, OE slæc, etc., with initial l- MLG lak 'id.'. In Celtic, we find OIr. lac 'id.'. The formal identity of λαγών and MoNw. lake 'flap' on the one hand, and of λάγανον and OS lakan, OHG lahhan 'cloth' on the other, rests on parallel innovations in the separate languages.

Further, λαγαρός is compared with ToA slākkär 'sad'. Beside it exists Lat. laxus 'slack, weak, etc.' with an s-suffix; perhaps also Skt. ślakṣṇá- 'slippery, meagre, thin' (if assimilated from slakṣ-*).
However, as slh₂g-* would have given slāg-, and since Indo-European had no phonemes a, ā, the above correspondences have not been explained. Perhaps it is necessary to assume a secondary zero grade for the Greek forms. Alternatively, we may be dealing with a European substrate word.

λαγγάζω [v.] 'to slacken' (Antiph., Phot., AB [= ἐν- δίδωμι]); λαγγάζει· ὀκνεῖ 'is slow', οἱ δὲ λαγγεῖ (H.); λαγγάσαι· περιφυγεῖν 'to flee' (H.). ◂PG?(V), EUR?▸
•DER Other formations in H.: λαγγεύει· φεύγει, λαγγανώμενος· περιϊστάμενος, στραγγευόμενος 'avoiding, hesitating', λαγγαρεῖ· ἀποδιδράσκει 'runs away'. λαγγών (for λάγγων?)· ὁ εὐθὺς λανθάνων τοῦ ἀγῶνος καὶ τοῦ φόβου (EM 554, 15, cf. Chantraine 1933: 160). With -ο-: ►λογγάζω, λογγάσαι.
•ETYM Expressive and popular words, which correspond formally and semantically to Lat. langueō, -ēre 'to be faint, slack' (with secondary -u-) and, like the latter, can be understood as nasalized present formations from λαγάσαι (►λαγαίω). The same problem as with ►λαγαίω holds here: the pervasive a-vocalism. Do the forms with -ο- point to substrate origin? It is quite possible that the variation λαγ-/λαγγ- is due to Pre-Greek pre-nasalization.
We must separate several Baltic words in the meaning 'to rock, sling, vacillate', like Lith. langóti, lingúoti; see Fraenkel 1955: 331 (s.v. láigyti). The same holds for Gm. words like OHG slinc 'left', MoSw. linka, lanka, lunka 'to limp, go slowly, etc.'.

λάγιον [n.] 'kind of cup or vessel' (Delos II[a]). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unexplained. Fur.: 121 compares λήκυθος, but this is uncertain. Kronasser 1956: 225 compares Hitt. laḫan(n)i, Akk. laḫannu, etc. See ►λάγῡνος.

λαγκρύζεσθαι [v.] · λοιδορεῖσθαι 'to be slandered' (Phot.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM A prenasalized form beside λακερύζεσθαι 'id.'; see λακέρυζα s.v. ►λάσκω. Therefore, clearly a Pre-Greek word.

λάγματα ⇒λαίγματα.

λάγνος ⇒λαγαίω.

λάγῡνος [m., f.] 'flask with a small neck', also as measure (Arist. Fr. 499, Hell.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also -ῠ-.
•COMP τρι-λάγυνος 'containing three λ.' (Stesich. 7, pap.), λαγυνο-φόρια [n.pl.] name of an Alexandrinian festival (Eratosth.).
•DER Diminutive λαγύνιον, -υνίς (Hell.); λαγυνάριος 'manufacturer, handler of flasks' (Corycos), Λαγυνίων [m.] name of a parasite (Ath.).
•ETYM Many names for vessels are loans. This one is probably Pre-Greek, because of the interchange ῠ/ῡ. Puhvel HED 5: 6f. compares Hitt. laḫan(n)i, Akk. laḫannu, etc. From λάγυνος was borrowed Lat. lagūna, -ōna; also, lagēna, from which was taken λάγηνος (Gal.). Cf. ►λάγιον.

λαγχάνω [v.] 'to obtain by lot' (an office, the right of a lawsuit), 'to obtain one's share' (Od.). ◂IE? lengʰ-* 'obtain (by lot)'▸ •VAR Aor. λαχεῖν (Il.), caus. λελαχεῖν (Il.), perf. λέλογχα (λ 304), λέλᾰχα (Emp.), εἴληχα (A., Att.), fut. λάξομαι (Hdt.), λήξομαι (Pl.), perf. pass. εἴληγμαι, aor. ληχθῆναι (Att.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, δια-, ἀντι-, συν-.
•DER 1. With old o-grade: λόγχη [f.] 'share' (Ion.), with εὔ-λογχος = εὔ-μοιρος (Democr.) and εὐλογ<χ>εῖν· εὐμοιρεῖν (H.). 2. With zero grade: λάξις 'portion, share (of land)' (Hdt., Miletus), Ἀπόλαξις (Eretria); Λάχεσις [f.] name of one of the Moirai, also as an appellative 'share, lot' (Hes., Pi.), perhaps after γένεσις, Νέμεσις; younger formations are λάχος [n.] 'lot, share' (Thgn., Pi., A.; also Arc.) and λάχη (λαχή?) [f.] 'id.' (A. Th. 914, H.); cf. on λαχαίνω; PN Λάχης, -ητος [m.] (Th.); λαχμός = λάχος 'id.' (sch., Eust.). 3. With a secondary full grade (see below): λῆξις (σύν-, διά-, ἀντί-) 'allotment, written complaint' (Att.).
•ETYM Old forms are the o-grade perf. λέλογχα, λόγχη and the zero grade aor. λαχεῖν, λάξις. Later, εἴληχα, λήξομαι, λῆξις, etc. arose as innovations by analogy with εἴληφα, λήψομαι, λῆψις (after λαγχάνω : λαμβάνω, λαχεῖν : λαβεῖν). No known cognates exist. A noteworthy agreement with Λάχεσις is Messap. Logetibas [dat.pl.], to which belongs Λάγεσις· θεός. Σικελοί (H.); if correct, it must be an old loan; cf. Kretschmer Glotta 12 (1923): 278ff.

λαγών 'the flanks'. •VAR Plur. -όνες. ⇒λαγαίω.

λαγώς [m.] 'hare', also metaph. of a bird (Thompson 1895 s.v.; cf. λαγωΐς below), of several sea-animals (Thompson 1947 s.v., Strömberg 1943: 111), of a constellation (Scherer 1953: 189, 192), and of a bandage (medic.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Att. also λαγῶς (on the gender see Schwyzer 1950: 31[4]); gen. λαγώ (-ῶ), acc. λαγών, analogical -ώ (-ῶ), etc.
•DIAL λαγωός (epic, Arist.), λαγός (Ion., Dor., poet.).
•COMP As a first member in λαγο-δαίτᾱς [m.] 'hare-devourer' (A.), λαγω(ο)-βόλον [n.] 'stick for flinging at hares' (Theoc., AP), etc.
•DER Diminutives: λαγῴδιον (Ar., pap.), λαγωδάριον (Ph.); λάγιον (X.), λαγίδιον (M. Ant., Poll.), λαγιδεύς (Str.). Adjectives: λαγῷος 'ptng. to a hare', τὰ λαγῷα 'hare-meat, delicacy' (Hp., com.), λαγώειος 'id.' (Opp.), λαγώνεια· λαγοῦ κρέα 'hare's meat' (H.), cf. ταών(ε)ιος from ταώς, -ῶς; λάγειος (of κρέας, Hp.), λάγινος 'ptng. to a hare' (A.). Bird-names: λαγωΐς [f.] (Hor. Sat. 2, 2, 22; leporini coloris Porph.; cf. WH s.v.). λαγωΐνης· ὄρνις ποιός (H.), cf. κεγχρίνης, ἐλαφίνης, etc.; λαγωδίας = ὦτος a kind of owl (Alex. Mynd. apud Ath. 9, 390f); cf. καχρυ-δ-ίας, Chantraine 1933: 203.
•ETYM Traditionally analyzed as *λαγ(ο)-ω[υσ]-ός 'with flabby ears', an adjectival bahuvrīhi of *λαγο- (see on ►λαγαίω) and οὖς. Cf. Oss. tærqus 'hare', properly "long-ear", MoP xargōš 'id.', properly "donkey-ear", Berber bu tmezgīn "the animal with the long ears" (litt. in Frisk). Probably a taboo word from the language of hunters (e.g. Schwyzer: 38, Havers 1946: 51f.). By contraction and analogy arose λαγώς, λαγός (Schwyzer: 557[1]).

Szemerényi SMEA 3 (1967): 85ff. shows that the compound formation *λαγωϝης 'having flabby ears' (which is more probable than an o-stem) can actually be restored in Homer, and that it accounts for the Attic forms as well. DELG calls this plausible.

λάδας [?] · ἔλαφος νεβρίας 'a deer dappled like a fawn' (H.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •DER Also PN (Paus. 3, 21, 1).
•ETYM Fur.: 195 connects it with λῆθον· βαλιόν 'dappled' (H.).

λᾰδρέω [v.] 'to run, flee', of the μυκτῆρες, nostrils (Sophr. 135). ◂?▸
•ETYM Uncertain. Fur.: 199 compares λατραβός, λαιδρός, λαθροῦν, λαιθαρύζειν.

Λᾱέρτης [m.] name of the father of Odysseus. ◂GR?▸
•ETYM Connected with the root of ἔρετο· ὡρμήθη 'was incited' (H.). DELG adds: "C'est l'homme qui met en mouvement le peuple." For the meaning, one compares the Myc. PN e-ti-ra-wo, which is interpreted as Ἐρτι-λαϝος (Palmer 1963: 78). Acc. to Ael. NA, it is the name of an insect (a bee or an ant), which we cannot explain; see Gil Fernández 1959: 193.

λάζομαι [v.] 'to seize, grasp, take hold of' (Il.). ◂IE *$sleh_2g^w$- 'seize, grasp'▸ •VAR Also λάζυμαι (h. Merc. 316), also Megar., Thess. λαδδουσθη, ουπο-λαδδουνθη, only present stem.
•COMP Also with ἀντι-, ἀνα-, προσ-.
•ETYM The more recent formation λάζυμαι was probably created after αἴνυμαι (Schwyzer: 698, Fraenkel IF 60 (1952): 132). As a yod-present, λάζομαι may continue a pre-form lag-i̯e/o-* or lang-i̯e/o-*; given λαβεῖν, ἔ-λλαβε (see ▸λαμβάνω), from which λάζομαι can hardly be separated, a labiovelar must be reconstructed: IE $(s)leh_2g^w$-ie/o-. Connection with the isolated OE læcc(e)an 'to seize, grasp', MoE latch, seems possible.

λάθαργοι [m.pl.] 'bit of leather' (Nic. Th. 423), acc. to H., τὰ ξυόμενα ἀπὸ τῆς βύρσης ὑπὸ τῶν ἀρβήλων 'what is carved from the hide with a cobbler-knife'; also = σκώληκες 'worms' (H.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •ETYM Technical term without a clear origin. Fur.: 374 connects it with λαίθαργος, and λήθαργος with λάθαργος (Phryn. PS 87 B.), but these have a quite different meaning. See ▸λαίθαργος.

λαθικηδής, λάθρα ⇒λανθάνω.

λᾰ́θυρος [m.] 'a kind of pulse, chickling, Lathyrus sativus' (Hell.). ◂PG?(S)▸ •VAR Plural also -α.
•DER λαθυρίς [f.] name of a purging plant, 'Euphorbia Lathyris' (Dsc., Gal.); hence Lat. (gloss.) latridus [f.] (see André Ét. class. 24 (1956): 41f.).
•ETYM No etymology. Only a remote resemblance with the word for 'lentil' (Lat. lens, OCS lęšta, Ru. ljača). The structure (suffix -υρ-) could point to a Pre-Greek word (not in Fur.).

λαιαί 'stones of the weaver'. ⇒λᾶας.

λαίγματα [n.pl.] · πέμματα, οἱ δὲ σπέρματα, ἱερὰ ἀπάργματα 'cakes, others: seeds, holy firstlings' (H.); λαῖγμα· τὸ ἱερόν (Theognost. Can. 9). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER Cf. λάγματα (Cyr., Phot.), λαῖτμα· θῦμα 'sacrifice' (H.), cod. λαιτμάθημα; also as a v.l. (cod. Ven.) in Ar. Av. 1563 beside λαῖμα, in an uncertain mg.; thus also Suid. with many interpretations (αἷμα, λαιμός, etc.).
•ETYM The variation λα-/λαι- points to a Pre-Greek word.

λαιδρός [adj.] 'bold, impudent, shameless' (Hell. poet.: Call., Nic., Max.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Stem vowel and suffix as in φαιδρός, αἰσχρός. Fur.: 199 connects it with λατραβός, λαθροῦν, λαιθαρύζω, λαιθυράζω, λαδρέω; uncertain. Origin unknown, but possibly Pre-Greek. Note the rather late attestation of the word.
Traditional etymologies do not have much to recommend themselves: Krahe 1955: 129ff. connects Messapian / Illyrian PNs like Ledrus, Laidius, Σκερδι-λαΐδας, as well as the semantically unclear laidehiabas (adj. of Logetibas; see ▸λαγχάνω), Po-laidehias. Another suggestion is Lith. pa-láidas 'loose, free', pa-láida 'looseness', assuming that λαιδρός properly meant 'loose, elated'. A different root grade is found in Lith. léisti 'release'. On the Baltic group, see Fraenkel 1955 s.v.

λαιετόν 'townhall' (Su.).
•ETYM See λήϊτον s.v. ▸λαός.

λαίθαργος [adj.] 'guileful, treacherous', of dogs which bite unexpectedly (S. Fr. 885, Orac. apud Ar. Eq. 1068); also λαιθάργῳ ποδί (Trag. Adesp. 227), explained by H. as λαθραίῳ. ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR λαθαργοι· κύνες κρυφίως δάκνοντες 'dogs that bite unexpectedly' (H.).
•ETYM Frisk and others consider it to be identical with ▸λήθαργος 'forgetful, lethargic' and take it as a reshaping based on popular words in λαι- (λαιδρός, λαίμαργος, etc.). However, the variation αι/η rather points to Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 338, 374). Acc. to DELG, the gloss λάθαργοι 'dogs which bite unexpectedly' in H. arose from confusion with λαίθαργοι, but it may also be a different variant. See also ▸λάθαργοι.

λαιθαρύζειν · λαμυρῶσαι, διαπράξασθαι 'to be wanton, get something done (by seduction?)' (H.). ⇒λατραβός.

λαικάζω [v.] 'to wench' (com.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR fut. λαικάσομαι.
•DER λαικάστρια [f.] 'strumpet' (com.), also λαικαστής [m.] (Ar. Ach. 79); back-formation λαικάς [f.] (Aristaenet. 2, 16; not quite certain); also λαικαλέος (Luc. Lex. 12).
•ETYM Resembles ▸ληκάω, of which λαικάζω is probably only a variant (cf. ▸λαίθαργος). The variation αι/η is typical for Pre-Greek; cf. Pre-Greek: section B 6.

λαῖλαψ, -απος [f.] 'furious storm, hurricane' (Il., Hell.). ◂PG?(S)▸ •VAR On λαῖλαμψ see Fur.: 287 Anm. 4.

•DER λαιλαπώδης 'stormy' (Hp.), λαιλαπετός = λαῖλαψ (sch. A. on Λ 495), after ὑετός, etc. Denominative λαιλαπίζω [v.] 'to quake by storms' (Aq.). λαιλαφέτης [m.] 'sender of storms' (PMag. Leid. W. 8, 21), haplological for λαιλαπ-αφέτης.
•ETYM Probably Pre-Greek, with intensive reduplication. Fur.: 225 refers to λάλαμις· λαῖλαψ (H.); the corrections by Latte are unnecessary.

λαῖμα ⇒λαίγματα.

λαιμός [m.] 'throat, gullet' (Il.). ◁PG(V)▷ •COMP As a first member in λαιμο-τόμος 'cutting the throat' (E.); on λαίμαργος see below.
•DER Denominatives: 1. λαιμάσσω, -ττω [v.] 'to be voracious' (Ar., Herod.) with λαίμαστρον 'voracious animal', as a term of abuse (Herod.), cf. on ζύγαστρον; 2. λαιμώσσω [v.] 'id'. (Nic. Al. 352 as a v.l.); 3. λαιμάω [v.] 'id'. (Hippon.); 4. λαιμάζουσιν· ἐσθίουσιν ἀμέτρως 'eat without a limit' (H.); λαιμίζω [v.] 'to cut the throat, slaughter' (Lyc.).
Nouns: λαιμά [n.pl.] = λαμυρά 'voracious, greedy' (H.; Men. 106, codd. λαῖμα, λῆμα), probably a back-formation to λαιμάω, -άζω, -άσσω; λαιμώρη· ἡ λαμυρίς (Theognost. Can. 9, Suid.); cf. especially πληθώρη (on the accent Wackernagel and Debrunner Phil. 95 (1942): 181f.).
A compound that became unclear as such is λαίμαργος 'voracious, carouser' (Arist., Thphr.), from *λαιμό-μαργος (cf. especially γαστρί-μαργος); see Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 165.
•ETYM There seems no basis for the comparison with ►λαῖτμα. Fur.: 225 compares λαιμός 'gefrässig' with λαιφός and λαιφάσσω, which proves Pre-Greek origin. Does λαῖπος belong here, too?

λαινόχειρ · σκληρόχειρ 'with a hard hand' (H.). ◁GR?▷
•ETYM The first member is probably λάϊνος 'of stone'; see ►λᾶας. There is no context, so further analysis is uncertain.

λαῖον [acc.sg.] name of a part of the plough, probably 'ploughshare' (A. R. 3, 1335). ◁?▷ •ETYM No etymology. The -αι- remains unexplained by the comparison with a Gm. word for 'sickle', ON lé, MLG lē, lehe [m.], from PGm. leuan-, IE leuon-. Further, Skt. laví- [m.] (Uṇ. 4, 138), laví-tra- [n.] (Pāṇ. 3, 2, 184) 'sickle', from a pres. lunā́ti 'to cut' (see ►λύω).

λαιός 1 [adj.] 'left' (poet. since Tyrt., A.; late prose). ◁IE leh$_2$iuo-* 'left'▷ •VAR ἡ λαιά 'the left hand'.
•DER Diminutive λαίδιον· ἀριστερόν, εὐώνυμον 'left' (H.).
•ETYM Old word for 'left', identical with Lat. laevus, OCS lěvъ, Ru. lévyj, from IE leh$_2$i-uo-* (or lh$_2$ei-uo-*?). Comparison of λαίβα· ἀσπίς, πέλτη 'shield' (H.) as *λαιϝα "carried in the left hand" is unlikely. On spread and use of λαιός, σκαιός, ἀριστερός, see Chantraine 1956b: 61ff.

The attempt by Fur.: 339 to compare λαφός· ὁ ἀριστερᾷ χειρὶ χρώμενος 'who uses the left hand' (H.) and establish a substrate etymon should be neglected: λαιός cannot be separated from Lat. laevus, etc.

λαιός 2 [m.] a kind of thrush, 'Petrocichla (cyanus, saxatilis)'. ◁GR?▷
•ETYM Perhaps from λᾶας 'stone'; cf. MoGr. πετρο-κόσσυφος 'thrush'. See Thompson 1895 s.v.

λαισήϊα [n.pl.] a kind of shield, made of raw skins (E 453 = M 426 λαισήϊά τε πτερόεντα, Hdt. 7, 91 ὠμοβοέης πεποιημένα), used by the Cilicians. ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM For the ending, compare the instrument names in -ήϊον, -εῖον; it recalls λάσιος 'rough', but is further unclear. See Trümpy 1950: 38f.
Fur.: 182 compares λαῖτα· πέλτη 'shield' H., λαίδας· ἡ ἀσπὶς ἀπὸ βύρσης 'shield made of a hide' (Theognost. Can. 9, Zonar.), as well as λᾶδος, etc. 'light, cheap cloth', although the latter is not very convincing. The gloss λαισάς· ἡ παχεῖα ἐξωμίς 'thick, one-sleeved tunic' (H.) should probably be excluded as well. If the comparison with λαῖτα and λαίδας is correct, the word must be Pre-Greek.

λαῖτμα [n.] 'depth, gulf of the sea' (Il.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Connected with ►λαιμός 'throat', assuming suffixes -τ-μα (like in ἄε-τ-μ-α, Chantraine 1933: 180). If this connection is correct at all (the semantics are not compelling), it rather points to Pre-Greek origin, from a pre-form lat^{y}m-* (Fur.: 322[69] rather connects it with the obscure word λαῖμα [n.] [Ar. Av. 1563]).

λαῖφα [?] · ἀσπίς (H.); cf. λαίβα· ἀσπίς, πέλτη (H.). ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM Given the variant, the gloss is clearly Pre-Greek. Note also λαίας· ἀσπίδας (H.); cf. Fur.: 238. Fur.: 170 compares λαῖφος, λαίφη 'old garment, sail', but he gives no further explanation. One may imagine that the sails were made of skins, like the shield.

λαιφάσσω [v.] 'to swallow, gulp down' (Nic. Th. 477); λαιφάσσοντες· ψηλαφοῦντες 'groping' (H.). ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM A cross between λαιμάσσω and λαφύσσω has been proposed, but such crosses are posited too easily, and can hardly be demonstrated. If correct, the gloss λαιφάσσοντες is after ἀφάσσοντες. On the other hand, the variation φ/μ is well-known in Pre-Greek words. The meaning of λαιφαί· ἀναιδεῖς, θρασεῖς, στυγναί, τολμηραί 'shameless, bold, hated, daring' (H.), where Schmidt reads λαιδραί, deviates too much. The word λαιφύς· δάπανος ἢ βορός 'extravagant, gluttonous' (H.), which too is uncertain, looks like a back-formation (acc. to Maas ByzZ 37 (1937): 380, it is an error for λάφυξ).

λαῖφος [n.] 'ragged cloth, old garment' (Od., h. Hom.); 'cloth, sail' (poet. Alc. Z 2, 7; h. Ap. 406). ◁?▷
•VAR λαίφη [f.] 'id.' (Call.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Fur.: 170 unconvincingly compares ►λαῖφα · ἀσπίς.

λαιψηρός [adj.] 'swift, quick, nimble' (Il.). ◁?▷
•DER λαιψηρά [adv.] (E.; perhaps also X 24, see Leumann 1950: 165f.).

•ETYM The analysis as an expressive transformation of αἰψηρός after e.g. λάβρος 'violent, boisterous' may be possible, but it is not evident. Frisk compares Ζέφυρος ... λάβρος Β 148 beside ἀνέμων λαιψηρὰ κέλευθα 'the quick paths of the winds', Ξ 17. Another possibility is a compound of ►λα- and ►αἰψηρός.

λακάζω •VAR λακεῖν, λακέρυζα, etc. ⇒λάσκω.

λακάρα, -η [f.] tree-name, probably 'bird cherry, Prunus avium' (Thphr.). ◄?►
•VAR v.ll. λευκάρα, λακάθη. Cf. the gloss λακάρτη <ἤ> λακάρη· δένδρον τι (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained.

Λακεδαίμων, -ονος [f.] town and country on the river Eurotas (Il.). ◄PG?►
•DIAL Myc. ra-ke-da-mi-ni-jo /Lakedaimnios/ and [ra-]ke-da-mo-ni-jo /Lakedaimonios/, cf. Lejeune RPh. 68 (1994): 165-168.
•DER Λακεδαιμόνιος [m.] 'inhabitant of L.' (Hdt.), also as adj. (fem. almost only Λάκαινα, see ►Λάκων); λακεδαιμονίζω = λακωνίζω (Ar. Fr. 95).
•ETYM The meaning of the appellative is unknown, so the name remains without etymology. Several proposals: a) to λακεδάμα· ὕδωρ ἁλμυρὸν ἁλσὶ πεποιημένον [ἅλικι ἐπικεχυμένον Latte], ὅ πίνουσιν οἱ τῶν Μακεδόνων ἀγροῖκοι 'bitter water [poured over groats] which the M. countrymen drink' (H.); b) the second member is δαίμων in the sense 'part' (Bechtel 1921, 2: 370); c) dissimilated from *Λακεν-αίμων, to ►Λάκων and another ethnonym Αἵμων (Szemerényi Glotta 38 (1960): 14ff. with ample discussion).
Acc. to Fick 1905: 90, however, it is rather a Hellenisation of a Pre-Greek word. Frisk thinks that Λάκων is a shortened form of Λακε-δαιμόνιος; the element Λακε- is found in Λάκε-θεν, a deme of Eretria.

λακέρυζα 'sbd. who cries'. ⇒λαγκρύζεσθαι.

λακίς, -ίδος [f.] 'rent, rag, tatters of clothes' (Alc., A.). ◄IE? *lh_2k-► •VAR Often λακίδες [pl.].
•DER Denominative λακίζω (also with περι-) [v.] 'to tear' (Lyc., AP) with λακίσματα 'shreds' (E.), λακιστός 'torn to shreds' (Antiph.); also λακιδ-όομαι [v.] 'to be torn (to shreds)' (Dsc.). Besides λάκη· ῥάκη. Κρῆτες 'rags' (H.), λάκημα 'rent, fragment' (pap.), cf. on ►λάσκω.
•ETYM The plural λάκη may belong to the s-stem lacus*, supposed in Lat. lacerāre 'to tear' (cf. vulnerāre : vulnus), unless it is a recent innovation from ῥάκη. The adjective lacer, -era, -erum 'torn', which is attested later, would then be a back-formation. For λακίς, one could assume both a nominal (*λάκος?) and a verbal basis (Chantraine 1933: 338, Schwyzer: 465), and likewise for λάκημα (cf. Chantraine 1933: 178). The only trace of an old primary verb (which was replaced by λακίζω) is ἀπέληκα· ἀπέρρωγα. Κύπριοι (H.). Latin, too, has given up this verb in favor of denominative lacerāre. The Latin n-stem lacin-ia [f.] 'edge of a garment' belongs here too. An n-stem is surmised in MoP raxna 'rent, cleft' (Benveniste 1935: 15; doubted by WH s.v. lacer).
It is difficult to posit an IE root for λακ- and related forms: perhaps *lh_2k-?

λάκκος 1 [m.] 'pond, cistern, pit, reservoir' (IA). ◄IE? loku-* 'lake, pond'.►
•COMP As a first member e.g. in λακκό-πλουτος [m.] 'who hides his wealth in a cistern', epithet of Callias, etc. (Plu.); as a second member in the hypostasis προ-λάκκ-ιον (Arist.), προσ-λάκκ-ιον (Gal.) 'pre-, side-cistern'; cf. προ-άστ-ιον.
•DER λακκ-αῖος 'sprung from a λ.' (Hell.), -ώδης 'full of λ'. (Gp.), -άριος 'guard of a λ.' (gloss.), -ίζω [v.] 'to dig a λ.' (Suid.). Λακκίον name of the small harbour in Syracuse (D. S.).
•ETYM Perhaps from IE loku-; see Schrijver 1991: 422ff, 475. Greek would have to go back to a zero grade l̥ku̯o-.
Beside the o-stem λάκκος, there are several western and northern languages with an u-stem: Lat. lacus 'lake, pond, pit, etc.', OIr. loch 'lake, pond', OS lagu 'lake, water', OCS loky 'λάκκος'. It has been assumed that λάκκος stands for *λάκϝ-ος, but the development of *-ku̯- > -κκ- is unexpected.

λάκκος 2 [m.] 'kind of dye, lac' (Peripl. M. Rubr. 6). ◄LW Ind.►
•DER λακκόω [v.] 'to dye with lac' (PLond. 2, 191, 10 [II^{p}]: σκούτλια ξύλινα λελακκωμένα).
•ETYM From Prākr. lakkha < Skt. lākṣā 'lac'.

λακπατέω, λακτίζω ⇒λάξ.

λακχά [f.] a plant-name, = ἄγχουσα (Ps.-Democr.). ◄LW Ind.►
•DER λακχάϊνος (Edict. Diocl.).
•ETYM A foreign word, probably from Prākr. lakkha 'lac' (see ►λάκκος 2); cf. the explanation of the borrowing into Lat. lacca(r) in Plin. Val. 2, 17: herba quaedam unde vermiculatae pelles tinguntur, 'certain herbs by which vermiculated skins are painted'.

Λάκων, -ωνος [m.] 'Laconian, Lacedaemonian', name of an inhabitant of Laconia (Lacedaemon), also as an adjective (fem. also Λακωνίς) 'Laconian, Lacedaemonian' (Thgn., Pi.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Λάκαινα [f.].
•COMP Few compounds like λακωνο-μανέω 'imitate Lacedaemonian manners', μισο-λάκων 'enemy of Sparta' (Ar.).
•DER Λακωνικός 'Laconian' (IA), Λακώνιον name of a female cloth (pap.); λακωνίζω 'behave, be minded or speak like a Laconian' (Att.) with Λακων-ισταί [m.pl.] 'supporters of the L.', -ισμός 'Laconian-friendly behaviour' (X.).
•ETYM Acc. to Dittenberger Herm. 41 (1906): 196, hypocoristic for official Λακεδαιμόνιος, which is why the fem. Λάκαινα (for Λακεδαιμονία) is found almost everywhere. Krahe IF 57 (1940): 119 supposes the name to be Illyrian and connects Lacinium, a promontory in southern Italy, Iuno Lacinia.
Fur.: 171[117] thinks that the suffix -αινα is Pre-Greek.

λαλέω [v.] 'to talk, chat, prattle' (Att.), 'to speak' (Arist., Hell.), MoGr. also 'to drive' (of cattle, etc.), properly 'to talk into going'. ◄IE? lal-* ONOM► •VAR Aor. λαλῆσαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. δια-, κατα-, περι-, συν-, ἐκ-.

•DER Backformations: 1. λάλος 'chattering' (Att.) with λαλίσ-τερος, -τατος, also κατάλαλος from κατα-λαλέω; poetical transformations λαλιός, λαλόεις 'id.' (AP); 2. λάλη [f.] 'chatter' (Com. Adesp., Luc.).
Other derivations: 1. λαλιά 'chatter, talk' (Att., Hell.), also with κατα-, συν- from κατα-λαλέω. 2. λάλημα, λάλησις 'id.' (Att.). 3. λαλητός 'able to speak' (LXX), περιλάλητος 'much discussed' (Agath.); λαλητικός 'chattering' (Ar.). 4. λαλητρίς [f.] 'gossip' (AP), λάληθρος 'twaddler' (Lyc., AP), cf. στωμύληθρος, Chantraine 1933: 372f. 5. With extension -γ- (cf. σμαραγέω, οἰμώζω, the suffix -ωγή, etc., Chantraine 1933: 401): λαλαγέω [v.] 'to babble, chirrup, chirp', of unarticulated sounds (Pi., Theoc., AP), also λαλάζω, -άξαι [v.] 'id.' (Anacr., H.); also λαλαγ-ή, -ημα, -ητής (Opp., AP, H.); λάλαγες· χλωροὶ βάτραχοι ... οἱ δὲ ὀρνέου εἶδός φασι 'pale green frogs, ... others: a kind of bird' (H.). With geminate: λάλλαι [f.pl.] 'pebbles' (Theoc., H., EM).
•ETYM The ending is like in σμαραγέω, κελαδέω, βομβέω and other sound-verbs (cf. Schwyzer: 726[5]). An onomatopoeic elementary formation, like e.g. Lat. lallāre, Lith. lalúoti, MoHG lallen.

λαμβάνω [v.] 'to take, grasp' (post-Hom.). ◂IE $*sleh_2g^w$- 'take, grasp'▸ •VAR Aor. λαβεῖν (Il.), reduplicated med. λελαβέσθαι (δ 388), pass. λαφθῆναι (Ion.), ληφθῆναι (Att.), λημφθῆναι (Hell.); fut. λάψομαι (Ion.), λά[μ]ψεται (Alc.), see Hamm 1957: 145, 2sg. λαψῇ (Dor.), λήψομαι (Att.), λήμψομαι (Hell.); perf. εἴληφα (Att.), εἴλαφα (Dor.), λελάβηκα (Ion. Dor. Arc., also Att.), med. εἴλημμαι (Att.), λέλημμαι (trag.), λέλαμμαι, λελάφθαι (Ion.).
•COMP Very often with prefixes in various mgs.: ἀνα-, κατα-, ἐπι-, παρα-, περι-, συν-, ὑπο-.
•DER Many derivatives are technical words with specific mgs.:
A. From λαβεῖν: 1. λαβή 'grip, point of application, etc.' (Alc. [λάβα], IA), compounds like συλλαβή 'grip, syllable, etc.' (A., Att.); λαβίς [f.] 'grip, clamp, tweezers' (Hell.) with λαβίδιον (Dsc., Gal.), ἀντι-, κατα-, περι-λαβεύς 'handle of a shield, peg, etc.' (H., medic.), λάβιον 'grip' (Str.), ἀπολάβειον 'clamp' (Ph. Bel.). 2. -λάβος in compounds like ἐργο-λάβ-ος [m.] 'contractor', whence -έω, -ία (Att., Hell.). 3. -λαβής, e.g. εὐ-λαβ-ής (to εὖ λαβεῖν) 'careful', with -έομαι, -εια (IA). 4. ΛhαβΕτος PN (Att. epigr.).
B. From full-grade forms (λήψομαι, ληφθῆναι): 1. λῆμμα (ἀνά-, etc.) 'acceptance, assumption, etc.' (Att.). 2. λῆψις (ἀνά-, etc.), Hell. λῆμψις 'capture, apprehension, attack of a disease' (Hp., Att.), ἀπό-, διά-λαμψις = ἀπό-, διά-ληψις (Mytil. and Cyme, etc.). 3. -λη(μ)πτωρ, e.g. συλ-λήπ-τωρ with συλλήπτρ-ια 'participant, assistant' (Att.). 4. ἀνα-, κατα-ληπ-τήρ 'scoop', 'clamp', resp. (Hell.), ἀνα-ληπτρ-ίς [f.] 'connection' (Gal.). 5. παρα-λή(μ)π-της 'tax collector' (Hell.), προσωπο-λήπ-της 'who looks after the person' (NT). 6. ληπτικός 'receptive' (Arist.), further in compounds like ἐπιληπτικός 'epileptic' (to ἐπίληψις, Hp.). 7. συλ-λήβ-δην [adv.] 'taken together' (Thgn., A.).
On ▸λάβρος, see s.v.; on ἀμφι-λαφής see ▸λάφυρον.
•ETYM From Aegin. λhαβών, Att. ΛhαβΕτος and εἴληφα (as well as Hom. ἔλλαβον), we have to infer IE sl-. The Hom. present λάζομαι (λαμβάνω was an innovation) points to IE $-g^w$-, so the root must have been IE $*sleh_2g^w$-. The aspiration in εἴληφα may be secondary (cf. Schwyzer: 772); however, perhaps another verb for 'grasp' (see ▸λάφῡρα) was involved; some other forms may have been influenced by this verb as well.

The zero grade λαβ- must be secondary anyway, for $*s\underset{\circ}{l}h_2g^w$- would have yielded a form with long ᾱ. LIV[2] connects OE læcc(e)an 'to seize', but this presupposes two secondary developments: loss of s-mobile and creation of a-vocalism in the present. See LIV[2] s.v. $*sleh_2g^w$-. See ▸λάζομαι.

λάμβδα ⇒λάβδα.

λάμια ⇒λαμυρός.

λάμπη [f.] 'foam', e.g. on the surface of wine, 'phlegm, mucus'; metaph. 'filth, decay', of the underworld (A. Eu. 387, Dsc., Plu.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also λάπη (Hp., Diph.). Fur. 316 adduces λαπτής· λαπτὴν ἔλεγον τὸν παχὺν ἀφρόν 'thick foam' (H.), etc.
•DER λα(μ)πώδης (also -ππ-) 'covered with foam' (Hp., Erot., Gal.), λαμπηρός 'id.' (Hp. apud Gal.).
•ETYM The connection with ▸λάμπω (see Frisk) does not explain the forms without nasal. These point to a Pre-Greek word. Grošelj Živa Ant. 2 (1952): 212 connects it with ▸λέπω. See ▸λέμφος.

λαμπήνη [f.] 'a covered wagon' (S. Fr. 441, Hell., com., LXX; acc. to Polem. Hist. a Tegeatan word, acc. to others Thessalian). Also ἕδρα, θρόνος (Porphyr. in Ptol. 49). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •VAR Also λαπίνη· ἡ ἅμαξα 'wagon' (Su., Lex. Ambr. ined. 137), probably itacistic for *λαπήνη (Fur.: 285).
•DER λαμπηνικαὶ ἅμαξαι (LXX).
•ETYM Ending like in ἀπήνη, καπᾱ́νᾱ. The word is evidently Pre-Greek, because of the prenasalization and the suffix -ήνη.

λάμπω [v.] 'to lighten, glow', act. also 'to illuminate' (Il.). ◂IE? $*leh_2p$- 'glow, light'▸ •VAR Aor. λάμψαι, fut. λάμψω (IA), perf. 3sg. λέλαμπε with present mg. (E.), aor. pass. λαμφθῆναι (J.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐκ-, ἐν-, ἐπι-, ὑπο-.
•DER 1. λαμπάς, -άδος [f.] 'torch, torch-race' (IA), also poet. adj. 'lit by torch' (S.); λαμπάδιον 'small torch' (Att.); λαμπαδ-ίας [m.] name of a comet and of the constellation Aldebaran (Chrysipp.), see Scherer 1953: 121f., -ίτης 'torch-runner' (Pergamon III[a]); λαμπάδ-ιος 'ptng. to a torch' (pap.), -ιεῖος 'id.' (Delos III[a]), see Chantraine 1933: 93; -ικός 'id.' (sch.); λαμπαδεῖον 'torch-holder' (Eleusis IV[a]), cf. λυχνεῖον. Denominatives: a. λαμπαδίζω [v.] 'to participate in a torch-run or a torch-procession' with λαμπαδισταί [pl.] 'participants in a torch-run' (Delphi II[a]); b. λαμπαδεύομαι, -εύω [v.] 'id., to treat as a λαμπάς' (D. S., Ph.) with λαμπαδεία 'torch-procession' (Priene III-II[a]). 2. λαμπτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'lighter, torch, lantern' (Od.), with λαμπτήρια [n.pl.] name of a festival (pap.). 3. λάμψις [f.] 'lighting' (LXX, Ph.), especially in compounds like διάλαμψις (Arist.), etc. On ▸λαμψάνη 'cabbage, Brassica arvensis', see s.v. 4. λαμπηδών, -όνος [f.] 'lustre, glow' (Epicur., D. S.). 5. λαμπυρίς [f.] 'glow-worm' (Arist.), with λαμπυρίζω [v.] 'to shine like a glowworm', also 'to illuminate' (Thphr., pap.), perhaps dissimilated from *λαμπ-υλίς? 6. λαμπρός 'shining, gleaming' with λαμπρότης, λαμπρύνω 'to illuminate', med. 'to show' (IA), with λαμπρυν-τής (late); as a first member with dissimilation in Λάμπουρος name of a dog (Theoc.), -ουρις [f.] 'fox' (A. Fr. 433, Lyc.). 7. ὑπο-, περι-λαμπ-ής 'shining below, around' (Hes. Sc., Ph., Plu.). 8. Lengthened verbal forms: λαμπετάων (-όων) [ptc.] 'shining' (Λ 104); explanation uncertain, see Schwyzer: 705, Leumann 1950: 181f., Chantraine 1942: 358; λαμπάζω = λάμπω (Man.). 9. Several PNs: Λάμπος, Λαμπετίδης, Λαμπετίη, Λάμπιτος, -τώ, Λαμπαδ-ίων, -ίσκος, Λαμπ(τ)ρεύς; see Bechtel 1917b: 621, Fraenkel 1910: 236, Schwyzer: 337.

•ETYM Both the verbal and the nominal forms derive from the nasal present λάμπω. Without a nasal, we find Hitt. lāpp-[zi] / lapp- 'to glow, flash'; with a long vowel (from IE *leh_2p- or *loh_2p-), some Baltic words for 'torch, flame': Lith. lópė, Latv. lāpa, OPr. lopis; with short a-vowel, but deviating in auslaut, we find OIr. lassaim 'flame', W llachar 'glow', which can go back to laps-*. LIV[2] reconstructs *leh_2p- 'aufleuchten', but it is doubtful whether this material proves IE origin. Cf. ►λαμψάνη and ►λοφνίς. Is it possible to explain λαμπηδών, λαμπυρίς as Greek formations? The nasal present is difficult, for what would be the outcome of *lh_2mp-?

λαμυρός [adj.] 'voracious, avaricious, eager, coquettish' (X., com., Hell.). ◄PG(S,V)►

•DER λαμυρία 'voluptuousness, coquetry' (Plu.), λαμυρίς [f.] 'dewlap' (sch. Luc. Lex. 3), λαμυρῶσαι H. s.v. λαιθαρύζειν. Further λάμια [f.] name of a man-eating monster (Ar.), of a shark (Arist.); in this mg. also λάμνᾰ or -νη (Opp.); (τὰ) λάμια = χάσματα 'chasms' (EM, H.); cf. λαμυρὰ θάλασσα (EM 555, 57). Name of a hero Λάμος (κ 81). Lycian TN Λάμυρα (Λίμυρα), HN Λάμυρος; suggestion in Heubeck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 1 (1949): 281.

•ETYM For the formation of λαμυρός, cf. γλαφυρός, βδελυρός, etc. λάμ-ιᾰ has retained -ιᾰ, like πότνια (see Chantraine 1933: 98). There seems no basis for the comparison of λαμυρός with Lat. lemurēs 'roaming ghosts of those who died at a wrong time, or who died a violent death'.

From λάμια was borrowed Lat. lamia [f.] 'vampire'; perhaps also lamium [n.] 'dead nettle', from *λάμιον? The form λαμός 'cleft' (sch. Hor. Ep. 1, 13, 10; λάμος LSJ) does not exist.

The word (note the suffix -υρ-) is probably Pre-Greek, and related to λαφύσσω 'to swallow' with interchange μ/φ; see Fur.: 225. Perhaps ►λαιμός is also related. Fur.: further connects λάβρος, which is possible but uncertain.

λαμψάνη [f.] 'kind of cabbage, Brassica arvensis' (Dsc., Gal.; pap.), acc. to Strömberg 1940: 24 because of the gleaming color. ◄PG(V)►

•VAR Also λαψ-, λεψ-. Further λαψάνη· τῶν ἀγρίων λαχάνων ἐσθιομένη 'edible wild vegetable' (H.). and λάψα· γογγυλίς. Περγαῖοι 'turnip' (H.).

•ETYM The variants prove Pre-Greek origin (note the different vocalism in λεψ-), while connection with ►λάμπω remains doubtful.

λανθάνω [v.] 'to escape notice, be unknown or unnoted; to make sbd. forget sth.', med. 'to forget' (Il.+). ◄IE *leh_2- 'remain unnoticed or hidden'► •VAR Also λήθω (ληθάνω η 221), aor. λαθεῖν, λελαθεῖν, -έσθαι (ἐπι-λῆσαι υ 85), fut. λήσω (Il.), perf. λέληθα (IA), med. λέλασμαι (Hom.), λέλησμαι (Att.), late aor. λήσασθαι, λησθῆναι, Dor. Aeol. λᾱ́θω, λᾱ́σω, λᾶσαι, λέλᾱθα.

•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἐπι-.

•DER A. from λαθεῖν, -έσθαι: 1. λάθρη, -ᾱ [adv.] 'secretly' (Il.), λάθρᾰ (h. Cer. 240) with λαθραῖος 'secret' (IA); λάθριος (S. Ichn. 66 [lyr.], Hell.), -ίδιος, -ιμαῖος (late) 'id.'; λαθρᾱ́δᾱν [adv.] (Corinn.), like κρυφᾱ́δᾱν; λαθρη-δόν, -δά, -δίς (late); as a first member λαθρο- in compounds like λαθρό-νυμφος 'secretly married' (Lyc.), instead of the older variant λᾰθι- in forms like λαθι-κηδής (X 83), properly "hiding sorrow", but also 'making forget sorrows'; cf. λᾱθι- sub C. 2. λαθητικός 'which escapes notice' (Arist.), λάθησις (sch. Gen. A 36) ; 3. λάθος [n.] 'forgetfulness' (MoGr. for *λῆθος, λᾶθος sub B.).

B. From λήθειν: 1. λήθη, Dor. λάθα 'forgetfulness' (B 33) with ληθαῖος 'forgetful' (Call., Lyc.), also ληθήμων, ληθώδης, λήθιος (H.). 2. λᾶθος [n.] = λήθη (Theoc.); λαθοσύνα [f.] 'id.' (E. IT 1279, uncertain). 3. ληθεδών, -όνος [f.] 'id.' (AP, APl.) with ληθεδανός = ληθαῖος (Luc.). 4. ἔκ-λη-σις (ω 485), ἐπί-λᾶ-σις (Pi. P. 1, 46) 'forgetfulness', from ἐκ-, ἐπι-λήθειν; from the simplex further λῆσ-τις 'id.' (S., E.), which is typologically older. 5. λήσ-μων 'forgetting, forgetful' (Them.) with λησμοσύνη (Hes. Th. 55, S. Ant. 151), after μνημοσύνη; ἐπιλήσ-μων 'id.' (Att.) with ἐπιλησμον-ή, -μοσύνη (Crat., LXX), ἐπιλησμον-έω (late), λησμον-έω (MiGr. and MoGr.); details in Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 167f. (not always correct).

C. As a first member in verbal governing compounds: 1. λησί-μβροτος 'taking men by surprise, deceiver' (h. Merc.); 2. λᾱθί-πονος 'forgetting (or: making forget) sorrows' (S.), cross with λᾰθι-; 3. λᾱθ-άνεμος 'escaping the wind' (Simon.).

Cf. also ►ἀληθής and ►ἄλαστος; unrelated is ►Λητώ.

•ETYM At the base of the Greek system stands the present λήθω, λᾱ́θω. Beside this are found, from the earliest sources on, the thematic zero grade aorists λᾰθεῖν and λελᾰθεῖν, -έσθαι together with the perf. med. λέλασμαι and some isolated nominal derivatives, especially the couple λάθρᾱ : λαθι- (Beckwith KZ 112 (1999): 78-85 argues that the reduplicated thematic aorist of the type λέλαθον is a Greek creation).

The nasal present λανθάνω (beside λήθω, which is better attested in Hom.) is perhaps an innovation after μαθεῖν : μανθάνω. Though parallels (πύθω : πύος, βρίθω : βριαρός) are not very strong, the -θ- must be a presentic element in λήθω. A form without dental enlargement indeed seems to be found in λῆτο· ἐπελάθετο, beside λήιτο· ἐπε<λά>θετο (H.) (on the -ι- see below). Lat. lateō 'to be hidden' is probable a denominative from lato-* 'hidden'.

The combination with ToB lät- 'to go out, emerge' is wrong, both formally and semantically (see Adams 1999 s.v.), while the comparison with OCS lajati 'ἐνεδρεύειν, to ambush, lie in wait for' and OCz. lákati 'id.' is now once again defended, e.g. by LIV[2] s.v. 3. *leh_2- (see also *leh_2d^h-) and Derksen 2008. The words ►λαίθαργος and ►λήθαργος are Pre-Greek.

λάξ [adv.] 'with the heel or foot' (Il.). ◄PG?►

•VAR Also (very rare) subst. (secondary back-formation) = λάκτισμα (H.), 'sole of the foot' (sch. A. R. 2, 106), see Thierfelder Sächs. Abh. 43:2: 42[3].
•COMP As a first member in λακ-πατέω 'to tread (with the foot), trample underfoot' (Pherecr. 136, S. Ant. 1275 v.l.; cf. λεω-πάτητος s.v. λεῖος).
•DER λάγ-δην = λάξ (S. Fr. 683, 3). Denominative verbs: 1. λακτίζω [v.] 'to kick with the foot or the hoof' (Od.), also with prefix, e.g. ἀντι-, ἐκ-; rather after the verbs in -τίζω than from *λακτι, as per Schwyzer: 620; thence λάκτισμα (A., S.), λάκτιμα (pap., H.); (ἐκ-)λακτισμός (H.) 'treading, pushing'; -ιστής 'who kicks with the foot' (X.), -ιστική, scil. τέχνη (in boxing; late). 2. λάξας = λακτίσας (Lyc. 137), λάζειν· ἐξυβρίζειν 'to break out, go crazy' (H.) with λαχμός = λακτισμός (Antim.); λάκτις [f.] 'pounder' (Call., Nic.), back-formation from λακτίζω (see Schwyzer: 270)?
•ETYM Formed like πύξ, γνύξ, ὀδάξ, etc., but without a certain explanation. The connection with Lat. calx 'heel' is semantically adequate, but even assuming dissimilation from *κλάξ, formal problems remain. Within Greek, the gloss ληκᾶν· τὸ πρὸς ᾠδὴν ὀρχεῖσθαι 'dance on a song' (H.) could be compared; further, ληκῆσαι, λακῆσαι· πατάξαι 'strike, beat, knock, etc.' (H.) and several expressions for 'limbs', like Lat. lacertus 'upper arm'. Semantically, none is very convincing. Since a good IE etymology is lacking, we may ask whether the word is Pre-Greek. See on ►ὀδάξ.

λαός [m.] '(the common) folk, crowd, the military, tribe' (Il., Dor., Hell.), in the NT especially 'the Jewish people', plur. 'the military, servants, subjects, serfs', also 'laity' (LXX); sing. 'follower' (Hecat. 23 J.); elaborate discussion of use and spread by Björck 1950: 318ff. ◄IE? leh$_2$-uo- 'band of people', PG?►
•VAR Ion. ληός (rare), IA λεώς (archaic and rare).
•DIAL Myc. ra-wa-ke-ta /lāw-āgetās/, cf. Chantraine 1956a: 88[1].
•COMP Many old compounds: Λαϝο-πτόλεμος, Ϝιό-λαϝος (Cor.), λαγέτας [m.] 'leader of the people' (Pi.) from λᾱϝ-ᾱγετᾱς (see Myc. above), Λαέρτης, λαο-σσόος 'urging the men' (Hom.), from ►σεύω, λαο-, λεω-φόρος 'carrying the people, public', of streets, as a subst. 'road' (Il.), Μενέλαος (Il.), -λεως Att. (cf. Björck 1950: 104ff.), etc.
•DER Few derivatives (in part due to the synonym δῆμος, in part to homonymous forms of λᾶας 'stone'): 1. λαϊκός 'of the people, common' (Hell.). 2. λαώδης 'popular' (Ph., Plu.). 3. Λήϊτος PN (Il.), λήϊτον [n.] (on the very rare suffix -ιτο- Schwyzer: 504), 'town hall' among the Achaeans (Hdt., Plu.) with the IA form for λάϊτον· τὸ ἀρχεῖον 'town hall', λαΐτων· τῶν δημοσίων τόπων 'place of public affairs' (H.); other glosses: λῆτον (cod. λητόν)· δημόσιον, ληΐτη, οἱ δὲ λήτη (cod. λητή)· ἱέρεια; cf. λαιετόν 'townhall' (Su.). λειτόν· βλάσφημον (H.). Fur.: 238[45] objects that -ιτο- is a Pre-Greek suffix (cf. ibid. 163, 187). Derivation λητιαί· ἡγεμονίαι, στρατιαί 'leaders' (H.).
As an adjectival first member in λητουργέω (λειτ-) [v.] 'to fulfill a public office on private means, provide a (public or ecclesiastical) service', with λητουργ-ία (λειτ-) 'service, liturgy' (Att.), -ός, -ημα, etc. (Hell.), compounded *λήϊτο-ϝεργ-έω to *λήϊτα ἔργα, cf. ►►δημιουργός; also λήτ-αρχος [m.] 'public priest' (Lyc. 991). Cf. also ►λείτωρ.

•ETYM Like the Gm. word for 'people' (OHG liut, OE lēod), λᾱ(ϝ)ός was originally a collective; from this form, the plural λᾱ(ϝ)οί arose (just like liuti, lēode), from which the sing. ληός 'follower' was built, like liut 'man'.
Most often connected with Hitt. lāḫḫ- 'campaign' and OIr. láech 'warrior'. On λήϊτον, etc., see Gschnitzer Glotta 55 (1977): 190-207. Gschnitzer assumes that the writings η and ει instead of ᾳ show that the form came from the IA area. For the etymology, he follows Heubeck and assumes that λη-ι-το- is a compound 'von den Leuten betreten', i.e. 'publicus'. This interpretation is not convincing, as the PN Λήϊτος (Il.) cannot be explained in this way. The form λαός is rather Pre-Greek, and has a Pre-Greek suffix -ιτ(ο)-, which was recognized as such by Fur.: 163, 238, 303f., etc. This suffix is also found in e.g. βάρβιτος, βόλ(β)ιτον, πόφιτον.
The word λεία 'booty' is not related.

λάπαθον 1 [n.] 'monk's rhubarb, Rumex acetosa' (Epich., Thphr.). ◄PG(S)► •VAR Also -ος [m., f.]; -η [f.].
•COMP Also in compounds, e.g. ὀξυ-, ἱππο-, βου-λάπαθον (Dsc.).
•ETYM Because of the formation (cf. ἄνηθον), foreign origin is suspected. The gloss as βοτάνη κενωτική 'purgative plant' (sch. Theoc.), with λάπαθα [pl.] 'faeces' (sch. Gen. E 166), recalls λαπάσσω.

λάπαθος 2 [m.] 'pitfall for wild animals' (Democr. 122, plur.). ◄PG(S)► •VAR Also -ον [n.] (H., Phot., Suid.).
•ETYM Words in -θος are often Pre-Greek; cf. ►λάπαθον 1.

λαπαρός [adj.] 'weak, slack, hollow' (Hp., Arist.). ◄PG?►
•DER λαπαρότης 'weakness' (Hp.); λαπάρη [f.] 'the weak flanks', plur. 'the flank(s)' (Il.).
Further λαπάσσω, -ττω (-ζω Ath., H.) [v.] 'to weaken, hollow out, empty' (Hp.), also 'destroy' (A.), aor. λαπάξαι, fut. λαπάξω; thence λάπαξις 'evacuation' (Arist., medic.), λαπαγμῶν· ἐκκενώσεων 'emptying' (H.), λαπακτικός 'evacuating' (medic.). On ►λάπαθον 'pitfall', see s.v.
•ETYM For the formation of λαπαρός, cf. λαγαρός, χαλαρός, πλα-δαρός, etc., all with similar meaning (Chantraine 1933: 227). A basic primary verb may have been retained in ἔλαψα· διέφθειρα. Κύπριοι 'weakened, destroyed (Cypr.)' (H.).
It is usually assumed that λαπάσσω, -ττω is an extension of this, perhaps after μαλάττω (cf. λαπάττων· μαλάττων, λαγαρὸν ποιῶν H.). The meaning 'to hollow out' arose in the medical language from 'to weaken', referring to the stomach and the intestines.
In the sense 'to destroy', λαπάξειν, -ξαι agrees with ἀλαπάζω, the relation of which to λαπάσσω, -ζω has not been explained before, but the ἀ- could well be the Pre-Greek prothetic vowel (see on ►ἀλαπάζω). Cf. Fur.: 350 and 371, who also combines forms with λεπα-.

λάπη 'foam'. ⇒λάμπη.

λαπίζω [v.] 'to boast, swagger' (S. Fr. 1062, Cic. Att. 9, 13, 4, AB, Phot., H.). ◄PG?(O)►

•DER λάπισμα 'boasting' (Cic. l.c.), λαπιστής 'swaggerer' (LXX, H.), -ίστρια, -ικτής (Phot., H.).
•ETYM Compared with Skt. lápati 'to chatter' and the Slavic group of Ru. lepetát' 'to stammer', etc. (Pok. 677f.). However, a root of the shape λαπ- is rather Pre-Greek than cognate with Sanskrit.

λάπτω [v.] 'to lap with the tongue, drink greedily, gulp down', especially of dogs, etc. (Arist.). ◄PG?, ONOM► •VAR Fut. λάψω (Π 161, Ar.), -ομαι (Ar.), aor. λάψαι, -ασθαι (Ar., Pherecr., LXX), perf. λέλᾰφα (Ar. Fr. 598).
•COMP Also with ἀπο-, ἐκ-, περι-.
•DER λάπτας· τοὺς ῥοφοῦντας 'gulping down' (H.); also supposed in λατταμυῖα· Πολυρ<ρ>ήνιοι (H.) by Latte Glotta 34 (1955): 197, who reads λάττα<ς> (Cret. for λάπτας)· μυῖα 'fly'; further λάψις 'gulping down' (Arist.).
•ETYM An onomatopoeic word. In other IE languages, we find Alb. lap 'id.', of dogs, cats, Ru. lópat' 'to devour', Lith. lapènti 'to absorb greedily' (of swines), OE lapian, MHG leffen 'to gulp down', MoHG lappen, MoFr. laper 'id.'. Since λάπτω, λέλαφα may be secondary to λάψω, λάψαι, Schulze KZ 52 (1924): 105 (= Kl. Schr. 372) refers to BSl. synonyms with k, like Lith. làkti, Ru. lokát' 'λάπτειν', to which λάψω, λάψαι (if with IE $k^w$) may correspond. However, as PIE had no a, the word is rather Pre-Greek. See ►λαφύσσω.

λάρδος [m.] 'salted meat' (pap. IV[p]). ◄LW Lat.►
•COMP λαρδηγός 'supplier of λ.' (Abydos V-VI[p]).
•ETYM From Lat. lardum 'id.'; gender after τάριχος [m., n.]? See ►λᾱρῑνός.

λᾱρῑνός [adj.] 'fattened, fat' (Xenoph., Ar., Eratosth.). ◄?►
•DER λαρινεύομαι 'be fattened' (Sophr.).
•ETYM Unclear. Athough it is remarkable that λᾱρῑνός has final stress and a long ī, it recalls Lat. lāridum > lardum (see on ►λάρδος) 'bacon, salted meat'.

λαρινός [m.] name of an unknown sea-fish (Opp. H. 3, 399, H.). ◄?►
•DER λαρινευτής· ἁλιεύς 'fisher', λαριναῖον κύρτον 'fishing net'· οἱ ἁλιεῖς τὸν ἐκ λε<υ>κέας, ἢ μέγαν (H.).
•ETYM Both the long ᾱ and the meaning refute the connection with λάρος 'sea-gull' (as per Strömberg 1943: 120).

λάρκος [m.] 'charcoal-basket' (Ar.). ◄?►
•COMP λαρκ-αγωγός (E. Fr. 283), λαρκο-φορέω (D. C.).
•DER λαρκίον (Poll.) and -ίδιον (Ar.).
•ETYM Because of ναρκίον· ἀσκόν 'bag, wineskin' (H.), it has been derived from *νάρκος by influence of ►λάρναξ. Doubtful. On ναρκίον, cf. ►νάρκη. Fur.: 305[46] compares νάκος 'fleece', which is semantically far-fetched.

λάρναξ, -ᾱκος [f.] 'chest, box, coffer, coffin' (Il.). ◄PG(S)► •COMP λαρνακοφθόρος 'killing in a λ.' (Lyc.).
•DER λαρνάκιον (Sm.).

•ETYM The suffix is seen in other instrument names, like πίναξ, κάμαξ, κλῖμαξ, δίφραξ. Note the gloss νάρναξ· κιβωτός 'id.' (H.) with dissimilation. There is no etymology and the suffix is typically Pre-Greek. This means that the word itself is probably Pre-Greek. Nehring Glotta 14 (1925): 185 points to Λάρνασσος, which is an old name of the Πάρνασσος acc. to EM 655, 5 et al.

λάρος [m.] name of a rapacious sea-bird, perhaps 'sea-gull' (Thompson 1895 s.v.), often metaph. of demagogues (ε 51, Ar., Arist.). ◄ ONOM?►
•DER Cf. λαρίς [f.] 'id.' (AP); perhaps also in σισίλαρος· πέρδιξ. Περγαῖοι 'partridge' (H.).
•ETYM Often considered to be onomatopoeic, e.g. by Pok. 650. Cf. Arm. lor 'quail', with a different vocalism. Perhaps the same word as ►λᾱρός. See ►λῆρος.

λᾱρός [adj.] 'delicious, sweet, fine' (Il.). ◄?►
•ETYM Blanc Glotta 76 (1998): 162-167, connects this word and ►λαρινός with ►ἀπολαύω 'to enjoy, have the benefit of'. Λᾱρός means 'invigorating, reinforcing'. The superlative λαρώτατος shows that the word was contracted from *λαϝαρος or *λαϝερος (the first syllable can be replaced by two short syllables everywhere; Chantraine 1942: 33). The form λᾱρῑνός may simply be derived from λᾱρός.
The root is given by Pok. 665 as lāu̯-*, but cognates are unclear: Slavic lovъ 'dexterous' is hardly cognate on account of the meaning, while W llawen 'merry' points to lau̯-*, which itself points to a non-IE word rather than to $*lh_2eu$-.

λάρυγξ, -υγγος [m.] 'upper part of the windpipe' (Hp., com., Arist., Gal.). ◄PG(S,V)► •DER Diminutive λαρύγγιον (Gal.), -ικός 'rapacious' (Pherecr.) and a few denominatives: 1. λαρυγγ-ίζω [v.] 'to cry loudly' (Ar., D.); 2. -ιάω 'id.' (AP); 3. λαρύζει· βοᾷ· ἀπὸ τοῦ λάρυγγος 'cries; after the λ.' (H.); also 4. λαρύνει, of the dove (Stud. itfilcl. 1, 95; 3, 496). Backformation λαρυγγός· ματαιολόγος 'talking idle' (H.).
•ETYM The suggestion of a cross between φάρυγξ and λαιμός, which have earlier attestations, is found in Strömberg 1944: 59ff., who discusses the meaning. Nevertheless, such crosses should not be posited at random.
Formerly connected with Lat. lurco(r) 'to devour, carouse', MHG slurc 'throat' (Pok. 965f.). Frisk concludes, in accordance with Güntert 1914: 119: "If this analysis is correct, then λάρυγξ must have been reshaped after φάρυγξ in any case." However, in addition to the suffix -υγγ-, the by-form λάρυγος [gen.] (EM 788, 37) confirms Pre-Greek origin (secondary origin is far from convincing; cf. DELG).

λάσανα [n.pl.] 'tripod or stand of a pot', usually 'nightstool' (Hp., com.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Rarely sing. -ον.
•COMP λασανο-φόρος [m.] name of a slave (Plu.).
•DER λασανίτης δίφρος (pap.), mg. unclear; λάανα· ἐπίστατον 'support, stand' (H.).
•ETYM Instrument name in -ανον (Chantraine 1933: 199), but otherwise obscure. Borrowed as Lat. lasanum. On λάσα· τράπεζα πληρεστάτη 'overfull table' (H.), see ►λάσιος. Perhaps Pre-Greek.

λάσαρον [n.] 'ὀπὸς σιλφίου, asafoetida' (Aët., Alex. Trall., H.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also -αρ.

•DER -άριον (Aët.).
•ETYM Unexplained foreign word. Cf. André 1961: 208f. Probably Pre-Greek.

λάσθη [f.] 'insult, mockery' (Hdt. 6, 67, AP 7, 345, H.). ◂PG?▸
•DER Cf. the glosses, all from H.: λάσθω and λασάσθω· χλευαζέτω 'scoff'; λάσθαι· παίζειν 'to joke', ὀλιγωρεῖν 'neglect', λοιδορεῖν 'revile'; λάσθων· κακολογῶν 'speaking badly'; λάσθον· αἰσχρόν 'shameful'; λάσθας· συμφοράς 'misfortunes'. λασθαίνειν· κακολογεῖν (H.).
•ETYM Connection as λάσ-θη with a root *las- as in Lat. las-cīvus 'wanton, luxuriant, lascivious', Skt. lā-las-a- 'greedy' is semantically inadequate. Perhaps Pre-Greek?

λάσιος [adj.] 'shaggy, woolly, overgrown with' (Il.). ◂?▸
•COMP Compounds like λασι-αύχην 'with a hairy neck' (h. Merc.).
•DER λασιών, -ῶνος [m.] 'thicket' (Nic.), also as a TN; λασιῶτις, epithet of ὕλη (Epic. Alex. Adesp.), cf. δενδρῶτις (E.), etc.
•ETYM If it is from *ϝλατ-ι̯ος, λάσιος can be connected with words for hairy things, as in OIr. folt 'hair' < IE uolto-*, OPr. wolti 'ear (of corn)', Lith. váltis 'bunch of oats', Ru. vólot' 'fiber, ear; panicle', SCr. vlât 'ear' < IE uolti-*; acc. to Solmsen KZ 42 (1909): 214[4], the Gm. group of MoHG Wald 'forest' < IE uóltu-* belongs here as well. If from u̯l̥ti̯o-* < IE ult-io-*, λάσιος would differ from the words mentioned in root ablaut. Speculations by Blanc RPh. 73 (1999). See ►λάχνη.

λάσκω [v.] 'to ring, crack' (only for λακεῖν), 'to splash' (-ληκέω), 'to bang' (λᾱκέω), 'to shout, scream, speak loudly' (A., E., Ar.); for the mg. see Björck 1950: 280ff. ◂?▸
•VAR Lengthened λασκάζει· φλυαρεῖ, θωπεύει 'talks nonsense, flatters' (H.), ἐπι-ληκέω (θ 379), (δια-)λᾱκέω (Ar. Nu. 410, Theoc., Act. Ap. 1, 18), λᾰκάζω (A.), also λάω in (ὀξὺ) λάων? (cf. s.v. ►λάω), aor. λᾰκεῖν (Il., trag.), λελᾰκέσθαι (h. Merc.), λᾰκῆσαι (Ar. Pax 382), -λᾱκῆσαι (Ar. Nu. 410), fut. λακήσομαι (Ar. Pax 381, 384), perf. λέληκα (X 141), λέλᾱκα (A. [lyr.], E., Ar.).
•DER 1. From λακεῖν: λάκος· ἦχος, ψόφος 'cry'; λακερόν· ἠχαῖον 'resounding', cod. εἰκαῖον (H.), λακέρυζα 'screaming', of κορώνη (Hes.), also κύων; secondarily -ζος (Schwyzer: 473, 472[3]); thence λακερύζω, -ομαι (EM, H., Phot., Suid.), but see on λαγκύζεσθαι; λακέτᾱς (λᾱκ-?) 'kind of cicada' (Ael.; cf. Gil Emerita 25 (1957): 318); λάκημα 'fragment' (cf. Björck 1950: 282). 2. From ληκέω, λᾱκέω: Λακητήρ spit of land of Cos (Fraenkel Nom. ag. 1: 162); Ληκήτρια [f.] name of a goddess (Lyc. 1391) belongs here too, acc. to Schwyzer RhM 75 (1926): 448 (codd. Ληκτηρ-); ληκητής 'cryer' and λᾱκεδόνες [f.pl.] 'shouting' (Timo).
•ETYM The system was created starting from the pair λᾰκεῖν : λέλᾱκα, -ηκα (cf. κρᾰγεῖν : κέκρᾱγα, etc.). From λᾰκεῖν: λάσκω < *λάκ-σκω, λᾰκάζω, λᾰκῆσαι, λελᾰκέσθαι; from λέλᾱκα, -ηκα: λᾱκέω, ληκέω, λᾱκῆσαι, as well as perhaps ►λάω. The form λακήσομαι admits both interpretations, as the quantity is uncertain.
No etymology.

λάσται [f.] · πόρναι 'whores' (H.). ◂PG(O)▸
•DER Further λάσταυρος 'κίναιδος, catamite' (Theopomp., AP), ἡμι-λάσταυρος (Men.). Shortened form λάστρις (EM 159, 30).

•ETYM λάσταυρος was hardly formed after κένταυρος (as per Frisk), in spite of the gloss κένταυροι· ... καὶ οἱ παιδερασται (H.). Fur.: 383 connects λασιτός· κίναιδος and λεσιτός· πόρνη. The element λασ-/λασι-/λεσι- is clearly Pre-Greek, and probably represents *lat^y- or *las^y-. Therefore, it is unrelated to ►λιλαίομαι.

λᾰ́ταξ 1, -αγος [f.] 'drop of wine, dregs of wine (also in the game of kottabos)' (Alc., com.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Mostly plur. -αγες, sing. also -άγη.
•DER λαταγέω (Luc. Lex. 3), λατάσσω (Dor. vase-inscr.) [v.] 'to throw away the dregs (=λάταγες)', λαταγεῖον 'vase into which the λ.s fall' (Suid.).
•ETYM Borrowed as Lat. latex, -icis 'fluidity', and reshaped after other nouns in -ex. The -σσ- in λατάσσω may be analogical and does not necessarily point to a variation γ : κ (Schwyzer 496). Still, the word is probably Pre-Greek, in view of the suffix -αγ- and the semantic field (viticulture).

λάταξ 2, -αγος [f.] name of a quadruped that lives in the water, perhaps 'beaver' (Arist. HA). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Unexplained. Perhaps somehow connected with λάταξ 1? Cf. Keller 1909: 186. Like its homonym, this word is probably Pre-Greek.

λατμενεία [f.] · δουλεία 'slavery' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Contamination of ἀτμενία and λατρεία has been assumed, e.g. in Fraenkel Glotta 32 (1953): 24. Such proposed cross-forms are doubtful. Fur.: 392 points to other instances of variation λ- / zero; therefore, the word is most probably Pre-Greek.

λατραβός [adj.] · λαμυρός 'gluttonous, lascivious' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also λατραβῶν· ἀλαζονευόμενος 'boastful' (H.); ἐλατράβιζον· τὸ βωμολοχεύειν καὶ πανουργεῖν λατραβίζειν ἔλεγον 'to play low and villainous tricks' (H.); λατραβίζειν· ἐσπουδασμένως καὶ ἀσήμως λαλεῖν 'to talk hastily and [therefore] meaningless' (H.); cf. λατραπία· λαμυρία μετὰ ἐρυθριάσεως 'voluptuousness with blushing' (H.). Also λάτραψ· ὑετός 'rain, shower' (H.), cf. λαῖλαψ with similar mg.
•ETYM Fur.: 199 proposes to connect the following as well: λατράζειν· βαρβαρίζειν 'to speak incomprehensibly' (H.), λαθροῦν· βλάπτειν 'to hinder, damage' (H.), λαιθαρυζειν· λαμυρῶσαι, διαπράξασθαι 'to be wanton or gluttonous, get something done (by seduction?)' (H.), and λαιθυράζω. These attempts are uncertain. However, the forms with λατραβ/π- are clearly Pre-Greek, because of the interchange they display.

λάτρον [n.] 'payment, hire' (A. Supp. 1011), = μισθός (Suid., EM). ◂PG▸ •DER λάτρις, -ιος [m., f.] 'hired servant, handmaid' (Thgn., S., E.); λάτριος 'ptng. to a hired servant or to the payment, etc.' (Pi., Man.); λατρεύω, El. -είω [v.] 'to serve (for wages), serve a god (with prayer and sacrifice)' (Sol., Olympia VI[a], trag., Isoc., X.), with λατρεία (trag., Pl., LXX, Ep. Rom., etc.), λατρεύματα [pl.] (S., E.) 'service, worship', λατρευ-τός (LXX), -τικός (Ptol.) 'ptng. to a servant, obedient'; λατρεύς 'servant' (Lyc.), from λατρεύω or λάτρον; λατρώδης 'obedient' (Vett. Val.).

•ETYM As a North-West Greek word, λάτρον and derivatives were originally unknown in Aeolic and Ionic, and even in Attic (see Bechtel 1921, 1: 207, Kretschmer Glotta 17 (1929): 79). There is no convincing IE connection. Usually, λά-τρον is considered to contain a zero grade of words in Gm., BSl., and IIr., which go back to a full grade IE lē(i)-* 'provide, gain' (Pok. 665). However, this is impossible, as a root lē-* = leh*$_1$- could never yield Greek λα-. Therefore, we can be quite sure that the word is of Pre-Greek origin.
From Hell. *λάτρων was borrowed Lat. latrō 'hired soldier'.

λατύσσομαι [v.] 'clap, strike with the wings' (Opp.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Expressive formation in -ύσσω (cf. αἰθύσσω, πτερύσσομαι), but otherwise unclear. The word λατάσσω (see ►λάταξ 1) is conceptually too far off.

λαυκανίη [f.] 'throat' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Later usually λευ-, see below.
•ETYM Formation like ἀρτηρία, etc., from an unattested *λαύκ-ανον (or -ανος, -άνη). An aspirated by-form appears in λαυχάνη· γλῶσσα 'tongue, language' (H.). Since there are no certain correspondences (Lith. liaukà 'gland' has been proposed, but does not convince), and as there is a variant with -χ-, Pre-Greek origin is almost certain. The form in λευκ- (v.l. in Hom.) may be folk-etymological after λευκός, but may also be due to substrate origin.

λαύρα [f.] 'narrow street, narrow passage, alley, quarter' (Il.). ◂PG▸
•VAR Ion. -ρη.
•COMP διάλαυρος· οἰκία μεγάλη πανταχόθεν λαύραις διειλημμένη 'a large house surrounded by narrow streets on all sides' (H.).
•DER Perhaps Λαύρειον (-εον, -ιον) [n.], a mount in Attica with famous silvermines (Hdt., Th.), after the mine galleries?; in H. also λαῦρον· μέταλλον ἀργύρου παρὰ Ἀθηναίοις 'a silvermine (Athens)'. Adjective Λαυρε(ι)ωτικός 'belonging to Λ.' (Ar.).
•ETYM Used to be connected with λᾶας 'stone', and further with Alb. lerë, -a 'rock-slip', but this comparison must be dropped, as ►λᾶας did not have a -w-. Doubts already in Schwyzer: 481 and 578[1]. The word is no doubt Pre-Greek (note the name of the mountain).

λάφῡρα [n.pl.] 'booty' (IA). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Also -ον [sg.].
•COMP As a first member in e.g. λαφυρο-πώλης [m.] 'who sells booty' (X.).
•DER λαφυρεύω (LXX), -έω (Aq.) [v.] 'to plunder'.
•ETYM The traditional analysis as a suffix -ρ-, added to a u-stem from the root of Skt. lábhate 'to take, seize', is wrong. The word has the suffix -ῡρ-, which is Pre-Greek (Pre-Greek: Suffixes).

λαφύσσω [v.] 'to swallow, gulp down' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aor. λαφύξαι.
•DER λαφυγμός (com., AP), λάφυξις (Ath.), λαφύγματα [pl.] (epigr.) 'gluttony'; λαφύκτης 'gourmand' (Arist.); also λαφύστιος 'gluttonous, devoured' (Lyc.), cf. Ζεὺς Λαφύστιος (Hdt. 7, 197; from Λαφύστιον ὄρος in Boeotia), in whose cult human sacrifices occurred.
•ETYM Formation in -ύσσω related to ►λάπτω as a Pre-Greek word. Fur.: 225 also connects it with ►λαῖλαψ 'storm, hurricane', ►λαμυρός 'voracious, eager', and the family of λαιφός 'impudent'.

λαχαίνω [v.] 'to dig' (A. R., Call., prefixed since ω 242). ◂PG?(S)▸ •VAR Aor. λαχῆναι.
•COMP Also with ἀμφι-, ἐκ-, δια-.
•DER λάχανον [n.], usually -α [pl.], 'garden-herbs, vegetables' (IA); often as a first member, e.g. λαχανο-πώλης 'greengrocer' (Critias, pap.).
Thence: 1. diminutives λαχάνιον (D. L., pap.), -ίδιον (H.). 2. λαχανική, -όν 'taxes on vegetables' (Inscr. Magn., Sammelb.), λαχανάριον· herbarium (gloss.). 3. λαχαν-ᾶς (Hdn. Gr.), -εύς (Procl.) 'greengrocer'. 4. λαχαν-ώδης (Arist., Thphr.), -ηρός (Thphr.), -ιος (Jul., Ostr.) 'ptng. to vegetables'. 5. λαχανεύω [v.] 'to plant, cultivate, harvest vegetables' (pap., Str., App.) with λαχανεία 'cultivation, etc. of vegetables' (LXX, pap., J.), also λαχαν-ιά 'gardenbed' (H., sch., also pap., but cf. Scheller 1951: 68f.); λαχάνευ-μα 'cultivation of vegetables' (Procl.), -τής 'greengrocer' (pap.). 6. λαχανίζομαι, -ω [v.] 'to harvest vegetables, graze (of horses)' (EM, Hippiatr.), with -ισμός (Th., pap., Hippiatr.). Doubtful is λαχή in A. Th. 914 (lyr.): τάφων πατρῴων λαχαί 'the digging of the forefathers' graves' (sch.), which should rather be read as λάχαι to ►λαγχάνω, s.v.
•ETYM The substantive for 'vegetables' is probably of Pre-Greek origin, as suggested by the suffix -ανον. The denominative simplex λαχαίνω, which has only late attestations, is probably a back-formation from compounded forms; cf. especially ἀμφι-λαχαίνω (ω 242). See the remarks by Perpillou in DELG Supp. and Perpillou RPh. 73 (1999): 96.

λάχεια [adj.] epithet of νῆσος 'island' (ι 116), ἀκτή 'cape' (κ 509), v.l. ἐλάχεια (see ἐλαχύς for the accent; cf. Schwyzer: 474[1], Chantraine 1942: 191). Mg. uncertain, explained by H. as εὔσκαφος καὶ εὔγειος, παρὰ τὸ λαχαίνεσθαι, ὅ ἐστι σκάπτεσθαι πυκνῶς 'easy to cultivate, with good soil, after λ., which means to dig in dense rows'. ◂?▸
•ETYM The commentary by H. is folk etymology. The connection with a Gm. adjective for 'low, flat' (ON lágr, MHG lǣge) must be wrong, as these presuppose IE leh*$_1\acute{g}^h$-, from which form the Greek -α- cannot be understood. Following this etymology, modern interpreters have understood λάχεια as 'low, flat', which does not fit ἀκτή at all. In sum, no etymology.

λάχνη [f.] 'woolly hair, down' (Il.), metaph. of leafage (Nic., Opp.). ◂IE u(o)lḱ-* 'hair'▸ •VAR Rarely λάχνῳ [dat.sg.], of the wool of a sheep (ι 445).
•COMP λαχνό-γυιος 'with hairy members' (E.).
•DER λαχν-ήεις, -ᾶεις (Il., Pi.), -ώδης (E.), -αῖος (AP) 'woolly, hairy, shaggy'; λαχνόομαι [v.] 'to become hairy' (sol., AP) with λάχνωσις (Hp.).
•ETYM Reconstructed as *λακ-σν-ᾱ and corresponding with an Iranian and Slavic word for 'hair' via a pre-form ϝλακ-σν-ᾱ < IE ulḱ-sn-eh$_2$: Av. varəsa- [m., n.], MoP gurs, OCS vlasъ, Ru. vólos, all from IE uolḱ-o-*. Less probable, because of the meaning, is the connection with OCS vlakno, Ru. voloknó 'thread', Skt. valká- [m.] 'bark, sap-wood', from IE uolk-*. See ►λάσιος.

λάω [v.] mg. unclear, cf. λάε· ἐψόφησεν, οἱ δὲ ἐφθέγγετο 'cried, uttered', λαήμενάι and λαίειν· φθέγγεσθαι, but λάετε· σκοπεῖτε, βλέπετε 'look, see' (H.). ◂?▸
•VAR Only ptc. λάων (τ 229 κύων, h. Merc. 360 αἰετός), ipf. λάε (τ 230 κύων).
•ETYM The ancient interpreters of τ 229f. hesitated between 'see' (βλέπων) and 'bark' (ὑλάων). In modern times, Lobeck has proposed a meaning 'grasp' and two different verbs: 1. 'seize' (τ 229f., completely isolated), 2. 'see' (h. Merc. 360), the last of which was also seen in ►ἀλαός and in Skt. lasati (epic class.) 'to glow' (see Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἀλαός).
Leumann 1950: 233ff. takes ὀξὺ λάων (h. Merc., 'crying loudly') as an innovation from ὀξὺ λεληκώς (κίρκος X 141), which was wrongly analyzed as λε-λη-κώς (but belongs to ►λάσκω), and then interpreted as 'having sharp sight' on the one hand, and connected with a barking dog on the other.

λεβηρίς 1, -ίδος [f.] 'skin or slough of serpents' (Hp., J.), acc. to H. also = τὸ λέπος τοῦ κυάμου 'skin of a bean'; proverbially of empty or thin objects (com.), cf. H. τινὲς δὲ ἄνδρα λέβηριν γενέσθαι πτωχόν 'beggar'. ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM The IE analysis in Frisk seems misplaced. It is rather a Pre-Greek word, because the suffix is also found in ►ἴμβηρις and κύπηρις (s.v. ►κύπαιρος). Note λέβινθοι (cod. -ίνθιοι)· ἐρέβινθοι 'chick-peas' (H.); see also ►λεβίας and ►λέβης.

λεβηρίς 2 [f.] 'rabbit' (Str. 3, 2, 6); Massaliotic acc. to Polemarch. apud Erot. ◂LW Iberia▸ •ETYM Of Iberian origin, like Lat. lepus and laurex, see WH s.vv. with litt. See also Fur.: 347.

λέβης, -ητος [m.] 'kettle, cauldron' (Il.), on the mg. Brommer Herm. 77 (1942): 359 and 366f., also a monetary unit (Crete), see Leumann 1950: 282ff., Ruijgh 1957: 107. ◂PG(S)▸ •COMP ἰπνολέβης 'kettle' (Luc., Ath.).
•DER Diminutive λεβήτ-ιον, -ίσκος (IV[a]), -άριον (Poll.); λεβητ-ώδης 'kettle-shaped' (Ath.); -ίζω [v.] 'to cook in a kettle' (Lyc.).
•ETYM On the suffix, see Fur.: 172[118]. Pre-Greek origin is most likely; cf. ►κελέβη.

λεβίας, -ου [m.] name of an unknown freshwater fish (Hell. com.); acc. to H. also = τὰ λεπίδας ἔχοντα ταρίχη 'dried meat of a fish having scales'. ◂PG?(O)▸ •ETYM Formation like ἀκανθίας, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 94); otherwise unclear. Thompson 1947 s.v. recalls the Eg. fish ἀλ(λ)άβης (Str., Ath.), but see ►ἀλλάβης. Perhaps Pre-Greek.

λέγνον [n.] 'colored edging, hem of a cloth' (Poll., H., sch.), also of the side of the womb (Hp.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Also -νη [f.].
•DER λεγνωτός 'provided with λ.' (Call., Nic.), λεγνώδεις· ποικίλας 'varicolored', λεγνῶσαι· ποικῖλαι (H.).
•ETYM No etymology. Perhaps Pre-Greek.

λέγαι epithet of γυναῖκες (Archil. 179). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM LSJ cite it as λέγος 'lewd'. Fur.: 346 connects it with λάγνος. Is it Pre-Greek? See ►ἐλεγαίνειν.

λέγω [v.] 'to collect, gather' (Il.; Att. prose only with prefix), 'to count, recount' (Il.), 'say' (post-Hom.). On use, mg. and inflexion see Fournier 1946: 53ff., 100ff., Chantraine BSL 41 (1940-1941): 39ff., Wackernagel 1916: 220ff. Beside it stand the synonymous and suppletive verbs ἀγορεύω, φημί, εἰπεῖν, ἐρῶ, εἴρηκα (see Seiler Glotta 32 (1952): 154f.). ◂IE leǵ-* 'collect'▸ •VAR Aor. λέξαι, -ασθαι (epic ἐλέγμην, λέκτο), pass. λεχθῆναι, fut. λέξω, -ομαι, perf. λέλεγμαι, δι-είλεγμαι, συν-είλοχα (ει analogical).
•COMP Very often with prefixes like δια-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, κατα-, συν-.
•DER 1. λόγος [m.] 'computation, account, esteem, reason; speech, word, statement' (O 393, α 56); see Fournier 1946: 217ff., Boeder Archiv für Begriffsgeschichte 4 (1959): 82ff.; also from prefixed compounds, e.g. διά-, κατά-, ἐπί-, σύλ-λογος (to διαλέγομαι, etc.), also in hypostases like ἀνά-, παρά-λογος (to ἀνὰ, παρὰ λόγον).
From λόγος: a. diminutives: λογ-ίδιον, -άριον (Att.), -αρίδιον (pap.). b. adjectives: λογάς [m., f.] 'selected', substantivized 'choice soldier, etc.' (IA), semantically rather to λέγω, cf. Chantraine 1933: 351; λόγιος 'notable' (Pi., etc.), τὸ λόγιον 'oracle' (IA); on the development of mg. E. Orth, Logios (Leipzig 1926); λόγιμος 'worth mention, notable' (Hdt., pap.), usually ἐλλόγιμος (to ἐν λόγῳ); λογικός 'regarding reason, etc., logical' (Philol., Hell.); λογαῖος 'chosen' (Str. 1, 3, 18; after Ibyc. 22), perhaps to λογή, see 2.; c. λογάδην [adv.] 'by accidental selection' (Th.; cf. λογάς). d. substantives: λογεύς [m.] 'orator, prose writer' (Critias, Plu., sch.) with λογεῖον 'speakers' place, scene' (Delos III[a]); κατα-, ἐκ-, συλ-λογεύς from κατάλογος, ἐκλογή, etc.; e. verbs: λογίζομαι [v.] 'to count, calculate, consider, estimate' (IA), often with prefix, ἀνα-, etc., with λογ-ισμός, -ισμα, -ιστής, -ιστεύω, -ιστικός, etc.; λογεύω [v.] 'to collect taxes', also with ἐπι-, ἐκ-, (pap., inscr.), with λογεία, λόγ-ευμα, -ευτής, -ευτήριον.
2. λογή [f.] 'reasoning, way' (= MoGr.; only late pap.; LSJ and DELG translate 'attention, heed'); isolated from compounds with ἐκ-, κατα-, συν-, δια-, etc. (IA, etc.)?
3. λέξις [f.] 'reason, way of speech, diction, style, (specific) word, phrase', also with δια-, ἐκ-, κατα-, (Att., etc.); thence λεξίδιον, -εί- (Arr., Gal.), Lat. lexīdium; see Leumann Sprache 1 (1949): 205; λεξικόν (scil. βιβλίον) 'containing λέξεις, lexicon' (AB, Phot.).
4. λέγμα· τὸ εἰπεῖν 'speaking' (H.), ἐπίλεγμα 'excerpt' (pap.), κατά-λεγμα 'tragic song' (Sm., Al.), cf. καταλέγεσθαι· ὀδύρεσθαι τὸν τεθνεῶτα 'to bewail the deceased' (H.).
5. διάλεκτος (to δια-λέγομαι) 'speech, dialect' (IA) with (δια-, ἐκ-)λεκτικός 'capable of speaking, etc.' (Att., etc.: λέξις, λέγω).

•ETYM The thematic root present λέγω, from which all stem forms and nominal derivatives are derived, is identical with Lat. legō 'to collect, etc.'. Also related is Alb. mb-ledh 'to collect, harvest', which points to a palatal -ǵ-. A synonymous root les-* is found in Germanic, Baltic, and Hittite, e.g. MoHG lesen, Go. lisan 'to collect, harvest', Lith. lèsti, 1sg. lesù 'to pick, eat picking' (beside lasýti 'to collect, select'), Hitt. lešš-^{zi} / lišš- 'to pick, gather', (Hitt. līšāe-^{zi} is unclear; cf. Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.), but the relation between les-* and leǵ-* is unclear. See ►λώγη.

λεία [f.] 'booty, spoils', especially of plundered cattle, of war, of hunting, also 'cattle, herd' (Att.); cf. Edgerton AmJPh. 46 (1926): 177f. ⊲IE leh$_2$u-* 'capture, seize'⊳ •VAR Ion. ληΐη, Dor. (Pi. O. 10, 44) λᾱ́α [f.]; also ληΐς (Dor. λαΐς), -ίδος [f.] (Il.).
•COMP Compounds like λε-ηλατέω [v.] 'to drive away prey, especially cattle; to pillage' (Hdt., S., E., X.), after βο-, ἱππ-ηλατέω, etc. from βο-, ἱππ-ηλά-της) with λεηλασ-ία, -ίη (X., A. R.), -άτησις (Aen. Tact.); ἀγε-λείη [f.] epithet of Athena: 'who provides booty' (Il.).
•DER ληϊάς [f.] 'the seized or captured one' (Υ 193, A. R.); ληΐτις [f.] 'ἀγελείη' (Κ 460), 'ληϊάς' (A. R., Lyc.); ληΐδιος 'belonging to the booty, captured' (AP, APl.).
Denominative verb ληΐζομαι, λεΐζομαι 'to seize, plunder' (Il.), whence several nouns: 1. ληϊστός, λεϊστός 'to be carried off as booty' (Ι 406, 408); 2. ληϊστύς [f.] 'capturing, plundering' (Hdt. 5, 6); 3. *ληισμός in λη(ι)σμαδία· αἰχμάλωτος, λεληισμένη 'captive, prisoner of war' (H.); 4. ληϊστήρ, ληστήρ [m.] 'plunderer, pirate, robber', fem. λῄστειρα (Ael.), ληστρίς (D., Herod.), with ληστρικός 'plundering' (IA), cf. ληστικός below; ληστή-ριον, Dor. λᾳσ- 'gang or den of robbers, robbery' (Att., Cret.), λᾳστήριοι [pl.] 'pirate' (Hell. poetry); 5. ληΐστωρ, λῄσ- 'id.' (ο 427); 6. ληϊστής, λησ-, λᾳσ- 'id.' (IA) with ληστικός (often interchanged with ληστρικός); ληστεύω [v.] 'to rob, plunder', with ληστεία 'robbery' (Att.).
•ETYM The abstract λεία, ληΐη (from *λᾱϝ-ία) and the ιδ-derivation ληΐς (from *λᾱϝ-ίδ-) that exists alongside it may either go back to a noun *λᾱϝ(-ο)- vel sim., or directly to a verbal root, the zero-grade of which is supposed in ►ἀπολαύω. See further ►λᾱρός and ►λήϊον.

λείβω [v.] 'to pour, drip, make a libation' (Il.). ⊲IE? leh$_x$-i-, lei- 'pour out, drip'⊳ •VAR Aor. λεῖψαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. κατα-, ἐπι-.
•DER A. λειβῆνος· ὁ Διόνυσος (H.), λείβηθρον (λίβ-) [n.] 'wet place, gutter' (Eup. 428), λείβδην 'in drops' (EM).
B. Ablauting: λοιβή [f.] 'libation' (Il.) with λοιβ-εῖον (Plu.), -ίς (Antim., inscr.), -άσιον (Epich.) 'vase for libations', -αῖος 'ptng. to libation' (Ath.); λοιβᾶται· σπένδει, θύει 'makes a libation, sacrifices' (H.), cf. below.
C. Zero-grade: 1. *λιψ [f.] 'libation, drop', only in gen. λιβός, acc. λίβα (A., A. R.), with λιβηρός 'wet' (Hp. apud Gal.); 2. λίψ, λιβός [m.] "the dripper", name of the rain-bringing southwest or west wind, also of the point of the compass: 'southwest, west' (Hdt., Arist.), with λιβικός '(south)westerly' (pap.). For λίψ· ... πέτρα, ἀφ' ἧς ὕδωρ στάζει 'rock from which water drips' (H.), cf. ►αἰγίλιψ. 3. From λίψ: λιβάς, -άδος [f.] 'spring, etc.' (trag., etc.), diminutive λιβάδιον (Str., Plu.), also 'χωρίον βοτανῶδες', i.e. 'wet meadow' (H., EM); λιβάζω, -άζομαι [v.] 'to drip' (AP, Poll.), with ἀπο- metaph. 'to throw away, remove oneself' (com.). 4. λίβος [n.] = λιβάς (A. Ch. 448 [lyr.], Gal.). On ►λιβρός, see s.v.

•ETYM The zero grade primary noun λίψ is unexpected beside the regelar full grade thematic λείβω, whence λεῖψαι. One compares νείφει : νίφα, while evidence of the gloss λίβει· σπένδει, ἐκχύνει 'libates, pours out' (H.) must be considered uncertain. Lat. lībāre 'pour out, spill' may either be a borrowing from Greek (LIV^2 s.v. 2. leiH-), or be unrelated in case it derives from the root h$_2$lib^h- 'to anoint' (De Vaan 2008 s.v. lībō). In the former case, the root is considered that of OCS liti, 1sg. lьję, lějǫ 'to pour', Lith. líeti, 1sg. líeju, assuming that the Greek -β- is secondary, e.g. after ►εἴβω 'to drip'. λαβά· σταγών 'drop' (H.) may be a mistkae for λοιβά (DELG).

λείμαξ, -ακος [?] 'slug', only H. s.v. λείμακες (cf. λειμών): ἔστι δὲ καὶ ζῷον ὅμοιον κοχλίᾳ, ὅ καλοῦσι λείμακα 'there is also an animal similar to the snail, which is called λ.'. ⊲IE? lei-*⊳ •ETYM Identical with Lat. līmāx (Pl.) 'id.' (which is probably a Greek loan), but also with Ru. slimák 'snake' and other Slavic words. Thus, it has to be a derivative in -āk- of the m-stem seen in Gm. (ON slím 'slime', also OHG, OE; Lat. līmus 'id.'. Since IE did not have a suffix -eh$_2$k-*, it is highly improbable that there is a direct connection between the Slavic and Greek forms.

λειμών, -ῶνος [m.] 'moist, grassy place, humid meadow' (Il.), metaph. of flowered surfaces and objects (Ach. Tat., Philostr.). ⊲IE? lei-mōn*, acc. li-men-m*, gen. li-mn-os*⊳ •COMP βαθυλείμων (Pi.), -λειμος (Il.), with transition to the o-stems, 'with grassy meadows'; ἀ-λίμενος 'without harbour or refuge' (Att.).
•DER λειμώνιος 'of the meadow' (A., Arist.), fem. -ιάς (S., A. R.), -ίς (D. P.), -ιον [n.] plant name, 'Statice limonium' (Dsc., Plin.); λειμων-ιάτης λίθος name of a stone green as grass (Plin.). With change of suffix (after πῖδαξ, βῶλαξ, etc.): λεῖμαξ, -ακος [f.] 'meadow' (E. [lyr.]), 'garden' (Pherecr.), with -ακώδης 'meadow-like, grassy' (Hp.), -ακίδες νύμφαι (Orph. A. 646; uncertain; codd. λιμνακίδων).
With different ablaut: λιμήν, -ένος [m.] 'harbour, protected creek', also metaph. 'refuge' (Il.), 'gathering place, marketplace' (Thess.; acc. to H. also Cypr.; cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 450f.). Diminutive λιμένιον (Str.; MoGr. λιμάνι is from Osman. liman; see Maidhof Glotta 10 (1920): 14); λιμένιος 'belonging to the harbour' (Paus.), λιμενίτης, fem. -ῖτις 'inhabitant of a harbour' (Corycos), of Priapos and Artemis, respectively, as deities of the harbour (AP, see Redard 1949: 23), λιμεν-ητικὰ χρήματα 'harbour taxes' (Cod. Just.), with analogical -ητικά, if not itacistic for -ιτικά), λιμεν-ίζω [v.] 'to build a harbour' (Polyaen.).
With a zero grade suffix, enlarged after the ᾱ-stems: λίμνη [f.] 'stagnant water, pond, lake, marsh' (Il.), Λίμναι [pl.] place in Athens, in Sparta, etc. (Att.); compounds like εὔ-λιμνος 'with many lakes' (Arist.). Thence many derivatives: 1. diminutive λιμνίον [n.] (Arist.). 2. λιμναῖος 'living in lakes, etc., belonging to the lake' (IA); 3. λιμνάς [f.] 'id.' (Theoc., Paus.). 4. λιμνήτης, -τις (-ῖτις) 'id.' (Theoc., Paus., inscr.), λιμνιτικά [n.pl.] name of a tax (pap.). 5. λιμνώδης 'like a lake or marsh' (IA). 6. plantname :

λιμν-ήσιον, -ησία, -ηστις, -ηστρον, -ηστρίς (Dsc., Gal.). 7. Denominative verbs: λιμνάζω 'to build a λ.; to stagnate, put under water' (Arist.), with λιμνασμός 'flood, inundation', -αστής 'surveyor of the inundation', -αστεία 'inundation works' (pap.), -ασία 'marshy ground' (Arist.); λιμνόομαι [v.] 'to build a λ.' (Thphr., Str.).
•ETYM The primary formations λειμών and λιμήν, λίμνη show old ablaut in both stem and suffix. They are isolated in Greek, and have no outer-Greek counterpart. One might start from an old paradigm nom. lei-mōn*, acc. li-men-m*, gen. li-mn-os*. For the etymology, only suppositions are at hand. Starting from the idea 'moistness, standing water, etc.', it has been connected with Lat. līmus 'mud', to which may belong the words mentioned under λείμαξ with anlauting sl-. Also, words mentioned s.v. ►λείβω, e.g. Lith. líeti, might be considered as well. Pok. 309 defends connection with Lat. līmus 'oblique', līmen 'threshold', and without m-suffix, e.g. Latv. leja 'dale, valley', assuming a basic sense of *'dip, low place, bay'.

λεῖος [adj.] 'level, smooth', of the soil, of surfaces, etc. (Il.), also 'rubbed, well-ground' (Delos, pap., Dsc.), cf. λε(ι)αίνω, -όω below. ◄IE? lei-* 'smooth'?►
•VAR λείως [adv.] (also λέως after τελέως, ἡδέως, etc., cf. also λε(ι)αίνω below) 'smoothly', also metaph. 'completely, totally' (IA), cf. Lat. plānē, MoHG glatt.
•COMP Frequent as a first member, like in λειό-φλοιος 'with smooth bark' (Thphr.), also with adverbial value (with -ω- after λε(ί)ως), e.g. λειώλης = πανώλης (Rhodos VI[a]), λεω-κόνιτος 'turned into fine dust', -κόρητος 'swept clean', i.e. 'utterly destroyed' (Theognost., H., Phot.), λεω-πάτητος 'completely trodden down' (S. Ant. 1275 with v.l. λακ-πάτητος, see ►λάξ); cf. further λεωργός = πανοῦργος, κακοῦργος (Archil. 88, 3, A. Pr. 5, X.), see Chantraine Glotta 33 (1954): 25ff.
•DER λειότης [f.] 'smoothness' (Att.), λείαξ 'beardless boy' (EM, H.); two denominatives: λε(ι)αίνω [v.] 'to smoothen, grind' (Il.), also with ἐκ-, συν-, ἀπο-, etc. Thence λε(ί)αν-σις, -τήρ, -τικός, ἐκλεα-σμός, etc. (Arist.); further λειόω [v.] 'id.' (Arist.), also συν-, ἀπο-, etc.; thence λείω-μα 'powder' (Thphr.); -σις 'grinding' (Gal.).
•ETYM Beside the o-stem in *λεῖϝος, Latin has an i-stem lēvis 'smooth', which may have replaced an older u-stem (cf. brevis). Schrijver 1991: 283f. proposed that *λεῖϝος and lēvis go back on a u-stem leh₁i-u-*, with secondary thematicization in Greek. The root is also found in λῖτός and cognates (see ►λίς 2), and probably in ►λείμαξ.

λείπω [v.] 'to leave (behind)', intr. 'to be wanting, disappear', med. 'to depart' (Il.). ◄IE leikʷ-* 'leave behind'► •VAR λιμπάνω (Sapph., Hp., Th., v.l. Λ 604), fut. λείψω, aor. λιπεῖν, perf. λέλοιπα, med. λέλειμμαι (all Il.+), aor. pass. λειφθῆναι (h. Merc., Pi.), aor. λεῖψαι (Ar.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐκ-, ἐν-, κατα-, ὑπο-. As a first member in several governing compounds, partly with privative mg., like λιπό-τεκνος 'childless' (Pi.), see Schwyzer: 442. On the formation of the stem see Sommer 1948: 124f. Also with inversion of the members, like in σαρκο-λιπής (AP) for λιπό-σαρκος (Hp.). Also note λειψ(ι)- in λειψ-υδρ-ία 'lack of water' (Thphr.), etc.

•DER Substantives: 1. λεῖμμα (ὑπό-, κατά-, ἔλ-, etc.) 'rest' (IA, Arist.). 2. λεῖψις (ἔκ-, ἀπό-, etc.) 'leaving, continuing absence' (IA). 3. λείψανον, mostly plur. -α 'remainder' (E., Ar., Pl.). 4. ἐκλειπ-ία 'lack' (J.).
Adjectives: 5. λοιπός (also ὑπό-, κατά-, etc. from ὑπο-λείπω, etc.) 'remaining' (post-Hom.), with (ὑπο)λοιπ-άς [f.] 'rest' (pap.), ἀπολοιπ-ασία 'id.' (Hero, pap.). 6. ἐκ-, ἐν-, ὑπο-λιπ-ής, etc. (v.l. -λειπής) 'lacking, remaining, etc.' (Att.). 7. ἐκ-, ἐν-, παρα-, ὑπο-λειπτικός 'regarding the ἔκλειψις' (Hell.).
Apart stands λίσσωμεν· ἐάσωμεν 'let us leave/depart' (H.); the explanation is dubious, cf. Schwyzer: 692.
•ETYM The thematic root aorist ἔ-λιπ-ε has exact parallels in Arm. e-likʻ, Skt. áricat, from IE h₁é-likʷ-e-t* 'he left'. An old perfect (le-)loikʷ-h₂e* is continued in Skt. riréca, λέλοιπα, and (without reduplication) in Germanic (e.g. Go. laihv) and Lat. līquī. The nasal present λιμπάνω best resembles Arm. lkʻ-an-em < IE likʷ-n-*; nasal presents of various formation are found elsewhere too, e.g. Skt. riṇákti, Lat. linquō. The thematic root present λείπω corresponds to the Gm. verb in e.g. Go. leihvan, OHG līhan 'to let, lend', and to Lith. liekù 'to let'. The last stands for older athematic liekmì. The Gm. present may go back to a nasalized liŋhu-*, which would correspond to Lat. linquō. For the various formations, see now LIV² s.v. leikʷ-*.
The correspondence of λοιπός with the substantives Skt. ati-reka- [m.], Lith. ãt-laikas, OCS otъ-lěkъ 'remainder' < IE -loikʷ-o-* is noteworthy.

λείριον [n.] 'lily, Lilium candidum' (h. Cer. 427, Hp., A. R., Thphr., Dsc.; λείριον ἄνθεμον Pi.), also 'narciss' (Thphr., Dsc.). ◄PG(O)► •COMP As a second member in the PN Ποδα-λείριος (Il.).
•DER λείρινος 'prepared from lilies' (Dsc., Gal.), also 'lily-like' (ἄνθος, Thphr. HP 3, 18, 11; not entirely certain), λειρι-ώδης 'lily-like' (Thphr.), -όεις 'ptng. to the lily' (Nic. Al. 406). λειριόεις also of the skin (N 830), of the voice or the singing of cicadas (Γ 152), of the song of the Muses (Hes. Th. 41, Q. S. 2, 418); λείριος of the voice (A. R., Orph.), also of the eyes (B. 17, 95), λειρός, λειρά [n.pl.] of the song of the cicadas (IG 14, 1934: f6, metr. inscr.).
•ETYM Like Lat. līlium, the word comes from an eastern Mediterranean language; a comparable word for 'lily' is found in Coptic: hrêri, hlêli (Eg. ḥrr-t). We also find several like words for 'flower', Hamit. ilili, alili, Alb. lule, Hitt. alil-, alēl; see WH s.v. līlium, Benveniste BSL 50 (1954): 43, Fur.: 369.
The poetic word λειριόεις and (later attested – probably back-formations) λείριος and λειρός, as epithets of the skin and the voice, can be understood as derivatives of λείριον 'lily-white, soft as lilies'; see Wærn Eranos 50 (1952): 19f. Leumann 1950: 27f. doubts that intermediate phases can be reconstructed. Others (see Frisk) connected the gloss λειρός (cod. -ῶς)· ὁ ἰσχνὸς καὶ ὠχρός 'thin and pale' (H.), arisen by dissimilation from *λειλός, which would belong to Lith. leĩlas 'thin, slender'. Improbable.

λειτουργέω (ληϊτ-), -ία, -ός ⇒λαός.

λείτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'priest' (post-class. Att. inscr.). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR ὁμο-λείτωρ = συλ-λειτουργός (Att. inscr. II^p), λείτορες· ἱέρειαι (H.); λητῆρες· ἱεροὶ στεφανηφόροι. Ἀθαμᾶνες (H.), fem. λήτειραι· ἱέρειαι τῶν σεμνῶν θεῶν (H. = Call. Fr. 123), λείτειρη· ἱέρειαι (Boeot. apud H.); uncertain Arc. λετορο<ς> (IG 5(2), 405).
•DER Denominative λειτορεύω [v.] 'to be λείτωρ' (Thess. since II^a; perhaps also Eg., see Wilhelm AfP 9: 214ff.). Details on the distribution in Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 83f., also Fraenkel 1910: 145, Bechtel 1921, 1: 207f., Benveniste 1948: 47fn. Cf. also ἀλήτωρ· ἱερεύς (H.); further λετωρ 'priest' (inscr. Arc.).
•ETYM Because of the form λητῆρες, which is ascribed to the northwestern Athamanes, and (if correctly explained) because of Arc. λετορο<ς>, Thess. and Boeot. λει- seem to represent PGr. λη-. Att. λείτωρ may then perhaps be a loan from Boeotian. For the same reason, the semantically attractive connection with λήϊ-τος, ληΐτη and λήτη 'ἱέρεια', and also with λειτουργός (see ►λαός), presents difficulties. Moreover, -τωρ, -τηρ (instead of -της) is remarkable as a secondary suffix. Other hypotheses (see Frisk): relations to λάτρον; and to λίσσομαι, λιταί. To my mind, the prothetic vowel seems to point to a Pre-Greek word.

λειχήν, -ῆνος 'lichen'. ⇒λείχω.

λείχω [v.] 'lick' (IA). ◂IE *leiǵ^h- 'lick'▸ •VAR Aor. λεῖξαι, fut. λείξω.
•COMP Also with περι-, δια-, ἀνα-, ἐκ-, etc. As a first member in Λειχ-ήνωρ and other parodising PNs (Batr.).
•DER λειχήν, -ῆνος [m.] "the licker", 'lichen, moss, rash' (A., Hp., Thphr.), with λειχήν-η plantname = μυρτάκανθος (Dsc.), -ώδης 'lichen-like', -ικός 'ptng. to moss' (medic.), λειχην-ιάω [v.] 'to suffer from λ.' (Thphr.). ἔκλειγ-μα (to ἐκ-λείχω) 'tablet, candy', ἐκλεικ-τόν 'id.' (medic.).
Ablauting: 1. λιχανός (δάκτυλος) [m.] 'forefinger' (Hp., pap.), with oppositive accent (Schwyzer: 380) λίχανος [m.] 'the string struck by the forefinger' (Aristox., Arist.); λιχάς, -άδος [f.] 'the distance between the forefinger and the thumb' (Hero, Poll.), after διχάς, πεντάς, etc. (see Chantraine 1933: 358) for expected *λιχανάς. 2. λιχμάομαι, -άω [v.] 'to lick' (since Φ 123; on λελιχμότες Hes. Th. 826 see Leumann 1950: 218), also with ἀπο-, περι-, etc. Thence λιχμ-ήμων, -ήρης 'licking' (Nic.) and λιχμάς· θρῖναξ. καὶ ἁπαλὴ πόα καὶ χαμαιπετής, ἣν τὰ ἑρπετὰ ἐπιλείχουσι 'trident, also a delicate herb on the ground which snakes (animals) lick' (H.). Lengthened forms: λιχμάζω (Hes. Sc. 235, Nic.), -αινω (Opp.) 'id.' 3. λίχνος 'fond of sweets, greedy, gluttonous, tasty' (Att., Hell.) with λιχνώδης 'id.' (Ael.), λιχνότης 'greediness' (sch.); denominative verb λιχνεύω, -ομαι 'to be greedy, swallow' (D. H., Ph., Plu.), also with ἐπι-, περι-; thence λίχνευμα 'delicacy' (Sophr.), λιχνεία 'dainty, rapacity' (Pl., X.).
•ETYM Beside the thematic root present λείχω, from which all other Greek forms derive, the related languages show several formations: a full grade yod-present in Lith. liežiù, OCS ližǫ; nasal present in Lat. lingō; iterative formations in Go. bi-laigon, Lith. laižýti < IE *loiǵ^h-; several full grade formtions in Arm. liz-um, -em, -anem; zero grade in OIr. ligim, gemination in OHG lecchōn, etc.

An athematic present with old ablaut is retained in Skt. léhmi, lihmás [1pl.] < IE léiǵ^h-mi*, liǵ^h-més*. Greek too once had zero grade verbal forms, as evidenced by nouns like λιχανός (cf. πιθανός), λίχνος and the denominative λιχμάομαι, which presupposes an μ-stem λιχ-μ- (Schwyzer: 725[9]). See now LIV^2 s.v. leiǵ^h-* on the various types of formation.

λεκάνη [f.] 'basin, dish' (Ar., inscr., pap.). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •VAR λακάνη (Hell.), -ίσκη (H.).
•DER λεκάν-ιον (Ar.), -ίδιον (Poll., Eust.), -ίς [f.] (Ar., Plu., Luc.), -ίσκη [f.] (com.). Also λέκος [n.] 'id.' (Hippon.) with λεκάριον (Hell.), λεκίς [f.] (Epich.), -ίσκος [m.] (Hp.) 'id.', -ίσκιον as a measure (Hp.).
•ETYM For λεκάνη, cf. πατάνη, οὐράνη, and other names of utensils in -άνη, -ανον (Chantraine 1933: 197ff.); also note λέκος beside the vessel name ἄγγος. The pair λέκος : λεκάνη is comparable with στέφος : στεφάνη, ἕρκος : ἑρκάνη (though the latter is late; see on ἕρκος).
Outer-Greek connections that were proposed (see Frisk) are almost certainly wrong; the word is Pre-Greek (thus already E-M s.v. lanx). The variants with λακ- are not due to a (late) assimilation, but rather point to substrate origin. See Fur.: 352.
The word λεκάνη was borrowed as Arab. leken, Osman. lejen, which in turn was borrowed as MoGr. τὸ λεγένι 'bowl, dish' and Ru. legin 'kind of vase'.

λέκιθος [m.] 'gruel or pulse of cereals' (Hp., Gal., com.), fem. 'yolk' (Hp., Arist.). ◂PG(S)▸ •DER λεκίθιον [n.] (PHolm. 19, 41), λεκιθ-ώδης 'color of yolk' (Hp., Thphr.), -ίτης ἄρτος 'bread from leguminous plants' (Ath.).
•ETYM Because of the suffixes and the meaning, the word is clearly of Pre-Greek origin. DELG recalls the TN Λεκίθη.

λέκτρον 'bed, couch', etc. ⇒λέχος.

λελιημένος [adj.] 'longing for' (Il., Emp., A. R.). ◂?▸
•VAR Late finite forms λελίη-το (A. R.), -σαι (Theoc., Orph.).
•ETYM An isolated perfect formation, traditionally connected with λιλαίομαι; λελιημένος is then taken to be analogical after τετιημένος; critique of this in Tichy 1983: 230[7]. She suggests connection with λίην, or an epic "Streckform" for *λελήμενος to λῆν 'want'. Uncertain.

λέμβος [m.] 'small fast-sailing galley' (D., Anaxandr., Hell.). ◂LW Illyr.?▸
•DER λεμβῶδες πλοῖον (Arist.).
•ETYM Lat. lembus is a loan from Greek. A foreign word without etymology; perhaps Illyrian (see the litt. in WH s.v. lembus).

λέμφος [m., n.] 'mucous discharge from the nostrils, κόρυζα, μύξα' (Lib., Moer., H., Tz.); plur. also 'putrescent carcasses' (Phot., Eust.), metonymic 'simple man' (Men.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER λεμφώδης 'snivelling' (sch.).

•ETYM Fur.: 160 recognized that it is the same word as ►λάμπη, which shows characteristic Pre-Greek variations.

λέξις ⇒λέγω.

λεόπαρδος [m.] 'leopard' (Gal., Edict. Diocl.). ◂GR▸
•VAR Also λεοπάρδαλις (see Wessely Glotta 6 (1915): 29f.).
•ETYM Starting from the Iliad, the normal word for 'leopard' was ►πάρδαλις. Probably, λεόπαρδος was formally influenced by Lat. pardus, leopardus, or even a borrowing from Latin (DELG). The analysis as a compound of λέων and πάρδος is doubtful, because πάρδος is only attested in Ael. NA 1, 31 (v.l. πάρδαλος), and λεο- instead of λεοντο- is rare, e.g. λεο-δράκων, name of a mythical being (Crete IV[a]).

λέπαδνον [n.] 'broad leather strap, fastening the yoke to the neck and the girth' (Il., A., Ar., AP, pap.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Mostly plur. -να; also λέπαμνα (Apollon. Lex.), with δν > μν (Schwyzer: 208).
•DER λεπαδν-ιστήρ [m.] 'end of the λ.' (Poll.), like βραχιον-ιστήρ, κορυφ-ιστήρ, etc.
•ETYM Frisk's connection with λεπάς, -άδος 'limpet' (adducing ὀπιδ-νός, παιδ-νός; Chantraine 1933: 194) is semantically strange: the λέπαδνα would cling to the neck like snails (he compares Ar. V. 105 ὥσπερ λεπὰς προσεχόμενος τῷ κίονι 'clinging to the pillar like a snail'). Without a doubt, a Pre-Greek word.

λέπας [n.] 'bare rock, mountain' (Simon., A., E., Th.). ◂LW Medit.?▸
•VAR Only nom. and acc. sg.
•DER λεπαῖος 'rocky' (E.); λεπάς, -άδος [f.] 'limpet' (Alc. Z 36, 2 [uncertain], Epich., com., Arist.), as the animal clings to the rock (cf. H. λεπάδες· τὰ πρὸς ταῖς πέτραις κεκολλημένα κογχύλια 'mussels sticking to the rocks'), but alternatively, derived from λέπος, λεπίς 'shell, scale'.
From λέπας: λεπαστή (-άστη) [f.] 'limpet-like drinking cup' (com.) with λεπαστίς, -ίδος 'id.' (vase-inscr., H.); on the formation Schwyzer: 503; borrowed as Lat. lepista, -esta; λέπαστρον· σκεῦός τι ἁλιευτικόν 'a fisherman's instrument' (H.), cf. δέπαστρον, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 333f.); λεπαδεύομαι [v.] 'to collect λ.s' (H., Phot.).
•ETYM The similarity between λέπας and Lat. lapis, -idis [m., f.] 'stone' is hardly accidental; a Mediterranean borrowing is most probable.

λεπαστή (-άστη) ⇒λέπας.

λέπω [v.] 'to peel (off)' (Il.). ◂PG(S,V)▸
•VAR Aor. λέψαι, fut. λέψω (Il.), perf. med. ἀπο-λέλεμμαι (Epich.), aor. pass. ἀπελέπη· ἀπελεπίσθη (H.); ablauting λέλαμμαι (Att. inscr. around 330[a]), ἐκ-λαπῆναι (Ar. Fr. 164).
•DIAL Myc. re-po-to /leptos/.
•COMP Sometimes with ἀπο-, ἐκ- (see above), περι-, ἐπι-.
•DER A. With e-grade (from the present): 1. λεπτός (cf. στρεπτός) 'peeled' (Υ 497), 'thin, lean, weak, fine, delicate' (Il.), often as a first member. Poetic and lengthened λεπτ-αλέος 'weak, fine' (Il.), see Chantraine 1933: 255; λεπτ-ακινός 'id.' (AP), perhaps from *λέπταξ (Bechtel 1914 s.v. φυζακινός); further λεπτίον 'mug' (pap.) from λεπτόν (scil. κεράμιον) 'thin earthenware' (pap.), λεπτάγιον a kind of vase? (PHib. 1, 47, 13; III[a]), acc. to the editors perhaps = λεπτόγειον 'barren land'; λεπτάριον name of a medical instrument (Herm. 38, 282); λεπτίτιδες κριθαί kind of barley (Gp.); λεπτότης [f.] 'thinness, leanness, etc.' (IA), λεπτοσύνη 'id.' (AP); λεπτύνω [v.] 'to make thin, etc. ' (Hp., X., Arist.), λεπτυσμός, λέπτυνσις (Hp.), -υντικός (Dsc., Gal.). 2. λεπρός 'scaly, leprous, uneven, raw' (Hp., Hippon., Hell.), fem. λεπράς (Theoc., Opp.); λέπρα (Ion. -ρη) 'leprosy' (Ion., Arist., Hell.), both probably first from an ρ-stem (cf. Schwyzer: 481); λεπρώδης 'uneven, leprous' (Ael., Dsc., medic.), λεπρικός 'relating to rash or lepra' (Dsc., pap.); denominative verbs: λεπράω [v.] 'to become scaly or leprous' (Ion.), also λεπρ-ιάω (Dsc.), after the verbs of disease in -ιάω; λεπρόομαι 'id.' (LXX, pap.) with λέπρωσις = λέπρα (Tz.), λεπρύνομαι 'to become scaly, uneven' (Nic.). 3. λέπος [n.] (Alex., Nic., Luc.) with λέπιον (Hp.), usually λεπίς, -ίδος [f.] (Ion. Hell.) 'scale, shell, pod, metal plate' with diminutive λεπίδιον (Hero), also as a plant name 'pepperwort' (Dsc., Gal., Ath.; as a remedy against rash), λεπιδίσκη 'id.' (Imbros II[a]); further λεπιδ-ωτός 'scaly' (Hdt., Arist.), with λεπιδόομαι 'to become scaly' (Hp.); other denominatives: λεπίζω (to λέπος or λεπίς) [v.] 'to remove the scale, to peel off' (Hell.), with λέπισμα 'scale' (LXX, Dsc., Gal.); ἐλέπουν· οἷον ἐλέπιζον ... (H.); note λέπασμα 'pod, skin' (sch. Nic. Th. 184); rather lengthened from λέπος than from *λεπάζω. 4. On λεπάς, ►λέπας see s.v. 5. λέπῡρον 'shell, pod' (LXX, Batr.) with λεπυρώδης 'like a shell' (Thphr.); λεπύρ-ιον 'id.' (Hp., Arist., Theoc.), -ιώδης 'id.' (Arist., Thphr.), λεπυρίζομαι [v.] 'to be contained in a husk or shell' (sch.), λεπυριῶσαι· ἐξαχυριῶσαι (H.); besides λεπῠρός 'contained in a shell' (Nic.). On itself stands λεπύχανον 'skin of an onion, rind of fruit' (Theopomp. Com., Plu., Dsc.).

B. With o-grade: 6. λοπός [m.] 'peel, rind' (τ 233, Hp.) with λόπιμος 'easy to peel off', (Nic., Gal.), λόπιμα· κάστανα 'chestnuts' ... (H.); diminutive λοπάς [f.] 'dish', also name of a crustacean and of a botanical disease (com., Thphr., Luc.), with λοπάδ-ιον (com., pap.), -ίσκος (sch.); λοπίς 'scale, dish, etc.' (Ar., inscr.) with λοπίδιον (Delos); denominative λοπάω [v.] 'to flake off, let the bark peel off' (Thphr.), λοπίζω 'id.' (Thphr., pap.), λοπητός [m.] 'time of bark peeling off' (Thphr.). 7. On ►ἔλλοψ, see s.v.
C. With lengthened grade: 8. λώπη 'pod, coat' (Od., Theoc., A. R.), λῶπος [m.] 'id.' (Alc. [?], Hippon., Anacr., Herod.); as a first member in λωπο-δύ-της [m.] "who dresses in other peoples' clothes", 'thief of clothes' with λωποδυτ-έω, etc. (Att.); without a suffix λώψ· χλαμύς 'mantle, cloak' (H.). Diminutive λώπιον (Arist., inscr.); denominative ἀπο-, περι-λωπίζω 'to undress, put off' (S., Hyp.).
•ETYM The primary thematic present λέπω, from which all verbal forms were derived (λέλαμμαι, -λαπῆναι are innovations after ἔστραμμαι, στραφῆναι, etc.), has no direct correspondences outside Greek. There are a few nominal formations resembling the Greek forms: Lith. lãpas 'leaf', Alb. lapë 'rag, leaf, peritoneum' (~ λοπός), Lith. lõpas 'rag, piece' (~ λῶπος), together with Ru. lápot' 'shoe of bark', lapotók 'rag, piece'. The form λέπος was also compared with the s-stem Lat. lepōs 'grace', and the extension in Ru. lépest 'rag, piece, leaf of a flower'.

However, we may safely conclude that the verb is non-IE (and Pre-Greek): there is hardly any exact correspondence, and the semantics are not very convincing. Note the forms λεπάγιον, λεπακινός, λέπασμα, λέπυρον, λεπύχανον, λέπρα, λώψ, λῶπος, etc., with suffixes and/or alternations of Pre-Greek appearance.

λέσφος 'smooth'. ⇒λίσπος.

λέσχη [f.] 'lounge' (σ 329, Hes.), 'resting-place, grave' (Rhodos), 'public building' (Dor., Att.), 'talk, gossip' (Ion. poet.). ◄PG(S) / LW Anat.?►
•COMP ἔλ-λεσχος 'subject to gossip' (Hdt. 1, 153), from ἐν λέσχῃ; πρό-λεσχος 'eager to talk' (A. Supp. 200), cf. πρό-χειρος, etc.; on ►ἀδολέσχης see s.v.
•DER λεσχήν, -ῆνος [m.] 'chatterer' (Timo 46); λεσχηνεῖ· ὁμιλεῖ, μυθολογεῖ (H.). λεσχαῖος· ἐξηγητής, ὁμιλητής (H.); λεσχάραι· οἷον αἱ σχολαί ... (EM 561, 17), see Solmsen 1909: 124f. Two month names of unclear formation: Λεσχανάσιος (Tegea), Λεσχανόριος (Thessal., Gortyn); also Ἀπόλλων Λεσχηνόριος (from the λέσχαι which were under his protection?).
•ETYM Most often connected with λέχος 'bed' as PGr. lek^h-skā-. However, Greek had no nominal suffix *-sk-, so a σκ-present *λέχ-σκ-εται > *λέσχεται has been assumed to underlie λέσχη. However, there is no trace of this verb. OHG lescan (MoHG löschen) 'to disappear' (supposed to derive from 'to lie down') and OIr. lesc 'lazy' are uncertain.
As the λέσχη was not necessarily a room for lying down, the whole etymology (even granting that *λεσχεται really existed) is improbable. Long ago, the agreement with Hebr. liškāh was observed. This cannot be ignored. It was assumed that Greek took the word from the East (cf. West 1997: 38), and not the other way round, and as the word is isolated in North West Semitic; Schrader 1911: 469 already assumed that both languages took it from Anatolia, which seems the most probable interpretation. This is accepted by Fur.: 295, 257, who points out that the suffix of λεσχάραι is non-Greek; he also points to the variant Hebr. niškāh, which may point to Anatolian interchange l/n, as in Fur.: 388.

λευγαλέος [adj.] 'wretched, unhappy, sore, baneful, etc.' (Il.). ◄IE? leug-* 'break'► •DER λυγρός 'id.' (Il.).
•ETYM The pair λευγαλέος : λυγρός has a (late) parallel in ἐρευθαλέος : ἐρυθρός.The word λευγαλέος is isolated and archaic, and may derive from a noun (perhaps *λεῦγος, like ἔρευθος, and cf. ἀργαλέος : ἄλγος, θαρσαλέος : θάρσος, etc.; Schwyzer: 484). The word λυγρός is isolated, as well (perhaps it derives from a primary verb; see below).
The Greek adjectives have no direct correspondences in other languages, but there are several cognate forms, of which Lat. lūgeō 'to be sad' is semantically closest. This can be understood as an iterative-intensive secondary formation, or as a denominative (to lūgus* < IE lougo-*, beside λεῦγος < IE leug-os-?).
Connection with primary verbs for 'to break' may be envisaged: Skt. rujáti 'to break, torment', Lith. lū̃žti 'to break' [intr.] (semantically, compare širdìs lúžta 'the heart breaks'), OHG liohhan 'to tear, draw', Arm. lucanem 'to set free'. LIV² s.v. leug-* reconstructs a plain velar because of forms like YAv. uruxti- [f.] 'breaking'. See ►ἀλυκτοπέδη.

λευκανίη 'throat'. ⇒λαυκανίη.

λευκός [adj.] 'clear, white' (Il.). ◄IE leuk-* 'white'► •COMP Many compounds (some prefixed), like διά-, παρά-, ἐπί-, ὑπό-λευκος (Strömberg 1946: 161).
•DER 1. Substantives with oppositive accent: λεύκη [f.] 'white rash' (IA), 'white poplar' (Att., Hell.), whence λεύκινος 'made of white poplar' (Arist., Hell. inscr.), Λευκαῖος epithet of Zeus (Paus.), λευκαία (-έα) 'white poplar, etc.' (pap.); λεῦκος [m.] name of an unknown fish (Theoc.) with λευκίσκος [m.] 'white mullet' (Hikes. apud Ath., Gal.), see Strömberg 1943: 22f., Thompson 1947 s.vv. 2. λευκάς [f.] 'the white one' (Nic.), name of rocks and of an island (ω 11), also plant name 'Lamium' (Dsc.). 3. Further substantives: λευκότης [f.] 'whiteness, the color white' (IA), λευκίτας [m.] name of a he-goat (Theoc. 5, 147), λεύκηθρον plant name (Dsc. 3, 96; v.l. λάκηθρον; see Strömberg 1940: 147); Λεύκαρος (< -αλος?), -αρίων PN (Epich., inscr.), see Schulze 1933a: 115³, perhaps also Δευκαλίων with a different dissimilation (see Schulze l.c.).
4. Verbs: a. λευκαίνω 'to make or paint white' (μ 172), λεύκανσις (Arist.), λευκασία 'bleaching, whitening' (PHolm., Cyran.); also as a HN in Messenia, Arc. TN Λευκάσιον; λευκαντής, -τικός 'one who makes or paints white' (gloss., sch.). b. λευκόομαι 'to become white', -όω 'to make white' (Pi., Att.), whence λεύκωμα 'whitened tablet' (Att.), 'white speck in the eye' (Arist., pap.), -ωματικός, -ωματώδης, -ωματίζομαι (medic., sch.); λεύκωσις = λευκασία (PHolm. 3, 6), -ωτής (or -ωτός? Att. inscr., mg. unknown). c. λευκαθέω, only in λευκαθεόντων [ptc.gen.pl.] 'gleaming white' (Hes. Sc. 146), metrical reshaping in verse-final position for λευκαθόντων from λευκάθω, acc. to Wackernagel Glotta 14 (1925): 44ff.; Λευκαθέα, with secondary o-vowel Λευκοθέα (Od., Pi.) name of a goddess, τὰ Λευκάθεα festival on Teos, -θεών month name (Ion.); lengthened form λευκαθίζω 'to gleam white' (Hdt., LXX), also -ανθίζω (imperial period), after ἄνθος, Wackernagel Glotta 14 (1925): 44ff.
•ETYM Originally a verbal noun, identical with Skt. rocá- 'bright' from rócate 'to shine, radiate, etc.'. Another old verbal noun is seen in Lat. lūcus 'wood, forest', properly 'glade', Lith. laũkas 'field', OHG lōh 'overgrown glade', Skt. loká- [m.] 'free space, world', IE louko-* [m.]. In Greek, ►λεύσσω, ►λύχνος, ►λοῦσσον also belong to this large group of words.

λευρός [adj.] 'open (of fields), spacious, even, smooth' (since η 123). ◄?►
•ETYM Unexplained. Connection with Lat. lēvis (as defended by de De Lamberterie 1990b: 420f.) is improbable, as this rather belongs with ►λεῖος.

λεύσσω [v.] 'to see (clearly), look, examine' (Il.), cf. Ruijgh 1957: 132. ◄IE leuk-* '(become) light'► •VAR Present stem only, except for the isolated and late aorist forms λεύσσατε, λεύσσειε(ν); on mg. and construction Treu 1955: 64.
•DIAL Arc. λεύσω, but see on ►λευτόν.

•COMP Rarely with ἐπι-, εἰσ-, προσ-, προ-.
•ETYM Beside the full grade yod-present λεύσ(σ)ω from *λευκ-ι̯ω, Sanskrit has a full grade thematic root present lokate 'to discern, perceive' (also locate, with locana- [n.] 'eye'), which differs slightly from rócate 'shine' (see ►λευκός). An athematic middle present is preserved in Hitt. lukk-^{tta} 'to become light, dawn' < leuk-to*; Lat. lūceō 'make light, dawn' = Skt. rocáyati 'to make shine' is from IE louk-éie/o-*, iterative-intensive or causative; ToA lkām 'I see', ToB lkāskau 'id.' are from a sk-present, beside a full grade in ToB lyuketrä 'he is illuminated'. The meaning 'to see' arose from 'to light up'. See ►λύχνος, ►λοῦσσον.

λευτõν [nom.sg.] 'negligent', 'seeing'? (Arc. IG 5(2), 3). ◄?► •ETYM Dubois 1988: 77-78 follows the traditional interpretation that the τ is a special way of writing the (old) affricate of λεύσσων. A different interpretation is suggested by Morpurgo Davies Minos 20-22 (1987): 459-468: she reads λευτοντες in IG 5(2), 16: 10, basing herself on the squeeze (though the back side of the squeeze does read λευσοντες, as she remarks op.cit. 468). This would eliminate Arcadian evidence for λεύσ(σ)ω, and she tentatively reconstructs a root leut-, at least for the two Arcadian forms, but perhaps also for λεύσ(σ)ω itself (leut-ie/o- instead of leuk-ie/o-*).

λεύω [v.] 'to stone, lapidate' (IA). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. λεῦσαι, aor. pass. λευσθῆναι, fut. λεύσω.
•COMP Also with κατα-.
•DER λευστήρ [m.] 'lapidator' (Orac. apud Hdt. 5, 67, trag.), λευσμός [m.] 'lapidation' (A., E.), (κατα-)λεύσιμος 'connected with lapidation' (after θανάσιμος), λευστά· ... λιθοβόλητα 'hit by stones' (H.).
•ETYM Traditionally considered to be a denominative of ►λᾶας 'stone', but it now appears that λᾶας had no -ϝ-. Pedersen 1926: 45f. proposes relation to ON ljósta, pret. laust 'to slay' from IE leus-t-*.

λέχεται [v.] · κοιμᾶται 'lies down in bed' (H.). ◄IE leg*^{h}- 'lie'► •VAR Also perf. ptc. λελο[γ]χυῖα· λεχὼ γενομένη 'lying in childbed' (H., also Antim. in PMilan. 17 II 10), καλέχες· κατάκεισο. Πάφιοι 'lie down (Paph.)' (H.), to which belong the epic aorist and future forms λέκτο, λέξο, -λέχθαι, -λέγμενος (< λεχ-το, -σο, -σθαι, -μενος, Chantraine 1942: 296); λέξασθαι, λέξομαι (also with παρα-, κατα-, προσ-) 'to lie, lie down'; act. aor. λέξον, ἔλεξα 'to lay down, put to sleep' (Il.).
•DER 1. λέχος [n.] 'lair, bed', especially 'bridal bed', also 'deathbed' (Il.); as a first member in λεχε-ποίης 'having grass as a bed' (Il.), as a second member in e.g. ὀρει-λεχής 'having his lair in the mountains' (Emp.); with λεχαῖος 'belonging to the lair' (A. Th. 292 [conj.], A. R.), λεχήρης 'bedridden' (E. [lyr.]), λεχώ [f.] 'woman who has just given birth' (E., Ar., Cyrene), also λεκχώ (Delphi), with expressive gemination (Schwyzer: 478[3] and Fraenkel Glotta 32 (1953): 18), with λεχώϊος; λεχωΐς = λεχώ (A. R., Call.), see Schwyzer: 465.
2. λόχος [m.] 'childbed', but usually 'ambush, band (in ambush)', military 'armed band' (Il.), often as a second member, e.g. ἄ-λοχος [f.] 'spouse' (Il.); as a first member e.g. in λοχ-āγός 'leader of a λόχος' (Dor.; S., Th., X.). Several derivatives: λόχιος 'ptng. to birth' (E., Ar.), ἡ Λοχία epithet of Artemis (E., inscr.), τὰ λόχια 'discharge after childbirth' (Hp., Arist.); λοχεῖος (E. [lyr.], Plu.), λοχαῖος (Arat., AP) 'id.'; λοχίτης [m.] 'sbd. belonging to the same λόχος, fellow soldier' (A., S., X.); λοχώ (-ώς, -ός) = λεχώ (LXX, Dsc.). Transformation λοχεός 'ambush' (Hes. Th. 178), after φωλεός, etc.; λοχή = λόχμη (late epigr.).
Denominatives: a. λοχάω, -ομαι [v.] 'to lie in ambush' (epic Ion., Hell.); after κοιμάω, -ομαι; thence λόχησις, -ητικός (late). b. λοχεύω, -ομαι [v.] 'to give birth, deliver', pass. 'to be delivered, be born' (h. Merc., trag., etc.) with λόχευμα 'that which is born' (A., E.), λοχεία 'process of birth' (Pl., E.), λοχεύτρια [f.] 'woman who has just given birth' (sch.). c. λοχίζω 'to lie in ambush, to distribute men among companies' (Hdt., Th.), with λοχισμός 'the setting of traps' (Plu.). 3. λέκτρον, often plur. -α 'couch, bridal bed' (Il.); compounds like κοινό-λεκτρος 'sharing a bed, matrimonial, bedfellow' (A.); λεκτρίτῃ θρόνῳ· ἀνάκλισιν ἔχοντι 'leaning back against the bed' (H.). 4. λόχμη [f.] 'lair of wild beasts, thicket, bush' (τ 439, Arist.), perhaps after κώμη (Porzig 1942: 289; cf. also *κοίμη in κοιμάω), with λοχμαῖος 'living in the bush' (Ar. [lyr.]), -ιος 'id.' (AP), -ώδης 'overgrown with bushes, etc.' (Th., Thphr.), λοχμάζω [v.] 'to make up a thicket' (Pisand. Ep.).
The whole group of words was restricted in its use in Ionic-Attic (instead, κεῖμαι or (κατα)-κλίνομαι was used), see Ruijgh 1957: 153f.
•ETYM The thematic present λέχεται is exactly paralleled by ToB lyaśäṃ 3sg. 'lies down' < leg*^{h}-e- and by Go. ligan 'to lie', which is suspected to be an innovation for the yod-present dominant in other Gm. and Slav. languages (e.g. OCS ležǫ), like sitan 'to sit'. A primary present, originally probably a yod-present too, is also found in Celtic: OIr. laigid 'lies down'. Italic once had this verb too, as appears from Falisc. lecet 'iacet'. Hitt. 3sg. lāki 'to fell, lay down' < log*^{h}-eie-.
Nominal formations comparable to Greek verbal nouns: ON lag [n.] 'position', plur. lǫg 'law', Ru. log 'valley, cleft, fallow land', SCr. lôg 'lying', Pol. od-łog 'fallow field', Alb. lagje 'band, group', all from IE log*^{h}-o- and formally identical to λόχος; OCS lože 'κλίνη, κοίτη = bed'; OHG lehtar 'uterus' = λέκτρον. In Slav., OCS ložes-no, plur. -na 'μήτρα, uterus' probably shows the s-stem of λέχος. For ἄ-λοχος, cf. Serb.CS su-logъ 'σύγ-κοιτος, spouse', CS su-ložь. Also, ToB leke, ToA lake 'lair'. See LIV^2 for further forms.

λέχριος [adj.] 'slanting, crosswise' (S., E., X.). ◄PG(V)►
•DER λέχρις [adv.] 'id.' (Antim., A. R.), after ἄχρις, μέχρις, Schwyzer: 620; also λικριφίς 'crosswise, sideways' (λ. ἀΐξας Ξ 463, τ 451). Glosses: λικροί· οἱ ὄζοι τῶν ἐλαφείων κεράτων 'the branches of the antlers of deer' (H.), with a variant λεκροί; λί(γ)ξ· πλάγιος 'sideways, athwart, etc.' (H.).
•ETYM As a basis of λέχριος, one formerly posited a ρ(ο)-stem *λεχρ(ο)- of unknown meaning, for which a pre-form *λεκ-σ-ρ- was reconstructed on account of λικροί/λεκροί (without -σ-). The form with -σ- is also seen in λοξός 'slanting' (cf. Schwyzer: 327).
However, the forms λεκροί/λικροί, λικριφίς and the gloss λι(γ)ξ display typical Pre-Greek alternations (interchange ε/ ι, κ/ χ and prenasalization). It is much more difficult to depart from IE forms with and without -σ- side by side, than to assume Pre-Greek origin. Note that the interchange ε/ ι is not the consequence of vowel assimilation, as Frisk still assumed for λικριφίς, following Schwyzer: 256 et al. See ►λοξός.

λέων, -οντος [m.] 'lion' (Il.). ◄LW Sem.?►
•VAR Dat.pl. also λείουσι (Il.), on the supposed metrical lengthening of -ει- (Chantraine 1942: 102) cf. Wyatt 1969: 237[3].
•DIAL Myc. _re-wo-pi_ /lewont-p^{h}i/ [instr.], _re-wo-te-jo_ /lewonteios/.
•COMP Compounds like λεοντό-πους 'lion-footed' (E., inscr.) with λεοντο-πόδιον plant name (Dsc.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 42; χαμαι-λέων kind of lizard, 'chameleon' (Arist.), see Risch _IF_ 59 (1949): 256, also as a plant name (Thphr., Dsc.), because of the varying color, Strömberg 1940: 110; on -λέων, -λέωνος in PNs (secondary) see Bechtel 1917b: 277. Cf. on ►λεόπαρδος.
•DER 1. Diminutives: λεόντ-ιον (Theognost. _Can._, Med.), -άριον (inscr., pap.), also as a fem. PN (Epicur), -ίς 'lion-like ornament' (Lydia), -ιδεύς 'young lion' (Ael.). 2. λεοντέη, -τῆ [f.] 'lion skin' (IA). 3. Adjectives: λεόντ-ειος 'of a lion, lion-like' (A., Theoc., _AP_); -ώδης 'like a lion' (Pl., Arist.), -ικός 'of a lion' (Porph.), -ιανός 'born under the sign of the lion' (_Cat. Cod. Astr._). 4. λεοντ-ηδόν [adv.] 'like a lion' (LXX). 5. λεοντ-ιάω [v.], whence -ίασις name of a disease (medic.), cf. ἐλεφαντ-ιάω, -ίασις. 6. PNs Λεοντ-εύς, -ίας, etc. (see Boßhardt 1942: 72, Bechtel 1917b: 276f., Bechtel 1917a: 36). Fem. λέαινα 'lioness' (Hdt., A., Ar.).
•ETYM Judging by λέαινα, λέων was perhaps originally an _n_-stem, like δράκων. However, the fact that Myc. already has an _nt_-stem casts some doubt on this supposition.
λέων is a loan from an unknown source; Semitic origin is probable, but Hebr. _lābī'_, Assyr. _labbu_, Eg. _labu_ are quite different phonetcally. Lat. _leō, -ōnis_ was borrowed from λέων (the _n_-stem is a Lat. innovation). Thence were borrowed, either directly or indirectly, European forms like OIr. _leon_ [gen.pl.], OE _lēo_, OHG _lewo_ (whence the Slavic group of Ru. _lev_, together with Lith. _lēvas_).
On itself stands λῖς [m.] 'lion' (also λίς), acc. λῖν (Il.), which is often compared with Hebr. _lajiš_ 'lion'.

λεωργός 'criminal'. •VAR λέως (λείως) 'completely'. ⇒λεῖος.

λήγω [v.] 'to cease, stop' (Il.), incidentally trans. 'to make stop, pause' (epic); on the mg. Porzig 1942: 48ff. ◄IE? _*sleh$_{1/2}$g-_, PG?(V)► •VAR Aor. λῆξαι, fut. λήξω.
•COMP Also with prefix, especially κατα-, ἀπο-.
•DER λῆξις (ἀπό-, κατά-, etc.) 'cessation' (A., A. R., Ph.), as a grammatical term 'ending, desinence' (Demetr. _Eloc._, A. D.); as a first member in governing compounds like ληξι-πύρετος 'allaying fever' (medic.); ἀπόληγμα 'border of a cloth' (Aq.); ἄ-(λ)ληκτος 'incessantly' (epic); ληκτικός 'terminal', κατα- 'coming to a premature end, incomplete', of a verse (grammatical and metrical).
•ETYM In view of ἄ-λληκτος, κατα-λλήξειαν (μ 224) and other forms, an original root *σλήγ- is probable. The thematic root present *σλήγ-ω, whence all the above forms are derived, has no direct counterpart in other languages. However, a zero grade nasal present is supposed within Greek in ►λαγγάζω 'to slacken' and Lat. _langueō_ 'to be slack' (for the formal difficulties, see s.v.). Besides, we find the primary zero grade aorist λαγάσαι (with the present ►λαγαίω 'to release') and several nouns, e.g. ►λαγαρός. A full grade form is retained in North Germanic, e.g. ON _slókr_. More forms in Pok. 959ff.
A pre-form IE _*sleh$_2$g-_ is possible; see Pok. 959. Joseph _Glotta_ 60 (1982): 112-115 reconstructs _*sleh$_1$g-_. However, one could also conceive of a Pre-Greek variation ληγ- / λαγγ- (long vowel alternating with prenasalization), cf. μηχανή / μάγγανον and κηκίς / καγχύλας.
See ►λωγάνιον, ►λογγάζω.

Λήδα [f.] mother of the Dioscuri and Helena (A. _Ag._ 914). ◄LW Lyd.?►
•VAR Λήδη (epic).
•ETYM Perhaps from Lyc. (not Lyd.!) _lada_ 'wife, spouse'. See ►Λητώ.

λήδανον [n.] name of a resin-like substance, from the shrub called κίσθος (Hdt., medic., pap.). ◄LW Sem.►
•VAR Also λᾶδανον.
•DER Backformation λῆδον [n.] = κίσθος (Dsc.).
•ETYM A loan, originally from Semitic; cf. Arab. _lādan_ > MoP _lādän_, Assyr. _ladunu_ (λήδανον, τὸ καλέουσι Ἀράβιοι λάδανον Hdt. 3, 112). Borrowed from Greek into Lat. _lēdanum, lādanum_ (back-formations _lēda, lāda_ 'Cistus cyprius'), Ru. _ládan_ 'sweet-smelling resin, incense'. See Masson 1967: 55[3]. See ►λωτός.

ληδεῖν [v.] · κοπιᾶν, κεκμηκέναι 'to be tired'; ληδήσας· κεκμηκώς, κοπιάσας 'tired' (H.). ◄IE _*leh$_1$d-_ 'let (go)'► •ETYM Because of ἀηδῆσαι· κοπιάσαι, καμεῖν; ἀηδέομεν· κοπιῶμεν; ἀηδής· κοπιώδης, ὀκνηρός 'reluctant, sluggish', the correctness of ληδεῖν, ληδήσας has long been doubted (cf. Maas _ByzZ_ 37 (1937): 380).
If correct, however, the glosses may be compared with Alb. _lodh_ 'to make tired', _lodhem_ 'to get tired' < IE _*leh$_1$d-_, Lat. _lassus_ 'weary, tired' < zero grade IE _*lh$_1$d-to-_, and Gm. forms like Go. _letan_ < IE _*leh$_1$d-_ 'to let', _lats_ 'weary, slow'.

λήδιον [n.] a light cloth = τριβώνιον (kind of garment) or ἱμάτιον εὐτελές 'cheap garment' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also ληδίον (Att. inscr. IV[a]), λήδ-, ληδίον, λήιδ- (Men.). Basic form λῆδος in Dor. λᾶδος (Alcm.), λᾷδος, λαι- (H.) 'τριβώνιον'.
•DER Diminutive ληδάριον, v.l. ληδ- (Ar. _Av._ 715, 915). Adjective ληιδιώδεις· τριβωνιώδεις (cod. -ίδες) (H.).
•ETYM The variation between forms with and without ι shows that the word is Pre-Greek.

λήθαργος [m., f.] 'lethargy, lethargic fever' (Hp., Arist., Chrysipp. Stoic.), as an adjective also 'forgetful' (Men., _AP_). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also plur.
•DER ληθαργ-ικός 'affected by lethargy, lethargic' (medic., _AP_), -ώδης 'id.' (Dsc., Gal.), -ία 'lethargy' (_Com. Adesp._), -έω [v.] 'to be forgetful' (pap., inscr.). Unclear is ἀλήθαργος _POxy._ 1381, 100 (literary, II[p]).

•ETYM Probably an original adjective (scil. νόσος, πυρετός). Cf. ►λαίθαργος, which shows that the word is Pre-Greek. The word, or at least its meaning, seems to have been influenced by ληθ-, λαθ- 'to forget', and perhaps also by ἐργ- 'work'.

λήθη •VAR λήθω, etc. ⇒λανθάνω.

ληΐζομαι •VAR Also ληΐη, ληΐς. ⇒λεία.

λήϊον [n.] 'standing crop' (Il., Arist.), 'cornfield' (Theoc.). ◄?► •VAR Dor. λάϊον, λᾷον (Sophr., Theoc.).
•COMP Compounds like λᾳο-τομέω [v.] 'to reap corn' (Theoc.), πολυ-λήϊος 'rich in crops' (E 613, etc.), cf. Bechtel 1914 s.v. ἀλήϊος.
•ETYM If λάϊον is a real Doric form, λήϊον may belong to ►ἀπολαύω 'to enjoy', assuming a pre-form *lāw-io- 'gain, produce'. For the formation, cf. ►λεία which derives from *lāw-iā-. The connection with the group of λύω would seem to require PGr. *lēw-, but it is semantically not convincing.

λήϊτον 'town hall'. ⇒λαός.

ληκάω [v.] 'to have intercourse' (com., H.), acc. to H. also = τὸ πρὸς ᾠδὴν ὀρχεῖσθαι 'to dance to a song'. ◄IE? *lek- 'jump', PG?(V)► •VAR Aor. ληκῆσαι.
•COMP Also with ὑπο-.
•DER ληκήματα [pl.] (Epicur. Fr. 414); ληκώ· τὸ μόριον 'genital part' (H.); also ληκίνδα παίζειν 'to beat time, drum with the fingers' (Luc., A. D.).
•ETYM Iterative-intensive formation like πηδάω (Schwyzer: 719), and as such identical with Latv. lẽkât, 1sg. lẽkâju 'to fly, jump, hop'. Of course, the meaning 'βινεῖν, to have intercourse' is euphemistic and secondary. The primary verb is seen in Lith. lė̃kti, 1sg. lekiù 'to fly, run', Latv. lèkt 'id.'. Alternatively, we may consider the fact that Greek also has ►λαικάζω, which points to Pre-Greek variation αι/η.

λήκυθος [f.] 'casket for oil or perfume' (Od.), also metaph. 'rhetorical bombast' (Cic., Plin.), = Lat. ampulla. ◄PG(V)► •VAR On the gender see Schwyzer 1950: 34[2].
•DIAL Epid. λάκυθος (IV[a]).
•COMP αὐτο-λήκυθος 'who carries his own oil-casket' (out of poverty) = 'poor man, beggar' (Att.).
•DER Diminutive ληκύθιον (Att.), ληκυθιάδες· ἐνώτια ποιά 'earrings' (H.), ληκυτίαι [pl.] = λήκυθοι (pap.). Denominative ληκυθίζω [v.] 'to declaim in a hollow voice (as though speaking into a λ.)' (Call., Str., Phryn., Poll.), ληκυθ-ιστής 'who recites with hollow voice, κοιλόφωνος' (S. Fr. 1063, H.), -ισμός 'speaking in a hollow voice' (Plu.); also as a back-formation λήκυθος· τὸ μεταξὺ τοῦ λαυκανίου καὶ αὐχένος ἠχῶδες 'the resounding part between the throat and the neck' (Clearch.).
•ETYM Also TN Λήκυθος (Macedonia). Evidently a Pre-Greek word. Fur.: 121 connects λάγῦνος, λάγιον 'cup, vase', which seems convincing.

λήμη [f.] 'humour in the corner of the eye, rheum', also metaph. (Hp., Ar., Plu.). ◄PG?(O)►

•VAR A Doric form seems to be found in λάμας· μύξας 'slime' (H., cod. λαμάς· μῦς 'mouse').
•DER Diminutive λημίον (Hp.), λημύδριον (Gal.); λημ-αλέος (Luc.), -ηρός (Heliod.), -ώδης (Alex. Trall.) 'full of λ.'; λημ-ότης (sch.), -ωσις (medic. pap.), cf. ἴλλωσις, κνίδωσις; λημ-άω [v.] 'to have bleary eyes' (Hp., Ar.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Connection with Lat. lāma 'puddle, marsh, mud', Lith. lõmas 'pit, hollow, lower spot' is semantically unconvincing. Rather Pre-Greek than IE.

λημνίσκος [m.] 'woollen tape, bandage, compress' (Hell.), acc. to Varro (in Plin.) originally made of lime-bark. ◄?► •ETYM Utensil name in -ίσκος (cf. Chantraine 1933: 408), Syracusan acc. to H. (τὰς ταινίας 'headbands'. Συρακούσιοι). Connection with the name of the island ►Λῆμνος? Suggestion on Etruscan origin in Müller Phil. 78 (1923): 264f.

Λῆμνος [f.] a Greek island ◄PG►
•DIAL Myc. ra-mi-ni-jo /lāmnios/ 'man from Lemnos'; ra-mi-ni-ja /lāmniai/ 'Lemnian women'. Dor. λᾶμνος.
•DER Λήμνιος, Λημνιακός 'Lemnian'.
•ETYM No doubt a Pre-Greek name, note the suffix -μνο-.

λῆν [v.] 'want'. ⇒λῶ.

λῆναι [f.pl.] 'Bacchantes' (Heraclit., Str.), Arc. acc. to H. (who has ληναί). ◄?►
•DER Λήνα [sg.] as a PN (Ambracia, Aitolia); ληνίς 'Bacchante' (Eust., Suid.). Also Λήναια [n.pl.] name of a festival in Athens and elsewhere, with ληναιών, -ῶνος [m.] month name in Ionia (Hes. Op. 504, inscr.), Λήναιον [n.] name of a district in Athens dedicated to Dionysus (Ar., Pl.), ληναϊκός 'belonging to the Lenaians' (Hell.), ληναΐτης 'id.' (Ar.); ληναΐζω [v.] 'to celebrate the Lenaians' (Heraclit.); PN Ληναῖος, Ληναΐς. Ληνεύς (Myconos) and Ληναῖος (D. S.) epithet of Dionysus, ληνεύουσι· βακχεύουσιν (H.).
•ETYM If λῆναι (in H. and as the title of Theoc. 26) are real dialectal forms, the word cannot belong to ληνός 'winepress', which would otherwise be the most obvious solution. A better explanation has not been found.

ληνός [f.] 'trough (for pressing wine), winepress, sarcophagus, socket into which the mast fitted, etc.' (h. Merc. 104). ◄?►
•VAR On the gender see Schwyzer 1950: 34[2]. Dor. λανός •COMP Rare compounds like ληνο-βάτης 'one who treads the wine cask' (late), ἄ-ληνος 'not pressed', of almond oil (Aet.).
•DER Diminutives ληνίς, ληνίδιον (pap.); further ληνεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'place where wine is pressed' (pap., Gp.), ληνᾶς, -ᾶδος [m.] (late inscr.; Anatolia), probably = ληνοβάτης, see Schulze 1933a: 300.
•ETYM Unexplained. Perhaps a technical term from the substrate. For Λήναια, Ληναιών, see on ►λῆναι.

λῆνος, -ους [n.] 'wool, fillet, fleece' (A. Eu. 44, A. R. 4, 173, 177). ◄IE *h_2ulh_1-neh_2- 'wool'.►

•ETYM Except for the ending -ος (which is perhaps an innovation after εἶρος, πέκος, Frisk suggests), λῆνος is the old inherited word for 'wool', which is preserved in several languages: e.g. Lat. lāna, Lith. vìlna, Ru. vólna, Go. wulla, Av. varənā, Skt. ū́rṇā-, all of which may go back on IE *(h$_2$)ulh$_1$-neh$_2$-. An initial laryngeal is reconstructed on the basis of Hitt. ḫulana-, Luw. ḫulani-* 'wool', but Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. hesitates to reconstruct *h$_2$ulh$_1$-n- (see also Peters Sprache 33 (1987): 115f.). Celtic forms like MW gwlan, OIr. olann (pointing to a vocalisation PCl. ulănā- < IE *u̯l̥h$_1$neh$_2$-) deviate.
The word probably belongs, as a verbal noun in -nā, to a verb for 'tear, pluck' retained in Lat. vellō 'pull out' (but not related to ►ἁλίσκομαι); Lat. vellus [n.] 'shaved wool' < IE Huél-no-* and Arm. gełmn 'id.' < IE Huél-mn-* (?) belong to this root as well. If we reconstruct an initial laryngeal, it must have disappeared in Greek at an early date, giving rise to a preform *u̯l̥h$_1$-n- after revocalization.

λῆρος 1 [m.] 'trash, nonsense' (Att., Hp.). ◁ONOM, IE? *leh$_2$- 'howl'▷ •DER ληρ-ώδης 'silly' (Pl., Arist.) with -ωδία (Hdn.), -ωδέω (Phot.), -ώδημα (Suid.). Besides, probably as a denominative, ληρέω [v.] 'to be foolish, silly; to speak nonsense' (Att., Hp.), aor. -ῆσαι, also with prefix like παρα-, ἀπο-, κατα-; thence (παρα-)λήρ-ημα (Pl.), -ησις (Hp., Plu.); back-formation παρά-ληρος 'delirious' (Hp., Ph.). Also ληραίνω [v.] 'id.' (Ph., H.), after ἀφραίνω, etc. (Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 57), ληρεία = λήρησις (Phld.), as if from *ληρεύω.
•ETYM An analysis as λῆ-ρος offers the possibility to connect a widespread group of words with lā-*, e.g. Lith. lóti, 1sg. lóju, OCS lajati, 1sg. laję 'to bark, revile, abuse', Arm. lam 'to cry', Lat. lāmenta 'wailing'. Perhaps, the root is onomatopoeic, but we may also reconstruct *leh$_2$- 'to howl'.
With short vowel, we encounter ►λάρος, ►λάσκω; also, λαίειν, λαήμεναι· φθέγγεσθαι 'to utter' (H.), but these are not necessarily related.

λῆρος 2 [m.] 'golden ornament on women's clothes' (Delos IIa, AP, Luc., Poll., H.). ◁?▷
•VAR Or ληρός, Boeot. λειρος (IG 7, 2421).
•ETYM Unknown. A special use of ►λῆρος 1 'trash' is rather improbable.

λητουργέω, -ία, -ός ⇒λαός.

Λητώ [f.] Leto, mother of Apollo and Artemis (Il.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Gen. -όος, -οῦς.
•DIAL Dor. Λατώ. Myc. ra-to /Lātō/, ra-ti-jo /Lātios/.
•COMP As a first member in Λητο-γενής (Λατο-), fem. -γένεια 'son (daughter) of Leto' (A., E. [lyr.], AP).
•DER Λητοΐδης, Λατοΐδας 'son of Leto' (h. Merc. 253); Λητῷος (Λατ-) (A., S.), fem. -ῴα, -ωΐς, -ωϊάς (Hell. poetry) 'born of Leto'; τὸ Λητῷον 'temple of Leto' (Arist.), τὰ Λ-α 'festival of Leto' (Delos IIIa).
•ETYM Unknown. Traditionally derived from Lyc. (not Lyd.) lada 'wife, spouse', together with Λήδα. Kretschmer Glotta 32 (1953): 187 and 196f. assumes Pre-Greek origin, comparing Caucas. (Awar.) ladi. Pre-Greek origin also assumed by Bethe 1923: 20f. and Chantraine Ant. class. 22 (1953): 68.
Sources from antiquity tell that it was originally a name of the 'night'; hence the Semitic etymology by Lewy 1895: 230ff. as well as the IE one (to Lat. lateō) by Osthoff IF 5 (1895): 369; both are unconvincing. Borrowed as Lat. Lātōna, see WH s.v. See also Fur.: 186.

λιάζομαι [v.] 'to collapse, incline, recoil, sink' (Il.). ◁?▷
•VAR Aor. λιασθῆναι. Rare and late active forms (cf. Wackernagel 1916: 131) λιάζω (Lyc., H.), λιάσαι (H.), λίασσε v.l. Ψ 879 for λίασθεν; nasal present λίναμαι· τρέπομαι 'turn' (H.), verbal adj. ἀλίαστος 'inescapable, inflexible, obstinate, incessant' (Il., Hes.), on the mg. cf. Erbse Glotta 32 (1953): 236ff.
•ETYM The meaning is not very explicit, and may have changed through literary influence. This leaves much room for etymological speculations and makes a secure interpretation difficult.
The present λιάζομαι (whence hapax λίασσε) are innovations to λιασθῆναι. The nasal present λίναμαι (taken by Frisk to be an old formation) was supposed to correspond to Skt. lināti (gramm.) 'to lean against' and to OIr. lenaid 'to follow', but the latter is from *h$_2$leiH- 'to stick' and the Skt. attestation is doubtful.
Semantically better is connection with a Germanic group: Go. af-linnan 'ἀποχωρεῖν, to go away, cede', OHG bi-linnan 'yield, stop, leave off', with -nn- from -nu̯-. LIV[2] s.v. *leih$_2$- chooses for this connection, assuming that -nH- yielded the Germanic geminate, but this development is highly controversial; they also connect Ved. -līyate 'is (re)solved'.
A third option is Skt. láyate 'to hide (intr.)', which also presupposes a root leiH-*. The appurtenance of Hitt. ulae-^{zi}, ulēšš-^{zi} 'to hide' to this root (defended by Oettinger 1979: 364) is very uncertain, as there is almost no trace of a prefix u- in Anatolian (Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. ulae-^{zi}).
See further ►λιμός.

λίᾱν [adv.] 'very much, exceedingly' (Il.). ◁?▷
•VAR Epic Ion. λίην (ῐ̄).
•DER Here λιάζειν [v.] 'to be over-enthousiastic' (A.D., Phot.).
•ETYM Like δήν, πλήν, etc., λίᾱν is a petrified accusative with an unknown basic meaning. A form λῖ is cited from Epich. 223 (Str. 8, 364), and also occurs as a first member in λι-πόνηρος· λίαν πονηρός 'extremely worthless' (H.); see also λήν· λίαν (H.). Connection with the intensifying adverb ►λα-, λαι- is uncertain. Has also been compared with λίηφος· δεινός (H.).
Etymologically unclear. Chantraine Glotta 33 (1954): 28 considers a remote connection with ►λεῖος 'level, smooth'.

λιαρός [adj.] 'tepid, mild' (Il.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Note the similarity with synonymous χλιαρός; cf. Güntert 1914: 147. Other semantically close formations in -αρός are given by Chantraine 1933: 227.
Unexplained. The comparison with λιβρός by Fur.: 240 is useless.

λίβανος [f.m.] 'frankincense' (Sapph., Pi., E.), 'frankincense tree' (Hdt., Melanipp., Thphr.). ◂LW Sem.▸
•VAR λιβανωτός [m.] (or [f.]) 'id.' (Sapph., IA).
•COMP Some compounds like λιβανοφόρος (Herakleid. Com.), λιβανωτο-φόρος (Hdt.).
•DER 1. From λίβανος: diminutive λιβανίδιον (Men.); adjectives: λιβαν-ώδης 'like frankincense' (Philostr.), -ινος 'with the color of frankincense, made of frankincense' (pap., gloss.); λιβανᾶς [m.] 'trade of frankincense' (pap.), λιβανῖτις [f.] epithet of Aphrodite (Luc.), as she was venerated with incense; verbs: λιβανόομαι 'to be mixed with frankincense' (LXX), λιβανίζω 'to smell like frankincense' (Dsc., Gal.). 2. From λιβανωτός: λιβανωτίς [f.] 'rosemary, Rosmarinus' (Thphr., Nic., Dsc.), after the smell (Strömberg 1940: 62), also 'censer' (Delos, Hell.) like λιβανωτίδιον (Delos II[a]) and λιβανωτρίς (Anatolia, imperial period), after names of utensils in -τρίς (Chantraine 1933: 340f.), λιβαν-ωτικός 'consisting of frankincense' (Hell. inscr. and pap.), -ώτινος 'prepared with frankincense' (medic.); λιβανωτίζω [v.] 'to incense, smell like frankincense' (Str., Dsc.).
•ETYM A loan from Semitic, for which one compares Hebr. l^ebōnā 'frankincense' and Phoen. l^ebōnat, etc. 'id.' (from the root lāban 'to be white', probably after the white color of the sap of the tree. The meaning 'tree' is secondary to 'frankincense' itself. It was thought that the name of mount Λίβανος (= L^ebānōn) had influenced the Greek vocalization (details in Lewy 1895: 44f., Masson 1967: 53). Acc. to Müller Glotta 52 (1974): 53-59, however, the word was taken from Southern Arab libān. The form in -ωτος comes from the plural libānōt 'the grains of the resin'. The word is derived from the adjective lbn 'white' (Arab laban 'milk'). This is confirmed by the fact that people from southern Arabia came to Delos.

λιβρός [adj.] epithet of ὀλός 'turbid liquidity' (AP 15, 25, 1), of νύξ (EM 564, 49), 'dark' or 'humid', of σέλας (Trag. Adesp. 232); explained by Erot. as σκοτεινὸς καὶ μέλας (on Hp. Aër. 15, where the codd. have διερῷ and θολερῷ, said of ἠήρ). ◂?▸ •VAR λιμβρός (EM 564, 52; Suid.).
•ETYM Fur.: 287[68] notes that the prenasalization could be due to late Greek/Byzantine nasalization. The merit of his comparison with λιαρός (ibid. 240, 287) is doubtful. The comparison with λείβω (Frisk, DELG hesitantingly) does not seem to make any sense.

λίγδην [adv.] 'touching superficially, grazing' (χ 278), ἐπιλίγδην 'id.' (P 599). ◂IE? sleiǵ-* 'slide'▸ •DER λίγδος [m.] 'mortar' (Nic., also S. Fr. 35?), 'mould made of earthenware or of clay, funnel' vel sim. (Poll., Ael. Dion., H.), 'lye' (Eust.), λίγδα· ἡ ἀκόνη, καὶ ἡ κονία 'whetstone, plaster' (H.). Denominative verb λιγδεύει· ἀπηθεῖ 'filters' (H.).
•ETYM For λίγδα, cf. ἄρδᾰ, ἔπιβδᾰ and Solmsen 1909: 269. The suffixal agreement between the adverb λίγδην and the substantives λίγδος, -δα is not accidental (cf. Chantraine 1933: 360), but the adverb was first. As the semantic connection between λίγδος and λίγδην is not immediately clear, note the phonetic similarity of λίγδος with its synonym ►ἴγδις.

As a basis, a verb λίζω (otherwise unattested) was assumed by Eust. 1926, 37, "ὡς ἀπὸ τοῦ λίζειν, λέξεως ὠνοματοπεποιημένης", which he probably thought up. A verb with an original meaning 'to smear, glide, etc.' is compared: OIr. (fo)sligim 'to smear', also 'to beat' (from *'to brush'), OHG slīhhan 'to steel, creep' from 'to go gliding'; several nouns, e.g. OIr. slige 'comb', ON slíkr 'smooth', slíkisteinn 'rubbing stone', and from Slavic e.g. Ru. slízkij 'slippery, slimy'. This points to a root sleiǵ-* 'to slide'. See further ►λισσός.

λιγνύς, -ύος [f.] 'thick smoke, smoking fire' (A., S., Ar., Arist.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •DER λιγνυώδης (Hp., Gal.), λιγνυόεις (A. R.) 'smoky'.
•ETYM Fur.: 118 compares ἰκνύς 'dust, ashes' (λ-/zero), which is conceivable; but his comparison with ἀλισγέω (ibid. 292) is mistaken.

λιγύς [adj.] 'clear, resounding, shrill' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Fem. λίγεια (on the accent Schwyzer: 474, Chantraine 1942: 191), ntr. λιγύ.
•COMP Frequent as a first member, e.g. λιγύ-φωνος 'with clear voice'; adverbs λίγα, λιγέως (Il.).
•DER With extended suffix λιγυ-ρός (perhaps dissimilated from -υ-λός?) 'id.' (Il.). Denominative verb λιγαίνω 'to cry, resound or sing with a clear voice' (Il.), with λιγάνταρ (= λιγαντήρ)· εἶδος τέττιγος. Λάκωνες 'a kind of cicada' (H.), see Strömberg 1944: 18. An old nasalized formation is the aor. λίγξε 'twanged' (of βιός 'bow' Δ 125); cf. λίγγω· ἠχῶ 'resound' (Theognost. Can. 16).
•ETYM Unexplained.

λίθος [m., f.] 'stone, boulder, rock, precious stones' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR On the gender see Schwyzer 1950: 37[6], Shipp 1967: 76.
•COMP Compounds like λιθο-βόλος [m.] 'stone-thrower' (Att.), μονό-λιθος 'consisting of one stone' (Hdt.).
•DER 1. Diminutives: λιθ-ίδιον (Pl., Arist.), -άριον (Thphr., Hell. inscr.), -αρίδιον (Alex. Trall.). 2. collectives: λιθάς, -άδος [f.] 'shower of stones, throw of a stone' (Od., A., Nic.), see Chantraine 1933: 352; λιθία 'rock' (Hell.), cf. Chantraine 1933: 81. 3. λίθαξ [f.] 'stone' (ε 415 [attributive], Hell. poetry), λιθακός 'id.' (Stesich.), Chantraine 1933: 384; λιθίς = λιθίασις (see below; Hp.). 4. Adjectives: λίθεος (Hom.), λίθιος (Thess.), -ειος (sch.) 'of stone'; λίθινος 'id.' (Pi., IA), λιθικός 'ptng. to a stone' (Hell.). λιθώδης 'stone-like, stony' (IA), λιθωδία (Eust.). 5. Verbs: λιθάζω 'to throw with stones, lapidate' (Arist., Anaxandr.), with λιθασ-μός, -τής, -τικός (A. D., sch.); λιθόομαι 'to be turned into stone' (Arist.), with λίθωσις (Aristeas, Plu.); λιθιάω (-θάω) 'to suffer from the stone' (Hp.; after other verbs of disease in -ιάω), whence λιθίασις (Hp., Gal.).
•ETYM Unexplained.

λικερτίζειν [v.] · σκιρτᾶν 'to leap, bound' (H.); Frisk wrongly gives πηδᾶν. ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Connection with ►λάξ, ►λακτίζω is impossible. Pre-Greek origin is likely.

λικμάω [v.] 'to separate the grain from the chaff, winnow', metaph. 'to crush, destroy' (E 500, B., X., LXX, pap.). ◂IE neik-* 'swing (cereals) for winnowing'▸ •VAR Aor. λικμῆσαι.

•DER λικμητήρ 'winnower', λικμητρίς 'winnowing fan', also λικμήτωρ, -τής; -ητήριον 'winnowing fan, shovel'; -ητός 'winnowing, scattering'; -ητικός 'ptng. to winnowing'. Probably a back-formation is λικμός 'winnowing fan', λικμαία epithet of Demeter, λικμίζει· ἀλοᾷ 'threshes, crushes' (H.), λίκνον [n.] 'winnowing fan' (Arist.), also a sacred basket with the first fruits in the cult of Demeter (S., AP); λικνοφόρος also 'cradle' (h. Merc., Call.), λικνίτης epithet of Dionysus (Orph. , Plu.), -ῖτις, of τροφή (S. Ichn. 269), λικνίζω = λικμάω (pap.).
With a different initial: ν(ε)ίκλον· τὸ λίκνον (H.), ἰκμᾶν· λικμᾶν, σῖτον καθαίρειν 'to cleanse grain'; ἰκμῶντο· ἐσείοντο, ἐπνέοντο 'to shake, blow' (H.), ἀνικμώμενα (Pl. Ti. 53a; v.ll. ἀναλικνώμενα, ἀναλικμώμενα), ἀπ-ικμῆσαι, δι-ικμῶνται (Thphr.). Further from H. εὐ<νί>κμητο<ν>· εὐλί<κ>μητον, ἀνικλώμενον· ἀνακαθαιρόμενον (cf. on ἀνικμώμενα above), and without a suffix νικᾷ· λικμᾷ; νικεῖν (for -κᾶν?)· λικμᾶν, νείκεσεν· ἔκρινεν 'sieved', εὐνικές· εὐκρινές 'well-sieved', νεικητήρ· λικμητήρ. Μεγαρεῖς.
•ETYM λίκνον and νίκλον, and probably also νικμᾶν (in εὐνίκμητον), can be understood as dissimilated from *νίκνον, *νικνᾶν. Perhaps, λικμᾶν and, with loss of the anlaut, ἰκμᾶν, derive from νικμᾶν. Cf. Danielsson Eranos 5 (1903-1904): 1ff. on the dark form ἀπολεικαι (inscr. Milete).
Starting from *νίκ-νον, it is attractive to connect the full grade verb Lith. niekóti, 1sg. niekóju 'to winnow (corn)', Latv. niẽkât 'to swing groats in a mill'; cf. suffixless Greek glosses like νικᾷ.

λικριφίς ⇒λέχριος.

λιλαίομαι [v.] 'to desire, vehemently long for' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Only present; the perf. ▸λελιημένος does not belong here.
•ETYM A reduplicated yod-present, which has been connected with Skt. laṣati 'to radiate, be pleased' (either a thematic root present with secondary ṣ for s, or from la-ls-a-ti* with reduplication and zero grade). However, the nouns λάσται· πόρναι 'whores' (H.) and λάσταυρος (see ▸λάσται, as well as λάσθη and λῆναι) point to Pre-Greek origin in view of their suffixes.
From other languages, comparisons have been made with, e.g., Lat. lascīvus 'luxuriant, wanton' (from las-ko-*, cf. Ru. láska 'caress, affection'), Skt. lā-las-a- 'desirous', etc. Unrelated because of the deviant vocalism is the Gm. group of Go. lustus 'lust'.
An IE root las-* is hardly possible. LIV² s.v. las-* states that the appurtenance of the Skt. (epic class.) verbs laṣati and lasati to the Greek verb is uncertain.

λίμβος [adj.] 'λίχνος, desirous, fond of sweets' (comm. Arist., H.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also λιμβός.
•DER λιμβεύω [v.] 'λιχνεύω, to be desirous' with λιμβεία = λιχνεία (Hdn. Epim., H.).
•ETYM Unexplained.

λιμήν 'harbour'. ⇒λειμών.

λίμινθες [?] · ἕλμινθες. Πάφιοι 'intestinal worms' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸

•ETYM A Variant of ▸ἕλμινθες, where the idea is discussed that λιμ- goes back to a Pre-Greek sequence lʸm-*. Influence of λῖμός 'hunger' seems improbable.

λῖμός [m., f.] 'hunger, famine' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR On the gender see Schwyzer 1950: 37³, Solmsen 1909: 109.
•COMP λιμ-αγχ-έομαι 'be weakened by hunger' (Hp.) from *λίμ-αγχ-ος (to ἄγχω, cf. Schwyzer: 726); on βού-λιμος see on ▸βουλιμία; on πούλιμος 'strong hunger' (Boeot.) see Schulze KZ 33 (1895): 243f.
•DER λιμ-ώδης 'hungry' (Hp.), -ηρός 'hungry, ptng. to hunger' (Theoc., AP), -αλέος = ῥυσός, λεπτός (H.), after αὐαλέος, etc. Verbs: λιμαίνω, λιμῆναι 'to suffer from famine' (Hdt.), λιμώττω, -ώσσω 'id.' (Str., J.), with λίμωξις (late).
•ETYM A primary formation compared with λῖμός is suspected in ▸λοιμός 'plague', where the long ῑ is sometimes explained by Saussure's Law: loss of laryngeal after o-grade root. For ▸λειρός see ▸λείριον.

λιμπάνω ⇒λείπω.

λιμφός [m.] · συκοφάντης. ἢ μηνυτὴς παρανόμων 'a denunciator, or accuser of illegal acts or people' (H.). ◂?▸
•DER λιμφεύειν· ἀπατᾶν 'to deceive' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained.

λίναμαι ⇒λιάζομαι.

λίνδος [m.] an aromatic plant (Mnesim. Com. 4, 63 apud Ath. 9, 403d, Eust. 315, 18). ◂?▸
•ETYM Named after the town Lindos on Rhodes? Cf. the plant name θάψος (after the spit of land and town of the same name) and other cases in Strömberg 1940: 121ff.

λινεύς [m.] fish name = κεστρεύς, 'mullet' (Call. Com. 3 apud Ath. 7, 286b, Phot., H.). ◂GR?▸ •ETYM Connected with λίνον 'fishing net', as a back-formation from λινεύω [v.] 'to catch fish with a λ.' by Boßhardt 1942: 50; cf. the description in Thompson 1947: 109 (s.v. κεστρεύς). Hardly related (as an inherited word) to Balto-Slavic names of the 'tench': Lith. lýnas, Ru. lin', etc.

λίνον [n.] 'linen, flax, linen cloth, thread, cord, fishing net' (Il.). ◂EUR?▸
•DIAL Myc. ri-no /lino-/.
•COMP Several compounds like λινο-θώρηξ 'with linen cuirass' (Il., AP), λινό-ζωστις [f.] 'mercury, Mercurialis' (Hp., Dsc.), from a compound *λινο-ζώστης, cf. Strömberg 1940: 148; λευκό-λινον [n.] 'white flax' (Hdt.).
•DER Diminutives: λινάριον 'thread, net' (Delos IIᵃ, D. Chr.), λινούδιον 'linen cloth' (pap.), probably from τὸ λινοῦν (ἱμάτιον); also λινούτιον (pap.; cf. below).
Adjectives: λίνεος, -οῦς, -ός (IA); λινέα, -αία [f.] 'cord, noose' (Hell.), λίνινος (Tanagra IIIᵃ) 'linen', λιναῖος 'id., made of flax' (Hp., pap.), λινική [f.] 'tax on flax' (pap.).

Verbs: λινεύω 'to catch with nets' (Peripl. M. Rubr.); also late hypostases: δια-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-λινάω 'to slip through the net, escape from the net, inspect the net' (Phryn., Eust., H.), ἐκ-λινίζω 'to escape from the net' (Byz.). On ►λινεύς = κεστρεύς, see s.v.
•ETYM λίνον has been compared with BSl. forms like Lith. linaĩ [pl.] 'flax, linen', Ru. lën, gen. lьná 'id.', which go back on a short vowel. Opposed to this is Lat. līnum with long vowel, whence OIr. lín 'net' and other Celtic words, and Alb. li-ri, l̦i-ni 'linen' were borrowed. The Gm. group of Go. lein, OHG līn (also ON, OE) also agrees with Lat. līnum, and can therefore be considered loans from it, too.
Original identity is possible, however, since the cultivation of flax in Central Europe is very old. Still, it is more probable that λίνον and līnum derive from a Mediterranean word. The word is unknown in Indo-Iranian (but the concept is, of course).
Fur.: 375 cites the gloss καὶ λῖνος παρὰ Κυπρίοις (H.), a variant with long vowel. See also ►λῖτα and ►λίς 2.

λίνος [m.] name of a song (Σ 570, Hdt. 2, 79, Pi. Fr. 139, 5), also personified as a name of a mythical singer (Hes. Fr. 192, Theoc. 24, 105, Apollod. 1, 3, 2). ◄?►
•ETYM Foreign word from an unknown oriental source. Cf. ►αἴλινος, which is the source of the PN Λίνος, acc. to Güntert 1921: 64. Acc. to Eißfeldt 1939: 161ff., αἴλινον (whence perhaps λίνος as a PN, as opposed to λίνος 'song' = λίνον 'linen') is from Phoenic. 'ij Alijan, a lamentation for the god of vegetation Alijan.

λίπα [adv.] 'fat, gleaming' (Il.). ◄IE leip-* 'stick'► •VAR In Hom. in elided form only: (ἀλείψασθαι) λίπ' ἐλαίῳ, etc.; unelided λίπα in Hp., Th. (cf. Leumann 1950: 309f.).
•DER λιπαρός 'fat, gleaming (of oil or unguent), fruitful' (Il.), together with λιπαρία 'fatness' (Dsc.) and λιπαίνω 'to make fat, anoint' (IA) with λίπανσις 'anointing' (med.), λιπαντικός 'good for anointing' (sch.), λιπασμός 'anointing' (Dsc.), λίπασμα 'fat substance' (Hp., Hell.). Other verbs: λιπάω 'to be sleek from unguents' (τ 72, Hell.), trans. 'to anoint' (Nic.), λιπάζω 'id.' (Nic.). Innovated s-stem: λίπος [n.] 'fat' (A., S., Arist.) with λιπώδης 'fatty, oily' (Thphr.); also λίπας [n.] 'id.' (Aret.), after κρέας?
•ETYM A formal correspondence to λίπ-α, probably a derivative from a root noun, is found in Skt. rip- [f.] 'defilement, deceit'; λιπαρός looks like Skt. rip-rá- [n.] 'defilement, dirt', and λίπος like Skt. répas- [n.] 'stain, dirt', but both could be independent formations. Appurtenance of Alb. laparós 'to defile' is doubtful.
The other languages show different formations: nasal present Skt. li-m-p-áti [3sg.pres.] 'to smear', with 3pl. aor. med. alipsata, Lith. lìpti, 1sg. limpù 'to stick, be sticky'; yod-present in OCS pri-lьpljǫ, inf. pri-lьpěti 'to stick'. A deviant meaning is found in the Gm. group of OHG bi-līban 'to stay, remain'. Unrelated is ►ἀλείφω 'to anoint', which requires *h_2leib^h-. The comparison with Hitt. lip(p)-^{zi} 'to lick' should be discarded, because it is an onomatopoeia (Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). See ►λίπτω.

λιπαρέω 'to persist'. ⇒λίπτω.

λιπερνής, -ητος [adj.] mg. uncertain, perhaps 'poor, deserted, orphaned' (Archil. 50 [πολῖται], BCH 11, 161 [Caria], gloss.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR λιφερν-οῦντας (see below).
•DER Also -ήτης (AP 9, 649, EM), -ῆτις [f.] (Call. Fr. 66e, Epic. Oxy. 1794, 17, Suid. [= πτωχή]), together with λιπερνοῦντας· πενιχρούς 'poor, needy' (Suid.), which has a variant λιφερνοῦντας (J. AJ 2, 5, 5), of στάχυας, parallel to ἀσθενεῖς, opposed to καρηβαροῦντας.
•ETYM The suggestion by Suid. and EM 566, 50: παρὰ τὸ λείπεσθαι ἐρνέων, ὅ ἐστι φυτῶν 'leaving behind the sprouts, i.e. the plants', is clearly folk-etymology. The variant with aspiration points to a Pre-Greek word. For the structure, cf. ►κυβερνάω.

λίπος 'fat'. ⇒λίπα.

λίπτω [v.] 'to desire' (A. R., Lyc., Nic.). ◄?►
•VAR Perf. med. λελιμμένος 'desiring' (A. Th. 355, 380).
•DER Cf. λίψ· ἐπιθυμία 'desire' (H.), further λῑπαρέω [v.] 'to persist, ask persistently or repeatedly' (IA), with λιπαρίη 'persistence, endurance' (Hdt.) and λιπαρής 'persistent, persisting, earnest' (S., Ar., Pl.).
•ETYM λίπτω is traditionally compared with Lith. liẽpti, 1sg. liepiù 'to command, order, organize', OPr. pallaips 'order'. Alternatively, λίπτω and λῑπαρέω may belong to λίπα, λιπαρός; but a serious problem is the length of the ῑ. See ►λιψουρία.

λῑρός [adj.] 'bold, shameless, lewd' (Call. Fr. 229, Alex. Aet. 3, 30). ◄?►
•COMP Compound λιρ-όφθαλμος 'with lewd eyes' (Suid.), Λιρο-κλῆς PN (Ion. inscr.).
•DER λιραίνει· ἀναιδεύεται 'shows shameless behaviour' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Fur.: 240 is unconvincing.

λῖς 1 'lion'. •VAR λίς. ⇒λέων.

λίς 2 [adj.] epithet of πέτρη 'rock' (μ 64, 79) and of σινδών 'cloth' (SGDI 5702, 19; Samos IV^{a}): 'smooth'. ◄IE? lh_1i-t-* 'smooth'► •DIAL Myc. ri-ta pa-we-a /līta p^harwe^{h}a/ 'smooth clothes'.
•DER 1. acc.sg. (also taken as pl.) λῖτ-α, dat. λιτ-ί 'smooth linen' (Hom.). 2. λῑτός 'simple, plain' (since IV^{a}), λίτως (Alc. F 7, 2; context unknown) together with λιτότης [f.] 'simpleness' (Democr. 274, Thphr.). 3. λισσός (Crete III^{a}, also TN), fem. λισσή (Od.), λισσάς, Boeot. λιττάς (Corinn., A., E., Theoc., A. R.) 'smooth, bare', also metaph. 'naked, insolvent' (Crete); hence λισσόομαι in [λισ]σωθέντων [ptc.] 'becoming insolvent' (Crete III^{a}) and in λίσσωμα '(bald spot on the) crown', λίσσωσις 'bald-headedness' (Arist.); cf. λισσούς· δεομένους 'lacking, in need'. καὶ τοὺς ἡσυχῇ φαλακρούς 'slightly bald' (H.). On ►λισσάνιος, see s.v.
•ETYM The basis of these words was the τ-stem λι-τ-, seen in λί-ς and in the substantives λῖτ-α, λιτ-ί. Thematic enlargement gave λιτ-ό-ς; beside this, there was a i̯a-derivative in fem. *λῖσσα < *λῖτ-i̯α, with a new nom. λισσή from the originally ablauting gen. λισσῆς, and a new msc. λισσός. For λίς : λῖσσα, compare e.g. θής : θῆσσα, Κρής : Κρῆσσα. The form ►λεῖος 'level, smooth' can hardly be separated from λίς; this points to a reconstruction λῑτ- < *lh_1i-t- beside full-grade *leh_1i-u- (Schrijver 1991: 283f.).

λισγάριον [adj.] 'spade, mattock' (sch. Theoc. 4, 10, Suid. s.v. σκαφείδιον). ◂PG?▸
•DIAL MoGr. λισγάρι.
•ETYM A diminutive derived from *λίσγος, which is unexplained itself. Several hypotheses have been advanced: from *λίγ-σκος to Lat. ligō 'mattock'; from *λίδ-σκος or *λίδ-γος, related to ▸λίστρον. Fur.: 294 objects to a suffix -σκ-, referring to Schwyzer: 541. So the word is rather Pre-Greek.

λίσπος [adj.] probably 'smooth, polished, flat' (Ar. Ra. 826, of γλῶσσα); αἱ λίσπαι as a word for the halfs of a dice, used by two friends as a tally (Pl. Smp. 193a), also οἱ λίσποι (Suid.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aspirated by-form λίσφος (Attic acc. to Moer. and Tz.), λίσφοι = τὰ ἰσχία 'hip joints' (EM 567, 20). Cf. λίσφος = ἄπυγος; also λέσφος (EM 567, 21).
•COMP Compounds λισπό-πυγος (-πυξ) 'with smooth (flat) buttocks' (Phryn., Poll., sch.), ὑπό-λισπος (-φος) 'smooth, polished or flat underneath', especially of the buttocks and hips (Ar. Eq. 1368, Philostr., Poll.).
•DER Denominative λισφώσασθαι· ἐλαττώσασθαι 'to reduce, diminish' (H.).
•ETYM λίσφος and λέσφος are by-forms typical of a Pre-Greek word.

λισσάνιος [adj.] only in ὦ λισσάνιε (Ar. Lys. 1171; v.l. λυσσ-), a form of address of unknown mg., explained by H. and Phot. as ἀγαθός (cf. ὦ 'γαθέ). ◂?▸ •ETYM A Laconian word without etymology. The analysis as a compound pursued by Frisk fails to convince.

λίσσομαι [v.] 'to beg, pray, implore' (Il.). ◂IE? leit-▸ •VAR Aor. λιτέσθαι, λίσασθαι (Il., epic poet.), new pres. λίτομαι (h. Hom. 16, 5, Ar. [lyr.], AP).
•DER 1. λιταί [f.pl.], rare λιτή [sg.] 'prayer' (Il., Hdt.) with λιταῖος epithet of Zeus (Bithynia I^P), λιτήσιος 'praying' (Nonn.), after ἱκετήσιος (Chantraine 1933: 42); λιτάζομαι [v.] 'to pray, beg'. 2. With a suffix -ν-: λιτανός 'begging, suppliant' (A.), λιταίνω [v.] 'to implore, beg' (E.), λιτανεύω 'id.' (Il.); λιτανεία [f.] 'appeal, entreaty' (LXX, pap., D. H.), -ευτικός 'ptng. to prayer' (sch.). 3. λιτῆρα θαλλόν· τὸν ἱκέσιον (H.). 4. Verbal adjective -λιστος in compounds: τρί-, πολύ-, ἄ-λλιστος 'implored three times, much prayed for, etc.' (Il.), on -λλ- (also in ἐ-λλίσσετο, etc.) see Chantraine 1942: 176. An adj. *λιτός 'begging' does not exist, see Chantraine RPh. 79: 16ff.
•ETYM Unclear. Connection with Baltic words for 'touch', like Lith. liẽsti, lytė́ti is semantically unconvincing, that with ἀλίνω formally impossible. LIV² (s.v. 2. lei̯t-) defends the connection with the Baltic words: "Im Gr. über 'an den Knien berühren' zu 'anflehen' weiterentwickelt, vgl. hom. λισσέσκετο γούνων". Does the borrowing Lat. litāre 'to sacrifice under prosperous omina' from *litā < Gr. λιτή?

λισσός 'smooth'. ⇒λίς 2.

λίστρον [n.] 'tool for levelling, spade, shovel, etc.' (χ 455, Lyc., Mosch.). ◂?▸

•VAR Also -ος [m.].
•DER Diminutive λίστριον [n.] (Ar. Fr. 809, inscr. Lebadea), λιστρωτός 'flattened, smoothed' (Nic.) with λιστρόω (Eust.), λιστρεύω [v.] 'to dig up' (ω 227), λιστραίνω 'id.' (Suid.).
•ETYM An instrument name in -τρον without explanation. Assuming *λίτ-τρον, it may belong to λίς, λιτ-ός 'smooth, even'. Comparisons with Latv. lîst, 1sg. lîdu, Lith. lýdyti 'to dig up, unearth, smoothen' and with Lat. līra 'furrow' have been given up.

λίσφος 'smooth'. ⇒λίσπος.

λῖτα 'linen', dat. λιτί. •VAR λιτός 'simple'. ⇒λίς 2.

λιταί 'prayer(s)'. ⇒λίσσομαι.

λῐταργίζω [v.] 'to slip away' (Ar. Pax 562, Nu 1253, both fut.); λιταργίζειν· τροχάζειν 'to run quickly'; ἀπολιταργίσαι· ταχέως ἀποδραμεῖν 'to run off quickly' (H.); ◂?▸
•VAR Fut. -ιῶ.
•COMP Also with ἀπο-.
•DER λιταργισμός (sch. Ar. Nu. 1255), λίταργος 'running quickly' (An. Ox. 2, 236, EM 567, 38), perhaps an invented back-formation.
•ETYM Unexplained. The ending recalls ἀργός 'quick', but the beginning is unclear (λιτός 'simple'?).

λίτρα [f.] 'pound', as a weight and coin; as Sicilian silver money = half a mina or 50 drachmes (Epich., Sophr., [Simon.] 141, Hell.). ◂LW Western Medit.▸ •COMP Compounds like δεκά-λιτρος 'worth ten pounds' (Epich., Sophr.), λιτρο-σκόπος 'money-changer' (S. Fr. 1065).
•DER λιτραῖος (AP, Gal.), also λιτρ-ιαῖος (Gal.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 49) 'worth or containing a pound'; λιτρίζω [v.] 'to weigh, deliver by weight' with λιτρισμός (pap.); also λιτρασμός 'libratio' (gloss.).
•ETYM A Mediterranean word, originating from Sicily and identical with Lat. lībra 'balance, pound'. As common basic form, līþrā* has been postulated; on the phonetics, see Schulze KZ 33 (1895): 223f., Schwyzer: 206, and Pariente Emerita 20 (1952): 389ff. The shortness of the ι in λίτρα, which would be Doric acc. to Hdn. Gr. 2, 546, 12, is unexplained. Details in WH s.v. lībra. Fur.: 182 further compares λιδρίον· τρύβλιον 'cup', also a measure (H.).

λιχανός •VAR λιχμάομαι, λίχνος. ⇒λείχω.

λίψ, λιβός ⇒λείβω.

λιψουρία [f.] 'desire to urinate' (A. Ch. 756). ◂GR?▸
•ETYM Abstract formation in -ία from a supposed *λιψ-ουρέω or *λίψ-ουρος, a governing compound from *λῖψαι 'desire', related to ▸λίπτω, and οὖρον. Was this the origin of the gloss λίψ· ἐπιθυμία (H.)?

λοβός [m.] 'lobe, lap, slip', a designation of various lap- or slip-like parts of the body or of plants, especially 'lobe of the ear' (Ξ 182), also of the liver (Hp., A., E., Pl.), of the lung (medic.), etc.; 'leaf of the elder' (Thphr.), 'capsula with seeds, pods of leguminous plants'; also these plants themselves; 'pod, seedbox, skin of fruit' (Thphr., Dsc., Gal.). ◂EUR?▸

•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. πρό-λοβος [m.] 'crop of birds, Adam's apple' (Arist., LXX), but προ-λόβιον 'the front part of the lobe of the ear' (Poll., H.); ἔλ-λοβος 'in a pod, having a pod' (Thphr.), lengthened ἐλλοβ-ώδης 'id.' (cf. Strömberg 1937: 164), but ἐλ-λόβιον 'earring' (Luc., S. E.); ἀντι-λόβιον, -βίς 'part of the ear-lobe opposite to the προλόβιον' (medic.); ἐπιλοβίς· μέρος τοῦ ἥπατος 'part of the liver' (H.); as an adjective in ἡ ἐπιλοβὶς γλῶσσα 'lobe of the liver', a sign of soothsayers (PAmh. 2, 14, 21; III-IV[p]); as a term of construction καταλοβεύς [m.] 'cornice, crossbeam' (Epid., Hierapytna); ὀξυλοβέω 'τὸ ταχέως ἀκούω = hearing quickly' (Suid.), from *ὀξύ-λοβος, see Strömberg 1937: 164.
•DER Diminutive λόβιον (Gal, Dsc.).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. The connection with MoHG Lappen 'piece, rag' is semantically attractive, as is that with its cognates, e.g. OE læppa [m.] 'tip, lap', ēar-læppa 'ear-lobe'. It sometimes appears without gemination, as in MoNw. lape 'to hang down', MLG ōr-lepel 'ear-lobe'.
A deviating vocalism is shown by Lat. labāre 'to waver', beside which with a long vowel lābor, lābī 'to glide'; both may derive from a root *(s)leh_2b- (in which case they are unrelated). With initial sl- we find e.g. MLG slap 'slack', OCS slabъ 'slack', probably continuing slob-. The fact that all these words show IE b points to European substrate origin.

λογάδες [f.pl.] 'white of the eye, τὰ λευκὰ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν' (Sophr. 49, Call. Fr. 132, Nic. Th. 292), also = 'eyes' (AP 5, 269). ◂GR?▸
•VAR In Poll. 2, 70 sing.
•ETYM Metaphorical use of λογάδες (λίθοι): 'picked, chosen', i.e. 'unworked stones, pebbles' as opposed to 'cut stones' (Paus. 7, 22, 5); cf. also λογάδην 'by accidental selection', of stones (Th.), λιθο-λόγος (-έω, -ία) 'who works with unworked stones' (as opposed to λιθο-τόμος, -ουργός). Note the alternative explanation of λογάδας as ψήφους λευκάς 'white pebbles' in H. Likewise, Sw. ögon-sten 'eye-ball', properly "eye-stone". See also ►λέγω, and on ►λωγάλιοι. Fur.: 363, etc. connects λογάδες with λύγδος 'white marble', but this not evident semantically.

λογγάζω [v.] 'to linger, hesitate, abide' (A. Fr. 112, Ar. Fr. 811). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aor. λογγάσαι.
•DER λογγάσια [n.pl.], H. also -σίη [f.sg.], originally "abode", 'stones to fix cables of a ship' (H., Phot. s.v. λογγάζειν).
•ETYM Formation like γυμνάσιον, -σία to γυμνάζομαι, etc. (Schwyzer: 469f.); further λογγῶνες [m.pl.] 'id.', which acc. to EM 569, 42, is Syracusan, a shortened form after the place names in -(ε)ών.
It cannot be separated from the synonym ►λαγγάζω; the variation α/ο points to Pre-Greek origin. Cf. also Fur.: 274 (on Lat. langueō).

λόγος, λόγιος ⇒λέγω.

λόγχη [f.] 'spearhead, javelin, lance' (Pi.). ◂?▸

•COMP Compounds like λογχο-φόρος 'lance-bearer' (E., Ar., X., Plb.), δί-λογχος 'with double lance' (A.).
•DER Diminutives: λογχ-ίον (Hell. inscr.), -άριον (Posidon., Luc.), -ίς (Hell. [?]), -ίδια (H. s.v. ζιβύννια).
Adjectives: λόγχιμος 'belonging to the lance' (A.), cf. μάχιμος; λογχωτός 'provided with a lance' (B., E., Hell. inscr.) with λογχόομαι, see below; λογχήρης 'id.' (E.), λογχαῖος· μετὰ τῆς λόγχης (Suid.).
Substantives: λογχίτης [m.] 'lance-bearer' (Hdn.), λογχῖτις [f.] plant name (Dsc., Gal.), after the form of the seeds (Strömberg 1940: 55).
Verbs: λογχόομαι 'to provide with a lance' (Arist., Str.), probably a back-formation from λογχωτός (above), rare λογχεύω [v.] 'to pierce with a lance' (AP 9, 300 in tit.), λογχάζει (H.) explaining δοράζει.
•ETYM Unexplained; all previous hypotheses are unconvincing: comparison with λαγχάνω as "the reaching one"; analysis as "the long one", related to Lat. longus; more in Frisk.

λοιγός [m.] 'ruin, havoc, death' (Il.). ◂IE leig-* 'illness'▸ •COMP As a second member in βροτο-λοιγός 'destroying men', of Ares (Il.), also in ἀθηρη-λοιγός "destroyer of chaff", 'winnowing-fan' (Od.).
•DER λοίγιος 'destroying, bringing disaster' (Il.), also λοιγήεις, -ής 'id.' (Nic.), poetical transformations, cf. Schwyzer: 527 and 513); λοιγίστρια· ὀλοθρεύτρια (H.), to ὀλοθρεύω 'to destroy'.
•ETYM Properly an agent noun "destroyer" (cf. Porzig 1942: 307) of a primary verb preserved in Lith. líegti 'to be very ill, be ailing' (IE leig-*), to which also belongs the zero grade action noun ligà, Latv. liga 'illness, plague'; further perhaps Alb. lig 'bad, meagre' and (with IE k*) OIr. líach 'miserable, unhappy'. Unrelated are ►ὀλίγος 'slight, small' (Saussure Effect is unlikely, especially in initial position), and Arm. ałk'at 'poor' (see Martirosyan 2010 s.v.).

λοιδορέω [v.] 'to slander, abuse, reprove, revile' (Pi., IA). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. λοιδορῆσαι.
•COMP Sometimes with prefixes like ἀπο-, συν-, προσ-.
•DER λοιδορία 'slander' (Att.); also λοιδόρ-ησις (Pl., LXX), -ησμός (Ar.), -ημα (Arist., Plu.), -ημάτιον (Ar.); -ητικός 'abusive' (Arist.), -ιστής (H.) as an explanation of κόβειρος (after ἀγωνιστής, etc.); as a back-formation λοίδορος 'abusive, slanderer' (E. Cyc. 534, Arist., Hell.).
•ETYM Taken as a formation comparable to πολι-ορκέω, δειρο-τομέω, οἰνο-χοέω, etc., but further details are unclear. It is doubtful to compare the first part with Lat. lūdus 'play', λίζει· παίζει 'plays' (H.), as is done by Perpillou 1996: 112ff., who also adduces the gloss λίνδεσθαι· ἁμιλλᾶσθαι 'to contend', and proposes haplology from *λοιδο-δορέω. Note that several terms with this meaning are Pre-Greek (cf. ►κερτομέω).

λοιμός [m.] 'plague' (A 61), metaph. 'pernicious man' (D.), also in adjectival function (LXX, christ. lit.). ◂?▸
•VAR λοίμη (H.), probably for λύμη.

•DER λοιμώδης 'like the plague' (Hp., Th.), λοιμικός 'belonging to the plague' (Hp., Hell.; Chantraine 1956a: 121), λοίμιος epithet of Apollo in Lindos (Macr.); λοιμότης 'plague-like situation' (LXX); λοιμεύομαι [v.] 'to be contaminated with the plague' (LXX), λοιμώσσω, -ώττω 'to suffer from the plague' (Gal., Luc.).
•ETYM Most often taken as ablauting with ►λῑμός. The form λοιγός has also been considered as a root-cognate, and a third suffixal variant was seen in λοιτός· λοιμός (H.). The form λοιτός is taken by Schmidt s.v. as a mistake for λοιγός, and with good reason. A cross of λιμός and λοιγός has also been suggested, but this is a desperate attempt to explain everything.

λοιπός 'remaining'. ⇒λείπω.

λοῖσθος 1 [adj.] 'the last, utmost' (Ψ 536). ◁?▷
•DER λοίσθιος (Pi., trag., Theoc., A. R.), (τὸ) λοίσθιον [adv.] 'at last'. λοισθήϊος 'regarding the last', (τὰ) λοισθήϊα 'the last prize' (Ψ 785, 751), like ἀριστήϊον, -ϊα; λοίσθημα· τέλος, πέρας 'end, border' (H.). Unclear are the glosses λοίσθωνας· τοὺς ἀκρατεῖς περὶ τὰ ἀφροδίσια 'the weak ones regarding sex' (H.) and λοισθώνη· ἡ θρασεῖα 'the bold one' (Suid.).
•ETYM No etymology. All suggested explanations are unconvincing (for literature see Frisk): from *λοιhισ-θϝ-ος "the weakest in the course", related to θέω and Gm. *laisiz 'less' in MoE less, etc.; from *λοιhισ-τος; related to Lith. léidžiu, léisti 'let', Lat. lūdus 'game', etc.; from *λοhισ-τος to Go. las-iws 'weak, powerless', etc. (Solmsen IF 13 (1902/03): 140ff.). The problem is that the -θ- causes difficulties. Scheftelowitz KZ 56 (1929): 179 tried to get around this by positing sloidʰ-to-* (to OCS po-slědъnjь 'ἔσχατος, utmost, last' ~ slědъ 'trace', Lith. slýsti, 1sg. slýdau 'to glide', Gr. ὀλισθάνω, etc., from IE (s)leidʰ-* 'slippery, glide'), but it is unlikely that the cluster preserved its aspiration for such a long time.

λοῖσθος 2 [m.] 'beam' (IG 2², 1673: 17 [IVᵃ]), also an epithet of δόρυ, 'deck beam' vel sim. (E. Hel. 1597). ◁?▷ •ETYM MoGr. λοστός 'lever' seems to presuppose a pre-form λοϊσθός, see Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 168. Further unclear.

λοίτη [f.] · τάφος 'tomb' (H.). ◁IE leit-* 'go away, pass away'▷ •VAR λοιτεύειν· θάπτειν 'to bury' (H.).
•ETYM Derived from an old verbal root leit-* 'to go away, pass away' found in Germanic, e.g. Go. (af)leiþan, ON líða, OHG līdan > MoHG leiden 'to suffer', with the causative ON leiða 'to carry, conduct, bury', OHG leiten 'to lead, carry, etc.', to which also belong ON leiði [n.] 'burial place', OHG leitī [f.] 'conduct, exequiae'. In Iranian, the verb also remained as a euphemistic expression for 'pass away, die': Av. raēθ-, pres. iriθieiti. Tocharian preserves the older mg. 'go away', e.g. ToA 3pl.pres. litantär, ToB 3sg.subj. laitaṃ, pret. lita.

λοιτός 1 · λοιμός (H.). ⇒λοιμός.

λοιτος 2 [adj.] epithet of νόος, perhaps = ἁγνός (Supp. Epigr. 8, 716, 14 [Balbilla]). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unexplained.

λόκαλος [?] name of an unknown bird, perhaps a stork (Arist. HA 504). ◁?▷
•ETYM Fur.: 345 Anm. 3 compares Georg. laglagi, laqlaqi, lakvi, (East Caucasian) Tsakhur läglӓg 'stork', MoP laglag, laġlaġ 'id.'.

λόκκη [f.] · χλαμύς, ἐφαπτίς (garment names) (H.). ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM Fur.: 344 compares λάκκος 'a garment' (Peripl. M. Rubr.). Given the interchange α/ο, the word is probably Pre-Greek; compare Lat. lacerna 'mantle-like overcloth'.

λόλλα [f.]? name of a plant (pap. Byc.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

λολλώ word of child language (Hermipp. 89). ◁?▷
•VAR Cf. λολλοῦν· τὰ παιδία τὸν πόλτον 'porridge in child language' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown.

λοξός [adj.] 'bent to the side, slanting, oblique', metaph. 'ambiguous' (IA). ◁?▷
•COMP Late compounds like λοξο-κέλευθος 'with oblique paths' (Nonn.), παρά-λοξος 'slanting, oblique' (Sor.), cf. παρα-λοξαίνομαι below.
•DER Λοξίας, Ion. -ίης [m.] epithet of Apollo as a prophesying god (B., Hdt., trag.), also of the ecliptic (astron.), Λοξώ [f.] daughter of Boreas (Call., Nonn., EM 641, 57). λοξικὸς κύκλος 'the ecliptic' (astr.), λοξότης 'obliquity, ambiguity' (Str., Plu.). Denominative verbs: λοξόομαι 'to be oblique' (Sophr., Hp., Herod.), also -όω, also with ἐπι-, ὑπο-, whence λόξωσις 'inclination, obliquity (of the ecliptic)' (Epicur., Str.); (δια-)λοξεύω 'to make aslant or ambiguous' (Lib.), with λοξεύματα [pl.] 'obliquities' (Man.); παρα-λοξαίνομαι 'to be placed obliquely' (Hp.).
•ETYM Several adjectives with comparable meaning also have a suffix -σο-: γαυσός, καμψός, φοξός, ῥυσός, etc. Connection with λέχριος, and further with λεκροί (see Λοκροί) seems probable, but it seems impossible to make a reconstruction. The o-vowel seems to point to a nominal base form.
Further connections are not very clear; words for 'elbow, arm' and other curved body parts have an initial vowel (e.g. Lith. alkúnė 'elbow', Ru. lókot' 'id.' < PSl. ȍlkъt-*, Arm. olokʿ 'shin-bone') and should therefore be kept separate.

λομβρός [adj.] an indecent dance (Poll, 4, 105). ◁?▷
•ETYM It has been compared with λομβούς· τοὺς ἀπεσκολυμμένους 'stripped off'. Bechtel 1898: 61 gives the PN Λόμβαξ. Etymology unknown.

λοπός 'shell, bark, scale'. •VAR λοπάς, -ίς, etc. ⇒λέπω.

λορδός [adj.] 'bent backwards, so as to be convex in front', also sens. obsc., opposite κυφός (Hp., Arist.). ◁IE? lerd-* 'curve'▷ •DER Λόρδων, -ωνος [m.] name of a demon (Pl. Com. 174, 17, beside Κύβδασος from κύβδα); λορδόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to bend supinely' (Hp., com.), whence λόρδ-ωσις, -ωμα 'curvature of the spine inward' (Hp., Gal.), opposed to κύφ-ωσις, -ωμα; also λορδαίνω = -όω (Hp.).
•ETYM Isolated in Greek. Cognates in Armenian have been supposed, as well as in Celtic and Germanic. Semantically, a neat comparison exists with Arm. lorcʿ-kʿ [pl.]

(i-st.) = ὀπισθότονοι (Pl. Ti. 84e), i.e. 'spasmodic inward curvature of the upper body' (cf. λόρδωσις, -ωμα above); however, lorcʻ-kʻ must be derived from IE lor(d)-sk-(i)-*. A corresponding formation may be found in Celtic Gael. loirc [f.] 'deformed foot', which also admits of an IE basis lor(d)-sk-eh₂-*. Further we have, without a suffix -sk- and deviating in ablaut, MHG lerz, lurz 'left, sly' < 'crooked' (cf. lürzen 'to deceive' = ME bi-lurten 'id.'), from IE lerd-, lrd-.

λούματα 'chaff'. ⇒λούω.

λοῦσσον [n.] 'white pith of the fir-tree' (Thphr. HP 3, 9, 7); details in Strömberg 1937: 126, 128, 166. ◄?►

•ETYM May continue *λουκ-ιον as a derivative of a root noun, as is seen in Lat. lūx 'light', if from IE louk-s*. Further derivatives from this root are OCS luča [f.] 'ray, beam' with a suffix ih₂*. An o-derivative IE louk-o-* is seen in Lat. lūcus 'forest', etc.; the verbal adj. ►λευκός and the yod-present ►λεύσσω belong there, too, as does ►λύχνος. The etymology remains rather improbable, though.

λούω, -ομαι [v.] 'to bathe, wash (the body)' (Il.). ◄IE leuh₃-* 'wash, bathe'►

•VAR Also λοέω (ipf. λόεον δ 252). λόω (ipf. λό' [κ 361], λόον [h. Ap. 120], inf. λόεσθαι [Hes. Op. 749]); further λοῦσθαι (ζ 216), λοῦνται (Hdt.), λούμενος (Ar.); Dor. (Call. Lav. Pall. 72f.) λῶντο, λώοντο; aor. λοῦσαι, -σασθαι (Il.), epic also λοέσ(σ)αι, -έσσασθαι, Dor. λωσάμενος (Cyrene), pass. λουθῆναι (Hp.), -σθῆναι (LXX, pap.); fut. λούσω, -ομαι (IA), λοέσσομαι (ζ 221), perf. ptc. λελουμένος (E 6).

•DIAL Myc. re-wo-te-re-jo /lewotreios/, epithet of bathtubs.

•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἀπο-, ἐκ-. As a first member e.g. in λοετρο-χόος 'pouring bathwater' (Hom.) = Myc. re-wo-to-ro-ko-wo, see below.

•DER 1. λουτρόν, Hom. λοετρόν, Dor. λωτρόν (H.), usually plur. (always in Hom.) 'bath, bathing site' (Il.); λούτριον [n.] 'bathwater' (Ar., Luc.), ἀπολούτριος 'already used for washing' of water (Ael.), λουτρών, -ῶνος [m.] 'bathroom, public baths' (X., Hell.) with -ωνικός 'ptng. to a bathing site' (Cod. Just.), λουτρίς [f.] 'ptng. to the bath' (Theopomp. Com., H., Phot.), λουτρικός (H. s.v. ξυστρολήκυθον), λουτρόομαι [v.] 'to bathe' (Euboea). 2. λούτρα [f.] 'sarcophagus' (Corycos), for the mg. cf. μάκρα (from μάκτρα) 'bathtub, coffin'. 3. λουτήρ [m.] 'bathtub' (LXX, inscr.), -ήριον [n.] 'id.' (Antiph., inscr.; λωτ- Tab. Heracl.), whence diminutives -ηρίδιον (Hero, pap.), -ηρίσκος (gloss.); ἐκλουτήριος 'for washing out' (Aegina); ἐγλουστρίς [f.] 'bathing trunks' (Hell. pap.). 4. λούστης [m.] 'who loves bathing' (Arist., M. Ant.). 5. λοῦσις 'bathing, washing' (late pap., inscr.), ἀπόλουσις 'washing' (Pl.). 6. λοῦμα [n.] 'stream' (Sardes); probably also λούματα (cod. ἀούματα)· τὰ τῶν πτισσομένων κριθῶν ἄχυρα Κύπριοι 'the chaff of the barley-corns that are winnowed' (H.); cf. ἀπόλουμα = ἀποκάθαρμα (sch., Eust.); was the chaff drenched in water before feeding it? 7. λουτιάω [v.] 'to wish to bathe' (Luc. Lex. 2), after ἐμετ-ιάω : ἐμέω, etc.

•ETYM The aorist λο(ϝ)έσαι is of the same type as κορέσαι, στορέσαι; the rare present λο(ϝ)έω can be explained as an innovation. The form λοῦσαι may have arisen from *λοϝέσαι by contraction, and hence λούω may have been formed. In Homer, the uncontracted forms can often be substituted, e.g. λόεσεν, etc. for λοῦσεν, etc., as well as λοέεσθαι for λούεσθαι (Z 508 = O 265).

Both λοῦσαι, etc. and the isolated forms λό', λόον, λόεσθαι are understandable if we start from a thematic verb *λόϝω; the last forms however, could also be due to hyphaeresis (cf. Schwyzer: 252f.). Likewise, λοῦσθαι, λοῦνται, λούμενος admit of basic forms *λόϝ-εσθαι *λόϝ-ονται, *λοϝ-όμενος, but they may alternatively be explained from λο(ϝ)έεσ-θαι, λο(ϝ)έονται, λο(ϝ)εόμενος.
A correspondence to the vocalism of *λόϝω is found in Lat. lavō, lavere, the a-vocalism of which Vine KZ 119 (2006): 239 explains from a pre-form lou̯-V-* that originated in the frequent prefixed verbs (Lat. lavāre is mostly found as a simplex). It remains uncertain whether Arm. loganam, aor. logacʻay 'to bathe' has a disyllabic root too, given the productivity of the Arm. verbs in -anam.
Myc. re-wo-to-ro-ko-wo and re-wo-te-re-jo deviate in root vocalism from the Homeric and later forms; it is thought that their e-vocalism is original, and that λοετρόν, etc. arose by metathesis of lewo-*. The Celt. and Gm. nominal derivatives show the same vocalization as the Homeric forms, e.g. Gaul. lautro 'bathing place', OIr. lóathar 'basin', ON lauðr [n.] 'lye, soap foam', OE lēaþor 'soap foam', which may go back to IE louh₃-tro-* and be identical with λο(ϝ)ετρόν.
Hitt. lāḫu-ⁱ / laḫu- 'to pour, cast (metal), overflow' points to leh₂-u-* and can therefore not be related to λούω.

λοφνίς, -ίδος [f.] 'torch' (Lyc., AP, Cleitarch. gloss. apud Ath. 15, 701a [cod. λοφίδα]). ◄?►

•DER λοφνίδια· λαμπάδια 'small torches' (H.); also λοφνία [f.] 'id.' (Anon. apud Ath. 15, 699d; Kaibel λοφνίδα); cf. Scheller 1951: 56.

•ETYM Formation in -ίς or -ία derived from λόφνος, -νη. Because of the description in Ath., τὴν ἐκ τοῦ φλοιοῦ τῆς ἀμπέλου λαμπάδα 'torch made of the bark of the vine', it may derive from lop-sn-, related to λέπω 'peel', λοπός 'shell, bark'; the suffix is also seen in λύχνος, with comparable meaning. Still, I find this solution rather improbable.

λόφος [m.] 'neck of draught animals and men, crest of a helmet, crest of a hill, ridge' (Il.), also 'tuft on the head of birds, crest of feathers, cockscomb' (Simon., Hdt., Ar., Arist.). ◄IE? lobʰ-o-* 'crest, top'►

•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. γή-, γεώ-λοφος '(earthen) hill' (Pl., X.); rarely as a first member, e.g. (τὰ) λόφουρα 'having a crest-like tail', of draught animals and animals of burden (horses, asses, τὰ ὑποζύγια) as opposed to ruminants (Arist., Thphr., Hell. inscr.). λόφη [f.] 'comb' (D. S.), perhaps after κόμη?

•DER 1. Diminutives: λόφιον 'small crest of the helmet' (sch.), λοφίδιον 'small hill' (Ael.). Other substantives: 2. λοφιά, Ion. -ιή [f.] 'manes, bristly back, dorsal fin, etc.' (τ 446, also Hdt., Arist.), cf. Scheller 1951: 72f.; 3. λοφεῖον 'crest case' (Ar.), also λοφίς· περικεφαλαίας θήκη 'chest around the head', i.e. 'helmet' (H.). 4. λοφίας [m.] 'fish with dorsal fins', denomination of the φάγρος (Numen. apud Ath.), like ἀκανθίας, etc., Chantraine 1933: 94, also 'the first dorsal vertebra' (Poll.); in the last mg. also λοφαδίας (Poll.); λοφιήτης [m.] 'inhabitant of a hill' (AP, of Pan, after πολιήτης). 5. λόφωσις [m.] 'crest ornament' (Ar. Av. 291); cf. ἀέτωσις (see ►αἰετός). 6. Adjectives: λοφώδης 'crest-like, hilly' (Arist.), λοφόεις 'crested, hilly' (Tryph., Nonn.). 7. Verbs:

λοφάω 'to be crested' (Babr., Ar., H.), after κομάω, Leumann 1950: 307[77]; λοφίζω [v.] 'to raise the λ.' (Zonar.); λοφόομαι [v.] 'to tower, form a hill' (Eust.). 8. Hypostasis: καταλοφάδεια [adv.] 'hanging down from the neck' (κ 169 with metrically conditioned -εια, cf. κατωμάδιος, κατωμαδόν; Chantraine 1933: 39, Chantraine 1942: 101 and 176).
•ETYM As both Alc. (Z 65) and Hdt. (1, 171) consider the crest of the helmet to be a Carian invention, Schulze 1892: 257, 4 considers λόφος to be a Carian loan in this specific sense, which he separates from λόφος 'neck'. This is untenable.
An acceptable connection is that with ToA lap 'head' (Schulze 1933a: 252), the semantics of which are understandable if the Greek meaning was originally 'crest, crown'. However, ORu. lъbъ 'skull', together with OCS lъbьnъ 'belonging to the skull' (also Ru. lob 'forehead'), cannot be connected, since they point to lubʰ-*. Illyr. PN Otto-(Atto-)lobus is uncertain (Mayer Glotta 32 (1953): 83).

λόχμη 'lair of wild beasts'. •VAR λόχος [m.] 'ambush, childbed', etc. ⇒λέχεται.

λυγαῖος 'dark'. ⇒ἠλύγη.

λυγγούριον [n.] 'a kind of amber' (Thphr., Delos IIIᵃ, Str.). ◂PG?, EUR?▸
•VAR Also λιγγ-, λιγκ-; note λυγκούριον· τὸ ἤλεκτρον 'amber' (H.).
•ETYM Analyzed as a substantivized bahuvrīhi of λύγξ and οὖρον, as the stone was thought to be the urine of the lynx. However, λυγγούριον has variants λογούριον· ὕελος, Λάκωνες 'glass, crystal' (H.) and λογούριον· ὕαλος 'id.' (H.), which rather show that it is a foreign word. Therefore, the explanation as urine of the lynx is just a folk-etymological fantasy. See Fur.: 278[43]. See ►λύγξ 2.

λύγδος [f.] '(white) marble' (D. S., Peripl. M. Rubr., AP). ◂PG?▸
•DER λύγδ-ινος 'made of marble, marble-white' (Babr., Philostr., AP, Cyrene), -ίνεος 'id.' (AP). λύγδη· τὸ δένδρον ἡ λεύκη 'white poplar' (H.).
•ETYM Ending as in ►μόλυβδος, κίβδος, etc. and, like these, without etymology. A connection with λευκός and cognates is morphologically hard to explain, as the suffix -δος is not productive (except in sound-words like ►κέλαδος, s.v.). Fur.: 307 connects λογάδες, but this is improbable. Still, the word is probably Pre-Greek.

λύγος [f.(m.)] 'flexible branch, twig which is suited for twisting' (Il.). ◂IE? leug-* 'bend, twist'▸ •COMP Some compounds like Λυγο-δέσμα [f.] "bound with willow-twigs", Laconian epithet of Artemis (Paus.).
•DER λύγιον 'twig' (sch.), λυγέα 'willow' (Eust.), λύγινος 'made of λ.' (Heph. apud Ath.), λυγώδης 'like a willow' (Dsc., Eust.), λυγόω 'twist, bend' (AP, APl.). Also λυγίζομαι, -ω [v.] 'to turn, wind, bend' (Hp., Att., Theoc., AP), with λυγισμός 'turning, bending', of wrestlers, dancers, etc. (Ar., Luc.), λύγισμα 'sprain' (Dsc.), -ιστικός 'supple, flexible' (Poll.).
•ETYM Interpreted as verbal noun, λύγος can be connected with isolated formations in other languages: Lith. lùgnas [verb.adj.] 'supple', together with the denominative yod-present ON lykna < PGm. lukn-jan* 'bend the knee'; Lat. luxus < lug-s-o-* 'sprained' (cf. λύγισμα). Cf. also the frequentative Lat. lucto(r), luctāre 'to wrestle' (back-formation lucta [f.] 'wrestling match'), originally *"to turn (intr.)"; cf. λυγισμός.
The original meaning of λύγος would be "turning, bending"; perhaps λυγίζομαι, which is attested at a later date, retained a sense of this meaning.

λύγξ 1 'hiccup'. ⇒λύζω.

λύγξ 2, λυγκός [m., f.] 'lynx' (h. Hom. 19, 24, E., Arist., Thphr., Ael.). ◂EUR▸ •VAR Also gen. λυγγός (E. fr. 683).
•COMP As a first member in λυκό-λυγξ 'wolf-lynx' (pap. in Sb. Heidelb. 1923: 2, 14, 13); on ►λυγγούριον (also λυγκ-, λιγκ-, etc.) [n.] a kind of amber (Thphr.), see s.v.
•DER Diminutive λυγκίον (Callix.), λύγγιος 'of the lynx' (Edict. Diocl.). On the ambivalent PN Λυγκεύς (Hdt., Pi.) see Boßhardt 1942: 130f.; thence λυγκεύς name of an eye-salve (medic.).
•ETYM Old name of the lynx, found also in Arm., Gm., and BSl. Except for the nasal, λύγξ has a counterpart in the Lith. consonant-stem lūš-ų [gen.pl.], which is found beside the innovated i-stem lū̃š-is. The same change of declension occurred in the Slav. group (which received an initial r- by influence of another word, e.g. rysъ* 'sotted, red'): Ru. rýs', etc.
Transformations have occurred elsewhere as well: with thematic vowel in MoSw. lō 'lynx' (PGm. luh-a-, IE luḱ-o-); with an s-suffix in West-Germanic: OHG luhs, OE lox (cf. MoHG Fuchs, OE fox); with an n-suffix in Arm. lus-an-un-k' [pl.], which also presupposes an old full grade IE leuḱ-* or louḱ-. The Arm. n-formation might be connected somehow with the Greek nasal infix, which reappears in Lith. dial. (Žem.) lųnšis.
Fur.: 121 argues, on the other hand, that the word is of non-IE origin. It has been connected with the root leuk-* 'to see'; it would have referred to the sharp sight of the animal. However, this cannot explain the long ū of BSl., nor the -n- of Arm. nor the g of Gr. λύγγιος. So the word is non-IE, and probably a loan from a Eur. substrate language. There seems no reason to connect the gloss λουνόν· λαμπρόν 'shining' (H.). The PN Λυγκεύς may be cognate or not.
Lockwood Glotta 72 (1994): 41-43 thinks the name refers to the light color of the animal's skin. He simply declares that the nasal is secondary, and also connects the mythical name Λύγκεύς, but DELG Supp. (where Lockwood's interpretation is accepted in its entirety) thinks that the name rather comes from the geographical names with Λυγκ- mentioned by Lockwood, which indeed seems possible (these names may refer to the lynx or not, and they may well be of Pre-Greek origin). Therefore, there is as yet no conclusion to this discussion. Cf. Fur.: index. See ►λυγγούριον.

λυγρός 'miserable, unhappy'. ⇒λευγαλέος.

Λῦδός [adj.] 'Lydian' (Alc.). ◂LW Luw.▸
•DER Λύδιος 'of Lydia, Lydian' (Pi.), Λυδία (Hdt.), Λυδικός (Hdt.), Λυδίζω 'speak Lydian' (Hippon.), Λυδιστί 'in Lydian' (Cratin.).

•ETYM The name derives from Luwiy-a- 'Luwian'. The Lydians came from the north and were originally called Μῄονες. Then coming southward, they occupied Luwian territory and thereby received the name of the older inhabitants. In Lydian, -y- > -d-, while -i- was syncopated. Thus Luwiy-a-* > Luwd-* gave Lūd- (with long ū). The change of name is mentioned by Herodotus (1, 7; 7, 74); it is not found in Homer. The later Lydian territory had a Luwian substrate. See Beekes Kadmos 42 (2004): 47ff., where the thesis is put forth that the Lydians were driven south on the arrival of the Phrygians, around 1200ª; see also Beekes BiOrbis. 59 (2002): 205-242 (441f.).

λύζω [v.] 'to hiccup' (Hp., Ar., Arist.). ◄IE sluk/g-* 'swallow'► •VAR Aor. λύγξαι (Gal.).
•COMP Sometimes with ἀνα-, ἐπι-, ὑπο-.
•DER λυγμός 'swallowing' (Hp., Arist., Nic.), also = ὀλολυγμός (H.), with λυγμώδης 'accompanied by swallowing' (Hp.); λύγδην [adv.] 'swallowing' (S., AP). Also λύγξ, λυγγός [f.] 'id.' (Hp., Pl., Th.) with λυγγώδης = λυγμώδης (Hp.), λυγγανόμενον· λύζοντα ἐν τῷ κλαίειν 'during crying' (H.), λυγκαίνω [v.] 'to swallow' (Suid.).
•ETYM For λύζω : λύγξ, compare ἰύζω : ἴυγξ, κλάζω : κλαγγί, as well as βήσσω : βήξ. It cannot be decided whether the verb or the noun is more original. Morphologically, λύγξ can be a back-formation from λύζω < *λυ(γ)γ-ι̯ω, but also its base form.
Cognates are found in Celtic and Germanic, e.g. OIr. slucim 'to swallow' < slu-n-k-*, W llyncu 'id.'; MLG slūken 'id.' < IE slūg-*, MHG slūchen 'id.'; and with geminate MHG slucken 'id.', together with iterative MHG sluckzen 'to sob'. This means that Gr. λ- is from sl-, but there are forms without s-, e.g. Pol. łkac 'to swallow'. LIV² distinguishes two roots sleuk-* and sleug-* with identical meaning, which seems to call for a solution.

λύθρος, -ον 'clotted or thick blood'. ⇒λῦμα.

λυκάβας, -αντος [m.] attested since τ 306 = ξ 161, A. R. 1. 198, Bion Fr. 15: 15; grave-epigrams (imperial period) from Arcadia and Ionia. Time-indication of uncertain mg., usually explained as 'year' and used in this sense by later authors, who seem all to be based on τ 306; acc. to Leumann 1950: 212⁴ rather 'new moon' (against this Ruijgh 1957: 147). The supposed Arcadian origin (AB) probably refers to the late Arcadian inscriptions, see Leumann: 273. ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also acc. -βαν, also λυκαμας (inscr. Amorgos, Kretschmer Glotta 2 (1910): 319).
•DER λυκαβαντίδες ὧραι (AP).
•ETYM Unrelated is the TN Λυκαβηττός. All existing explanations are unconvincing: e.g. original meaning "light-circle", from *λύκ- 'light' (see on λύχνος) and ἄβα· τροχός 'wheel' (H.); or originally "Lycian king (or priest, god)", i.e. Apollo, so elliptical for 'festival of Apollo', and a Lydian word. More dated suggestions are found in Frisk (with lit.). Recently, Koller Glotta 51 (1973): 29-34 explained the word from *λύκα βάντα 'das weggegangene Licht', so the moonless night of the new moon. This cannot be correct: the variant with μ and the suffix -αντ- clearly point to Pre-Greek origin.

λυκάψος, -ός [f.] name of a poisonous plant, 'Echium italicum' (Nic., Dsc.). ◄PG? (S, V)► •VAR v.l. λύκοψος (Dsc. 4, 46).
•DER Also λυκαψίς.
•ETYM Frisk explains, following Strömberg 1944: 100f. on χορδαψός, that it originally meant "attacking wolves", because it was poisonous (like λυκο-κτόνον, etc., Strömberg 1940: 66 and 70f.). However, the suffix also occurs in σκινδαψός and in the town Galepsos, so it is more probably a Pre-Greek form (note the interchange α/ο).

Λυκηγενής [adj.] epithet of Apollo (Δ 101, 119). ◄GR► •ETYM Like for Λύκειος (A.), for Λυκη-γενής several connections have been attempted: with the wolf, the Lycians, and earlier also with light (cf. on λύχνος). There is little doubt now that it means 'born in Lycia', see e.g. Beekes JANER 3 (2003): 15f. The antiquity of the formation appears from the lack of the compositional -ι- in Λυκι-.

λύκιον [n.] 'dyer's buckthorn, Rhamnus petiolaris', also a decoction from it (Peripl. M Rubr., Dsc., Gal.). ◄GR?► •ETYM Perhaps originally "the Lycian (plant)", named after its place of origin: cf. Dsc. 1, 100 φύεται δὲ πλεῖστον ἐν Καππαδοκίᾳ καὶ Λυκίᾳ 'it grows mainly in Cappadocia and in Lycia', though with the addition: καὶ ἐν ἄλλοις δὲ τόποις πολλοῖς 'but also in many other places'. Cf. Strömberg 1940: 122.

λύκος [m.] 'wolf' (Il.); often metaph., e.g. as the name of a kind of daw (Arist.; v.l. λύκιος, cf. Thompson 1895 s.v.), of a fish (Hikes. apud Ath.; Strömberg 1943: 105), = 'hook, sting' (Plu., Poll.), etc. ◄IE ulkʷo-* 'wolf'► •COMP Compounds like Λυκό-(ϝ)οργος > Λυκοῦργος PN, properly "warding off wolves" (εἴργω), Λυκοσ-ούρα town in Arcadia; cf. ►λυκαψός (also λύκ-) [m.] and -ψίς [f.].
•DER Feminines: λύκαινα 'she-wolf' (Arist.), after λέαινα, etc., with -αίνιον (Poll.), of a woman; λυκώ name of the moon (PMag. Par.); diminutives: λυκιδεύς [m.] 'younger wolf' (Sol. apud Plu., Theoc.), λυκίσκος· ἡ μὴ ἔχουσα ἀξονίσκον τροχαλία, τρῆμα δὲ μόνον 'pulley without a bolt, but with only a bolt-hole' (H.); also PN (Schwyzer: 542).
Further: λυκέη, -ῆ 'wolfskin' (K 459, etc.), λύκειος δορά 'id.' (E. Rh. 208), substantivized λυκεία [f.] (Plb. 6, 22, 3); λυκώδης 'like a wolf' (Arist.), λυκηδόν 'id.' (A.), λυκηθμός 'howling of wolves' (Anon. apud Suid.), after μυκηθμός; λυκόομαι [v.] 'to be lacerated by wolves' (X.). On ►λύσσα, see s.v.
•ETYM An exact formal correspondence with λύκος is found in the North-Germanic name of the lynx, MoSw. lō < PGm. luha-* from IE luko-* (see ►λύγξ 2). However, one would of course prefer to connect the widespread name of the wolf, which is preserved in e.g. Skt. vṛ́ka-, Lith. vil̃kas, OCS vlьkъ, Go. wulfs, Alb. ulk. λύκος can be derived from IE ulkʷo-* if we assume metathesis. A comparable problem is found with Lat. lupus.

For the name of the wolf, taboo may have played a role (Havers 1946: 37ff.), causing phonetic irregularities. For IE *$ulk^w o$-, such a taboo origin is possible as well; however, the interpretation as 'lacerater' (from *uel(k)- 'to lacerate') can hardly be maintained, as that root has no labiovelar.

λῦμα, -ατος [n.] 'dirt, waste, garbage', metaph. 'contamination, defamation' (A 314 and Ξ 371, Hdt.); on the mg. Sinclair 1953: 330ff. (who wrongly connects λύω). ◄IE *luH- 'dirt, pollute'►

•VAR Mostly plur. -ατα. Also λύμη [f.], often plur. -αι, 'maltreatment (e.g. mutilation, flagellation), damage, violation, revilement' (Ion. poet., also Hell. and late).

•DER 1. From λῦμα: λύμακες· πέτραι 'rocks' (H.), at an alphabetically wrong position; cf. βῶλαξ, λίθαξ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 379); κατα-λυμακόομαι [v.] 'to be covered with λύμακες (i.e. dirt)' (Tab. Heracl. 1, 56); also Λύμᾱξ, -κος [m.] Arcadian HN (cf. ῥύᾱξ, σύρφᾱξ, etc.; Chantraine 1933: 381f.), acc. to Paus. 8, 41, 2 because of the afterbirth (λύματα) of Rhea that was thrown into the river, but in fact probably because of the ooze. 2. From λύμη: λυμεών, -ωνος [m.] 'destroyer' (S., E., Tim. Pers., Isoc.), like ἀπατεών (Chantraine 1933: 163), with λυμεων-εύομαι [v.] 'to play the λ.' (Plb.); λυμάχη (-χή?)· ἡ εἰς διαφθορὰν λύπη 'grief because of destruction' (H.), after ταραχή or στοναχή? A transformation of λῦμα, λύμη is λῦμαρ (Max. Astrol.), cf. Schwyzer: 519. Denominative λυμαίνομαι [v.], aor. λυμήνασθαι (rare λυμῆναι, -ᾶναι), in two meanings: a. derived from λῦμα 'to purify, remove dirt' (Hp.), usually ἀπο-λυμαίνομαι 'to wash, purify' (A 313f., A. R., Agath., Paus.) with ἀπολυμαν-τήρ 'table cleaner' (ρ 220, 377); b. more often from λύμη 'to maltreat physically, damage, destroy, violate', also with δια-, κατα- (IA, Arc.); on the mg. see Schulze 1933a: 169, Fraenkel 1906: 49); λυμαντήρ 'destroyer, violator' (X.), λυμάντωρ (Timo, Epigr. Cyrene), -τής (S.) 'id.' with λυμαν-τήριος (A.), -τικός (Ph., Arr.) 'destroying, violating'.
λύθρος [m.], also -ον [n.] 'clotted or thick blood' (Hom. [only dat. -ρῳ], Hp. Ep.), with λυθρώδης 'bloodstained' (LXX, AP).

•ETYM For λῦμα : λύμη, cf. γνῶμα : γνώμη, χάρμα : -μη, βρῶμα : -μη, etc. To λῦμα, -μη corresponds Alb. lum 'slime, mud' < IE *lum-; an match for λύθρος is perhaps found in the Illyr. TN Ludrum (with IE d^h or d), and Alb. ler 'mud' (IE *$leu\text{-}d^{(h)}r$-) is also close.
The nouns mentioned derive from a primary verb meaning 'to pollute, contaminate', lost in Greek and replaced by λυμαίνομαι. This verb lives on in Lat. pol-luō < *por-luō and led to the verbal noun Lat. lutum = OIr. loth 'excrements, dirt'. Other derivatives are Lat. lustrum 'puddle, marsh' and German river names like Lune and Lienz (from *Luantia); cf. Λύμαξ. On the geographical names, see Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 6 (1955): 106ff. and 242ff. and Eisenstuck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 7 (1956): 53ff.

λύπη [f.] 'pain, grief' (IA). ◄IE? *leup- 'peel'►

•COMP As a first member in λυπο-τόκος 'bringing grief' (Halicar.).

•DER λυπηρός 'painful, distressing' (IA); besides λυπρός 'id.' (trag.), often of the soil, opposed to εὐρεῖα (ν 243), πεδιάς (Hdt. 9, 122), also ὀρεινή (Arist. HA 556a 4), 'unfruitful, frugal' vel sim.; compounds παρά-λυπρος (Str.), λυπρόγεως, -χωρος, -βιος (Str., Ph., App.); λυπρότης 'frugality', of the soil (Str.).
Denominative verb λυπέω 'to cause sorrow, pain or distress', -έομαι 'to be distressed' (Hes., Sapph., IA), after ἀλγέω acc. to Debrunner 1917: §194, with λύπ-ημα 'sorrow' (Antipho Soph.), -ητικός 'full of sorrow' (Arist., Plu.).

•ETYM Without a certain explanation. In the same way as ►λευγαλέος and relatives could be related with Skt. rujáti 'to break', it was suggested that λύπη could belong, as a verbal noun, to synonymous Skt. lumpáti, lupyáte 'to break, tear apart'; however, lup- is rather dialectal for rup- in Skt. rúpyati (which is related to Lat. rumpō < IE *Hru-n-p-).
Other words going back to IE *lup- rather mean 'peel off' vel sim., e.g. Lith. lùpti 'to peel, fleece, flay', Ru. lupít' 'to peel', OHG louft, loft 'bark' (where IE *lub^h- is also possible). In view of the semantics, this etymology must be considered uncertain. In λυπρός, an old primary derivative independent of λύπη may have been preserved.

λυπτά [f.] · ἑταίρα, πόρνη 'whore' (H.), in an alphabetically wrong position. ◄PG(S,V)► •ETYM Connection with Skt. lubdha- 'avaricious, desirous, eager' (to which belong Lat. lubet, libet, MoHG lieb, etc.), is phonetically impossible. Fur.: 316 compares λύπη 'id.', also λούπα 'id.'; he also connects ►λίπτω. For the ending, cf. θάπτα. Therefore, the word is Pre-Greek.

λύρα [f.] 'lyre', four-stringed (or seven-stringed) instrument like the cithara (h. Merc. 423). ◄PG►

•VAR Ion. λύρη.

•COMP Compounds like λυρο-ποιός 'fabricator of lyres' (Pl.), ἀντί-λυρος 'like the lyre' (S.).

•DER Diminutives λύριον (Ar.), λυρίς (Hdn. Gr.); further λυρικός 'ptng. to the lyre; lyre-player' (Phld., Plu.); λυρίζω [v.] 'to play the lyre' (Chrysipp.), cf. Schwyzer: 736; instead, κιθαρίζω is usual; thencewith λυριστής 'lyre-player' (Plin.), -ίστρια [f.] (sch.), -ισμός 'playing the lyre' (sch.).

•ETYM Technical loan from the Mediterranian area; cf. ►κιθάρα. IE etymologies should be rejected. Borrowed as Lat. lyra; OHG līra > MoHG Leier, etc.

λυσιτελής [adj.] 'useful, profitable, advantageous' (IA). ◄GR►

•DER λυσιτελέω 'be profitable, useful' (IA), -τέλεια 'profit, advantage'.

•ETYM Properly "paying the costs", a governing compound of λύειν and τὰ τέλη.

λύσσα [f.] '(martial) rage, fury, frenzy' (Il.), 'rabies' (X., Arist.). ◄IE *leuk- 'light', GR λυκ- 'wolf'►

•VAR Att. λύττα.

•COMP Some compounds like λυσσο-μανής 'mad for rage' (AP), ἄ-λυσσος 'healing λυσσα' (Paus.), ἄ-λυσσον [n.] name of a plant, the seeds of which were used against rabies (Strömberg 1940: 91).

•DER λυσσάς [f.] 'raging' (E.), λυσσ-ώδης (N 53, etc.), -αλέος (A. R., Man.), -ήρης (Orph., Man.), -ήεις (H.) 'id.'; λυσσηδόν [adv.] (Opp.). Denominative verbs: 1. λυσσάω, -ττάω [v.] 'to rage, rave, be mad' (Hdt., Ar., S., Pl.), with λυσσητήρ epithet of κύων (Θ 299; cf. AP 5, 265), and λυσσητής, Dor. -ατάς (Anth.) 'raging', λυσσητικός 'id.' (Ael.), -ήματα [pl.] 'attacks of rage' (E.); 2. λυσσαίνω [v.] 'to rage, rave' (S.); 3. λυσσόομαι [v.] 'to become raging' (Ps.-Phoc.).

•ETYM Formation like ὄσσα, γλῶσσα, αἶσα, etc., so a derived feminine. It has often been explained as "she-wolf" and identified with Skt. vṛkī́ḥ, ON ylgr 'id.'; acc. to Wackernagel-Debrunner 1930: 171, it is rather an abstract like φύζα 'flight, rout'.
Specht 1944: 344 and 387, rather connects Skt. rúc- [f.] 'light' (the rage is called after the sparkling eyes) and recalls the expression λευκαῖς φρασίν 'with white/lighting φρήν' (Pi. P. 4, 194), λευκαὶ φρένες· μαινόμεναι 'raging' (H.). Pok. 687 agrees with this.

λύττει [v.] · πολλὰ λαλεῖ 'is talkative' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Cf. λύζει 'eructat' (Latte).

λύττος [adj.] = ὑψηλός (St. Byz. s.v. Λύκτος, H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Acc. to St. Byz., also the name of a town in Crete "διὰ τὸ κεῖσθαι ἐν μετεώρῳ τόπῳ" 'because of its elevated location', = Λύκτος; thus, as an appellative, it probably also has Cretan assimilation κτ > ττ (Schwyzer: 316). Etymologically isolated, but see Fur.: 307.

λύχνος [m.] '(portable) light, lamp' (τ 34), also a fish name (Str., H.), cf. Lat. lucerna; perhaps called after its fluorescent organs, or after its shape Strömberg 1943: 55f.)? ◂IE leuk-sn-eh$_2$-* 'moon, stars', etc.▸
•VAR Plur. also τὰ λύχνα, to which the sing. λύχνον was formed (cf. Schwyzer 1950: 37, Sommer 1948: 88).
•COMP Several compounds like λυχνοῦχος [m.] 'lamp-stand' (com.), also as a second member, like in θερμό-λυχνον = λυχν-έλαιον 'lampoil' (Att. inscr.).
•DER 1. Diminutives: λυχνάριον (pap.), λυχνίσκος fishname (Luc.). 2. name of the candlestick: λυχνεῖον (com., Arist., Hell. inscr.) with λυχνείδιον (-ῑ́διον), λυχνίον, -ιον (Antiph., Theoc., Luc.), also 'lamp' (pap.), λυχνία, -έα, -εία (Hell.). 3. name of the ruby that emits light: λυχνίας λίθος (Pl. Com.), λυχνίτης (Str.), also name of Parian marble, because lamps were made of it (Varro apud Plin.; see Redard 1949: 56 and 244[13]), λυχνεύς (Callix., H.), also 'lighter' (Ath.), λύχνις [m.] (D. P., Orph. L.), λυχνίς [f.] (Luc.; cf. 4). 4. plant name: λυχνίς [f.] 'rose campion, Lychnis coronaria' (Thphr., Dsc.), because of its crimson color, acc. to Strömberg 1940: 49, λυχνῖτις [f.] 'candlewick, Verbascum' (Plin., pap., Dsc.), because the leaves were used as a candlewick (Strömberg 1940: 106, Redard 1949: 73; cf. on ►θρύον). 5. Other substantives: λυχνεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'place to store lamps' (Luc. VH 1, 29), λύχνωμα 'lint' (sch. Ar. Ach. 1175, = λαμπάδιον), with a nominal basis (Chantraine 1933: 187). 6. Adjectives: λυχν-αῖος (Procl.), also -ιαῖος (S. E., Gal.) 'ptng. to a lamp', -ώδης 'lamp-like' (Heph. Astr.). 7. Verb: λυχνεύω [v.] 'to light sbd.' (Areth. in Apoc.).
•ETYM Beside λύχνος < *λύκ-σν-ος we have, with full grade, Av. raox-šn-a- 'light, gleaming', OPr. lauxnos [pl.] 'stars', Lat. lūna = Praen. Losna, OCS luna 'moon', MIr. luan 'light, moon', all from IE louk-sn-* or leuk-sn-;* acc. to Frisk, the deviating zero grade in λύχνος may be related to a reluctance of Greek to use ου-diphthongs.

The words mentioned are all transformations of an old noun with suffixal -sn- from the verb for 'shine, gleam', which is represented in Greek by ►λεύσσω. An s-stem probably served as an intermediate form (Av. raocah- [n.] 'light' < IE leuk-es-*, Lat. lūmen from leuk-s-men-*, etc.). Uncertain is the appurtenance of λουνόν· λαμπρόν 'brilliant' (H.). The suffix -sn- is also found in synonymous Skt. jyótsnā- [f.] 'moonlight'.
A zero grade noun *λυκ- (= Skt. rúc- [f.] 'light') appears in the hypostasis ἀμφι-λύκ-η epithet of the night (H 433) 'dawning', also as a substantive 'twilight, dawn' (A. R., Opp.); and based on this, also in λυκ-αυγής 'of the grey twilight' (Luc.), λυκ-ό-φως, -ωτος [n.] 'twilight' (Ael., H. s.v. λυκοειδέος, sch.); see also on ►λύσσα.

λύω [v.] 'to loose, untie, release, (re)solve, destroy, pay' (Il.). ◂IE lh$_1$u-* 'cut off, release'▸ •VAR Aor. λῦσαι, fut. λύσω, perf. med. λέλῠμαι, aor. pass. λῠθῆναι (Il.), aor. med. also λύμην, λύ(ν)το (Hom.), perf. act. λέλῠκα.
•COMP Very frequent with prefix, like ἀνα-, ἀπο-, δια-, ἐκ-, κατα-, παρα-. As a first member λῦσ(ι)- in governing compounds like λυσί-πονος, ►λυσιτελής, PNs like Λυσί-μαχος, short name Λυσίας, etc.; as a second member in ►βουλῦτός.
•DER 1. λύσις 'solution, deliverance' (Ω 655 and ι 421), from the prefixed verbs also ἀπό-, ἀνά-, διά-, κατά-, ἔκ-λυσις, etc. (Thgn., Sol., IA); thence (κατα-, ἀπο-)λύσιμος 'fit for solving, etc.' (trag., Pl., Arist.); also λύσιος 'bringing release', epithet of the gods, especially Dionysus (Pl., Plu.). 2. λύματα [pl.] = ἐνέχυρα 'pledge, security' (Suid.); but κατάλῠ-μα [n.] 'inn' (Hell.), together with -μάτιον (Hell. pap.) derived from κατα-λύω in the mg. 'to lodge, visit'. 3. Aeol. Dor. λύα [f.] (Alc., Pi.), λύη (Hdn. Gr.) 'dissolution, separation, στάσις'; thence, but with deviating mg., Λυαῖος, -αία epithet of Dionysus or the Great Goddess (Anacreont., IG 5(2), 287 [I-II[p]]; Tim. Pers. 132), borrowed as Lat. Lyaeus. 4. (ἀνα-, κατα-)λυτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'deliverer, arbiter' (A., E., Hell. inscr.) with (ἐκ-)λυτήριος 'rescuing, liberating' (Hp., trag.); λυτήριον = λύτρον (Pi., A. R.), but καταλυτήριον = κατάλυμα (Poll., see above). Fem. λύτειρα (Orph.), also λυτηριάς (Orph.). 5. δια-λύτης 'deliverer', κατα- 'lodging guest', ἀνα- 'rescuer', συν- 'reconcilor' (Th., Plb.); also (after λύσις, λύω): (ἀνα-, κατα-, ἐκ-, παρα-, etc.)λυτικός 'fit for releasing or solving, etc.' (Pl., Arist.). 6. λύτρον 'ransom' (usually plur.), 'substitute, retribution' (Pi., IA), together with (ἀπο-, παρα-, ἐκ-)λυτρόω, -όομαι [v.] 'to release in exchange for ransom, etc.' (Att.), whence (-)λύτρωσις, λυτρώσι-μος, λυτρωτής, ἀπολυτρωτικός (Hell.).
•ETYM The regular Greek verbal system apparently resulted from levelling. The athematic aorist λύ-μην, λύ-το with short vowel is archaic; a more recent form is the thematic present λύω, originally with short υ (Hom.), but later also long (Att.; sometimes also Hom.), probably by influence of λῦσαι, etc. (cf. Schwyzer: 686 and Chantraine 1942: 372).
Correspondences to λύω are Lat. luō 'to make amends, pay', to which belongs solvō (from se-luō*) 'to loose, release'; the long vowel in solūtus and in the verbal adjective Skt. lūna- 'cut off' agrees with that in βου-λῦ-τός, and points to a laryngeal in the root. Since λύτο, λύσις, etc. have a short root vowel, the root must have been lh$_1$u-*, perhaps to be further analyzed as a u-present leh_1-u-. This is oncfirmed by the accentuation of Lith. liáuti 'to stop' and PSl. lěviti* 'to diminish, weaken'.

The Skt. verb deviates formally (the nasal presents lunā́ti, lunoti are not found elsewhere, while the other finite forms are of much later date). Germanic has a verb with s-enlargement, e.g. Go. fra-liusan 'to lose' < IE leus-*, fralusts 'loss' < IE lus-ti-*, fra-lus-nan 'to be lost'. See LIV² s.v. leu̯H-* for further forms.

λῶ [v.] 'want, wish' (Epich., Ar., Theoc., Dor., El. inscr.). ◂?▸
•VAR Pres. 2sg. λῇς, 3sg. λῇ, 1pl. λῶμες, etc., El. opt. λΕοιταν, Cret. opt. λΕ(ι)οι, λΕιοιεν, subj. λΕιωντι, ptc. λΕιοντος, -α, etc., inf. (conj. by Ahrens Th. 5, 77) λῆν; the gloss λεῳμι (H.) looks Ionic.
•DER 1. λῆμα [n.] 'will, spirit, courage, audacity' (Hdt.), with λημάτια· φρονήματα, βουλεύματα 'thoughts, resolutions' (H.), ληματίας [m.] 'high-spirited, daredevil' (Ar. Ra. 494), Chantraine 1933: 93; v.l. ληματιᾷς, as if from *ληματιάω; ληματόομαι in λεληµάτωμαι· λῆμα ἔχω εἰς τὸ ἔργον 'I am desirous of work' (H.); 2. λῆσις· βούλησις, αἵρεσις 'will, purpose' (H.), to which one adds ληίς· ... καὶ βούλησις (H.), for which Laconian loss of intervocalic sigma is assumed (DELG).
•ETYM Connection with λιλαίομαι (root las-) and λίαν (no etymology), found in older dictionaries, is impossible. According to DELG, we could start from a pre-form lē-i̯ō, which would enable derivation from IE $uelh_1$- (Lat. velle, MoHG wollen) as $u̯l̥h_1$-ie/o-. It is not clear, however, if this formation would vocalize to give *ϝλη-. Cf. ▸λωΐων.

λώβη [f.] 'outrage, dishonour, damage, mutilation' (Il.), 'kind of rash' (Gal.). ◂IE $sleh_2g^w$- 'seize'▸ •COMP ἐπί-λωβος 'bringing damage' (Vett. Val.), -ής 'id.' (Nic.).
•DER λωβητός 'laden with λώβη' (Ω 531, Hes. Sc. 366, S.; Ammann 1956: 21), λωβή-εις (A. R.), -μων (Nic. Al. 536; v.l. -τωρ) 'outrageous'. Denominative verb λωβάομαι (-άω), rarely with prefixes like ἀπο-, ἐκ-, δια-, 'outrage, maltreat, mutilate' (Il.), or rather deverbative like πωτά-ομαι, νωμάω?; with λωβητήρ 'slanderer, corruptor' (Il.; on the mg. Benveniste 1948: 38 and 42), fem. -ήτειρα (AP); also -ήτωρ (Opp., AP), -ητής (Ar.); λώβησις = λώβη (Ptol., sch.). Rare λωβεύω 'mock, ridicule' (Od.; like ἀγορεύω, Chantraine 1942: 368; also Shipp 1967: 120: to avoid contracted forms).
•ETYM Formerly analyzed as a lengthened grade formation like κώπη, λώπη, λώγη, but such ad hoc lengthened grades can no longer be accepted.
Traditionally connected with a Baltic word for 'aggravation, objection, burden, nuisance, damage', Lith. slogà, Latv. slāga < IE $sloHg^w$-eh_2-, a verbal noun to Lith. slė̃gti 'to (op)press, aggravate', Latv. slêgt 'to shut, close'. Recently, Ragot RPh. 76 (2002) convincingly suggested, on the basis of Homeric evidence, that λώβη originally meant 'seizure' and that it is connected with λάζομαι 'to seize, take hold' < $sleh_2g^w$- as a regular feminine o-grade derivation.
Fur.: 302[35] compares λυβάζειν· λοιδορεῖν 'slander, abuse' (H.), which (if correctly compared) would point to a Pre-Greek word lub-*.

λώβηξ, -ηκος [m.] · γύψ 'vulture' (Cyran. 28). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR λούπης = ἰκτῖνος 'kite, Milvus regalis' (Hierocl., Facet. 257, Hdn. Epim. 46), λούππις 'milvus' (gloss.).
•ETYM See Fur.: 148, and cf. Lat. lupiō 'to cry, of the kite' (Suet. Fr. p. 251). Thus, a Pre-Greek word with interchange lub/p-*.

λωγάλιοι [m.]? · ἀστράγαλοι ἢ πόρνοι 'dice or fornicators' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM In the first meaning, it has been connected to λέγω in the sense "die Aufgelesenen", with a lengthened grade as in λώγη, for which one also compared ▸λογάδες (λίθοι) 'accumulated stones'. However, such lengthened grades are unacceptable. In the sense of πόρνοι, it is related to λωγάς; see ▸λωγάνιον.

λωγάνιον [n.] 'dewlap (of oxen)' (Luc. Lex. 3, sch.), also λωγάλιον (H.) and λογάνιον (Suid.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Perhaps from ▸λαγαίω, ▸λαγαρός in the sense "(skin) hanging down"; intermediate forms (*λώγανον, *λώγη?) cannot be determined, however. The gloss ▸λωγάς· πόρνη 'whore' (H.) also belongs here.

λωγάς · πόρνη 'whore' (H.).
•ETYM Related to λάγνος 'lewd' and to ▸λωγάνιον (Persson 1912(1): 134 and 2, 939).

λώγασος [m.]? · ταυρεία μάστιξ 'whip made of ox-hide' (H.). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Pre-Greek, on account of the suffix -ασος.

λώγη [f.] · καλάμη. καὶ συναγωγὴ σίτου 'reed, gathering of food' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM In the last meaning, clearly related to λέγω; a lengthened grade is also found in ἐλώγη· ἔλεγεν (H.), with Dor. contraction of the ending, from the deverbative λωγάω; the explanation καλάμη can also be understood as a collective, e.g. 'straw'.

λωΐων [adj.] 'better, more desirable, more agreeable' (Semon. 7, 30). ◂?▸
•VAR Att. λῴων; ntr. λώϊον (Il.), Att. λῷον, plur. λώϊα, λῷα (Thgn., Theoc.), gen. τῶν λῴων (Chalcis II[P]), also msc. sing. λῷος (Hdn. Gr.); λωΐτερον (Od.), -ερος (A. R.), -έρη (Call., AP).
Superlative λῷστος (Thgn., trag.), ὦ λῷστε (Pl.); details in Seiler 1950: 88ff.
•ETYM The neuter λῴϊον, which is the first attestation, can be interpreted both as an o-stem and as a n-stem; the o-stem is ascertained only in rare and late forms: λώϊα, λῷα, λῴων, λῷος. The n-stem is ascertained in λωΐων and λῴονος, -ι (S.); the s-stem alternating with it appears in λῴω [acc.sg.f.] (S., Pl.) and λῴους [acc.pl.f.] (S.). From these data, Leumann Mus. Helv. 2 (1945): 7ff. concluded that the o-stem forms arose as analogical formations from the neuter λῴϊον, and that λώϊον is an old n-stem form.
As primary formations, λωΐων and λῷστος may go back to a verb as well as a noun (cf. Seiler 1950: 88ff.). Two possibilities are mentioned by Frisk: connection with λῆν, 1sg. ▸λῶ 'wish, want', or derivation from lau-* seen in ▸ἀπολαύω, ▸λεία, ▸λᾶρός, for which we could reconstruct loh_2u-is-, perhaps connected with Arm. law 'good, better'.

λώδιξ, -ικος [f.] 'woven cover' (Peripl. M. Rubr., pap.). ◂LW Lat.▸
•DER Also diminutive λωδίκιον, etc.

•ETYM From Lat. lōdīx, which itself might be taken from Celtic; see WH s.v.

λῶμα [n.] 'hem, fringe, border of cloths' (LXX Ex.). ◂?▸
•DER λωμάτιον (AP); acc. to EM = τὸ γυναικεῖον, ὃ ὑπὸ Ἀττικῶν ὄχθοβος λέγεται ... καὶ τὸ εἰς τὸ κατώτερον τοῦ ἱματίου ἐπίβλημα 'woman's dress, which is called ὄ. in Attic ... also the embroidery on the lower part of the dress'; acc. to H. also = ῥαφή 'seam, stitch', κλωσμός (a clucking sound).
Further ἀσύλλωτοι, of ὦμοι 'shoulders' (Call. Dian. 213), properly 'not tied together', i.e. 'uncovered'; εὔλωστοι· εὐυφεῖς 'well-woven', λωστοί· ἐρραμμένοι 'stitched', ἄλωστοι· ἄρραφοι 'unstitched', λωισμόν· λῶμα (H.); see Danielsson IF 4 (1894): 162ff.
•ETYM λῶμα has been connected with εὔληρα, αὔληρα 'rein', Lat. lōrum 'id.', Arm. lar 'noose, cord', but εὔληρα is Pre-Greek. Connection with the root uel-* 'turn, wind, twist' is hardly possible, as it does not explain the ω in λῶμα. Both proposals are unconvincing. See ►λωτις, ►λωστυς.

λώπη 'cove, mantle, cloth'. ⇒λέπω.

λωστυς [f.]◂?▸
•VAR Only λωστυος [gen.sg.] (Ἀρχ.Ἐφ. 1923, N° 123, 39 and 68; Oropos [IV^a]).
•ETYM Meaning end etymology unknown; cf. Kretschmer Glotta 16 (1928): 169.

λωτις [f.] mg. unknown (SIG 145, 26; Delphi IV^a); acc. to Danielsson IF 4 (1894): 164ff. designatin of a 'cloth with trimming and ornament woven and sewed on it', and related to λῶμα, ἀ-σύλ-λωτος, etc. (see ►λῶμα). ◂?▸
•DER The reading λ]ωτι (SIG 243 D 15) is uncertain, cf. Dittenberger ad loc.
•ETYM Related to λωστυς?

λωτός [m.] 'lotus', name of several nutrimental plants, 'Trifolium, Melilotus, Trigonella, etc.' (Il.), also of the Egyptian water lily, 'Nymphaea' (Hdt.), of the libyan lotus tree, 'Celtis australis' (ι 93 f.), and a flute made of it (E.); on the mg. Strömberg 1937: 184, Carnoy REGr. 71 (1958): 95f., Economos Class. Journ. 30 (1934-1935): 424ff. ◂LW Medit.▸
•COMP EN Λωτο-φάγοι (Od.), μελί-λωτος [m.], -ον [n.] 'Melilotus' (Sapph.).
•DER λωτόεις 'rich in lotus', probably in λωτεῦντα, -οῦντα for -όεντα, of πεδία (M 283), see Chantraine 1942: 35 and 351, Chantraine REGr. 63: 283; λώτινος 'consisting of λ., made of λ.' (Sapph., Anacr.); λωτάριον 'lotus flower' (medic.), λῶταξ 'αὐλητής, flute player' (Zonar., Eust.).
Denominative verbs: 1. λωτίζομαι 'to pick the flower, i.e. take the best part' (A. Supp. 963), -ω (H.), ἀπο-λωτίζω [v.] 'to take the flower from sbd.' (E.), with λώτισμα 'the flower, best part of sth.' (A. Fr. 99, 18, E. Hel. 1593). 2. λωτέω [v.] 'to play the flute' (Zonar.); hardly in λωτεῦντα (M 283), see above.
•ETYM A Mediterranean word. Acc. to Lewy 1895: 46, it was borrowed from Hebr. lōṭ 'στακτή, oil of myrrh' (LXX Ge. 37, 25; 43, 11); cf. also Arab. lādan > λάδανον, ►λήδανον. Hyllested 2004 assumes lụḥ$_3$-to-*, with vocalization of the laryngeal, but the evidence for such a development is too limited.

λωφάω [v.] 'to recover, take rest, let go' (Pl. Phdr. 251c), also trans. 'to quench, relieve' (poet.); on the mg. see Fowler AmJPh. 78 (1957): 176 and 179. ◂?▸
•VAR Also -έω (Hell.); aor. λωφῆσαι (since ι 459), fut. λωφήσω (Φ 292, etc.), perf. λελώφηκα (Th., Pl.).
•COMP Rarely with prefix, e.g. κατα-.
•DER λώφησις 'cessation' (Th.), λῶφαρ· λώφημα (H.), λωφήϊος 'relieving, expiatory' (A. R. 2, 485).
•ETYM Formally, cf. the type πωτάομαι, νωμάω, στρωφάω, which means that it is probably a deverbative (Schwyzer: 719). Etymology unknown; connection with ἐλαφρός, ἐλαχύς, etc. is impossible because these have an initial laryngeal. The comparison with the Germanic group of OHG labōn 'to quench, refresh' (Bezzenberger BB 5 (1882): 318) is doubtful; these may also be considered borrowings from Lat. lavāre 'to wash'. Not related to IE sleub^h-* 'hang down' (as per Schwyzer: 719^4, followed by Pok. 964).

Leiden Indo-European Etymological Dictionary Series

Edited by Alexander Lubotsky

VOLUME 10/2

Etymological Dictionary of Greek

By

Robert Beekes

With the assistance of

Lucien van Beek

VOLUME TWO

LEIDEN • BOSTON
2010

This publication has been made possible by the financial support of the Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research (NWO).

This book is printed on acid-free paper.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Beekes, R. S. P. (Robert Stephen Paul) Etymological dictionary of Greek / by Robert Beekes ; with the assistance of Lucien van Beek.
p. cm. — (Leiden Indo-European etymological dictionary series ; v. 10/1-2) Includes bibliographical references and index.
ISBN 978-90-04-17418-4 (hardback : alk. paper) 1. Greek language—Etymology—Dictionaries. I. Beek, Lucien van. II. Title.
PA422.B44 2010
482.03—dc22
2009036652

ISSN: 1574-3586
ISBN Set: 978 90 04 17418 4
ISBN Volume Two: 978 90 04 17419 1

PRINTED IN THE NETHERLANDS

TABLE OF CONTENTS

VOLUME ONE

VOLUME TWO

M

μά [pcl.] asseverating 'really, indeed' (Il., IA), adversative = δέ 'but' (Thess.). ◂IE *(s)me(h_2) (?)▸ •ETYM Might be cognate with Skt. smă [pcl.] 'really, truly' and/or with Hitt. -ma [encl.] 'but'. It is unclear whether μά continues m*h_2 or mn*. See ► μήν 1.

μᾶ [f.] 'mother', in μᾶ γᾶ voc. = μῆτερ γῆ 'Mother Earth' (A. Supp. 890, 899 [lyr.]), and also as a woman's exclamation (Hdt., Theoc.). ◂IE, ONOM▸ •ETYM Nursery word like Skt. mā 'mother' (lex.); likewise, πᾶς = ► πατήρ 'father'. See ► μαῖα, ► μήτηρ, ► μάμμη.

μάγαδις, -ιδος [f.] a stringed instrument, ascribed to the Lydians, but also to the Thracians (Alcm., Anacr.); also a Lydian flute (Ion Trag., Anaxandr.). ◂LW Lyd.▸
•VAR Acc. -ιν.
•DER μαγαδίζω 'to play the μάγαδις, imitate the μ., i.e. sing scales' (Theophil., Arist.), cf. Schwyzer 736. Further μαγάς, -άδος [f.] 'the bridge on a stringed instrument' (Ptol., Philostr., H.), with μαγάδιον (pap. I[a], Ptol.).
•ETYM A foreign word from an unknown, probably Lydian source. Others have proposed Semitic origin (Lewy 1895: 162f.). Fur.: 122, 226 reconstructs a pre-form *μαγδις, comparing πηκτίς, also a Lydian stringed instrument, with which it would be identical, according to Aristox Fr. Hist. 66 and Menaichm. 4 J.

μαγαρίς [f.] · μικρὰ σπάθη 'small blade' (H.). ◂LW Sem.?▸
•ETYM Lewy KZ 59 (1932): 192 compares Hebr. m[e]gērā 'saw', gārar 'draw, pull', which remains questionable. Latte considers it a mistake for ματαρίς, comparing μαδάρεις· τὰς πλατύτερας λόγχας τῶν κεράτων. Κελτοί; see DELG s.v.

μάγγανον [n.] 'philtre, charm' (Heracl. All., H.), 'block of a pulley' (Hero Bel., pap. III[p]), 'iron peg, bolt' (sch.), μ. πολεμικόν 'catapult, ballista, tormentum' (gloss., H.), · γάγγαμον 'fishing-net' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER μαγγανάριος 'enchanter' (pap. III[p]), 'mechanic' (Papp.) is probably a loan from Latin. Denominative verb μαγγανεύω 'to deceive by machinations, bewitch, play tricks' with μαγγαν-εία 'trickery' (Pl. Lg., Ph.), -εύματα [pl.] 'trickeries, quack medicines' (Pl., Plu.), -ευτής 'impostor, quack' (Suid., Phot.), -ευτικὴ τέχνη 'magical art' (Poll.), -εύτριαι [pl.] (H. s.v. βαμβακεύτριαι), -ευτήριον 'haunt of impostors' (Them.).
•ETYM As a loan, the word became widespread: Lat. manganum 'machine' (whence Ital. mangano 'sling'), with the by-form mangō 'fixer' (from Hell. *μάγγων?), whence mangōnium 'the touching up of wares for sale'; a number of European languages may have borrowed the word from Latin: for example, Alb. mangë 'hemp brake, hackle', mëngji 'medicine'; MHG mange 'catapult', MoHG Mange(l) 'wringer for laundry' (whence e.g. Lith. mañgalis 'mangle'); MIr. meng 'deceit, cleverness, ruse'. Skt. mañju-, mañjula- [adj.] 'beautiful, sweet, charming', maṅgala- [n.] 'happiness, salvation, good omen' (all epic and class.) were proposed as cognates of μάγγανον, but this is not credible, as they are semantically too far off (Dravidian origin was considered by Mayrhofer KEWA: 547, 553 and Mayrhofer EWAia: 3: 379f.). Such an isolated comparison of Sanskrit and Greek words carries little weight. Oss. mæng 'deceit', MP mang 'id.', Sogd. mnk 'id.' are unclear. Connection to the group of ►μάσσω 'knead' is unconvincing too.

As Van Beek (p.c.) suggests to me, μάγγανον recalls μηχανή both semantically and formally. Although the Greek form cannot be derived from an IE root meng-* (as per Pok. 731), the pair of words shows prenasalization and interchange of γ and χ, which both are typical reflexes of a Pre-Greek word. For the change in vowel quantity, we may compare ►καγκύλας · κηκῖδας. Αἰολεῖς (H.).

As regards the semantic development, Frisk assumes that the word originally denoted a concrete technical object. However, the technical meanings diverge strongly, and are attested at a later date. Rather, the connection with μηχανή shows that the oldest attestations depart from a meaning 'ruse, trick' (see ►μηχανή). Later, the word was used to denote all kinds of special tricks, and the divergent technical meanings, e.g. γάγγαμον 'fishing-net' (H.), can only be understood in this way.

μαγδαλιά late for ἀπομαγδαλιά. ⇒μάσσω.

μάγδωλος [m.] 'watchtower' (pap., H.). ◂LW Sem.▸
•VAR Or ὦλος? Also μαγδώλ, -ῶλος.
•COMP μαγδωλο-φύλαξ 'watchman' (pap., H.).
•DER Eg. town name Μάγδωλος (Hecat. 317 J.), Μαγδῶλα (pap.).
•ETYM From Sem.; cf. Hebr. migdal 'tower' (also as a TN). Fur.: 312, 321 considers a non-IE loan in Hamito-Semitic (adducing Berb. mogador 'watchtower' and Akk. madgaltu 'id.').

μάγειρος [m.] 'slaughterer, butcher, cook' (Att., Hell. and late). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Dor. μάγῑρος.
•COMP As a second member in ἀρχι-μάγειρος 'chief cook' (LXX, J., Plu.).
•DER Rarely fem. μαγείραινα (Pherecr. 84; nonce form), μαγείρισσα (LXX). Diminutive μαγειρίσκος [m.] (Ath.), with magiriscium 'small figure of a butcher' (Plin.). Adjective μαγειρικός 'of a cook or butcher' (Ar., Pl., Arist.) with -ικόν, -ική 'art of cooking, butcher taxes, etc.'; μαγειρώδης 'like a butcher' (Eun.). Denominative μαγειρεύω [v.] 'to be cook or butcher' (Hell.) with μαγειρ-εῖον 'butchery, soup kitchen' (Arist., Hell.), -εία [f.] 'boiled food' (Cato, Hdn. Epim.), -ῆϊα [f.] 'butcher taxes?' (Eresos), -ευμα = -εία (H., Eust.), -ευτικός (late). Probably also Ἀπόλλων Μαγίριος (Cyprus).
•ETYM As an element of higher culinary culture, the profession μάγειρος seems to have entered Attic from Doric (for older δαιτρός?). The earlier history of the word is unknown. Pisani Rev. Int. ét. balk. 1 (1934): 255ff. supposes Macedonian origin, connecting μάχαιρα 'big knife, butchery knife'; Schwyzer: 471[12] recalls Lat. mactāre. Not related to ►μάσσω 'to knead', as earlier authors assumed.
The word looks non-IE, because of the alternations ει / ῑ and (if μάχαιρα belongs here) γ/χ. Is it Pre-Greek, deriving from mak-ar^y-*? Aeol. μάγοιρος, mentioned by LSJ s.v., is only attested in Greg. Cor., which is not a trustworthy source. See ►μάχαιρα.

μάγος [m.] 'member of the Median caste of priests, Magus', as an appellative 'interpreter of dreams, sorcerer, deceiver' (Hdt., Heraclit., S., E., etc. [Μᾶγος A. Pers. 318]), as an adjective 'magical, enchanting' (Philostr., AP). ◂LW Iran.▸
•COMP ἀρχι-μάγος 'chief Magus' (Epigr. Hypaipa; cf. Wikander 1946: 49f.).
•DER μαγικός 'belonging to the Magi, magical' (LXX, Plu., etc.), μαγιανός 'magical, enchanted' (pap. I[a]; after Ἀσιανός), μαγέταν αὐλόν· τὸν μαγεύοντα τοὺς ἀκροωμένους H.; μαγεύω 'perform as a Magus, enchant' (E., Hell.) with μαγεία (-ία) 'teachings of the Magi, magic' (Pl. Alc., Thphr., Act. Ap.), μαγ-εύματα [pl.] 'id.' (E.), -ευτής = μάγος (D. C.), -ευτικός 'regarding the Magi, regarding magic' (Pl.).
•ETYM From Iranian; cf. OP Maguš (Av. moγu-), name of a Median tribe with priestly functions. As the appellative meaning is unknown, the etymology cannot be established. See Schmitt Glotta 49 (1971): 105-107; recent discussion in Brust 2005: 385ff.

μαγῡ́δαρις [f.] 'blossom, seed, root (and the sap obtained from it) of the plant called σίλφιον and of a related plant' (Thphr., Dsc., H.). ◂?▸
•VAR Late μαγόδαρις (Gp. 2, 35, 9 codd.).
•ETYM Foreign word of unknown origin (Libyan or Syrian?); cf. the litt. in WH s.v. magūdaris (Pl.).

μαδάω [v.] 'to drip, melt, be moist' (Thphr.; concerning a disease of a fir-tree), also 'to fall out', of hair. ◂IE meh$_2$d-* 'be moist, drip'▸ •VAR Aor. μαδῆσαι.
•COMP Also with ἀπο- (Hp., Ar., Arist., LXX).
•DER μάδησις 'hair loss' (Hp.), μαδαῖος 'moist' (Poet. de herb.), after ἰκμαῖος? Factitive μαδίζω [v.] 'to remove hair, pluck or singe' (medic.), also with ἀπο-; thence μαδιστήριον 'instrument for removing hair, place where depilation is carried out' = εὔστρα 'place for singeing slaughtered swine' (Halicarn. I[a], sch.), ὁλο-μάδιστος 'completely bald' (Cyran.), also μάδισος (see below); as an iterative μαδάσκομαι [v.] 'to drip, become moist' (medic. VII[p]). Expressive enlargement μα[γ]δάλλει· τίλλει, ἐσθίει 'plucks, eats'; μα[γ]δάλλοντες· τίλλοντες, ἐσθίοντες (H.), cf. κναδάλλεται· κνήθεται 'scratches' (H.) and Debrunner IF 21 (1907): 91.
Further: μαδαρός [adj.] 'wet' (Hp., Arist.), 'bald' (Luc.) with μαδαρότης 'baldness, loss of hair and of the eyelashes' (Hp., Gal.), μαδαρόω 'to remove hair' (LXX Ne. 13, 25, v.l., Crete II[a]), μαδάρωσις = -ότης (Gal., Vett. Val.), probably directly from μαδαρός; μαδαρ-ιάω [v.] 'suffer from hair loss' (Cleopatra apud Gal. 12, 405). Also μαδι-γένειος 'with bald chin' (Arist.); cf. χαλαρός beside χαλί-φρων. Note μάδος, -ον (back-formation?) = ἄμπελος λευκή (Dsc.), because its root was used for depilation; rendered as ψίλωθρον by H., which may indicate the same plant. Further μαδωνάϊς = νυμφαία 'water-lily' (Boeot. according to Thphr. HP 9, 13), but Bechtel amends to μαδωνία. Also μάδισος· δίκελλα. οἱ δὲ μαδιβός (H.), probably from μαδίζω.

•ETYM For the shift of meaning from 'flow away' to 'fall out', compare ἐκρέω 'to flow away, fall out' and Lat. dēfluō 'to flow down', also 'to fall out', of hair. For the pair μαδάω : μαδαρός, cf. χαλάω 'slacken' beside χαλαρός 'loose' and πλαδάω 'to be moist' beside πλαδαρός 'wet' (rhyming), which are both semantically close. The aor. μαδῆσαι is an innovation as compared to χαλάσαι (which behaves like λαγαρός : λαγάσαι, etc.); it is unclear how the present stem μαδα- was derived. The root is also found in Lat. madeō 'to be moist, drip, be drunk' (after the intransitives in -ēre), OIr. maidim 'to break (out)' (intr.), 'to fall to pieces' (< *'to flow out or away' vel sim.; possibly formally identical with madeō), Skt. mádati 'to be intoxicated'. On the reconstruction meh$_2$d-, see Lubotsky MSS 40(1981): 133-138. See further ►μαστός, ►μήδεα.

μάδρυα [n.pl.] = κοκκύμηλα, βράβυλα 'plums, sloes' (Seleuc. apud Ath. 2, 50a). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Also ἀμάδρυα· κοκκύμηλα. Σικυώνιοι (H., Phot.). Also ►ἄδρυα, in Σικελοὶ δε ἄδρυα λέγουσι τὰ μῆλα 'apples'. παρὰ δὲ Ἀττικοῖς ἀκρόδρυα 'fruits grown on upper branches of trees' (H. and Ath. 3, 83a). Maybe also βάδρυα, but see Fur. 221.
•ETYM ἀμάδρυα did not originally mean 'belonging to a tree', as tree names in ἁμα-meant 'blossoming at the same time as'. Rather, initial /h-/ was added by folk etymology to *ἀ-μάδρυα, a form with (non-IE) prothetic vowel. This form (ἀ)μάδρυα must be a Pre-Greek etymon. If βαδρυα is reliable, we also have variation μ/β, to which ϝ may be added in order to explain ►ἄδρυα.

μᾶζα [f.] 'barley-cake' (IA), '(metal) nugget, mass, ball' (LXX, J., pap.). ⊲IE? meh$_2$ǵ- 'knead'⊳ •VAR Accent acc. to Hdn. Gr. 2, 937; Att. acc. to Moer. Also μάζα (Hell. acc. to Moer.), Megar. μᾶδδα (Ar. Ach. 732, 835).
•COMP Compounds: μαζο-νόμος (pap. III^p), -νόμιον (Hell. inscr.), -νόμιον (Callix. 2), -νομεῖον (com.) 'trencher for μ.'; ὁλό-μαζος 'with its whole mass, from top to bottom' (Hero Stereom.).
•DER Diminutive μαζ-ίσκη (Ar.), -ίον (Phryn. Com. et al.). Adjective μαζ-ηρός 'belonging to the μᾶζα' (Poll.), for the formation cf. σιτηρός; μαζεινός (for μάζινος?) βοῦς· ὁ ἐξ ἀλφίτων 'of barley groats' (H.). Denominative μαζάω [v.] 'to knead barley dough' (pap., H.), ὑπερ-μαζάω 'to be overfed' (Ath., Luc.); also μαζάω (Suid.), cf. κριθάω. Unclear μαζύγιον [n.] (beside μαζύς [f.]) 'amalgam' (Zos. Alch.).
•ETYM Derived from μαγ-ῆναι, pres. ►μάσσω with a suffix -ι̯α-; cf. μᾶζα μεμαγμένη (Archil.). The long α would then be secondary. Borrowed from μάζα: Lat. massa 'clump, mass' (Plaut.). Not a Semitic loan word (Hebr. maṣṣāh 'unsoured bread' is rather from Greek). The comparison with OCS mazati 'to salve, smear', mažǫ [1sg.pres.] points to meh$_2$ǵ-. In this case, the long α may also represent an old full-grade.

μαζός 1 [m.] 'nipple, breast'. ⇒μαστός.

μαζός 2 [?] a fish (Epich. 69). ⊲PG?(S)⊳
•VAR Also μαζέας = the fish ἥπατος (Xenocr. apud Orib. 2, 58); μαζεινός or μαξεινός (Doris apud Ath. 315f).
•ETYM See Thompson 1947 s.v. The variation has no parallel, but rather points to a Pre-Greek word. LSJ notes: "probably for μαζίνης in Thphr. Fr. 171.2".

μαθαλίς, -ίδος [f.] 'name of a cup, used as a measure (Blaes. 2, H.). ⊲PG?(S)⊳ •ETYM Formation like ἀγκ-αλ-ίς, φυσ-αλίς, τρυφ-αλίς et al. (Chantraine 1933: 252), but there is no root etymology. Connection with μάθυιαι· γνάθοι 'jaws' or ►μασάομαι 'to chew' seems impossible. Fur.: 212 compares Lat. matula 'pot for liquids' and βάτος, βάδος, βάδιον 'measure of liquids'.

μάθη •VAR μάθησις, μαθητής, etc. ⇒μανθάνω.

μάθυιαι [f.pl.] · γνάθοι 'jaws' (H.). ⇒μασάομαι.

μαῖα [f.] 'mother', mostly used to address elderly women (Od.), 'nurse, midwife' (Att.), 'grandmother' (Dor.); name of a big crab (Arist.), cf. γραῖα; of a plant, = λεπίδιον (Orib.), cf. γέρων and synonyms in plant names in Strömberg 1940: 56 and 159[1]. As a PN, mother of Hermes (h. Merc.). ⊲GR⊳ •DER μαιήϊος and μαιάς = μαιευτικός, -κή (Nonn.), Μαιάς = Μαῖα (ξ 435).
Denominatives: 1. μαιεύομαι [v.] 'to be midwife, deliver' (Att.) with μαιεία [f.] 'midwifery' (Pl.), μαίευ-μα 'product of delivery', -σις 'delivery', -τικός 'pertaining to delivery, able to deliver' (Pl.), μαιεύτρια 'midwife' (S.); 2. μαιόομαι [v.] 'id.' (Hell.) with μαίω-σις 'delivery', -τικός (Plu.), μαίωτρα [pl.] 'midwife's wages' (Luc.); μαῖοι 'adoptive parents' (Paros).
•ETYM Analogical enlargement of the nursery word μᾶ with the suffix -ι̯α, based on γραῖα (related to γραῦς, both 'old woman'). Borrowed as Lat. maia 'midwife'; the ancient roman goddess Maia was later identified with Μαῖα (WH).

μαιμάω [v.] 'to be eager, quiver with eagerness, rage' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR 3sg. μαιμάει, pl. μαιμώωσι, etc., aor. μαιμῆσαι (E 670); enlarged form μαιμάσσω (LXX, AP), also μαιμώσσω (Nic.) and μαιμάζω (Ph.).
•COMP Also with ἀνα-, περι-, ἐπι-.
•DER μαῖμαξ· ταραχώδης 'disturbing' (H.), μαιμάκτης, -ου [m.] "the boisterous one", of Zeus as god of the wind in Athens (Plu., Harp., H.), opposed to μειλίχιος; also Μαιμακτήρ name of a month (Phocaia), with Μαιμακτηριών, -ῶνος [m.] 'id.' (Att.), probably from *Μαιμακτήρια [pl.] name of a festival; μαιμάχης· ὑβριστής (Zonar.).
•ETYM The intensive reduplication can hardly be of IE origin; the aorist must be secondary. The original quantity of the middle syllable cannot be ascertained.
Although productive, the suffix -ακ- in μαῖμαξ, μαιμάκτης, etc. points to Pre-Greek origin. Late μαιμάσσω may just contain an enlargement -(α)σσω, but it might also be connected with the velar in μαιμάκ-της, etc. Additionally, ἀ-μαιμάκετος may belong here (cf. s.v.), but this is semantically unclear (assuming a pleonastic privative, like in ἀβέλτερος, is unlikely).

The connections with μαίομαι and μῶμαι are obsolete; see Tichy 1983: 331-334 for a discussion of the meaning of μαιμάω and an attempt to derive it from the perf. ptc. μεμαῶτ-.

μαίνη [f.] 'name of a small herring-like fish, Maena vulgaris' (AP 9, 412). ◄?►

•VAR Further forms μαινομένη (sch. Luc.) with μαινoμένιον (Alex. Trall.), MoGr. μαίνουλα, μανάλι, etc.; details in Thompson 1947 s.v. Also μαινίς, -ίδος [f.] (com., Arist.) with μαινίδιον (com., Arist.).

•ETYM No etymology. The connection with fish names in other languages (e.g. Ru. men' [m.] 'barbot', Lith. ménkė 'haddock', which derives from meñkas 'small', see Fraenkel 1955 s.v., and Skt. mīna- [m.]) is extremely doubtful. Strömberg 1943: 53ff. hesitatingly attempts to connect μαίνη with ►μαίνομαι by interpreting it as "the wildly raging fish". Borrowed as Lat. maena.

μαίνομαι [v.] 'to rage, be furious, out of one's mind, excited' (Il.); rarely active ἐκ-μαίνω 'make furious' (E., Ar.), μαίνω (Orph.), aor. μῆναι (S., E.), intr. med. μήνασθαι (Z 160, Theoc.). ◄IE men-* 'think of, remember'►

•VAR Aor. μανῆναι (IA), fut. μανέεται (Hdt.), perf. (with present mg.) μέμηνα (A., S.).

•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐκ-, περι-, ὑπο-, ἐν-.

•DER 1. From the present: μαινάς, -άδος [f.] 'the raging one, Bacchante' (Il.); μαινόλης (Aeol., Dor. -λας, fem. -λις) 'raging, excited' (Sapph., A.). 2. From the root: μανία, -ίη 'fury, madness' (IA); μανικός, μανιώδης 'furious, raging' (IA), fem. also μανιάς 'id.' (after λύσσα : λυσσάς, Schwyzer: 508). Verbal adj. ἐμ-μανής 'raging' (IA), probably a hypostasis (to μανία) after ἐμ-φανής, etc., as ἐμ-μαίνομαι does not occur before Act. Ap., J. On ►μάντις, see s.v.

•ETYM Several languages have a zero-grade yod-present corresponding to μαίνομαι < IE mn-ie/o-*: Skt. mányate, Av. mainiieite 'to think'; OIr. muinithir 'id.'; OCS mьnjǫ 'to think, consider', Lith. miniù 'to commemorate, remember'. The intr. aorist μανῆναι has counterparts in the Balto-Slavic infinitive, Lith. miněti, OCS mьněti. Secondary origin may be considered for μανῆναι (which is post-Homeric) as well, cf. φαίνομαι : φανῆναι. Formations that arose in Greek are μήνασθαι < PGr. man-s-* and μέμηνα (after τακῆναι : τέτηκα, etc.).

Related to the group of ►μένος, ►μέμονα, and probably ►μιμνήσκω. For more cognates, see LIV² s.v. 1. men-*.

μαίομαι [v.] 'to touch, investigate, search', present also 'to seek to attain' (Il.). ◄?►

•VAR Aeol. also μάομαι (Sapph. 36?), fut. μάσσομαι, aor. -μάσσασθαι.

•COMP Usually with ἐπι-, in the aor. also with εἰσ-, ἐκ-, ἀμφι-, μετα- (Pi. N. 3, 81).

•DER Verbal adjectives ἀ-προτί-μαστος 'untouched' (T 263), ἐπί-μαστος epithet of ἀλήτης (υ 377), mg. unclear (cf. Bechtel Lex. s.v.).

Action nouns: μάσμα [n.] 'search, investigation' (Cratin. 424, Pl. Cra. 421b), μαστύς, -ύος [f.] 'id.' (Call. Fr. 277). Agent noun: μαστήρ [m.] 'searcher' (trag.), also [f.], Schwyzer: 530, also name of an Athenian officer (Hyp.); μάστειρα [f.] (A.), μαστήριος Ἑρμῆς 'Hermes, God of tracing' (A.); epic PN Μάστωρ; μαστρός [m.] name of a financial officer (Pellene, Rhodos, Delphi), μαστρικός (Delphi II[a]), μα-στρ(ε)ία, El. μαστράα = εὔθυνα (Messen. I[p], H.).

Denominative μαστεύω [v.] 'to search, track down' (Pi., A.; Epid., X.), μάστ-ευσις (Epid. IV[a], Archim.), -ευτής (X.), -εία (VI[p]); cf. ματεύω. Perhaps also related are PNs like Εὔμαιος, Οἰνόμαος, Μαίων (epic).

•ETYM The sigmatic forms (e.g. aor. -μάσσασθαι and ἀ-προτί-μαστος) suggest an analysis μαίομαι < mas-i̯e/o-*, but they might also belong to ματέω, ►ματεύω as secondary formations. Often, μαίομαι 'to touch' and μαίομαι 'to strive for, try' (the latter with genitive) are considered to be two different verbs, but the meaning 'try to reach, strive for' can be easily explained from the conative aspect of the present stem. There are no clear cognates. In the sense 'to touch', μαίομαι has been compared with words for 'beckon with the hand', etc., e.g. OCS namajati, 1sg. namajǫ 'to beckon', Lith. móti, 1sg. móju 'id.', mosúoti 'to turn, swing'; but these clearly continue a root meh₂-* or meh₃-, and thus are formally different from Greek. In the sense 'strive, try', the verb was compared with ►μαιμάω 'to be eager', ►μῶμαι 'to strive', but these connections cannot be formally substantiated. LIV² s.v. mes- reconstructs a present ms-io-* > ahio-* >> PG maʰio-*, but such analogical replacement is questionable. ►μάστιξ, ►μάσθλης, ►μαστροπός were compared in Frisk, but are unrelated. See further ►μαστός.

μαῖρα [f.] 'the Dog Star'. ⇒μαρμαίρω.

μαίσων, -ωνος [m.] 'native cook' in Athens (Ath. 14, 659a); μαισωνικὰ σκώμματα (ibd.). ◄?►

•ETYM No etymology. Acc. to Ar. Byz. (ibd.), it is originally the name of the comic mask of a cook or servant, which was named after an actor. Unrelated to μασᾶσθαι 'chew', as per Chrysippus (ibd.).

μάκαρ [adj.] epithet of gods and men, 'happy, blissful' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR Fem. also μάκαρ (E., Ar. [lyr.]), but more frequently μάκαιρα (h. Ap. 14), also ntr. in the obl. cases (AP, Nonn.). Further also μάκᾱρ (Archil. Supp. 3, 5, Sol. 14, Diph. 126, 6), μάκαρς (Alcm. 10, 11).

•DER Superl. μακάρτατος (Od., A., S.); μακάριος 'blessed, happy' (Pi.); often used as a form of address (Pl., Ar.), cf. δαιμόνιε; also μακαριότης 'blessedness' (Pl. Lg., Arist.); μακαρία [f.] 'id.' (Ar., Pl. Hp. Ma. 293a); μακαρίτης, Dor. -τᾶς, fem. -τις "part of the blessed", 'blessed one' (A., Ar., Men., Theoc.). Denominative μακαρίζω [v.] 'to praise, glorify' (Od.) with μακαριστός (IA), also barytone μακάριστος; μακαρισμός [m.] 'act of blessing' (Pl. Resp., Arist.), μακαριστής [m.] (J.). Also μακαρτός 'blessed' (AP 7, 740, 5; verse-final), as if from μακαίρω*. Obscure is μακαρίνη· ἀνδράχνη 'purslane, Portulaca' (H.).

•ETYM The idea of Brugmann IF 18 (1905-1906): 434 that μάκαρ is originally a neuter *'blessedness', whence occasionally msc. μάκᾱρ and fem. μάκαιρα, is not supported by the texts. It is rather Pre-Greek, because its formation is isolated within Greek, and because of the interchange -αρ/-ᾱρ.

μακεδνός [adj.] 'tall, slim', of trees, etc. (η 106, Nic., Lyc.); also name of a people related to the Dorians (Hdt.). ◂PG(S)▸ •DER Also EN Μακεδόνες [m.pl.] 'Macedonians', -ών (IA) [sg.], whence Μακεδονία, -ίη, -ικός 'Macedonia, -nian' (IA), also ἡ Μακεδον-ίς (scil. γῆ) (Hdt.), -ῖτις (Ael.), -ισσα 'Macedonian woman' (Stratt.); μακεδονίζω [v.] 'to be pro-Macedonian' (Plb., Plu.). Long medial vowel in Μακη-δών (Hes. Fr. 5, 2, Call.), -δονία, -ίη (Hell. poet.).
•ETYM The pair Μακε-δόν-ες beside μακε-δν-ός is thought to contain an old ablauting suffix, which is also supposed in γοεδνός, etc., though a variant -δόν- is lacking there. A suffix -δόν- is found in animal names, in other appellatives, as well as in action nouns.
A by-form of the EN is Μακέτης 'Macedonian' (Gell.), -τις [f.] (Str., AP) and -τία, -τη (AP), -τᾰ (pap., see Mayser 1: 3, 24); cf. οἰκέτης, etc. Fur. does not discuss these forms. As an analysis μακε-δν-ος is impossible for an IE word, the ethnonym is probably of substrate origin (cf. Λακεδαίμων; Fick 1905: 90); the form with -τ- (which could be a variant alternating with -δ-) then points to Pre-Greek origin.
The meaning of the adjective strongly suggests that it is cognate with μακρός (Frisk), but this can hardly be accounted for in terms of IE morphology. On account of the strange suffixation, I assume Pre-Greek origin for it, too.

μακέλη [f.] 'mattock' (Hes. Op. 470, Theoc., A. R.), also a destructive instrument of Zeus (A., S., Ar.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR μάκελλα [f.] (Φ 259, Luc. Hes. 7).
•ETYM The formation has been compared with ἀγέλη, θύελλα, etc. The similarity with ▸δίκελλα cannot be coincidental, but Frisk concludes that a convincing explanation has not yet been found. A cross of δίκελλα and a form *ματέλη, corresponding to Lat. mateola 'tool to stave in the earth', supposed by Güntert 1914: 122f., is not supported by any further evidence. Arm. markeł 'mattock' shows a remarkable similarity; it might be a loan from a common source. Unrelated are Lith. makāras 'big stave' and Arm. mač 'plough-tail' (the latter is an Iranian loan).
The following glosses from H. may belong to μάκελλα, -έλη: μάσκη· δίκελλα, βάσκα· μακέλη and μάκκορ (Lacon. for μάσκος)· ἐργαλεῖον γεωργικόν, ὡς δίκελλα 'agricultural tool like a δ.'.
The variation -ελλα/-έλη is best explained by a Pre-Greek ending *-al^{y}a. Therefore, μάκελλα, μακέλη are Pre-Greek, as is ▸δίκελλα, see Beekes 2008. On variation κ/σκ, cf. Fur.: 295-301.

μάκελλον [n.] 'fence' (inscr. Epid. IV^a). ◂PG?(V), LW Sem.?▸
•VAR -ος [m.] 'id.' (sch. Ar. Es. 137); -ος [m.] and -ον [n.] 'meat market, hall for groceries' (Mantinea I^a, Sparta, 1 Ep. Cor. 10, 25, D. C.); μάκελ(λ)α· φράγματα, δρύφακτοι 'fence, railing; latticed partition'; μάκελος· δρύφακτος (H.).
•DER μακελλωταὶ θύραι 'latticed doors' (Delos II^a), borrowed as Lat. macellōtae 'id.' (Varro); μακελλεῖον· laniatorium 'butchery', μακελλίτης· corporicida (cod. corpodicina) (gloss.); details in Redard 1949: 117. Also μακελᾶς [m.] as "keeper of latticed doors" (AP 7, 709)? See O. Masson Arch. Orbis 18:4 (1950): 7ff.

•ETYM Frisk considers this to be a borrowing from Semitic (Hebr. miklā 'enclosure'), after Stowasser apud Lewy 1895: 111f. Borrowed from Greek was Lat. macellum 'market, etc.', whence macellārius > μακελλάριος 'butcher' (gl. laniator), -ιον [n.] 'food market' (pap. VI^p). The form μακελλωταί was not derived from Hebr. miklā'ōt [pl.], but from μάκελλον, like e.g. θυσανωτός from θύσανος. The TN Μάκελλα [f.], a town in western Sicily (Hell. and late), also belongs here. The primary meaning of μάκελλον is 'lattice, fence', and thence 'meat market', etc. The fence may have consisted of pointed objects, which would support relationship with ▸μακέλη 'mattock'. If this is correct, the word must be Pre-Greek.

μακκοάω [v.] 'be stupid or out of one's mind' (Ar. Eq. 62, 396, Com. Adesp. 1210, Luc. Lex. 19); Μακκώ [f.] name of a stupid woman (Suid.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Popular formation with expressive gemination; further details are unclear. Lat. (Osc.) maccus 'person of the Atellana, fool, buffoon' also belongs here, of which further details and various explanations are found in WH s.v.

μακκούρᾳ [f.] · χειρὶ σιδηρᾷ, ᾗ χρῶνται πρὸς τοὺς ἵππους 'an iron hand, which is used with horses' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Improbable Semitic etymology by Lewy KZ 55 (1928): 24ff.

μακρός [adj.] 'long, great, high' also 'deep, tall, far, lengthy' (Il.). ◂IE meh$_2$ḱ*- 'long, thin, tall'▸ •COMP Many compounds, e.g. μακρό-βιος 'having a long life' (Hdt., Hp.), ἐπί-, ὑπό-, πρό-μακρος 'oblong' (Hp.), see Strömberg 1946: 100.
•DER Grades of comparison: μακρό-τερος (θ 20 = σ 195), -τατος (Ξ 288 a. 373); further primary forms μάσσων, μήκιστος (see on μῆκος).
Nominal abstracts: μάκρος [n.] 'length' (Ar. Av. 1131), probably an accidental formation, cf. Chantraine 1933: 417; μακρότης [f.] 'id.' (Hell.).
Denominative μακρύνω [v.] 'to lengthen, remove' (LXX, Hero), whence μακρυσμός 'long interval', μάκρυμμα [n.] 'sth. thrown away' (LXX; v.l. μάκρυνσις).
•ETYM Old adjective, which was also preserved in Latin and Germanic: Lat. macer 'meagre, thin', OHG magar, ON magr 'meagre' < IE mh$_2$ḱró*-. A parallel l-formation is found in Hitt. mak-l-ant- 'meagre'. μακεδνός cannot be formally explained in IE terms, however. In the sense of 'long, high', μακρός ousted δολιχός, which was inherited too. On the vocalisation of laryngeals in the position RHC*-, cf. Beekes IF 93 (1988): 25. See ▸μῆκος.

μάκτρα [f.] 'kneading trough, bathing tub', etc. ⇒μάσσω.

μάλα [adv.] 'very, quite, by all means' (Il.). ◂IE mel*- 'strong, better'▸ •COMP Compar. μᾶλλον 'more, rather', superl. μάλιστα 'most of all, especially' (Il.).
•ETYM Formation like ἅμα, τάχα, πάρα, etc. (Schwyzer: 622). It is thought to contain a zero grade stem, as opposed to the full grade seen in Lat. mel-ius 'better' beside multus 'many' < ml-tó-; a zero grade also in Latv. milns 'very many'. The compar. μᾶλλον (with secondary length after θᾶσσον) probably replaced the original full grade *μέλλον. The form μάλιον· μᾶλλον (H.), to be inserted in Tyrt. 12, 6 as well, is an innovation; the same goes for μαλιωτέρα· προσφιλεστέρα 'more dear' (H.). See ► μαλερός, ► μέλω.

μαλάβαθρον [n.] name of an oriental spice, probably a kind of cinnamon (Peripl. M. Rubr., Dsc., Gal., Plin.). ⊲LW Ind.⊳
•DER -ινος 'prepared with μ.' (Dsc.).
•ETYM From Skt. tamāla-pattra- [n.] 'leaf of the Tamāla tree', which was borrowed as τὰ μαλάβαθρα, Lat. mālobat(h)rum (after mālum), -inus, -ātus.

μαλακός [adj.] 'weak, soft, tender; effeminate, flabby' (Il.), on the mg. cf. Treu 1955: 183, 187f. ⊲IE? mlh_2-k- 'weak'⊳ •COMP μαλακογνώμων 'of mild mood' (A.), μαλακο-κρανεύς "having a weak skull", bird-name 'grey shrike' (Arist.).
•DER μαλακία, -ίη (IA), μαλακότης (Pl., Arist., Herod.) 'weakness, effeminacy'. μαλακίων [m.] (form of address) 'sweetheart' (Ar. Ec. 1058), see Chantraine 1933: 165; τὰ μαλάκια 'molluscs' (Arist.); μαλακώδης 'softish' (St. Byz.). Denominative verbs: 1. μαλάσσω, -ττω 'to soften, appease' (Pi., IA), μάλαγμα [n.] 'emollient, padding' (Pl., Thphr., Ph. Bel., etc.), μαλαγμα-τώδης (medic.), -τίζω [v.] (Zos. Alch.); μάλαξις 'softening' (Thphr., Plu.); μαλακ-τήρ "weakener", μαλακτὴρ ἐλέφαντος 'ivory worker' (Plu.); -τικός 'mitigating' (Hp., Plu.). 2. μαλακίζομαι [v.] 'to be soft' (Att.). 3. μαλακύνω [v.] 'to soften' (X., Hell.), with μαλάκυνσις 'softening' (Alex. Aphr.).
•ETYM The nearest cognate of μαλακός seems to be monosyllabic βλᾱ́ξ, so we are dealing with a primary κ-derivative. The forms point to a split paradigm: mlh_2-k- > *μλᾰκ- and mlh_2-ek- > *μαλ-ακ-. The comparison with the verb for 'rub, meal' (in ► μύλη) is outdated. See ► βλᾱ́ξ, ► μαλθακός.

μαλατῆρες · ναῦται 'sailors' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

μαλάχη [f.] 'mallow' (Hes.). ⊲PG(V)⊳
•VAR Also μολόχη (Epich. and Antiph. apud Ath. 2, 58d, SIG 1172, 8, etc.), μολάχη (Vase inscr. Naples). μάλβακα [acc.] (Orac. apud Luc. Alex. 25).
•DER μαλάχιον (Ar. Fr. 320, 10), μολόχιον (Clem. Al.) 'woman's ornament worn around the neck', also μάλακιον (Poll., H.), after μαλακός; μαλάχιος· ἰχθῦς ποιός a fish (H.), after the color (Strömberg 1943: 25); μολοχίτης (v.l. -τις) 'mallow-colored stone' (Plin., Isid.); μολόχινος 'made of mallow-fibre, mallow-colored' (Peripl. M. Rubr.), μολόχινα [n.pl.] 'clothes made of mallow' (ibd.) > Lat. molochina [f.]. Cret. TN ἐμ Μολοχᾶντι (nom. *Μολοχᾶς, see Schwyzer: 528).
•ETYM Along with Lat. malva (whence MoHG Malve, etc.), from a Mediterranean language; traditionally compared with Hebr. mallūaḥ, name of a lettuce-like plant; does Georg. balba also belong here? The hapax μάλβακα [acc.] has a remarkable similarity with malva and points to *μαλϝακ/χ-. We may therefore assume a Pre-Greek form mal^wak-. This explains all Greek variants, including the different vocalizations. Pre-Greek may have taken the word from Semitic, or the other way around.

μάλδακον [n.] = βδέλλιον (Dsc. 1, 67, Plin. 12, 35) 'aromatic gum obtained from Balsomadendrum africanum'. ⊲LW Near East⊳ •ETYM Fur.: 212 thinks it is a non-IE loan from the Near East, standing for *μαδαλκον, and compares Hebr. b^edōlaḥ, Akk. budulḫu, bidurḫu.

μαλερός [adj.] mg. uncertain, said of fire (Il., Hes. Sc. 18, A. Ch. 325), of lions (A. Ag. 141), of singers (Pi. O. 9, 22), also of πόθος, Ἄρης; usually explained as 'violent, strong' (or 'consuming'), acc. to Bechtel 1914 s.v. rather "zermalmend", 'crushing'. ⊲?⊳
•VAR μελερός· μαραντικόν. καυστικόν 'quenching, burning' (H.).
•ETYM Formation like θαλερός, φανερός, etc. There is no etymology, because of the uncertain meaning. Traditionally taken to be related to ► μάλα in the meaning 'violent', etc.; acc. to Bechtel, however, it belongs to ► μάλευρον and ► μύλη.

μάλευρον [n.] 'flour' (Alc. 70 LSJ, Achae. 51, Theoc. 15, 116). ⊲IE $melh_1$- 'meal, rub'⊳ •VAR Cret. PN Μάλευρος (SGDI 5028 n 4).
•DIAL Myc. me-re-u-ro /meleuron/.
•ETYM Either a reshaping of ἄλευρον (s.v. ► ἀλέω) after μύλη, or an old word, cognate with OHG melo < PGm. melwa-* 'meal', etc. The latter connection is possible if we reconstruct PIE $melh_1$-uV-, in which case Myc. me-re-u-ro < $melh_1$-ur̥- represents the old vocalism, cf. ἄρουρα 'arable land' (Myc. a-ro-u-ra) which is an extension of h_2erh_3-ur̥. μάλευρον must then have taken its vo or even continue an old ablauting variant mlh_1-eu- (assuming that the heteroclitic inflection is secondary). The explanation of Myc. me-le-ti-ri-ja by vowel assimilation from mela- (as per LIV² s.v. $melh_2$-) is unacceptable, as there was no regular vowel assimilation in Greek (see Van Beek fthc.b).

μάλη [f.] 'armpit', almost only in the expression ὑπὸ μάλης 'under the armpit, secretly' (Att.), after this also ὑπὸ (τὴν) μάλην (Plb., Luc.), παρὰ τὴν μ. (Hippiatr.). ⊲?⊳ •DIAL Myc. ma-ra-pi /malāp^hi/?
•ETYM In the same meaning we find μασχάλη, but it does not seem probable that μάλη is a shortened form of μασχάλη.

μαλθακός [adj.] 'weak, tender, soft, mild' (P 588, also Hp., Pl.). ⊲PG(S,V)⊳ •VAR Aeol. μόλθακος (Alc.).
•DER μαλθακία 'softness' (Pl. R. 590 b); μαλθακώδης 'emollient' (Hp., Gal.), μαλθάκινος = μαλθακός (AP).
Denominative verbs: 1. μαλθάσσω = μαλάσσω (Hp., trag.), with μαλθακ-τήριον -τικός, -ξις (medic.). 2. μαλθακίζομαι [v.] 'to be or become soft' (A., E., Pl., Gal.). 3. μαλθακύνω = μαλακύνω (sch.). 4. Also μαλθάζω (Aret.), -αίνω (Stob.) = μαλθάσσω, both probably through replacement of the suffix, rather than to μάλθη, ► μάλθων. Unrelated is ► μάλθη.
Without suffixal -ακ-: μαλθώδης = μαλακτικὸς ἢ κηρώδης 'emollient or like wax' (Hp. apud Gal.); μάλθων [m.] 'sissy' (Socr. apud Stob.); Μάλθιον woman's name (Paros); μαλθώσω· μαλακώσω 'will soften' (H.). Here also ἐπίμαλθα· ἀγαθά, προσηνῆ. ἢ μαλακά, ἢ ἀσθενῆ λίαν 'good, soft, or soft, or very weak' (H.).

•ETYM Formation like μαλακός; the two synonymous adjectives may have influenced each other. If μαλακός belongs with βλᾱ́ξ, then μαλθακός must have taken its ending from μαλακός. Solmsen 1909: 55 recognizes ►μάλθη as the feminine of an original adj. *μαλθός 'weak', which also left traces in μάλθων, etc. (though a reconstruction -n̥-ko- seems improbable for μαλθακός).
Outside Greek, the Germanic word for 'mild', e.g. OHG milti, Go. unmildjai 'ἄστοργοι', has been compared, which could belong to Skt. márdhati 'to neglect' (maintained in LIV[2] s.v. 1.$meld^h$-).
However, the following considerations may show that the word is Pre-Greek: 1) μαλθ- cannot be explained from IE mld^h-, as this would give βλαθ-; 2) μαλθακός cannot be cognate with μαλακός, as the latter must go back to mlh_2-ek-, and there is no trace of the *h_2 in the former; 3) if μαλθάζω is old, it points to suffixal *-αγ-, which together with the (more common) variant seen in μαλθακός must derive from the well-known PG suffix -ak-.
It is now clear that words in -ακο- cannot be derived from an IE derivational type -n̥-ko-, as most words of this kind (like ὄστρακον) are of substrate origin.
►μάλθη should be separated from μαλθακός as a technical loanword. However, μαλθων, *μαλθόω, etc., which seem to be derivations of μάλθη, are rather variants of μαλθακός without the suffix -ak-. It is unclear whether ►ἀμαλός 'weak' can be connected; ►ἀμαλδύνω differs too much phonetically as well as semantically.
See further ►μαλακός.

μάλθη [f.] 'mix of wax and pitch', used to caulk ships, and on writing tablets (Cratin. 204); acc. to H. also = τρυφερή [adj.] 'delicate, tender'; is this correct? Also name of a large aquatic animal (Ael., Opp.), perhaps after its tender or wax-like meat, Strömberg 1943: 32. ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Also μάλθᾰ (Ar. Fr. 157), μάλθης, -θη (Hippon., S., D.); on the variation -η : -ᾰ cf. Solmsen 1909: 265.
•ETYM This word probably has nothing to do with ►μαλθακός, as it is a technical loanword. The word is Pre-Greek, as μαλθ- cannot be explained from IE (mld^h- > βλαθ-). This also explains the nom. in -ᾰ (Pre-Greek: C 3,1). Borrowed as Lat. malt(h)a.

μαλιάω [v.] 'to suffer from glanders'. •DER μαλίασις, the disease. ⇒μῆλον 1.

μάλκη [f.] 'numbness from cold' in hands and feet, plur. 'chilblain' (Nic.); μάλκην· τὸ ἐπικόπανον. Πάριοι 'chopping-block' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER μάλκιον [n.]: φάρμακον ἀσθενές τε καὶ μάλκιον 'a weak and benumbing medicine' (Anon. apud Suid.), perhaps a compar. like ῥίγιον; superl. μαλκίστατον ἦμαρ (Call. Fr. anon. 45). Denominative μαλκίω [v.] 'to become numb with cold, freeze' (A. Fr. 332 [652 Mette], X., D., Ael.), after ἰδίω, often written μαλακίω after μαλακός; μαλκιό-ωντι [ptc.dat.sg.] (Arat. 294, m.c.), μαλκιῆν· ὑπὸ κρύους κατεσκληκέναι καὶ δυσκίνητος εἶναι 'to be stiff and unable to move for cold' (Phot.). Here also μαλκόν· μαλακόν (H.)?
•ETYM A convincing explanation is still lacking. There have been attempts connect Lith. mùlkis 'blockhead', OCS mlъčati 'be silent, dumb', and other words of doubtful appurtenance. The connection with μαλακός is semantically unconvincing. A form μαλκ- can hardly be explained in IE terms. The variant spelling μαλακίω may indicate that the word is Pre-Greek.

μαλλός [m.] 'flock of wool' (Hes. Op. 234, Milete VI[a], A., S., Herod.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP πηγεσί-μαλλος 'thick-fleeced' (Γ 197).
•DER μαλλωτός 'provided or lined with flocks of wool' (Pl. Com., Str.) with μαλλωτάριον 'sheepskin' (pap. V-VI[p]); μάλλωσις 'lining with wool' (sch.). Further μάλλυκες· τρίχες 'hairs' (H.), after ἄμπυκες, κάλυκες, etc.; with simplification of the geminate: μάλιον 'long hair, pigtail' (AP 11, 157, Herm. Trism.).
•ETYM The connection with Lith. mìlas 'coarse homespun wool' has been abandoned. Greppin Glotta 59 (1981): 70-75 suggests that Arm. mal 'ram' is cognate with the Greek word. The latter only denotes the 'flock of wool', and never the animal, but this may be a later semantic development. An IE form mh_2l- is rather improbable, however. Greppin explains the form from malyo-*, but this is not certain, as the -λλ- may also be a geminate of Pre-Greek origin. Clackson 1994: 232 (fn. 250) suggests that "the word is better explained as a loan from Arabic māl 'possession' with its transferred meaning 'sheep' (thus Ačaṙyan 1977: 224)."
The word may well be Pre-Greek.

μᾶλός [adj.] epithet of τράγος 'goat' (Theoc. Ep. 1, 5), explained as 'white' by H. ◂?▸ •ETYM May have been dissolved from μαλο-πάραυος, properly 'apple-cheeked' (Theoc. 26, 1), but taken by H. to mean λευκοπάρειος; cf. μάλουρος (-ρις) = λεύκουρος, λευκόκερκος (H.). See ►μῆλον 1.

μάματα [n.pl.] · ποιήματα (v.l. πέμματα 'dressed food' Meineke), βρώματα 'prepared food (H.); μάμματα· βρώματα (sch. Pl. Alc. 1, 118e). ◂?▸ •ETYM von Blumenthal 1930: 21f. thinks it is dialectal (Doric-Macedonian) for μάγματα (and related to ►μάσσω 'to knead').

μάμμη [f.] 'mother' (Pherecr., Men., Epicur., AP), 'mother's breast' (Arr.), 'grandmother' (LXX, pap. I[a], Ph., Plu.). ◂ONOM▸ •COMP μαμμό-θρεπτος 'raised by grandmother' (Phryg., Poll.), also Μαμμάκυθος [m.] 'blockhead' (Ar. Ra. 990), properly "who hides with his mother" (κεύθω).
•DER Hypocoristic derivatives: μαμμία (Ar.), -ίον (Phryn.), -ίδιον (Plu., Hdt.). Adjective μαμμῷος, μαμμικός (pap.). Cf. παππία, etc. s.v. ►πάππα.
Denominative μαμμάω [v.] 'to cry for the breast' [thus LSJ] (Ar. Nu. 383).
•ETYM A nursery word, from reduplicated μάμμᾰ [voc.] (Ar. Byz.). Several cognates, e.g. Lat. mamma 'mother, nurse, grandmother, mother's breast', MoHG (Alem.) mamme, Lith. mamà, Ru. máma. See also Chantraine REGr. 59-60 (1946-1947): 243 and Risch Mus. Helv. 1 (1944): 119. On the geminate, see Schwyzer: 315; on the α-vowel, ibid. 339. See ►μᾶ, ►μαῖα, ►μήτηρ, ►μαστός.

μανδάκης [m.] 'δεσμὸς χόρτου (band to tie trusses), sheaf, bundle'. ◂LW Thrac.?▸
•DER μανδάκιον [n.] (pap.); μανδακηδόν 'in the form of a band' (Hippiatr.).

•ETYM Formation like ►γαυνάκης. Is it perhaps a loan from Old Iranian banda-ka- 'band, fetter' via Thracian, in view of the development b > m? See recently Brust 2005: 415ff. The formation can hardly be IE. See ►μάνδρα.

μάνδαλος [m.] 'bolt of a door' (Med. apud Erot., Artem.). ◂?▸
•DER μανδαλώσας 'bolting(?)' (H. s.v. τυλαρώσας), μανδαλωτός 'with the bolt shot' (com., Phot.), also a lascivious kiss [LSJ].
•ETYM Technical word in -αλο- without etymology; cf. on ►μάνδρα. The formation can hardly be IE. Unrelated are ἀμάνδαλον = ἀφανές 'invisible' (Alc. Z 81), ἀμανδαλοῖ· ἀφανίζει, βλάπτει 'renders invisible, damages' (H.), in view of the divergent meanings.

μάνδρα [f.] 'fold, pound, stable' (S. Fr. 659, Call., Theoc., Peripl. M. Rubr., Plu.), also 'cloister' in ἀρχι-μανδρίτης 'chief of a cloister, abbot, archimandrite' (Just.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR μάνδραι· ἕρκη, φραγμοί, αὐλαι, σηκοί βοῶν καὶ ἵππων 'enclosures for cows and horses' (H.).
•DER Enlargement μάνδρευμα (D. H.), after the nouns in -ευμα.
•ETYM The word μάνδρα has been compared with Skt. mandirá- [n.] 'dwelling, house', mandurā́ [f.] 'stable' since Fick, in which case we could be dealing with a loan from a common source (Asia Minor). The unification of μάνδρα, μάνδαλος, μανδάκης under one root mand- 'to fence in' or 'pound made of twisted rods', is ill-founded. Semitic etymology in Lewy KZ 58 (1931): 59 (to be rejected).
DELG mentions μανδρο- in names, on which see Nilsson 1941(1): 558[3]. Hardly an IE formation, as a root *$mh_2n(d)$- is improbable.

μανδραγόρας [m.] 'mandrake' (Att., Thphr.). ◂?▸
•DER μανδραγορίτης οἶνος (Dsc.), -ῖτις· Ἀφροδίτη (H.); the plant was known as an aphrodisiac; -ικός 'made of μ.' (Alex. Trall.); -ιζομένη 'drugged with μ.' (name of a comedy of Alexis).
•ETYM Unexplained. E. Fraenkel Satura Berolinensis: 23f. suspects that the plant was named after a person (a physician). Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 42 (following Lagarde) hesitatingly refers to the Persian plant name merdum gijā "plant of humans"; the Mandragora root is called ἀνθρωπόμορφος by an unknown informant, and is referred to by Columella as semihomo. It could be a folk-etymological adaptation of a foreign word.
From μανδραγόρας, MoE mandrake, Arm. manragor, etc. have been borrowed.

μανδύα [f.] a woollen garment (A. Fr. 364 = 711 Mette, LXX). ◂?▸
•VAR -η [f.], -ας, -ης [m.].
•ETYM Unexplained foreign word: Persian acc. to Ael. Dion. Fr. 252 and H.; A. (l.c.) and St. Byz. 415, 7 speak of Λιβυρνικὴ μανδύη. Considerations in Brust 2005: 420ff.

μᾱ́νης [m.] 1. 'slave', also a typical slave-name (com.); 2. 'kind of cup' (Nico 1, Delos III[a], pap.); also the unlucky throw of the dice; also a bronze figure, used in the game of κότταβος (a cup, or a support?); see Ath. 487c d. ◂?▸ •VAR μάνητες [nom.pl.], μάνᾱς [acc.pl.].
•DER Diminutive μανίον.

•ETYM The slave name is from Phrygian (Φρύξ means 'slave', among other things; see WH s.v. mānēs); the connection with κότταβος is secondary. Mazzarino Rend. Acc. Linc. 6:15 (1939): 366ff. thinks the word is Sicilian in the latter meaning, and connects it with Lat. mānāre 'to flow'. We may be dealing with two different origins.

μανθάνω [v.] 'to learn, get to know, experience' (Pi.). On the meaning, see Snell 1924: 74f. and Dörrie 1956. ◂IE *$mn(s)\text{-}d^hh_1$- ▸ •VAR Aor. μαθεῖν (Il.), fut. μαθήσομαι (Thgn., Parm.), perf. μεμάθηκα (Anacr., Xenoph., Emp.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. κατα-, ἐκ-, προ-, μετα-.
•DER Action nouns: 1. μάθη [f.] 'learning, insight' (Emp., H.). 2. μάθος [n.] 'what has been learnt, custom' (Alc., Hp., A.). 3. μάθησις = μάθη (Alcm., IA). 4. μάθημα 'what has been learnt, knowledge', plur. '(mathematical) sciences' (IA, Hell.), with μαθηματ-ικός 'fond of learning, scientific, mathematical' (Pl., Arist.), -ικεύομαι [v.] 'to argue mathematically' (Dam.). 5. μαθημοσύνη 'learning' (Phr., imperial period).
Agent nouns: μαθη-τής 'disciple' (IA), -τικός 'fond of learning; learnable' (Pl., Arist.), -τικεύομαι (Dem.), -τεύω [v.] 'to be a disciple, turn into a disciple' (NT, Plu.) with -τεία 'education' (Timo, D. Chr.), -τιάω [v.] 'to be eager to learn' (Ar.); fem. -τρίς (Ph.), -τρια (D. S., Act. Ap.); μαθετής 'id.' (Knossos II[a]), after εὑρετής?
•ETYM The Greek forms all go back to the zero grade aorist μαθεῖν; the full grade could be represented either in μενθήρη 'φροντίς, μέριμνα' (H., EM) or in προμηθής 'premeditative, careful'. The latter is isolated (cf. s.v.), but μενθ- corresponds to OHG mendī 'gladness', menden 'to rejoice', beside a zero grade in e.g. Go. mundon sis 'to look at, σκοπεῖν', ON munda 'to aim (with a weapon), head for a goal'.
A full grade in Lith. mañdras 'lively, cheerful', OCS mǫdrъ 'φρόνιμος, σοφός'. A pre-form *$mns\text{-}d^heh_1$- (related to *$mén\text{-}s$-) is assumed for Skt. medhā́ 'wisdom, insight', Av. mazdā 'remembrance'. See ►μενθήρη.

μανιάκης, -ου [m.] 'golden collar, worn by the Persians and Gauls' (Plb., LXX, Pln.). ◂?▸ •VAR Also -η [f.].
•COMP μαννο-φόρος (Theoc. 11, 41; v.l. for ἀμνο-).
•DER Diminutive -ιάκιον (sch. Theoc. 11, 41), also μανάκιν (pap.); μάννος, μόννος [m.] 'collar' (Poll.).
•ETYM Formation like ►μανδάκης, ►γαυνάκης. Usually considered to be a Gaulish word (cf. e.g. OIr. muin-torc 'collar', OW minci 'collar for horses', etc.) with cognates in Lat. monīle 'collar', OHG menni 'neck ornament', etc.; see WH s.v. monīle. Relation with ►μόναπος 'aurochs' seems improbable.
It is now thought that the other IE languages must have acquired the word from the same (or a related) source as Greek. R. Schmitt Sprache 13 (1967): 61-64 connects Av. zarənu-maini- 'with golden collar'; see also Kronasser 1969: 61. Arm. maneak 'collar' could be of Iranian origin in view of the suffix *-aka-. The variants μάννος, μόννος point to a non-IE origin for the Greek word: geminate -νν-, interchange α/ο and presence of a suffix -(ι)ακ-. Still, the origin remains unclear.

μαννα 1 [f.] 'frankincense powder' (Hp., Dsc.). ◂PG?▸

•ETYM Probably a loan, possibly of Pre-Greek origin.

μαννα 2 [n.] 'manna' (LXX). ⊲LW Sem.⊳ •ETYM From Hebr. mān 'manna'.

μᾶνός [adj.] 'thin, loose, open in texture, rare' (IA, Emp. 75, 1). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •VAR μᾰνός (Telecl. 61); on βανόν see below.
•COMP μᾰνό-στημος 'with loose chain, thin, fine' (A. Fr. 297 = 688 Mette).
•DER μανότης 'thinness, rareness' (Pl., Arist., Thphr.), μανία 'id.' (An. Ox.); μανώδης 'thin' (Arist.); μανάκις 'rare' (Pl. Com., H.), to πολλάκις; μανόω [v.] 'to loosen' (Thphr.) with μάνωσις (Arist.). Variant βανόν· λεπτόν 'thin, delicate' (H.).
•ETYM Ion. μᾶνός and Att. μᾰνός derive from *μανϝός; beside these, we find a u-stem in μάνυ· μικρόν (cod. πικρόν). Ἀθαμᾶνες 'small' (H.). The u-stem is also seen in Arm. manr, gen. manu 'small, thin, fine', manu-k 'child, boy, servant' (see Clackson 1994: 117). Unrelated is ►μάνυζα. Brugmann RhM N.F. 62 (1907): 634f. also adduces μαναύεται· παρέλκεται (H.), properly 'isolates himself', and, hesitatingly, ► βάναυσος. However, the -αυ- remains unexplained.
Skt. manā́k 'a little', Lith. meñkas 'short', Hitt. maninku- 'close, near', are all of unclear formation, as well as OIr. menb < menu̯o-. If Gr. μανυ- is from mnh₂-u- (cf. μανώδης, μαν-άκις), it conflicts with the etymology of OIr. menb.
Perhaps, μόνος could be included here. For Pre-Greek origin, see Fur.: 221 with good motivation. See ►μόνος.

μαντία [f.] 'raspberry' (Dsc. 4, 37). ⊲PG(O)⊳ •ETYM Probably Pre-Greek. Cf. Alb. Gheg mand 'mulberry(tree)'; see Fur.: 209, 272, who compares Sardian and Basque forms and states that ►βάτος cannot be separated from these words. He considers μαντία to be Dacian, but with no apparent reason.

μάντις, -εως [m., f.] 'seer, prophet' (Il.); also name of a plant (Nic.), of a grasshopper: 'praying mantis' (Theoc., Dsc.), a garden-frog (H.) as a predictor of the weather, cf. Strömberg 1940: 79. ⊲IE? men-ti-*⊳ •VAR Ion. gen.sg. -ιος.
•COMP Often as a second member in trag., e.g. ἰατρό-μαντις 'soothsayer who is also a physician' (A.), cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 272f. Rarely as a first member, e.g. μαντι-πόλος 'predictive' (E. [anap.], Orac. apud Luc., Man.), which is formally like οἰωνο-πόλος 'bird-watcher', etc. (Wackernagel KZ 29 (1888): 143).
•DER 1. μαντεῖος, -ήϊος 'concerning the soothsayer, prophetic' (P., trag.), after βασιλεῖος, etc.; μαντεῖον, -ήϊον [n.] 'oracle, oracle site' (μ 272). 2. μαντικός 'id.', μαντική (τέχνη) 'the art of seeing' (IA). 3. μαντῷος 'id.' (AP), after ἡρῷος, etc. 4. μαντοσύνη 'faculty of prophecy' (Il., Pi., Emp.), after ἱππο-σύνη, etc.; -συνος [adj.] 'belonging to the seer or oracle' (Corinna, E. [lyr.]). 5. μαντεύομαι (late also -εύω) [v.] 'to predict, consult an oracle' (Il.), after βασιλεύειν, etc.; with μαντεία, -είη, η-ΐη 'prophecy, prophetic faculty, oracle' (h. Merc.), μάντευμα 'oracle' (Pi., trag.), μαντευτής = μάντις (Hdt.), -εύτρια (sch.). PN Μάντιος (Od.).

•ETYM As an agent noun in -τι-, μάντις stands isolated (most other ti-stems are abstract nouns); μάρπτις 'brigand' (A. Supp. 826f.; broken context) and πόρτις 'calf' are similar in formation. Benveniste 1935: 83 reconstructs an old neuter *τὸ μάντι 'divination', but μαντι-πόλος, adduced by Benveniste, can easily be explained in a different way (see above). μάντις seems to be derived from μαίνομαι, μανῆναι (cf. ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ μαίνεται, Hdt. 4, 79). It is natural to take it as an original feminine abstract, like φάτις, with an Aeolic reflex of the suffix. However, the vocalism μαν- would have to be an analogical zero grade (after which example?), which makes the etymology a bit doubtful. See ►μέμονα, ►μένος.

μάνυζα [f.] · μονοκέφαλον σκόροδον 'garlic' (H.). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •ETYM No doubt a Pre-Greek plant name; it has nothing to do with μανός 'thin, loose'. For words in -ζα (with short -α, an ending characteristic for substrate words), cf. κόνυζα.

μάξεινος glossed as γαλλερίας, ὀνίσκος (diminutive of ὄνος 'ass', but also a fish-name) by Dorio apud Ath. 315f. ⇒μαζός 2.

μαπέειν [v.aor.] 'to take hold, grasp' (Hes. Sc. 231, 304). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Reduplicated μεμάποιεν [3pl.opt.aor.] (ibid. 252; v.l. μεμάρποιεν).
•DER Further *ἐμ-μαπεῖν in ἐμμαπέως 'immediately, quick'.
•ETYM Etymology unknown. In spite of its semantic agreement with μάρπτω (μέμαρπεν, -ώς Hes. ibd. 245, Op. 204), μαπέειν can hardly be connected with it in formal terms.

μάραγδος ⇒σμάραγδος.

μάραγνα [f.] 'whip' (A., E., Pl. Com., Poll.); H. also σμάραγνα (cf. on ►σμάραγδος). ⊲LW Iran.⊳
•ETYM The word corresponds to Syrian māraynā 'flagelli genus'. Hübschmann KZ 36 (1900): 175f. already assumed that both were loans from OP māra-gna-* "killer of snakes". On the formal difficulty that MoP mahr points to marθra-* (mārθra-), instead of māra-*, see now Brust 2005: 428ff., who assumes it is a loan from North-West Iranian.

μάραθον [n.] 'fennel, Foeniculum vulgare' (Epich., D., Thphr.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Also -ος [m., f.] (Hermipp.) and μάραθρον (Alex., Hell. pap., Dsc.).
•DIAL Myc. ma-ra-tu-wo /maratʰwon/.
•COMP Compounds εὐ-μάραθος 'rich in fennel' (AP), ἱππο-μάραθ(ρ)ον 'Prangos ferulacea' (Diocl. Med., Thphr., Dsc.), διὰ τὸ μέγεθος (Strömberg 1940: 30).
•DER μαραθίς, -ίδος [f.] = ἱππο-μ. (Ps.-Dsc.), μαραθᾶς [m.] 'fennel-trader', μαραθίτης οἶνος (Dsc., Gp.), TNs like Μαραθών, -ῶνος [m., f.] (η 80).
•ETYM For a plant name, foreign origin is suspected. A cunning attempt at an explanation in IE terms was made by Hesselman 1932: 94ff., who compared MoSw. mjärd(r)e, OSw. miærdher [m., n.] 'fish-trap' (or its funnel-like entrance), from PGm. merdra-* < IE merH-dʰro-*; the plant would have been named after its funnel-like flower. Apart from formal problems, the Mycenaean form eliminates the proposed cognates. It is rather a Pre-Greek word.

μαραίνω [v.] 'to quench, destroy', med.-pass. 'to die away, wither' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. μαρᾶναι (h. Merc.), aor. pass. μαρανθῆναι (Il.), perf. med. μεμάρα(σ)μαι and fut. μαρανῶ (late).
•COMP Also with ἀπο-, κατα-, προ-, ἐκ-.
•DER μάρανσις [f.] 'fading away' (Arist.), μαρασμός 'withering', μαρασμώδης (medic.); μαραντικός 'withering' (Phryn., sch.).
•ETYM As an example for the above system of forms, Frisk suggested κηραίνω 'to damage, corrupt' with comparable meaning, or ►ἰαίνω, aor. ἰᾶναι 'refresh', with opposite meaning, which probably had an old primary nasal present (cf. s.v.). The precursor of μαραίνω may have been a nasal present as well; see ►μάρναμαι with further connections.
DELG thinks that the root may be related to Lat. morior, etc. This idea finds support in the thesis of Meier-Brügger KZ 102 (1989): 62-67 that the verb meant 'to die out, let die out, let waste away', from the root mer-* 'to die away'. However, his reconstruction mr̥n̥-i̯e/o-*, with two consequent vocalic resonants, and hence the explanation of μαρ-, is hardly possible and does not solve anything.

μαράσσαι [f.pl.] · κύνες, ὄρνιθες 'dogs, birds' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ἀμαράσαι· αἱ σῦς. οἱ δὲ κύνας 'swine, others: bitches' (H.), see Fur.: 372.
•ETYM The word is Pre-Greek in view of the prothetic vowel. It has been compared with ►μαρίν.

μαραυγέω [v.] 'to contract the pupils when exposed to light; to be blinded', of the pupils of a cat (Plu.). ◂GR▸ •DER μαραυγία 'flicker, be blinded' (Archyt. apud Stob. 3, 1), -γεια also name of a fish (Xenocr.), because of its gaze, acc. to Strömberg 1943: 42f.
•ETYM Compound with second member as in χρυσ-, σκι-, βολ-αυγέω, and with an adjectival or verbal first member. Thus, either related to μαρμάρεος 'flashing' (μαρμάρεαι αὐγαί Ar. Nu. 187 [lyr.]), or to ►μαρμαίρω, with compositional formation like in e.g. εἰλυ-σπάομαι, ►δνοπαλίζω.

μαργαρίτης [m.] 'pearl' (Thphr., Str., Ael., Arr., NT). ◂LW Iran.▸
•DER μαργαρῖτις (λίθος) [f.] 'id.' (Ath., Isid. Char.), diminutive -ιτάριον (PHolm.). Besides, probably as a back-formation (cf. below), μάργαρον 'id.' (Anacreont., PHolm.), -ος [m., f.] 'id.' (Tz.), also 'Indian pearl mussel' (Ael.), -ίς (λίθος) 'pearl' (Philostr., Hld.), -ίδες [pl.] name of a pearl-like kind of date palm (Plin.); -ίδης [m.] (Praxag.).
•ETYM An oriental loanword, mostly assumed to be from Iranian, MP marvārīt, MoP marvā-rīδ 'pearl' (acc. to Schiffer RPh. 63 (1937): 45ff.), but critical discussion in Brust 2005: 432ff. The older view derives it from Skt. mañjarī 'flowering bead' (epic class.), 'pearl' (lex.), with -ίτης added in Greek, like in numerous other stone names. The by-form mañjara- [n.] would agree well with μάργαρον, but the late and rare occurrence of both the Skt. and Greek form is no support for a direct identification.

Suggestion by Gershevitch 1989: from Iran. mr̥ga-ahri-ita-* 'born from the shell of a bird' = 'oyster'.
From μαργαρίτης, Lat. margarita, etc.; see WH s.v.

μάργος [adj.] 'mad, furious, greedy' (Od.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also μόργος· ἄπληστος 'greedy', μοργίας· γαστριμαργίας, καὶ ἀκρασίας 'gluttony, being out of control, incontinence' (H.). Moreover ἄμαργος; μαρικᾶς· κίναιδος 'catamite' (H.), but see under the names; ἄβαρκνα· λιμός 'hunger, famine' (H.), which points to *ἄβαρκος. ἄβαρτος· ἄπληστος, οἱ δὲ ἄμαργος (H.), ἀβαρτία· ἀπληστία (H.). PNs Βάργος, Βάργη, Βρόγγος, Βάργασος, Μάργασος. Ἄβαρτος (Paus. 7, 3, 10).
•COMP As a first member in e.g. γαστρί-μαργος 'gluttonous' (Pi., Arist., Ph.) with γαστρι-μαργ-ία (Hp., Pl.), -έω (Ph.); Blanc RPh. 65 (1991): 59-66 connects στόμαργος from *στομά-μαργος.
•DER Μαργίτης [m.] name of the principal character of a satirical epic poem (Arist., Plb.), -ιτεία [f.] 'fury, madness' (Phld.); μαργότης [f.] 'madness, gluttony, wantonness' (Pl., trag.), -οσύνη 'id.' (Anacr., Thgn.); μαργηέντων· λυσσώντων 'raving' (H.).
Verbs: 1. μαργαίνω 'to rage, be furious', only pres. (E 882, Democr.); 2. μαργάω, only in pres. ptc. μαργῶν, -ῶσα 'furious, wanton' (trag., Call.); 3. μαργόομαι, only in ptc. μαργούμενος, μεμαργωμένος 'id.' (Pi., A.). With an unclear e-vowel: μέργιζε· ἀθρόως ἔσθιε 'eat at once!' (H.).
•ETYM The many variants (prothetic vowel, κ/γ, μ/β, α/ο, etc.) are typical for Pre-Greek words. The -ε- in μέργιζε probably represents a Pre-Greek variation as well; see Fur.: 217[72].

μάρδος [m.] 'reed-pipe' (Hdn. 1, 142, LSJ Supp.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

μάρη [f.] 'hand' (Pi. Fr. 310). ◂?▸
•DER ►εὐμαρής, whence εὐμάρεια; uncertain μάρις, -εως [m.] name of a measure for liquids, = 6 κοτύλαι (Arist., Poll.), = 10 χόες (Polyaen.), whence diminutive μάριον (pap.).
•ETYM Forssman 1966: 135-140 doubts the authenticity of μάρη 'hand'. Blanc REGr. 105 (1992): 548-556 and Blanc RPh. 70 (1996): 118 and 126 supposes that the form was coined to explain εὐμαρής. Schrijver 1991: 458 rejects an r/n-stem, as this would presuppose a root consisting of a single consonant m-, which is impossible in PIE. Former comparisons with Germanic and Celtic words, to be found in Frisk, are now obsolete.

μαριεύς, -έως [m.] 'stone that burns when in contact with water' (Arist. Mir. 833a 27; v.l. μαριθάν [acc.]); in H. μαριζεύς· λίθος τις, ὃς ἐπισταζομένου ὕδατος καίεται 'id.', also μαριθήν [nom.] without an indication of mg. (Hdn. 1, 16, 7). ◂?▸ •ETYM The correct form is uncertain; connected with ►μαρμαίρω? In this case, it would properly mean "gleaming, sparkling". See ►μαρίλη.

μαρίλη [f.] 'glowing ashes', opposed to ἄνθραξ 'glowing coals' and σποδός, -ιά 'ashes' (IA). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Arist. also has σμ-. Photius cites a form μαρείνη which he connects with μαραίνω.
•COMP μαριλο-καύτης 'charcoal-burner' (S.).
•DER Diminutive μαρύλλια [pl.] (P.Leid. X. 56), after other diminutives in -ύλλιον; μαριλ-εύω [v.] 'to change into glowing ashes; to burn coals', whence -ευτής (Poll.).
•ETYM Formation like μυστίλη, ζωμίλη, στροβίλη (-ῖλος), etc. (Chantraine 1933: 249). The form with σμ- probably shows that the word is Pre-Greek, as initial IE *s- would disappear in Greek. See ►μαριεύς.

μαρίν [f.] · τὴν σῦν. Κρῆτες 'swine (Cret.)' (H.). ◄PG?(V)► •ETYM Fur.: 372 cites ἀμαράσαι· αἱ σῦς. οἱ δὲ κύνας 'others say dogs' (H.) beside μαράσσαι· κύνες, ὄρνιθες 'birds' (H.). Because of the prothetic vowel in the former, μαρίν (if connected) is probably Pre-Greek.

μαρῖνος [m.] an unknown fish; perhaps a kind of barbel (Arist., H.), cf. Thompson 1947 s.v. H. glosses it κίθαρος 'chest', a kind of flatfish, ἰχθῦς θαλάσσιος 'seafish', καὶ ὄνομα κύριον 'an ordinary name'. ◄PG(S)► •ETYM Formation like ἀτταγ-ῖνος, etc. (see on ►ἀτταγᾶς). The suffix -ῖνος is Pre-Greek.

μάρις [m.] a liquid measure (Arist., Poll.) = 6 κότυλαι, or 10 χόες (Polyaen.). ◄LW Iran.► •ETYM Schmitt 1989: 301-315 thinks it is a loan from OP *mari-.

μαρίσκος [m.] 'bog-rush, Cladium mariscus' (Plin. HN 21, 112). ◄PG(S)► •ETYM Formation like ἰβίσκος, ἀλθίσκος, and other plant names (Chantraine 1933: 407); further opaque. The suffix -ίσκος probably points to a Pre-Greek word.

μαρμαίρω [v.] 'to flash, sparkle, gleam' (Il., late also prose). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Only present. Rarely with ἀνα-, παρα-, περι-, ὑπο-.
•COMP πυρι-, περι-μάρμαρος 'sparkling (of fire)' (Man., Hymn. Is.).
•DER Besides μαρμάρεος 'gleaming, flashing, sparkling' (Il.) with μαρμαρίζω = μαρμαίρω (Pi., D. S.); μαρμαρυγή [f.] 'flashing, sparkling', of rapid movements, etc. (IA since θ 265), cf. on ►ἀργός 1 for the semantics; formed after ἀμαρυγή. Thence μαρμαρυγώδης 'seeing sparks' (Hp.), μαρμαρύσσω (cf. ἀμαρύσσω) = μαρμαίρω (Them., Jul.); μαρμάρυγμα (Cael. Aur.).
•ETYM Analyzed as a reduplicated intensive yod-present μαρμαίρω < *μαρ-μαρ-ιω, standing beside μαρμάρεος like δαιδάλλω beside δαιδάλεος. The discussion of the semantics and parallels in other IE languages by Tichy 1983: 289-296 shows that the word may well be an onomatopoeia in origin. This means that Pre-Greek origin is a strong possibility, and in fact, it is almost ascertained by ►ἀμαρύσσω, with a prothetic vowel. The suffix -υγ- also speaks for this.
An element μαρ- is found in Μαῖρα [f.] "the sparkling one", name of Sirius (Call., Eratosth.), also as a PN in Hom., and in ►μαραυγέω. Cf. further perhaps the PN Ἀμφί-μαρος, son of Poseidon (Paus. 9, 29, 6), perhaps from *Ἀμφι-μάρμαρος?

The connection with ►μαρίλη and ►μαριεύς is quite possible in terms of Pre-Greek origin. It was thought that Skt. márīci- [f., m.] 'beam of light, mirage in the air' was a certain outer-Greek cognate. Although accepted by Mayrhofer KEWA 2: 589 and Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 321, the connection must be rejected, since the Greek vocalism μαρ- cannot be explained in this way (PIE has no phoneme a*). See ►μάρμαρος.

μάρμαρος [m.] 'stone, (piece of) rock' (M 380, ι 499, probably also E. Ph. 663 [lyr.] and Ar. Ach. 1172 [lyr.]), also an attribute of πέτρος (Π 735, E. Ph. 1401); 'white stone, marble' (Hp., Thphr., Theoc.); also μάρμαρον [n.] 'id.' (Call., late inscr.); also 'callosity on the foot of asses' (Hippiatr.). ◄PG?(O)► •COMP Some compounds, e.g. μαρμαρο-φεγγής 'gleaming like marble' (Tim. Pers.).
•DER μαρμάρ-ινος (Theoc., inscr.), -εος (inscr., pap., AP) 'of marble'; -όεις 'gleaming like marble' (S.), -ώδης 'marble-like' (Et. Gud.); uncertain μαρμαρικός, of ἄσβεστος (PHolm. 25, 19); probably rather to Μαρμαρική. Further μαρμαρῖτις (πέτρα) 'marble-like' (Ph. Byz.); also a plant name, 'peony, Fumaria' (Ps.-Dsc.), because of the blue-gray color; Strömberg 1940: 26, also 'peony' (Plin., who explains the plant's name from its location). μαρμαρ-άριος 'marble worker' (inscr.; = Lat. marmorārius).
Denominative μαρμαρόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to be changed into marble, to cover with marble' (Lyc., Hero); μαρμάρωσις 'callosity' (Hippiatr.) is best taken directly from μάρμαρον, cf. on ἀέτωσις s.v. ►αἰετός. μαρμαρωσσός 'with callosity' (Hippiatr.) is from Lat. marmorōsus 'id.'.
•ETYM Because of its original sense of 'stone, rock', Frisk connected it with μάρναμαι, assuming that the meaning 'marble' resulted from folk-etymological connection with μαρμαίρω, μαρμάρεος. P. Mazon prefers a connection with μαρμαίρω; cf. LSJ's 'a crystalline rock which sparkles'. Pre-Greek origin is probable.
The age of the veterinary meaning 'callosity' cannot be established; in any case, it does not represent an independent development from a supposed mg. *'hardening' vel sim., but is rather a direct metaphor from 'stone' or 'marble'. The same development is seen in Lat. marmor, which was borrowed from Greek. The forms found in Western European languages are from Latin. See ►μάρναμαι, ►μαρμαίρω.

μάρναμαι [v.] 'to fight, battle' (Il.). ◄IE? *merh$_2$- 'seize, grip'► •VAR Only present; by dissimilation βαρνάμενος [ptc.].
•COMP Rarely with ἐπι, περι-.
•ETYM The zero-grade nasal present μάρναμαι has an exact formal pendant in Skt. mr̥ṇīhí [ipv.], from which thematic mr̥ṇáti 'to crush', also 'to grab' was formed. If this etymology is correct, μάρναμαι may originally have meant 'to crush one another', or alternatively, it may derive from the sphere of wrestling (from 'to grab'). Both Gr. and Skt. may derive from athematic *mr-n(e)h$_2$-. For possible further cognates, most of which do not seem ascertained, see LIV[2] s.v. *merh$_2$-. See ►μάρμαρος.

μάρπτω [v.] 'to catch, seize, lay hold off, overtake' (Il.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Aor. μάρψαι (Il.), perf. μέμαρπεν, etc. (Hes., A. R.).
•COMP Also with κατα-, συν-.

•DER μάρπτις [m.] 'robber' (A. Supp. 826 [lyr.]; Schwyzer: 271, 504[3]); κάμμαρψις· μέτρον σιτικόν, τὸ ἡμιμέδιμνον. Αἰολεῖς 'a corn-measure (Aeol.)' (H.).
•ETYM A system without outer-Greek cognates. Note the glosses (all H.) βράψαι· συλλαβεῖν, ἀναλῶσαι, κρύψαι, θηρεῦσαι 'to gather, spend; consume, hide, hunt' and βράπτειν· ἐσθίειν, κρύπτειν, ἀφανίζειν 'to eat, hide, make disappear; remove', τῷ στόματι ἕλκειν, ἢ στενάζειν 'to suck into one's mouth, or to sigh, groan', with βρ- < mr-.
With a different auslauting velar, we find βρακεῖν· συνιέναι 'to understand', i.e. 'to grasp', and βράξαι· συλλαβεῖν, δακεῖν, καταπιεῖν 'to gather, bite, drink'. The latter have been compared with Skt. mr̥śáti 'to touch, take'. However, the variation κ : π cannot be explained in IE terms (improbable is assimilation μ - κ > μ - π as per Schwyzer: 302). Rather, the variants point to Pre-Greek mr(a)kʷ-*, which became either βραπ- or βρακ-, with a reflex different from that of the IE labiovelar, or μαρπ-. See ► βρακεῖν, ► μαπέειν.

μάρσιππος [m.] 'bag, pouch (for money), purse' (X., LXX, Hell. pap.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Codd. also -ιπος, -υπ(π)ος.
•DER Diminutive μαρσίππιον, -ίπιον, -ύπ(π)ιον (Hp., LXX, Hell. pap.).
•ETYM The word is most probably Pre-Greek because of its variants in π(π) and ι/υ. Borrowed into Lat. marsup(p)ium, -sip(p)-; see WH s.v.

μαρτιχόρας [m.] according to Ctesias (apud Arist., Paus.), an Indian name for a mythical animal, acc. to Paus. 9, 21, 4 (μαρτιόρα) the tigre, = ἀνδροφάγος. ◂LW Iran.▸
•ETYM From Iranian; related to OP martiya- [m.] 'man' and Av. xᵛar- [v.] 'to consume', MoP mardom-xār 'man-eater'. Cf. Brust 2005: 449ff.

μάρτυς [m., f.] 'witness' (Il.) 'martyr, blood-witness' in christian litt. ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Aeol. (Hdn. Gr.) and Dor. μάρτυρ, Cret. Epid. μαῖτυς (-ρς), -ρος, also μάρτυν [acc.] (Simon.), μάρτυσι [dat.pl.] (-ρσι Hippon.?); thematicized in epic and NWGr. μάρτυρος.
•COMP μαρτυρο-ποιέομαι [v.] 'to call to witness' (inscr., pap.), ψευδό-μαρτυς 'false witness' (Pl.), ἐπί-μαρτυς 'witness' (Ar., Call., A. R.), probably back-formation from ἐπι-μαρτύρομαι, -ρέω; on alleged ἐπιμάρτυρος (for ἔπι μάρτυρος) see Leumann 1950: 71.
•DER μαρτυρία (λ 325; cf. below on μαρτυρέω), μαρτύριον (IA) 'testimony, evidence'. Denominatives: 1. μαρτύρομαι [v.] 'to call to witness' (IA), also with prefix, e.g. δια-, ἐπι-; 2. μαρτυρέω [v.] 'to testify, bear witness' (Alc., Pi., IA), often with prefix, e.g. ἀντι-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, δια-, κατα-, συν-; thence μαρτύρημα (E.), (ἀντι-, κατα-)-μαρτύρησις (Epicur., pap.) 'testimony', also (δια-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, συμ-)μαρτυρία 'id.'.
•ETYM The basis may be a verbal abstract *μάρ-τυ- 'testimony', seen in μάρ-τυς, -τυν, -τυσι. The change from the abstract mg. 'testimony' to the appellative 'witness' is frequently attested, e.g. MoFr. témoin < Lat. testimōnium, MoE witness originally 'testimony', then 'witness'. The suffix -ρο- gave rise to μάρτυρος, probably of adjectival origin. A compromise with μάρτυς then perhaps led to the consonantal stem μάρτυρ-; note the gen.pl. μαρτύρων (ἐναντίον μαρτύρων, etc.), which can be both from the o-stem and from the consonantal stem. Dissimilation occurred in μαῖτυ(ρ)ς < *μάρτυρ-ς; μάρτυσι and μάρτυς can be explained in the same way.
μάρτυς has been explained as a zero grade τυ-derivation from the root smer-* 'remember', which is found in Skt. smárati and which may have other derivatives in Greek, e.g. ► μέριμνα 'care, concern'; the proper meaning of μάρτυς would then be 'remembrance'. However, a reconstruction smr-tu- would rather give *βρατυ-; therefore, I assume that it is rather a loan from Pre-Greek (see Fur.: 296). This is confirmed by the suffixes -tu-r-, which are non-Indo-European.

μασάομαι [v.] 'to chew, bite' (Hp., com., Arist.). ◂?, PG?(V)▸ •VAR Aor. μασήσασθαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. δια-, κατα-.
•DER Derivatives: (δια-)μάσημα 'bite, morsel' (Hp., Antiph., Thphr.), (δια-)μάσησις 'chewing' (Thphr., Dsc.), μασητήρ "chewer", 'muscle in the lower jaw' (Hp.), παρα-μασήτης "by-chewer", 'trencher-companion, parasite' (middle com.). Besides παραμασύντης 'id.' (middle com.), μασύντης (H.), Μασυντίας PN (Ar.) from *μασύνω; cf. μοσσύνειν· μασᾶσθαι βραδέως 'to chew slowly' (H.); Chantraine corrects to μασ-, which may be right or wrong; the variation might point to Pre-Greek origin.
•ETYM The meaning of μασάομαι suggests that it is an iterative-intensive deverbative formation to a primary yod-present (cf. φυράω to φῦρω < *φῦρ-ι̯ω). Next to it we find an innovative *μασύνω. The yod-present has been analyzed as PGr. mntʰ-i̯e/o-* on account of the gloss μάθυιαι· γνάθοι 'jaws' (H.); a stem PGr. mntʰ-* can also been recognized in ► μάσταξ << μάστο- < μαθ-τ-.
As there is not enough evidence for a sound change -tH-* > Gr. -θ-, I reject the comparison with Skt. math- 'to stir' < IE metH-* (which is semantically not compelling either). The synonym Lat. mandō, -ere 'to chew' is mostly derived from metH-, too, but in Latin, the development mt-nH- > mand- is regular (cf. pandō < pt-nH-*).
On the other hand, the Gm. group of OHG mindel, ON mél [n.] 'bit of the bridle' < IE ment-*, Go. munþs 'mouth' < IE mnt-* has been compared. Gr. μαθ- was analyzed as the corresponding zero grade, but the aspiration cannot be explained. Moreover, the Gm. group should rather be compared with MW mant 'gums, mouth', Lat. mentum 'jaw' as mn-to-*.
In sum, everything remains uncertain, but note that the gloss μοσσύνειν could point to Pre-Greek origin.

μάσθλης [m.] 'leather', name of leather objects (cf. διφθέρα) like 'leather shoe, strap' (Sapph., Hp., S.); also metaph. of a flexible and flattering man (Ar.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Aeol. μάσλης, -ητος (with loss of the θ); μάσθλη [f.] (S. Fr. 571, H.).
•DER μασθλήτινος 'like leather' (Cratin., Eup.), μασθλήματα [n.pl.] 'leather ware' (Ctes.).
•ETYM Formation like τάπης, λέβης, etc.; explanation uncertain. Traditionally derived from ἱμάσθλη (see ► ἱμάς) with loss of the anlaut (for which μάστιξ is compared, see Chantraine 1933: 375, Strömberg 1944: 44). However, such a loss is highly improbable. Schwyzer: 533 and 725[3] derives μάσθλης from ►μάστιξ and ►μαίομαι; thence ἱμάσθλη with secondary adaptation to ἱμάς.

Extensively on μάσθλης, Hamm Glotta 32 (1953): 43ff. Possibly Pre-Greek (see Fur.: 172[118]).

μασθός 'breast'. ⇒μαστός.

μασκαυλης [m.] 'basin for ablution'. ◄?►
•ETYM Late transcription of Hebrew maskel (inscr. Philadelphia, Lydia III[p]). DELG asks whether it is a notation of ►βασκαύλης.

μάσκη · δίκελλα (H.). ⇒μακέλη.

μάσπετον [n.] 'leaf or stalk of silphion' (Antiph.). ◄PG?(S)► •ETYM On the suffix -ετο-, see Fur.: 115[4].

μάσσω [v.] 'to knead (dough), press a workable material in a form; to strike, wipe off, make a reproduction of sth.' (since τ 92). ◄IE? *menk-, or *meh$_2$ǵ- 'knead'► •VAR Att. μάττω, -ομαι, aor. μάξαι, -σθαι, pass. μαγῆναι, μαχθῆναι, perf. med. μέμαγμαι, act. μέμαχα (Ar.).
•COMP Often with prefix, like ἀπο-, ἐκ-, ἀνα-.
•DER 1. ἐκμαγεῖον (μαγεῖον Longin.) 'mass of which prints are made, offprint, mould; towel, napkin' (IA). 2. μαγίς, -ίδος [f.] 'kneaded mass, cake, kneading trough, dresser' (Hp., Com, S.). 3. μάγμα [n.] 'kneaded mass, thick salve, smear' (pap., Plin.), ἔκ-, ἀπό-μαγμα 'offprint, wiping cloth, wiped off dirt' (Hp., S., Thphr.), μαγμόν· τὸ καθάρσιον 'purifying means' (H.). 4. ἔκ-, ἀνά-μαξις 'wiping off' (Arist.). 5. μαγεύς [m.] 'kneader, baker, sbd. who wipes off' (Poll., AP, H.), probably directly from the verb. 6. μακτήρ· ἡ κάρδοπος 'kneading trough', ἡ πυελίς 'socket, basin'. καὶ διφθέρα 'leather bag'. καὶ ὀρχήσεως σχῆμα 'scheme of a dance' (H.); (ἀπο-, κατα-)μάκτης 'someone who kneads or wipes off' (Com. Adesp., H.), fem. ἀπομάκτρια (Poll.). 7. μάκτρα [f.] 'baking trough' (com., X.), 'trough, bathing tub, sarcophagus' (Hell.), spelled μάκρα, see Schwyzer: 337; (ἔκ-, ἀπό-)-μάκτρον 'offprint, towel, etc.' (E., Ar.). 8. μακτήριον = μάκτρα (Plu.). 9. μακτρισμός name of a dance (Ath.), after κορδακισμός; cf. on μακτήρ above; thence -ίστρια name of a dancing girl (ibid.). 10. ἀπομαγδαλιά (Ar., Plu., Gal.), μαγδαλιά (Gal.), -έα (Hippiatr.) 'bread crumb for handwashing'; like ἁρμαλιά, φυταλιά, etc., but with unexplained δ (perhaps after *ἀπομάγδην?). 11. With root-final κ: μακαρία· βρῶμα ἐκ ζωμοῦ καὶ ἀλφίτων 'dish made of soup and barley groats' (H.).
•ETYM In Germanic and Balto-Slavic, comparanda are found that may be derived from IE meh$_2$ǵ-, e.g. MoHG machen, OS makōn 'to make, erect, build', if from *'to knead, form' (but note MoIc. maka 'to smear'), OCS mazati, 1sg. mažǫ 'to smear, salve' (MBret. mezaff 'to knead' is unrelated, see Matasović 2009 s.v.); uncertain is the comparison with Arm. macanim, macnum 'to stick, congeal'.
On the other hand, a root IE *menk- is found in Lith. mìnkyti, 1sg. mìnkau, also mánkyti, 1sg. mánkau 'to knead a soft mass', OCS mǫka, Ru. muká 'flour' and related Balto-Slavic words. From Gm., one might adduce MoHG mengen, OE mengan, etc., if the original mg. is 'knead together', and from Indo-Aryan Skt. macate 'to crush, etc.' (Dhātup.).
The etymology is connected with the question which velar was original in Greek, -κ- or -γ-. The isolated μακαρία is the only one with a clear voiceless stop, for μάσσω < *μακ-i̯ω can be explained as analogical after the aorist. If related, μᾶζα points to -γ-, but μαγῆναι and most nominal forms -γ- can be explained by analogy as well. Therefore, both options remain open. A suppletive system *menk (whence μακαρία, μάσσω) beside meh$_2$ǵ- (whence μαγῆναι) is conceivable, too. I retain some doubts, however, about the form -μαγδαλιά. See ►μᾶζα.

μάσσων 'longer'. ⇒μῆκος.

μάστα [?] · ἡγεμών, ἢ μεγάλως (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

μάσταξ, -ακος [f.] 'mouth; mouthful, morsel' (I 324), also metaph. 'locust' (S. Fr. 716, Nic.), Ambraciotic acc. to Clitarch. apud EM 216, 9, because of its voracity (cf. Strömberg 1944: 17f.). ◄PG?►
•DER μαστάζω [v.] 'to chew' (Nic. Th. 918), also συμ- (Hippiatr.), with expressive by-forms: 1. μασταρύζω (v.l. -ίζω) [v.] 'to chew fervently, without uttering a word', of an old man (Ar. Ach. 689); cf. μασταρίζειν· μαστιχᾶσθαι. καὶ τρέμειν 'to tremble'. ἢ σφοδρῶς ἢ κακῶς μασᾶσθαι 'to chew violently and in a bad way' (H.), μαστηρύζειν· τὸ κακῶς μασᾶσθαι (Phot.); formation like κελαρύζω, βατταρίζω, etc. 2. μαστιχάω, only ptc. dat.sg. μαστιχόωντι (Hes. Sc. 389, verse-final) 'chewing violently for anger' = 'grinding the teeth, foaming' (of a boar), μαστιχᾶσθαι in H. s.v. μασταρίζειν (see above); back-formation μαστίχη [f.] 'resin of the mastich-tree' (Com. Adesp., Thphr.), μαστίχ-ινος (Dsc.), -ηρά [f.] 'plaster from mastich' (Aet.), after ἐλαιηρός, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 232f.).
•ETYM Both μάσταξ and μαστάζω, which need not be directly related, go back to a derivative μασ-τ- (from *μαθ-τ-, cf. the gloss μάθυιαι· γνάθοι H.) which stands beside the yod-present μασάομαι (from *μαθ-i̯-). The function of the proposed formation remains unclear, however. For the formation of μαστάζω, cf. βαστάζω, κλαστάζω (beside κλάω), etc. (Schwyzer: 706); for μάσταξ, see πόρταξ (: πόρτις), μύλαξ (: μύλος). The gloss μέστακα· τὴν μεμασημένην τροφήν 'chewed food' (H.), with deviating vocalism, does not show an old full grade, but it was simply reshaped folk-etymologically after μεστός 'mouthful'.
The group may be of Pre-Greek origin; see ►μασάομαι for further details.

μαστεύω 'to search after'. ⇒μαίομαι, ματεύω.

μάστιξ, -ῖγος [f.] 'whip, scourge', metaph. 'plague' (Il.). ◄PG(S)► •VAR Also dat. μάστῖ, acc. -ῖν (Ψ 500, ο 182, AP).
•COMP μαστιγο-φόρος 'bearing the whip', also name of a policeman (Th., pap.).
•DER Diminutive μαστίγιον (M. Ant.); μαστιγ-ίας [m.] 'rogue' (Att.), see Chantraine 1933: 93; -ία name of a magic plant (PMag. Par.).
Denominative verbs: 1. μαστίω 'to whip, scourge, thrash' (Il.), present only, sporadic in epic. 2. μαστίζω (post-Hom.), -ίσδω (Theoc.), aor. μαστίξαι (Il.; Hell.) 'id.', either from μάστιξ or enlarged from μαστίω, beside μαστίκ-τωρ 'scourger, chastiser' (A. Eu. 159), -τήρ 'id.' (conj. A. Supp. 466). 3. μαστιγ-ῶσαι, -όω (-έω Hdt. 1, 114) 'id.' (IA), with μαστίγωσις 'whipping' (Ath.), -ώσιμος 'worth a thrashing' (Luc.), after λεύσιμος (Arbenz 1933: 99).

•ETYM The connection with μαίομαι, as an enlargement in -γ- of an old instrument noun in -ti-, is doubtful; the word is rather Pre-Greek, on account of the suffix -ῑγ-.

μαστιχάω ⇒μάσταξ.

μαστός [m.] 'nipple, motherbreast, breast', metaph. 'hill, height', also name of a cup (Apollod. Cyren. apud Ath. 11, 487b, Oropos, Delos); cf. Jaeger RhM 102 (1959): 337ff. (on the use in Clem. Al. and Ph.). ⋖PG(V)⋗ •VAR Post-Hom. μαστός, epic ion. poet. μαζός, Dor. (Theoc.) μασδός, Hell. also μασθός; on μαστίχη see ►μάσταξ.
•COMP φιλό-μαστος 'loving the breast' (A.), γυναικό-μαστος (-θος) 'having female breasts' (medic.), δεκά-μαζος 'having ten breasts' (Epigr. Gr.); μαστό-δε-τον [n.] 'breast-band' (AP); cf. e.g. ἀκμό-θετον.
•DER Diminutive μαστίον 'small cup' (Oropos), μαστάριον 'id.' (Delos), also 'small breast' (Alciphr.).
•ETYM Attempts have been made to attribute μαζός, μαστός, μασθός to three different pre-forms, mad-do-, mad-to-, mad-dʰo-* (Schrader KZ 30 (1890): 476). However, the existence of a nominal suffix -dʰ-, and especially of -d-, is doubtful. Moreover, semantically, derivation from the root of μαδάω is meaningless.
If the form is Pre-Greek, μαζός [mazdos] and μαστός differ in voice only (and aspiration in Hell. μασθός). Since voice and aspiration are not distinctive in Pre-Greek, all forms may go back to the same Pre-Greek word. It is therefore not preferable to explain μασθός (attested at a later date) as a reshaping after words with comparable meaning, or by association with words like στῆθος, κύσθος, βρόχθος.

μαστροπός [m., f.] 'procurer, procuress' (Ar., X., etc.). ⋖PG(V)⋗ •VAR Also μαστροφός (H.); hypocoristic μάστρυς [f.] (Phot.).
•DER μαστροπικός, -οπεύω, -οπεία (Att.).
•ETYM The usual connection with μαίομαι 'touch, investigate' is uncertain, as the variant with -φ- may point to a Pre-Greek word. Fur.: 160 compares μάτρυλλος, -α 'procurer', ματρυλεῖον 'brothel', μαστρυλλεῖον and μάστρυς 'procurer, -ess'; note the variation σ/ zero in these forms, on which see Fur.: 301ff.

μασχάλη [f.] 'armpit' (h. Merc.), metaph. 'axil, branch' (Thphr.), 'bay' (Str.), etc. ⋖PG(S)⋗ •COMP E.g. ἀμφι-μάσχαλος 'with two arm-holes', of χιτών (com.).
•DER μασχαλίς [f.] 'axil' (Thphr.), μασχάλι(ν)ον, -εον (-έον cod.) [f.] 'basket made of palm twigs' (H., sch.), -ιαῖος 'belonging to the armpit' (inscr., medic.); μασχαλιστήρ 'girdle in the arm-pits' (Hdt., A.), like βραχιονιστήρ, etc., see Chantraine 1933: 328; formally, it is a euphemistic expression for 'mutilate' from the denominative μασχαλίζομαι, with probable original mg. "be girded in the armpits": according to ancient informants, all bodily extremities including nose and ears were cut off during mutilation, and were fastened to a string running through the armpits. Thence μασχαλισμός 'mutilation', μασχαλίσματα [pl.] 'cut off extremities' (A., S., Lex.). The correctness of this old interpretation is doubted by Boehm in PW 14: 2060ff.
•ETYM The formation may be compared with that of ἀγκάλη 'bent arm'; further details are unclear. No doubt a Pre-Greek word. A very bold attempt was made by Adams Glotta 62 (1984): 65f. See ►μάλη.

μάταιος ⇒μάτη.

ματεύω [v.] 'to search, seek, strive to' (Ξ 110). ⋖?⋗
•VAR ματέω in μάτης (Theoc. 29, 15, from Aeol. *μάτημι), ματεῖ· ζητεῖ; ματῆσαι· μαστεῦσαι, ζητῆσαι 'id.'; μάσσαι· ζητῆσαι (H.), ματεῖσθαι· ζητεῖσθαι (Hp. apud Erot.).
•COMP Also with prefix: ἐσ-ματέομαι, -μάσασθαι (Hp.), ἐμ-, κατ-εμ-ματέω (Nic.) 'to put the finger (down the throat), to implant (a sting)'.
•DER μάτος [n.] 'investigation' (Hp. apud Gal.), ματήρ· ἐπίσκοπος 'supervisor', ἐπιζητῶν, ἐρευνητής 'searcher, inspector' with ματηρεύειν· μα<σ>τεύειν, ζητεῖν (H.).
•ETYM ματεύω is probably secondary for ματέω (cf. Schwyzer: 732). The latter formally corresponds to δατέομαι and πατέομαι, so we probably have to start from a nominal τ-stem.
The verbal nouns ἄδαστος, ἄπαστος are parallelled by ἀπροτίμαστος, while -μάσ(σ)ασθαι, μάσσαι conform to the aorists δάσ(σ)ασθαι, πάσ(σ)ασθαι. Therefore, the verbal forms with -σ- can be combined with ματέω, just like nominal as μαστύς, μαστήρ, μάστιξ, ►μάσμα, etc. The form μαστεύω (see ►μαίομαι) may also have received its -σ- from these sigmatic forms.
The pair ματέω: μαίομαι may be compared with δατέομαι : δαίομαι; but ascertained outer-Greek comparanda are lacking for μαίομαι (unlike for δαίομαι).

ματέω [v.] 'to tread', in the ptc. μάτεισαι [nom.f.pl.] (Aeol., Incerti auct. 16, 3 LP, from μάτη-μι), ματεῖ· πατεῖ 'id.' (H.). ⋖IE? men- 'tread'⋗ •ETYM Formed like ►ματέω 'to search', if not simply a rhyme with πατέω. Connected with a primary verb 'to tread' in Balto-Slavic, e.g. Lith. mìnti, 1sg. minù 'to tread (down), break flax', OCS męti, 1sg. mьnǫ 'to press together', Ru. mjat', 1sg. mnu 'to knead, tread (loam), break (flax)'; nominal derivatives are found in Celtic, e.g. W mathr 'trampling, mire' < mn̥-tro-*. Skt. carma-mná- [m.] 'tanner' cannot be included here; see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. See ►πατέω.

μάτη [f.] 'fault, folly' vel sim. (Stesich., A., S.). ⋖?⋗
•VAR Also ματίη 'id.' (κ 79, A. R.), a metrically convenient transformation (Porzig 1942: 204 and 70); μάτην [adv.] 'idly, in vain, without reason' (h. Cer.).
•DER 1. μάταιος 'idly, empty, foolish, rash' (IA) with ματαιό-της (Hell.), -σύνη (Polem. Phgn.) 'idleness, etc.' and denominatives: a) (ἀπο-)ματαΐζω [v.] (Hdt., J.), ματᾴζω [v.] (A., S.) 'to talk nonsense, act foolishly', also -αιάζω [v.] 'id.' (Hell.); b) ματαιόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to bring to naught, act foolishly' (LXX, NT) with ματαίωμα (Hermas). 2. ματάω, aor. ματῆσαι 'to do in vain, miss, be useless' (Il.).

•ETYM The difficulty in determining the original meaning of the verbal noun μάτη (thus Fraenkel 1912: 115) and of its fossilized accusative μάτην makes it very hard to find a convincing etymology. The connection with the Slavic group of Pol. matać, 1sg. matam 'to swindle, turn, lie, deceive', SCr. matati, 1sg. matam 'to allure, attract', clearly has little value.
Meier-Brügger Glotta 67 (1989): 42-44 connects the root men-* 'to have in mind', with negative connotations. Fur.: 88 n. 476 notes that words for 'stupid, foolish' are often of substrate origin (see also ibid. 242, 339; cf. ματταβος· ὁ μωρός 'moron' H.). See ►μηνύω, ►ματταβος.

μάτιον [n.] Eg. measure of capacity (pap. II-III^{p}). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

ματίς [adj.] · μέγας. τινὲς ἐπὶ τοῦ βασιλέως (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Tentatively compared with Celtic words for 'good', e.g. OIr. maith < PCl. mati-*. It remains doubtful whether the gloss is from Greek or from another language.

ματρυλεῖον ⇒μαστροπός.

μάτταβος [adj.] · ὁ μωρός 'someone stupid, moron' (H.). ◄PG? (SV)► •VAR ματτάβης· ἀπορῶν 'without escape or means' (H.), ματταβεῖ· περιβλέπει, ἀδημονεῖ 'gazes around, is troubled' (H.), ματταβο<ύ>μενος· μέλλων καὶ ἀποκνῶν 'who is about to do something but hesitates' (H.).
•ETYM A popular word, acc. to Chantraine 1933: 261f. derived from μάτη with the degrading suffix -β-, and containing expressive gemination. It may well be Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 242, who connects it with μάταιος 'idle'. See ►μάτη.

ματτύη [f.] name of a sweet dish, which is made of all kinds of ingredients, like minced meet, poultry, aromatic spices; it is ascribed to the Thessalians and the Macedonians (middle and new com.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also -α [f.], -ης [m.].
•COMP As a first member in ματτυο-κόπης [m.] (epithet, Amm. Marc.), perhaps also in ματτυο-λοιχός (Ar. Nu. 451 and Hdn. Gr. 1, 231 according to Bentley; codd. ματιο-).
•DER ματτυάζω [v.] 'to prepare a μ.' (Alex.).
•ETYM Formerly analyzed as derived from *ματτύς (comparing ἰχθύη : ἰχθύς, δελφύα : δελφύς, etc.), representing *μακ-τύς with a dialectal (Cretan or perhaps Thessalian) assimilation. This would be a τυ-derivative of μάσσω < *μακ-ι̯ω 'to knead'; see Kalén 1918: 91ff. following Ath. 14, 663b. Improbable. Fur.: 386 compares ματύλλη 'id.' (Poll. 6, 70). The a-vocalism in the root and the alternation τ(τ) point to Pre-Greek origin. Borrowed as Lat. mattea; see WH s.v.

μαῦλις 1 · μάχαιρα. καὶ ἡ μισθωτὸν (Latte: μισθίον) ποιοῦσα 'large knife, also a procuress' (H.). ◄LW Lyd.?►
•DER μαυλίζω = μαστροπεύω 'to pander' (H., sch.) with μαυλιστής [m.] (Cat. Cod. Astr., Phot., Suid.), μαυλίστρια [f.] (Suid., sch., EM); μαυλιστήριον· παρ' Ἱππώνακτι, λύδιον νόμισμα 'a Lydian custom / currency in Hipponax' (λέμισμα cod.) λεπτόν τι 'something small or delicate' (H.); Latte gives Λύδιόν τι λεπτόν νόμισμα 'a small Lydian currency', fr. 126 Bergk.
•ETYM A chain of hypotheses is assumed by Jongkees Acta Orbis 16 (1938): 146ff.: from Lyd. mav-lis*, an adj. built on Mavś*, the Lydian name of the mother goddess Magna mater (seen in PNs from Asia Minor, e.g. Μαυα, Μαυ-εννα, Μαυ-σσ-ωλλος, etc.). Thus, it would properly mean 'belonging to Mavś'. Thence 1. = μάχαιρα, as the Magna mater was considered the patroness of metal weapons; 2. 'woman devoted to the Magna mater', who makes her money as a prostitute; 3. 'coin of the Magna mater' (with added suffix -τήριον). Criticism of these hypotheses in O. Masson 1962: 178f.

μαῦλις 2, -ιδος, -ιος [f.] 'knife' (Call., Nic., AP, H., Suid., sch.). ⇒μαῦλις 1.

μαῦρος •VAR μαυρός. ⇒ἀμαυρός.

μαφόρτης, -ου [m.] 'short cloak with a cap' for women and monks. ◄LW Sem.►
•VAR μαφόρ(τ)ιον [n.].
•COMP δελματικο-μαφόρτης, -τιον 'a μ. cut like a Dalmatian cloak', from δελ-, δαλματική, Lat. Del-, Dalmatica (pap. imperial period).
•ETYM From Sem., cf. Hebr. maʿaforet, Aram. maʿaforā, -forᵉtā 'cloak with cap'. See Lewy KZ 59 (1932): 192. Lat. probably borrowed mafortium, maforte from Greek, as well as mafortis, -fors; see WH s.v. Greek borrowed σουβρικο-μαφόρτιον (pap. imperial period) from Latin.

μάχαιρα [f.] 'large knife, butchery knife' (Il.); post-Hom. also 'short sword, dagger'. ◄PG(V)► •COMP μαχαιρο-φόρος [adj.] 'sword-bearing', subst. msc. 'sword-bearer' (IA), ἀ-μάχαιρος 'without a knife' (Pherecr.).
•DER Diminutive μαχαίρ-ιον (Hp., X., Arist.), -ίς [f.] (com., Str.), -ίδιον (Ph., Luc.); further μαχαιρᾶς [m.] 'sword-bearer' (pap., inscr.), μαχαιρωτός 'equipped with a sword' (Gal., Paul. Aeg.); μαχαιρίων, -ίωνος [m.] plantname = ξιφίον (Dsc. 4, 20, v.l. -ώνιον), after the form of the leaves, acc. to Strömberg 1940: 44; also as a PN (Paus.); Μαχαιρεύς [m.] (Str., sch. Pi.).
•ETYM Like γέραιρα, χίμαιρα, πίειρα, etc., μάχαιρα looks like a derivative in *-ι̯α- built on an r-stem. Traditionally connected with μάχομαι, but DELG finds this implausible. Semitic etymology (with reservations) in Lewy 1895: 177 (comparing Hebr. mᵉkērā 'sword', but acc. to Gordon Antiquityy 30 (1956): 22ff., this is rather from Greek); cf. Kretschmer Glotta 19 (1931): 160. Borrowed as Lat. machaera.
I compare μάγειρος 'cook', and on account of the interchange γ/χ, conclude that it is a Pre-Greek word.

μάχλος [adj.] 'lascivious' (of women), 'luxuriant, wild' (Hes., A.). ◄PG?(V)► •VAR μάχλης· ἀκρατής, πόρνος 'out of control, sodomite' (H.); also μαχλάς, -άδος [f.] (Man., AP, Ph.), μαχλίς· ἑταίρα, πόρνη 'courtisane, prostitute' (H.).

•DER μαχλο-σύνη 'lasciviousness, voluptuousness' (Ω 30, Hes., Hdt.), -τῆς 'id.' (EM, Sch.); μαχλικός 'like a lascivious woman' (Man.); μαχλεύομαι [v.] 'to be lascivious' in μεμαχλευμένον ἦτορ (Man.), μαχλῶντες· πορνεύοντες 'prostituting' (H.).
•ETYM The comparison with Skt. makhá-, an attribute of gods, is gratuitous and should be discarded in view of the unknown meaning of the latter (see Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 288). Fur.: 211 adduces Βάκχος (with interchange β/μ), and compares (ibid. fn. 48) Arm. mahaz 'lascivious', suggesting that all these words are from Asia Minor. Note that a word of this meaning with interchange β/μ may well be Pre-Greek.

μάχομαι [v.] 'to fight, combat' (Il.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Epic also μαχέομαι (μαχειόμενος, μαχεούμενον with metr. lengthening), aor. μαχέσ(σ)ασθαι (Il.), μαχήσασθαι (D. S., Paus.), μαχεσθῆναι (Plu., Paus.), fut. μαχήσομαι (epic Ion.), μαχέσ(σ)ομαι (Ion. and late), μαχέομαι (Β 366), μαχοῦμαι (Att.), μαχεῖται (Υ 26), perf. μεμάχημαι (Att.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. δια-, συν-, ἀπο-. As a second member in μονο-μάχος 'fighting on his own' (A., E.), msc. 'gladiator' (Str.), whence μονομαχ-έω, -ία, etc., ναυ-μάχ-ος 'fighting at sea' (AP), but ναύ-μαχος from μάχη, see below.
•DER μάχη 'battle' (Il.); as a second member in ἄ-, πρό-, σύμ-, ναύ-, ἱππό-μαχος, with derivatives like προμαχ-ίζω, συμμαχ-έω, ναυμαχ-έω, -ία.
Thence: 1. μαχη-τής [m.] 'warrior' (Hom., LXX), Dor. μαχατάς (Pi.), μαχάταρ· ἀντίπαλος 'adversary' (H.), Aeol. μαχαίτας (Alc. 350), probably hyperaeolism (cf. DELG). 2. μάχ-ιμος 'warlike, militant' (IA), after ἄλκιμος; also msc. 'soldier of an Egyptian tribe', with μαχιμικός 'in the way of the μάχιμοι' (pap.). 3. Μαχάων [m.] PN (Aeol. epic), Ion. -έων, with Dor. Μαχαν-ίδας.
From μάχομαι also μαχ-ήμων 'warlike' (Μ 247, AP) and μαχ-ητός 'to be fought with' (μ 119), ἀ-, περι-μάχ-ητος (Att.), μαχ-ητικός 'ready for battle' (Pl., Arist.). The second member -μάχᾱς, as in ἀπειρο-μάχᾱς 'unexperienced in battle' (Pi.), λεοντο-μάχᾱς 'fighting with a lion' (Theoc.), may be derived from noun or verb alike.
•ETYM Beside the thematic root present μάχομαι, the isolated by-form μαχέομαι is modelled on μαχήσομαι, rather than a denominative of μάχη. The pair μαχήσομαι : ἐμαχό-μην has parallels like ἀπ-εχθήσομαι : ἀπ-εχθόμην, μαθήσομαι : ἔμαθον and γενήσομαι : ἐγενόμην. One has therefore been inclined to analyze ἐμαχόμην as an original aorist, from which μάχομαι was subsequently made. Further evidence for this view is the remarkably low frequency of the aorist in Homer (Trümpy 1950: 260[333]). It is supposed that a new aorist μαχέσ(σ)ασθαι arose (after the model of κοτέσσασθαι, etc.) after μάχεσθαι had been reinterpreted as a present. The new future μαχοῦμαι then arose from μαχέσ(σ)ασθαι in analogy with the type τελέσ(σ)αι : fut. τελῶ.
In the domain of fighting and battle, old inherited expressions can hardly be expected. The connection with a supposed Iran. PN ha-mazan-* "warrior" in ►Ἀμαζών, ἀμαζακάραν· πολεμεῖν. Πέρσαι, and ἀμαζανίδες· αἱ μηλέαι (H.) is ingenious, but highly uncertain. Within Greek, it is formally possible to connect μάχομαι with μάχαιρα '(butchering) knife' and with μῆχαρ, μηχανή 'ruse' (cf. χειρο-μάχα [f.], scil. ἑταιρεία, the name of the workers' party in Milete acc. to Plu. 2, 298c.), a suggestion which DELG rightly calls improbable. As an isolated root, μαχ- may well be Pre-Greek.

μάψ [adv.] 'blindly, in vain' (Hom.). ◁PG?▷
•COMP As a first member in μαψι-λόγος 'speaking in vain' (h. Merc.), after other first members in -ι, see Zumbach 1955: 22; μαψ-υλάκᾱς 'barking in vain' (Pi., Sapph.), etc.
•DER μαψ-ίδιος 'idle, useless' (E., Theoc.), -ιδίως [adv.] (Hom.).
•ETYM Adverb in -ς, always occurring before vowel, of unexplained origin. Not related to Lat. mox 'soon', etc. (see WH s.v.). It could well be Pre-Greek.

μεγαίρω [v.] 'to grudge, envy, refuse' (Il.), mostly with negation. ◁IE meǵ*h_2*-* 'great'▷ •VAR Aor. μεγῆραι.
•DIAL According to sch. Ν 563 and Eust., from Salamis (cf. Ruijgh 1957: 162).
•DER Privative verbal adj. ἀ-μέγαρ-τος 'not enviable, unpleasant, unhappy' (Il.). Perhaps Μέγαιρα [f.] name of one of the Erinyes.
•ETYM Formation like ἐχθαίρω, γεραίρω, etc., formally identical with Arm. mecarem 'to esteem highly' from mec 'great', except for the yod-derivation. As Clackson 1994: 149-150 remarks, the suffix -αίρω became productive in Greek, e.g. ἐλεαίρω to ἐλέω 'to pity'. Thus, it is unnecessary that an r-stem meg(h_2)-r-* 'greatness' or megh*$_2$-ro- 'great' underlies both the Greek and Armenian verbs.
The Greek development of meaning is understood by Clackson from 'to regard as great' > 'regard as too great' > 'grudge'. See ►μέγας.

μέγαρα 1 [n.pl.] 'pits into which living pigs were thrown during the Thesmophoria' (Paus.). ◁LW Sem.?▷
•VAR Also μάγ- (Men.).
•ETYM Probably from Semitic, cf. Hebr. me'ārā 'cavity'. See Lewy 1895: 94, although he prefers identifying the word with μέγαρον 'hall'.

μέγαρον 2 [n.] 'hall, room, the inner space of a temple', plur. 'house, palace' (epic Ion., Il.); on the mg. e.g. Wace JHS 71 (1951): 203f. ◁PG▷ •VAR Gen.pl. -έων (Sophr.).
•ETYM Undoubtedly a technical loan from the substrate, perhaps adapted to μέγα; cf. the TN Μέγαρα.

μέγας [adj.] 'great, big, large' (Il.). ◁IE meǵ-h_2-* 'much, many'▷ •VAR μεγάλη [f.], μέγα [n.]; compar. μέζων, superl. μέγιστος (Il.).
•DIAL Att. compar. μείζων, lengthened after κρείττων, ἀμείνων, etc. (Schwyzer: 538), Myc. compar. me-zo.
•COMP μεγά-θυμος 'with great mind' (Hom.), μεγαλ-ήτωρ 'magnanimous' (Il.), μεγαλό-φρων 'magnanimous' (Att.), cf. Hom. μέγα φρονέων; μεγιστό-τιμος 'with highest honour' (A.).
•DER 1. From μεγα-: μέγεθος [n.] 'greatness, sublimity' (Il.), Hdt. v.l. μέγαθος; cf. πλῆ-θος; -ε- by vowel assimilation according to Schwyzer: 255, but this is improbable as such assimilations were irregular; thence μεγεθ-ικός 'quantitative' (comm. Arist.), -ύνω [v.] 'to magnify', pass. 'to get exalted' (late), after μεγαλύνω; -όομαι = μεγαλύνομαι (medic., S. E.); PN Μέγης with patronymic Μεγάδης (Il.).

2. From μεγαλο-: μεγαλ-εῖος 'grand(iose)' (Pl., X., Plb.), enlarged after ἀνδρεῖος, with -ειότης 'highness, majesty' (LXX); μεγάλ-ωμα [n.] 'greatness, power' (LXX), -ωσύνη 'id.' (LXX, Aristeas), -ω- analogical; -ωστί [adv.] 'magnificently'.
3. From μέγιστος: μεγιστᾶνες [m.pl.] (rarely -άν sg.) 'great lords, magnates' (Men., LXX, NT), after the PNs in -ᾶνες, Björck 1950: 55, 278ff.; PN Μεγιστ-ώ [f.] (Emp., pap.), -ίας, -εύς; μεγιστεύω [v.] 'to be(come) very great' (App.).
•ETYM A form corresponding to μέγα, μέγας is found in Arm. mec 'great', meca-w [instr.] (a-stem); Skt. máhi [n.] 'great' (with h from $*$-gh$_2$-) can also be subsumed under IE $*$mégh$_2$-. We find PGm. $*$meku with secondary $*$-u after $*$felu > Go. filu 'many', see ►πολύς: ON mjǫk 'very'. Further, Hitt. mekk- 'much, many' (Old Script) was reshaped into an i-stem mekki-.
The final -α from -h$_2$ is the zero grade of -ā in Skt. mahā- 'great' (as a first member), mahā-nt- 'id.'; the effect of a laryngeal after g was aspiration in Skt., with $*$gh > h. The masculine μέγας, -αν is immediately understandable as an innovation from μέγα; the other forms have an enlargement $*$-l-, the origin of which is unlear. This enlargement is also found in Go. mikils 'great' < PGm. $*$mekila- and in synonymous Lith. dìdelis 'great' (from dìdis 'id.'). See ►ἀγα-, ►μεγαίρω.

μεδέων, -έουσα 'ruler'. ⇒μέδω.

μέδιμνος [m.] corn measure (IA), a "bushel" = 48 χοίνικες, which was about 52 1/2 liters in Athens. ◄PG► •VAR Older -ίμνος; with dissimilation ϝεδιμνος (Gortyn).
•COMP As a second member in ἡμέδιμνον [n.] 'half-bushel', also -ος [m.] (haplological for ἡμι-μέδιμνον, originally a substantivized adj.).
•DER μεδιμν-ιαῖος 'measuring one μ.' (Gortyn), -αῖον· μέτρον μοδίου (H.).
•ETYM Formally, μέδιμνος looks like μέριμνα 'care, anxiety', λίμνη 'harbor' (cf. λίμην), στάμνος 'wine-jar', etc. If we assume an enlarged mn-stem to the root $*$med- (seen in Greek μέδομαι 'to care', μέδω 'to rule, govern', μήδεα 'counsels, plans'). However, the -ι- remains problematic. It is tempting to compare Lat. modius "bushel", derived from modus 'measure'. Because of the great number of loanwords in -μν-, Chantraine 1933: 216 considers the word to be of Mediterranean origin. To my mind, the word must be Pre-Greek, in view of the suffix -μν-. See Fur.: 246[71].

μέδω [v.] 'to rule, govern' (Emp., trag.). ◄IE $*$med- 'measure'► •VAR Also -έω? Only present.
•DER μέδων [ptc.] 'ruler' (Hom.), like ἄρχων, fem. -ουσα "ruling", name of one of the Gorgons (Hes.), also μεδέων, -έοντος 'id.' (Il., h. Merc.), fem. -έουσα (h. Hom., Hes.); PN Μέδων, Λαο-μέδων, etc., TN Μεδεών (Boeotia) in the sense "seat of government"(?).
μέδομαι [med.] 'to care for, think of, be prepared for' (Il.), only pres. except μεδήσομαι (I 650). Hence μεδίμῳ· ἥρωι 'hero' (H.), probably after κύδιμος, δόκιμος, etc.
•ETYM In the sense of 'think of, be prepared for', μέδομαι corresponds exactly to the Lat. frequentative meditor, -ārī 'to reflect, meditate', beside which we find the primary verb medeor, -ērī 'to heal' and the primary noun modus 'measure', from which modius, modestus and moderor are derived. Celtic has several cognates, e.g. OIr. mess 'iudicium' < $*$med-tu-, air-med 'measure'. The basic meaning 'measure' is found in Germanic as well: Go. mitan (also miton 'to consider'), OE metan, MoHG messen, etc. An old specialized meaning is found in Lat. medeor 'to heal' (originally 'to take measures' vel sim.?) and Av. vī-mad- 'healer, physician'.
See ►μήδομαι, which has been considered to show a lengthened grade of the same root, but may also be from a different root $*$meh$_1$(d)-.

μέζεα [n.pl.] 'male genitals'. ⇒μήδεα.

μέθυ [n.] 'entoxicating drink, wine' (Il.). ◄IE $*$med^{h}u- n. 'honey, intoxicating drink'► •VAR Gen. -υος (Pl. Epigr., Nic.).
•COMP As a first member in μεθυ-πλήξ, -γος 'hit by wine, drunk' (Call., APl.), etc.
•DER Denominative verbs: μεθύ-σκομαι (IA) 'to intoxicate oneself, be(come) drunk', aor. μεθυ-σθῆναι (Alc., IA); act. μεθύ-σκω 'to intoxicate oneself' (Pl., Hell.), aor. μεθύ(σ)-σαι, fut. μεθῠ́σω; μεθύ-ω (only present-stem) = -ύσκομαι, often metaph. (Od.).
Verbal nouns: 1. μέθη [f.] 'drunkenness, intoxication' (IA), back-formation from μεθύω after πληθύω : πλήθη; 2. μέθυσις 'intoxication' (Thgn.), after πόσις (Porzig 1942: 190); 3. μέθυσμα 'intoxicating drink' (LXX, Ph.). 4. μέθυσος (-ση) [m., f.] 'drunkard' (Hecat., Ar.), first of women; also μεθύσης 'id.' (Ath., Luc.); 5. μεθυστής 'id.' (Arr., AP), -ύστρια [f.] (Theopomp. Com.), -υστάς (Trag. Adesp.). 6. μεθυστικός 'dipsomaniac, intoxicating' (Pl., Arist.); 7. μεθύσιον· εἶδος ἀμπέλου 'kind of grapevine' (H.); 8. μεθυμναῖος epithet of Dionysus (Plu.); playful transformation of Μηθυμναῖος (from Μήθυμνα), according to H. an epithet of Dionysus (Wackernagel 1916: 131[3]).
PNs, e.g. Μέθων, -υλλος, -ύσκος. On ►ἀμέθυστος, see s.v.
•ETYM Old word for 'honey, mead', which was retained in most languages: Skt. mádhu- [n.] 'honey', Av. maδu- [n.] 'currant wine', OCS medъ 'honey', Lith. medùs 'id.', ON mjoðr, OHG metu [m.] 'mead', OIr. mid 'id.', ToB mit 'honey'. The meaning 'honey' was limited in Greek to μέλι, which was inherited as well; the archaic word μέθυ, which (unlike its derivatives) was soon given up, referred to wine only.

μείγνυμι [v.] 'to mix, bring together, connect', med. 'to intermingle, convene in battle' (Il.). ◄IE $*$meiǵ/ḱ- 'mix'► •VAR μειγν-ύω (X., Arist.), μίσγω (Hom., IA, etc.), ὀνεμείχνυτο (Sapph.), aor. μεῖξαι, med. μίκτο (epic), pass. μιγῆναι with fut. -ήσομαι, μ(ε)ιχθῆναι with -ήσομαι, fut. μείξω, -ομαι, perf. med. μέμ(ε)ιγμαι; act. μέμιχα (Hell.).
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. συν-, ἐπι-, κατα-, ἀνα-. As a first member in governing compounds μ(ε)ιξ(ο)-, e.g. μιξ-έλληνες [pl.] 'semi-Hellenes' (Hellanic., Hell.), μ(ε)ιξό-θροος 'mixing the crying, with mixed cries' (A.); also μισγ-, especially in μισγ-άγκεια [f.] 'place where valleys meet' (Δ 453), from $*$μισγ-αγκής. As a second member in παμ-, ἀνα-, συμ-μιγής, etc. (IA); thence μιγής (Nic.), ἀνα-, ἐπι-μίξ [adv.] 'mixed' (Il.).

•DER Few derivatives: 1. (σύμ-)μεῖξις (also -ι-) 'mixing, etc.' (IA); 2. μεῖγμα (-ί-) 'mixing' (Emp., Anaxag., Arist.), μεῖχμ[α] (Alc.); 3. ἐπιμ(ε)ιξία, -ίη 'mixing, intercourse' (IA); from ἐπίμ(ε)ικ-τος. 4. μιγάς, -άδος [m., f.] 'mixed, together' (Att.). 5. Several adverbs: (σύμ-)μίγα, μιγά-δην, -δις, μίγ-δα, -δην (epic poet.). 6. μιγάζομαι [v.] 'to mix, unite' (θ 271), to μίγα, μιγάς (Schwyzer: 734).
•ETYM It is very doubtful whether μίγνυμι, which is frequent in mss., is an original zero grade. It is probable that μείγνυμι, built after μεῖξαι and μείξω, was early. The full grade is an alternative rendering for other forms, which in principle take zero grade (as in μεῖξις for μίξις; (σύμ)-μικτος, μέμιγμαι).
IE *m(e)iḱ- is reflected by Skt. miśrá- = Lith. mìšras 'mixed'; Lith. miẽšti, 1sg. miešiù 'to mix', OCS měšiti, 1sg. měšǫ [caus.] 'to mix'. A sḱ-present, like in μίσγω, is well-represented in the Western languages too: Lat. misceō, OIr. mescaid 'mixes, confuses', OHG miscan, MoHG mischen (if not a Lat. loanword). The νυ-present is probably an innovation, as it is limited to Greek. Indic has a reduplicated s-formation in mí-mikṣ-ati 'mix', probably an original desiderative, with perf. mimikṣé, caus. mekṣayati.
All other languages have a voiceless root-final stop instead of the voiced one represented by μίσγω and found in μιγῆναι, μίγα. Since all Greek formations (except the ske/o-present) are isolated (e.g. pass. μιγῆναι), these are probably analogical after forms with a following voiced consonant (or made to the aorist μεῖξαι). It is unnecessary to assume a variant *meiǵ-.

μειδιάω [v.] 'to smile' (Il.). ◁IE *smei- 'smile'▷ •VAR In Hom. only ptc. -ιόων, -ιόωσα, later also inf. -ιᾶν (Pl.) and indicative forms, e.g. μειδιᾷ (Theoc.); aor. μειδ-ιᾶσαι (Sapph., Pl., Plb., Plu.), -ῆσαι (Il.).
•COMP Also with prefixes like ἐπι-, ὑπο-. Compound φιλο-(μ)μειδής 'with a friendly smile', especially of Aphrodite (Il.), as if from μεῖδος· γέλως 'laughter' (H.), but perhaps directly from the verb, see below. On Hes. Th. 200 see Risch 1947: 76 and Strunk Glotta 38 (1960): 70, but also Dornseiff Ant. class. 6 (1937): 247, and Heubeck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 16 (1965): 204-6; see DELG.
•DER μείδημα [n.] 'smiling' (Hes.), -ίαμα 'id.' (Luc., Plu.), (ἐπι-)μειδίασις (Plu.), -ίασμα (H.), -ιασμός (Poll., Sch.), τὸ μειδιαστικόν 'cheerfulness' (sch.); μειδ-ᾱ́μων 'smiling' (Hymn. Is.).
•ETYM The relationship between the above forms is unclear. The present μειδ-ιάω, with the aor. μειδιᾶσαι, is probably an epic transformation, and the pres. ptc. may have served as a pivot form. The form φιλο-(μ)μειδής can be derived from a verb as well, and μεῖδος then extracted from it.
All Greek forms have an element -δ-, which appears to be lacking in most other languages. Skt. smáyate, -ti 'smile', ToB smi-, ToA smi- 'id.', OCS smijati sę 1sg. směję sę 'to laugh', Latv. smiêt, 1sg. smeju 'to laugh (at)'. However, we also find the Balt. iterative smaidît, and smaĩda 'laughing'. One view is that Baltic and Greek independently added *-d- to the root. The opposite view is that Baltic and Greek share an old *d-enlargement (DELG s.v. and LIV² s.v. *smei̯-). In view of the recent insight that root-final *d and *h_1 interchange frequently, *smeid- may well be the original form.

μείζων [compar.] 'larger'. ⇒μέγας.

μείλια [n.pl.] 'propitiations, atonement, penalty' (I 147 = 289, A. R., Call.).
•VAR Rarely sing. -ιον.
•ETYM No good explaination exists. See ►μείλιχος.

μείλιχος [adj.] 'soft, mild, friendly' (Il.). ◁?▷
•VAR Also μειλίχιος 'id.' (Il.); Μειλίχιος epithet, especially of Zeus (IA).
•DIAL Att. also Μιλίχιος (early itacism, Schwyzer: 193), Dor. Μηλ-, Arc. Μελ-, with Μειλιχιεῖον 'temple of Zeus M.' (Halaesa); details in Nilsson 1941(1): 411ff.; Aeol. μέλλιχος.
•COMP μελλιχό-φωνος (Sapph.), ἀ-μείλιχος 'unfriendly, irreconcilable' = ἀμείλικτος (Il.).
•DER From μείλιχος: 1. μειλιχίη [f.] 'softness, mildness' (O 741, Hes., A. R.); 2. μειλιχώδης 'soft' (Cerc.); μειλίχη [f.] 'boxing-glove' (Paus. 8, 40, 3), cf. πυρρίχη; 4. μειλίσσω [v.] 'to calm, appease' (Il.), aor. -ίξαι, also with ἐκ-; μείλιγμα (μέλιχμα Milete VI[a]) [n.] 'expiational sacrifice' (κ 217), (ἐκ-)μείλιξις 'expiation' (Anon. apud Suid., Eust.), μειλικ-τήριος 'expiating' (A. Pers. 610), -τικῶς [adv.] 'id.' (sch.); μείλικτρα [pl.] = μειλίγματα (A. R.).
•ETYM Popular formation with a suffix -χ- like in νηπίαχος, Dor. ὀσσίχος, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 403f.), related to ►μείλια, but without any certain further connection. The different dialectal forms μειλ- : μελλ- : μηλ- have been explained from μελ-ν-; for comparison, Lat. mel 'honey', gen. mellis (if indeed from *mel-n-) has been proposed, as well as Lith. malónė 'mercy'. μείλιχος was undoubtedly connected with ►μέλι by folk etymology.

μεῖον [n.] 'small animals (sheep or lambs), which were sacrificed during the Apatouria' (Att. inscr., Is., sch.). ◁GR▷ •COMP As a first member in μει-αγωγός 'who puts the animals on the weighing-machine' (Eup. 116) with μει-αγωγέω (Ar. Ra. 798), -εῖον, -ία (Suid.).
•ETYM Properly a neuter of the comparative ►μείων with transition to an o-stem. Unrelated to the IE word for 'ram, sheep' in Skt. meṣá- [m.] 'ram, sheep, fell', OCS měxъ 'leather sack', etc.

μεῖραξ [f.] 'girl' (com.), late also msc. 'boy' (Aret., Hld.). ◁IE *mer-io- 'young (girl or man)'▷ •COMP φιλο-μεῖραξ [m., f.] 'loving boys' (Ath., Paus.).
•DER Diminutives: 1. μειράκιον [n.] 'youth, younger man' (Hp., Att.) with μειρακιώδης 'youthful' (Pl., Arist.), -όομαι [v.] 'to become adolescent' (X., Ph., Ael.), -εύομαι [v.] 'id., to behave as a youth' (Arr., Plu., Luc.), also μειρακ-εύομαι (Alciphr. 2, 2). 2. μειρακίσκος [m.] 'boy', also -η [f.] 'girl' (Att.). 3. μειρακύλλιον 'id.' (com.).
•ETYM For the feminine gender, cf. δέλφαξ, πόρταξ, σκύλαξ. The diminutive derivatives in Greek ousted the basic word.
We have to start from a noun, perhaps *μεῖρος (cf. λίθαξ : λίθος), which would agree with Skt. márya- [m.] 'youth, lover', Av. mairiia- (meaning unclear), and Skt. marya- ká- 'small man' (with a thematic k-suffix independent of μεῖραξ). A fem. *μεῖρα (like στεῖρα) may be also considered.

As a remote cognate, Lith. mergà 'girl' has been adduced and, with different vocalism, Lith. martì [f.] 'bride, young woman' (cf. ► Βριτόμαρτις); also, the unclear Lat. marītus 'with wife, married' (see WH s.v.). Nowadays, Celtic words are also connected: W morwyn, OCo. moroin 'girl, maiden' < PCl. moreinā-*, MW merch 'daughter' < mer-k-*. The connection of Alb. shemërë is "hardly convincing" (Demiraj 1997 s.v.). In view of all the different enlargements involved, all comparisons beyond IIr. and Gr. mer-io-* (perhaps a common innovation?) remain a bit weak.

μείρομαι [v.] 'to receive as one's share' (I 616), 'to divide' (Arat. 1054). ◄IE smer-* 'remember, care'► •VAR ἔμμορε [3sg.perf.act.] 'shares in' (Il.), 3pl. ἐμμόραντι· τετεύχασι 'they have as a share' (H.), later also ἔμμορες, -ον (A. R., Nic.); μεμόρηκα (Nic.); εἵμαρται (-το) [3sg.perf.(plpf.)med.] 'it is (was) decided by fate' (Il.), ptc. (especially fem.) εἱμαρμένη 'fate' (IA); Aeol. ἐμμόρμενον (Alc.), Dor. ἔμβραται· εἵμαρται, ἐμβραμένα· εἱμαρμένη (H.); also innovated βεβραμένων· εἱμαρμένων (H.), μεμόρ-ηται, -ημένος (Man., AP).
•COMP Also with ἀπο- (Hes. Op. 578), ἐπι- (Vett. Val. 346, 6). As a second member in ► κάμμορος (< κά-σμορος), ► ἤμορος < ἄ-σμορος, etc.
•DER 1. ► μέρος [n.] 'share, etc.'. 2. μόρος [m.] 'fate, (fate of) death, violent death' (Il.), 'share, share of ground', also as a measure of land (Mytilene, Western Locris). Diminutive μόριον [n.] 'share, part, member of the body' (IA), mathem. 'fraction, denominator', with μοριασμός, -στικός, from *μοριάζω (Ptol., sch.); further μόριμος [adj.] 'destined by fate' (Υ 302, Pi., A.), μόριος 'belonging to the fate (of death)' (AP), probably also ► μορίαι, of ἐλαῖαι, μορόεις 'deathly' (Nic.). 3. μόρα [f.] name of a Lacon. section of troops (X.). 4. μοῖρα [f.] 'part, piece, piece of ground, share, degree, fate, (evil or good) fate, death-fate', also personified 'goddess of fate' (Il.); in compounds, e.g. μοιρη-γενής 'child of destiny' (Γ 182), -η- analogical metrical lengthening; εὔ-μοιρος 'favoured' (B., Pl.). Hence μοιρ-άδιος 'destined by fate' (S. OC 228 cod. Laur.), -ίδιος 'id.' (Pi., S.), -αῖος 'belonging to fate' (Man.), -ιαῖος 'measuring a degree' (Ptol., Procl.). μοιρ-ικός, -ικῶς 'according to degree' (Ptol., Vett. Val.); μοιρίς [f.] 'half' (Nic.); μοιρ-άομαι, -αω [v.] 'to divide, be awarded one's share, share' (A., A. R.), -άζω = -άω (Anon. in Rh.). 5. μορτή (Dor. -τά) 'share of the farmer' (Poll., Eust., H.). 6. ► μόρσιμος 'destined by fate'.
•ETYM The perfect forms Aeol. ἔμμορε (later taken as a them. aor., whence ἔμμορες, -ον) and Ion. εἵμαρται can be explained from sé-smor-e* and sé-smr-toi*, resp. The full grade yod-present μείρομαι < smér-io-* joins this pattern, also seen in φθείρω : ἔφθορα : ἔφθαρμαι. Initial sm-* shines through in derivatives too: e.g. ἄ-μμορος, κατὰ (μ)μοῖραν.
Corresponding forms outside Greek are doubtful. Lat. mereō, -ēre, -eor, -ērī 'to earn, acquire' (if properly 'to get one's share') might be cognate, but its formation, (s)mer-eh$_1$-, is different. Hitt. marri̯e/a-$^{tta(ri)}$ cannot be connected (as it rather means 'to dissolve by heating'; cf. Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). The connection with the group of μέριμνα 'care, concern' is highly hypothetical. Of the nominal derivatives, only μοῖρα requires a special explanation: one may start either from an o-stem μόρος or from an older consonant-stem *μορ-. The o-vowel could also be an Aeolic zero grade. See LIV^2 s.v. 2. smer-, to be separated from 1. (s)mer- 'denken an, sich erinnern'.

μείων [compar.] 'smaller' (Il., Hp., X., Dor., Arc.). ◄IE meiH-u-* 'less, small'► •VAR μεῖον [n.], also μειότερος (A. R., Arat.), superl. μεῖστος 'least' (Locr. V^a, Hdn., H.).
•DIAL Myc. me-u-jo, me-wi-jo /meiw-ios/.
•COMP As a first member in μειον-εκτέω [v.] 'to have too little, fall short', with -εξία (X.), from μεῖον ἔχειν after πλεον-έκτης, -εκτέω, -εξία.
•DER Derivatives, probably analogical after the o-stems: 1. μειότης [f.] 'minority' (A.D., Vett. Val.); 2. μειόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to decrease, be inferior, diminish' (Hp., X., Arist.) with μεί-ωσις 'decrease' (Hp., Arist.), -ωμα 'reduction of wealth' = 'penalty' (X. An. 5, 8, 1), -ώτης [m.] 'who diminishes' (Paul. Al.), -ωτικός 'diminishing, decreasing' (Hell.).
•ETYM Considered to be a primary comparative from a verbal root 'to lessen' (LIV^2 s.v. 1. mei̯H-*), seen in Skt. mināti 'to lessen, damage', mīyate 'to become less, wither', etc. Cf. the opposite πλείων, πλέων, πλεῖστος (see ► πολύς). The presence of the suffixal -u- in Myc. me-u-jo and me-wi-jo is unexpected from an IE point of view (we expect it in the positive only), but it is not contradicted by the later evidence. It might find support in ToB maiwe 'small, young' < moHi-uo-* (Adams 1999 s.v., which he connects with ON mjór 'small, thin'). See ► μινύθω.

μέλαθρον [n.] 'vault of the roof, roof-beams, roof', also (often plur.) 'dwelling, house' (Il., also inscr. Delos III^a, LXX, pap.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also μελάθρα [f.] (Delos IV^a).
•COMP As a second member in ὑψι-μέλαθρος 'with high-roof-beams' (h. Merc.), etc.
•DER μελαθρόομαι 'provide with roof-beams' (LXX).
•ETYM Explained by the ancients as ἀπὸ τοῦ μελαίνεσθαι ὑπὸ τοῦ καπνοῦ, 'because of sooting by smoke' (EM 576, 16). The comparison with ► βλωθρός 'high', proposed by Frisk, fails because the latter would presuppose a root mlh$_3$-* (if inherited at all), which can never yield μελα-.
Connection with ► κμέλεθρον 'beam' was tentatively considered by Güntert 1914: 144f. and Pisani KZ 71 (1954): 125f. because of the remarkable formal and semantic similarity. In my view, this proves that the word is Pre-Greek, as ► κμέλεθρον is a by-form showing variation ε/α and in the initial.

μέλας [adj.] 'dark-colored, black' (Il.). ◄IE mel(h$_2$)-n-* 'black'► •VAR Fem. -αινα, ntr. -αν. Compar. μελάν-τερος (Il.), superl. -τατος (IA), late μελανώτερος (Str.), μελαινοτάτη (Epigr. Gr., AP).
•DIAL Aeol. -αις.
•COMP Very frequent as a first member, e.g. μελάγ-χροος (-ες [pl.]), -χροιής, -χρής, -χρως, μελανό-χροος, etc. 'with dark skin' (see Sommer 1948: 21ff.); μελαγ-χιμος 'dark, black' (A., E., X.), cf. δύσ-χιμος, Sommer 1948: 71ff.; μελάν-δετος probably 'dark-striped' or 'with dark bands' (Ο 713, A., E.); μελάν-δρυ-ος 'made of black wood

(δόρυ)' (A. Fr. 251), ntr. 'heartwood' (Thphr.), plur. 'piece of tunny', with μελάν-δρυς [m.] 'tunny' (Pamphil.); μελάμ-πυρον [n.] (also -ος [m.]) 'ball-mustard, Neslia paniculata' (Thphr., Gal.); for the form cf. ►διόσπυρον, on the mg. Carnoy REGr. 71 (1958): 96; μελαγ-κάλαμον [n.] (dvandva) 'ink and pen' (pap. V[p], see Maas Glotta 35 (1956): 299f.). Often in PNs (e.g. short names like Μελαινεύς, Μελανεύς, Μελανθεύς, Μέλανθος).

•DER 1. μελαιν-άς [f.] name of a dark-colored fish (Cratin.), see Strömberg 1943: 22; -ίς [f.] name of a sea-shell (Sophr., Herod., Xenocr.), also name of Aphrodite in Corinth (Ath.). 2. μελάν-ιον [n.] 'ink' (pap., Edict. Diocl.). 3. μελαν-ία [f.] 'blackness, black shade or pigment' (X., Arist.), -ότης [f.] 'blackness' (Arist.), opposed to λευκότης. 4. μελανός = μέλας (Sp.), -όν [n.] 'black pigment' (Sammelb. IV[p]); after κελαινός, ὀρφνός, etc.; μελαιναῖος 'id.' (Orac. Sib.), after κνεφαῖος, etc.; μελανώδης 'blackish' (EM).

Denominative verbs: 1. μελαίνομαι [v.] 'to become dark or black' (Il.), act. (trans.) -ω; hence μέλανσις [f.] 'blackening' (Arist.), μέλασ-μα [n.] 'black spot, black paint' (Hp.), -μός [m.] 'blackening, black spot' (Hp., Plu.), μελαντηρ-ία [f.] 'black pigment, blackness' (IG 2[2], 1672, Arist.), -ιον 'stain' (sch.). 2. μελάνω [v.] 'to become (make?) black' (H 64). 3. intr. μελανέω [v.] 'id.' (Thphr., A. R., Call.).

•ETYM The formation μέλᾱς [m.] < *μέλαν-ς, μέλαινα [f.] < -αν-ι̯α, μέλαν [n.] is parallelled in the adjective τάλᾱς [m.] 'wretched', τάλαινα [f.], τάλαν [n.]. It must be remarked, however, that τάλας seems to be an original nt-stem. Traditionally, μέλαινα is identified with Skt. malinī [f.], from alleged IE *melh$_2$-n-ih$_2$. The stem μελαν- [m.] would be an innovation for older thematic *μέλανο- = Skt. malina- 'dirty', but the direct comparison fails, for not only is malinī exclusively known as a gloss in the sense of 'menstruating woman', but the masculine malina- must be an epic-classical derivative from Ved. mála- [n.] 'dirt'. The latter may be from *molh$_2$-o- or from *mel-o-, so we cannot decide on this basis whether the root of μέλᾱς ended in a laryngeal.

Of the many words cited under the root mel- denoting colors, a couple of Baltic formations with a suffix -n- are interesting for Greek: Latv. me̦l̃ns 'black', OPr. melne 'blue spot', fem. mīlinan [acc.] 'spot'; beside these, there are formations with a suffix -u̯(o)-, e.g. Lith. mul̃vas 'yellow, of clay'. See ►μολύνω.

μέλδομαι [v.] 'to cause to melt' (Φ 363), intr. 'to melt' (Nic. Th. 108). ◂IE *smel-d-, *h$_2$meld- (?) 'melt'▸ •VAR μέλδω 'to cause to melt' (Call., Man.); ἀμέλδειν· τήκειν 'to melt' (H.).

•ETYM In Greek, μέλδομαι was superceded by inherited τήκω. It is a full grade thematic root present with an exact parallel in Gm.: OE meltan 'to melt, flow away', caus. mieltan 'to dissolve, digest' < *maltjan = ON melta 'to digest, malt'; beside these (with inital s-) OHG smelzan, MoHG schmelzen, etc. The Gm. verbs have many derivatives, e.g. Go. ga-malteins 'analysis'.

The relation to Greek ►ἀμαλδύνω and ἀμέλδειν is unclear. Rix KZ 104 (1991): 194[38] reconstructs the root without initial laryngeal. On μελδόμενος (Φ 363) see Schmidt Glotta 65 (1987): 65-9.

μέλε [voc.] in Att. ὦ μέλε [voc.], 'my best (friend)' vel sim. (com., Pl.). ◂GR▸

•ETYM Probably shortened from ὦ μέλεε; compare ὦ τᾶν from ὦ τάλαν.

μελεαγρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'guiney-fowl, Numida ptilorhyncha, meleagris' (Soph. apud Plin., Arist.), also μελέαγρος· ἡ κατοικίδιος ὄρνις 'the domestic bird' (H.); extensively Thompson 1895 s.v. ◂?▸

•ETYM Probably a foreign word, adapted to Μελέαγρος by folk etymology. Uncertain hypothesis by Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 159[f]: connection to an Iranian word for 'bird, fowl' seen in Av. mərəya-, which does not match the African origin of the bird at all.

μελεδαίνω, μελετάω, etc. ⇒μέλω.

μέλεος [adj.] 'idle, vain, futile; miserable' (Il.). ◂?▸

•COMP Rarely as a first member, e.g. μελεο-παθής 'suffering misfortune' (A.).

•ETYM As for its accent, μέλεος agrees with secondary adjectives like χρύσεος, λίθεος, βόεος (Chantraine 1933: 50f.), but conceptually it rather belongs to primary oxytones like ἐτεός, κενεός, στερεός; is it a case of Aeolic retraction? Like ἐτεός from ἐτεϝός, μέλεος may derive from *μέλεϝος. Further details are unclear. See ►βλάσφημος.

μέλι, -ιτος [n.] 'honey' (Il.). ◂IE *melit- 'honey'▸

•DIAL Myc. me-ri.

•COMP Very frequent as a first member, e.g. μελί-κρᾱ-τον, Ion. -κρη-τον "honey mix", 'sacrifice of milk and honey' (Od.), compounded with ►κεράννυμι; also μελιτο-, e.g. μελιτο-πώλης [m.] 'honey trader' (Ar.); as a second member in οἰνό-μελι 'drink from wine and honey' (Plb.), etc.; on ►ἀπόμελι, see s.v.

•DER A. Adjectives: μελιτόεις 'honey-sweet' (Pi.), fem. μελιτόεσσα (scil. μᾶζα), Att. μελιτοῦττα 'honey-cake' (Hdt., Ar.), μελιτ-ηρός 'pertaining to honey, honey-like' (Ar., Thphr.), -ινος 'made from honey' (pap.), -ώδης 'honey-like' (Thphr.). Probably also μελι-χρός 'honey-sweet' (Alc., Anacr., Hp., Telecl., Theoc.), cf. πενιχρός, βδελυχρός, Chantraine 1933: 225f. See Sommer 1948: 26[3], who assumes it is Aeol. for μελί-χρως 'honey-colored'; acc. to Schwyzer: 450 it stands for -χροος.

B. Substantives: μελίτ(ε)ιον [n.] 'mead' (Plu.); μελιτόν· κηρίον, ἢ τὸ ἑφθὸν γλεῦκος 'honeycomb, or the boiled new wine' H.; μελιτίτης (λίθος) 'topaz', (οἶνος) 'honey-wine' (Dsc.); μελίτεια [f.] 'Melissa officinalis' (Theoc.); μελιτισμός [m.] 'treatment with honey' (medic.) as if from *μελιτίζειν.

C. Verbs: μελιτόομαι 'to mix with honey, be sweetened with honey' (Th., Plu.) with μελίτωμα 'honey-cake' (com.), -ωσις 'sweetening' (gloss.).

Isolated stands μέλισσα, -ττα [f.] 'bee' (Il.), perhaps haplological for *μελί-λιχ-ι̯α "honey-licking"; compare Skt. madhu-lih- [m.] "honey-licker" = 'bee'; but alternatively derived from *μέλιτ-ι̯α. Thence several compounds and derivatives, e.g. μελισσουργός (-ττ-) 'beekeeper' (Pl., Arist.) with -έω, -ία, -εῖον; μελισσεύς 'id.' (Arist., pap.), also (with different origin) as a PN; μελίσσιον 'beehive' (pap. III[a]), -ία 'id.' (Gp.), -ών 'id.' (LXX), etc. Cf. further ►βλίττω.

•ETYM Old inherited neuter for 'honey', formally identical with Hitt. milit < melit. The Greek verb ►βλίττω and the Hitt. stem form malit(t)- show that the root originally had ablaut, so a gen. mlit-ós*.

With thematic enlargement, it is found in Go. miliþ and Alb. mjaltë < PIE meli-t-o-*. OIr. mil and Lat. mel may also go back to meli-t-*; it is improbable that the Lat. gen. mellis is from mel-n-*. Arm. mełr, gen. mełu was supposedly transferred to the u-stems after synonymous médʰu* (see ►μέθυ).

The gloss μελίτιον· πόμα τι Σκυθικὸν μέλιτος ἑψομένου σὺν ὕδατι καὶ πόᾳ τινί 'a Scythian drink made from honey, cooked with water and a kind of herb' (H.), stems from an unknown source.

μελία [f.] 'ash, lance made of ash-wood' (Il., also Thphr.). ◂PG? (S, V), IE? smel-* 'ash, grey'.▸

•VAR Epic -ίη.

•COMP μελιη-γενής 'born from an ash' (A. R.); ἐϋ-μμελίης [m.] 'armed with a good lance' (Hom.), after it φερε-μμελίης 'bearing a lance' (Mimn.).

•DER μέλ-ινος (ρ 339); with metrical lengthening μείλ-ινος (Il.) 'made of ash-wood'; like in δρύ-ϊνος, etc., and favoured by the metre; further μελί-ϊνος (Att. inscr.), μελέ-ϊνος (Att. inscr., Thphr.): after πτελέ-ϊνος, etc., or dissimilated from -ι-ι-?

•ETYM Morphologically and etymologically isolated. The old comparison with Lith. (dial.) smėlùs 'sand-colored, ashy-grey' starts from the grey color of the wood. Perhaps the word is Pre-Greek in view of the various forms in -ινος. See Fur.: 223, 226, 317 on the consonantism (who compares ►πτελέα 'elm'), and 354, 356 on the vowel alternations.

μελῖνη [f.] 'millet', especially 'foxtail millet (Setaria italica)' (IA). ◂?▸

•ETYM Lat. milium [n.] 'millet, proso millet' is usually compared, although it formally deviates from μελίνη. Uncertain is the appurtenance of Lith. málnos [f.pl.] 'swath, foxtail millet'. The root is thought to be either that of Lat. molō 'to meal', etc., in the sense "product to be mealed"; or that of μέλας (cf. MoFr. millet noir, G Mohrenhirse, denoting varieties of millet); Porzig 1954a: 178 assumed an opposition with ἄλφι, supposed to be related to ἀλφός 'white'.

On the other hand, Fur.: 246 compares ἔλυμος 'millet' and ἐλίμαρ· κέγχρῳ ὅμοιον ἢ μελίνη ὑπο Λακώνων (H.), which may continue ϝελ-. This seems too far-fetched.

μέλκα [f.] 'a dish prepared from sour milk' (Gal., Alex. Trall., Gp.). ◂LW Lat.▸

•VAR Or [n.pl.]? Also -η.

•ETYM From Lat. melca 'id.', which itself is considered to be a loan from Germanic; see WH s.v. for this and other interpretations.

μέλκιον [n.] · κρήνη, νύμφαι, παίγνιον 'source, nymphs, playful' (H.). ◂?▸

•ETYM Has been compared with a few Balto-Slavic words of various meanings, e.g. Ru. molokó 'milk', Lith. mal̃kas 'draught'. The second and third meanings are rather unclear.

μέλλαξ, -ακος [m.] 'young boy' (inscr. Alexandria, PMag. Par.), μέλακες· νεώτεροι 'the younger ones' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸

•VAR See below on μῖλαξ.

•DER Diminutive μελλάκιον (Alexandria).

•ETYM Thought to be a hypocoristic short form (based on, e.g., μεῖραξ) of μελλ-έφηβος (Hell. inscr.), μελλ-είρην (Sparta), vel sim.; cf. μελλόνυμφος (S.), and see Chantraine 1933: 379f. However, as the word is no doubt identical with ►μῖλαξ 2, it is rather Pre-Greek (note the variant with single -λ-). Therefore, etymological connection with μελλ- is improbable.

μέλλω [v.] 'to be destined, must, need, etc.', in various constructions; also 'to be about to, commemorate, linger, hesitate' (Il.). ◂?▸

•VAR Aor. μελλῆσαι (Thgn., Att. prose), fut. μελλήσω (D.).

•COMP Rarely with δια-, κατα-, ἀντι-. As a first member in μελλό-γαμος = μέλλων γαμεῖν (S.), μελλ-είρην 'who is about to be εἰρήν' (Lacon.).

•DER μέλλησις 'being about to do, (mere) intention, hesitation' (Th., Pl. Lg., Arist.), μέλλημα 'postponement' (E., Aeschin., -ησμα PMasp.), μελλώ [f.] 'hesitation' (A. Ag. 1356), μελλησμός 'delay, indecision' (Epicur., D. H.), also 'approach', of a disease (Aret.); μελλητής [m.] 'laggard' (Th. 1, 70, Arist.), -τικός 'hesitating' (Arist.), μελλητιᾶν· τὸ μέλλειν (H.), like βινητιᾶν etc., Schwyzer: 732.

•ETYM The full grade yod-present μέλλω, probably < *μελ-ι̯ω, is original; the non-presentic forms and the nominal derivations were created at a later date. Traditionally connected with Lat. prō-mellere 'litem promovere' (Paul. Fest.) and the Celtic group of OIr. mall 'slow, tardy'. On this basis, a root mel-* 'to linger, hesitate, be late' is sometimes reconstructed.

According to Gray Lang. 23 (1947): 247, however, μέλλω is a denominative from *μέλος 'concern, interest', related ►μέλω, Lat. melior, etc. Alternatively, Szemerényi AmJPh. 72 (1951): 346ff. suggested derivation from the root of μολεῖν 'to go', μέλος 'member', Lat. mōlior 'set in motion by force', etc.

μέλος [n.] 'member', in older literature only plur. 'limbs' (Il.); also '(articulated) tune, song, melody' (h. Hom. 19, 16, Thgn., Pi., IA). ◂?▸

•COMP λυσι-μελής 'relaxing the limbs' (Od.), also with allusion to the μελεδήματα (υ 57); μελο-ποιός 'poet of songs' with -έω, -ία (Att.), μελεσί-πτερος 'with singing wings', of a cicada (AP), after the type ἑλκεσί-πεπλος.

•DER 1. Diminutive μελύδριον 'small song' (Ar., Theoc.), -ια [pl.] 'poor limbs' (M. Ant.); μελίσκ(ι)ον 'id.' (Alcm., Antiph.).

2. Adjective: μελικός 'lyric' (D. H., Plu.).

3. Adverb: μεληδόν 'part by part' (Poseidon.); on μελ(ε)ϊστί see below.

4. Verbs : μελίζω 1. 'to analyze' (Pherecyd. Hist., LXX), also with δια-, ἐκ-, ἀπο-; 2. 'to sing, sing of' (Pi., A., Theoc.), also with δια-, ἀντι-. Further μελισμός (δια-) 'analysis' (Plu.), 'song' (Str.), μέλισμα 'song, melody' (Theoc., AP); μελικτάς (Theoc., Mosch.), -ιστής (Anacreont.) 'flute-player'; μελιστί 'limb for limb' (J.), older form μελεϊστί (Hom.), probably from *μελεΐζω. Also μελεάζω [v.] 'to execute a recitative' (Nicom. Harm.).

•ETYM For the double meaning 'member' and 'tune, song', cf. Ir. alt 'member' and 'poem'. In the sense of 'member', μέλος has been replaced by synonymous terms like κῶλον, ἄρθρον. To judge by its structure, μέλος must be old (cf. ἕδος, ἔπος, γένος etc.), but it does not have a clear outer-Greek counterpart. Still, a comparison with a Celtic word for 'knuckle' might be possible: Bret. mell, Co. mal, plur. mellow, also in W cym-mal 'articulus, iunctura, commissura'. This may derive from PCl. melsā*, and would relate to μέλος like e.g. Skt. vats-á- 'yearling' to *ϝέτος 'year'.

μέλπω, -ομαι [v.] 'to celebrate with song and dance; to sing, dance' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Post-Hom. (epic lyr.) aor. μέλψαι, -ασθαι, fut. μέλψω, -ομαι.
•COMP Also with ἀνα-, μετα-, ἐπι-.
•DER μέλπηθρα [n.pl.] 'plaything' (Il.), μελπήτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'singer'; μολπή [f.] '(play with) song and dance' (Il.), with μολπαῖος epithet of ἀοιδή (Erinn.), μολπηδόν 'like a μολπή' (A. Pers. 389), μολπᾶτις [f.] (Dor.), apposition to κερκίς 'female singer' (AP), μολπάζω [v.] 'to sing (of)' (Ar.), whence μολπαστάς [m.] (Dor.) 'singer, dancer' (AP), μολπάστρια = συμπαίκτρια (H.); μολποί [m.pl.] guild of singers in Milete, with μολπικοί 'id.' (V^a).
•ETYM No etymology. If somehow related to μέλος, we have to start from an original meaning 'member', not from 'song'. Far-fetched speculations by Szemerényi Emerita 22 (1954): 169ff. Connection with the Celtic group of OIr. -molathar 'to praise', W mawl 'praise' is dubious.

μέλω [v.] 'to be concerned with, care for' (IA). ◂?▸
•VAR μέλει μοι [3sg.pres.], μέλομαι, fut. μελήσω, -σει, -σομαι (Il.), aor. μελῆσαι, ἐμέλησε (Att.), pass. μεληθῆναι (S.), perf. μέμηλα, -ε (Il.), med. μέμβλεται, -το (Il.), with a new present μέμβλομαι (A. R., Opp.), μεμέληκε (Att.), μεμέλημαι (Theoc., Call.).
•COMP With prefix: ἐπι-μέλομαι and -έομαι 'to care for', μετα-μέλομαι, μετα-μέλει μοι 'repent' (IA).
•DER 1. μέλημα [n.] 'anxiety, object of care, darling' (Sapph., Pi., A.), μελησμός 'care' (EM). 2. μελέτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'who takes care of' = 'avenger' (S. El. 846). 3. μελετάω [v.] 'to care for, strive; to study, practise oratory' (Hes., h. Merc.) beside μελέτη 'care, provision, practice, etc.' (Hes.); because of its accent (cf. γενετή, τελετή), the latter is probably a back-formation, like ἀγάπη from ἀγαπάω; on deverbatives in - (ε)τάω see Schwyzer: 705. Thence μελετη-ρός 'who likes practicing' (X.). From μελετάω: μελέτημα 'practice' (Att.), -ησις 'id.' (AB), -ητικός 'caring' (LXX), -ητής [m.] 'trainer' (Aristid.), -ητήριον 'place for practice' (Plu.). 4. μελε-δῶνες [f.pl.] (late also sg.) 'cares, concerns' (v.l. τ 517, h. Hom., Hes., Thgn.), also μελη-δόνες, -δών 'id.' (Simon., A. R.); -εδων- and -ηδον- are both metrically conditioned for -εδον-; μελεδῶναι [pl.] 'id.' (v.l. τ 517, Sapph., Theoc.), sing. -ώνη (Hp.); μελεδωνός [m., f.] 'watcher' (Ion.), -ωνεύς 'id.' (Theoc.).
Denominative μελεδαίνω [v.] 'to care for' (Ion., Archil.); besides, μελεταίνω (Argos VI^a) from μελετάω; μελεδήματα [pl.] = μελε-δῶνες (Ψ 62), after νοήματα; μελεδήμων 'caring' (Emp., AP), after νοήμων etc., see Chantraine 1933: 173; μελεδηθμός 'practice' (Orac.); back-formation μελέδη [f.] 'care' (Hp.), after μελέτη.
From ἐπι-μέλομαι: 1. ἐπιμελ-ής 'caring for, anxious; object of care' (IA); thence ἐπιμέλεια 'care, attention' (Att.); 2. ἐπιμελη-τής [m.] 'who cares, governor', etc.;

μεταμέλεια 'repentance, change of mind' (Att.) is analogical to μετα-μέλομαι; also (back-formation) μετάμελος 'id.' (Th. 7, 55).
•ETYM Beside the full-grade thematic root-present μέλω, the perfect μέμηλα has a remarkable lengthened grade. The middle μέμβλεται, -το for *με-μλ-ε- takes the zero grade and a thematic vowel. The η-enlargement in μελ-ή-σω gradually conquered the whole verbal system: μελῆ-σαι, -θῆναι, μεμέλη-κε, -μαι.
There is no convincing etymology. Most dictionaries defend the connection with μέλλω, which is semantically not evident.

μέμβραξ, -ακος [m.] 'kind of cicada' (Ael.). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Formation like ἀσπάλαξ, κόραξ, ὕραξ, and other animal names (Chantraine 1933: 379). Probably related to βράζειν 'drone' vel sim., as a sound-imitation. Other such names of cicadas and locusts in Strömberg 1944: 18. According to Gil Emerita 25 (1957): 322f., the word is Pre-Greek, which must be correct in view of the suffix and the meaning. See ►μεμβράς.

μεμβράς, -άδος [f.] 'kind of sprat' (com., Arist.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR μεμβράδιον (Alex. Trall.).
•COMP μεμβρ-αφύα [f.] 'kind of anchovy' (com.), cf. the gloss ἀφύα· μεμβράς (H.), see ►ἀφύα.
•ETYM Perhaps dissimilated from βεμβράς (Aristomen.). See Fur.: 217. See ►βεμβράς.

μέμνημαι 'to be mindful of'. ⇒μιμνήσκω.

μέμνων 1, -ονος [m.] name of a black bird (Ael., Q. S., Dionys. Av.). ◂?▸
•DER μεμνονίδες [f.pl.] 'id.' (Paus. 10, 31, 6).
•ETYM The birds in question were connected with the tomb of Memnon in different ways by ancient informants; see Thompson 1895 s.v. and Hitzig and Blümner 1896-1910 on the attestation in Pausanias. See ►μενω, ►μέμνων 2.

μέμνων 2, -ονος [m.] · ὁ ὄνος 'donkey'; μεμνόν<ε>ια· τὰ ὄνεια κρέα 'donkey meat' (H.); acc. to Poll. 9, 84, also name of the relevant market. ◂GR▸ •ETYM In the meaning ὄνος, we have an appellative use of the PN Μέμνων as "the firm, steadfast one" (see ►μένω and ►Ἀγαμέμνων for a different opinion), because of the proverbial stubbornness of the donkey (cf. Λ 558ff.). See ἀλέκτωρ 'cock' (s.v. ►ἀλεκτρυών), καλλίας 'ape, monkey', and Κάστωρ 'beaver' as other animal names that are based on appellatives. Further examples of this naming process in Schrader-Nehring 1917(1): 231[1].

μέμονα [v.perf.] 'to have in mind, strive' (Il.). ◂IE men-* 'think'▸ •VAR 1pl. μέμαμεν.
•ETYM Old stative perfect, identical with Lat. meminī 'to remember', IE mé-mon-*h_2*e*. Without reduplication, we find Go. man 'to think, believe', ga-man 'to remember'. The ablaut, with a zero grade in the plur. μέμαμεν < mé-mn-me*, is old and matches e.g. Go. 1pl. mun-um. Another exact correspondence exists between the imperatives μεμάτω and Lat. mementō < PIE mé-mn̥-tōd*. The zero grade in the ptc. μεμαώς, plur. μεμαῶτες, μεμᾱότες (with metrical lenthening) is analogical.

A yod-present was formed to the root *men-, represented in Greek by ►μαίνομαι (with deviating meaning); from a root *mneh₂- (probably an extension) derives ►μιμνήσκω. An old verbal noun is ►μένος; perhaps, the compound ►αὐτόματος also contains the zero grade.
On the supposed forms ἐμμεμαώς (Hom.), ἐμμέμονεν (S. Tr. 982 [lyr.]) see Leumann 1950: 52.

μεμόριον [n.] 'monument, mortuary monument' (inscr. imperial period). ◄LW Lat.►
•VAR Also μημόριον, μνημόριον.
•ETYM All of the above are crosses of μνημεῖον and Lat. memōria. From μεμόριον comes Lat. memorium. See Kretschmer Glotta 11 (1921): 97 and WH s.v. memor, memoria.

μέμφομαι [v.] 'to reproach, blame, be discontent, complain' (Il.), 'to accuse' (Gortyn). ◄IE? *me-mbʰ- 'reproach' (?)► •VAR Fut. μέμψομαι, aor. μέμψασθαι, μεμφθῆναι.
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἐπι-, κατα-. As the first member of a governing compound: μεμψί-μοιρος 'reproving fate' (Isoc., Arist.).
•DER 1. (ἐπί-, κατά-)μέμψις 'reproof, reproach, objection (Att. since A.). 2. (ἐπι-)μομφή 'id.' (poetic since Pi., Ep. Col. 3, 13), μόμφος [m.] 'id.' (E. Fr. 633, Mantinea V[a]); ἐπί-, κατά-μομφος 'subject to reproach, reproachable, reproaching' (A., E.), either hypostases from ἐπὶ, κατὰ μομφῆς, or bahuvrīhis; also ἐπιμεμφ-ής 'reproachable' (Nic., AP), ἰμμεμφ-ής 'subject to complaints' (Mantinea V[a]), derived from ἐπι-, ἐμ-μέμφομαι; opposite ἄ-μομφος (A.), ἀ-μεμφής (Pi., A.) with ἀμεμφ-ία (A., S.). 3. μέμφειρα [f.] = μέμψις (Telecl. Com. 62), probably personified after πρέσβειρα, κτεάτειρα, etc. 4. μεμφωλή = μέμψις (H., Suid.).
•ETYM The isolated Gothic verb bi-mampjan 'mock, insult' (Ev. Luc. 16, 14) shows a remarkable similarity, although its -p- does not correspond to Gr. -φ-. Celtic words for 'disgrace', like OIr. mebul 'shame' et al. < PCelt. meblā, lack the medial nasal. This may point to a root *mebʰ-, which occurs as a reduplicated or a nasal present in Greek (and perhaps Gothic). Most dictionaries doubt the connections mentioned (not even mentioned in LIV²).

μέν emphatic pcl. ⇒μήν 1.

μενεαίνω, μενοινάω ⇒μένος.

μενθήρη [f.] explained as φροντίς, μέριμνα 'thought, care' (in Panyas. 12 [?], H., EM, Suid.). ◄?► •VAR Cf. μενθηριῶ· μεριμνήσω, διατάξω 'to take care of, arrange' (H.), and ἀ-μενθήριστος = ἀφρόντιστος, ἀμέριμνος 'without consideration, careless' (Timo 59; codd. ἀπ-).
•ETYM Origin uncertain. Perhaps derived from the root of μανθάνω with a suffix -ήρη (cf. μέρμηραι, -ρίζω). See ►μανθάνω, ►μοῦσα.

μένος [n.] 'mind, courage, rage, strength, urge' (Il.). ◄IE *men-s- 'mind'►

•COMP δυσ-μενής 'evil-minded, hostile' (Il.) with δυσμέν-εια, -ίη, -αίνω, etc.; metrically enlarged δυσμενέων, -έοντες (Od.); ἀ-μενής 'forceless' (E.); perhaps also the PNs Ἀμενέας, Ἀμενίσκος and (with unexplained -νν-) Ἀμεννάμενος (Bechtel 1917a: 6f.)? Cf. further ►ἀμενηνός. In PNs, e.g. Κλεο-μένης; as a first member in μενο-εικής 'suitable for the mind, delightful, plentiful' (Hom.).
•DER 1. μενεαίνω [v.] 'to desire strongly, rage' (Il.), aor. -ῆναι, with -αίνω added to *meneh-. 2. μενοινάω [v.] 'to have in mind, aim at, wish, desire' (Il.), also -ώω, aor. -ῆσαι, of unclear origin (Μενοίτης, -οίτιος belongs to οἶτος 'fate'). Thence μενοινή [f.] 'intention, desire' (Call., A. R., AP; probably a back-formation).
•ETYM As an old verbal noun, μένος is identical with Skt. mánas- [n.], Av. manah- [n.] 'spirit, thought, will', IE *men-s- [n.]. The adjective δυσ-μενής matches with Av. duš-manah- 'evil-minded', Skt. dur-manas- 'sorrowful'; and εὐ-μενής with Skt. su-mánas- 'well-minded'. The root formed a perfect that is preserved in ►μέμονα, cf. γένος : γέγονα. The related present ►μαίνομαι deviates in meaning. See further ►μιμνήσκω.

μέντοι [pcl.] postpositional pcl. 'however, meanwhile, yet' (IA). ◄GR► •ETYM From μέν (►μήν 1) and the dative τοι 'tibi' (still distinct in Hom.). Hell. μέντον 'id.' modelled on ἔνδοι· ►ἔνδον. See Denniston 1954: 405, 409-10, 495.

μένω [v.] 'to remain, stay, wait, expect, stand fast' (Il.). ◄IE *men- 'stay'► •VAR Also μίμνω (Il.), enlarged μιμνάζω (Il.), fut. μενέω (Ion.), Att. μενῶ, aor. μεῖναι (Il.), perf. μεμένηκα (Att.).
•COMP Very frequent with prefix, e.g. ἐν-, ἐπι- κατα-, παρα-, ὑπο-. Often as a first member in governing compounds, e.g. μενε-χάρμης 'steadfast in battle' (Il.), also -ος (Il.); PN Μενέ-λαος, -λεως (Il.).
•DER μονή (ἐν-, ἐπι-, κατα-, παρα-, ὑπο-, etc.) 'stay, abode, etc.' (IA) with μόνιμος (παρ(α)-) 'staying, steadfast, etc.' (Thgn., Pi., IA); μονίη 'stability, permanence' (Emp.), 'steadfastness' (Tyrt.), probably after ►καμμονίη 'endurance'; μονος (ἔν-, παρ(ά)-, ἐπί-, etc.) 'enduring' (Pi., Att.). μένημα [n.] 'place of detention' (pap. VI[p]). μενετός 'inclined to wait' (Th., Ar.). Μέμνων (Hom.), a secondary appellative (►μέμνων 2), interpreted as "who stands firm, who persists", but rather from *Μέδ-μων, cf. on ►Ἀγαμέμνων. An iterative deverbative ἐπι-μηνάω is retained in the perf. ἐπιμεμηνάκαντι (*Del.*³ 91, 11; Argos III[a]); cf. below.
•ETYM The thematic root-present μένω is the basis of the whole Greek system. Beside this stands a reduplicated present μίμνω. The perfect μεμένηκα is an innovation. Although a counterpart of these formations is not found outside Greek, we have Arm. mnam 'to stay, expect', which agrees with the iterative ἐπι-μηνάω; both derive from *mēnā-, for which cf. Lat. cēlāre (to oc-culere), sēdāre (to sīdere; cf. ►ἕζομαι).
Other formations are found in Lat. manēre < *mn-eh₁- and Av. mānaiieiti [caus.] 'he makes stay' < *mon-eie-. In Sanskrit, we find as primary formations the reduplicated athematic ma-man-dhi (ipv.), ma-man-yāt (opt.), á-ma-man (ipf.) 'to wait, stand still' (only RV 10, 27; 31; 32). Further represented in ToAB mäsk- 'to reside, be' < *mn-sk-, and probably in the isolated verbal noun OIr. ainmne 'patience' < *an-men-V-. The comparison with Hitt. mimma- 'to refuse, reject' as from *mi-mn-e/o-, matching μίμνω (Jasanoff 2003) is doubtful for semantic as well as formal reasons (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.).

μέριμνα [f.] 'care, concern, solicitude' (h. Merc., Hes., Sapph., Emp., Pi., trag., Ar.); rare in prose, originally Ionic? ⊲IE? smer-*, PG?⊳

•COMP ἀ-μέριμνος 'without concern' (S., Hell.), ἀμεριμν-ία 'carelessness' (Plu.), etc.

•DER μεριμνάω [v.] 'to care (for), be anxious' (S., Ar., X., D.), whence μεριμν-ήματα, Dor. -άματα [pl.] 'cares' (Pi., S.); -ητής [m.] 'caring for something' (E.), -ητικός (Artem., sch.).

•ETYM The position generally taken is that μέριμνα is a back-formation from μεριμνάω (cf. ἐρευνάω : ἔρευνα, etc.), but this idea it not confirmed by the age of the attestations, nor by their distribution. Formally closest is ►μέδιμνος; a noun *μερ-ί-μων or *μέρ-ι-μα seems to have served as a basis. A primary verb *smer- presupposed by this analysis exists in Skt. smárati, Av. maraiti, paiti-šmaraiti, hi-šmar- 'to remember, remind'. Cognate formations can perhaps be found in ►μέρμερος, μέρμηρα, -ίζω, where further connections are given. Alternatively, Fur.: 246 assumes Pre-Greek origin because of the suffix (-ιμν-).

μέρμερος [adj.] conventional epithet of unclear mg. (acc. to H. μέρμερα = χαλεπά, δεινά, φροντίδος ἄξια 'difficult, awesome, worthy of thought'); apparently a reduplicated intensive formation. If related to μέριμνα, we may assume an original mg. 'raising concern', whence 'distressful, dreadful' vel sim. (?), beside 'pondering, caring', of persons. ⊲PG(V)⊳

•VAR Also attested as a PN (Apollod., Paus.). In Hom. (only Il.) always μέρμερα [n.pl.] as an epithet of ἔργα, also as object of ῥέζειν, μητίσασθαι; post-Hom. of κακόν, βλάβη, etc. (E., Lyc., Nic.), also of persons and animals (Pl. Hp. Ma., Plu., Opp.); enlarged μερ-μέριος (Them.).

•DER μέρμηραι [f.pl.] 'cares, concerns' (Hes. Th. 55, Thgn. 1325, also IG 14, 1942 [late verse]), μερμηρίζω [v.] 'to care, meditate, invent, consider, linger' (Hom.), aor. -ίξαι, fut. -ίξω (cf. Ruijgh 1957: 87); also μερμαίρω [v.] (Suid., H., Phot. [codd. also -μέρω]); on ἀπο-μερμηρίσαι 'forget the cares' (Ar. V. 5, D. C.) see Ruijgh ibid.

•ETYM Under μέριμνα, the primary thematic root-verb Skt. smárati, Av. maraiti 'remember' (reduplicated hi-šmar-) was adduced. The length of the vowel in μέρμηραι, as opposed to μέρμερος, was explained by Frisk from the verb μερμηρίζω, where he ascribed it to the meter. Yet, this is no sufficient explanation; the interchange rather points to Pre-Greek origin (on ε/η, see Fur.: 257[42]). Thus, unrelated to ►μάρτυς or ►μείρομαι.

μέρμις, -ῑθος [f.] 'band, string' (κ 23, D. S. 3, 21). ⊲PG(S,V)⊳

•VAR Dat.pl. -θαις (Agatharch. 47); acc.sg. -θον (H.), nom. -θος (Zonar.).

•ETYM Formation like ἕλμις 'intestinal worm' (μέρμινθα is a v.l. in D. S. l.c., cf. ἕλμινθος), and like ὄρνις, γέλγις 'head of garlic', etc. Cognates have been supposed in μηρύω 'to wind up' as well as in ►βρόχος and ►μάραθον 'fennel'. But of course, the word must be Pre-Greek, because of the alternating suffix -ῑθ-/-ινθ-. Fur.: 289 compares μήρινθος, σμήρινθος 'string, thread', and further σμῆριγξ 'hair', σμήριγγες· πλεκταί, σειραί, βόστρυχοι 'coils, strings; cords; curls of hair' (H.).

μέρμνος [m.] 'kind of falcon' (Call., Ael.). ⊲PG(V)⊳

•VAR μέρμνης· τρίορχος (H.).

•DER PN Μέρμνων (Theoc. 3, 35).

•ETYM Origin unknown, but compare the Lydian dynasty of the Μερμνάδαι; see Neumann 1961: 70. Fauth Herm. 96 (1968): 257 recalls the PNs Μάρμαξ (Paus.) and Βάρβαξ (►βάρβαξ), and ►μόρφνος (epithet of αἰετός 'eagle', meaning unclear). The last connection could show that the word is Pre-Greek (alternation μ/φ).

μέροπες, -ων, -εσσι [pl.] epithet of ἄνθρωποι (Hom.), βροτοί (Β 285), after these of λαοί (A. Supp. 90 [lyr.]) and, as a substantive, = ἄνθρωποι (trag., Hell. and later poets); also = οἱ ἄφρονες ὑπὸ Εὐβοέων 'senseless (Eub.)' (Gloss. Oxy. 1802, 48). Further as an EN (Pi.) and of a bird (Arist., Plu.); cf. below. ⊲PG(S)⊳ •COMP μεροπο-σπόρος 'procreating men' (Man.).

•DER μεροπήϊος 'human' (Man., Opp.).

•ETYM The original meaning is unknown, which has opened up the way for speculations (see Frisk). Koller Glotta 46 (1968): 14-26 starts from h. Ap. 4 with the formula πόλις μερόπων ἀνθρώπων, said of Cos, and states that it meant 'a city of mortal men'. See further Ramat Acad. Toscana La Colombaria 1960: 131-157 and Ramat Riv. fil. class. 90 (1962): 150.

The suffix -οψ (-ωψ), probably non-IE, is found in various names of animals and peoples, e.g. δρύοψ, Δρύοπες, πάρνοψ, Δόλοπες, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 259). Like the word itself, it is probably Pre-Greek. See Beekes Glotta 73 (1995-1996): 21-27. The relation between ἀέροψ and Μέροψ is unclear (see Fur.: 246).

μέρος [n.] 'part, share, section, row, rank' (h. Hom., Thgn., Pi., IA). ⊲IE smer-* 'think of, remember, care'⊳

•COMP Rarely as a first member, e.g. μερ-άρχης [m.] 'distributing official' (Att. inscr.), 'commander of a military division' (Hell.), very often as a second member, e.g. πολυ-μερής 'consisting of many parts' (Ti. Locr., Arist.).

•DER μερίς, -ίδος [f.] 'part, distribution, contribution, plot of ground, district, class' (Att., Hell.) with μερίδ-ιον (Arr.); as a first member it appears in in μεριδ-άρχης [m.] 'governor of a district' (pap., LXX), etc. Further μερίτης [m.] 'participant' (D., Plb.) with μεριτικός 'belonging to the μερίτης' (Lyd.), (συμ-)μεριτεύω, -ομαι [v.] 'to distribute (among each other)' (LXX, pap.), with μεριτεία 'distribution of property' (pap.); μερικός 'concerning the part, individual, special' (Aristipp. apud D. L.), with -κεύω [v.] 'to consider as an individual' (Steph. in Rh., Eust.); μερόεν· μεριστικόν 'fit for dividing [LSJ]' (H.); μέρεια or -εία in ἐν τᾶι μερειᾶι (Tab. Heracl.).

Denominative (first from μέρος, but later from μερίς too): μερίζω (Dor. -ίσδω) [v.] 'to distribute', med. 'to distribute among each other, to drive apart' (IA, Theoc., Bion), also with prefix as ἐπι-, δια-, κατα-; thence (ἐπι-, κατα-)μερισμός 'distribution' (Pl., Arist.), μέρισμα 'part' (Orph.), κατα-, ἀνα-μέρισις 'distribution' (Epicur.), μεριστής 'distributor', συμ- 'fellow-heir' (Ev. Luc., pap.), fem. -ίστρια (sch.).

•ETYM Verbal noun from ►μείρομαι 'to take one's share', perf. ἔμμορε 'to participate'.

μέσαβον [n.] 'strap', fixing the pole to the middle of the yoke. ⊲PG⊳

•VAR Hes. Op. 469 -ων, probably gen.pl.; μεσσαβα [pl.] (Call.); μεσάβοιον, v.l. -ό- (Poll. 1, 252).
•DER μεσσαβόω [v.] 'to yoke (the horses)' (Lyc.).
•ETYM Analyzed as an hypostasis from (ἐν) μέσῳ βοῶν 'between the oxen', with a thematization like in ἑκατόμ-βη (μεσάβοιον based on ἐννεάβοιον, etc.). However, the compositional vowel -α- instead of -ο- is unexplained (assuming that μεσα- was influenced by μετα- does not help). In fact, the whole analysis is morphologically unacceptable. If we take into consideration the forms μέσοψ 'strap' in μεσόπα· ἱμάντα τὸν περὶ τὸν ζυγὸν καὶ τὸ ἄροτρον δεδεμένον 'a strap bound around the yoke and the plough' (H.), pointing to interchange of labials, and also μεσσαῖον· τὸ ὑπὸ τοὺς τραχήλους ὑποτιθέμενον 'which is put around the neck' (H.), with geminate -σσ-, μεσάτιον (μεσάντιον I Reg 17, 7), Pre-Greek origin becomes evident. See Fur.: 107 on α/ο, 148f. on π/β.

μέσακλον [n.] 'weaver's beam' (LXX 1 Ci. 17, 7). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR v.ll. -κνον, -άντιον; -κμον (H.), -κνον (Suid.); μέσακμον· κανὼν τοῦ ἱστοῦ 'rod of the loom', οἱ δὲ ἀντίον 'others: (part of) the loom', οἱ δὲ τὸ μεσάκτων ἢ μεσάκρων (H.); μεσάτμῳ· τῷ κανόνι, τῷ μέσῳ καλάμῳ τοῦ ἱστοῦ 'the middle rod of the loom' (Suid.).
•ETYM Almost certainly a technical loanword from Pre-Greek, because of the many different variants.

μεσημβρία [f.] 'midday, noon', as a direction 'south' (Att. A.). ◂GR▸ •VAR -ίη (Archil., Hecat.), μεσαμβρίη (Hdt.).
•DER μεσημβρινός (Att.), Dor. (Theoc.) μεσαμβρινός 'ptng. to the afternoon, southern' (after the adj. of time in -ινός); μεσήμβριος 'southern' (Ruf. apud Orib.), μεσημβριάς [f.] (Nonn.); also (after Dor. ἁμέρα) τὸ μεσᾱμέριον 'at midday' (Theoc.). Denominative verb μεσημβρ-ιάζω (Pl.), -ίζω (Str.), with ptc. -ιάων, -ιόων (AP, A. R.) 'to pass the meridian, culminate', of sun and stars.
•ETYM An abstract formation in -ία from μέσον ἆμαρ, or derived from an old adjective *μέσ-ᾱμ(β)ρ-ος, -ιος 'of the middle of the day' from the zero grade of ἆμαρ 'day'. Thence μεσ-ἀμβρ-ία, -ίη with shortening by Osthoff, and μεσ-ημβρ-ία with analogical η after ►ἦμαρ, ἡμέρα.

μέσκος [m.]? · κῴδιον, δέρμα. Νίκανδρος 'skin, fleece (Nic. = Fr. 119)' (H.). ◂LW Orient.▸ •ETYM An Oriental loanword acc. to Lewy 1895: 131, Justi IF Anz. 17: 125: cf. Aram. meškā, Assyr. mašku, OP maškā, MP and Arm. mašk 'hide, skin, soft leather', etc. Did ►πέσκος arise from here by contamination with πέκος (Güntert 1914: 145f.)? Latte simply reads πέσκος instead of μέσκος.

μεσόδμα · γυνή <ὡς Λάκωνες> (H. gl. 917). ◂?▸
•VAR Also μεσοδόμα· γυνή. Λάκωνες (H. gl. 947).
•ETYM Unknown; -δμα reminds of δάμαρ. Fur.: 227 derives a form μεσ(σ)ομα from the glosses cited above, but this is unwarranted.

μεσόδμη [f.] 'crossbeam', stretched from wall to wall in a building, or from side to side on a ship, and in which the mast was stepped (Od., Hp., Q. S.), details in Bechtel 1914 s.v. ◂GR▸ •VAR μεσόδμᾱ (Delph. IV[a]), μεσόμνη (Att. inscr.), on the phonetics see Schwyzer: 208. Also μεσόδμη· ξύλον, τὸ ἀπὸ τῆς τρόπεως ἕως τοῦ ἱστοῦ (H.) and μεσόδμαι καὶ μεσόδματα· τὰ μεσόστυλα. τίνες δὲ τὰ τῶν δοκῶν διαστήματα (H., Latte: "μεσόδματα vix sanum").
•ETYM Properly "belonging to the middle of the house", a compound of μέσος and the zero grade of the word for 'house' (δεμ-, δμ-), seen in ►δεσπότης and ►δάπεδον, cf. on ►δόμος, enlarged with a suffix -ᾱ-: μεσό-δμ-ᾱ like *ἑκατόμ-βϝ-ᾱ. The term was transferred from domestic architecture to the construction of ships. The second member -δμη is often directly derived from δέμω 'to build' as a zero grade root-noun (cf. νέο-δμᾱ-τος, δέ-δμη-μαι < *-$d\mathring{m}h_2$-), so "middle structure"?

μέσος [adj.] '(in the) middle', of space, time, etc., τὸ μέσον 'centre' (Il.). ◂IE *med^hio- 'middle'▸ •VAR Compar. μεσαί-τερος, superl. -τατος (IA), after παλαίτερος, etc.; also μέσ(σ)ατος (Il., Ar.), after ἔσχατος, etc.; μεσσότατος (A. R., Man.).
•DIAL Aeol. μέσσος, Cret. Boeot. μέττος.
•COMP Very often as a first member, e.g. ►μεσόδμη, ►μεσημβρία; μεσαι-πόλιος 'half-grey, grizzled' (N 361; cf. e.g. μεσό-λευκος), like μεσαίτερος, was not built on a locative but metrically conditioned (Schwyzer: 448).
•DER Adjectives: 1. μεσήεις = μέσος (M 269, metrical enlargement in verse-final position, perhaps after τιμήεις, τελήεις). 2. μεσ(σ)ήρης = μέσος (E., Eratosth.), after ποδήρης, etc. 3. μεσαῖος = μέσος (Antiph.), cf. τελευταῖος. 4. μεσάδιος 'central' (Aeol. acc. to sch. D. T.), after διχθάδιος etc., cf. also μεσάζω. 5. μεσίδιος 'in the middle, mediating' (Arist.); μεσίδιον [n.] 'property deposited with an intermediary', whence -ιόω 'to make a deposite' (pap., inscr.). 6. μεσίτης [m.] 'mediator, arbiter', with -ιτεύω [v.] 'to be a μ., to settle', also 'to pawn' (Plb., pap., NT), -ιτεία 'mediation, settlement, pawning' (J., pap.). 7. μέσης [m.] 'wind between ἀπαρκτίας and καικίας' (Arist.), also μεσεύς = καικίας (Steph. in Hp.). 8. μεσότης, -ητος [f.] 'middle, mean, moderation' (Pl., Arist.). 9. μεσακόθεν [adv.] 'amidst, between' (Arc. IV[a]), from -αχόθεν after πανταχόθεν.
μεσσάτιος (Call.), μεσάτιον name of a strap (Poll.) are unrelated, see ►μέσαβον 'leather strap'.
Denominative verbs: 1. μεσόω 'to constitute the middle, be in the middle' (IA); 2. μεσεύω 'to keep the mean, be neutral' (Pl. Lg., X., Arist.); 3. μεσάζω = μεσόω (LXX, D. S.).
•ETYM Old local adjective, identical with Skt. mádhya-, Lat. medius, Go. midjis, OHG mitti, all from IE *$m\acute{e}d^hio$- 'in the middle'. See further ►με(σ)σηγύ(ς).

μέσπιλον [n.] 'medlar, -tree, Mespilus germanica' (Archil., Hp., Amphis, Dsc.), also 'thorn, Crataegus (orientalis, oxyacantha', Thphr.). ◂PG?(S)▸ •VAR -ίλη [f.] (Thphr.).

•ETYM A foreign word of unknown origin. Probably Pre-Greek on account of the suffix -ιλ- (Pre-Greek: suffixes). Borrowed as Lat. mespilum, -a, whence OHG mespila, etc.

μεσποδι ⇒μέσφα.

μέσσαυλος (-ον) ⇒μέταυλος.

με(σ)σηγύ(ς) [adv.] 'in the middle, between' (Il., Hp., Eratosth.). ◄IE med^hieh_1-g^wu- 'going in the middle'► •VAR μεσηγύς (only Orph.).
•ETYM On the facultative -ς, see Schwyzer: 404 and 620. The similarity with ἐγγύς is obvious, but it is unknown whether this is due to a common origin or to analogy. See most recently De Lamberterie RPh. 72 (1998): 132, arguing that it contains an instrumental μεσση, like in Skt. madhyā́ 'in the middle' (Forssman IF 101 (1996): 305), and a root g^weu- which stands beside g^wem-, g^weh_2-. See ►πρέσβυς, ►ἐγγύς.

μεστός [adj.] 'full, filled, satiated' (IA). ◄IE? med- 'measure, be full'► •COMP Also with ἀνα-, ἐν-, ἐπι-, etc. in different mgs., first after ἀνάπλεος, etc. Also possible is a back-formation of ἀνα-μεστοῦσθαι (cf. Strömberg 1946: 91 and 117).
•DER μεστόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to be filled, fill up' (com., S., Pl. Lg., Arist.), also with ἀνα-, δια-, ἐν-, κατα-, whence late and rare μέστωσις 'filling, satiation', -ωμα 'filling'. Also μέσμα· μέστωμα (H.), perhaps an old primary formation independent of μεστός?
•ETYM Unclear. Connection with μαδάω is impossible from the laryngealist point of view. A connection with *med- 'to measure' has also been proposed, defended by Meier-Brügger KZ 105 (1992): 240-244, referring to de Saussure's translation 'qui a sa mesure'. LIV[2] connects μεστός with 2. *med- 'voll werden, satt werden', to be separated from 1. *med- 'measure'.

μέσφα [adv., prep.] 'until' (Θ 508). ◄GR► •VAR Further μέσφι (Aret.); μέστα (Cret. II[a], Cyren.), μεττ' ἐς (Gortyn), μέστε (Arc.), μεσποδι, μες (Thess.); cf. Ruijgh 1957: 137.
•ETYM The initial part is the same as in ►μέχρι (and perhaps ►μετά); thence the -ι in μέσφι was taken. Final -φα is obscure. μέστε corresponds to ►ἔστε; μεσποδι may contain IE pod-i 'foot' (see García Ramón in DELG Supp.); Thess. μες (only in μὲς τᾶς πέμπτας), might stand for μέστε, -τα with haplology. Many details remain unclear, as is common with petrified expressions.

μέτα, μετά [adv., prep.] 'in the midst, afterwards; between, with, after' (Il.), with gen., dat. and acc. ◄IE $meth_2$ 'in the midst, between, after'► •DIAL Myc. me-ta.
•ETYM The Germanic preposition Go. miþ, ON með, OHG mit(i) 'with, among' < IE met(i) or med^hi is very similar, and probably related to μέσος; Gr. -α could be an innovation after κατά, ἀνά, διά, etc. Cf. also Alb. mjet 'middle'. A remote cognate may be contained in the first element of ►μέχρι, and possibly in ►μέσος. Note τὰ μέταζε 'afterwards' (Hes. Op. 394 acc. to Hdn. and other sources [τὰ μεταξύ codd.]), with -ζε like in θύραζε, etc. The form μεταξύ [adv.] 'in the midst, between' (Il.), late also 'afterwards', is common and old, and may derive from μετα + ξυ(ν). Beside μετά or instead of it, some dialects (Aeol., Dor., Arc.) use ►πεδά.

μέταλλον [n.] 'mine, quarry' (Hdt., Th., X., Att. inscr.), late also 'mineral, metal' (Nonn., AP), back-formation from μεταλλεύω. ◄PG(S)► •COMP As a first member in μεταλλ-ουργός 'miner', with -έω, -εῖον (D. S., Dsc.).
•DER 1. μεταλλεῖα [n.pl.] 'minerals, metals' (Pl. Lg. 678d), substantivized form of *μεταλλεῖος 'ptng. to to a mine'. 2. μεταλλικός 'ptng. to mines' (D., Arist.). 3. μεταλλεύς [m.] 'miner' (Lys., Pl. Lg., Att. inscr.); thence, or from μέταλλον, 4. μεταλλεύω [v.] 'to be miner, work in the mines, dig up from quarries' (Pl., Arist., LXX) with μεταλλ-εία (Pl., Str.), -ευσις (Ph. Bel.) 'mining', -ευτής = μεταλλεύς (Str.), -ευτικός 'ptng. to mining' (Pl. Lg., Arist., pap.). 5. μεταλλίζομαι [v.] 'to be condemned to be a miner' (Cod. Just.). 6. μεταλλῖτις· γῆ τις 'some kind of earth' (H.). On itself stands μεταλλάω [v.] 'to investigate, inquire, examine' (Il., late prose), cf. below.
•ETYM A technical term of mining, and therefore suspected of being a loan. The attempt to explain μέταλλον as a back-formation from μεταλλάω does not help, as no convincing etymology has been found for the verb either. The explanation from μετ' ἄλλα, properly "(inquire) for other things", is hardly convincing. It is much more probable that denominative μεταλλάω is originally a technical term, which was used in a metaph. sense by epic poets, but fell out of use elsewhere. Borrowed as Lat. metallum 'mining, metal', whence MoHG Metall, MoE metal, etc. On Pre-Greek -αλλ-, see Beekes 2008.

μεταμώνιος [adj.] 'idle, vain, useless' (Hom., Pi., Theoc.), where always -α [n.pl.], later 'borne by the wind, raised on high' (Simon., Ar.), by association with ἄνεμος. ◄GR► •ETYM The word is synonymous with ἀνεμώλιος, and like the latter, it is modelled on ἄνεμος 'wind'. It is a hypostasis of μετ' ἀνέμων for *μετ-ανεμ-ώνιος, with subsequent haplology. The glosses μωνιή· ὀλιγωρία and μωνιόν· μάταιον, ἀχρεῖον (H.) probably originated from a false analysis of this form. Not related to ►μάτην.

μετανάστης, -ου [m.] See below. ◄GR►
•DER In Hom. only in the expression ἀτίμητον μετανάστην (I 648 = P 59); post-Hom. 'migrant, emigrant, fugitive' (Hdt. 7, 161 of the Athenians, Arat., Ph., pap.), -στις [f.] (Ph.) and -στρια (AP), like ἀγύρτης : ἀγύρτρια, etc.; μετανάστ-ιος [adj.] 'migrating, wandering' (AP, Nonn.), μεταναστ-εύω, -εύομαι [v.] 'to drive out, wander, flee' (LXX, Str., Ph.).
•ETYM Hdt. and his contemporaries already understood the word as 'wanderer', and connected it (as μετ-ανά-στη-ς) with μετ-ανα-στῆ-ναι 'to move, emigrate', μετανάστασις 'removal, emigration' (Hdt., Th., Hp.). In this case, however, it would stand for *μετανα-στά-της with metrically conditioned haplology (cf. ἐπι-, παρα-, προ-στά-της, etc.), as an old root noun -στη-ς < $steh_2$- (like in Skt. ni-ṣṭhā́-s, prati-ṣṭhā́-s, etc.) has no counterpart in Greek.
Since this interpretation is in conflict with the Homeric use of μετά and ἀνίστασθαι, a better hypothesis may be the explanation already given in the TLG: μετα-νάσ-της ~ *μετα-ναίω 'to live together with', like μεταναιέ-της (Hes.), -τάω (h. Cer.). As an old parallel formation to Att. μέτ-οικος, Arg. πεδά-ϝοικος and to μετοικέται· κατὰ μέσον οἰκοῦντες (H.), μετανάστης would originally have meant 'who lives among others (as a foreigner), resident' (and still does in Homer).

Because of the disappearance of verbal -νασ- and the gradual advance of μετα- 'around' at the expense of μετα- 'with', μετανάστης was associated with μεταναστῆναι, μετανάστασις already in classical times. Leumann's view (Leumann 1950: 183[30]) that μετα-νάσ-της would properly mean 'immigrant' (from μετα-ναίω 'to move') has to meet the same objections as the connection with μεταναστῆναι. See ►ναίω.

μεταξύ ⇒μέτα.

μετάρσιος [adj.] 'raised, high in the air' (Ion.), equivalent of Att. μετέωρος (Capelle Phil. 71 (1912): 449ff.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Dor. πεδάρσιος (A., Ar.).
•DER μεταρσιόω [v.] 'to raise on high' (Ion.).
•ETYM Formation like ἀνάρσιος (to *ἄν-αρτος), ἀμβρόσιος (to ἄμ-βροτος), etc. Acc. to Wackernagel KZ 28 (1887): 131, it is a contracted form of *μετ-άερτος > *μέτ-ᾱρ-τος, from μετ-αείρω, -αίρω 'to lift up'. See ►μετέωρος.

μέτασσαι [f.pl.] 'lambs born later, i.e. of middle age', between the πρόγονοι and the ἕρσαι (ι 221); τὰ μέτασσα [n.pl.] 'later on' (h. Merc. 125). ◂IE $meth_2$-tio- 'born later'▸ •ETYM Derived from μέτα like ἔπισσαι 'daughters born later' to ἔπι, so probably from *μετα-τι̯ο-, -τι̯ᾰ [f.], like Skt. ápa-tya- 'offspring'. The explanation as μέτ-ασσαι = μετ-οῦσαι "being in between", an archaic zero grade fem. ptc. of μετ-εἶναι, meets the problem that both τὰ μέτασσα (for τὰ μετόντα) and ἔπισσαι have to be explained as analogical formations. See ►περισσός.

μέταυλος [adj.] attribute of θύρα (Ar., Lys., Plu.), also substantivized [f.] 'the door that opens from the (outside) court, or from the living of the men, towards the back rooms' (opposite ἡ αὔλειος θύρα 'the outside door'), in Vitr. (6, 7, 5) used of a corresponding corridor. ◂GR▸ •VAR μέσαυλος (E., Ph. [v. l. -λιος, Vitr.), μέσσαυλος (-ον) 'the inner court where the cattle were put for the night' (Hom., A. R. 3, 235); μεσαύλη [f.] 'court inside the house' (pap. VI[p]; reading not quite certain).
•ETYM As a hypostasis, Att. μέταυλος either stands for ἡ μετ' αὐλήν (θύρα), i.e. the door behind the (outward) court, or for ἡ μετ' αὐλῆς (μετ' αὐλῶν θῦρα), i.e. the door in the middle of the court (between both courts); the meaning, which changed with the organisation of the house, cannot be settled without exact knowledge of the plan of the house; cf. the explanations by Wistrand Eranos 37 (1939): 16ff. Therefore, the etymological analysis is likewise uncertain. On μεσο- for older μετα-, see Wackernagel 1920-1924(2): 242.
On the other hand, Hom. μέσσαυλος seems to stand for τὸ μέσον or (ἐν) μέσσῳ αὐλῆς, meaning "what belongs to the middle of the court" or "what is in the middle of the court", i.e. 'middle of the court, interior of the court'; cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 19f. It would then have to be separated from μέταυλος. In A. R. 3, 235, epic μέσσαυλος may have been influenced by later μέσαυλος; late μεσαύλη conformed to the simplex.

μετέωρος [adj.] 'raised on high, in suspense, above the earth, on high sea, superficial', metaph. 'hesitating, uncertain, pending, excited' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Epic μετήορος, Aeol. and Dor. πεδάορος (Alc., A.).
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. μετεωρο-λόγος 'who speaks about τὰ μετέωρα, astronomer', with -έω, -ία (IA).
•DER μετεωρ-ότης [f.] 'sublimity' (Corn.), -ία 'absence of mind' (Suet., M. Ant.), -οσύνη 'id.' (Man.); -ίδιον mg. uncertain (pap. letters). Denominative μετεωρίζω [v.] 'to raise high, encourage (with false hopes), etc.', med.-pass. also 'to become proud, arrogant' (IA) with μετεωρ-ισμός (Hp., Arist.), -ισμα (Hell.), -ισις (Plu., D.C.) 'exaltation, excitedness, etc.'; -ιστής (H.) as an explanation of πεδαοριστής (beside ἵππος φρυ<α>γματίας), -ιστικός 'exciting' (Vett. Val.). Also μετεωρέω = μετεωρίζομαι (Ph.).
•ETYM Derivation from *μετ-αείρω, μετ-αίρω (Aeol. πεδαίρω) 'to lift up', like συνάορος 'coupled together' from συν-αείρω (cf. ἔξοχος to ἐξέχω, etc.). A hypostasis of μετ' ἀέρος 'located in the air', with analogical -ο-, is unlikely. See ►μετάρσιος.

μετόπη [f.] 'metope', element between the triglyphs on the frieze of Dorian temples (Vitr.), codd. methope, -a like triumphus, sephulcrum, etc. (cf. Leumann 1963-1979: 131). ◂GR▸ •VAR Accentuation not found in the mss. Also μεθόπια [n.pl.] (Delph. IV[a], H.; μ[...]οπια Att. inscr. IV[a]), cf. ἐφόπτης beside ἐπόπτης. etc. (Schwyzer: 220).
•ETYM Given other technical terms like μετα-κιόνιον, μετα-στύλιον 'space between the columns' (Att. and Hell. inscr.), μεθόριος, -ον 'what lies between boundaries, borderland between two countries' (Th., X.), μετόπιον must indicate a space between the ὀπαι. Acc. to Vitr. 4, 2, 4, the ὀπαί were tignorum cubicula et asserum, i.e. omissions or indentations in the beams, in which the heads of the crossbeams were fitted in; these heads were covered with special planks, the so-called triglyphs. According to another view, rejected by Vitr., the ὀπαί were originally openings for light, which certainly fits the meaning of ὀπή, 'hatch, opening for light', better. Demangel BCH 55 (1931): 117ff. argues for the latter, seeing the triglyphs as a grid which was put before the ὀπαί afterwards.
The form μετόπη is clearly secondary to μετόπιον, and adapted to the simplex, perhaps because the metopes themselves seemed to be "openings in-between"; μετόπη 'opening between (the triglyphs)' would be a compound of the type περί-κηπος 'garden around (the house)' (Hell. and late pap.), cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 252, or understood like μεσ-αύλη (see ►μέταυλος).

μέτρον [n.] 'measure, goal, length, size; metre' (Il.). ◂IE meh_1- 'measure'▸ •COMP Many compounds, e.g. σύμμετρος 'with the same measure, measured, appropriate, symmetrical', συμμετρ-ία 'harmony, symmetry, etc.' (IA); περί-μετρος 'exceeding (the measure)' (Od.); but περί-μετρον (Hdt., Arist.), -ος [f.] (scil. γραμμή) 'circumference', with verbal connotation after περίοδος etc. (cf. περι-μετρέω Luc.).

•DER Adjectives: 1. μέτριος 'moderate, suitable' (Hes.) with μετρι-ότης 'moderation' (IA), -οσύνη 'poverty' (pap. VI^p), -ακός 'moderate' (pap. VI^p), -άζω 'to be moderate' (Att., Hell.) with -ασμός (Suid.); μετριεύεται (H. s.v. λαγαρίττεται). 2. μετρικός 'metrical, by measure' (Arist.). 3. μετρηδόν [adv.] 'in metrical form' (Nonn.). 4. Verb: μετρέω 'to measure (out)', etc. (Hom.), very often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, δια-, ἐπι-, ἐκ-, ἀπο-, συν-; hence (often with prefix) μέτρ-ησις 'measurement' (IA), -ημα 'measure' (E., Hell.), -ητής [m.] "measurer", name of a measure, 'metretes' (Att.), -ητίς [f.] 'id.' (Amorgos IV^a), -ητιαῖος 'sticking to a μ.' (Caryanda), -ητικός 'regarding measurement' (Pl.). As a second member in several verbal compounds, e.g. γεω-μέτρης [m.] 'geometer' (Pl., X.) with γεωμετρ-ία, Ion. -ίη (Hdt., Ar.), -ικός (Democr., Pl.), -έω (Att.), βου-μέτρης "measurer of cows" = ὁ ἐπι θυσιῶν τεταγμένος παρὰ Αἰτωλοῖς 'who has been appointed at a sacrifice (Aetolian)' (H.). Backformations, e.g. διάμετρος (scil. γραμμή) [f.] 'diameter, diagonal, etc.' (Pl., Arist.), ἐπίμετρον 'excess, addition' (Hell.).
•ETYM Beside μέτρον, we find μήτρα [f.] 'areal measure', etc. (Cilicia) with an identical suffix, but a different root grade; corresponding exactly with Skt. mā́trā [f.] 'measure'. Also in ἐρεσι-μήτρην· τὴν γεωμετρίαν (H.), see on ► ἔρα.
It may go back to the root *meh$_1$- seen in the athematic present Skt. mā́-ti 'measures'. Greek shows a short vowel in μέτρον, as opposed to Skt. mā́tram [n.] 'id.'; this derives from a vocalization of the zero grade mh$_1$-tro-* > μετρ- (rather than m̥h$_1$tr- > μητρ-). The latter would be the expected vocalization, if we assume that *NHC- develops like -CNHC- > Gr. CNη/ᾱ/ωC. However, contra Beekes 1969: 183, it seems that the m- remained consonantal in initial position, see Beekes IF 93 (1988): 22-45. A derivation IE méd-tro-* from med-* 'measure' is impossible, as it would have given *μέστρον. See ► μῆτις.

μέτωπον [n.] 'the space between the eyes, forehead, brow', metaph. 'front, front of an army' (Il.); also as a plant name = χαλβάνη (Dsc.). ◄GR► •COMP εὐρυ-μέτωπος 'with a broad forehead' (Hom.).
•DER μετώπιος 'on the forehead' (Λ 95, Ρ 739), also substantival = 'forehead' (see below), -ιον [n.] 'front' (Priene IV^a), 'bandage on the forehead, etc.' (Gal.), name of a salve prepared from the plant μ., etc. (Dsc., Gal.); μετωπ-ίδιος 'of the forehead' (Hp., AP), but προ-μετωπ-ίδιος 'on the forehead' (Hdt., X.), περι- 'covering the forehead' (Hp.), from the corresponding prepositional forms; -ιαῖος 'id.' (medic.); -ίας [m.] 'with a typical forehead' (pap.); μετωπίς· ἰατρικὸς ἐπίδεσμος 'medical bandage' (H.); μετωπ-ηδόν (Hdt., Th.), -ᾰδόν (Opp.) 'forming a front'. On the PN Μέτωπος Sommer 1948: 8[2].
•ETYM Acc. to Arist. (HA, 491b 12), it originally means μεταξὺ τῶν ὀμμάτων, 'space between the eyes', a hypostasis from μετά and ὦπ-α 'eye, face' with a thematic vowel. The form μετώπ-ιον 'forehead, front' may be a parallel formation containing a suffix -ιο-. The expression is understandable when one starts from an animal's head, which has the eyes on the flanks (cf. Sommer op.cit. 115[1]).

μέχρι [adv., prep.] 'as far as, until' (Il.). ◄IE me-ǵ^{h}s-r-i* 'until'► •VAR Also μέχρις (Ω 128, X., Hell.).

•ETYM Identical with Arm. merj 'near, by', whence merjenam 'to approach' < merji-anam*; from IE mé-ǵ^{h}s-r-i*, containing the word for 'hand'. See ► ἄχρι.

μή [pcl.] 'not, that not' (Il.). ◄IE meh$_1$*► •VAR Further μηδέ, μηδείς, μηκέτι, μήτε, etc.
•ETYM Old prohibitive negation, identical with Arm. mi, Skt. mā́, Av. mā, OP mā, and ToAB mā; IE meh$_1$*; also to be included here is Alb. mo 'id.' < meh$_1$* next to mos < meh$_1$ k^{w}e*. See ► οὐ.

μήδεα 1 [n.pl.] 'male genitals', of φωτός (Od., Androm. apud Gal., Call., also Ant. Lib.), μέζεα (Hes. Op. 512, Lyc.); μέδεα (Archil. 138); metaph. 'urine' in Opp. (Cyn. 4, 441); μέζος· αἰδοῖον 'private parts' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •COMP As a second member in εὐμέζεος (cod. -μάξεως; leg. -μεζέος?)· εὐφυής (cod. -εὶς; leg. -οῦς?) τοῖς αἰδοίοις 'well-endowed qua private parts' (H.).
•ETYM The variation between μήδεα, μέζεα and μέδεα clearly points to a Pre-Greek word: interchange ε/η (cf. Fur.: 258[42]), δ/ζ (Fur.: 253ff.). The form μήδεα is not a euphemistic replacement for μέζεα, μέδεα (as per Wackernagel). WP compared MIr. mess (< med-tu-*) 'gland', assuming an original meaning 'swell, swollen in the form of balls' (which does not make sense for this root).

μήδεα 2 'counsels, cares'. ⇒μήδομαι.

μήδιον [n.] plant name, 'Campanula lingulata' (Dsc.). ◄?►
•DER ἐπιμήδιον name of an unknown plant (Dsc.).
•ETYM Strömberg 1940: 122 supposes connection with μήδιος· μαλακός 'soft, delicate' (H.).

μήδομαι [v.] 'to deliberate, estimate, contrive, decide' (Hom.). ◄IE meh$_1$-, med- 'measure'► •VAR Aor. μήσασθαι (Hom.), μῆστο· <ἐ>βουλεύσατο (H.), fut. μήσομαι.
•COMP Rarely with ἐπι- and δια-. As a second member e.g. in θρασυ-μήδης 'with bold plans' (Pi., B.), also as a PN (Il.). 2. μηδοσύνη 'prudence' (Hell.). 3. μήστωρ, -ωρος, -ορος [m.] 'adviser' (Il., Hp.), also as a PN (Il.); as a second member in e.g. δορι-μήστωρ [m.] 'adviser in war' (E.), often in PNs, e.g. Θεο-μήστωρ (Hdt.), Κλυται-μήστρα, -η (see on ► κλύω), etc.
•DER μήδεα [n.pl.] 'counsels, plans' (Il.).
•ETYM Primary thematic μήδομαι, whence aor. μήσασθαι beside older μῆστο, and μήσομαι, is commonly identified with the near synonym μέδομαι (see ► μέδω). The lengthened grade -η- is also seen in Dor., so it must be old. This is remarkable, as all other presents with a long root vowel have an old full grade plus a laryngeal. Therefore, one might consider influence of the root meh$_1$-* 'measure' (discussed under μῆτις and μέτρον) on μέδομαι, so as to yield μήδομαι. This cross would have to be old, as the verbal noun μήδεα 'plans' has an immediate counterpart in Arm. mit-kʿ [pl.] 'id.'. See Beekes IF 93 (1988): 30f., and also Clackson 1994: 147-149, who denies that Arm. mit-kʿ and Greek μήδεα necessarily constitute a shared innovation of these two languages.

μηκάομαι [v.] 'to bleat', of sheep, also of a hare and of a horse; in the formular verse κὰδ' δ' ἔπεσ' ἐν κονίῃσι μακών, of a horse, deer, boar, and also of a man (Phryn. PS, Procop., sch., H.). ⊲ONOM mēk-* 'bleat'⊳ •VAR μηκάζω (Nic.), perf. μέμηκα only in ind. plpf. ἐμέμηκον (ι 439) and ptc. μεμηκώς (K 362), fem. μεμακυῖαι (Δ 435), aor. ptc. μακών (P 469, κ 163).
•DER After κεμάς and other animal names: μηκάς [f.] 'bleating', in Hom. only plur. of αἶγες 'goats', later (S., E.) also of ἄρνες 'sheep', and (substantivized) = αἴξ. Late derivatives: μηκ-ασμός (Plu., Poll.), -ηθμός (Opp.), -ή (Ael., sch.) [f.] 'bleating', -ητικός [adj.] 'bleating' (sch.).
•ETYM The pair μέμηκα: μακεῖν (ptc. μακών) agrees with λέληκα : λακεῖν (with comparable meaning 'to scream, screech'), κέκραγα : κραγεῖν 'to croak', etc. Several types of present were created from the old intensive perfects and thematic aorists: μηκάζω, -άομαι (cf. λάσκω, κράζω, etc.). On μακών, see Leumann 1950: 235 n. 31. The formation is onomatopoeic, starting from the sound-imitation μη (mē*), and with many cognates, e.g. MHG meckatzen 'bleat', mecke 'he-goat', Lith. mekčióti, mekénti 'id.', Lat. micciō 'id.', Skt. (lex.) meka- [m.] 'he-goat', Arm. mak'i 'sheep'. The ablaut μηκ-/ μακ- cannot be of IE date, so it must be analogical.

μῆκος [n.] 'length' (Od.). ⊲IE meh₂ḱ-os-* 'length', mh₂ḱ-* 'long'⊳ •DIAL Dor. μᾶκος (Archyt.).
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. περι-μήκης, Dor. -μάκης 'very long, very high' (Il.), with expressive enlargement περιμήκ-ετος 'id.' (Hom., Arat.), after πάχετος, ἀριδείκετος, ἀμαιμάκετος, etc.
•DER Superlative μήκιστος (Dor. μάκιστος) 'longest, highest, greatest' (Il.), with Μηκιστεύς PN (Il.); compar. μάσσων, ntr. μᾶσσον (θ 203, etc.), after ἆσσον etc., derived from ►μακρός after ἐλάσσων, πάσσων, θάσσων; secondary μακρό-τατος, -τερος.
Old denominative verb μηκύνω (Dor. μακύνω) 'to lengten, stretch out' (Pi., IA), rarely with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐπι-. Hence the rare and late prosodic terms μήκ-υνσις (sch.), -υσμός (Eust.) 'lengthening', -υντικός 'which can be lengthened' (A. D.). Further derivations, also rare and late: μηκεδανός 'long' (AP, Nonn.), for μακεδνός after ἠπεδανός, etc.; μηκ-ικός 'regarding the length' (Procl.), -όθεν 'from afar' (Aesop., Paul. Aeg.), -ότης [f.] 'length' (Gal.).
•ETYM A counterpart to μῆκος is Av. masah- [n.] 'length, greatness', with a short stem vowel. Likewise, Av. masišta- and OP maθišta- are opposed to μήκιστος in their vocalism, which is not well understood. The full grade formation meh₂ḱ-os-* in μῆκος is typical for an old s-stem. On the short vowel in ►μακρός < mh₂ḱ-ro-* see further ►μέτρον. The root is also seen in Lat. maciēs 'leanness', maceō 'to be lean' and Hitt. mak-l-ant- 'lean'.

μήκων [f.] 'poppy, Papaver somniferum, poppy-head' (Θ 306), meatph. of poppy-like objects, e.g. 'ink-bag of the cuttle-fish' [m.] (Arist.). ⊲IE meh₂k-n-*⊳ •VAR Dor. Arc. μάκων, -ωνος.
•COMP μηκωνο-φόρος (scil. γῆ) [f.] 'poppy-bearing country' (pap.).

•DER 1. name of poppy-like plants (Euphorbia, wild lettuce): μηκών-ιον (Hp., Thphr.); also = 'opium' (Phld.), -ίς [f.] (Nic., inscr., pap.). -ῖτις (Gal.), also name of a stone (Plin.), Redard 1949: 57. 2. μηκών-ειος [adj.] 'spiced with poppy' (Philostr.), ntr. 'opium' (S. E., sch.), -ίς [f.] (Alcm.), -ικός 'poppy-like' (Thphr.). 3. Diminutive μηκωνάριον (Androm. apud Gal.).
•ETYM Formation like βλήχων. It is clearly related to the Slavic and Germanic word for 'poppy': CS makъ, Ru. mak (o-stem), and OHG maho, MHG mahen, mān, and (with the reflex of Verner's Law) OHG mago, OSw. val-mōghi (val- < u̯alha-* 'torpidity'), etc. The Verner variants and the short vowel (as opposed to Gr. -ᾱ-) are notable and point to old ablaut. Kroonen 2009 reconstructs an ablauting n-stem for PGm., which is the same formation as Greek and points to an inherited lexical item. As the poppy originates from the Mediterranean according to botanists, it is often thought that we are dealing with a 'Wanderwort', which was borrowed into Indo-European at PIE date. Fur.: 218 compares βηκώνιον· εἶδος βοτάνης and concludes to a Pre-Greek form, but this is improbable.

μήλη [f.] 'chirurgical probe' (Hp., AP). ⊲GR?⊳
•COMP As a second member in πλατυ-μήλη 'broad probe' (medic.) and other determinatives (Risch IF 59 (1949): 285), ἀμφί-μηλον [n.] 'probe with two ends' (medic.).
•DER μηλόω [v.] 'to probe' (Hp., Ar.), also (med.) 'to paint wool' (Eust., H.), with μήλωσις 'probing', μηλω-τή, -τίς, -τρίς, -τρίδιον 'próbe' (medic.); μηλ-αφάω [v.] 'to probe' (Sophr., H., EM, Eust.), after ψηλαφάω; μήλωθρον 'painted wool' (Eust., H.).
•ETYM Prellwitz proposed a pre-form PGr. mas-lā-* derived from the root of μαίομαι, aor. μάσσασθαι 'to touch, examine'. Possible, but uncertain.

μηλολόνθη [f.] 'beetle, gold-beetle, dung-beetle' (Ar. Nu. 764, Arist.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Also μηλολάνθη (Poll.), μηλάνθη (Herod.).
•COMP χρυσο-μηλολόνθιον (Ar. V. 1341).
•DER μηλολόνθιον (sch. Ar. V. 1332).
•ETYM From μῆλον ὀλόνθιον, properly "fig-sheep"; it consists of μῆλον 'sheep' and ὄλονθος 'wild fig', because many beetles are parasitic of figs and other plants. The formation is like ἱππο-πόταμος (for ἵππος ποτάμιος). It was reshaped to μηλολάνθη by folk etymology, based on ἄνθος; thence (after οἰνάνθη 'blossom of the vine', etc.) μηλάνθη. Extensive treatment in Strömberg 1944: 5ff.

μῆλον 1 [n.] 'apple' (Il.), also of other stonefruits (Hp., Dsc.), '(seed-)capsule of a rose' (Thpr.), metaph. plur. 'breasts, cheeks, tonsils, apple-like beaker' (Ar., Theoc., medic., pap., inscr.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Dor. Aeol. μᾶλον.
•COMP As a first member in μῆλ-οψ 'apple-colored' = 'yellow' (η 104), μαλο-πάραυος 'with apple-like cheeks' (Theoc.); μηλ-άπιον [n.] name of a fruit (medic., Plin.), etc. As a second member in determinatives, e.g. γλυκύ-μαλον, -μηλον 'sweet-apple' (Sapph. [but cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 10], Call.), μελί-μηλον 'summer apple, Pyrus praecox' (Dsc.), also 'apple mead' (medic.) for μηλό-μελι (Dsc.); cf. κοκκύ-μηλον; cf. further ►ἐπιμηλίς.

•DER A. Substantives: 1. μηλέη, -α 'apple-tree' (Od.); 2. μηλίς, μαλίς [f.] = μηλέα (Ibyc., Theoc.), 'yellow pigment' (Plu.), name of a distemper of asses, perhaps 'glanders' (Arist.); 3. μηλίτης οἶνος 'apple-, quince-wine' (Plu., Dsc.); 4. μηλίσκα [n.pl.] name of cups shaped like apples (Delos III[a]); 5.Μηλ-ιάδες [f.pl.] 'fruit-tree nymphs' (Poll.), like κρην-ιάδες; 6. μήλωθρον [n.] = ἄμπελος λευκή (Thphr., Dsc.), cf. ψίλωθρον 'id.' from ψιλόω, πύρωθρον = πύρεθρον.
B. Adjectives: 7. μήλινος, μάλινος 'made of apples, apple-colored' (Sapph., Thphr.); 8. μήλειος 'concerning the apple' (Nic., A. R.); 9. μηλώδης 'apple-like' (Gal.).
C. Verb: 10. μηλίζω 'to resemble an apple (in color)' (medic.). Perhaps the island name Μῆλος; see Heubeck Glotta 25 (1936): 271.
•ETYM Mediterranean word. From Greek stems Lat. mālum, mēlum, with mālinus 'apple-colored', mēlinus 'of quince-apples'; see WH s.v. 1. mālus. The word was formerly connected with Hitt. maḫla-, but this appears to have a different meaning 'grape, vine, twig of a vine', see Cuny REA 20 (1918): 364f. It can hardly be related to ἀμάμαξυς, as per Fur.: 212.

μῆλον 2 [n.] 'small cattle, sheep and goats' (Il.). ⊲IE? meh₁lo-* 'small cattle'⊳ •VAR Mostly plur. -α. μηλάτων (Lyc. 106) after προβάτων.
•DIAL Also Dor.
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. μηλο-βότης, Dor. -τας 'shepherd' (Pi., E.), also -βοτήρ (Σ 529, h. Merc. 286) in verse-final -βοτῆρας, after the simplex; μηλάταν· τὸν ποιμένα. Βοιωτοί (H.), haplological for μηλ-ηλάταν or for μηλόταν after βοηλάταν (Bechtel 1921, 1: 307); on ►μηλολόνθη, see s.v. Rarely as a second member, only in a few bahuvrīhis, e.g. πολύ-μηλος 'with many sheep' (Il.); also in PNs, e.g. Boeot. Πισί-μειλος.
•DER μήλειος 'pertaining to the small cattle' (Ion., E.), μηλόται· ποιμένες (H.), μηλωτή [f.] 'sheepskin' (Philem. Com., Hell.), like κηρωτή etc., with Μηλώσιος epithet of Zeus (Corc., Naxos), prop. "who is wrapped in a sheepskin" (Nilsson 1941(1): 395f.).
•ETYM An old word for 'small cattle', which is well-attested in Celtic, e.g. OIr. mil [n.] 'small animal', and is sporadically found in WGm. too, e.g. in OLFr. māla 'cow', MoDu. maal 'young cow'. Opposed to these words, which may all go back on a pre-form meh₁lo-*, stands Arm. mal 'sheep' with a-vocalism, as well as Ukr. mal' [f.] 'small cattle, young sheep', Ru. (Crimea) malíč 'kind of Crimea-sheep'. It seems obvious to connect these words with the Slavic adjective for 'small', e.g. OCS malъ, Ru. mályj. One step further is the Gm. word for 'small, narrow' in Go. smals, etc., which is often used of small cattle, e.g. ON smali [m.] 'small animal', OHG smalaz fihu 'small cattle'. If we posit IE (s)meh₁l-*, (s)moh₁l- (OCS malъ, etc.), and (s)mh₁l- (Arm. mal, Go. smals, etc.), it seems possible to bring together all words mentioned. For Arm. mal, Ačaṙyan 1977: 224 (approved in Clackson 1994: 232[250]) proposes a loan from Arabic māl 'possession; sheep'.

μήν 1 [pcl.] confirming pcl., 'honestly, certainly; truly' (Il.). ⊲IE sme* 'really, true'⊳ •VAR Dor. Aeol. μάν.

•ETYM Commonly compared with the asseverating pcl. Skt. sma, smā, but the exact relation with this form and with μά remains unclear. The particle ►μέν 'really, true', which is functionally identical and related in meaning, can hardly be separated from ►μήν. Like ►δή beside ►δέ, μήν must have undergone vowel shortening as a result of a weakening of its function; this shortening then entered Attic and the other dialectal areas from the epic and Ionic scientific language. See Leumann Mus. Helv. 6 (1949): 85ff.; extensively on μήν Schwyzer 1950: 569f. See ►μά.

μήν 2 [m.] 'month' (Il.), also 'moon-sickle (Ion., Ar., Att. inscr., Thphr.). ⊲IE meh₁nōt*, meh₁n-es-s* 'moon, month'⊳ •VAR Also Att. μείς, Dor. μής, El. μεύς; gen. μηνός, Aeol. μῆννος.
•COMP μηνο-ειδής 'formed like a moon-sickle' (IA), PN Μηνό-δωρος, also μηνί-αρχος, -άρχης [m.] 'monthly prefect' (pap. IV[a]). after ταξί-αρχος etc.; ἠλιτό-μηνος 'missing the right month' (T 118; cf. s.v.), ἐπι-μήν-ιος 'lasting a month, monthly' (IA).
•DER μήν-η 'month' (Il.), like σελήνη; -άς 'id.' (E.); μην-ίσκος [m.] 'moonsickle', especially of objects in the shape of a moon-sickle (Ar., Arist.); μην-ιαῖος 'a month old, monthly' (Hp., LXX, pap.), -ιεῖος 'monthly' (Hell. pap.), μην-αῖος 'belonging to the month' (Orac. apud Lyd. Mens.; probably from μήνη); μηνιαστεία [f.] 'monthly achievement' (pap. III[p]), but cf. Μηνιασταί [m.pl.] 'adorers of Μήν' (Rhodos); μήνιον [n.] (botanical) 'peony' (Ps.-Dsc.), from its astrological use, see Strömberg 1940: 133.
•ETYM From the oblique cases (gen. μῆνν-ος < mēnsos*, etc.), an analogical nom. mēns* arose, whence mens* by Osthoff's Law. By subsequent loss of the nasal and compensatory lengthening, μείς and μής developed. The new nom. μήν arose by analogy with gen. μηνός, etc. (after simplification of the -νν-), and El. μεύς is built on the model of Ζηνός : Ζεύς.
Originally, a disyllabic nom. mēnōs-* (with lengthened grade) or mēnōt-* (with alternating -t-) existed beside the obl. stem μηνσ- < IE mēns-. Thence arose Lith. mė̃nuo 'moon, month', Go. menoþs 'month', etc. The disyllabic form is also seen in Lith. mė̃nes-is 'month'. On monosyllabic mēns-* are based both Lat. mēns-is (gen.pl. mēnsum) and Skt. mās- 'moon, month' < PIIr. maHas-* < meh₁ns-*. The development of the calendrical meaning 'month' was accompanied by the creation of new expressions for 'moon' (σελήνη, lūna, etc.). Original derivation from meh₁-* 'measure' (see ►μῆτις), from the role of the moon as a measure of time, is quite possible.

μῆνιγξ, -ιγγος [f.] 'skin, cuticle', especially 'cerebral membrane' (Hp., Arist., Gal.), also 'cuticle in the eye' (Emp., Arist.),'drum of the ear' (Arist.). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •COMP As a first member in μηνιγγο-φύλαξ [m.], name of a chirurgical instrument (medic.).
•DER Diminutive μηνίγγιον (gloss.); MoGr. μηνιγγῖτις [f.] 'inflammation of the cerebral membrane', MoFr. méningite (Redard 1949: 103f.).
•ETYM The semantic parallel with words like Lat. membrana 'thin, soft skin' and Slavic words for 'inner part of the skin, etc.' (e.g. SCr. mézdra, Sln. mę́zdra, Ru. mezdrá), all ultimately derived from the root of IE mēms-* 'meat', is striking.

However, μῆνιγξ cannot be combined with them. The unexplained -ν-, together with the suffix -ιγγ-, clearly points to a Pre-Greek word.

μῆνις [f.] 'wrath', especially of gods, but also of Achilles (Il.). ⋖?⋗
•VAR Dor. μᾶνις, -ιος, -ιδος.
•COMP As a second member in ἔμ-μανις 'filled with wrath' (Cret.), on the formation Sommer 1948: 113.
•DER μηνίω, Dor. μανίω [v.] 'to rage' (Il., Hdt., Hell.), aor. -ῖσαι, rarely with ἀπο-, ἐπι- (ἀντι-, ἐκ-); μήνι-μα [n.] '(reason for) wrath' (Il.), -θμός 'raging' (P 62, 202, 282); also μηνιάω 'id.' (LXX, D. H.), on the formation Schwyzer: 732, and μηνίαμα (LXX); enlargements -ιάζω (Et. Gud.), -ίζω (An. Ox.) and -ισμα (Iolkos III[a]). From μῆνις (μηνίω?) also μηνίτης (-τής?) [m.] 'a man filled with rage' (Arr. Epict.).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. The identification with Lat. mānēs 'souls of the departed' by Ehrlich KZ 41 (1907): 294f. is now abandoned. The explanation from *μνᾱ-νις (from the root of μέμνημαι by Schwyzer RhM 80 (1931): 213ff. was later doubted by Schwyzer himself (Schwyzer 1939: 495); instead, he proposes connection with μαιμάω. The semantically obvious connection with μένος and cognates is impossible because of the long ᾱ in Doric (see Björck 1950: 177f.); on μηνίτης, see also Radermacher RhM 63 (1908): 444ff.

μηνύω [v.] 'to notify, betray, announce' (h. Merc.). ⋖IE? *meh_2- 'notify'⋗ •VAR Dor. μανύω, aor. -ῦσαι, etc.
•COMP Also with prefix: κατα-, ἐκ-.
•DER μήνυμα [n.] 'indication, information' (Th., Men.), (κατα -)μήνυσις 'id.' (Att.); μηνυτής [m.] 'informer' (Att.), also -τήρ 'id.' (A. Eu. 245, Orph. H.), μανύτωρ 'id.' (AP); μηνυτικός 'containing information; boastful' (Ph., D. C.); μήνυτρον, usualy plur. -α 'reward for infomation' (h. Merc.) with μηνυτρίζομαι 'to be denunciated (for a reward)' (Hell. pap.; also H. as an explanation of μηνύεσθαι).
•ETYM μηνύω is either a primary thematic νυ-present (with present suffix introduced in the aorist) or a denominative from a pre-form *μῆνυς or *μηνῦς. The word remains without obvious cognates. LIV² takes up the connection with the BSl. group of Lith. móti, OCS namajati 'to beckon (with the hand)' and reconstructs *meh_2- 'to notify'.

μῆον [n.] Name of an umbellate, 'bald money, spignel, Meum athamanticum' (Dsc., Plin.). ⋖PG?(V)⋗ •VAR μεῖον (v.l.).
•ETYM Carnoy REGr. 71 (1958): 96 connects mei- 'to be refreshing', which does not convince. Fur.: 235[35] compares μαῖον 'Trifolium arvense', which would point to substrate origin.

μῆριγξ [?] · ἄκανθα γινομένη ἐν τοῖς ἐρίοις τῶν προβάτων 'thorns which grow in the fleece of cattle', i.e. 'bristles'? (H.). ⋖PG(S,V)⋗ •VAR σμῆριγξ· πόα, καὶ εἶδος ἀκάνθης 'grass, also a kind of thorn'; σμήριγγες· πλεκταί, σειραί, βόστρυχοι 'braids, cords, curls of hair'. καὶ τῶν κυνῶν ἐν τοῖς μηροῖς καὶ τοῖς αὐχέσιν ὀρθαὶ τρίχες 'hairs which stand upright on the shank and neck of dogs' (H.); a kind of hairdress (Lyc. 37, Poll. 2, 22).
•ETYM In the sense of 'braids, cords', σμῆριγξ agrees with ► μήρινθος. The occasional meaning 'rope, string' may have been caused by the similarity with μήρινθος, μηρύω. The meaning 'ἐν τοῖς μηροῖς... τρίχες' is clearly a folk-etymological attempt to connect μῆριγξ with μηρός. Fur.: 289[78] separates the gloss as ἄκανθα from the other words. All of them are clearly of Pre-Greek origin, of account of the suffix -ιγγ-, the prothetic σ-, and the lack of possible cognates.

μήρινθος [f.] 'cord, thread' (Il.). ⋖PG(S)⋗ •VAR σμήρινθος [f.] (Pl. Lg. 644 e). Cf. μήρινς Orph. A. 597, and further σμῆριγξ, -ιγγος 'hair' (Lyc. Poll. 2,22, H.); σμήριγγες· πλεκταί, σειραί, βόστρυχοι (H.), see ► μῆριγξ.
•ETYM Because of its suffix, μήρινθος is probably Pre-Greek. Adaptation to μηρύομαι has also been assumed, a word that was probably inherited. However, there is little reason for this: see ► μηρύομαι.

μηρός [m.] 'the upper meaty part of the shank, shank' (Il.). ⋖IE? *$m\bar{e}(m)s$-ro- 'fleshy'⋗ •VAR Plur. both μηροί [m.] (O 146) and μῆρα [n.].
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. μηρο-τραφής 'with fleshy shanks' (Str., AP), σύμ-μηρος 'with the thighs closed' (Hp.).
•DER μηρία [n.pl.] 'thigh-bones' (Il.), -ίον [sg.] (Posidon.); μηρ-ιαῖος 'belonging to the shanks' (X.), like νωτ-ιαῖος, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 49); μηρίζω [v.] 'to strike on the thigh' (D. L.), after γαστρίζω; δια-μηρίζω [v.] 'to hold the thighs separated' with -ισμός (Ar., Zeno), also κατα- 'id.' (Suid.).
•ETYM According to Vine 2002: 333, μῆρα continues an old collective plural *mēms-reh_2, although one would expect Greek to develop anaptyxis as in μεμβρ-. Via a back-formation *mēms-ro-, this collective may have been the basis for the thematic neuter for 'flesh': IE *mēms-(o-), seen in Skt. māṃsá- [n.], Go. mimz, Ru. mjáso, ToB mīsa [pl.], all 'meat'. We also find a form IE *mēs- (with unexplained lack of nasal) in Skt. mā́s- [n.] 'id.'. Reflexes of *mēms-ro- can be found in Lat. membra [n.pl.] 'limbs, body parts', OIr. mír 'piece, bite', CS męzdra 'inner side of a rind'. To account for the Greek forms μηρός and μῆρα, it would be best to depart from the nasalless pre-form *mēs-ro- seen in Skt. mā́s-. Unrelated is ► μῆνιγξ.

μηρυκάζω [v.] 'to ruminate' (Arist., Thphr.), -άομαι. ⋖?⋗ •VAR μαρ- (Ath. 9, 390f, Jul. Gal. 314d), -ίζω (Gal.).
•COMP Also with ἀνα-, ἀπο-, (LXX, Ph., Plu. et al.).
•DER μηρυκισμός [m.] (LXX), ἀνα-μηρύκησις [f.] (Aristeas) 'ruminating'; back-formation μήρυξ [m.] name of a (supposedly) ruminating fish, 'Scarus cretensis' (Arist.), see Strömberg 1943: 53.
•ETYM The three verbs μηρυκ-άομαι, -άζω, -ίζω are derived either as denominatives from a noun with a suffix -κ-, or as enlargements of a primary *μηρύκ-, which may itself have an enlargement -κ- (cf. ἐρύ-κ-ω, ἐρυκ-άνω, -ανάω to ἐρύομαι or ἐρύω). Frisk connects *μηρύω, -ύομαι 'to wrap, wind', referring to the turning movements of the mouth and muscles of a ruminator; unconvincing.

μηρύομαι [v.] 'to draw up, furl, wind (up)' (μ 170, Hes., Hp., X., Plb., Hero). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Dor. μαρ- (Theoc., cf. below), aor. μηρύσασθαι, perf. μεμήρυκα (Hp.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐκ-, περι-, συν-.
•DER μήρυμα [n.] 'knot, strand' (Hero, Ph. Bel., Nic.), -μάτιον (Hero); συμμήρυ-σις [f.] 'winding together, connection' (M. Ant.). *μῆρυς 'clew' is posited by Fur.: 218 on account of βηρυσσεύειν· σπειρειν (supposed to stand for σπειρᾶν), ἑλίσσειν 'to wind' (H.); which he assumes to be a denominative of *βήρυσσα = *μῆρυς.
•ETYM The word is probably Pre-Greek, on account of the variant in β-. Fur.: 289 suggests that μηρύομαι is a denominative of *μῆρυς. See ► μήρινθος.

μήτηρ [f.] 'mother' (Il.). ◄IE meh$_2$ter- 'mother'► •VAR Dor. μάτηρ; gen. μητρός, acc. μητέρα, etc.
•DIAL Myc. ma-te.
•COMP Many compounds, e.g. μητρο-πάτωρ 'mother's father, grandfather through mother' (Il.) and other kinship-names, μητρό-πολις [f.] 'mother-state' (Pi., Simon., IA), ἀ-μήτωρ 'motherless' (Hdt.), poet. also 'unmotherly' in μήτηρ ἀμήτωρ (S.); probably in ► Δημήτηρ. On the compounds see Sommer 1948: 147, 176f., Risch IF 59 (1949): 17f., 59 and 261, Wackernagel Glotta 14 (1925): 38.
•DER 1. Diminutives: ματρύλ(λ)α [f.] 'brothel-hostess' (Phryn., Eust.) with ματρυλ-εῖον 'brothel' (Din., Men.), see Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 224, Björck 1950: 67; μητράριον = matercula (gloss.). 2. μήτρα, Ion. -η [f.] 'uterus, womb' (IA), metaph. 'hardwood, marrow' (Thphr.), see Strömberg 1937: 122ff., also 'queen bee' (Arist.), see Sommer 1948: 147[4]; μητρίδιος "having a womb", 'rich in seeds' (Ar. Lys. 549), after κουρίδιος, νυμφίδιος? 3. μητρίς (scil. γῆ) [f.] 'land of the mother' (Pherecr.), after πατρίς. 4. μητρικός 'regarding the mother' (Arist., Hell. inscr., pap.). 5. μητρό-θεν (Dor. μα-) 'from mother's side' (Pi.).
6. Denominative verbs: μητρ-ιάζω 'to honour the (Great) Mother' (Poll.), after θυσι-άζω (cf. Schwyzer: 735), -ίζω 'to belong to the (Great) Mother' (Iamb.), -άζω 'to resemble the mother' (gloss.). 7. PN Μητρεῖς (Schulze 1933a: 419), Μᾶτρυς (Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 220). 8. See also ► μήτρως and ► μητρυιά.
•ETYM Old inherited word for 'mother'. It has been retained in all branches except in Hitt. (which has anna-): Skt. mātár-, Lat. māter, Lith. mótė 'woman, wife', (dial.) 'mother', OHG muoter. The word does not go back to a nursery word mā* (see μᾶ), as it contained a laryngeal (meh$_2$-ter-*), as shown by the acute accent of Lithuanian.

μῆτις, -ιος, -ιδος [f.] 'measure, skill, craft' (Il.). On the concept of μῆτις, see Detienne and Vernant 1974. ◄IE meh$_1$- 'measure'► •COMP As a second member in πολύ-μητις 'capable of many machinations, inventive', of Odysseus, also of Hephaistos (Hom.), ἀγκυλο-μήτης 'having crooked counsels, cunning', of Kronos, also of Prometheus (Hom.).
•DER 1. μητιέτᾰ [nom.sg.m.] (originally vocative?), epithet of Zeus, 'who possesses μῆτις', metrically conditioned form at the end of verse for *μητῖτα, cf. νεφεληγερ-έτα (Ζεύς); acc. μητιέτην (metr. inscr. Tegea), nom.- έτης (Corn.). 2. μητιόεις 'imbued with μ.', of Ζεύς, φάρμακα, etc. (δ 227, h. Ap. 344, Hes.).

Denominative verb: aor. μητίσασθαι, fut. μητίσεσθαι 'to ponder, design, devise' (Hom., Emp., A. R.); pres. μητίομαι (Pi. P. 2, 92); as a present, epic poetry uses μητιάω, -άομαι (μητιόων, μητιάασθαι, etc.) for metrical reasons (after the type in -ιάω), also prefixed ἐπι-, συν- (Hom., A. R.). Verbal noun μητίματα [pl.] (H. s.v. μήτεα, for μήδεα?).
•ETYM An original verbal noun meaning 'measuring', μῆτις is derived from the root meh$_1$- found in Skt. mimāti 'measures', etc. The formation meh$_1$-ti-* itself is found in an isolated Germanic word, OE mǣd [f.] 'measure', and is presupposed by the denominative Lat. mētior 'to measure'.
Another Greek formation is μήτρα 'land-measure', ablauting with ► μέτρον, with the instrument suffix -tro-*. Other languages also preserved isolated verbal nouns in various meanings, e.g. in Germanic: Go. mel 'time', OHG māl 'point of time, (time for) meal'. The unassibilated -τι- (for -σι-) must be explained as an archaic element of Aeolic (and perhaps Doric). See further ► μήδομαι.

μήτρα 1 'uterus'. ⇒μήτηρ.

μήτρα 2 'land-measure, κλῆρος'. ⇒μέτρον.

μήτρως [m.] 'male relative of the mother, maternal uncle, grandfather' (Il.). ◄IE meh$_2$tēr* 'mother', meh$_2$tr-ōu-* 'relative of the mother'► •VAR Dor. μάτρως, -ωος and -ω (further forms in Schwyzer: 480 and in LSJ).
•DER μητρώϊος, -ῷος (Dor. μα-) properly 'belonging to the μήτρωες, i.e. to the mother's family' (τ 410), later referring to μήτηρ directly: 'what belongs to the mother, maternal' (A.); τὸ Μητρῷον (scil. ἱερόν) 'the temple of the Great Mother Cybele', which was used as a state archive in Athens (Att.); τὰ Μητρῷα (scil. ἱερά) 'the temple-service of Cybele' (D. H.); with μητρῳακός 'belonging to the service of Cybele' and μητρῴζω 'to celebrate the Cybele-festivals' (late); μητρωϊκός = μητρικός (Delos II[a]). By-form μήτρων (Dor. μά-), -ωνος [m.] (inscr. Asia Minor; originating from the acc. μήτρων). μητρυιά (Dor. μα-, Ion. -ιή) [f.] 'stepmother' (Il.) with μητρυι-ώδης 'like a stepmother' (Plu.), -άζω 'to act as stepmother' (gloss.); jocular innovation μητρυιός [m.] 'stepfather' (Theopomp. Com., Hyp.).
•ETYM If μητρυιά is connected with μήτρως (following the communis opinio, but there is in fact no decisive evidence for this), we must start from a long -ōu- > ō, of which -υ- in μητρυιά would be the zero grade (cf. Schwyzer: 479f.). Regular correspondences with μητρυιά (probably for older *μήτρυιᾰ, gen. -υιᾶς, see Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 574[1], Schwyzer: 469[8]) are found in Arm. mawru, gen. mawrui (< mātrui̯i-*) 'stepmother, mother-in-law', and perhaps also (though further off) in OE modrige 'sister's mother' < PGm. mōdrui̯i̯ōn-*. The formation would have to be of pre-Proto-Greek age. Cf. Kuiper 1942: 56ff. See ► μήτηρ.

μηχανή [f.] 'expedient, contrivance, cunning; means, tool, machine, device' (IA, Dor.). ◄PG(S,V)► •VAR Dor. μαχανά.

•COMP μηχανο-ποιός 'machine-builder, engineer, machinist' (Att.), ἀ-μήχανος (Dor. -ά-) 'without any means, helpless; unmanagable, irresistible, impossible' (Il.), partly associated with μηχανάομαι; thence ἀμηχαν-ία, -ίη (ι 295), -έω (Ion.).
•DER 1. Uncertain Μαχα-νεύς epithet of Zeus (Argos, Tanagra, Cos, since V[a]), also a month name (Corcyra), Μαχανεῖος month name (Chalcedon); Μαχαν-ίς epithet of Athena (Cos), -ῖτις epithet of Aphrodite and Athena (Megalopolis). 2. μηχανιώτης 'deviser, machinator', of Hermes (h. Merc. 436; after ἀγγελι-ώτης, etc.). 3. μηχανάριος 'engineer' (pap.). 4. μηχαν-όεις 'inventive' (S.), -ικός 'id., pertaining to machines, mechanical', subst. 'engine builder' (X., Arist.). 5. μηχάνωμα (Dor. μα-) [n.] 'apparatus, crane' (Thphr., Delphi), enlarged from μηχανή (Chantraine 1933: 187). 6. Denominative verb μηχανάομαι (-άω) 'to devise (with ruse), realize, construct, manufacture artificially' (Il.), aor. μηχανήσασθαι, etc., also with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-, ἀντι-, προσ-; hence μηχάν-ημα 'invention, apparatus, mechanical device' (Hp., D., trag.), -ησις 'id.' (Hp., Plb.), -ητής [m.] 'deviser of war machines' (sch.), -ητικός 'inventive' (X.). Besides, we find μῆχαρ [n.] (indecl.) 'means, expedient' (A., Lyc.) and μῆχος (Dor. μᾶ-) [n.] 'id.' (Il., Hdt.); unlike μηχανή, both words are dying and remain without compounds and derivatives.
•ETYM Dor. μαχανά, IA μηχανή are not derived (as traditionally assumed) from a heteroclitic *μᾶχαρ, *μάχανος. They have oxytone accentuation, like the verbal nouns φυλακή, κομιδή. Beside the r/n-stem, we find an s-stem μῆχος, according to a regular pattern. The root is usually recognized in verbal forms with a short vowel in Germanic and Slavic, e.g. Go. mag 'can, is able', MHG mag; OCS mošti, 1sg. mogǫ, Ru. moč', 1sg. mogú 'can, be able'. These verbs have accompanying nouns Go. mahts 'power, might', etc. = OCS moštь, Ru. moč' 'id.' < QIE mag^h-ti-. Beside this ti-derivation, we find an n-stem in OHG magan, megin, ON magn, megin 'power, might'. It is doubtful if Lith. magė́ti, 1sg. magù 'to please, be pleasant', mė̃gti, 1sg. mė̃gstu 'to love, like', etc. can be connected with μηχανή, already in view of the ablaut *ē : Gr. ā.
Since PIE had no a*, the question is how we can derive the ablauting forms. In Beekes MKNAW 61 (1998): 10f., I pointed out that a laryngeal cannot have been vocalized to Slavic o*. This means that the Germanic and Slavic forms (which are closely related, both semantically and formally) cannot derive from mh_2g^h-. As a consequence, the Greek word remains isolated.
The suffix -αν- is typical for Pre-Greek words; note that Greek has no forms with *μᾰχ- either that could point to a zero grade. In fact, the connection with ► μάγγανον (Van Beek p.c.) proves that μηχανή is Pre-Greek.
Lat. māchina was borrowed from Dor. μαχανά; Pashto mēčan 'handmill' from μηχανή (Morgenstierne Acta or. 7 (1929): 200; Morgenstierne Acta Orbis 18: 143); for the meaning, cf. VLat. māchina also 'millstone, handmill'.

μία [f.] 'one'. ⇒εἷς.

μιαίνω [v.] 'to stain, soil, defile' especially 'to defile through bloodcrime' (Il.); in Hom. also a technical term for coloring or dying (Δ 141-7), see Myc. below. ◂PG?, IE? *smei- 'smear'▸

•VAR Aor. μιᾶναι, μιῆναι, pass. μιανθῆναι (Il.), fut. μιανῶ (Cyrene, Antipho), pass. μιανθήσομαι, perf.pass. μεμίασμαι (Att.), act. μεμίαγκα (Plu.), μιᾷ [3sg.subj.aor.pass.] beside fut. μιασεῖ (Cyrene).
•DIAL Myc. mi-ja-ro, probably of colored fabrics.
•COMP Rarely with prefix as ἐκ-, κατα- συν-. Compounded μιαι-φόνος 'committing a defiling murder, defiled by murder', epithet of Ares (Il. E and Φ, B., Hdt., E.), μιη-φόνος (Archil.), μιαι-φονέω (Att.), -ία (D., D. S., Plu.). Isolated are μίαχος· μίασμα, and μιαχρόν· <οὐ> καθαρόν (H.).
•DER μίασμα [n.] 'defilement, abomination, horrible stain' (IA), on the formation see Porzig 1942: 241; μιασμός [m.] 'defilement' (LXX, Plu.), μίανσις [f.] 'id.' (LXX); μιάστωρ [m.] 'defiler, avenger' (trag., late prose), -σ- like in μίασμα, cf. also ἀλάστωρ; μιάντης [m.] 'id.' (EM), ἀ-μίαν-τος 'unstained' (Thgn., Pi.), of a stone = ἄσβεστος (Arist., Plin., Dsc.). Further μιαρός (Il.), μιερός (Call.) 'defiled, soiled, polluted', especially through bloodcrime, with μιαρ-ία (Att.), -ότης (An. Ox.).
•ETYM Although the interchange r/n* in μιαίνω : μιαρός looks Indo-European, clear cognates are unknown. Improbable or uncertain hypotheses are listed in Frisk.
The first member in μιαι-φόνος is probably verbal, like in ταλαί-πωρος, so properly "ὁ μιαίνων φόνῳ". Beside it, we find μιη-φόνος, probably secondary like Ἀλθη- beside Ἀλθαι-μένης.
Blanc BSL 96 (2001): 153-179 connects Go. bi-smeitan 'to besmear, strike', but there is no evidence for sm- in Greek; moreover, the development of meaning within Germanic is not evident.
If there is no etymology, μιαίνω is rather Pre-Greek. Did it have $m^y a(n)$-, with palatal m*-? We know that an /a/ could be pronounced as [e] after a palatalized consonant; this might be the origin of the ε/α-alternation in adjectives of the type μιαρός/μιερός.

μίγνυμι ⇒μείγνυμι.

μῖκρός [adj.] 'small, short, little' (E 801, γ 296, trag., Att.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also σμικρός (P 757, Hes. Op. 361, Ion., trag., Att.), μικκός (Dor. Boeot.), μικός (Att. inscr. IV[a], Trag. Adesp. 31, pap.).
•COMP Very frequent as a first member, especially in scientific and technical language.
•DER Diminutives and hypocoristics: μικύλος (Mosch. 1, 13); μικύθινον· τὸ μικρὸν καὶ νήπιον 'infant' (H.); *μικκιχος (cf. ὀσσίχος etc., Chantraine 1933: 404) in Lacon. μικκιχιδδόμενος 'under age' (inscr.), from *μικκιχίζομαι; cf. also the PN below. Abstract: (σ)μικρότης [f.] 'trifle, insignificance' (Anaxag., Pl.). Denominative: (σ)μικρύνω [v.] 'to diminish, reduce, belittle' (Demetr. Eloc., LXX), also with prefix, especially κατα-; κατασμικρίζω 'id.' (Arist., Phld.), σμικρίζεσθαι· διαττᾶσθαι 'to sift' (H.); ἀποσμικρόω 'id.' (Tim. Lex.). PNs, e.g. Σμικρίνης [m.] "niggard" (Men.), like Αἰσχίνης, etc.; Μίκων, Μικίων, Μίκυθος, -ίων, Σμικυθίων (Leumann 1950: 155, Schulze 1933a: 671).
•ETYM The group of words has a familiar and colloquial aspect, as is shwon by the variants μικός and geminated μικκός. The initial interchange in μικρός and (older) σμικρός is unexplained and (also) points to Pre-Greek origin. The connection with the comparative μείων, assuming that the κ was taken from the opposite μακρός, fails because σμικρός is clearly older: the latter cannot be combined with μείων (which belongs to Skt. minā́ti 'reduce', etc., and has no s-mobile). Old alternation of suffixes in μικ-ρό-ς : μικ-υ-θός (Bloomfield Lang. 1 (1925): 94) is improbable.

μῖλαξ 1 'taxus, bindweed'. •VAR μῖλος. ➝σμῖλαξ.

μῖλαξ 2 [?] · ἡλικία 'age-group' · ἔνιοι δὲ μέλλαξ. καὶ παρ' Ἑρμίππῳ ἐν Θεοῖς (fr. 33) ἀγνοήσας Ἀρτεμίδωρος· ἐκεῖ γὰρ μῖλάξ ἐστιν, δηλοῖ δὲ τὸν δημοτικόν 'some have μέλλαξ, among them Artemidorus on Hermippus's "Gods" (fr. 33), but wrongfully, as μῖλαξ is found there, and it means a kind person' (H.). DELG adds that the gloss may be partly corrupt, referring to μέλλαξ in H., i.e. μέλ[λ]ακες· νεώτεροι 'the younger ones' (corrected to μελλ- by Salm.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •ETYM Identical with ►μῖλαξ 1 as a metaphor? Baunack Phil. 70 (1911): 461 supposes a cross of μεῖραξ (pronounced μῖρ-) and μέλλαξ (?). The word is Pre-Greek on account of the variant seen in ►μέλλαξ.

μιλ(λ)ός [adj.] · βραδύς, χαῦνος 'slow, loose, spongy; frivolous' (H.), cf. ἀργός· μιλός, βραδύς and νωχέλεια 'slowness'· .... μιλότης (-ώτις cod.) (H.), νωχελής· ὁ μιλός, βραδύς, ἄχρηστος 'useless; ineffective' (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •DER PN Μίλων (inscr.).
•ETYM Unexplained; cf. Latte Glotta 34 (1955): 191f. DELG compares ►μῖλαξ 2. The variation λ/λλ points to a Pre-Greek word. Fur.: 226, 317 compares πτίλος 'having an eye-disease through which the eye-lashes fall out', but this is not very convincing.

μίλτος [f.] 'ruddle, red earth, red color, cinnabar, vermillion, red lead' (Hdt., com., Att. inscr.), also 'rust' in plants = ἐρυσίβη (Paus. Gr.), and a taboo for 'blood' (PMag.). ⊲PG⊳ •DIAL Myc. mi-to-we-sa /miltowessa/.
•COMP μιλτο-πάρῃος 'with red-painted cheeks', of ships (Hom.), ἔμ-, σύμ-μιλτος 'painted red' (Dsc., Lebadea).
•DER μιλτάριον = 'blood' (PMag.), μιλτεῖον 'vessel for storing μ.' (AP), μίλτ-ειος 'of μ.' (AP), -ώδης 'μ.-colored, rich in μ.' (Eub., com., Str.), -ίτης [m.] name of a red stone (Plin.), -όω 'to smear with μ.' (Hdt., Ar.). PN Μιλτεύς (Epid.VI[a]), or an appellative; Μιλτ-ιάδης (after Στρεψι-άδης), Μιλτώ [f.], etc.
•ETYM A technical foreign word. The connection with μέλας 'black' is phonetically as well as morphologically impossible, and semantically uncompelling. The word is undoubtedly Pre-Greek.

μίλφοι [m.pl.] a disease, 'falling off of the eyelashes' (Dsc., Gal.). ⊲PG?⊳
•DER μίλφωσις [f.] 'the falling off of the eyelashes' (Gal.), cf. ἕλκωσις, ἴλλωσις, κνίδωσις, etc.; back-formation μιλφός [m.] 'sbd. who suffers from μίλφωσις' (Vett. Val.).
•ETYM Like so many nouns in -φος, μίλφοι is etymologically unclear. Fur.: 225, 317 compares ►πτίλος 'id.' and ►μιλ(λ)ός 'slow' (but see s.v.).

μιμαίκυλον [n.] 'fruit of the κόμαρος' (com., Thphr.), cf. Dawkins JHS 56 (1936): 1. ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Also μεμαίκυλος (Gal.), μιμάκυλος (H.).
•ETYM A foreign word, no doubt Pre-Greek (note the variations). For the ending, cf. ἄκυλος 'acorn' with comparable meaning.

μίμαρκυς, -υος [f.] 'hare-soup, jugged hare', from the intestines with their blood (com.). ⊲PG⊳ •ETYM The form μίμαρκυς seems to display reduplication. A tempting similarity exists with a synonymous Germanic word: OE mearh 'sausage', MoNw. mor 'meat-sausage from intestines', ON mǫrr 'the fat inside a slaughtered animal', etc., PGm. márhu-* < IE márku-* or mórku-*. If related, it would have to be a very old anatomical expression of cattle-breeders, cf. ἤνυστρον 'fourth stomach of a ruminant', which is unlikely. Unrelated are Lat. murcus 'maimed' or Hitt. mark- 'to cut apart' < merǵ-*.
Acc. to Neumann 1961: 85f., μίμαρκυς is a loan from Hitt. or another IE Anatolian language. I agree with Fur.: 366[95] that the word cannot be IE. The reduplication is clearly Pre-Greek.

μιμνήσκω [v.] 'to remind (oneself), remember, heed, care for, make mention' (Il.). ⊲IE mneh₂-* 'remind'⊳ •VAR Usually -ομαι (-ῄσκω, Schwyzer: 709f., Aeol. μιμναισκω [gramm.], μνήσκεται Anacr.); fut. μνήσω, -ομαι, aor. μνῆσαι (Dor. μνᾶσαι), -ασθαι, perf. med. μέμνημαι (Dor. -μνᾱ-, Aeol. -μναι-) with fut. μεμνήσομαι (all Il.), aor. pass. μνησθῆναι (δ 418, Aeol. μνασθῆναι) with fut. μνησθήσομαι (IA).
Also pres. μνάομαι, μνῶμαι, μνώοντο, μνωόμενος, etc. (Il.), 'to woo for one's bride, court' (Od.) 'to solicit' (Hdt., Pi.), προ-μνάομαι 'to court for' (S., Pl., X.); see below.
•COMP Often with prefix, especially ὑπο-, ἀνα-; also παρ-, προσ-υπομιμνήσκω, ἐπ-, συν-, προ-αναμιμνήσκω.
•DER 1. μνῆμα, Dor. Aeol. μνᾶμα [n.] 'memorial, monument, tomb' (Il.) with μνημεῖον, Ion. -ήϊον, Dor. μναμ- 'id.' (Dor., IA), cf. σῆμα : σημεῖον, etc., rare and late -άτιον, -άδιον, -άφιον, -όριον (see ►μεμόριον); μνηματίτης λόγος 'funeral oration' (Choerob., Eust.); ὑπόμνη-μα 'remembrance, note' (Att.) with -ματικός, -ματίζομαι. 2. μνήμη, Dor. μνάμα [f.] 'remembrance, mention' (Dor., IA), μνή-σ-μη (Lycaonia); hence or from μνῆμα: μνημ-ήϊος 'as a remembrance' (Phryg.), -ίσκομαι = μιμνήσκομαι (pap.). 3. μνεία [f.] 'remembrance, mention' (Att.), verbal noun < * μνᾱ-ῐα like πεν-ία etc. (cf. Chantraine 1933: 81). 4. μνῆστις (μνᾶσ-) [f.] 'remembrance, thought, posthumous fame' (ν 280) with -σ- like in μνησθῆναι, μνηστύς, etc.; after λῆστις (see ►λανθάνω) rather than the other way round. 5. ἀνά-, ὑπό-μνη-σις 'remembrance, admonition' (Att.); also μνησι- as a verbal first member in μνησικακέω [v.] 'to remember the (suffered) wrong', whence -ία, -ος (IA). 6. μνηστύς, -ύος [f.] 'courting' (Od.), later replaced by μνηστ-εία, -ευμα (see μνηστεύω). 7. μνηστήρ (μνᾶσ-), -τῆρος [m.] 'wooer' (Od.), on μνηστήρ beside μνηστύς see Fraenkel 1910: 32[2]; also month name μναστήρ (Messene); adjectival 'remembering, reminding' (Pi.), μνήστειρα [f.] 'bride' (AP), 'reminding' (Pi.); μνῆστρον 'betrothal, marriage' (Cod. Just.); προμνήστρ-ια (προ-μνάομαι) [f.] 'matchmaker' (E., Ar., Pl.), -ίς 'id.' (X.). 8. μνήστωρ 'mindful' (A.). 9. μνηστή [f.] 'wooed and won, wedded' (Hom., A. R.), also 'worth remembering' (Sammelb. 6138), πολυ-μνήστη (-ος) 'much wooed' (Od.), also 'mindful; remaining in memory' (Emp., A.); but Ἀ-μνᾶτος (Gortyn); hence μνηστεύω (μναστ-) [v.] 'to woo a wife' (Od.), also 'to apply for a job', with μνήστευμα (E.), -εία (Hell.) 'wooing'. 10. μνήμων (μνά-), -ονος [m., f.] 'mindful' (Od.), often as the title of an office 'notary, registrator' (Halic., Crete, Arist.), first derived from μνῆμα, but also directly associated with the verb. Thence μνημο-σύνη 'remembrance' (Θ 181), also the name of one of the Muses (h. Merc., Hes.); -συνον [n.] 'id.' (Hdt., Th., Ar.); probably poetical; -ος 'for remembrance' (LXX); besides Μναμόν-α (Ar. Lys. 1248), cf. on εὐφρόνη; Μνημ-ώ (Orph.) = Μνημοσύνη. Denominative μνημονεύω [v.] 'to remember' (IA), with μνημόνευ-σις, -μα, etc. Adjective μνημον-ικός 'for remembrance, with good memory' (Att.). 11. PNs like Μνησεύς (Pl.), short name of Μνήσ-αρχος (Boßhardt 1942: 130), Μνασίλλει (Boeot.); Μνασέας; probably a Hellenisation of Sem. *M*ᵊ*naššе* = Μανασση.

•ETYM The above paradigm (including all formations derived from μνᾶ-) is a Greek creation. A monosyllabic IE mneh*$_2$- is represented in classical Skt. a-mnāsiṣuḥ [3pl.aor.] 'they mentioned' (which recalls μνῆσαι); further, in a-mnā-ta- 'not mentioned' and mnāyante 'are mentioned'. It is probable that this is a root extension of men-* 'to remember', but its function is unclear. Other cognate languages present nothing that could be compared directly with the Greek forms.

It has been thought that μνάομαι corresponds exactly to Skt. mnāyate, so from mneh*$_2$-ie/o-, but it was rather analogically formed to (e.g.) the aorist μνήσασθαι; μιμνήσκω may also have been secondarily created, like e.g. κικλήσκω or βιβρώσκω. The meaning 'to woo a woman, court' developed from μνάομαι 'to think of, be mindful of' as a courteous expression; see Benveniste 1954: 13ff. The connection with γυνή < g*^{w}n-h$_2$- should be discarded. See ►μαίνομαι, ►μέμονα, ►μένος.

μῖμος [m., f.] name of an actor, 'mime' (A. Fr. 57, 9, E. Rh. [lyr.], D., Plu., pap.), kind of scenic sketch, founded by the Syracusan Sophron, 'mimus' (Arist.). ⊲PG?⊳

•COMP μιμο-γράφος 'mime-writer' (Hell.), λογό-μιμος [m.] 'actor or writer of spoken mimes' (Hegesand. Hist.), ἀρχί-μιμος [m.] 'chief comedian' (Plu.); as a second member mostly verbal to μιμέομαι, e.g. γυναικό-μιμος 'imitating women' (trag.).

•DER μιμάς, -άδος [f.] 'mimic player (female)' (Ael.), μιμώ [f.] 'ape' (Suid. s.v. πίθηκος), μιμ(ε)ία [f.] 'farce' (Ph.), μιμικός 'regarding the μῖμος, mimic' (Hell.).

Probably denominative μιμέομαι, μιμήσασθαι 'to imitate, mimic, copy (in art)' (h. Ap. 163), also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐκ-, with derivatives: (ἀντι-, ἀπο-, ἐκ-)μίμησις 'imitation, artistic, especially dramatic presentation' (IA), (ἀπο-) μίμημα 'imitation, representation' (IA); (συμ-)μιμητής [m.] 'imitator, artist' (IA), μιμήτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'id.' (Man.); μιμητικός 'able at imitation, imitating, mimetic' (Pl., Arist.); μιμηλός 'id.', also 'imitated' (Luc., Plu.), or 'referring to μῖμος' (Chantraine 1933: 242), with μιμηλάζω (-ίζω?) = μιμέομαι (Ph.).

•ETYM Compared with μιμέομαι, μῖμος is attested only rarely and at a late date; still, it is most likely that μιμέομαι is a denominative built on the latter. The technical meaning of μῖμος makes a loan probable. The connection with Skt. māyā́ [f.] 'magic, etc.' is dated: the translation found in Frisk (following Schulze) as 'Zauber(bild), Truggestalt' is deceptive, as it focuses on the notion of 'image', which is not found in the earliest attestations of māyā́. It rather means 'magical power, skill, etc.'.

μῖμος was borrowed as Lat. mīmus 'id.'. There is no etymology, and Pre-Greek origin is quite possible.

μιν [encl.pron.] 'eum, eam, id; se', anaphoric or reflexive pron. 3sg. (Il.), late also 3pl. ⊲IE h*$_1$i- 'he, who'⊳ •VAR Also anaph. νιν 'id.' (Dor., trag., cf. Björck 1950: 163).

•DIAL Myc. -mi /min/.

•ETYM Compare especially Cypr. ►ἴν 'id.' < h*$_1$i-m (Lat. is, etc.). Not from a reduplicated form im-im* (as per Rix 1976: 186), which looks rather strange for indefinite pronouns. The initial nasal may have been taken from (the end of) the preceding word, as happened in OP dim and OPr. dim (reanalysis of the neuter ending -od*), e.g. in the 1sg. aorist (h*$_1$e)deiksm̥ Him > (e)deiksam im* >> (e)deiksa mim* > ἔδειξά μιν. Cf. Beekes KZ 96 (1982-1983): 229-32.

μίνδαξ [f.] 'a kind of Persian incense' (Amphis 27 Kock). ⊲?⊳

•ETYM Unknown.

μίνδις [?] 'association for the maintenance of tombs' (Tit. As. Min. II, 1, 62, [Telmessos]). ⊲LW Lyc.?⊳

•DER μενδῖται 'members of such a society'.

•ETYM A local word, perhaps from Lycian miñti. See Neumann 1961: 53f. and Laroche BSL 58 (1963): 78[1].

μίνθη [f.] 'mint' (IA, Thphr., Plu.); on the mg. Kretschmer Glotta 12 (1923): 105ff. ⊲PG⊳

•VAR Also μίνθᾰ (Thphr.), μίνθος.

•DIAL Myc. mi-ta.

•ETYM A foreign word, like Lat. menta. It is undoubtedly Pre-Greek, because of the variant ending -ᾰ. See ►καλαμίνθη.

μίνθος [m.] 'human ordure' (Mnesim. Com.). ⊲PG?⊳

•DER μινθ-όω [v.] 'to stain with μ.' (Ar.), metaph. 'to renounce utterly, abominate' (Hell., com.).

•ETYM Formation like ὄνθος, σπέλεθος, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 369); further unclear, but perhaps Pre-Greek.

μινύθω [v.] 'to lessen, fade away', also trans. 'to reduce' (Il.). ⊲IE mi-n(e)-u-* 'lessen, diminish'⊳

•VAR Also μινυνθάνω (PMich.); ipf. -ύθεσκον (ἐμινύθει Hp.), fut. μινυθήσω, aor. -ῆσαι, perf. μεμινύθηκα (Hp.).

•COMP Rarely with περι-, συν-, ἀπο-.

•DER Medical terms: μινύθ-ησις [f.] 'waning', -ήματα [pl.] 'what is lessening, dying members', -ώθης 'weak, lessening' (Hp.), on the verbal derivation see Chantraine 1933: 431, -ικός 'diminishing' (Cael. Aur.). Beside it μίνυνθα [adv.] 'for a short time' with μινυνθάδιος 'lasting a short time' (Il.).

•ETYM Built after the synonym φθινύθω, either from a νυ-present (corresponding to Lat. minuō, cf. *φθίνϝ-ω) or from an adjective *μινύς (cf. βαρύθω : βαρύς), which seems to have been preserved as a first member in a few compounds, though late and rarely attested: μινύ-ωρος, -ώριος 'living a short time' (AP), μινύζηον· ὀλιγόβιον 'having a short life' (H.). The same adjective has been recognized in μίνυνθα, i.e. acc. *μινύν + -θα e.g. after the opposite δηθά.
An IE adj. minu- is also presupposed by Lat. minuō, and probably also by minus (secondarily s-stem), and is assumed for Germanic (e.g. Go. minniza 'smaller' < *minuiza-) as well. If a suffix -nu- is separated, ►μείων, etc. may be compared.

μινυρίζω [v.] 'to whimper, whine, complain (in a low tone)' (E 889, δ 719), 'to sing in a low tone, wharble, hum' (Ar., Pl., Arist.). ◄PG?►
•VAR μινυρίσαι [aor.] (Plu.).
•DER μινύρισμα 'twittering' (Theoc., S. E.), -ισμός 'id.' (sch.), -ίστρια [f.] 'twittering' (ἀηδών, verse inscr.); unclear μινυρίγματα [pl.] (Philox. 2, 28). μινύρομαι [v.] 'to sing in a low tone, twitter' (A., S., Ar., Call.), μινυρός 'whimpering, whining' (A., Phryn. Com.), 'twittering' (Theoc.).
•ETYM Expressive and onomatopoeic words, resembling κινυρίζω : κινύρομαι : κινυρός, with which they were amalgamated in a way that can no longer be established. There is no further evidence for a variation κ/μ, as proposed by Fur.: 388. Still, Pre-Greek origin is possible.
Acc. to Leumann 1950: 244, μινυρίζω is the oldest form of the series. Lat. minurriō, -īre 'twitter' (Suet.) shows a remarkable similarity: if it is not directly borrowed from Greek, it was at least influenced by it. Similar reduplicated formations are μιμιχμός· τοῦ ἵππου φωνή 'horse's voice' and μιμάξασα· χρεμετίσασα, φωνήσασα 'to neigh (of horses), resound' (H.). See ►μύρομαι.

μιργάβωρ · τὸ λυκόφως 'twilight' (H.). ◄GR?►
•VAR μιργῶσαι· πηλῶσαι 'to cover with mud or clay' (H.).
•ETYM A relationship with μίσγω (μιργάβωρ as dialectal Laconian or Elean for Ion. *μισγ-ήϝως, e.g. Brugmann-Thumb 1913: 150) has been assumed, the second element being the word for 'dawn'. However, the gloss on μιργῶσαι (if it belongs here at all) cannot be correct. Connection of the first element with Lith. mirgė́ti 'flicker', ON myrkr, acc. myrkvan 'dark' < PGm. *merku-, merkuįa- is improbable.

μίργμα [n.] (?) 'ἐπὶ τοῦ κακοπινοῦς καὶ ῥυπαροῦ καὶ πονηροῦ 'filthy, dirty, bad' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR μιρμα ms. (DELG).
•ETYM Unknown. Latte connects the glosses μιργῶσαι and μιργοῦλον.

μιργοῦλον [n.] μύσος, μίασμα 'defilement, stain' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. See ►μίργμα.

μιρόν [?] ὅταν νυστάζῃ τις λέγουσι Ταραντῖνοι 'The Tarentians say this whenever someone is sleepy' (H.). ◄?►
•DER Perhaps the PN Μίρων (see Latte)?
•ETYM Unknown.

μιρύκεον ⇒μυρίκη.

μίσγω •ETYM See ►μείγνυμι; for μισγ-άγκεια, see also ἄγκος (►ἀγκ-).

μισέω [v.] 'to hate, abhor' (Pi., IA). ◄PG► •VAR Aor. μισῆσαι (P 272), aor. pass. μισηθῆναι (Hdt.), fut. pass. μισήσομαι (E.), also -ηθήσομαι (LXX), perf. μεμίση-κα, -μαι (Att.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. δια-, ἀπο-. Very often as a first member (opposed to φιλο-), e.g. μισό-θεος 'who hates the gods' (A., Luc.), cf. Schwyzer: 442.
•DER μίσημα [n.] 'what is hated' (trag.), μίσηθρον (-τρον) 'charm producing hatred' (Luc., pap.), after στέργηθρον, Benveniste 1935: 203; μισητός 'hated, hateful' (A., X.), -ητικός 'prone to hatred' (Arr.), μισήτιζε· μίσει, στύγει 'id.' (H.). μισήτη [f.] 'lascivious woman, whore' (Archil. [?], Cratin.), accent according to Ammon. 94; cf. μισητός· ... ἄπληστος 'greedy' (H.) with unclear change of mg., with μισητία 'lasciviousness, unsatiable desire' (Ar., Procop.). μῖσος [n.] 'hatred, enmity, grudge, object of hatred' (trag., Att.).
•ETYM The date and the spread of the respective attestations do not favor the common assumption that μισέω is a denominative to μῖσος; if it were, we would expect an aorist Hom. *μίσε(σ)σεν instead of μίσησεν (but perhaps it is analogical after φίλησεν?).
A suffix -σος does not exist in inherited words. Therefore, Fur.: 254 assumes a Pre-Greek word, with an assibilated dental t^y.

μισθός [m.] 'hire, pay, wages, reward, daily wages' (Il.). ◄IE $misd^ho$- 'salary'► •COMP Several compounds, e.g. μισθο-δό-της [m.] 'who pays the wages', -τέω, -σία (Att.), compounded forms of μισθὸν δοῦναι with a suffix -τη-; μισθο-φορέω [v.] 'to get paid' with -φόρος 'who served for hire', -φορά 'wages'; ἔμ-μισθος 'being paid' (Att.).
•DER Diminutive μισθάριον (Hp., com., pap.); μίσθιος [adj.] 'hired' (Hell.); μισθόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to hire for oneself', act. 'to hire' (IA) with several derivatives: μίσθωμα 'rent, lease' (Att.), -ωμάτιον (Alciphr.), μίσθωσις 'hiring' (Att.), -ώσιμος 'which can be hired' (Lex. apud D.), -ωσιμαῖος (gloss.); μισθωτός (directly from μισθός?) 'hired, hireling, mercenary' (IA), -ωτής [m.] 'tenant' (Att.), -ώτρια [f.] (Phryn. Com.), -ωτικός 'belonging to rent' (Pl., pap.), -ωτήριον 'meeting place of the μισθωτοί' (Ephesus IIᵖ, H. s.v. ὄψ' ἦλθες).
•ETYM This old word for 'reward, recompense' vel sim. was also preserved in Indo-Iranian, Germanic and Slavic: Skt. mīḍhá- [n.] 'prize in a contest, contest', Av. mižda- [n.] 'wages', Go. mizdo [f.] 'wages', MoHG Miete 'rent', OCS mьzda, Ru. mzdá [f.] 'wages, hire, reward', all from IE $misd^hó$-. Because of the gender of the Gm. and Slav. words, Meillet MSL 21 (1920): 111 considers $misd^hó$- to be an old feminine; but if so, the change of gender in μισθός would be remarkable. In the sense of 'wages', μισθός was replaced by ὀψώνιον in the Hell. period (Chantraine 1956a: 25f.).

μιστύλη •ETYM See ►μυστίλη (also for μιστυλάομαι).

μιστύλλω [v.] 'to cut up meat' (Il.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Aor. μιστῦλαι, -ασθαι (Semon., Lyc., Nonn.); δια-μιστῦλαι (Hdt. 1, 132).
•DER Backformation μίστυλλον 'piece of meat' (Strato Com.).
•ETYM As a denominative, μιστύλλω seems to go back to *μιστύλος 'cut up, consisting of pieces' (cf. στωμύλλω : -ύλος, καμπύλλω : -ύλος). As a further basis, one might posit a noun *μιστο-, which could stand for *miT-to-, and could be connected with some Germanic words for 'hew, cut', e.g. Go. maitan 'to injure, mutilate'. Skt. méthati 'to be inimical' is not related (cf. Mayrhofer EWAia). The word may rather be Pre-Greek. See ►μίτυλος.

μίσυ, -υος, -έως [n.] 1. 'copper ore' found in Cyprus (Hp.); 2. 'ruffle, Tuber aestivum', growing near Cyrene (Thphr.), cf. André 1956 s.v. misy. ◁LW Anat.?▷ •ETYM Perhaps an adjective 'brilliant' borrowed from an Anatolian language; cf. Hitt. mišriu̯ant- 'brilliant', from the root *meis- (Skt. miṣáti 'to open the eyes'). See Neumann Kadmos 28 (1989): 94f.

μίσχος [m.] 1. 'stalk of a leaf, fruit or flower' (Thphr., Porph.); 2. name of a Thessalian instrument for field work, ἰσχυρότερον ἔτι τῆς δικέλλης 'even stronger than the δ.', ... ὃ μᾶλλον εἰς βάθος κατιὸν πλείω γῆν περιτρέπει καὶ κατωτέρωθεν 'which, reaching deeper, turns around more earth, and from a greater depth' (Thphr.). Acc. to H. = ὁ παρὰ τῷ φύλλῳ κόκκος 'the seed at the leaf', which can hardly be correct. Also difficult to understand is μίσκος = 'pod, shell' (Poll. 6, 94). Extensively on μίσχος Strömberg 1937: 115f. ◁1. PG(V); 2. PG?(V)▷ •COMP ἄ-μισχος 'without stalk' (Thphr.).
•ETYM Probably an agricultural term in origin, and transmitted to botany by the botanist Theophrastus. No etymology. The connection with μίσκαιος· κῆπος 'garden' (H.), which is also compared to Lith. miškas 'wood, forest', also 'wood for burning or building', is semantically void, unless one accepts a basic meaning 'trunk, bar' for the Lith. word.
Fur.: 133 connects μίσχος with μίσκος 'pod, shell', which means that the word is Pre-Greek. However, he does not connect the stalk with the Thessalian tool. On the other hand, he may be right in connecting the latter with μίσκαιος 'garden', where σχ/σκ also points to Pre-Greek origin.

μίτος [m.] mg. uncertain, 'thread of the warp, chain' vel sim., also 'thread' in general, Lat. līcium (since Ψ 762), see Blümner 1875-1887: 141ff., where other interpretations are discussed. Cf. κατὰ μίτον 'uninterrupted' (Pherecr., Plb.). ◁?▷
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. λεπτό-μιτος 'with fine threads' (E.), πολύ-μιτος 'consisting of many threads, damask' (A., Cretin., Peripl. M. Rubr.).

•DER μιτώδης 'thread-like, made of threads' vel sim. (S. Ant. 1222), μίτινοι 'licinae' (gloss.), μιτηρός, μιτάριον (sch. E. Hec. 924), μιτόομαι, -ώσασθαι [v.] 'to hitch up threads' vel sim. (AP), μίσασθαι(?) 'id.' (Pl. Com.), μιτίσασθαι 'liciare' (gloss.).
•ETYM Because of the uncertain meaning, all explanations are hypothetical.

μίτρα [f.] 'girdle bound with metal' (Il.), 'maiden's girdle' (Theoc., A. R., Call.), 'fillet, diadem' (Alcm., Hdt., E., Ar., Call.), 'victor's chaplet, wreath' (Pi.). ◁?▷ •VAR Ion. -ρη [f.].
•COMP μιτρη-φόρος (also -ο-φ-) 'bearing a μ.' (Hdt., Plu.), αἰολο-μίτρης 'with glittering girdle' (E 707, Theoc.), on the ending -ης see Schwyzer: 451); ἄ-μιτρος 'without girdle' (Call.).
•DER μιτρίον (gloss.), μιτρώδης 'like a μ.' (An. Ox.), μιτραῖον (cod. -έον)· ποικίλον 'many-colored' (H.); μιτρόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to put on or wear a μ., to dress with a μ.' (Str., Nonn.).
•ETYM For comparison, one has thought of Skt. mitrá- [n., m.] 'friend', properly 'friendship', Av. miθra- [m.] 'treaty, friend', as a personification 'Mithra' = OP Miθra-, assuming an inherited word *mi-tro- with original meaning 'connection', from IE *mei- 'to bind, attach' (Pok. 710). The combination remains quite hypothetical, as long as a corresponding primary verb is not found (IIr. may- 'to fix, establish'?). Extensive treatment of mitrá- in Mayrhofer EWAia s.v.
Given its technical meaning, μίτρα (which is isolated in Greek) could very well be a loan, perhaps from an Indo-Iranian source. Or does the short -ᾰ (in the acc. μίτρᾰν [LSJ) point to a Pre-Greek word?

μίτυλος [adj.] Adjunct of αἴξ (Theoc. 8, 86) of uncertain mg.; acc. to H. μίτυλον· ἔσχατον, νήπιον. Λακεδαίμονες 'utmost, childish; foolish'. ◁?▷
•VAR μύτιλον· ἔσχατον, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ τὸν νεώτατον 'utmost, whence (?) also the youngest'. οἱ δὲ καὶ τὸ ἀποβαῖνον καὶ ὁ νήπιος καὶ ὁ νέος 'that which results, infant, young one' (H.); see Leumann Glotta 32 (1953): 217.
•ETYM Explained as 'hornless' and connected with μιστύλλω, in which case μύτιλος must have arisen by means of metathesis. However, as DELG remarks, the explanation may be due to a folk-etymology with Lat. mutilus by a later scholiast. Dissimilation from an original *μύτυλος could be imagined (similar cases in Schwyzer: 258). The similarity with the PN Μυτιλήνη (also Μιτυλ-) is probably irrelevant (cf. WH s.v. mūtulus).

μίτυς, -υος [f.] name of a substance used by bees (Arist.). ◁PG?▷ •ETYM Unexplained; it could very well be Pre-Greek.

μνᾶ [f.] 'mina', weight and a sum of money = 100 drachmae (IA). ◁LW Sem.▷
•VAR Gen. -ᾶς (Ion. -ῆς), etc., Ion. μνέαι [pl.].
•DER Diminutive μναδάριον (Diph. Com.), probably for *μνᾳδ-άριον from *μνᾴ-διον, -μνα-ΐδιον (like ζῳδ-άριον : ζῴ-διον); μνα-αῖος, μναῖος 'weighing or worth a mina' (com., X., Arist.), -ϊαῖος 'id.' (Arist., Hell.), -ϊεῖον [n.] golden coin = 1 silver-mina (pap.); on -ιαῖος, -ιεῖος see Chantraine 1933: 49 and 53.

•ETYM A Semitic loanword. Cf. Hebr. māne, Akk. manū name of a weight. Borrowed from μνᾶ was Lat. mina. Skt. manā́- [f.], name of a golden ornament, remains far; but MoP man as a designation of a weight might belong here, too; see Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 308. Fur.: 380 connects μνάσιος/ν and assumes a cultural term from the Near East.

μνάομαι 'to remember, think of, ponder', also 'to woo (a woman), court'. ⇒μιμνήσκω.

μναρόν [adj.] glossed as μαλακόν, ἡδύ, ῥᾴδιον 'delicate, sweet, easy' (Phot.), or θυμῆρες 'delightful' (H.), respectively (Cratin. 431). ◅?▻ •ETYM Probably for μνιαρόν (*μνι̯αρόν), cf. Schwyzer: 274. See ►μνίον.

μνάσιον [n.] name of an Egyptian waterplant, 'Cyperus esculentus' (Thphr.). ◅LW Eg.▻
•VAR Also μναύσιον.
•ETYM From Eg. mnw; see Hemmerdinger Glotta 46 (1968): 245.

μνίον [n.] 'seaweed' (Lyc., Nic., Agatharch., Str.), also μνιός = ἁπαλός 'soft' (Euph. 156 from EM and Hdn.). ◅?▻ •DER μνι-όεις (A. R.), -ώδης (Nic.), -αρός (Opp., AP) 'weak like moss'.
•ETYM Unexplained. See ►μνόος.

μνόος, μνοῦς [m.] 'soft down' (on young birds) (Hp., Ar., AP). ◅?▻ •ETYM Rhyming word with χνόος, χνοῦς [m.] 'down, foam, crust'. On the other hand, cf. μνίον 'seaweed'. Is μνόος a cross from these two? See ►μνίον.

μνῴα [f.] name of the serf population of Crete. ◅?▻
•VAR μνωΐα, μνοΐα.
•ETYM Polomé Latomus 13 (1954): 83 argues against the connection with Georg. mona 'servant, slave' as a Caucasian-Pre-Greek correspondence (as per Hubschmid 1953b: 103, with Dumézil). See ►δμώς.

μογέω [v.] 'to toil, be distressed, suffer' (Il.). ◅PG▻ •VAR μεμογηώς [perf.ptc.] (Nic.).
•COMP Rarely with συν-, ἐν-. As a first member in μογοσ-τόκος epithet of Eileithyia (Il.) and Artemis (Theoc.), who where assist at child-birth; also of ὠδῖνες (Lyc.), of the Trojan horse (Tryph. Ep.), of ὥρα (Nonn.). Compound mg. uncertain, but not (as per Bechtel 1914) 'causing pain', taking μογοσ- as an acc. pl. < *μόγονς. In any case, μογο-τόκος was metrically impossible (Chantraine 1942: 95).
•DER μόγος [m.] 'toil, trouble, distress' (Δ 27, rare). From μόγος probably μογερός 'laborious, distressful' (trag.). Adverb μόγις 'with toil, barely' (Il.). Perhaps PN Μογέᾱ [m.] (Boeot.).
•ETYM μογέω may be a denominative from μόγος, but the scarcity of the substantive makes it more probable that an old intensive verb μογέω gave rise to μόγος as a back-formation.
There are no certain cognates. The Baltic adjective Lith. smagùs 'heavy, strong, powerful (of blows)', Latv. smag(r)s 'heavy' rather belongs to Lith. smōgti, 1sg. smagiù 'to scourge, beat, throw (something heavy)'. Meier-Brügger Glotta 70 (1992): 134f. proposes that the word belongs to *$megh_2$- 'big', but this is semantically not immediately convincing.
A by-form with initial σμ- is found in σμογερόν· σκληρόν, ἐπίβουλον, μοχθηρόν 'harsh, treacherous, sorrowful' (H.), cf. also ►σμυγερός 'painful', etc. Beside σμογερόν and σμυγερός, Fur.: 140, 363 connects μόχθος, μοχλός, and judges the group (probably correctly so) to be Pre-Greek. See on ►μῶλος. See ►μόχθος, ►μοχλός, ►μόλις.

μόθος [m.] 'battle-din' (Il., Hes. Sc., Nic.). ◅PG?▻
•COMP μοθούρας· τὰς λαβὰς τῶν κωπῶν 'the grips of a handle' (H.), explained in Solmsen 1909: 56[2].
•DER μόθαξ, -ακος [m.] 'child of the Helotes or Perioikoi, who has received his education together with a Spartan' (Phylarch. Hist. [III[a]], Plu., Ael.); μόθων, -ωνος [m.] = μόθαξ (sch., EM., H.), also 'impudent man' vel sim. (Ar. Pl. 279), parodically represented as a demon (beside Κόβαλοι etc., Ar. Eq. 635); name of a vulgar dance, practised by sailors (Ar., Poll.), also name of a melody on the flute that accompanies the dance (Trypho apud Ath. 14, 618c). μοθωνικός 'like the μόθωνες' (Ion apud Plu. Per. 5), μοθωνία· ἀλαζονεία τις τοῦ σώματος κινητική 'a boasting posture of the body that sets in motion' (EM).
•ETYM The great stylistic difference between epic μόθος and Dor. μόθαξ and μόθων is remarkable, but it is clear that Homer preserves the oldest meaning 'turmoil'.
No cognates outside Greek. Has been compared with CS motati sę 'agitari', Ru. motát' 'to throw to and fro, waste; to reel, wind up', or with Skt. mánthati, mathnā́ti 'to stir, shake', but Gr. θ as against Sl. t and Skt. th contradicts this (*-tH- does not regularly yield Gr. -θ-); moreover, regarding the latter equation, a vocalic nasal does not vocalize to -ο- in this position in any Greek dialect. Perhaps the word is Pre-Greek.

μοιμυάω
•ETYM See μυάω (s.v. ►μύω) and ►μύλλον.

μοιμύλλω •ETYM See μύλλω s.v. ►μύλη.

μοῖος ⇒σμοιός.

μοῖρα [f.] 'part, share, lot'. ⇒μείρομαι.

μοῖτος [m.] 'χάρις, thanks, favour' (Sophr. 168). ◅LW Ital.?▻ •ETYM As the word is Sicilian, perhaps it is a borrowing from OLat. (or Italic?) moitos* 'exchange' (seen in Lat. mūtāre 'to change, exchange'; cf. mūtuus 'mutual', etc.); see WH s.v. mūtō. At any rate, unrelated to the group ►ἄμοιος, ►μοῖος, and ►σμοιός.

μοιχός [m.] 'adulterer' (IA), 'idolatrous person' (Ep. Jac. 4, 4), cf. μοιχαλίς, μοιχάω, -εύω. ◅IE? *h_3meig^h- 'urinate'▻ •COMP Sometimes as a first member, e.g. μοιχ-άγρια [n.pl.] 'fine imposed on one taken in adultery' (θ 332), after ►ζωάγρια, Chantraine 1956a: 51[3] (cf. s.v.); also κατάμοιχος = μοιχός (Vett. Val.), probably back-formation from καταμοιχεύω (pap.).

•DER A. Several feminine formations, mostly late: μοιχ-άς (Aeschin. Socr.), -αλίς (LXX, NT, Hld.), also 'idolatrous woman' (NT), -ή, -ίς (Ar. Byz.), -αινα (Tz.); older μοιχεύτρια (see below).
B. Adjectives: μοιχ-ίδιος 'begotten in adultery' (Hecat., Hdt., Hyp.), after κουρίδιος, see on ►κόρη; -ικός (Luc., Plu.), -ιος (AP), -ώδης (Com. Adesp., Ptol.) 'adulterous'.
C. Abstract formation: μοιχοσύνη = μοιχεία (Man.).
D. Denominatives: 1. μοιχάω [v.] 'to seduce into adultery, be adulterous' (originally Doric: Gortyn -ίω), of a man (the Lacedaimonian Callicratidas in X. HG 1, 6, 15), -άομαι 'id.', of women and men (LXX, NT), 'to be idolatrous' (LXX), 'to bastardize' (Ael.), after Lat. adulterāre; 2. μοιχεύω = -άω, also pass. 'to be seduced' (Xenoph., Att.), med. -εύομαι 'to be adulterous' (Att. only of women, LXX also of men); 'to idolate' (LXX); μοιχεία 'adultery' (Att.), μοιχευ-τής = μοιχός (Man.), -τρια [f.] (Pl., Plu.); 3. μοιχ-αίνω (Vett. Val.); 4. -άζω (Anon. apud Suid.) 'id.'.
•ETYM Often analyzed as an agent noun of ►ὀμείχω 'to urinate', as a vulgar expression. Borrowed as Lat. moechus. The initial laryngeal (*$h_3meiǵ^h$-) is usually assumed not to have vocalized before a resonant and an o-grade root (the Saussure Effect). Alternatively, it may be thought that the semantic connection of adultery with urinating is not specific enough, and that the etymology must be abandoned.

μόκρων [?] μόκρωνα· τὸν ὀξύν. Ἐρυθραῖοι 'sharp' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM Latte Gnomon 31 (1959): 32 corrects it to μόκωνα, after the Acarnanian name Μόκων; an adjective *μόκων would explain μοκκώνεις· περιφρονεῖς 'very thoughtful; arrogant' (ms. μοκκώνωσις). Fur.: 341, 372 identifies μόκρων with ἀμακρῶτις = ἀμπελόπρασον 'wild leek, Allium Ampeloprasum' (Ps-Dsc. 2, 150), but it remains unclear on which grounds.

μολγός [m.] 'bag made of cowhide' (Ar. Eq. 963, D. C.), Tarentinian acc. to Poll. 10, 187. ◄LW Thrac.►
•DER μόλγινος 'made of ox-hide' (Theodorid. apud Poll. 10, 187); μόλγης, -ητος [m.] (like πένης, πλάνης, etc.) = μοχθηρός (Crates Gramm. apud sch. Ar. Eq. 959), in the same mg. also μολγός (Suid.).
•ETYM Differs from a Germanic word for 'bag, pouch' only in the velar and accent: OHG malaha, MHG malhe 'leather bag', ON malr 'bag' < IE mólko-*. It has therefore been assumed that Gr. -γ- is due to borrowing, perhaps from Thracian (thus Pok. 747). Also, Go. balgs 'ballows, bag', Ir. bolg have been compared, in which case μολγός must have been phonetically influenced by ἀμέλγω.
Fur.: 126 assumes a pre-IE Wanderwort. Cf. Taillardat 1962: §§160 and 209, commenting on the meaning 'glutton, κίναιδος'; cf. also Taillardat REGr. 64 (1951): 10ff.

μολεῖν 'to go, come'. ⇒βλώσκω.

μολεύω [v.] 'to cut off and transplant the shoots of trees' (Lex. Att. apud Poll. 7, 146); μολούειν· ἐγκόπτειν τὰς παραφυάδας 'to engrave the offshoots' (H.). ◄IE? *$melh_3$- 'come, appear', PG?►
•ETYM Probably built on *μόλος or *μολεύς 'runner', from the root of μολεῖν 'to go, come'; see ►βλώσκω. The form μολούειν is explained as modelled on κολούειν. Perhaps, μόλουρος [m.] 'kind of snake', μολουρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'locust' (Nic.) should also be included here? It may be asked, however, whether the variation -ου-/-ευ- is not rather a Pre-Greek phenomenon. I do not believe in a variation μ/κ as in μολεύω/κολούω (Fur.: 388). See ►μόλουρος.

μόλις [adv.] 'hardly, barely' (trag., Att.). ◄?►
•VAR = μόγις.
•ETYM No etymology. Earlier proposals (see Solmsen 1909: 169ff.) are problematic: connection with μῶλος 'fight', if from earlier 'trouble', is formally doubtful because of the root vocalism; that with μέλλω 'to be about to do, hesitate, etc.', semantically uncompelling. See ►μογέω.

μολοβρός [m.] scornful or ignominious qualification, referring to Odysseus, who has not yet been identified, by the goat-herd Melanthos and the beggar Iros (ρ 219, σ 26; after this Lyc. 775); also of the head (κεφαλή) of a plant in unknown mg. (Nic. Th. 662). ◄PG(V)► •DIAL Myc. mo-ro-qo-ro /$molog^wros$/.
•DER μολόβρ-ιον [n.] 'the young of a swine' (Ael.), -ίτης ὗς 'id.' (Hippon.). PN Μόλοβρος [m.] (Th. 4, 8, 9; Lacon.).
•ETYM Numerous doubtful proposals have been advanced. In antiquity: ἀπὸ τοῦ μολεῖν καὶ παραγίνεσθαι πρὸς βορὰν καὶ τροφήν 'from going, and having recourse to food' (sch. Lyc. 775), which is clearly folk-etymology; and also recently: Neumann KZ 105 (1992): 75-80 derives it from *μολος, related to Skt. mála- [n.] 'dirt', and the root *$g^wrh_3$- 'eat' in βιβρώσκω, assuming a meaning 'Dreckfresser'. Although this is clearly better than earlier proposals, it does not explain the second member -βρος, as $-g^w\textit{r̥}Ho$-* would have given *-βαρο- (I do not accept the loss of laryngeals in compounds). Rather a Pre-Greek word; Fur.: 388 compares κολόβριον 'young of a swine' (Ar. Byz. apud Eust.).

μολόθουρος 'evergreen plant, asphodill, Asphodelus ramosus' or = ὀλόσχοινος, 'Scirpus holeschoenus' (Euph. 133, Nic. Al. 147). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

μόλουρος [?] unidentified snake (Nic. Th. 491). ◄?► •ETYM It has been assumed that a word for a locust is derived from this word: μολουρίς, -ίδος (Nic. Th. 416). Gow and Scholfield think that it is the snake μόλουρος, but Gil Fernández 1959: 52 translates 'locust'. Hesychius has μολοῦρις· αἰδοῖον 'private parts'· κολοβὴ λόγχη 'blunt spear(head)'· ἢ μόλις οὐρῶν 'urinating with difficulty' (folk-etymology), and μολουρίδες· βατραχίδες καὶ τῶν σταχύων τὰ γόνατα 'little frogs, the knees of the offspring' (?); Suid. has μολυρίς, μολυρίδες· μολυρίδας τὰς ἀκρίδας 'locusts' φασί. No etymology.

μολόχη [f.] 'mallow'. ⇒μαλάχη.

μολπή [f.] 'dance with song'. ⇒μέλπω.

μόλσον [n.]? · σελίνου καυλός καί ἄνθος 'stalk and flower of the celery' · οἱ δὲ τὴν ὑποφυάδα (H.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

μόλσος [m.] ὁ δημός. Αἰολεῖς 'fat (Aeol.)' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Compared with μέλδω. See Hoffmann 1893: 241, who reads δημός for δῆμος.

μόλυβδος [m.] 'lead' (IA). ◁LW IE Anat.▷
•VAR μόλιβος (Λ 237, also Hell. prose), also μόλυβος (LXX), μόλιβδος (Plu.), βόλυβδος (Att. defix.), βόλιμος (Delph., Epid.), βόλιβος (Rhod. in περι-βολιβῶσαι).
•DIAL Myc. mo-ri-wo-do.
•COMP μολυβδο-χοέω 'melt lead, solder with lead' (Ar., inscr.).
•DER A. Substantives: μολύβδ-αινα [f.] 'weight of lead, plummet, ball of lead' (Ω 80, Hp., Arist.), 'a plant, Plumbago europaea' (Plin.), see Strömberg 1940: 26; like ἄκαινα, etc. (Schwyzer: 475, Chantraine 1933: 109); -ίς [f.] 'id.' (Att., Hell.); -ιον [n.] 'leaden weight' (Hp.), μολίβ-ιον [n.] 'leaden pipe' (Antyll. apud Orib.), -ίδιον (Hero); μολυβδ-ῖτις [f.] 'lead-sand' (Dsc., Plin.); -ωμα 'lead-work' (Moschio apud Ath.); μολυβᾶς, -ᾶτος [m.] 'lead-worker' (pap.).
B. Adjectives: μολύβδ-ινος (μολίβ-) 'leaden' (IA, Paul. Aeg.), -οῦς (μολιβ-, μολυβ-) 'id.' (Att., Hell.); -ώδης 'like lead' (Dsc., Gal.), -ικός 'leaden' (gloss.), μολυβρόν· τὸ μολυβοειδές 'like lead' (H.).
C. Verbs: μολυβδόομαι (μολιβ-) 'to be furnished with leaden weights, etc.' (Arist.) with -ωσις (gloss.); περι-βολιβῶσαι 'frame with lead' (Rhod.); μολυβδ-ιάω [v.] 'to have the color of lead' of the face, as a symptom of disease (Com. Adesp.).
Here also μολβίς· στάθμιόν τι ἐπταμναῖον (H.) with loss of internal ι or υ (Solmsen 1909: 60[2]).
•ETYM Because of its variants, the word is commonly considered to be an Anatolian loan. The form βολιμος would be due to metathesis and βολιβος due to assimilation. The forms μόλιβος and μόλυβδος are clearly the most archaic; apart from these, there is also Myc. /moliwdos/; and μολιβδος is now also found in Olbia about 500[a]. The Mycenaean form could easily be the oldest, assuming that i changed to u before w(d).
A connection with Lat. plumbum cannot be substantiated. The Latin word is rather related to Celt. *$pl(o)ud^ho$-, as I have shown in Beekes MSS 59 (1999): 7-14; the Germanic word laud*- (E lead) was borrowed from Celtic. The Greek word cannot have come from the West (cf. also Basque berún 'lead'), as lead was much older in Greece.
The Greek word has now been compared with Lyd. marivda-, of which we now know that it meant 'dark' (as in E murky); its Hitt. equivalent is ^{d}Markuu̯ai̯a- 'chtonic deities'. marivda- would be an IE word from the root *$merg^w$-, *$morg^w$ii̯o- giving marwida*-, which may have become marwda*- with syncope, which in turn might have become marwida*- by anaptyxis. For the semantics connecting 'lead' and 'dark', cf. Lat. plumbum nigrum. See Melchert 2004.

μολύνω [v.] 'to defile, pollute, stain' (Att.). ◁IE? *$mel(h_2)$- 'dirt'▷ •VAR Mostly present stem; μολυνῶ, μολῦναι, -υνθῆναι, etc. (Hell.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, συν-.
•DER μόλ-υνσις, -υσμός 'defilement, pollution' (LXX, Str.), -υσμα 'stain' (late), -υμμα 'id.' (gloss.); μολυνίη· ἡ πυγή 'behind, rump' (H.), μόλυχνον· δυσταλέον (H.), leg. αὐσταλέον 'dried up'?; Latte gives δεισαλέον 'filthy' vel sim.
Perhaps also the Boeot. HN Μολόεις, if "the filthy one", from *μόλος?
•ETYM Denominative in -ύνω from an unattested base form. Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 384 connects it with Lith. mul̃vė 'mud, mire' and the factitive verb mul̃vinti 'to cover with mire'. In order to combine the root vocalism with that of Lithuanian, he assumes *μαλύνω (like Lith. -ul- from *-l̥-), and assimilation *α > ο before υ in the following syllable, but there are too many counterexamples to such a rule.
Numerous words for 'dark, dirty color' and 'dirt, defilement' are assembled under a root mel(H)*-, but only Skt. mála- [n.] 'dirt, defilement' is of interest here, with a derivative málavant- 'dirty', which formally matches the hydronym Μολόεις. Both Greek μολύνω and Μολόεις may have been built on older μόλος, -ον 'dirt' (cf. αἰσχύνω, σκληρύνω, etc.), which corresponds with the Skt. word if we assume a pre-form molH-o-. Cf. Mayrhofer EWAia, s.v. mála-.
Alternatively, Fur.: 227 compares φολῦνει· μολύνει (H.), which could point to a Pre-Greek word. See ►μέλας.

μόναπος [m.] Paeonic word for βόνασος, βόλινθος, 'aurochs' (Arist.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR Also μόναιπος (Arist.), μόνωψ, -ωπος (Ael.).
•ETYM Fur.: 207, etc. adduces μόναιπος (Arist. Id. Mir. 830a) and derives μόνωτος (Antig. Mir. 53 cod.) from *μοναϝτος < *μοναπτος; both μόναιπος and *μοναπτος may continue a Pre-Greek pre-form *$monap^y$-. Other variants could be βόλινθος and βόνασ(σ)ος, but details are unclear.

μονθυλεύω [v.] 'to stuff, fill, etc.' ◁PG?(V)▷ •ETYM If ὀνθυλεύω stands for ϝονθ-, it may show the characteristic Pre-Greek variation ϝ/μ (Fur.: 246). See ►ὀνθυλεύω.

μόνιμος 'lasting, steadfast'. ⇒μένω.

μόνος [adj.] 'alone'. ◁IE? men*- 'small', mon-uo*- 'alone'▷ •VAR μοῦνος (epic Ion.), μῶνος (Theoc.).
•COMP Frequent as a first member, e.g. μόν-αρχος [m.] 'monarch' (μούν-), with -έω, -ία, etc. (Thgn., Pi., IA).
•DER 1. μονάς, μουνάς, -άδος as an adj. [f., m.] 'lonely' (trag., AP), subst. [f.] 'unity' (Pl.) with μοναδ-ιαῖος 'of uniform greatness' (Hero), -ικός 'consisting of unities, uniform, individual' (Arist.), -ιστί [adv.] 'in unities' (Nicom.), -ισμός [m.] 'formation of unity' (Dam.). 2. μοναχ-ῆ (Pl., X.), -ῶς (Arist.) 'only in one way', -οῦ (Pl., Thphr.) 'only in one place'; μοναχός [adj.] 'single' (Arist., Epicur.), also [m.] 'hermit, monk' (AP, Procop.), Lat. monachus, with μονάχ-ουσα [f.] (Jerusalem VI[p]), -ικός [adj.]

'hermit-like, monkish' (Just., pap. VI^{p}); substantive μοναχισμός 'monastic life'; μοναχ-όω 'to get lonely' (Aq.). 3. μουνάξ [adv.] 'lonely, alone' (Od., Arat.), μοναξία 'lonelyness' (sch., Eust.) from *μοναξός like διξός, etc.; PN Μονάξιος (V^{p}). 4. μονιός, μούνιος 'living alone, wild' (Call., AP), μονίας [m.] 'lonely man' (Ael.). 5. μονία, -ίη 'lonelyness, celibacy' (Max.), μονότης [f.] 'unity' (Sm., Iamb.), 'singularity' (Alex. Aphr. in Metaph.). 6. μουνόθεν (Hdt. 1, 116; v.l. -οθέντα), μονά-δην (A. D., EM), μουνα-δόν (Opp.) 'lonely, alone'. 7. Verbs: μονόομαι (μουν-) [v.] 'to be left alone', -όω 'to leave alone' (Il.), with μόν-ωσις 'lonelyness' (Pl., Ph.), -ώτης [m.] = μονίας (Arist.), -ωτικός '(left) alone' (Ph.); μονάζω [v.] 'to stay alone, separate oneself' (LXX, Christ. authors, gramm.) with μονασμός 'lonely situation' (Eust.), μοναστήριον 'cell of a hermit, cloister' (Ph., pap.), μονάστρια [f.] 'nun' (Just.).
•ETYM PGr. *μόνϝος (whence Ion. μοῦνος, Att. μόνος) probably stands beside *μανϝός in μᾱνός, ►μανός 'thin, rare', albeit with a somewhat different meaning. The latter agrees with Arm. manr, gen. manu 'small, thin'. An element -u̯o- also appears in the synonym οἶϝος (see ►οἶος), and also in ►ὅλος < sol-uo- 'whole'. Otherwise, *μόνϝος is isolated. A different formation may be found in Skt. manāk 'a little', Lith. meñkas 'scanty', ToB meṅki [n.] 'lack', etc., which contain a velar. Unrelated is Hitt. maninku- 'short, near'.

μόρα ⇒μείρομαι.

μοργιάς [f.] · γαστριμαργίας καὶ ἀκρατίας 'gluttony, being without command; incontinence' (H.). ◁PG?(V)▷ •ETYM It has been suggested that this is the Aeolic equivalent of *μαργίας. On the other hand, we may also be dealing with the Pre-Greek variation α/ο (Pre-Greek, sections 6.1 and 6.3). See ►μάργος.

μόργος [m.] 'twined basket of a chariot, in which straw and chaff was transported' (Poll. 7, 116, H.); acc. to H. also σκύτινον or βόειον τεῦχος 'leather ware'. ◁PG?▷
•DER μοργεύω [v.] 'to transport in a μόργος' (Poll. l.c.). Unclear μόργιον· μέτρον γῆς, ὅ ἐστι πλέθρον. καὶ εἶδος ἀμπέλου 'land measure, which equals a plethron; also a kind of vine' (H.). Chantraine reads μόρτιον and connects μορτή, without argumentation.
•ETYM The connection with ►ὀμόργνυμι or Ἀμοργός would presuppose the operation of the Saussure's Law (loss of initial or root-final laryngeal in an o-grade root). However, the connection is semantically uncompelling and speculative. As a technical term, probably Pre-Greek. See ►μάργος.

μορίαι [f.pl.] of ἐλαῖαι, probably to be corrected in μοριαί (Scheller 1951: 128 and 132[4]), name of holy olives in Athens (Ar., Lys., Arist.). Thence Ἀθηνᾶ Μορία and Ζεὺς Μόριος as protectors of olive culivation (S.). Cf. Nilsson 1941(1): 442. ◁?▷
•VAR Rarely sing.
•ETYM Probably from μόρος, μόριον 'lot, share' (see ►μείρομαι), as these trees formed the share due to the goddess in every plantation (Latte in PW 16: 302f.). Nilsson (l.c. fn. 4) refers to "den primitiven Rechtsbrauch, daß ein Baum dem gehört, der ihn gepflanzt hat, auf welchem Boden er auch wächst". Different explanation by Heubeck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 1 (1949): 281 (with Brandenstein): a Pre-Greek word for 'olive', whence several PNs in Asia Minor and Greece were derived, e.g. Μύρα (Lyc.), Μύραι (Thess.).

μορμύρος [m.] name of a sea-fish of the family of the breams (Sparidae), 'Pagellus mormyrus' (Arist., Archestr.); details in Thompson 1947 s.v. ◁PG?▷
•VAR With dissimilation μορμύλος (Dorio apud Ath., Opp.); also μύρμη (Epich. 62).
•ETYM According to Strömberg 1943: 76 "probably called after the sound, which arises from its quick movement in the water". The connection with μύρομαι, μύρω 'to flow, trickle' (Strömberg l.c.) is not convincing. Connection with μορμύρω is quite possible, if the fish meant here would properly be the 'bubble-blower'.
Borrowed as Lat. murmillō 'gladiator with Gaulish helm, on top of which was a fish'; see WH s.v.

μορμύρω [v.] 'to bubble up, foam', of water (Il., late prose). ◁ONOM▷ •VAR Present stem only; also μυρμύρω (H.).
•COMP Also with ἀνα-, ἐπι-.
•ETYM Onomatopoeic verb with intensive reduplication (Schwyzer: 647 and 258, Chantraine 1942: 376). Such formations are frequent: Lat. murmurō, -āre [v.] 'to murmur', Skt. múrmura- [m.] 'crackling fire', -ā [f.] name of a river, marmara- 'roaring', Lith. murmė̃ti, murm(l)énti 'to grumble, murmur', Arm. mṙmṙ-am, -im < murmur-am, -im*) 'id.', etc. See ►μύρομαι.

μορμώ, -οῦς [f.] 'bogey, spectre', also personified and as an interjection (Erinn. [?], Ar., X., Theoc., Luc.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Also -όνος, -όνα, etc. (Schwyzer: 479).
•DER μορμωτός 'frightful' (Lyc.); μορμ-ύσσομαι [v.] 'to frighten' (Call.), μορμύξαντες (Phryg. IV^{p}), also μορμύνει and μορμύρει· δεινοποιεῖ 'scares' (H.). Further the nouns μόρμορος and μύρμος· φόβος, μόρμη· χαλεπή, ἐκπληκτική (H.). PN Μόρμυθος (like Γοργώ : Γόργυθος, Leumann 1950: 155[129]); also the PN Μυρμιδόνες? Enlarged verbal form μορμολύττομαι = μορμύσσομαι (Ar., Pl., X., Ph.), μορμολυξάμενος (Gal.) with μορμολύκ-η, Dor. -α [f.] (Sophr. 9, Str.), -ειον (-εῖον) [n.] (Ar., Pl. u.a.) = μορμώ; also μορμορύζω 'id.' (Phot.).
•ETYM μορμώ has been compared with Lat. formīdō 'terror, fear, ghost' by assuming a dissimilation analogous to that supposed for μύρμηξ beside Lat. formīca. Further connections are uncertain; it is probably a reduplicated formation like Γοργώ (see γοργός), which was originally used as a terrorizing call, and perhaps cognate to μορμύρω. The by-forms Μομβρώ, Μομμώ (H.) clearly show the popular character of the word. Beside μορμώ, we find both μορμύσσομαι, -ύνει, -ύρει and μορμολύττομαι, -λύκη, -λύκειον, for which πομφόλυξ, πομφολύξαι (to πομφός) may be compared, though dissimilation from *μορμορύττομαι (Schwyzer: 258) is also imaginable (the nouns μορμολύκη, -ειον are backfomations).
A connection with Lat. formīdō, etc. does not seem obvious. To my mind, it is likely that the words are Pre-Greek, although there is no concrete proof of this. See Fur.: 364.

μορόεις [adj.] μορόεντα epithet of ἕρματα 'ear-pendants' (Ξ 183, σ 298). ◄GR► •VAR Only ntr.pl. -οεντα; a different word is μορόεις derived from μόρος 'fate (of death)', as in μορόεν ποτόν 'fatal drink' (Nic.).
•ETYM Acc. to H. and Eust. 976, 40 = μετὰ πολλοῦ καμάτου πεπονημένα 'what has been accomplished with much pain' (from μόρος 'share'; per H., also = πόνος 'labour, pain'); therefore in Q. S. 1, 152 also of τεύχη. Acc. to LSJ, it probably rather derives from μόρον 'mulberry', in the sense 'having the color or shape of mulberry'.

μόρον [n.] 'black mulberry, blackberry' (Epich., A., Hp.). ◄?►
•DER μορέα, -έη [f.] 'mulberry tree, Morus nigra' (Nic., Gal.); μόρινος 'mulberry-colored' (pap.); on ►μορόεις s.v. Here also μορίδες· μάντεις 'seers' (H.), where the latter must be a mistake for μαντίαι vel sim., which Dsc. 4, 37 gives as the Dacian name of the mulberry (see ►βάτος).
•ETYM Gr. μόρον matches with Arm. mor, instr. -iw 'blackberry', whence mor-i, mor-eni 'berry-shrub'. Latin has mōrum 'mulberry', whence (as loans) Germanic words like OHG mūr-bere, mōr-bere, MHG mūlber. In spite of its long vowel, Lat. mōrum may be a loan from Greek; the same holds for Arm. mor. Thus, all forms mentioned may go back to Gr. μόρον. For the compounded form συκόμορον, see ►σῦκον. Pok. 749 gives μῶρον (H.), but I can only find μῶρα· συκάμινα, which Latte corrects to μόρα.

μόροξος [m.] 'kind of pipe-clay, used to bleach clothes' (Gal., Aët.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also μόροχθος (Dsc.).
•ETYM The variation ξ: χθ (like in Ἐρεχθεύς : Ερεχσε̃ς) is typical of Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 263 Anm. 3. The interchange θ/σ may reflect a phoneme *t^y (Pre-Greek: section 5.5).

μόροττον [n.] ἐκ φλοιοῦ πλέγμα τι ᾧ ἔτυπτον ἀλλήλους τοῖς Δημητρίοις 'kind of wickerwork made of bark, with which people used to beat each other during the Demetria' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM See Nilsson 1906: 323[3]. Fur.: 341 connects Calabr. marrotta. A Pre-Greek word is probable (cf. DELG).

μόρρια [n.pl.] name of an oriental mineral ('Derbyshire spat' or a kind of agate); also a vessel made of it, "murra vessel" (Paus.). ◄LW Iran.►
•VAR μούρρινα (Arr.); also μο(υ)ρρίνη [f.sg.] (Peripl. M. Rubr.).
•ETYM Probably of Iranian origin; cf. MoP mori, muri 'glass balls'; the Greek word was borrowed as Lat. murra, vāsa murrina (whence perhaps μούρρινα, -ίνη?). See also Kretschmer Glotta 1 (1909): 337.

μόρσιμος [adj.] 'decided by fate, πεπρωμένος', of ἦμαρ = 'day of death', thence also of man (X 13): 'destined to die, mortal' (Il., also Hdt.). ◄IE *smer- 'think of, remember, care'► •ETYM Related to ►μείρομαι, and traditionally derived from *μόρσις, supposed to be Aeolic for $smr̥$-ti- in the sense of μόρος, ►μοῖρα. This analysis is doubted by DELG s.v. μείρομαι, which prefers a derviation in -σιμος. The connection with the word for 'death' (Lat. mors, IE mr-ti-) or 'mortal' (►μορτός, ►βροτός) is rightly rejected by Frisk.

μορτός [adj.] = ἄνθρωπος, θνητός (H., Call. Fr. 271), rather μόρτος (Latte). ◄IE *mór-to- 'mortal, man'► •COMP μορτοβάτιν· ἀνθρωποβάτιν ναῦν (H.), mg. unclear; cf. μορτο-βάτη 'trodden by the dead' (LSJ). As a second member in Ἀγέ-, Κλεό-, Χαρί-μορτος (Lesbos, Syros, Lato), Bechtel 1921, 1: 123; Masson RPh. 89 (1963): 218ff. (more names in DELG).
•ETYM DELG correctly remarks that there is no reason to take the gloss as Aeolic, in view of the Doric names. Therefore, the vocalism points to original mór-to-*, identical with Skt. márta- and Av. marəta- [m.] 'mortal, man'. See ►βροτός.

μόρτος · μέλας, φαιός 'black, grey' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Uncertain. DELG compares μορύσσω and refers to Pok. 734.

μορύσσω [v.] Only perf. ptc. μεμορυχμένος (v.l. -γ-) 'defiled, blackened' (ν 435, Nic., Q. S., Opp.), also 2sg. aor. opt. μορύξαις 'one should besmear' (Nic. Al. 144). ◄?►
•DER Compar. μορυχώτερον (used as an adverb) 'darker' (v.l. in Arist. Metaph. 987a 10), Μόρυχος epithet of Dionysus in Sicily (Sophr. 94), as his face was besmeared with yeast during the wine harvest; also name of a tragic poet (Ar.) with Μορυχία οἰκία (Pl. Phdr. 227b); see Praechter Herm. 42 (1907): 647.
•ETYM For Μόρυχος, cf. ἥσυχος, βόστρυχος, and other popular words in -χος (see Chantraine 1933: 402ff.); a back-formation from μορύσσω, with analogical -ύσσω, is possible.
Possible Greek cognates are mentioned under ►μόρφνος. Outside Greek, Slavic words for 'smear', etc. have been considered, e.g. Ru. marátь, maráju 'to smear, stain', etc. (but these have IE lengthened grade).

μορφή [f.] 'shape, form, beauty, grace' (θ 170 and λ 367), on the mg. cf. Treu 1955: 175f. ◄?►
•COMP Very often as a second member, e.g. πολύ-μορφος 'with many forms' (Hp., Arist.) with πολυμορφ-ία (Longin., Him.).
•DER Three denominatives: 1. μορφόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to assume a shape or form' (Thphr., Arat., LXX, NT, Plu.), also with μετα-, δια-, etc., whence (μετα-, δια-)μόρφωσις 'shaping, embodiment' (Thphr., Str., Ep. Rom.); μορφ-ώτρια [f.] 'she who shapes, represents' (E. Tr. 437), -ωτικός 'forming' (Gal., Procl.); also μόρφωμα 'form' (Epicur., Aq.), but in trag. (A., E.) as an enlargement of μορφή, cf. Chantraine 1933: 186f.
2. μορφάζω [v.] 'to make gestures, behave' (X.) with -ασμός name of a dance (Ath., Poll.), 'to embellish' (Eust.); ἐπι-μορφάζω 'to pretend, simulate' (Ph.).
3. μορφύνει· καλλωπίζει, κοσμεῖ 'to adorn' (H.), after καλλύνω etc.; from ἄ-μορφος: ἀμορφύνειν· οὐ δεόντως πράττειν 'not proceeding as one should' (H., Antim. 72).
Two names: Μορφώ [f.] epithet of Aphrodite in Sparta (Paus., Lyc.), Μορφεύς [m.] son of Sleep (Or. Met. 11, 635), after the dream-images created by him. Adjective μορφήεις 'with beautiful shape' (Pi.).

•ETYM ἀμερφές· αἰσχρόν (H.) points to a noun *μέρφος [n.] beside μορφή. A verbal root *$merg^{wh}$- vel sim. that could be the basis of the verbal nouns *μέρφος and μορφή is unknown. Lith. márgas 'many-colored, beautiful' and mirgė́ti 'to flicker' (with zero grade), point to a root *$merg^{(w)}$- (Winter's Law) and therefore cannot be related. Van Beek (p.c.) suggests that Lith. mergà 'girl' (which has no good etymology) makes a nice formal match, if from 'beautiful appearance'; we would have to assume a pre-form *$merg^{wh}$-h_2- in which Gr. introduced an o-grade. Lat. fōrma (the long ō is secondary, De Vaan 2008 s.v.) may be a loan from Greek via an intermediary (e.g. Etruscan), but perhaps it could be related to μορφή, assuming a relatively early metathesis *$merg^{wh}$- >> *g^{wh}erm- > *g^{wh}orm- > form-.

μόρφνος [adj.] epithet of αἰετός (Ω 316), also name of a kind of eagle (Hes. Sc. 134, Arist., Lyc.), 'vulture' acc. to Suid.; cf. Thompson 1895 s.v. ◁?▷

•VAR Accentuation after Hdn. Gr. 1, 173 (following Aristarchus); μορφνός is cited as well.

•ETYM Like the rhyming word ὀρφνός 'dark', μόρφνος is usually explained from a meaning 'dark-colored' vel sim. (thus already Hdn., Suid.). Similar words are μοριφόν· σκοτεινόν, μέλαν 'dark, black' (H.), μορύσσω, Μόρυχος, as well as ►μόρον. Connection with μορφή cannot be proven.

Pisani RILomb. 73 (1939-40): 497ff. suggests an Aeolic form *μορβο-φν-ο-ς < IE *mrg^{w}o-g^{wh}n-o-, with a first member related to Skt. mr̥gá- [m.] 'big bird', and influenced by the eagle name νηττοφόνος "killer of ducks" (Arist.); doubtful in view of the haplology that has to be assumed. See ►μορφή.

μόσσυν, -ῡνος [m.] 'tower-like building of wood' (X., A. R., Call., D. H.), also of other wooden constructions (Lyc.). ◁LW?▷

•VAR -νοις [dat.pl.].

•DER Μοσσύν-οικοι [m.pl.] 'inhabitant of the μόσσυνες', name of a people south of the Black Sea (Hecat., Hdt., X., Arist.); μοσσυνικοί· ξύλινοι πίνακες μεγάλοι, ὥστε ἐν αὐτοῖς καὶ ἄλφιτα μάσσειν 'large wooden planks, for pressing barley groats in' (H.); also as an ethnicon in μοσσυνικὰ μαζονομεῖα (Ar. Fr. 417), cf. H.

•ETYM Stated to be a loan from Iranian (comparing Oss. (Digoron) masug 'turris'). However, acc. to Brust 2005: 464ff., this must be regarded as uncertain. Fur.: 340 follows a proposal by Kretschmer Glotta 22 (1934): 112 that the word is a pre-IE substrate word.

μοσσύνειν ⇒μασάομαι.

μόσυλον [n.] kind of cinnamon (Dsc. 1, 14, cf. Gal. 14, 257). ◁?▷

•DER μοσυλῖτις a kind of cassia (ib.).

•ETYM Has been compared with the PN Μόσυλοι. Cf. Redard 1949: 67, 74.

μόσχος 1 [m.] 'offshoot of plants, slip' (Λ 105, Thphr.), 'stalk of a leaf' (Dsc.); 'young cow, heifer, calf' (also fem.), also of other young animals and of young men (Hdt., com., E., pap.). ◁IE *$mos\acute{g}^{h}$o- 'young of an animal', *$mosg^{h}$o- 'young shoot'▷

•COMP As a first member almost only in the sense 'calf', e.g. μοσχο-τρόφος 'raising calves' (pap.), μοσχό-ταυρος [m.] 'bull as old as a μόσχος', i.e. 'bull-calf' (Al. Le. 4, 3); as a second member only in μονό-μοσχος 'with one stalk' (Dsc.).

•DER 1. Diminutive μοσχ-ίδιον 'small shoot' (Ar., Ael.), -ίον 'young calf' (Ephipp., Theoc.), -άριον 'id.' (LXX, pap.).

2. Substantives: μοσχ-άς, -άδος [f.] 'shoot, slip' (Pamphylian), after φυτάς etc. (Chantraine 1933: 353), also 'heifer' (gloss.); -ίας [m.] 'young of a animal' (Poll.), like νεανίας etc.; -ών, -ῶνος [m.] 'calf-stable' (pap.); -ῆ [f.] 'hide of a calf' (Anaxandr.).

3. Adjectives: μόσχ-(ε)ιος 'of a calf' (E., X., Plb., AP); -ινος 'of calf-leather' (pap.), -ίναι· οἱ σκιρτητικοί 'the jumping ones' (H.). 4. Adverb: μοσχ-ηδόν 'like calves' (Nic.). 5. Verb: μοσχεύω [v.] 'to plant a shoot' (D., Thphr., D. H.), also 'to raise a calf' (Philostr.), with μοσχ-εία [f.] 'planting of shoots' (Ph. Byz.), -ευσις [f.] 'id.' (Gp.), -ευμα [n.] 'shoot, offspring' (Thphr., pap.), -ευματικός = malleolaris (gloss.).

Perhaps related is the EN Μόσχοι "youngsters", see Brandenstein 1954b: 82.

•ETYM The form μοσχίον seems to match Arm. mozi, gen. -voy 'calf' exactly. However, a number of objections may be raised against the reconstruction of a Graeco-Armenian isogloss (see Clackson 1994: 152-154). First, the Armenian word may have a number of different origins; it is not excluded that it is a borrowing from Greek, for example. Further, the meaning 'calf' is comparatively recent in Greek beside 'stalk, shoot of a plant', in which meaning μόσχος is traditionally compared with Lith. mãzgas 'bud of a tree'. Also, the semantic development 'heifer, young' > 'shoot' seems strange (though not without parallels: DELG compares E to sucker). Now, the Lithuanian word is mostly derived internally from mègsti 'to knit', so that a couple of options remain:

1) μόσχος 'calf' and Arm. mozi are a Graeco-Armenian isogloss *$mos\acute{g}^{h}$o-, and Lith. is unrelated.

2) Greek and Lith. are related as *$mosg^{h}$o-, and Arm. is a loan from Greek.

3) two etyma *$mos\acute{g}^{h}$o- and *$mosg^{h}$o- merged in Greek (improbable).

μόσχος 2 [m.] 'musk' (Aët., Alex. Trall.). ◁LW Iran.▷

•DER μοσχίτης = ὀσμύλος, name of a sea-octopus that emits a strong odor (sch. Opp. H. 1, 307).

•ETYM From MoP mušk 'id.', which is from Skt. muṣká- [m.] 'testicle', because of the shape of the gland; cf. μύσχον· τὸ ἀνδρεῖον καὶ γυναικεῖον μόριον 'the male and female genitals' (H.). Late Lat. muscus 'id.' with muscātus, -um also belong here, possibly a borrowing from Greek. All other European forms came from Latin.

μότα [n.pl.] · Σαρδιᾶναι βάλανοι 'acorns' (Dsc. 1, 106). ◁PG▷

•ETYM Fur.: 304 compares μόστηνα κάρυα (a nut-bearing tree, Ath. 2, 52b); further, ἄμωτον = καστάνειον 'chestnut' (Ageloch. apud Ath. 2, 54d). So an interchange μο(σ)τ- ~ ἀ-μωτ- remains, which points to Pre-Greek origin.

μοτός [m.] 'lint pledget, lint, compress, tampon' (Hp., Dsc.). ◁PG?(V)▷

•VAR τὰ μότα [pl.] (Call., H.), like μηρός : μῆρα etc., gen. μοτάων (Q. S. 4, 212; verse-final); μοτὸς ... κοῖλος 'drainage tube' (Hp.).

•COMP μοτο-φύλαξ [m.], -άκιον [n.] 'bandage to retain a compress' (medic.), ἔμ-μοτος 'provided or treated with μ.', also 'ulcerating' of wounds (medic. since Hp.), also metaph. (A. Ch. 471), cf. Bechtel 1921(3): 294f.
•DER Diminutive μοτάριον (Gal., EM), Lat. motarium; further μότ-ωμα [n.] 'lint dressing' (Hp., pap.), -ημα [n.] 'linen, oakum' (pap.). Denominative μοτόω [v.] 'to stop up, pack', also with δια-, ἐπι-, περι-, whence (δια-, περι-)μότω-σις 'packing' (medic., LXX), back-formation διάμοτον [n.] 'lint, tent' (Paul.Aeg.); besides ἐμ-μοτέω 'id.' (medic.).
•ETYM Technical medical expressions without etymology. Fur.: 182 compares μόδα· στρώματα 'anything soft for lying on: mattress, etc.'. If this is correct, the word is Pre-Greek.

μοττία ⇒μόχθος.

μοῦσα [f.] 'Muse', goddess of song and poetry (usually in plural), also metaph. 'song, music, poetry' (IA, Il.). ⊲IE? *$*men(s)-d^hh_1$- whence *$mond^h-ih_2$, PG?⊳
•DIAL Aeol. μοῖσα, Dor. μῶσα, Lacon. μῶἀ (Ar.).
•COMP Many compounds, e.g. μουσ-ηγέτης, Aeol. μοισ-αγέτας [m.] 'who leads (the) Muses' = Apollo (Pi., Att.), ἄ-μουσος 'without Muses, uneducated, etc.' (IA), ἀμουσ-ία 'lack of education' (E., Pl.).
•DER A. Substantives: 1. μουσ-εῖον 'seat of the Muses, school for higher education, Museum' (Att.), Lat. mūsēum, -īum, also 'varicolored sculpture of stones, mosaic'; thence late Gr. μουσῖον 'id.' (WH s.v.). 2. Μουσα-ϊσταί [m.pl.] 'guild of worshippers of the Muses' (Rhod.), like Ἑρμαϊσταί etc. 3. μούσωνες· οἱ κορυφαῖοι τῶν μαγείρων, καὶ οἱ τεχνῖται 'the top cooks, i.e. the specialists' (H.), with Μουσώνιος, -ία (if not Etruscan; Solmsen 1909: 49). 4. μουσάριον name of an eye-salve (Alex. Trall.).
B. Adjectives: 1. μουσικός 'belonging to the Muses, musical, educated' with μουσική (τέχνη) 'music, poetry, mental education' (Pi., IA), -ικεύομαι [v.] 'to be a musician' (Duris, S. E., sch.). 2. μοισ-αῖος 'belonging to the Muses' (Pi.). 3. μούσ-ειος 'id.' (E., AP).
C. Verbs: 1. μουσόομαι 'to be led and educated by the Muses' (Ar., Phld., Plu.), -όω 'to endow with music' (Ph.), ἐκ- (E. Ba. 825), κατα- (Jul.), 'to ornate with mosaics' (Tralles), with μουσωτής 'mosaic-worker' (Syria VI^p); probably a back-formation to μουσῖον (see above). 2. μουσ-ίζομαι (E.), -ίσδω (Theoc.) 'to sing, play', with μουσικτάς· ψάλτης, τεχνίτης 'harper, artist' (H.). 3. μουσ-ιάζω 'id.' (Phld.).
•ETYM Although the precise original appellative meaning of μοῦσα is unknown, it is clear that the Muses are connected with poetry and singing. The word may analyzed either as *μόντ-ι̯α or as μόνθ-ι̯α. It cannot be directly related to men- (μένος, μέμονα, etc.). The explanation from *μόντ-ι̯α (as 'mountain woman, nymph') is impossible, as the root of Lat. mont- 'mountain' is not found in Greek (and is actually IE men-, LIV² s.v. ?3. men-). More plausible is the comparison of μοῦσα < μόνθ-ι̯α with ►μενθήρη, ►μανθάνω. In this context, it may be remarked that the Muses are connected with memory and remembrance, which is indeed the meaning of the root IE men- (LIV² s.v. 1. men-*).

So far, all explanations have started from the assumption that the word is IE, while it could also be of Pre-Greek origin (continuing *$mont^y-a$).

μόχθος [m.] 'exertion, difficulty, distress, misery' (Hes. Sc., Pi., trag., mostly poet.). ⊲PG⊳ •COMP Often as a second member, e.g. πολύ-μοχθος 'of much labour' (trag., Arist.), also as a technical expression (in construction) in πρόμοχθοι· τὰ προβεβλημένα τῶν τοίχων 'the projecting parts of the walls' (H., also Delos II^a).
•DER 1. μοχθ-ηρός 'laborious, miserable, worthless, bad' with μοχθηρ-ία 'bad condition' (IA), -όομαι [v.] 'to be troublesome' (Aq.). 2. μοχθ-ήεις (Nic.), -ώδης (Vett. Val.) 'id.'.
Verbs: 1. μοχθ-έω 'to exert oneself, subsist with difficulty' (poet. since K 106), also with ἐκ-, etc., with μοχθήματα [pl.] 'exertions' (trag.); 2. μοχθ-ίζω 'id.' (poet. since B 273), a metrical variant of μοχθέω, see Chantraine 1942: 95, Shipp 1967: 95; 3. μοχθ-όω 'to tire' (Aq.).
•ETYM For the sequence -χθ-, we may compare ἄχθος, ὄχθος, βρόχθος etc. When compared with synonymous ►μόγος, ►μογέω, the words show a variation γ/χθ, which must be Pre-Greek. It is improbable that μόχθος contains an "expressive enlargement" -θ- (Frisk).
Fur.: 319f., 388 connects μοττίας· ᾧ στρέφουσι τῶν ῥυτήρων τὸν ἄξονα 'by which one turns the ἄξων of the reins' (H.) as Cretan for *μοκτίας.

μοχλός [m.] 'handle, lever, long or strong rod', often used to bar doors, 'crossbeam, -bar' (Od.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR μοκλός (Anacr. 88).
•DER Diminutive μοχλ-ίον (Com. Adesp., Luc.), -ίσκος (Hp., Ar.), μοχλ-ικός 'regarding the lever' (Hp., Ph. Bel.).
Verbs: 1. μοχλεύω 'to (re)move with a lever' (Ion. poet., also late prose), also with ἀνα-, ἐκ-, whence μοχλ-εία 'removing with a lever, restoring with a lever' (Arist., medic.), -ευσις 'id.' (Hp.), -ευτής (Ar.), -ευτικός 'pertaining to leverage' (medic.); 2. μοχλέω 'id.' (M 259); 3. μοχλόω 'to shut with a bar' (Ar.).
•ETYM A pre-form *μογ-σλο-ς with the instrumental suffix has been assumed, as seen in Lat. pālus 'pole' < pag-slo-* from *$peh_2\acute{g}$- 'to fix'. The basis has been taken to be the stem seen in ►μόχθος and ►μογέω. The variation κ/χ, and (if correct) the comparison with μόχθος and μογέω, show that the word is Pre-Greek.

μῦ 1 [n.] the twelfth letter of the Greek alphabet (inscr. IV^a). ⊲LW Sem.⊳ •ETYM Transformation of a Semitic name based on νῦ; cf. Hebr. mēm. Ion. has μῶ instead (Democr., Delos III^a; Schulze KZ 42 (1909): 113), like νῶ based on ῥῶ. Cf. Schwyzer: 140.

μῦ 2 [interj.] μυμῦ imitation of a complaint (Ar. Eq. 10). ⊲ONOM⊳ •ETYM Cf. Schwentner 1924: 29 and 50f., and Lat. mū facere. See ►μύζω.

μύαξ, -ἄκος [m.] '(sea) mussel' or its shell (medic., Plin.); 'spoon' (medic.), from 'shell'. ⊲PG?(S), GR?⊳

•ETYM Formation like ἀσπάλαξ, μέμβραξ, ὕραξ, and other animal names (Chantraine 1933: 378f.). Probably derived from μῦς (which may also mean 'mussel'), like μυΐσκη, -ος 'id.'; cf. also Lat. mūsculus 'mussel', and see Strömberg 1943: 109. Connection with μύω 'to shut (oneself)' is not very probable. Although the suffix -αξ is typically Pre-Greek, it is quite possible that this suffix was added to the IE word muHs* 'mouse'.

μυάω →μύω.

μυγερός →μυκαρίς.

μῠδάω [v.] 'to be humid, decay (due to moisture)' (Ion. poet., Plb.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Aor. μυδῆσαι (H.), perf. μεμύδηκα (Dsc.).
•COMP Also with περι-, δια-.
•DER μῡδ-αλέος 'soaked, dripping' (since Λ 54), δια- (A. [lyr.]), -αλόεις 'id.' (AP); μῦδος [m.] 'moisture, corruption' (Nic.) with μυδόεις = μυδαλέος (Nic.), μυδών, -ῶνος [m.] 'putrefaction of an ulcer' (Poll.). (δια-)μύδησις 'moisture, corruption' (medic.), μῡδαίνω [v.] 'to moisten, make wet' (A. R., Nic.), also with δια-. For ► μύδρος, which may be cognate, and ► μύζω 'suck', which was wrongly connected.
•ETYM It is doubtful whether μύδος was the basis of the Greek group, as it is late and rare (see below). A verb or a noun may have served as a basis for μυδαλέος, which is the earlier attestation (formation like ἰκμαλέος, ἀζαλέος, etc.); beside this adjective (probably with metrically lengthened ῡ), the verb μυδαίνω may have its long vowel by analogy (after αὐαλέος : αὐαίνω, etc., see Schulze 1892: 169ff.). μυδάω is ambiguous too: it can be denominative from μύδος, but it can also be understood as a deverbative formation (cf. Schwyzer: 719, also 682 on μαδάω), in which case μύδος would be a late back-formation.
Comparable words outside Greek do not clarify the situation: Lith. máudyti 'to bathe' (full grade iterative), may have secondary d and is probably related to Latv. maût 'to submerge, swim'; Lith. mudrùs 'lively' cannot be from IE mud-, as the expected reflex of Winter's Law is missing (so it must derive from mud^{h}-). Further Skt. mudira- [m.] 'cloud' (class.), also 'frog' and 'lover' (lex.), where all meanings probably derive from múd- [f.] 'lust, joy', módate 'to rejoice'. For the semantics, note Skt. mádati 'to rejoice', beside ► μαδάω. Further, ModDu. mot 'fine rain' and other Germanic words are compared.
Fur.: 249f., 259 connects μύσος and takes δ/σ to point to Pre-Greek origin. The variation of vocalic length may also point in the same direction.

μύδιον →μῦς.

μύδος [adj.] ἄφωνος (H.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR μύνδος (S. Fr. 1072, Lyc. 1375, Call. Fr. 260), in lower Italy 'with small ears' (Rohlfs ByzZ 37 (1937): 58f.).
•ETYM The connection with μύνδος (see also on ► μυκός) immediately presents itself, and it would point to a Pre-Greek word (prenasalization). Connection with Arm. munǰ 'dumb' may seem obvious, but is unclear in the end (Clackson 1994: 45 lists munǰ < mundi̯o-* as 'somewhat dubious'); it could well be a substrate word. Pok. 751 does not help.

μύδρος [m.] 'metal or iron mass roasted in fire, glowing stones (of a volcano)', etc. (Ion., A., S., Antiph., Arist.) on the mg. see Kagarow Eos 31 (1928): 195ff. ◂PG▸ •VAR σμύδρος· διάπυρος σίδηρος 'red-hot iron' (H.).
•COMP As a first member in μυδροκτυπέω 'to forge glowing iron' (A.), -κτύπος (E.).
•DER As a medical technical term, μυδρί-ασις (Ion. -ησις) [f.] 'broadening of the pupils' (Cels., Gal., Cael. Aur.), as if from *μυδρ-ιάω "to glow like metal"; naming motive uncertain.
•ETYM If related to μυδάω, which is formally proximate (μύδρος : μυδαλεός; cf. Debrunner IF 23 (1908-1909): 5 and 9), μύδρος originally denoted the molten, flowing metal mass as opposed to the hard iron. However, the technical meaning rather suggests a Pre-Greek word. This is confirmed by the variant σμύδρος.

μυελός [m.] 'marrow' (Il.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Epic ῡ with metrical lengthening. Late Greek has μυαλός, rejected by Phrynichos.
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. ἀ-μύελος 'without marrow' (Arist.).
•DER μυελ-όεις 'full of marrow' (Od.), -ώδης 'like marrow' (Arist.), -ινος 'soft as marrow' (AP); μυελόομαι [v.] 'to be changed into marrow, consist of marrow' (LXX).
•ETYM For the formation, cf. πιμελή 'fat' with comparable meaning. Has been linked with μυών 'cluster of muscles' (see ► μῦς). Marrow and muscles, both being soft, stand in opposition to the bone. The old word for 'marrow', seen in Skt. majján-, OHG mark, etc. was replaced in Greek by μυελός, and in Latin by medulla.
The word has no further etymology. Chantraine 1933: 244 is probably right that the word is Pre-Greek. Fur.: 350 adduces μυαλός as a Pre-Greek variant, but this may be recent and is unreliable.

μυέω →μύω.

μύζω 1 [v.] 'to suck' (Hp., X.). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Aor. μυζῆσαι (Δ 218), pres. also μυζ-άω, -έω (Hero, late).
•COMP Also with ἐκ-, ἀπο-. As a first member in μύζ-ουρις 'fellatrix' (Com. Adesp.).
•DER (ἐκ-)μύζησις, ἐκ-μυζ-ηθμός, -ησμός 'sucking' (medic.), μυζητής [m.] 'caterpillar' (Sm.).
•ETYM Properly "to do μυ", because of the position of the lips when sucking, and basically identical with ► μύζω 2. The traditional connection with μυδάω is not obvious semantically. See for further details Tichy 1983: 103f., 143f.

μύζω 2 [v.] 'to mutter, moan' (Hp., A., Ar., Arist.). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Aor. μύξαι (Men.), fut. μύξω (D. L.), perf. ptc. μεμυζότε (Antim.), after Hom. πεφυζότες.
•COMP Also with ἐπι- in ἐπέμυξαν (Δ 20), ἐπεμύξατο· ἐπεστέναξεν, ἐπεγόγγυσεν 'groaned, muttered' (H.).

•DER μυγμός [m.] 'moan, sigh' (A., Arist.), also 'production of the sound μ' (D. T.); further μυχμός 'id.' (ω 416).
•ETYM Properly "to say μῦ", an old onomatopoeic formation with several correspondences, like Lat. mūgiō 'to roar', Hitt. mūgae-^{zi} 'to evoke, invoke, entreat', OHG muckazzen 'to speak slowly', etc. See Tichy 1983: 150. A connection with ► μύσσομαι may also be envisaged. See ► μυκάομαι, ► μῦθος.

μῦθος [m.] 'word, discourse, conversation, deliberation, story, saga, tale, myth' (Il.); on mg. and use see Fournier 1946: 15f. ⊲PG?⊳
•COMP μυθολόγος [m.] 'story-teller', whence -έω, -ία (Att.), -εύω 'to tell' (Od.), metr. for -έω; πολύ-μυθος 'rich in words (stories)' (Il., Arist.).
•DER 1. Diminutives: μυθ-άριον (Str.), -ίδιον (Luc.), -ύδριον (Tz.). 2. Adjectives: μυθ-ικός 'belonging to the μ.' (Pl., Arist.), -ώδης 'fabulous' (Att.).
3. Verbs: a) μυθέο-μαι 'to tell' (Il.) with μυθη-τής 'story-teller' (Antig.), μυθητῆρες· στασιασταί 'leaders of a revolt' (H.), also μυθιῆται (like οἰκιῆ-ται, πολι-ῆται) = στασιασταί (Anacr. 16; cf. Coll. Alex. 248f.); also sing. with unclear mg. (Phoen. 1, 7); b) μυθεύω 'id.' (E., Arist.) with μύθευμα 'tale' (Arist., D. H.); c) μυθίζω 'id.' (Dor. in Ar. Lys., Theocr., AP). On itself stands μύθα· φωνή. Κύπριοι 'voice (Cypr.)' (H.).
•ETYM Frisk thinks that μῦθος is originally a creation of popular and everyday language, drawn from an onomatopoeic element μῦ. DELG objects that there is no trace of sound-imitation, not even in the earliest texts. There are no comparanda; the word is quite possibly Pre-Greek.

μυῖα [f.] 'fly' (Il.). ⊲IE mus-ih₂*⊳ •VAR Also μῦα.
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. μυ(ι)ο-σόβη [f.] 'fan against flies, fly-flap' (Delos III^a, Men.), ► μύωψ 1 [m.] 'horse-fly; goad, spur', ► κυνάμυια [f.] 'dog-fly'.
•DER 1. μυῖτις, -ιδος [f.] = θλάσπι, 'Capsella bursa pastoris' (Ps.-Dsc.), also μυιό-πτερον (ibd.), as the partition of the fruit was compared to the wing of a fly (Strömberg 1940: 55). 2. μυϊκός 'pertaining to the fly' (gloss.), μυιώδης name of a god in Elis, who was also called μυί-αγρος "fly-catcher" (Plin.). 3. μυῖνδα παίζειν 'play the game μυῖα χαλκῆ' (Poll., H.).
•ETYM Formation with the suffix -ι̯α-, like νῆσσα, κίσσα, and other animal names (Chantraine 1933: 98). An old word for 'fly, mosquito' is found in several languages, but it was subject to all kinds of (tabooistic?) transformations. PGr. mus-i̯a*, whence μυῖα, agrees best with Lith. musìa, musė̃ 'fly' and with the Slavic group of OCS mъšica 'mosquito'. Lat. musca 'fly' has a suffix -k-, and Arm. mun (gen. mn-oy) 'mosquito' a suffix -n-, if it derives from mus-no-*. A basis without -s- is possible too, like in ON mý [n.] < PGm. mū-i̯a-*. Forms with (secondarily developed?) velar are found as well: OHG mucka 'id.', Slavic words (with ou-diphthong) like Ru. múxa 'fly' < IE mous-h₂-*, etc. Onomatopoeic origin (from the humming sound) is quite possible; see WH.

μῡκάομαι [v.] 'to low, bellow' (of cattle), metaph. 'to roar, crack' (almost only poet.). ⊲IE muH-* 'bellow'⊳ •VAR Aor. μῠκεῖν (Il.), μῡκήσασθαι (Ar.), perf. μέμῡκα (Il.).

•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀμφι-, παρα- (κ 413). As a second member in ἐρί-μῡκος 'lowing loudly' (Hom.).
•DER Action nouns: μῡκ-ηθμός [m.] 'the bellowing' (Il.), Chantraine 1933: 137; -ημα 'id.' (E., Arist., Call.), -ησις 'id.' (Arist.); back-formation μυκή 'id.' (A. R.).
Agent nouns: μυκ-ητής, Dor. -ατάς 'the bellowing' (Theoc.), -ήτωρ 'id.' (Nonn.), -ητίαι σεισμοί (Arist.), "σείοντες τὴν γῆν μετὰ βρόμου" 'shaking the earth with a roar'; cf. on βρασματίας s.v. ► βράσσω; μυκάμων 'bellowing' (Hymn. Is.).
Adjective μυκητικός 'bellowing' (Corn., S. E.). Adverb μυκηδόν 'with bellowing' (unknown poet POxy. 864, 22).
•ETYM The pair μῠκεῖν : μέμῡκα agrees with κρᾰγεῖν : κέκρᾱγα, λακεῖν : λέληκα, etc. The present μυκάομαι, to which μυκήσασθαι is an innovation, was formed from this pair after intensive verbs like βέβρῡχα: βρῡχάομαι (Fraenkel 1912: 95f.[3]); on the middle diathesis, see Schwyzer 1950: 227.
The Greek verb has direct couterparts in Balto-Slavic and Germanic: Lith. mũkti, 1sg. mūkiù 'to bellow', Ru. myčát', Ukr. múkaty, etc., MHG mūhen 'id.'. Lat. mūgiō, etc. have IE g* (see on ► μύζω 2).

μυκαρίς [?] · νυκτερίς 'bat' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM The assumption of a taboo reshaping of νυκτερίς based on μυκτήρ, μύξα, μύκητες, etc. is unconvincing. Latte thinks the gloss is corrupt (see DELG), but this cannot be maintained as there is no argument. Fur.: 122 compares μυγερός = νυκτικόραξ 'long-eared owl' (Cyran. 29), so the word could be Pre-Greek.

μύκη [f.] · ἡ θήκη 'chest, box' (Suid.). ⊲PG?, IE? mu(H)k-n-*⊳ •VAR Cf. μύκων· σωρός, θημών 'heap' (H.), and ἀμύκαρις· πλῆθος, ἄθροισμα 'mass, aggregate' (H.).
•ETYM The identification is by Fur.: 372. If the third gloss is correctly compared, the ἀ- is evidence for a Pre-Greek word. Pok. 752 compares ON múgi 'heap', OE mūga 'heap, mass', Bav. Mauche 'Auswuchs, Fussgeschwulst der Pferde'. See now Kroonen 2009: 116ff. on the possibility to reconstruct an IE n-stem for μύκων beside a Proto-Germanic paradigm nom. mūhō*, gen. mukkaz*.

μύκηρος [m.] 'almond, kind of nut' (Ath. 2, 52c and 53b, H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Lacon. μούκηρος, acc. to Seleuc. and Pamphil. apud Ath. 2, 52c and 53c Laconian and Teian for ἀμυγδάλη; another by-form is ἀμιχθαλόεις; further forms given are ἄμυκτον· γλυκύ 'sweet'. οἱ δὲ ἄμικτον (H.), and ἀμυκλίς· γλυκύς, ἡδύς 'id.' (H.), see Fur.: 140.
•COMP μουκηρό-βατος (Ath. 2, 53b), -βας (H.) 'καρυοκατάκτης, nutcracker', probably for -βάγος = -ϝάγος to (ϝ)άγνυμι 'break'; cf. βάγος· κλάσμα 'fragment, morsel' ... Λάκωνες (H.); details in Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 95f.
•ETYM The variants (prothetic ἀ-, υ/ι, κτ/ γδ/ χθ, etc.) show that the word is Pre-Greek.

μύκης, -ητος [m.] 'mushroom', also metaph., e.g. 'mushroom-like protuberance, any knob or rounded body, cab or cap at the end of a scabbard, snuff of a lamp-wick, membrum virile' (IA). ⊲PG⊳

•VAR Gen. also -ου (Ion. -εω), plur. -αι.
•DER μυκήτ-ινος 'made of mushrooms' (Luc.), μυκόομαι 'to become like a mushroom, become spongy' (medic.).
•ETYM Traditionally taken to be a formation in -η(τ)- from a noun possibly found in Lat. mūcus 'snivel, mucus of the nose'; for the development of meaning, cf. Sln. glíva 'agaric' beside Lith. gleĩvės 'slime'; for further details, see ►μύσσομαι. However, Fur.: 298 correctly remarks that the meanings of this word cannot all be explained by derivation from μύσσομαι 'to snuff, blow one's nose'. He assumes a basic meaning 'prominent, extremity', as μύκης may also mean 'stump of a felled olive tree' (inscr.). He connects the word with μύσκλοι· οἱ πυθμένες τῶν ξηρῶν σύκων 'stalks of dried-up fig trees' (H.), which implies that the word is Pre-Greek (interchange κ/σκ). On the suffix -ης, -ητος in Pre-Greek, see Fur.: 172[118].

μύκλος [adj.] 'lascivious, lewd' (Archil. 183 as a PN, Lyc. 771, H.), as epithet of the pack mule (Lyc. 816), also name of the ass itself? (PTeb. 409, 7, I[p]; written μοικ-, reading very uncertain). Acc. to H., μύκλοι or μύκλαι are 'black stripes at the neck and feet of the ass'; according to EM 594, 18 and sch. Lyc. 771, μύκλος is 'a fold on the ass's neck'. ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Cf. μύσκλοι (below).
•DER μυχλός, a Phocaean name of a stallion ass according to H., but also = σκολιός, ὀχευτής, λάγνης, μοιχός, ἀκρατής 'twisted, someone lewd, lecherous, adulterer, not in control'; cf. also μύσκλοι· σκολιοί (H.).
•ETYM μυχλός has been reduced to a pre-form *μυκσλός and identified with Lat. mūlus 'mule', if from mukslo-;* a deviating formation is found in Alb. mushk 'mule' as well as in Slavic forms like ORu. mъskъ 'mule'.
As the breeding of mules originates from Pontic Asia Minor (cf. on ►ὄνος), Frisk remarks that we are probably dealing with a Wanderwort. I do not agree with this: the variants (notably κ/χ, σκ) are typical for Pre-Greek words (Pre-Greek section 5.5), and thus receive an easy explanation. Fur.: 299[25] thinks that μύκλος is a separate word.

μυκός [adj.] · ἄφωνος 'speechless' (H.), alphabetically in a wrong position. ⊲PG?, ?⊳
•VAR With dental stop: μυττός, μύτης, μύδος (H.), μύνδος (S. Fr. 1072, Lyc. 1375, Call. Fr. 260), in lower Italy 'with small ears' (Rohlfs ByzZ 37 (1937): 58f.), μυναρός (H.) 'id.'.
On itself sands μύρκος· ὁ καθόλου μὴ δυνάμενος λαλεῖν. Συρακούσιοι, ἐνεός, ἄφωνος 'who is unable to speak at all, dumb' (H.); μυρικᾶς· ἄφωνος, ἐν ἑαυτῷ ἔχων ὃ μέλλει πράττειν 'who keeps for himself what he is going to do' (H.), cf. von Blumenthal 1930: 42.
•ETYM Skt. mū́ka- 'dumb' has been compared. Perhaps from sound-imitating mū. For the dental formations, cf. Lat. mūtus. Arm. munǰ 'dumb' < mun(d)i̯o-* (?) can be connected with μύνδος. Lat. murcus 'mutilated' (he who cuts off his thumbs, so as to avoid becoming a soldier) corresponds formally with μύρκος; it is rather a loan from Latin in Sicily than the other way around (see WH s.v.).

Does μυρικᾶς continue a Pre-Greek form murʸ-k-*? The other forms do not fit in easily; it is very unclear whether the words with μυ(ν)δ- belong here. The form μύνδος may be a prenasalized variant beside μύδος (and must therefore be retained pace Latte, whose note is unclear to me). It seems that μυναρός is a misreading for *μυνδρος.

μύκων [?] · σωρός, θημών (H.). ⇒μύκη.

μυλαικά [n.pl.] a kind of figs (Ath. 3, 78a). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM Perhaps from a place called Μυλαι.

μυλάσασθαι [v.] · τὸ σῶμα ἢ τὴν κεφαλὴν σμήξασθαι. Κύπριοι 'to wipe off the body or the head (Cypr.)' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Taken as a denominative from *μύλη or *μῦλον, and connected with a Slavic word for 'soap': Cz. mýdlo, Ru. mýlo, etc. These derive from a Slavic verb myti 'to wash' < m(i)uH-* with the instrument suffix -dʰlo-, which is the Slavic equivalent of Gr. -tro-. The connection is therefore highly improbable.

μύλη [f.] 'handmill, mill', '(the lower) millstone' (Od.), metaph. 'molar' (LXX), 'knee-cap, hard formation in a woman's womb' (Hp., Arist.). ⊲IE melh₁-* 'grind'⊳ •VAR Hell. and late also μύλος [m.] (LXX, NT, Str.), cf. Fraenkel 1912: 58.
•COMP μυλο-ειδής 'like a millstone' (H 270), μυλή-φατος 'ground by a mill' (β 355, A. R., Lyc.); χειρο-μύλη 'quern' (X.), also -μυλος (Edict. Diocl.), -μυλον (Cass. Fel.), cf. on βούτυρον; diminutive -μύλιον (Dsc., pap.).
•DER A. Substantives: 1. μύλαξ, -ακος [m.] 'millstone, big rounded stone' (*M*161, AP, Opp.), cf. λίθαξ etc. (Chantraine 1933: 379). 2. Hence, with a suffix -ρ-, μύλακρος [m.] 'millstone' (Alcm.), plur. = γομφίοι ὀδόντες 'molars' (H.); -ακρίς, -ίδος [f.] as an attribute of λᾶας 'millstone' (Alex. Aet.), substantively 'cockroach', also (influenced by ἀκρίς) 'locust' (Ar. Fr. 583, Poll.); also -αβρίς 'id.' (Pl. Com., Poll.), perhaps after ἁβρός, ἅβρα; -ηθρίς 'id.' (Poll.). 3. μυλών, -ῶνος [m.] 'millhouse, mill' (Att.) with -ωνικός 'miller' (pap.), diminutive -ώνιον (gloss.). 4. μυλωθρός [m.] 'miller' (Att., Arist.); cf. Chantraine 1933: 373 on the rather unclear formation; hence -ωθρίς [f.] 'milleress' name of a comedy of Euboulos; -ωθρικός 'belonging to a miller' (Plu.), -ωθρέω 'to grind' (Men.); back-formation -ωθρον = μυλών (Phot.)? Also -ωθριαῖοι epithet of καλυπτῆρες (perhaps = 'roof-tiles', Delos II[a], reading uncertain); also μυλωρός 'miller' (Aesop., Poll.), after πυλωρός, etc. 5. diminutive μυλάριον 'small handmill' (pap.). 6. μυλεύς [m.] epithet of Zeus as keeper of mills (Lyc.). 7. μυλίας [m.] (λίθος) 'millstone, stone from which millstones were made' (Pl., Arist., Str.), see Chantraine 1933: 96. 8. μυλίτης [m.] (λίθος, ὀδούς) 'millstone, molar' (Gal.). 9. Μυλόεις· ποταμὸς Ἀρκαδίας 'a river in Arcadia' (H.), but cf. the HN Μολόεις, usually connected with Skt. mála- 'dirt', s.v. ►μολύνω.
B. Adjectives, all rare and late: 1. μύλ-ιος 'belonging to a mill' (Procop.); 2. μυλ-ικός 'id.' (Ev. Luc., Gal.); 3. -ινος 'consisting of millstones' (Smyrna); 4. -αῖος 'working in a mill' (AP), -αῖον [n.] 'handmill' (pap.); 5. -ιαῖοι ὀδόντες 'molars' (medic.); 6. -όεις 'consisting of a millstone, belonging to a mill' (Nic., Nonn.); 7. -ητικὴ ἔμπλαστρος 'remedy for toothache' (Gal.).

C. Verbs, all rare: 1. μυλιάω only in μῡλιόωντες [ptc.] 'gnashing with the teeth' (Hes. Op. 530), on -ιάω Schwyzer: 732; 2. μυλόομαι 'to be hardened, cicatrized' (Hp.). On itself stands μύλλω = βινέω (Theoc. 4,58) with μυλ(λ)άς [f.] 'whore' (Phot., Suid.), μυλλός [m.] 'cake in the form of the pudenda muliebria' (Ath. 14, 647a; Sicilian).

•ETYM The primary verbal noun μύλη, secondary μύλος (perhaps after λίθος or ὄνος ἀλέτης), and the primary yod-present μύλλω are consistent in their u-vocalism, which is now explained by Vine 1999b: 565 as a raising oli̯ > uli̯*, comparing φύλλον beside Lat. folium, and a few more examples. The υ then spread from μύλλω to μύλη before the former lost its agricultural meaning.

The yod-present is seen in OHG muljan, ON mylia 'to crush', from a zero grade which also appears in W malu 'to grind' and Arm. malem 'to crush'. Further verbal forms are OIr. melim [1sg.], OCS meljǫ [1sg.] from melH-*, Go. malan, Lith. malù [1sg.] from an o-grade, like Hitt. $malla-^{i}$ / mall- < molH-ei*; Lat. molō is probably from melō* like OIr. melim.

The technical meaning 'grind' may have evolved as a specialization from 'rub' or 'crush'. As a verbal noun, μύλη looks archaic in Greek, while μύλλω, which developed an obscene meaning, was replaced by ►ἀλέω, which was also inherited, but limited to the eastern languages. ►μάλευρον stands by itself. Remarkable is the e-vowel of Myc. me-re-u-ro 'meal' and me-re-ti-ri-ja 'female grinders', which seems to point to a root $*melh_1$- instead of the usual reconstruction $*melh_2$-.

μύλλον [n.] 'lip' (Poll. 2, 90). ◂ONOM?▸

•DER Verbs μυλλ-αίνω, -ίζω (Phot., Suid.), μυλλάω in μεμύλληκε· διέστραπται, συνέστραπται 'distort the mouth, make mouths' (H.). With intensive reduplication μοιμύλλειν· θηλάζειν, ἐσθίειν 'to suck, eat'. καὶ τὰ χείλη προσάπτειν ἀλλήλοις 'attach the lips to each other' (H., Hippon., Com. Adesp.), cf. μοιμυάω s.v. ►μύω.

Adjective, probably a back-formation: μυλλός (cod. -ύ-) = καμπύλος, σκολιός, κυλλός, στρεβλός 'bent, curved, crippled, twisted' (H.), also Eust. 906, 54 'swivel-eyed'.

•ETYM Frisk compares a Germanic group with a single consonant: OHG mūla [f.], MHG mūl [n.] 'mouth, jaws', and further Skt. mū́la [n.] 'root', but acc. to Mayrhofer KEWA s.v., Dravidian origin cannot be excluded for the latter. It does not seem that μῦθος is connected, nor that the gemination is expressive. Perhaps an onomatopoeia.

μύλλος [m.] name of a Pontic fish, also found in the Danube (Ar. Fr. 414, Ephipp., Gal., Ael.). ◂?▸

•VAR μύλος (Opp.).

•ETYM As there is no further specification of the fish (see Thompson 1947 s.v.), all explanations are up in the air. Therefore, the connection with the group of μέλας, under the assumption that we are dealing with the mullet (Strömberg 1943: 22; see also WH s.v. mulleus), is a pure hypothesis. Borrowed as Lat. mullus.

μύλλω ⇒μύλη.

μῦμα [n.] 'meat, cut up and mixed with blood, cheese, honey, vinegar and tasty herbs' (Com. apud Ath. 14, 662 d). ◂?▸

•ETYM Unexplained. See ►μυττωτός.

μῦμαρ ⇒ἀμύμων.

μυναρός, μύνδος ⇒μυκός.

μύνη [f.] 'pretext, πρόφασις' (φ 111). ◂?▸

•DER Aeol. μύναμαι in μυνάμενος [ptc.] (Alc. Z 69), mg. uncertain: 'to pretend'?, 'to divert'?

•ETYM The former connection with ἀμύνω, ἀμεύσασθαι is impossible because the prothetic vowel developed from a laryngeal, provided that the latter words are IE. μύνη might be a back-formation from μύναμαι (Hamm 1957: 143[352]).

μυννάκια [n.pl.] 'kind of shoes' (Poll. 7, 89, Ath. 351a). ◂GR▸

•ETYM Reported (by Poll.) to have been named after their inventor.

μύξα 1 [f.] 'slime'. ⇒μύσσομαι.

μύξα 2 [f.] 'kind of plum-tree'. ◂PG▸

•ETYM Fur.: 129[52] (also 393) compares μυσκλον 'id.' (Orib. Syn. 6, 43).

μύραινα [f.] 'kind of eel, moray' (Sophr., A., Ar.). ◂PG(S,V)▸

•VAR Epich. -ῡ-; σμῡ́ραινα (Pl. Com., Mnesim., Arist.).

•DER μῦρος (Dorio apud Ath. 7, 312f), σμῦρος (Arist.) [m.] 'kind of sea-eel'; cf. e.g. λύκαινα : λύκος; extensive treatment in Thompson 1947 s.vv.

•ETYM Connected with σμύρις 'emery powder', etc. by Wood AmJPh. 49 (1928): 172, and with words for 'grease, fat', e.g. OHG smero < IE smer(u)-* (Pok. 970f.), which would fit the eel as a fat creature.

However, this does not explain the Greek ῡ. Names of fishes are often Pre-Greek. The suffix -αινα is well-known in such words (Fur.: 171[117]), as is the prothetic σ-. Therefore, it is a clear Pre-Greek word.

μυρίκη [f.] 'tamarisk' (Il.). ◂PG?(S)▸

•VAR Originally ῐ; ῑ from metrical lengthening, see Solmsen 1901: 14f.

•DER μυρῑ́κ-ινος 'of the tamarisk' (Z 39, pap.), -ίνεος 'id.' (AP), -ώδης 'tamarisk-like' (Thphr.); Μυρικαῖος epithet of Apollo in Lesbos (sch. Nic. Th. 613).

•ETYM Ending in -ίκη (like ἑλίκη, ἀδίκη), μυρίκη is a loan of unclear origin, probably Pre-Greek word. In favor of Semitic origin is Lewy 1895: 44: connection to Hebr. mārar 'to be bitter' because of the bitter bark (cf. μυρίκη· δυσώδης H., related to Aram. mōrīqā 'crocus'?); cf. also ►μύρρα?

μῡρίος [adj.] 'countless, immense', usually plur. (Il., poet.). ◂?▸

•VAR μύριοι [pl.] 'ten thousand' (Hes. Op. 252).

•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. μυριό-καρπος 'with countless fruits' (S.), -φόρος (ναῦς) 'freighter carrying 10,000 measures' (Th.); also μυριόντ-αρχος 'commander of 10,000 men' (A., after ἑκατόντ-αρχος).

•DER μυριάς, -άδος [f.] 'the number 10,000, myriad' (IA); μυρι-οστός 'ten thousandth' (Att.), after ἑκατοστός, εἰκοστός; -αστός 'id.' (Hell.), after μυριάς; -οστύς [f.] = μυριάς (X.); μυρι-άκις 'ten thousand times' (Att.), also -οντάκις 'id.' (H. as an explanation of μυριάκις; after ἑκατοντάκις); μυριονταδ-ικός 'of the number ten thousand' (Theo Sm.), from *μυριοντάς after ἑκατοντάς.

•ETYM No etymology.

μύρμηξ, -ηκος [m.] 'ant', metaph. 'submarine rock' (IA, Lyc.), also as a proper name (Hdt.), also 'gauntlet with metal studs' (Poll.). For the mg. cf. μυρμηκία 'ant-hill; throng of people'. ⊲IE *morui- 'ant'⊳ •VAR Dor. (Theoc.) μύρμᾱξ, -ᾱκος. Also μύρμος (Lyc.), βύρμαξ, βόρμαξ, ὅρμικας (H.).
•COMP Rare in compounds, e.g. μυρμηκο-λέων (LXX) and λεοντο-μύρμηξ (Hdn. Gr.), name of a fabulous animal. Cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 256.
•DER 1. μυρμηκ-ιά [f.] 'ant-hill' (Arist., Thphr.), 'crowd' (Com. Adesp., H.), 'triller, arpeggio' (Pherecr.). 2. μυρμηκ-ία 'wart under the skin', or the irritation caused by it (Hp., Ph.), with μυρμηκιάω [v.] 'to be afflicted with warts' (LXX), whence -ίασις (medic.). 3. μυρμήκ-(ε)ιον [n.] name of an ant-like spider (Nic., Plin.). 4. μυρμηκίας λίθος 'stone with ant- or wart-like lumps on it' (Plin.), ~ χρυσός 'gold dug out by μύρμηκες' (Hld.). 5. μυρμηκῖτις (λίθος) 'id.' (Plin.). 6. μυρμηκ-ώδης 'ant-like' (Plu.), -ώεις 'full of warts' (Marc. Sid.), metrically lengthened from -όεις. 7. μυρμηκίζω as a medical expression 'to feel as though ants were running under the finger' i.e. 'to be quick and feeble' (of the pulse); 'to itch' (medic.). On itself stands μυρμηδών· ξυνοικία τῶν μυρμήκων, a transformation of μύρμηξ, and μυρμηδόνες· οἱ μύρμηκες ὑπὸ Δωριέων (H.), a derivation from μύρμος (see above) after τενθρηδών and other insect names; cf. also σφηκών and other names of habitation in -ών.
•ETYM The suffix is found in σκώληξ 'worm, maggot', σφήξ 'wasp', etc. Parallel forms with a velar suffix (probably genetically unrelated to μύρμηξ) are Lat. formīca 'ant' and Skt. valmīka- [m., n.] 'ant-hill'. The basic form was probably morui-. It is found in various forms, most of which underwent some deformation, perhaps of tabooistic origin. Influence of u(o)rmo/i- 'worm' may also be assumed.
IE morui-* is directly continued in Av. maoiri-, OIr. moirb, ORu. morovij, etc.; IE mour-, meur- in e.g. ON maurr- [n.] < PGm. maura-*, OSw. myra [f.] < PGm. meuriōn-*. Other forms are Skt. vamrá- [m.] (cf. also valmīka- above) and βόρμαξ, βύρμαξ, where β- probably stands for ϝ-; in ὅρμικας, a ϝ- may have been lost. In Lat. formīca, the f- may go back to m- by dissimilation (cf. on μορμώ); it would then be close to μύρμηξ.

μύρομαι [v.] 'to shed tears, bewail' (Il.), later (Lyc., A. R.) also 'to flow' (of a river) and 'to drip' (of blood). ⊲ONOM⊳ •VAR Only pres. and ipf. (3pl. ipf. μῦρον Hes. Sc. 132), except for aor. μύρασθαι (Mosch.).
•COMP Also with περι-, προσ-.
•ETYM If it originally refers to a murmuring sound, μύρομαι is onomatopoeic, and related to ►μορμύρω. The connection with Lat. muria [f.] 'pickle', Lith. mùrti, 1sg. mùrstu 'to become wet', etc. is not preferable. Probably derived from the same root is the seond member of ἁλι-μυρήεις, -μυρής, an epic epithet of ποταμός, πέτρη, etc., although its proper meaning remains uncertain.

μύρον [n.] 'sweet-smelling oil, salve, perfume' (Archil., Lesb. lyr., IA). ⊲?⊳
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. μυρο-πώλης 'seller of salves' (Att.). μυρ-εψός [m.] 'preparer of unguents' (Critias, Arist.).
•DER 1. Substantives: diminutives μυρ-ίδιον (Ar.), -άφιον (Arr.); μυρίς [f.] 'salve box' (Poll.), cf. σπυρίς, also = μυρρίς (Thphr.), see ►μύρρα; μύρωμα [n.] = μύρον (Ar. Ec. 1117); μυρίνης οἶνος (Hell., com., Ael.), beside μυρρίνης (see ►μύρρα and ►μύρτος). 2. Adjectives: μυρ-ηρός 'belonging to μύρον' (A., Ar.), like ἐλαιηρός; -όεις 'full of salves, smelling like salves' (AP, Man.), -ώδης 'salve-like' (sch.). 3. Verbs: μυρίζω (IA), σμυρίζω (Archil.) 'to salve, perfume'; μυρόομαι 'to be salved or perfumed' (Ar. Ec. 1117 [v.l. μεμύρισμαι]).
•ETYM Evidently a culture word, μύρον may be a loan (thus Chantraine 1933: 16). Traditionally connected as IE (together with σμύρις 'emery') with a Germano-Celtic etymon for 'smear, fat': OHG smero 'smear', OIr. smi(u)r 'marrow' (perhaps also in Lat. medulla if < (s)meru-lo-*). However, this comparison does not explain the Greek -u-. The isolated form σμυρίζω may rest on association with σμύρις, σμύρνα, but it may also be a variant.
►μύραινα is also a Pre-Greek word on account of the variants in σμ-, and probably unrelated. See also ►σμύρις, ►σμύρνα.

μύρρα [f.] 'myrrh, sweet-smelling wood of the myrrh-plant' (Sapph., Thphr.). ⊲LW Sem.⊳
•DER μυρρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'sweet cicely, Myrrhis odorata' (Dsc. 4, 115) beside μυρίς (Thphr. CP 6, 9, 3) from (or after?) μύρον (cf. below). μυρρίτης (-τις) [m., f.] name of a stone (Plin., "myrrhae colorem habet"), and of a wine (Edict. Diocl.); also μυρρίνης (scil. οἶνος; Hell. com.), if not from ►μύρτος or ►μύρον.
•ETYM From Semitic, cf. Aram. mūrā, Hebr. mōr, Arab. murr 'myrrh' (Lewy 1895: 42ff.); should ►μυρίκη also be included here? Borrowed as Lat. murra, murrina. According to Ath. 15, 688c, μύρρα stems from μύρον. μύρρα was replaced by unrelated σμύρνα, ►σμύρνη, which had the same meaning; this may in turn be a back-formation from Σμυρναία [adj.] (properly 'Smyrnaean'), which arose as an epithet of μύρρα. Further details in Heubeck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 1 (1949): 272f.

μύρσος [adj.] · κόφινος ὦτα ἔχων 'basket with ears', ὅς καὶ ἄρριχος 'a kind of wicker basket' (H., Call. Fr. anon. 102). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •ETYM Grošelj Živa Ant. 5 (1955): 112 compares Etr. murś 'urna'. Fur.: 65 accepts this, and further compares (213) βυρρός· κάνθαρος. Τυρρηνοί 'dung beetle'; metaph. 'drinking cup' (H.). Probably Pre-Greek.

μύρτος [f.] 'myrtle, twig or spray of myrtle' (Pi., Simon.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR μύρτον [n.] = μυρσίνη (Archil. acc. to EM 324, 14), 'myrtleberry' (Att.), 'pudenda muliebria' (Ar.); on the difference in gender see Schwyzer 1950: 30.
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. μυρτο-πώλης [m.] 'myrtle seller' (Sammelb. I[a]), ἱερό-μυρτος [f.] = μυρσίνη ἀγρία (Ps.-Dsc.).
•DER 1. μύρσινος 'of myrtle' (Eub., Thphr.), Att. μύρρινος, also μύρτινος; μυρσίνη, Att. -ρρ- [f.] 'myrtle, -twig, -crown' (IA), μυρσινο-ειδής (h. Merc. 81), μυρσιν-ίτης (οἶνος) 'myrtle wine' (Dsc.), 'kind of stone' (Plin.), probably after the color, 'kind of Euphorbia' (Dsc.), after the form of the leaves, acc. to Strömberg 1940: 43; -ινος 'of myrtle' (Dsc., Aët.), Μυρριν-οῦς, -οῦντος [m.], -οῦττα [f.] names of Attic demes, with -ούσιοι [pl.] 'inhabitants of M.'; μυρσινᾶτον ἔλαιον 'myrtle oil' (medic.); also μυρτίνη [f.] 'kind of olive, kind of pear-tree' (Nic.). 2. μυρτίς, -ίδος [f.] 'myrtle-berry' (Hell.), also μυρτία· μυρσίνη, καὶ μυρτίς (H.), μυρτάς, -άδος [f.] 'kind of pear-tree', etc. (Nic., Gal.). 3. μυρτίδανον [n.] 'myrtle-like plant', etc. (Hp.), perhaps from μυρτίς, cf. ἐρευθέ-δανον 'madder', Strömberg 1940: 147f. 4. μυρταλίς· ἡ ὀξυμυρρίνη, ὡς Λάκωνες 'butcher's broom (Lacon.)' (H.), like συκ-αλίς etc. (Strömberg 1940: 78). 5. μυρτ-ίτης = μυρσιν-ίτης (Thphr., Nic.). 6. μυρτεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'murtetum' (gloss.), also μυρσεών 'id.' (gloss.). 7. μυρτωταί [f.pl.] 'vases decorated with myrtle-twigs?' (vase-inscr., AmJArch 31, 349f.; like μηλωτή etc.). 8. μύρτων, -ωνος [m.] 'weakling, debauchee' vel sim. (Luc. Lex.). 9. μυρτίλωψ· ζῷόν τι 'an animal' (H.); formation like αἰγίλωψ etc. with a Pre-Greek suffix. TNs and PNs like Μύρτος, Μυρτῷος, Μύρσινος, Μύρσος, Μυρτίλος, Μυρσίλος, etc.; see Heubeck Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 1 (1949): 271.

•ETYM Because of the phonetic similarity and their semantic proximity, μύρτος, μύρρα, μυρίκη are usually considered to be mutually cognate Semitic loans without further argumentation, as first stated by Lewy 1895: 42ff. (see especially Heubeck op. cit. 282, with further hypotheses). However, the variation μυρτ-/μυρσ- points to Pre-Greek origin (see Fur. 259) and should not be explained by assuming all sorts of cross-influence. Semitic origin is also rejected by DELG. Heubeck (l.c.) takes the group as coming from Asia Minor, which does not exclude that it is Pre-Greek.

Lat. murtus, -um, as well as Arm. murt, MoP mūrd, were borrowed from μύρτος, -ον.

μῦς, μυός [m.] 'mouse, rat' (IA, etc.), metaph. of sea-animals: 'mussel, kind of whale', etc. (A. Fr. 34 [= 59 Mette]); details in Thompson 1947 s.v., on the naming motive see Strömberg 1943: 109f.; also 'muscle' (Hp., Arist.); cf. below. ◄IE muHs* 'mouse'►

•VAR μῦν [acc.sg.] analogical, see below.

•COMP μυ-γαλῆ (-έη) [f.] 'shrew-mouse' (Hdt., com., Arist.), μυο-θήρας [m.] 'mouse-catching snake' (Arist., sch.), ἄ-μυος 'without muscle' (Hp.), also μυσ-κέλενδρα [n.pl.] 'mouse dung' (Dsc., Moer., Poll., H.); for the second member cf. Lat. mūs-cerda 'id.', but unclear in detail.

•DER 1. Diminutive μυΐδιον (Arr., M. Ant.), also μύδιον 'small boat' (D. S.), 'small forceps' (medic.); μυΐσκη, -ος 'small sea-mussel' (Hell.). 2. On ►μύαξ, -ᾰκος [n.] 'sea mussel', see s.v. 3. μυών, -ῶνος [m.] 'cluster of muscles, muscle' (P 315 and 324, A. R., Theoc.). 4. μυωνία (rather -ιά) [f.] 'vulva', properly 'mouse hole', as a term of abuse for a lewd woman (Epicr. 9, 4), directly from μῦς like ἰωνιά from ἴον, etc.; more in Scheller 1951: 45f., 70f. 5. Adjectives μυώδης 'muscular' (D. S., Plu.), also 'mouse-like' (Plu.); μύειος 'of the mouse' (An. Ox.), μυΐνος 'with the color of a mouse' (EM, Phot.). 6. μυω-τός epithet of χιτών (Poll.), 'mouse-colored' or 'of mouse-skin'? also name for an arrowhead (Paul. Aeg.), also 'having muscles' (Clearch.); thence μυόομαι 'to be or become muscular' (medic.), trans. -όω.

•ETYM Old IE name of the mouse, retained in several language families: Lat. mūs, mūr-is, OHG mūs, Skt. mū́ṣ-, etc.; the acc. μῦν must therefore be secondary for *μῦα by influence of ὗν to ὗς, ὑός, etc.

The vocalic length was caused by a laryngeal, for which there are two indications: the accent of SCr. mȉš, and ToB maśćitse 'mouse', with mas- < mwas-* <muHs-*. A variant with short vowel has been wrongly supposed in Skt. muṣká- [m.] 'testicle'; cf. ►μόσχος 2.

The metaphorical meaning 'muscle' (after the mouse-like movement of certain muscles under the skin) can be observed in other languages too: beside Greek, also in Germanic (OHG and OE 'muscle of the upper arm'), Lat. mūsculus 'small mouse, muscle', Arm. mukn 'mouse, muscle'. Derivation from the verb for 'steal' in Skt. muṣ- (pres. muṣṇāti, móṣati) is purely hypothetic. On several plant names containing the word for 'mouse', see Amigues RPh. 74 (2000): 273f.

μύσος [n.] 'pollution, defilement, horrible sight' (Emp., trag., Hp.). ◄?►

•COMP Few compounds, e.g. χερομυσής 'polluting the hands' (A. Ch. 73) with verbal interpretation of the second member, μυσ-αχθής 'cumbered by μύσος, horrible' (Nic., AP).

•DER Adjectives: μυσαρός 'polluted, defiled, horrible' (Hdt., E., Ar.), -ερός (Man.), cf. μιαρός/-ερός; cf. μυσαρία (Sm.); also μυσά· μιαρά, μεμιασμένα, μυσαρά 'polluted' (H.). Verbs: 1. μυσάττομαι, -αχθῆναι, -άξασθαι 'to feel defiled, loathe, abhor' (Hp., E., X., Luc.), whence μύσαγμα = μύσος (A. Supp. 995) and expressive μυσάχνη [f.] 'prostitute' (Archil. 184), = μισητή, ἀκάθαρτος 'to be abhorred, unclean' (H.), μυσαχνόν· μεμολυσμένον 'stained' (H.), cf. βδελύττομαι : βδελυχρός. 2. μυσάζω = μυσάττομαι (Aq.). 3. μυσιάω 'to abhor, loathe' (Corn.), after verbs of disease in -ιάω. With velar enlargement (but perhaps a Pre-Greek variant) in μύσκος· μίασμα, κῆδος 'pollution, anxiety' (H.), cf. μίαχος s.v. ►μιαίνω.

•ETYM μύσος recalls μῖσος, but remains without certain etymology. A couple of isolated words meaning 'unclean' from Celtic, Germanic and Slavic are compared in Pok. 742: e.g., OIr. mosach < mussāko-*, LG mussig 'dirty', Ru. múslit' 'to suck, beslaver'. The group has been compared with the root of μυδάω 'to be moist, decay' as mud-s-o-*, but this remains hypothetical. The sparsely attested forms ►ἀμυσχρός, ►ἀμυχρός could be related if μύσος is Pre-Greek.

μύσσομαι [v.] 'to blow one's nose, snort' (Hp., Epic. in Arch. Pap. 7, 5); also act. 'to wipe off' (Pl., E., Arr., AP), metaph. 'to deceive' (Men., H.). ◄IE? mug-, muk- 'slime, glide', PG?(V)►

•VAR Fut. μύξομαι.

•COMP Usually with ἀπο- 'id.' (Ar., X., Arist.), also with προ- 'to deceive sbd. for money' (Hp.), 'to snuff a lamp' (Ar. V. 249 v.l. for πρόβυσον), 'to extort money'.

•DER 1. μυκτήρ, -ῆρος [m.], often plur. 'nostril' (Ion., com., X.), also 'mocker' (Timo), as a back-formation from μυκτηρίζω, 'mockery' (Plu., Luc.); thence μυκτηρίζω (ἀπο- H.) 'to bleed at the nose' (Hp.), 'to be mocked' (Lys. Fr. 323, S., LXX), whence -ηρισμός 'mockery', -ηρίσματα [pl.] (H. as an explanation of ἀποσκώμματα), -ηριστής [m.] 'mocker' (Ath.). 2. μύξα, -ης [f.] 'slime, mucus', also 'nostril, snout, spout of a lamp' (Hes. Sc. 267, Ion., Arist.), with several derivatives: diminutive μυξάριον (M. Ant.); μυξώδης 'slimy, full of slime' (Hp., Arist., Thphr.); μυξ-ωτῆρες [pl.] (Hdt., Hp.), -ητῆρες (Gal.) 'nostrils' (cf. τροπωτήρ, κωπητήρ, etc.); μυξ-άζω, -άω 'to be slimy' (sch.); fishnames: μύξων, -ωνος [m.] 'kind of mullet' (Arist.), as a back-formation μύξος 'id.' (Ath.), cf. κόκκων : κόκκος, etc. (but see below on the derivation); μυξῖνος 'id.' (Hices. apud Ath.), like κορακῖνος, etc. 3. ἀπόμυξ-ις 'snuffling' (Plu.), -ία 'mucus' (AB, H.). On ►μύκης 'mushroom', see s.v.

•ETYM μύσσομαι is a yod-present; Latin has a nasal present ē-mungō 'to wipe the nose' (cf. σχίζω beside Lat. scindō). Frisk explains μύξα as follows: in the same way as κνίση and κνῖσα may go back to the s-stem supposed in Lat. nīdor, μύξα could go back to an s-stem perhaps continued in Lat. mūcor [m.] 'mold, moistness' (Solmsen 1909: 238f.). He then asserts that μύξων, μύξος can be derived directly from μύξα. For the sporadic forms with σμ- (σμύσσεται and σμυκτήρ H., σμύξων Arist. beside μύξων), Frisk adduces a Celtic parallel in Gael. smùc, smug 'mucus'. Further proposed cognates include MIr. mocht 'weak' < muk-to-* (problematic, see Matasović 2008 s.v. muxto-*), the Germanic group of ON mjúkr, and Latv. mukls 'marshy'.
To my mind, the forms μύξα, μύξος, μύξων (the above derivation of which seems doubtful) beside μυκ-, as well as the existence of variants with initial σ-, could also point to Pre-Greek origin. On μύσκος· μίασμα (H.), see ►μύσος. See ►μύζω 2, ►μυχθίζω.

μύσταξ, -ακος [m.] 'upper lip, moustache' (Stratt., Eub., Theoc., LXX), a Doric and Laconian word (cf. Arist. Fr. 539). ◄PG(V)► •VAR μύττακες· μυκαί (cod. μύκαι). Σικελοί. Ἴωνες (leg. Λάκ-) πώγωνα 'beard' (H.). On βύσταξ see below.
•ETYM According to Ehrlich KZ 41 (1907): 288 and Güntert 1914: 128, a transformation of μάσταξ 'mouth' by influence of the rare ►βύσταξ 'moustache' (Antiph.), which has itself been explained as an innovation. Frisk assumes a cross of μάσταξ and μύλλον 'lip', which seems impobable. Both the variation μ-/β- and the variant μύττακες point to Pre-Greek origin; see Fur.: 218, 304.

μυστήριον ⇒μύω.

μυστῖλη [f.] 'piece of bread, scooped out as a spoon' (com. Ath., Aret., Poll.). ◄PG(S)► •DER Diminutive μυστιλάριον (Poll.), denominative μυστιλάομαι [v.] 'to gulp out soup with a μυστίλη' (Ar.). Further μύστρον [n.] 'id.' (Nic. Fr. 68,8 = Ath. 3,126b), also -ος [m.] (Poll., Hero Mech.), also 'spoon, especially as a measure or dose' (medic., pap.), μυστρο-θήκη [f.] 'spoon-case' (pap.); diminutive μυστρίον (medic.).
•ETYM Probably a Pre-Greek word because of its suffix -ῖλ-, which is frequent in these words. For the suffix of μυστῖλη, one may compare ζωμῖλη, στροβῖλη, μαρῖλη, πέδῖλον, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 249). For an Indo-European etymology, one would have to assume a nominal basis, e.g. *μύστον, -ος, for which there is no further connection. The notation μιστύλ(λ)η, -άομαι is due to confusion with ►μιστύλλω.

μύστιξ [adv.] · ἅμα τῷ σκότει 'at the time of darkness' (H.). ◄GR►

•ETYM From μύω, with an adverbial suffix, see Janda Sprache 40 (1998): 21.

μυττός [?] · τὸ γυναικεῖον 'female genitals' (H.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM Fur.: 218 compares βύττος· τὸ γυναικαῖον αἰδοῖον 'id.' (H.), which proves Pre-Greek origin. See ►μυκός.

μυττωτός [m.] 'dish, kind of paste', made of cheese, honey, garlic, etc. (Hippon., Anan., Hp., com., Thphr.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also -σσ- (Hp. Loc. Hom. 47), -σ- (Call. fr. 282).
•DER μυττωτεύω [v.] 'to change into a μ., to hash up' (Ar.), μυσσωτεύματα· ἀρτύματα 'condiments' (H.).
•ETYM For the realia, cf. on μῦμα. A formation in -ωτός, probably denominal (cf. Chantraine 1933: 305f., Schwyzer: 503). In view of the variation -ττ-/-σσ-/-σ-, the word is Pre-Greek.

μυχθίζω [v.] 'to blow the nose, sniff; to ridicule' (Theoc., Plb., AP). ◄PG?►
•VAR ἀνα-μυχθίζομαι 'to sniff, sigh loudly' (A. Pr. 743); in H. also προμυχθίζει and ἐπεμύχθισαν, the latter as an explanation of ἐπέμυξαν.
•DER μυχθισμός [m.] 'snorting, mocking' (Hp., E., Aq.); μυχθώδης 'snorting' (Hp.), as if from *μύχθος (cf. below).
•ETYM An expressive present, related to ►μύσσομαι and ►μύζω 'to moan, sigh'. Frisk suggests that the starting point for the present μυχθίζω may have been the aorist μύξαι, μύξασθαι, perhaps via an intermediary *μύχθος (see above), or alternatively after βρόξαι : βρόχθος : βροχθίζω. The element μυχθ- could be Pre-Greek (not in Fur.).

μυχλός ⇒μύκλος.

μυχός [m.] 'the innermost place, interior, corner, hiding-place, storage room' (Il.); on the mg. in Homer see Wace JHS 71 (1951): 203ff. ◄PG?►
•VAR μυχά [pl.] (Call. Del. 142). On μοχοι- see below.
•COMP ἑπτά-μυχος 'with seven hiding-places' (Call.).
•DER 1. μύχιος 'innermost' (poet. since Hes. Op. 523, late prose); several superlatives, all from μυχός: μυχοίτατος (φ 146), from the loc. -μυχοῖ in μοχοῖ· ἐντός. Πάφιοι 'inside' (H.); μυχαίτατος (Arist.); -τερος (Hdn. Epim.), after μεσαί-τατος, -τερος, etc.; μύχατος (A. R., Call.), after ἔσχατος, etc.; μυχέστατος (Phot.). 2. μύχ-αλος = -ατος (trag. anon. μύχαλα Τάρταρα; also E. Hel. 189 [lyr.]?), cf. μυχάλμη· βυθὸς θαλάσσης 'depth of the sea' (Phot.), cf. ἅλμη, and βύσσαλοι· βόθροι 'holes' (H.). 3. μυχώδης 'full of corners' (E.). 4. μυχάς [f.] = μυχός (Lyr. Adesp. Oxy. 15 II 4). 5. μυχόομαι [v.] 'to be hidden in a corner' (sch.).
On μύσχον· τὸ ἀνδρεῖον καὶ γυναικεῖον μόριον 'male and female private parts' (H.), connected by Fick KZ 43 (1909-1910): 149 assuming *μύχ-σκον, see ►μόσχος 2.
•ETYM As a fourth series of stops ($*k^h$, etc.) is not assumed anymore, the genetic connection with Arm. mxem 'to immerse' (Frisk) is obsolete, but it was semantically doubtful anyway. The Gm. group of ON smjúga 'to slip in', MHG smiegen 'to nestle' may theoretically derive from IE $smeug^h$-, like Greek, but the Gm. words may also go back to smeuk, and correspond to OCS smykati sę 'to drag on, cooper', Lith.

smùkti 'to glide (away)', etc. Fur.: 364 thinks that μυχός is Pre-Greek, but without further arguments (see ►βυθός and Fur.: 254). One argument could be the gloss βύσσαλοι, if it really belongs here; another, the gloss μοχοῖ· ἐντός with a vocalic interchange.

μῦω [v.] 'to close, be shut', of the eyes: 'to shut the eyes, abate', especially with κατα- (S. Fr. 774, Call., Nic.). ◂IE? meus-, meuH- 'shut'▸ •VAR Aor. μῦσαι (Ω 637), late μῦσαι (AP), fut. μῦσω (Lyc. 988), perf. μέμῡκα (Ω 420).
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἐπι-, κατα-, συν-. As a first element in μύ-ωψ, thematically enlarged -ωπός "with closing eyes", i.e. 'near-sighted' (cf. Sommer 1948: 9[2]).
•DER 1. Adverb in -τί with privative α: ἀμυστί 'without closing (the lips), at one draught' (Hp., Pherecr.), whence ἄμυστις [f.] 'drinking at one draught' (Anacr., Epich., E.), whence ἀμυστίζω [v.] 'to empty the cup at one draught' (E., Plu.). 2. (σύμ-, κατά-)μύσις [f.] 'closing' (Hp., Thphr., Plu.). 3. μύστης [m.] 'sbd. initiated (in the Eleusinian mysteries)' (Heraclit., Ar., E.), probably from "who shuts his eyes", in opposition to the ἐπόπτης "the observer": he who has reached the highest degree; μύστις [f.] name of comedies of Antiph. and Philem., also in LXX; μυστικός 'belonging to the μύσται (mysteries), secret' (IA), μυστήριον, usually -ια [pl.] 'secret service' (IA), μυστηρ-ιώδης, -ικός, etc.
Beside μύω stands μυέω (mostly pass. μυέομαι) 'to be initiated', secondarily act. 'to initiate' (IA), aor. μυηθῆναι, μυῆσαι, fut. μυηθήσομαι, perf. μεμύημαι; rarely with ἐν-, συν-, προ-. The mg. probably developed from 'to have one's eyes closed' (cf. μύστης). Thence μύησις [f.] 'initiation' (Hell., inscr., Ph.).
On itself stands μυάω 'to shut the lips (the eyes?)' (only in Ar. Lys. 126 τί μοι μυᾶτε; explained with σκαρδαμύττετε by H.), also μοιμυάω (H., Phot.); perhaps constructed from the passage in Ar.; but cf. the reduplication in μοιμύλλω s.v. ►μύλλω.
•ETYM The present μύω can be explained either from mus-i̯e/o-, or from muH-i̯e/o-. The short vowel in the aor. μῦσαι, like that of φθάσαι, etc., may perhaps be explained from an older root aor. (Frisk suggests that μῦσαν Ω 637 stands for older *μῦν); μῦσαι can be secondary after μύω. The fut. μῦσω derives from the aorist. The innovative presents μυέομαι and μυέω may have arisen from non-presentic forms enlarged with η, like μυηθῆναι, μεμύημαι; cf. Schwyzer: 721. The perfect μέμῡκα recalls other intransitive perfects, like ἕστηκα, βέβηκα, etc., and could be a recent formation.
From other languages, Oettinger 1979: 161ff. connected Hitt. munnae-[zi] 'to hide, conceal', which is followed by Bernabé and Rodríguez Somolinos Glotta 71 (1993): 121-129. μύω cannot belong to ►ἀμύνω, however, which requires a root h₂meu-*. The connection with Pal. muš- 'to satiate oneself' as IE meus-* 'to shut oneself' by Janda Sprache 40 (1998): 21 is semantically not very attractive. Finally, Fur.: 378 compares ►ἀμύω and considers the possibility of Pre-Greek origin.
So: either the root was meus-, in which case the perfect was innovated, or it was meuH-, when the aorist and nominal forms like μύστης are young.

μυωξός [m.] 'dormouse' (Opp. K. 2, 574). ◂PG?(S)▸

•ETYM The proposal to derive μυωξός from a pre-form μυ-ωκ-i̯ος, a verbal governing compound of μύω 'to shut' and the IE root h₃kʷ- 'eye, sight', with a suffix -i̯ο- and compositional lengthening, is untenable: it would have resulted in -σσ-, not in -ξ-. Unclear is μυωξία, glossed ὑβριστικὸς λόγος by H. and Suid.; according to Suid., it also means 'mouse-hole', ►μυωπία. If so, the first member may be μῦς, but it may also be folk etymology. The word is rather Pre-Greek, cf. ►μόροξος for the suffix.

μυωπία [f.] 1. 'mouse hole' (Arist., Ael.); 2. 'shortsightedness' (Aët.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM In the first meaning, a compound of μῦς and ὀπή 'hole', with compositional lengthening and suffixal -ία; cf. Scheller 1951: 45f. In the second meaning, the word is derived from ►μύωψ 2 'shortsighted'.

μύωψ 1, -ωπος [m.] 'goad, spur; gadfly', also 'stimulus' (A., Pl., X., Arist.). ◂PG?(S)▸ •DER μυωπίζω [v.] 'to spurn' (X., Plb.); μυωπίζομαι [v.] 'to be stung by gadflies' (X., J.).
•ETYM Boisacq's proposal *μυί-ωψ "with the aspect of a fly, fly-like" is called doubtful by DELG. The suggestion of a special use of μύωψ 2 (Gil Fernández 1959: 81-4) is not convincing either. For the suffix -ωψ in insect names, cf. κώνωψ 'gnat, crane fly' and Sommer 1948: 9[2]. Since κώνωψ is probably a Pre-Greek word, the same may hold for μύωψ as well.

μύωψ 2, -ωπος [adj.] 'shortsighted' (Arist.). ◂GR▸
•DER μυωπία 'shortsightedness', -ωπίας [m.] 'shortsighted man' (Poll., Paul. Aeg.), -ωπίασις = -ωπία (Gal.), after the words for diseases in -ίασις, as if from *-ωπιάω; μυωπάζω [v.] 'to be shortsighted' (2 Ep. Pet. 1, 9). Also thematic μυωπός 'id.' (X. Cyn.).
•ETYM Properly "with eyes getting shut", from μύω and ὤψ. See ►μύωψ 1, ►μύω.

μω [?] Name of a letter. ⇒μῦ 1.

μωκάομαι [v.] 'to mock, ridicule, insult' (LXX, Epicur., Agatharch.). ◂PG(V)▸ •COMP Sporadically with prefix, like δια-, κατα-.
•DER μωκός [m.] 'mocker, insulting' (Arist., LXX), μωκία 'mockery', μῶκος [m.] 'insult' (Anon. apud Ath., Simp.), μωκάζω (Suid.), -εύω (Zonar.) 'to insult'; μώκημα (LXX), δια-, κατα-μώκησις (Plb., Ath.) 'mockery'.
•ETYM Formally (cf. βρωμάομαι, πωτάομαι, etc.), it is obvious to take μωκάομαι as an intensive deverbative; the rare forms μωκός and μῶκος must then be back-formations. One might also compare intensives like μηκάομαι and μυκάομαι, but further details are obscure. According to an anonymous spokesman (Stud. itfilcl. N.S. 1, 93), the word was originally used for a camel (κάμηλος μωκᾶται), an indication which could point to onomatopoeic origin. Fur.: 133 compares μώχεται· φθονεῖ (H.) with a different velar, and concludes to a Pre-Greek word. See ►μῶμος.

μῶλος [m.] 'battle, turmoil of battle' (Il., σ 233, Hes. Sc. 257; after these Archil. 3). ◂IE? meh₃-* 'get tired'▸

•COMP As a second member in εὔμωλος· ἀγαθὸς πολεμιστής, εὔοπλος 'good fighter, well-armed' (H.), Εὐμωλίων (Sparta); further in the following words from Gortyn, which semantically belong together: ἀντίμωλος 'ἀντίδικος, opponent in court', ἀντιμωλία· δίκη εἰς ἥν οἱ ἀντίδικοι παραγίνονται 'trial in which the adversaries are present' (H. s.v. μωλεῖ), ἀμφίμωλος 'about which a trial is held, disputable', ἀμωλεί 'without trial', uncertain ἀγχεμω[λία], perhaps = ἀγχιστεία?

•DER Denominative verb μωλέω [v.] 'to go to court, litigate' (Gortyn), also with ἀμφι-, ἀπο-, ἐπι-; μωλεῖ· μάχεται 'battles', μωλήσεται· μαχήσεται, πικρανθήσεται 'will be embittered' (H.). Here probably also Μώλεια [n.pl.], name of an Arcadian festival (sch. A. R. 1, 164).

•ETYM Connection with Lat. mōlēs 'heavy mass, effort, etc.' (Frisk) is by no means certain: the original meaning would then be 'effort, labor' vel sim. (cf. μῶλος Ἄρηος), whence 'fight' (cf. πόνος), and thence, with transition to the juridical sphere, 'lawsuit' (cf. διώκειν, φεύγειν; see Trümpy 1950: 160ff., Ruijgh 1957: 95f.).
A better solution seems to separate a suffix -l-, and connect a group of Germanic and Slavic words: OHG muoan 'to cumber, bother' (G müde), Ru. 1sg. máju 'to exhaust, tease', Lith. pri-si-muol-ėti 'to get tired'. See LIV² s.v. *$meh_3$-. See ►μόλις, ►μῶλυς.

μῶλυ [n.] name of an unknown plant (κ 305, Com. adesp. 641), identified in various ways by later authors (Plin., Dsc., Ps.-Dsc., Poet. de herb.). According to Thphr. (HP 9, 15, 7) it is an Arcadian name for a kind of garlic 'Allium nigrum'; also μῶλυς ῥίζα (Lyc. 679). See Ferrari RILomb. 88 (1995): 12ff. ◂PG?(V)▸ •ETYM A foreign word, which may be compared with ►μώλυζα. This has a non-Greek suffix (cf. κόνυζα, ὄρυζα), which means that our word is probably Pre-Greek, too. For the u-stem, cf. μίσυ, βράθυ, σῶρυ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 119). All proposed IE etymologies (see Frisk) have to be rejected.

μώλυζα [f.] name of a kind of garlic (Hp.). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Related to μῶλυ with the same ending as in κόνυζα, ὄρυζα, ῥίζα, etc. See also André RPh. 84 (1958): 235. As the ending can hardly be explained in Indo-European terms, it must be Pre-Greek. It could represent /-dʸa/ or /-tʸa/.

μῶλυς, -υος [adj.] '(mentally) enervated; dull, feeble, weak' (S. Fr. 963. Nic., Demetr. Lac.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also μῶλυξ· ἀπαίδευτος 'lacking education, stupid' (H.), cod. -δ-, cf. von Blumenthal 1930: 42f.; μώλυκα· τὸν ἀπαίδευτον. Ζακύνθιοι (H.); μωλυρόν· νωθρόν, βραδύ 'sluggish, slow' (H.).
•DER μωλύω [v.] 'to boil imperfectly, scald, simmer', med. 'to become powerless, fade away', especially of wounds: 'to fail to come to a head' (Hp., Arist.), also -ύνω, -ύνομαι; aor. pass. μωλυ(ν)θῆναι, perf. med. μεμώλυσμαι, rarely with ἀπο-, κατα-, δια; μωλύεται· γηράσκει 'becomes old', μεμωλυσμένη· παρειμένη 'slack, weakened' (H.). Verbal nouns μώλυσις (-υνσις) [f.] 'scalding, simmering' (Arist., Thphr.), opposite of ἕψησις; -υτὴς ἐπέων mg. uncertain (Timo).
•ETYM For μωλύω (whence μωλύνω), compare κωλύω. The much rarer μῶλυς could be a back-formation. With velar: μῶλυξ like κόρυξ· νεανίσκος 'boy' (H.), see κόρη; μωλυρός like ἐχυρός, καπυρός, etc., if not dissimilated from -υλός. Because of the unclear meaning and formation, μῶλυς is etymologically hard to assess.
Connection with μέλεος does not explain the long vowel -ω-. Comparison with μῶλος is mentioned by Pok. 746. Petersson 1923: 18 relates μωλύω to μολούω (see μολεύω), like κωλύω to κολούω. As Frisk remarks, everything remains hypothetical. The suffix -υκ- looks Pre-Greek.

μῶλαξ [?] a Lydian name for wine (H.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •ETYM Fur.: 219 compares βωληνή = ἄμπελος, a kind of vine in Bithynia (Gp. 5, 17, 5). If correct, the word seems Pre-Greek in view of the interchange.

μώλωψ, -ωπος [m.] 'stripe, wale, weal, bruise' (Hyp., Arist., LXX, medic.). ◂PG(S)▸ •DER μωλωπ-ικός 'stripy' (Gal.), -ίζω [v.] 'to make stripes, wallop, bash' (Aq., Plu.).
•ETYM The analysis as a compound containing -ωψ 'eye, sight, etc.' is wrong. Words like these contain a suffix -ωψ (see e.g. ►κώνωψ) and are certainly of Pre-Greek origin. Any relation with mel-* 'black' (μέλας, μολύνω) is out of the question.

μῶμαι [v.] 'to strive, try, desire' (poet.). ◂?▸
•VAR 3sg. μῶται (Epich.), 3pl. μῶνται (Euph. [IIIª]), opt. μῷτο (Stob.); perhaps also El. μαῖτο, see Fraenkel 1910: 45, Bechtel 1921, 2: 854; inf. μῶσθαι (Thgn.), ptc. μώμενος (A., S.), aor. ἐμώσατο· εὗρεν, ἐτεχνάσατο, ἐζήτησεν 'invented, contrived, investigated' (H.).
•DER μῶσις [f.] 'searching' (Corn.).
•ETYM It cannot be established whether the primary verb μῶμαι is an athematic formation or a yod-present (cf. Schwyzer: 675⁸). There is little support for the supposition of Bechtel 1914 s.v. μαιμάω, that μῶμαι derives from a lost perfect. The hapax ἐμώσατο is an innovation from μῶμαι. Connection with the reduplicated verb ►μαιμάω and the ambiguous ►μαίομαι is possible. Prellwitz BB 26 (1901): 309ff. connected the Gm. group of Go. mops 'courage, fury', followed by Pok 704f.

μῶμος [m.] 'blame, reproach, blemish' (poet. β 86, late prose), 'stain of a sacrificial animal' (LXX). ◂?▸
•VAR μῶμαρ [n.] (Lyc.).
•COMP ἄ-μωμος 'without blame' (Ion. poet.), μωμο-σκόπος 'who inspects the sacrificial animal for a blemish', together with -σκοπέομαι, -έω (Ph.).
•DER μώμ-ιμος 'with blame' (Stoic.); cf. νόμιμος, etc. Denominative verbs: 1. μωμάομαι 'to blame, abuse, defame' (Ion. poet. since Il.), Ion. -έομαι, rarely with ἐπι-, δια-; thence μώμημα (LXX, v.l.), -ησις (sch.) 'blame', -ητής [m.] 'censurer' (Hp.), -ητικός 'censorious' (Hell.), -ηλός 'blameful' (Hld.). 2. μωμεύω [v.] 'id.' (ζ 274, Hes. Op. 756), in order to avoid contracted forms, cf. λωβάομαι next to λωβεύω (see ►λώβη). 3. μωμαίνω [v.] 'id.' (Hdn. Epim.).
•ETYM Beside μῶμος stand μῦμαρ· αἶσχος, φόβος, ψόγος 'shame, fear, blame' and μυμαρίζει· γελοιάζει 'jests' (H.); the old connection with ἀμύμων 'noble, royal, vel sim.' as a privative formation from μῦμα is rather doubtful. Ablaut ω (from ōu) : υ is hardly possible, in spite of examples like ζωμός : ζύμη. The word remains isolated, but cf. μωκάομαι, μῶκος for the meaning.

μῶνυξ, -υχος [adj.] 'with one hoof', mostly plur., of horses, as opposed to the split hooves of cattle and sheep (Hom., Hdt., Arist.). ◄IE *$sm̥$-h_3nog^{wh}-► •VAR On the stem formation, see Sommer 1948: 96ff.
•ETYM The ancients derived it from *μονϝ(ο)-ονυξ, with syllable dissimilation and compositional lengthening, an opinion defended in modern times by Runes Glotta 19 (1930/1931): 286f. However, Saussure 1922: 266 derived it from σμ-ῶνυξ with an old zero grade of IE sem- (see ►εἷς 'one'). Under this hypothesis, μῶνυξ must be an extremely archaic form, which Frisk did not consider very likely. However, the reconstructed form must be *$sm̥$-h_3nug^h- > μω-νυχ-, as was shown by the present author (Beekes Orbis 20 (1971): 138-142).

μωρός 1 [adj.] 'stupid, obtuse, foolish' (IA). ◄?►
•VAR Att. μῶρος (accent probably taken from the vocative; see Schwyzer: 380 and 383).
•COMP Compounds, mostly late: e.g. μωρο-λόγος 'who speaks stupidities', whence μωρο-λογία, -λογέω, -λόγημα (Arist.), ὑπό-μωρος 'a little stupid' (Luc.).
•DER μωρία [f.] 'stupidity' (IA), , Ion. -ίη; μωρίαι· ἵπποι καὶ βοῦς ὑπὸ Ἀρκάδων 'horses and cows (Arc.)' (H.), μωρίας [m.sg.], like e.g. ἐρυθρίας, and with a semantic development like in MoGr. άλογο = ἵππος; Μωρίων (Arc. Gramm.). Denominatives: 1. μωραίνω [v.] 'to be stupid, foolish' (A., E., X., Arist.), 'to play the fool, make foolish', pass. 'to become insipid' (LXX, NT), whence μώραν-σις = μωρία (sch.). 2. μωρόομαι [v.] 'to become insipid' (Hp.). 3. μωρεύω = μωραίνω (LXX). 4. μωρίζω 'to be stupid' (Gal.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Usually connected with Skt. mūrá- 'foolish', with ablaut ō(u) : ū, but this ablaut is now not accepted anymore, cf. Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. With words of this meaning, we must reckon with deviations and crosses, which makes comparative work rather difficult. Lat. mōrus 'mad, silly' was borrowed from Greek (see WH s.v.).

μωρός 2 [adj.] · ὀξύ, μάταιον, ἀμβλύ 'sharp, in vain, blunt; dull' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM On the gloss ὀξύ, see Leumann 1950: 272[18].

μώχεται ⇒μωκάομαι.

N

ν- variant form of the privative prefix, in ν-ηλ(ε)ής, ν-ήνεμος, ν-ωδός, etc. ◄IE n-* 'un-'► •ETYM In Beekes 1969: 98-113, it was shown that forms in νη-, να-, νω- arose from the IE negating prefix n-* combined with a following sequence HC-* (for H* = *h_1, *h_2, *h_3, respectively). This vocalized as *$n̥$-HC-. See ►ἀ-.

νάβλα [f.] name of a Phoenician lyre with 10 or 12 strings (Soph. Fr. 849 [uncertain conj.], LXX). ◄LW Sem.►
•VAR -ας [m.] (com., Str.), also ναῦλα [f.] (Aq., Sm.), -ον [n.] (H.).
•DER ναβλίζω = ψάλλω (gloss.) with ναβλιστής [m.] 'νάβλα-player' (Euph.), also ναβλιστο-κτυπεύς 'id.' (Man. 4, 185) for *ναβλο-κτύπος (through cross and with formal enlargement -ευς), ναβλίστρια [f.] (Maced.).
•ETYM Like the instrument, the name was probably also Phoenician; cf. Hebr. nēbel name of a harp. More in Lewy 1895: 161. Borrowed as Lat. nablium, nablum, see WH s.v.
Originally, the word seems to have meant 'vase'. See Masson 1967: 67-69 and Heurgon 1966: 518-522. Etruscan has naplan, designating a cup.

νάερρα [f.] · δέσποινα 'mistress' (H.). ◄GR► •ETYM An Aeolic form, probably for να<έτ>ερρα; cf. ναίτειρα (leg. ναέτ-?)· οἰκοδέσποινα (H.), see Hoffmann 1893: 241.

ναί [pcl.] affirmative pcl. 'really, yes' (Il.); ναὶ δή, ναὶ μήν, ναὶ μὰ Δία, νὴ Δία, etc. ◄IE? *$(h_1e)no$- 'that one'► •VAR Also νή (esp. Att.), νεί (Boeot., also Arc.).
•DER ναίχι (S., Pl.), with -χι like in οὐχί, μηχί; ναιδαμῶς (Com. Adesp.) after οὐδαμῶς, μηδαμῶς.
•ETYM Greek νή corresponds with Lat. nē 'really'; ναί could have a formal counterpart in ToB nai 'indeed, surely'. For νή : νεί : ναί, cf. ἤ : εἰ : αἰ 'if'; ►δαί is analogical beside δή. The word is usually connected with the demonstrative IE *$(h_1e$-$)no$- 'he there'; see ►ἐκεῖνος and WH s.v. enim.

ναϊάς [f.] 'Naiade' •VAR ναΐς, Ion. νηϊάς, νηΐς. ⇒νάω.

ναικισσορεύοντας · ἐπίτηδες διασύροντας καὶ ἐξευτελίζοντας 'they who willingly "tear to pieces", that is to say, disparage' · τινὲς δέ φασι ναικισσήρεις λέγεσθαι ἐπὶ τοῦ ἐμφαίνοντος ὁμολογεῖν καὶ μὴ ὁμολογοῦντος 'others say that ν. is called he who makes it appear that he agrees, even if he does not agree' (Pherecr. 222), ἐπὶ τῶν κατεψευσμένων ἡ λέξις 'the way of speaking of those who speak falsely' (H.). Cf. Photius s.v. ⋖?⋗ •ETYM It has been attempted to recognize ναίχι (= ναί) in the beginning.

ναίω [v.] 'to live, inhabit', occasionally 'to be situated' (in this mg. also med. εὖ ναιόμενος), aor. trans. 'to settle, give as a home', intr. 'to settle' (Il.). ⋖IE? nes-* 'escape, return home', PG?⋗
•VAR Aor. νάσσαι, -σασθαι, -θῆναι, late forms ναιήσαντο, perf. νένασμαι, fut. νάσσομαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. κατα-, ἀπο-, συν-, περι-, παρα-.
•DER Enlarged ναιετάω 'to live, inhabit', also with περι-, μετα-, παρα-; also 'to be situated', especially in εὖ ναιετάων 'well situated, livable' (Il.); cf. Chantraine 1942: 358. From the present stem (probably in part a back-formation from ναιετάω): περι-, μετα-ναιέται [m.pl.] 'who live around, together with' (Ω 488, A. R. 4, 470, Hes. Th. 401), ἁλι-ναιέται 'who live in the sea' (B. 16, 97); ἐν-ναέται 'inhabitants' (Isyll., A. R.), -έτις [f.] (A. R.). Simplex ναέτης, Dor. -τας 'inhabitant' (poet. since Simon.), ναιέτις [f.] (Call.); secondary (ἐν-)ναετήρ [m.] 'id.' (AP), ἐνναέτειρα [f.] (APl.). On ►μετανάστης, see s.v.
•ETYM The causative meaning of aor. νάσσαι probably arose from its opposition to intr. νασθῆναι. The meaning 'to be situated', which is often found for ναιετάω (especially in εὖ ναιετάων), but rarely with ναίω, has not yet received a convincing explanation; perhaps we must start from the ptc. εὖ ναιετάων, if properly 'where one lives well', with the same shift as in ὁ ἐπιβάλλων, etc. (type café chantant).
The verbal stem νασ- (ναίω < νάσ-ι̯ω) is isolated. Comparison with nes- as in ►νέομαι, νόστος is semantically attractive, but the α-vocalism poses a problem. A solution could be that νασ- arose by restoration of ν- in the zero grade ἀσ- < ns-; thus e.g. LIV² s.v. nes-. Note, however, the original reflex of the zero grade in ►ἄσμενος.
Alternatively, νασ- could be Pre-Greek. See further ►ναός.

νάκη [f.] 'woollen skin, fleece', especially of sheep and goats (ξ 530, Lyc., Paus.). ⋖PG⋗ •VAR More common is νάκος [n.] (Pi., Hdt., Simon., inscr.).
•COMP As a first member in νακο-δέψης [m.] 'tanner' (Hp.), as a second member in κατω-νάκη [f.] 'coarse cloth, worn by slaves working on the field, with a front of sheepskin' (Ar.), which is properly a bahuvrīhi; on ἀρνακίς see ►ἀρήν.
•DER νακύριον· δέρμα 'skin, hide' (H.); formation unclear, perhaps to be changed (following Schmidt) into νακύ<δ>ριον (like μελ-ύδριον etc., Chantraine 1933: 72f.).
•ETYM For νάκος : νάκη, cf. νάπος : νάπη and common pairs of abstracts, like βλάβος : βλάβη; the suffixation of νάκος is like εἶρος, φᾶρος, etc., that of νάκη like λώπη, etc. (all names for 'wool' and 'cloth').
The reconstruction as IE nak-s-ko-* and comparison with OE næsc 'soft leather, e.g. deer-skin' < PGm. naska-*, which is isolated in Germanic, cannot be upheld for obvious reasons. Rather a Pre-Greek word; see Fur.: 294, 305. The suffixation of νακύριον points in the same direction. See ►νάσσω.

ναμαραν [acc.sg.m.] 'candelabrum?' (inscr. Delos 2240f.). ⋖LW Sem.⋗ •ETYM Through metathesis from Syr. mᵉnārā 'id.'; see Grégoire Byzantion 13 (1938): 181f. Ronzevalle Mél. Univ. St. Joseph (Beirut) 22 (1939): 109-121 starts from Syr. nᵃmarā 'crown'.

νάννας, -α ⇒νέννος.

ναννάριον [n.] · οὕτω καλούμενον εἶδός τι ἀσώτων 'a sort of hopeless people' · ἄμεινον δὲ τὸν τρυφερὸν καὶ μαλακὸν ἀκούειν 'better: hearing softly and delicately' (H.). ⋖?⋗
•DER Also name of a courtesan (Theophil.11); cf. perhaps νάνναν.
•ETYM Unknown.

νανναρίς [m.] · κίναιδος 'someone lewd' (H.). ⋖?⋗ •ETYM Unknown. See ►ναννάριον.

νᾶνος [m.] 'dwarf' (Ar. Fr. 427, Arist., Longin., H., POxy. 465, 225 [IIᵖ]); also a cake made of oil and cheese (Ath. 14, 646c). ⋖ONOM⋗ •VAR Often νάννος (mss.); on the notation νάννος (hypocoristic gemination) beside νᾶνος cf. Schwyzer: 268.
•COMP As a first member in ναννο-φυής 'of dwarfish stature' (Ar. Pax 790).
•DER νανώδης 'dwarflike' (Arist.), ναννούδιον 'lapdog' (sch. Luc. Conv. 19).
•ETYM An onomatopoeic word of unknown origin; cf. Schwyzer: 423 and Björck 1950: 67. Borrowed as Lat. nānus > MoFr. nain, etc.; see WH s.v.

ναξος [adj.] epithet of κολοσσός (Epigr. apud Phot.). ⋖?⋗ •ETYM According to Geffcken & Herbig Glotta 9 (1918): 97 ff., to be accented ναξός = 'driven (with a hammer)', related to ►νάσσω. According to G. and H., the name of the island Νάξος should also be included here.

ναός [m.] 'temple, house of a god, sanctuary' (Dor., Thess., late Att., Hell.). ⋖GR? nas-wo-*, PG?⋗
•VAR ναϝός (Lacon.), ναῦος (Lesb.), νηός (Hom., Hdt.), νεώς (Att.).
•COMP ναο-κόρος (Delph.), να-κόρος (Dor.), νεω-, νεο-κόρος (IA, Hell.) [m.] 'temple-warden' with derivatives (see ►κορέω); να(ο)-, νεω-ποιός, secondary -πο(ί)ας (Schwyzer 451), -πο(ί)ης name of an office in charge of the construction of a temple, whence -ποιέω, -ποιία, -ποιεῖον, -ποϊκός, etc. (inscr. since Vᵃ); as a second member in πρό-ναος (A.), Att. -νεως, also -νάϊος, Ion. -νήϊς (Ἀθηνᾶ Προναΐα, -νηΐα), 'in front of the temple', substantivized πρό-ναος, Ion. -νηος [m.], -ναον, -νάϊον, -νήϊον [n.] 'front hall'.
•DER 1. Diminutives: ναΐδιον (Plb., Str.), ναΐσκος [m.] (Str., J.) with -ίσκιον, -ισκάριον (pap., sch.). 2. Adjective: ναϊκός 'belonging to a temple' (Dodona). 3. Denominatives: ναεύω [v.] 'to take sanctuary in a temple' (Gortyn); ναόω 'to lead into a temple' (Crete); cf. ναύειν· ἱκετεύειν, παρά τὸ ἐπὶ τὴν ἑστίαν καταφεύγειν τοὺς ἱκέτας 'supplicate, after the fact that suppliants take refuge at the hearth' (H.).
•ETYM A pre-form νασϝος has to assumed for the different dialectal forms. Therefore, the word is mostly analyzed as PGr. nas-wo- and derived from νάσσαι, ►ναίω as 'habitation, house (of the god)', which is quite possible. However, Fur.: 338[13] adduces the variants ναιός (Clinias apud sch. A. R. 2, 1085, H.) and νειός (inscr. Samos IV[a]), variants which would point to substrate origin.

νάπη [f.] 'wooded vale, chasm' (Θ 558 = P 300); νάπα· σύμφυτος τόπος 'overgrown place' (H.). ◄PG?►
•VAR νάπος [n.] (Pi., S., E., X.).
•DER ναπ-αῖος 'like a wooded vale' (S., E.), -ώδης 'id.' (Eust., St. Byz.).
•ETYM Cf. the TN Νάπος (Lesbos); probably Pre-Greek. See ►προνωπής.

νᾶπυ, -υος [n.] 'mustard'.
•VAR Also σίναπι.
•DER νάπειον (Nic. Al. 430), after γήτειον, κώνειον. ⇒σίναπι.

νάρδος [f.] 'spikenard, Indian narde, Nardostachys Jatamansi' (Hell. and late). ◄LW Sem.►
•VAR νάρδον [n.] (Thphr. Od. 12, Poll.).
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. ναρδό-σταχυς, -υος [m.] = νάρδου στάχυς, νάρδος (Dsc., Gal.).
•DER νάρδ-ινος 'of nard' (Antiph., Men., Plb.), -ίτης οἶνος 'wine spiced with nard' (Dsc. in tit.), -ῖτις βοτάνη 'nard-like plant' (Gal.) ; -ίζω 'to resemble the nard' (Dsc.).
•ETYM From Phoenician, cf. Semitic forms like Hebr. nērd, Aram. nirda, and Babyl. lardu. Further connection with Skt. naḍá- 'reed, cane' (beside nadá- 'id.') is quite uncertain and should probably be abandoned; the Semitic words rather come from Skt. nálada- [n.] 'Indian narde' (AV), on which see Mayrhofer KEWA: s.vv. naḍáḥ and náladam. Borrowed as Lat. nardus, -um; see WH. Beside νάρδος, we have νάρτη [f.], designating aromatic plants (Thphr. HP 9, 7, 3).
Fur.: 199 also compares ►νάρθηξ and suggests that we are dealing with a Middle Eastern culture word.

νάρη ἡ ἄφρων καὶ μωρά 'an insane and stupid woman' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

νάρθηξ, -ηκος [m.] 'giant fennel, Ferula communis', also denoting its hollow stalk, which was used as a thyrsos and splint, among other things (Hes.); also 'capsule, cupboard' (Str.). ◄PG(S,V)► •COMP Few compounds, e.g. ναρθηκοφόρος 'ν.-bearer' (Pl., X.).
•DER ναρθήκιον 'small splint' (medic.), -ία name of a ν.-like plant (Thphr.), cf. βακτηρ-ία, ἀρτηρ-ία, etc.; ναρθήκ-ινος 'made of ν.' (Arist.), ναρθηκ-ίζω [v.] 'to splint' (medic.), whence -ισμός, -ισμα (Apollod. Poliorc., etc.); ναρθηκιῶντες· νάρθηξι πλήσσοντες 'hitting with ν.' (H.). TN Ναρθάκιον in Phthiotis, also a mountain in Thessalia (X., Plu.).
•ETYM The variant νάθραξ· νάρθηξ (H.) with metathesis, as well as the TN Ναρθάκιον, point to original -ᾱκ-, which is a Pre-Greek suffix. See Fur.: 199, who compares ►νάρδος.

νάρκαφθον [n.] 'a fragrant Indian bark' used as spice (Dsc. 1, 23). ◄PG?►

•VAR Also νάσκαφθον (written ναόκαφωον, which will be a simple mistake), but also νάκαφθον. Also λάκαφθον (Paul. Aeg. 7, 22)?
•ETYM Fur.: 299 thinks it is a cultural term from the Middle East, in spite of the suggested Indian origin. On a possible variation ρ/σ, see ibid. 299f.

νάρκη [f.] 'numbness, deadness, numbfish' (IA); on the fish see Strömberg 1943: 57. ◄PG?►
•VAR Secondary νάρκᾰ (Men.).
•COMP As a second member in θηριο-νάρκη [f.] name of a plant that paralyzes a snake (Plin.).
•DER ναρκώδης 'paralysed' (Hp.); ναρκάω [v.] 'to be paralysed' (Θ 328), also with ἀπο-, δια-, ἐκ-, whence ἀπονάρκη-σις (Plu.); ναρκόω [v.] 'to paralyse, deaden' (Hp.) with νάρκω-σις, -τικός (medic.).
•ETYM νάρκη has been analyzed as a zero grade verbal noun with barytone accent (Chantraine 1933: 22f.), belonging to a Germanic verb OHG sner(a)han, MHG snerhen 'to swing, knot, draw together', with deverbative ON snara 'to turn, swing, wind' < PGm. snarhōn-* and the verbal noun OHG snar(a)ha, ON snara [f.] 'swing'. The supposed connection (thus still LIV[2] s.v. snerk-* 'zusammenziehen, schlingen') is semantically far from convincing; moreover, one would expect nrk-* to yield Gr. ν(δ)ρακ-. The structure of this word looks non-IE. Therefore, we should rather assume a Pre-Greek word nark-; the variant nom. in -ᾰ also points to this.

ναρκίον [n.] · ἀσκόν 'skin, hide, belly, bellows, etc.' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM DELG considers connection with λάρκος, λαρκίον, and perhaps νάρναξ, and rejects the connection with ►νάρκη.

νάρκισσος [m.(f.)] 'narcissus' (h. Cer.). ◄PG► •DER ναρκίσσινος 'made from narcissus, narcissus-colored' (Hp., Dsc., pap.), -ίτης name of a stone (D. P., Plin.), because of the color or the smell?
•ETYM The suffix clearly points to a Pre-Greek word; cf. Hester Lingua 13 (1965): 361, with Heubeck Vox Romanica 19 (1960): 151f. The connection with νάρκη is due to folk-etymology.

ναρός [adj.] 'flowing, liquid'. ⇒νάω.

νάρφη [f.] · σκευαστός ἄρτος ὁ καὶ μασητρίς 'prepared bread/cake, which is also called μ.' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

νάσσω [v.] 'to stamp down, squeeze close, press together, stuff' (φ 122). ◄PG?(V)► •VAR Att. νάττω, aor. νάξαι, fut. νάξω (H.), perf. med. νέναγμαι, νένασμαι.
•COMP Rarely with prefix, e.g. κατα-, συν-.
•DER Verbal adjective ναστός 'pressed together, stuffed' (medic., J.), substantivized (scil. πλακοῦς) [m.] name of a cake (com.) with ναστίσκος [m.] (Pherecr.); also νακτός 'pressed together' (Plu.); νακτά· τοὺς πίλους καὶ τὰ ἐμπίλια 'things made of felt and felt shoes' (H.). Verbal substantive νάγμα [n.] 'closely sqeezed stone-wall' (J.).

•ETYM It is unclear from the attestations whether the verbal stem originally ended in a velar (νάξαι φ 122) or a dental (ναστός from *ναττός?). Etymology unknown; connection with ►νάκος 'woollen skin' cannot be proven. Borrowed as Lat. naccae 'fullones', perhaps from *νάκται; see WH s.v. The verb is probably Pre-Greek.

ναυᾱγός [m.] 'shipwrecked person' (Hdt.). ⋖GR⋗ •VAR Ion. -ηγός.
•DER ναυ-ᾱγέω, -ηγέω [v.] 'to be shipwrecked', -ᾱγία, -ηγία [f.] 'shipwreck', -ᾱ́για, -ήγια [n.pl.] (rarely -ιον [sg.]) 'wreck (of a ship)' (IA).
•ETYM Compounds of ναῦς and ἄγνυμι, ἀγῆναι 'break' with long compositional vowel. This may be due either to compositional lengthening or analogy after other such compounds (thus in Ion. -ηγ-), or to influence of κατᾱ́γνυμι, ἔᾱγα, see Björck 1950: 42 and 147.

ναύκληρος [m.] 'shipowner, captain', sbd. who lets his ship and the places on board to other persons (IA), on the mg. against ἔμπορος and κάπηλος see Finkelstein Class. Phil. 30 (1935): 320ff.; metaph. 'owner of a rented house' (com.). ⋖IE krh_2s-ro-* 'head'⋗ •DER ναυκληρ-ία [f.] 'employment as a ναύκλη-ρος, society of shipowners, navigation' (Att.), perhaps from ναυκληρέω (see below); -ιον [n.] 'freighter' (D., E.); ναυ-κλάρ-ιος epithet of Poseidon (Delos I[a]), -κληρικός 'belonging to the v.' (Pl. Lg.), ναυκληρώσιμοι στέγαι· τὰ πανδοκεῖα 'rooms, taverns' (H.), after μισθώσιμος.
Denominative ναυκληρ-έω [v.] 'to be ναύκληρος' (Att.), metaph. 'to govern (a state)' (trag.), with ναυκληρήματα [pl.] 'shipping' (Tz.). Further ναύκραρος (ναύκλαρος H.) [m.] name of the manager of a ναυκραρία (Lex Solonis apud Arist. Ath. 8, 3, Hdt.) with ναυκραρ-ία [f.] part of a phyle in Solonic Athens, for financial and administrative purposes (Arist. Ath. 8, 3), -ια [n.pl.] 'registry of the ναύκραροι' (Ammon. gramm.), -ικός 'belonging to the ναύκραρος or -ία' (Lex Solonis apud Arist.).
•ETYM The usual term ναύκλαρος / ναύκληρος arose by dissimilation and folk-etymological connection with κλῆρος from older ναύκραρος. The latter only remained in a technical sense. The original mg. is "who stands at the head of a ship". The zero grade in the second member of ναύκρᾱρος (*-ḱrh_2-C-) may be compared with that in ὀρθό-κραιρα (see ►κραῖρα). Here, κρᾱρ- may derive from krāh-ro-, which belongs to krāhn- < krh_2-s-n-* seen in ►κρᾱνίον, and inflected forms of ►κάρᾱ. Other ablaut grades are continued in κάρηνα < ḱrh_2-es-n-h_2* and Lat. cerebrum < kerh_2-s-ro-* (see ►κάρηνα, ►κέρας).
The same element appears in Boeot. PN (Λ)α-κρᾱρίδας < *Λά-κρᾱρος (Solmsen RhM 53 (1898): 151ff.). Borrowed as Lat. nauclērus, cf. Friedmann 1937: 26ff.

ναῦλον [n.] 'fare, freight, passage-money' (Att., Hell.). ⋖GR⋗ •VAR -ος [m.], also -λλ- (inscr.), Schwyzer: 238.
•DER ναυλόω, -όομαι [v.] 'to let out a ship, freight a ship' (Plb., pap.), with ναύλ-ωσις 'freighting', -ώσιμος 'belonging to freighting' (also of κτήνη, ὄνοι), -ωτική [f.], scil. συνθήκη or συγγραφή 'freighting agreement' (all pap.); cf. Kalbfleisch RhM 94 (1951): 94f.

•ETYM Probably from ►ναῦς, though further λο-derivatives of nouns and semantic examples are missing. See Chantraine 1933: 241. Borrowed as Lat. naulum. See ►ναῦσθλον.

ναῦς [f.] 'ship' (Il.), details on the inflection in Schwyzer: 578. ⋖IE neh$_2$u-* 'ship'⋗ •VAR Epic Ion. νηῦς, gen. νεώς (νηός, νεός, Dor. ναός), dat. νηΐ (ναΐ), acc. ναῦν (νῆα, νέα), plur. nom. νῆες (νέες, νᾶες), gen. νεῶν (νηῶν, ναῶν), dat. ναυσί (νηυσί, νήεσσι), acc. ναῦς (νῆας, νέας).
•COMP ναύ-αρχος 'commander of a ship' (IA), see also ►νεώριον, ►νεωλκέω; in dat.pl. as a first member, e.g. ναυσί-κλυτος, -κλειτος 'famous for his ship' (epic poet. Od.), ναυσί-πορος (X., Arist.) = ναύ-πορος (A., A. R.) 'sailed by ships'; as a second member in χιλιό-ναυς 'consisting of thousand ships' (E., Str.); amalgamation with a suffix -ία- in e.g. (πεντεκαι-)δεκα-να-ΐα [f.] 'fleet of fifteen/ten ships' (Plb. and D.). Cf. further ►ναυᾱγός, ►ναύκληρος.
•DER A. νήϊος, Dor. νάϊος (Il.), νηΐτης (Th., A. R.) 'consisting of ships, belonging to the ship', or νῄτης? See Redard 1949: 12 and 43.
B. ναύτης, Dor. -τας [m.] 'sailer, ship-passenger' (Il.), ναύστης (pap.) with analogical -σ-. Thence several derivatives: 1. ναῦτις, -ιδος [f.] epithet of γυναῖκες (Theopomp. Com.), ναύτρια [f.] (Ar. Fr. 825); 2. ναυτ-εία [f.] 'shipping' (Hell. inscr. and pap.), after στρατεία (to στρατεύω), etc.; 3. ναυτ-ία (Arist., Aret.), Ion. ναυσίη (Semon.), 'seasickness, disgust' (Scheller 1951: 41) with ναυτι-ώδης 'prone to seasickness, sickening' (medic., Plu.), ναυτ-ιάω [v.] 'to be seasick, be disgusted' (Att.), ναυτία partly a back-formation; -ιασμός = ναυτία (Hippiatr.); 4. ναυτ-ικός '(consisting) of seamen', also (referring to ναῦς) 'nautical' (IA); 5. ναυτ-ίλος [m.] or [adj.] 'shipper, seaman; nautical' (Hdt., trag.), also name of a mollusc, 'paper nautilus, Argonauta argo' (Arist.), see Thompson 1947 s.v.; on the formation Chantraine 1933: 248f.); ναυτιλ-ία, -ίη 'navigation, sea-journey' (θ 253), also connected with ναυτίλλομαι (Scheller 1951: 35), ναυτίλλομαι [v.] 'to be sailor, sail' (Od.); 6. Ναυτεύς [m.] PN (θ 112 beside πρυμνεύς; see Wackernagel KZ 24 (1879): 297).
C. See ►ναῦλον and ►ναῦσθλον.
•ETYM Old IE word neh$_2$u-* 'ship', which is also found in IIr., Arm., Lat., Celt., Gm., and Illyr. The inflections of Greek, Sanskrit (and also Latin) seem to correspond: ναῦς = Skt. náuṣ < IE neh$_2$u-s*; νῆ(ϝ)α = Skt. nā́vam, Lat. nāvem (whence nom. nāvis) < IE neh$_2$u-m*; νῆ(ϝ)ες = Skt. nā́vas < IE neh$_2$u-es*, νῆ(ϝ)ας = Skt. nā́v-as < IE neh$_2$u-ns*, etc. Other reconstructions (e.g. nom. neh$_2$-ēu-s*, acc. neh$_2$-eu-m*, gen. neh$_2$u-os* << nh$_2$-u-os*, cf. Beekes 1985: 96) are also possible.
Examples from other languages: MoP nāv, Arm. naw (perhaps from Iranian), OIr. nau, ON nór [m.], Illyr. TNs Nau-na, Nau-portus, etc.
Lat. nauta, nausea were borrowed from Greek.

ναῦσθλον [n.] Arg. for ναῦλον: 'fare, freight' (ἐφόδιον καὶ ναῦσθλον, IG 4, 823: 12 [IV[a], Troezen], H.). ⋖GR⋗ •DER ναυσθλόο-μαι, -όω [v.] 'to be carried for fare, transport', (as a passenger) 'travel' (E., Ar., Lyc.).

•ETYM Built on ναῦς with a suffix -θλο- also seen in θύσ-θλα, θέμε-θλα, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 375); the -σ- must be secondary (cf. ναύστης beside ναύτης s.v. ► ναῦς). Unrelated is ► ναῦσσον.

ναῦσσον [n.] 'name of a tax' (Cyzicus VI[a], Cos I[a]). ◄?► •ETYM Because of the -σσ- (original sampi) a technical foreign word, perhaps from Carian; see Wackernagel RhM 48 (1893): 299.

νάφθα [f., n.] 'petroleum' (LXX, Str., Dsc.). ◄LW Iran.►
•VAR -ας [m.].
•ETYM Cf. MoP naft 'petroleum', which is of uncertain origin. Acc. to Brandenstein OLZ 43 (1940): 345ff., the Greek word is from Iran. nafta-* from nab-* 'be wet'. On the meaning and further forms see Brust 2005: 471ff. Borrowed as Lat. nap(h)tha.

ναφρόν [n.] · λινοῦν ῥάμμα 'linen thread' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

νᾰ́ω [v.] 'to flow, stream', mainly of water (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Only present stem except for διαναῦσαι· διαπλεῦσαι 'to sail across' (H.) and the ptc. aor. ἀμφι-ναέντος (Emp. 84). A long vowel is found in ipf. νᾶε(ν) (A. R., Call.), ναῖον (ι 222); note ναύει· ῥέει, βλύζει 'flows, gushes forth' (H.), interpreted as Aeol.
•COMP Rarely with ἀμφι-, δια-, περι.
•DER 1. ναέτωρ· ῥέων, πολύρρους 'streaming, having much current' (H.), νάτωρ (S. Fr. 270); 2. νᾶρός 'welding, streaming' (A. Fr. 347 = 764 Mette, S. Fr. 621); 3. νᾶμα [n.] 'flowing water, source, stream' (trag., Pl., X., Arist.) with diminutive ναμά-τιον (Thphr.), -τιαῖος 'from sources, source-' (Aeschin.), -τώδης 'rich in sources' (Thphr.); 4. νασμός = νᾶμα (E.), -ώδης (H.). Probably also 5. Ναϊάς, Ion. Νηϊάς (Od., A. R., AP), Ναΐς, Ion. Νηΐς [f.] (Il.) 'Naiade', see below.
•ETYM It is usually assumed that all present stem forms go back to *νάϝ-ι̯ω (Frisk, DELG, LfgrE). This is only possible if one assumes that shortvocalic νᾰ́ω (νάει, νάουσιν ζ 292, Φ 197) stands for ναίω as a rhythmical variant (Chantraine 1942: 167). Note, however, that ναίω is only attested in ι 222 (with a v.l. νᾶον). The ptc. ἀμφι-ναέντος (Emp. 84) was probably formed under the influence of ῥυέντος. It seems that a basic form *ναϝεμα or *νάϝημα has to be assumed for νᾶμα (which is common in Attic), although such a formation is unparallelled; if so, νᾶρός could also be from *ναϝερός, νασμός from *ναϝεσμός, and νάτωρ from *ναϝέτωρ (cf. Bechtel 1914: 234f.).
The forms with long vowel να-ϊάς, -ΐς, νη-ιάς, -ίς presuppose a noun *νᾶϝ-α (cf. e.g. κρήν-η : -ιάς); the proper meaning would then be "daughter of the source". As all nymphs are considered to be daughters of Zeus, the Naiades are connected with the Dodonaic Ζεὺς Νάϊος. However, a source in Dodona is only mentioned in late Latin writers, and Zeus is unknown as a god of sources (cf. Nilsson 1941(1): 426f.); so the proper meaning of Νάϊος remains unclear. If the Naiades have something to do at all with Ζεὺς Νάϊος, their qualification as daughters of a source must be left open.
Correspondences to νάω outside Greek are uncertain. One might compare the athematic long grade present Skt. snauti 'to drip', with zero grade ptc. snuta- (cf. LIV² s.v. sneu̯-), although the explanation of the Greek α-vocalism as an analogical zero grade snaw- beside snew-* remains dubious. See ► νέω, ► νήχω, ► Νηρεύς.

-νε [pcl.] in Thess. ὅ-νε, τό-νε, τά-νε = ὅ-δε, τό-δε, τά-δε; beside it -νυ in Arc. Cypr. ὅ-νυ, with deictic -ι Arc. gen.sg. τω-νι = τοῦ-δε, τουδί, etc. ◄IE eno-* 'this, that'► •ETYM Like ναί and νή, -νε has also been connected with the demonstrative stem (e-)no-*. On -νυ, see on ► νυ, νῦν, νῦν 'now'. See ► ναί.

νεᾱλής [adj.] 'fresh, powerful, rested' (Ar. Fr. 361, Pl., X., D.). ◄GR► •VAR -ᾰλής (Nic.).
•ETYM Originally 'newly fed, newly grown (up)', from *νεο-αλής, a compound of νέος and the root of an old verb 'to feed, nourish', preserved in ►ἄναλτος, and in Lat. alō, etc. The compound underwent compositional lengthening and is formed with the suffix -ής (cf. Schwyzer: 513).

νεᾱνίᾱς, -ου [m.] 'youth, young strong man', also as an adj. 'youthful, strong, wilful' (Od.). ◄GR► •VAR Ion. νεηνίης, -εω; νεᾶνις [f.] 'young lady, girl' (Il., also LXX), Ion. νεῆνις, contracted νῆνις, -ιδος, -ιν.
•DER 1. Hypocoristic: νεανίσκος, νεην- [m.] 'id.' (IA) with νεανισκ-εύομαι [v.] 'to be in youth' (com., X.), -εύματα [pl.] = Lat. Iuvenalia (D. C.); νεανισκ-άριον (Arr. Epict.), -ύδριον (Theognost.). 2. Adjective: νεανικός 'youthful' (Att., Hp.) with νεανικ-έω [v.] 'to be youthful' (Eup.), -ότης 'youth' (Sext. Ps.). 3. Verbs: νεανιεύομαι [v.] 'to behave youthful or recklessly' (Att.), rarely with prefix as ἐπι-, προσ-; thence νεανίευμα [n.] 'youthful behaviour' (Pl.), νεαν(ι)εία [f.] (Ph.); νεανίζω (Plu., Poll.).
•ETYM A substantival derivation in -ίᾱς from *νεᾱνός vel sim., which must itself be an enlargement of νέος. A proposal for the origin of this suffix -ān- was made by Leukart 1980: 238ff.

νέατος [adj.] 'lowest, utmost'. •VAR Epic also νείατος. ⇒νειός, νέος.

νεάω [v.] 'to plough up a fallow land'. ⇒νειός, νέος.

νεβλᾶραι = περαίνειν 'to finish, fulfill' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Cf. νεβλάρεται (?) in Phot. = Ar. Fr. 241.

νεβρός [m., f.] 'young of the deer, fawn' (Il.). ◄?►
•COMP As a first member e.g. in νεβρο-τόκος 'bringing forth fawns' (Nic.).
•DER Several derivatives, most poet. and late: 1. Substantive: νεβρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'fawnskin' (E.) with νεβρίδ-ιον (Artem.) and νεβρίζω [v.] 'to wear a fawnskin' (D. 18, 259, beside κρατηρίζω 'drink a bowl', of the participants of a Dionysus-festival), νεβρισμός 'wearing νεβρίς' (gramm.); νεβρῆ [f.] 'id.' (Orph.); νεβρίας [m.] of γαλεός, name of a shark (Arist.), after its color, cf. Thompson 1947 s.v., ἔλαφος νεβρίας 'deer' (H. s.v. λάδας); νέβρακες· οἱ ἄρρενες νεοττοὶ τῶν ἀλεκτρυόνων 'the male chicks of the rooster' (H.), cf. σκύλαξ, πόρταξ and Chantraine 1933: 379; νεβρίτης λίθος (Orph.), -ῖτις (Plin.), after the color. 2. Adjectives: νέβρινος (S.), νέβρειος (Call., APl.) 'of a fawn', νέβρειον name of the Pastinaca sativa (Ps.-Dsc.), Strömberg 1944:

50; νεβρώδης 'fawn-like' (AP). 3. Verb: νεβρόομαι 'to be changed into a fawn' (Nonn.).
•ETYM An exact match to νεβρός has been sought in Arm. nerk, -oy 'color', deriving both from IE (s)negʷro-*. However, the meaning of the Armenian word has nothing to do with 'deer'. The correspondence is listed as 'doubtful' in Clackson 1994: 182. Janda Sprache 38 (1996): 87-92 derives it from negʷ-ro-* 'naked' (= unarmed).
The deer and hind are often called after their variegated color, e.g. πρόξ, προκάς 'deer- or roe-like animal' from περκνός 'speckled', πρεκνόν· ποικιλόχροον ἔλαφον 'varicolored deer' (H.).

νέηλυς 'newly arrived'. ⇒ἐλεύσομαι.

νεῖκος [n.] 'quarrel, strife, feud' (Il., Hdt.), on the mg. Trümpy 1950: 144f. ⊲IE neik-* 'attack, run at'⊳ •COMP As a second member in πολυ-νεικής 'much quarrelling', as a PN Πολυ-νείκης (Il.).
•DER νεικέω [v.] 'to quarrel with words, blame, abuse' (Il.), epic also -είω < -es-i̯e/o-*, aor. νεικέσ(σ)αι; thence νεικεσ-τήρ 'quarreler' (Hes. Op. 716; v.l. -ητήρ); νεικέσσιος· πολέμιος 'hostile' (H.), after ἱκέσιος etc.
•ETYM Related to the Baltic group of Lith. ap-nikti, also su-nìkti 'to attack somebody', Latv. nikns 'bad, grim, vehement', nàiks 'vehement, angry', and to Hitt. nini(n)k-^{zi} 'to set in motion, mobilize' (see LIV² s.v. nei̯k-* 'sich erheben'). Greek only preserves derivations from the s-stem, and perhaps also ► νίκη.

νειός [f.] 'fallow field' (Hom., Hes., Call., Arist., Thphr.); on the mg. see below. ⊲IE? ni-* '(be)low'⊳ •VAR Also νεός (X., Amorgos IVᵃ), νειά (Amorgos IVᵃ), νεά or νέα (Thphr., Att. inscr.).
•DER With deviating semantics: νει-όθεν [adv.] 'from below' (K 10, Hell. poet.), νει-όθε 'id.' (poet. inscr. IIIᵖ, Luc.), νει-όθι 'below' (Φ 317, Hes. Th. 567, Hell. poet.). Superl. νείατος 'lowermost, utmost' (mainly epic since Il.), also νέατος, Arc. νήατος, after ἔσχατος, πύματος, cf. μέσος : μέσατος; νεάτη [f.] (Cratin., Pl.), contracted νήτη (Arist., Ptol.), scil. χορδή 'the lowest string' (with the highest tone); νειότατον· κατώτατον 'lowermost' (H.); also νήϊστος in νήϊστα· ἔσχατα, κατώτατα (H.), probably also in Νήϊσται (Boeot. -ϊτται) πύλαι a gate in Thebes (A. Th. 460, E. Ph. 1104). Fem. νείαιρα (νέαιρα Simon.) 'the lowermost', as a substantive (scil. γαστήρ) 'belly, abdomen' (Il., Hp., Hell.), cf. γέραιρα, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 104, 234; cf. also Benveniste 1935: 112); contracted νεῖρα (A. Ag. 1479, E. Rh. 794 [readings not quite certain], H.); νειρός [m.] (Lyc., H.) with νειρὴ κοίλη· κοιλία ἐσχάτη 'outermost stomach' (H.), Schwyzer: 475. On the entire set of forms, cf. Schwyzer: 503.
Denominative νεάω [v.] 'to plough a fallow land' (Hes. Op. 462, com., Thphr.), connected with νέος 'new' at an early date, if not even derived from it, cf. on ► νέος; νεατός [m.] 'working of fallow land' (X. Oik. 7, 20; like ἀλοατός), νέασις [f.] 'id.' (Thphr.) with νεάσιμος (gloss.), see Arbenz 1933: 87.
•ETYM If νειόθεν, νείατος, νείαιρα are cognate with νειός, νειός (scil. γῆ, χώρα), it must have originally meant 'with a low location, low plain'; the meaning 'fallow land', which is also possible for Homer, could rest on the folk-etymological connection with νέος 'new'; cf. Lat. novālis, -e 'fallow land'.
The comparison of νειός < *νειϝός with a Slavic word for 'field', e.g. Ru. níva [f.], is doubtful (see Derksen 2008 s.v. with alternatives). For Greek, if we separate a suffix -uo-, it is possible to compare the IE adverb ni 'low' seen in Skt. ní, with derivatives in e.g. OHG nidar 'downward', OE neowol 'steep' < ni-u̯ol-*. However, the writing νη- in νήϊστος, Arc. νήατος has not been explained in a convincing way. Since an old lengthened grade is highly improbable (especially in a superlative), the η must be secondary.

νείφει [v.] 'it snows' (Il.). ⊲IE sneigʷʰ-* 'snow'⊳ •VAR Aor. νεῖψαι, νειφθῆναι, fut. νείψει. Cf. νίφα [acc.sg.f.] '(falling) snow' (Hes. Op. 535).
•COMP Sometimes with prefix, e.g. κατα-. Compounds, e.g. νιφ-ό-βολος 'snow-covered' (Ar., E.), ἀγά-ννιφ-ος 'with much snow' (A 420, Σ 186, Epich.).
•DER 1. νιφ-άδες [f.pl.], also sing. νιφ-άς, -άδος 'snow-flake, snowstorm' (Il., Pi., trag.), also [adj.] 'rich in snow' (S.); 2. νιφ-ετός [m.] 'falling snow, snowstorm' (Il., Arist.) with νιφετ-ώδης 'connected with snow-fall' (Arist., Plb.); 3. νιφ-όεις 'snowy, rich in snow' (Il.).
•ETYM The full-grade thematic root present νείφει (νῑφέμεν M 280 stands for νειφ-), from which the other Greek verbal forms arose, neatly corresponds with Av. snaēža- (e.g. subj. snaēžāt̰), OHG and OE snīwan, Lith. sniẽgti, 3sg. sniẽga, as well as perhaps Lat. nīvit 'it snows' (Pac.), from thematic PIE sneigʷʰ-e-* 'it snows'. A zero grade thematic present is found in OIr. snigid 'it drops, rains', and a nasal present in Lat. ninguit, Lith. sniñga.
Deviating in meaning is the zero-grade yod-present Skt. sníhyati 'to get wet, sticky', metaph. 'to find affection', with sneha- 'stickyness, affection, etc.', with a shift of meaning that has been ascribed to the mild climate, like in the Celtic word (see above). Comparable to this shift in Greek is e.g. Nonn. D. 22, 283 αἵματι νείφεις of sticky blood, Lyc. 876 ὀμβρία νιφάς of a rain shower. It is also possible that 'to be sticky' is the original root meaning, as advocated by LIV² s.v. sneig̑ʰ-*.
The root noun acc. νίφα (beside which as a nom. νιφετός, νιφάς, χιών) is identical with Lat. nix, nivis < IE snigʷʰ-* and is also continued in ἀγά-ννιφος < -snigʷʰ-*. νίβα· χιόνα 'winter' (H.) could also be included here as Illyrian (Krahe IF 58 (1942): 133). An o-stem snoigʷʰo-* is found in Gm. (e.g. Go. snaiws, MoHG Schnee) and in Slavic (e.g. OCS sněgъ).

νεκρός [m.] 'corpse, dead' (Il.), plur. 'the dead' = 'inhabitants of the Underworld' (Od., Th., LXX, NT), also attributive and adjectival (-ά, -όν) 'dead' (Hell.); νεκρὸν ἵππον (Pi. Fr. 203) is probably predicative. ⊲IE nek̑-(u-)* 'violent death, corpse'⊳ •COMP Often as a first member, e.g. νεκρο-δέγμων 'receiving dead' (Ἅιδης, A. Pr. 153 [lyr.]); rarely as a second member, e.g. μυριό-νεκρος 'with uncountable casualties' (μάχη, Plu.).
•DER 1. Substantive: νεκρών, -ῶνος [m.] (Tegea IIᵃ, AP), νεκρια [f.] 'place of the dead, graveyard' (Hell. pap.), on the unknown accent see Scheller 1951: 46. 2. Adjective:

νεκρ-ιμαῖος 'belonging to a corpse', τὸ νεκρ-ιμαῖον 'corpse' (LXX), after θνησιμ-αῖος, Chantraine 1933: 49; νεκρ-ικός 'regarding the dead', τὰ νεκρικά 'inheritance' (Luc., Vett. Val.); νεκρ-ώδης 'like a corpse' (Luc., Gal.). 3. Verb: νεκρόομαι, -όω 'to die, kill, enervate' (late) with νέκρωσις 'being dead, killing' (late), -ώσιμα [n.pl.] = νεκύσια (church-writers, gloss.), to θανάσιμος (Arbenz 1933: 93), -ώματα [pl.] 'dead bodies' (comm. Arist.), -ωτικός 'causing death' (Gal.).
In the same mg. νέκῡς (post-Hom. -ῠ-) [m.], also [adj.] 'dead' (epic poet Il., also Hdt. and Gortyn), νέκυρ· νεκρός. Λάκωνες (H.); some compounds, e.g. νεκυο-μαντήϊον, -εῖον 'oracle of the dead' (Hdt.), ἰσό-νεκυς 'corpse-like' (E. Or. 200 [lyr.], after ἰσό-θεος, see on ἴσος). Thence: νέκυια [f.] 'offer to the dead, so as to summon them' (D. S., Plu., Nic.), old abstract formation in -ιᾰ instead of later -ίᾱ (cf. ἀλήθεια beside -εία, etc., cf. Solmsen 1909: 248ff.); in the same mg. νεκυϊσμός (Man.); on formations in -ισμός see Chantraine 1933: 142ff.; νεκύσια [n.pl.] 'feasts of the dead' (Hell. pap.), cf. θαλύσια, γενέσια, whence Νεκύσιος [m.] Cretan month-name (II[a]); νεκυϊκός 'belonging to the dead' (Cyran.); νεκύα [f.] plantname = φλόμος (Cyran.), because of its use in the conjuration of the dead; after καρύα, σικύα, etc.; on ►νεκύδαλ(λ)ος see s.v.
Archaic is νέκες· νεκροί (H.), note also νεκ-άς, -άδος [f.] 'heap of dead' (E 886, AP), like νιφάς, etc. (Bechtel 1914 s.v., Chantraine 1933: 352).
Unrelated is ►νῶκαρ, -αρος [n.].
•ETYM The monosyllabic stem of νέκες corresponds exactly to Lat. nex, necis [f.] 'violent death, murder' and OAv. nas- [f.] 'need, distress', from a root noun IE nek̑-*. The u-stem in νέκυς also appears in Iranian, in Av. nas, gen. nasāuuō [f., m.] 'corpse'; originally, the Gr. υ was short, corresponding to Iranian ablaut u : āv < u* : ou̯, as established in Beekes and Cuypers Mnem. 56 (2003): 485-491. Lat. nequālia 'detrimenta' is sometimes adduced, but rejected by De Vaan 2008 s.v. nex. The ro-formation in νεκρός has no parallel outside Greek.
The root was verbal in PIE, e.g. Skt. náśyati, ToA nakät [3sg.pret.] 'to disappear, perish'; see LIV[2] s.v. nek̑- for further forms.
Probably unrelated is ►νέκταρ.

νεκταίρουσιν [v.] · κολάζουσιν 'chastise'; νεκτάρας· μάστιξ 'whip'; νεκτάρθη· ἐζημιώθη 'was punished' [corr. for ἐζυμώθη] (all H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Not related to ►νέκταρ. Unknown.

νέκταρ, -αρος [n.] 'nectar, drink of the gods' (Il.). ◂IE?, PG?▸
•COMP As a first member in νεκταρο-σταγής 'dripping nectar' (com.), etc.
•DER νεκτάρ-εος 'of nectar, smelling like nectar' (Il.), -ώδης 'nectar-like' (Gp.); νεκτάριον [n.] plantname = ἑλένιον (Dsc.), also name of a medicine and several eye-salves (Gal.), with νεκταρίτης (οἶνος) 'wine spiced with νεκτάριον' (Dsc., Plin.).
•ETYM In contrast with ἀμβροσία, which is of related meaning (see ►βροτός), νέκταρ does not have an ascertained etymology. Often considered to be a compound of the root noun nek̑-* 'death', found in νέκες (cf. ►νεκρός), Lat. nex 'murder', and the verbal root terh*$_2$- 'to cross, overcome', found in Skt. tárati, the zero grade of which indeed occurs as a second member in Skt. ap-túr 'crossing the waters', viśva-túr 'overcoming everything', etc. (cf. on ►τέρμα). There is no reflex of word-final h*$_2$, which may be assumed to have been lost in the oblique cases, e.g. nek̑-trh*$_2$-os > νέκταρος. However, it seems unlikely that the latter stem form was introduced into the nom./acc., since these were much more frequent. We rather have to assume analogical reshaping of the nominative; cf. the discussion in Beekes 1969: 161.
If the etymology is correct, νέκταρ would be an element of IE poetic language (cf. Schmitt KZ 77 (1961): 88, who refers to Skt. mr̥tyúmáti tr̥̄ 'to overcome death' odanéna 'by rice-milk' (AV 4, 35), as well as R. Schmitt 1967: 38f., 155ff.). Various older speculations should definitely be rejected (e.g. νέκταρ would originally mean 'not being dead', belonging to the gloss κτέρες· νεκροί 'the dead' [H.]; cf. on ►κτέρας); see Frisk for references.
Meanwhile, different explanations have been suggested assuming non-Indo-European origin. Fur.: 320 compares νικάριον, an eye-salve. If this is correct, the word may be Pre-Greek. He also points to other Pre-Greek words in -αρ (op.cit. 134[75]), remarking that the traditional interpretation as a compound is too Indo-Iranian in character for a Greek word.
Drew Griffith Glotta 72 (1994): 20-3 explains the word as a loan from Egyptian nṯrh 'divine', a sodium carbonate used in mummification; in T 37, νέκταρ is dripped into the nostrils of Patroclus. The word is found as nit(i)ru in Akkadian, and as nitri in Hittite. Since these forms have no velar, the difficulty of explaining the Greek cluster -κτ- remains. It is suggested that it went via a Semitic form netkr̥*, but such a form is not attested. Drew Giffith further compares δάκτυλος 'date' from Eg. dql, but this form may have been influenced by the word for 'finger'. It cannot be assumed that the velar was introduced from νέκυς, so the explanation cannot be maintained. The Egyptian word was later borrowed as ►νίτρον. Finally, Levin SMEA 13 (1971) derived the word from Semitic nqṭr 'to burn incense'.

νεκύδαλ(λ)ος [m.] 'the cocoon of the silkworm' (Arist., Ath., Clem. Alex.). On the mg. Immisch Glotta 6 (1915): 203ff. ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Formation like κορύ-δ-αλ(λ)ος 'crested lark' (see κόρυδος), "so probably derived from νέκυς in view of the apparent lifelessness of the larva" (Frisk). According to Immisch Glotta 6 (1915): 203ff., the name is also connected with the view of the Seelenschmetterling (butterfly of the soul) and its symbolic views. Incorrectly, Güntert 1919: 220 f.: properly "deathworm", from νέκυς and del- 'split' in δαιδάλλω, etc. The interpretation in Frisk seems most improbable. The word is clearly Pre-Greek (on -αλ(λ)ος, see Beekes 2008).

νέκυς ⇒νεκρός.

νέμεσις, -εως [f.] 'righteous anger, retribution' (Il.), also personified (Hes.); on the mg. below. ◂IE? nem-* 'attribute'▸ •DER Νεμέσια [n.pl.] 'festival of Nemesis' (D.), appellative νεμέσιον [n.] as a plantname = ὠκιμοειδές 'catchfly' (Ps.-Dsc.); Νεμεσεῖον (-ιον) 'temple of Nemesis' (Hell. inscr.); νεμεσίτης λίθος [m.] name of a magic stone (Cyran.).
Denominative verbs: 1. νεμεσ(σ)άομαι, -άω 'to become indignant, rage, get angry, resent' (Il.), aor. νεμεσ(σ)-ηθῆναι, -ήσασθαι, -ῆσαι, verbal adj. -ητός; analogical after other verbs in -άομαι, -άω (cf. Chantraine 1942: 358, Schwyzer: 727), -σσ- beside -σ- is also analogical / metrical, as in νεμέσσι [dat.sg.] Z 335; νεμεσητικός 'prone to perturbation' (Arist.), νεμεσήμων 'unwilling, perturbed' (Call., Nonn.). 2. νεμεσίζο-μαι (only pres. and ipf.) 'id.' (Hom.).

•ETYM Formation in -τις (cf. γένεσις, Λάχεσις; see on ► λαγχάνω), often connected with ► νέμω. The proper meaning would be *'(just) assignment, attribution, imputatio'; this perhaps still shines through in the usual epic expression οὐ νέμεσις (τινί), originally 'one cannot attribute (to sbd.)', i.e. 'one cannot blame sbd. for sth.' (cf. Bischoff Gnomon 15 (1939): 549[1]).

νέμος [n.] 'grove, forest' (since Λ 480). ◂IE? nem-* 'attribute', nem-* 'bend'▸ •DER Probably here Νεμέα, epic -είη [f.] valley and place in Argolis with a forest dedicated to Ζεὺς Νέμειος (since Hes.).
•ETYM Identical with Lat. nemus [n.] 'forest, (holy) wood'; also related is a Celtic word for '(holy) wood, sanctuary', in Gaul. nemeton, OIr. nemed. For IE nem-os-* beside nemeto-*, cf. τέλος : τελετή. Further combinations are hypothetical: connection with Skt. námati 'to bend' with námas- [n.] 'bow, adoration'; with ► νέμω, -ομαι in the sense 'to pasture'.

νέμω, -ομαι [v.] 'to allot, dispense, distribute, appropriate, possess; to inhabit, manage; to pasture, graze, consume' (Il.). ◂IE nem-* 'dispense, distribute; take'▸ •VAR Aor. νεῖμαι (Il.), -ασθαι, pass. νεμηθῆναι, fut. νεμῶ, -οῦμαι (Ion. -έομαι, late -ήσω, -ήσομαι), perf. νενέμηκα,-ημαι (Att., etc.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐπι-, κατα-, προσ-.
•DER A. νομή [f.] 'pasture', metaph. 'spread', e.g. of an ulcer , 'distribution' (IA), 'possession' (Hell.). Also ἐπι-, προ-νομή, etc. from ἐπι-, προ-νέμειν, -εσθαι, etc. Also νομός [m.] 'pasture' (Il.), 'seat, residence' (Pi., Hdt., S.), 'province' (Hdt., D. S., Str.). From νομή or νομός (cannot always be determined with certainty): 1. νομάς, -άδος 'roaming the pasture', substantivized plur. 'pastoral people, nomads' (IA), as an EN 'Numidians' (Plb.); thence νομαδ-ικός 'roaming, belonging to pastoral peoples, Numidian' (Arist.), -ίτης 'id.' (Suid.), -ίαι [f.pl.] 'pastures' with -ιαῖος (Peripl. M. Rubr.). 2. νομεύς [m.] 'herdsman, shepherd' (Il.), also 'distributor' (Pl.), plur. 'ribs of a ship' (Hdt.); from this (or from νομός?) νομεύω [v.] 'to pasture' (Il.) with νόμευ-μα [n.] 'herd' (A.), -τικός 'belonging to pasturage' (Pl.); διανομ-εύς (to διανομή), προνομ-εύω (to προ-νομή), etc. 3. νόμιος 'regarding the pasture', also as an epithet of several gods (Pi., Ar., Call.); cf. on νόμος; νομαῖος 'id.' (Nic., Call.); νομώδης 'festering', of an ulcer (medic.). 4. νομάζω, -ομαι [v.] 'to pasture' (Nic.).
B. νόμος [m.] 'custom, usage, law; (musical) key, tone' (since Hes.), with several compounds, e.g. Ἔννομος PN (Il.), εὔ-νομος 'equipped with good laws' (Pi.) with εὐνομ-ίη, -ία 'lawful order' (since ρ 487). From νόμος: 1. adj. νόμιμος 'customary, lawful' (IA), with νομιμότης [f.] (Iamb.); νομικός 'regarding the laws, juridical, jurisprudent' (Pl., Arist.); νόμαιος = νόμιμος (Ion. and late); νόμιος 'id.' (Locris; cf. on νομός). 2. Verb νομίζω 'to use customarily, be used to, observe (a custom), believe' (IA, Dor.), sporadically with prefix, e.g. συν-, κατα-; thence νόμισις [f.] 'belief' (Th.), νόμισμα [n.] 'custom, received or current institution, (valid) coin' (IA), diminutive -άτιον (Poll.); νομιστός 'received' with νομιστεύομαι 'be received' (Plb.), also νομιτεύομαι 'id.' (Hell. and late inscr.), cf. θεμι(σ)τεύω.

C. νεμέτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'keeper (of justice), avenger' (A. Th. 485); νέμησις [f.], also ἀπο-, δια-, ἐπι-, etc., from ἀπο-νέμω, etc., 'distribution' (Is., Arist.); νεμ-ητής = νεμέτωρ (Poll.) with -ήτρια [f.] (inscr. Rome, IV$^{\mathrm{p}}$); uncertain Νεμήϊος epithet of Zeus (Archyt. apud Stob.); perhaps for Νέμειος (from Νεμέα). On ► νέμεσις, see s.v.
D. Deverbatives: νεμέθω, -ομαι [v.] 'to pasture' (Λ 635, Nic.); νωμάω 'to distribute, maintain, observe' (Il., Hdt., Parm.), aor. -ῆσαι, also with ἐπι-, ἀμφι-, προσ-, whence νώμ-ησις (Pl. Cra. 411d), -ήτωρ 'distributor, etc.' (Man., Nonn.).
•ETYM The Greek system is built on the present νέμω. The disyllabic forms νεμέτωρ, νέμεσις, νέμησις must somehow be analogical after γενέτωρ, γένεσις, etc., as νεμ- had no final laryngeal. The ramification of the meanings found in νέμω and its derivations is problematic. Benveniste 1948: 79 stresses that the phenomenon of lawful and regular distribution that characterizes the verb νέμω. However, it may be asked whether more than one root is at the basis of νέμω.
Of the words outside Greek that are interesting for the etymology, the Germanic verb for 'take' agrees best with νέμω: Go. niman, etc.; further, Latv. ņem̂t, 1sg. ņe̦mu 'to take'. A selection of nominal derivations: Av. nəmah- [n.] 'loan', Lat. numerus 'number, etc.', OIr. nem [f.] 'poison' (cf. Gr. δόσις, G Gift).
Connection with Skt. námati 'bow, bend' and ToB näm- 'id.', which are formally identical with νέμω, can be neither proven nor disproven. LIV[2] makes a division in 1. nem-* 'zuteilen' (Gr., Gm. and Latv.) and 2. nem-* 'sich neigen' (IIr. and To.). See ► νέμος.

νενίηλος [adj.] 'unwise, blinded', acc. to H. = τυφλός, ἀπόπληκτος, ἀνόητος 'blind, senseless, stupid' (Call. Jov. 63). ◂PG?▸
•DER Beside it ἐνίηλος (very doubtful, probably <ν>ε-)· ἀνόητος; also νενός· εὐήθης 'simple, silly' (H.).
•ETYM Fur.: 392 compares νενός with ἐνεός 'stupid, dumb'; the v.l. <ν>ε- might also be an instance of this alternation.

νέννος [m.] '(maternal) uncle' (Thera, Poll., H., Eust.), 'maternal grandfather' (Poll.; v.l. νόννος); on the mg. cf. μήτρως. ◂ONOM▸ •DER νάνναν· τὸν τῆς μητρὸς ἢ τοῦ πατρὸς ἀδελφόν· οἱ δὲ τὴν τούτων ἀδελφήν. νάννη· μητρὸς ἀδελφή (H.). Cf. also νίν(ν)η [f.] 'grandmother, mother-in-law' vel sim.? (Thessalonica II$^{\mathrm{p}}$).
•ETYM Reduplicated Lallwort like e.g. Skt. nanā́ [f.] 'mother, mama', MoP nana 'id.', SCr. nana 'mother', Ru. njánja 'nurse'; Lat. nonnus, -a 'monk, nun', also 'nurse-maid' can probably also be adduced. On the Greek words, see Schwyzer: 315, 339, 423.

νεογιλλός, -ιλός [adj.] 'newly born, young, small' vel sim. (μ 86, Is. Fr. 12, Theoc., late prose); cf. H. νεογιλῆς (μ 86)· νεογνῆς, νεαρᾶς, νέας, νεωστὶ γεννηθείσης; acc. to sch. ad loc. γάλακτι τρεφομένης 'fed by mother's breast'; besides perhaps νεογιλής in νεογηλέα, v.l. Anacr. 51 for νεοθηλέα. ◂IE? ǵeid-* 'suck'▸ •VAR Perhaps found in Myc. ki-ra = /gillā/, Chantraine 1968: 574.

•ETYM The second member is also seen in the PN Γίλλος, with Γιλλίς, -ίων. The gemination, which is typical of pet names, does not necessarily belong to the adjective. However, if it is original, -γιλλος may stand for *-γιδ-λος and belong together with Lith. žįsti, 1sg. žindù 'to suck'; νεογιλλός may then originally mean "who started sucking recently".

νεογνός [adj.] 'newborn'. ⇒γίγνομαι.

νεολαία [f.] 'group of young men, youth of a nation' (A. [lyr.], Ar. Fr. 67, Theoc., late prose), also adj. (E. Alc. 103 [lyr.]; correct?). ◄GR► •ETYM Abstract compound from νέος and λαός with a suffix -ία-: *νεο-λᾱϝ-ία, properly "composition of young people". Cf. Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 172f.

νέομαι [v.] 'to reach some place, escape, return, get home' (Il.). ◄IE nes-* 'return, heal'► •VAR Contracted forms νεῦμαι, νεῖαι, νεῖται, etc., only present-stem. Further νίσομαι (-σσ-), only present stem except for uncertain or late attestations of a supposed aorist νίσ(σ)ασθαι, often with prefix. e.g. μετα-, ποτι-, ἀπο-, 'drive, go, come' (Il.).
•DIAL Myc. PN Ne-ti-ja-no /Nesti-anōr/, see Peters Sprache 32 (1986). It is compared with Thess. Νέσσανδρος (SEG 34, 530).
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἀπο-.
•DER 1. νόστος [m.] 'return, homecoming, (felicitous) journey' (Il.), also 'income, produce' (Trypho apud Ath. 14, 618d); ἄ-νοστος 'without yield' (Thphr.); hence νόστιμος 'belonging to the return' (Od.), also 'giving produce, fruitful, nutritious' (Call., Thphr., Plu.).
Denominative verb νοστέω 'to return, come home, travel' (epic poet. since Il., also Hdt.), also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ὑπο-, περι-; thence ἀπο-, ὑπο-, περι-νόστησις [f.] 'return, retreat, etc.' (late). 2. Νέστωρ, -ορος [m.] PN (Il.), whence Νεστόρεος (Il.), Aeol. for -ιος; -ειος (Pi., E.), νεστορίς, -ίδος [f.] name of a cup (Ath. 11, 487f.).
•ETYM The thematic root present νέομαι < nes-e/o-* corresponds formally with the Germanic group of Go. ganisan 'to recover, be saved', OE genesan 'to escape, be saved, survive', MoHG genesen 'to mend, recover', with a perfective prefix ga-*. The semantic connection between these verbs is quite straightforward. Skt. násate 'to come near, approach, meet sbd., unite', which is semantically farther removed, is nevertheless formally identical; if Nā́satyā [m.du.], indicating the Aśvins, properly means "Healers, Saviors", it fits well with νέομαι, ga-nisan and the causatives Go. nasjan 'to save' and OHG nerian 'to save, heal, feed'.
The forms νῑσομαι (also written νίσσομαι) are debated. Acc. to LIV², we may explain them as ni-ns-e-* > νῑσε- (instead of sound-regular νῑνε-) by assuming an athematic 3sg. ni-ns-toi* with preservation of s before t, and only later thematization (likewise, Pok. 766; differently, Peters Sprache 30 (1984): 86). The explanation as a desiderative ni-ns-s-e/o-* is less likely in view of the formal match with Skt. níṃsate < ni-ns-e/o-*.
The comparison with ToA nasam, ToB nesau 'I am' < perf. nos-* is accepted by some, doubted by others. See also on ► ναίω 'to live' and on ► ἄσμενος.

νεόπτραι [f.] · υἱῶν θυγατέρες 'daughters of sons' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Hypotheses by Latte and Benveniste 1969:1: 234.

νέος [adj.] 'new, young, youthful, unusual, unheard' (Il.). ◄IE neuo-* 'new'► •VAR Grades of comparison νεώτερος, -τατος (since Il.), also νέατος in the sense of 'the last one' (trag.), but perhaps contaminated with νείατος, see on ► νειός.
•DIAL Myc. ne-wo.
•COMP Very often as a first member, cf. νεο-γιλλός, νεο-γν-ός, νέ-ορτος (see ὄρνυμι), νεοχμός, etc.
•DER 1. νεαρός 'young, youthful, tender, fresh' (B 289; on the formation below) with νεάρωσις [f.] 'rejuvenation' (Poet. in PLand. 78, 13). 2. νεότης, -ητος (Dor. -τας) [f.] 'age of youth, youthful spirit, band of young men' (Il.), -τήσιος 'youthful' (Ps.-Phoc.). 3. νεοίη [f.] 'youthful thoughtlessness' (Ψ 604), νέοιαι· ἀφροσύναι 'id.' (H.); after ἀνοίη, ἄνοια. 4. νέᾱξ, -κος [m.] = νεανίας (Nicophon, Poll.); see Björck 1950: 264f. Adverbs: 5. νεωστί 'newly, fresh' (IA) from νέως + τι (Schwyzer: 624). 6. νεόθεν 'lately' (S. OC 1447 [lyr.]). Denominative verbs: 7. νεάζω 'to be or become young' (trag., com., Hdt., Hell.), also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐκ-, ἐν-, whence ἐκνεασμός 'innovation' (Simp.); on νεασμός 'labouring of a fallow land' (Gp.), from νεάω, see below and on ► νειός. 8. νεόω 'to make new' (A.), also = νεάω (LXX, Poll.) with νεώματα [pl.] 'laboured fallow land' (LXX). 9. νεάω [v.] 'to work fallow land' (Hes. Op. 462), cf. Lat. novālis (ager, terra) 'fallow land'; besides, derivation from ► νειός 'fallow land' is conceivable. 10. νεώσσω, -ττω [v.] 'to renew' (Hdn., H.). 11. νεωτερίζω [v.] 'to renew, innovate (in political organization)' (Att.) with νεωτερ-ισμός, -ισμα, -ισις, -ιστής, -ικός. On ► νεᾱνίᾱς, see s.v.
•ETYM The form νέος < νέϝος (cf. Myc. ne-wo and Cypr. νεϝόστατος) is identical with Hitt. neu̯a-, Skt. náva-, Lat. novus, OCS novъ, ToB ñuwe, ToA ñu, all from IE neuo-* 'new'. There is also a derivative in -i̯o- in Skt. návya-, Go. niujis, Gaul. Novio-dūnum, Lith. naũjas. Theoretically, νεῖος (only A. R. 1, 125, verse-initially) could agree with this, but it is rather due to metrical lengthening. An r-formation parallel to νεαρός is found in Arm. nor 'new' < neu̯eró-* vel sim.; cf. νηρός. The denominative verb νεάω agrees with Lat. novāre and Hitt. neu̯aḫḫ- 'to renew', but they could be parallel innovations, like the correspondence of νεότης with Lat. novitās, and of νέᾱξ with CS novakъ. It is probable that the adjective neuo-* derives from nu* 'now'.

νεοσσός [m.] 'young bird, chick', also of other animals and of men (Il.), 'yolk of an egg' (Arist.). ◄IE neuo-* + -tio- 'young'► •VAR Also νοσσός (Schwyzer: 253 with lit.), Att. νεοττός.
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. ν(ε)οσσο-τροφέω (-ττ-) [v.] 'to rear young birds' (Ar.).
•DER 1. Diminutives: ν(ε)οσσίον, -ττ- 'chick', also metaph. 'yolk of an egg' (Ar., Arist., Thphr.); -σσίς, -ττίς [f.] 'id.', also as a PN (com., Arist., AP), as a designation of a shoe (Herod. 7, 57; probably from the PN). 2. collective ν(ε)οσσιή (Ion.), -ττιά (Att.), νοσσιά (Hell.) 'brood', also 'den, lair' (Herod.), 'beehive' (LXX). 3.

Denominative verb ν(ε)οσσεύω, -ττεύω 'to breed, nestle' (IA) with νεοττεία, -ττευσις 'breeding' (Arist.). 4. PN Νόσσος, Νοσσώ, Νοσσικᾶς (inscr.).
•ETYM Formed from νέος, probably after the example of περισσός, ἔπισσαι, or μέτασσαι. These contain the adjectival suffix *-tio- added to a preposition, as found also in e.g. Hitt. appezzii̯a- 'backmost', Skt. ápatya- 'offspring' < Hop-e/o-ti-o-* and, within Greek, in the adverbs ὀπίσ(σ)ω, πρόσ(σ)ω.

νεοχμός [adj.] 'new, unusual, strange', almost only of objects (Ion. poet., Alcm.). ◂GR▸
•DER νεοχμίη· κίνησις πρόσφατος 'recent movement' (H.) and denominative νεοχμόω = νεωτερίζω 'to innovate (in the political system), to revolt' (Hdt., Th. 1, 12, Arist.) with νεόχμωσις [f.] 'innovation, unusual appearance' (Arist., Aret.); also νεοχμ-έω (H., Suid.), -ίζω (H.) 'id.'.
•ETYM Derived from νέος, but with an unclear formation. It has been compared with ὀρροχμόν· ἔσχατον, ἄκρον 'topmost, highest' (H.), from ὄρρος. Wackernagel KZ 33 (1895): 1f. analyzes -χμ- as the zero grade of χθών, χαμαί, so the compound would originally mean 'new in (this) land'; however, this has not been universally accepted.

νέπετος [?] = καλαμίνθη (Gal.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Cf. νέπιτα· ἡ καλαμίνθη (H.).
•ETYM According to André 1956 s.v., νέπιτα was taken from Lat. nepeta. Fur.: 357 is probably right in considering the origin of the Latin word to be a Greek pre-form *νεπετα. Such a form points to Pre-Greek origin.

νέποδες [pl.] in νέποδες καλῆς Ἁλοσύδνης as a designation of the φῶκαι 'seals' (δ 404); differently interpreted by later poets: as ἀπόγονοι 'descendants' (Theoc. 17, 25, Call. Fr. 77; also Eust. 1502, 36); as νηξίποδες 'creatures with fins' (H.), referring to fishes (Call. Fr. 260, Nic., AP), as ἄποδες 'feetless' (Apion apud Apollon. Lex.). ◂?▸
•ETYM The exact meaning is uncertain, so the word remains etymologically unclear. The fact that Greek has no word-negation *νε- 'not-, un-' is evidence against the interpretation 'footless'. The interpretation as 'ἀπόγονοι' identifies νέποδες with Lat. nepōtes = Skt. nápātaḥ [pl.] 'grandchild'; thus, the word would have been adapted in its inflection to πούς : ποδός.

νέρθε(ν) [adv.] '(from) below'. •VAR νέρτερος 'lower'. ⇒ἔνερθεν, ἐνέρτερος.

νέτωπον [n.] 'oil of bitter almonds' (Hp.), also νετώπιον (H.) and by folk-etymology μετώπιον (medic., H.); νίωπον (Hp. apud Erot.). ◂PG?, LW Sem.?▸ •ETYM Acc. to Lewy 1895: 39f., it is a Semitic loan; cf. Hebr. nāṭāp, Aram. n^{e}ṭāpā, nāṭōpā 'drip; dripping, odoriferous resin'. However, the variations dental/zero (Fur.: 391) and ε/ι could also point to a Pre-Greek word.

νευρά [f.] 'string of a bow, sinew' (Il., X., Arist.). ◂IE sneh*$_1$-ur/n- 'band, sinew'▸
•VAR Ion. -ή.
•COMP Many compounds, e.g. νευρό-σπαστος 'drawn by strings', substantivized [n.pl.] 'puppets' (Hdt., X.), with derivatives νευροσπάστ-ης, -ικός, -ία, -έω (Arist., Hell.).

•DER Diminutive νευρίον [n.] (AP). Lengthened form νευρειή (Theoc. 25, 213; verse-initial), cf. ἐγχείη : ἔγχος, etc.; oxytone accent after νευρή.
Also νεῦρον [n.] 'sinew, string (of a bow, of an instrument), cord, penis', in plur. 'strength, power' (Il.).
Derivatives: 1. diminutive νευρίον (Hp.). 2. Plant name νευράς, -άδος [f.] = ποτίρριον (Dsc., Plin.), δορύκνιον (Plin.). 3. Adjective νευρ-ώδης 'sinewy' (IA), -ινος 'made from sinews' (Pl., Arist.), -ικός 'suffering from contraction of the sinews, concerning the sinews, etc.' (medic.). 4. Verb νευρόομαι, -όω 'to be provided with sinews' (Ar., Ph., Gal.), also with prefix ἀπο-, ἐκ-, whence ἀπονεύρωσις [f.] 'end of the muscle, where it becomes tendinous' (Gal.).
•ETYM Greek νεῦρον and Lat. nervus 'sinew, muscle, nerve' < *(s)neuro- display a thematic enlargement of the r-stem seen in Av. snāuuarə [n.] 'sinew', ToB ṣñaura 'sinews, nerves', Arm. neard 'sinew, fiber' (with QIE *-t). An alternating n-stem is found in Skt. snāvan- [n.] 'band, sinew'. The Greek and Latin thematizations probably originated in the collective (neuter plural).
We have to depart from IE sneh*$_1$-ur/n-, a derivative in -uer/n- from a root sneh*$_1$- 'to twist together (threads)', found in ►νέω 2 'to spin'. For the reconstruction, see Schrijver 1991: 269. Hitt. išḫunau̯ar [n.] 'sinew' is unrelated, but derives from išḫunau̯- 'upper arm' (cf. Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.).

νεύω [v.] 'to incline, nod, beckon, grant' (Il.). ◂IE neu*(H)- 'nod, incline'▸ •VAR Aor. νεῦσαι, fut. νεύσω, -νεύσομαι (Il.), perf. νένευκα (E.) -νένευμαι (Ph.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐπι-, κατα-.
•DER νεῦσις [f.] 'nodding, inclination', also with ἔκ-, ἀνά-, etc. (Pl., LXX), νεῦμα [n.] 'beck, nod' (A., Th., X.), also with ἐπι-, ἐν-, συν-; thence νευμάτιον (Arr.); νευστικός 'inclining' (Ph.). Enlargement νευστάζω (rarely with ἐπι-) [v.] 'to nod, beckon' (Il.), cf. βαστάζω, ῥυστάζω, etc.
•ETYM Frisk argued that the retention of the diphthong in νεύω as well as in νευστάζω pointed to a pre-form neus-e/o-* or neus-ie/o-*, comparing ►γεύομαι and ►εὕω. The late forms νένευκα, -νένευμαι are derived from νεύω. However, the obvious cognate Lat. abnuō 'to refuse, deny', adnuō 'to nod, permit' derives from *-neue/o-, which is why a root without -s- would be preferable. The form νεῦμα agrees with Lat. nūmen < neu*(s)-mn, but both forms are easily understood as independent innovations.
García Ramón MSS 54 (1993): 33-63 discusses the Aktionsart and aspect of neu*(H)- 'to make a sudden movement', and comes to the following conclusions: 1) Lat. nūtus does not prove a laryngeal. 2) Skt. návate 'to move' should not be included as evidence. 3) The Greek present may continue neu*(H)-e/o-. 4) The verb is non-momentative and non-durative. The original meaning is still preserved in Greek and Latin.
Further cognates include Lith. niaũsti 'to incline' and MIr. a:t-noí 'to entrust' (LIV^2 s.v. neu-*). The group of Ru. núrit', which is semantically close, is difficult to connect because a ro-adjective is hard to imagine for this root. See ►νύσσω, ►νυστάζω.

νεφέλη [f.] 'cloud, mass of clouds' (epic poet. since Il., X., Arist.) also a cloud in urine and in the eye (medic.), metaph. 'fine bird-net' (Ar., Call., AP). ⊲IE neb^h-l-* 'cloud'⊳ •COMP νεφελ-ηγερέτα 'cloud-gatherer', epithet of Zeus, with voc. for nom., ἐπι-νέφελος 'clouded' (Hdt., Hp., Arist.).
•DER 1. Diminutive νεφέλιον [n.] (Arist., Thphr., medic.). 2. Adjectives: νεφελ-ώδης 'cloudy' (Arist.), -ωτός 'covered with clouds, consisting of clouds' (Luc.). 3. Verbs: νεφελ-όομαι (Eust.), -ίζομαι (sch.) 'to be(come) covered with clouds'.
•ETYM Both νέφος and νεφέλη are old inherited words with exact counterparts in several languages. The word νεφέλη corresponds to Lat. nebula, MW nyfel 'cloud', IE neb^h-el-h$_2$-*. Germanic has the same element -l-, but the ending and the medial vowel vary: e.g., ON njól [f.] 'darkness' < PGm. nĕbulā*, OHG nebul [m.] 'mist' < PGm. neb(V)la-*. Celtic forms like OIr. nél [m.] 'cloud, mist', gen. nivil are ambiguous.
Beside this l-stem, we find a neuter s-stem neb^h-s-* in ►νέφος = Skt. nábhas- [n.] 'cloud, mist, haze', Hitt. nepiš, OCS nebo, gen. nebese 'heaven'. The word ►ὄμβρος is unrelated.

νέφος [n.] 'cloud, mass of clouds' (Il.). ⊲IE neb^h-s-* 'cloud'⊳ •COMP νεφο-ειδής 'cloud-like' (Epicur.), συν-νεφής 'surrounded by clouds, dark' (E., Arist.), ἐπι-νεφής 'cloudy, bringing clouds' (Arist., Thphr.) with the verbal formations (probably back-formations): συν-νέφει, -νένοφεν (Ar., E., Arist.), ἐπι-νέφει (Arist., Thphr.) 'is or makes cloudy', whence ἐπίνεψις [f.] 'cloudiness' (Arist.).
•DER 1. Diminutive νεφύδριον (Olymp. Phil.). 2. Adjective νεφώδης 'cloudlike, bringing clouds' (Arist., Str.). 3. Verb νεφόομαι (also with ἐκ-) 'become cloudy, be changed in a cloud' (Thphr., Ph.) with νέφωσις [f.] 'cloudiness' (Ph.).
•ETYM For cognates, see ►νεφέλη. LIV² s.v. 1. neb^h-* takes the impersonal verbs συννέφει, etc. as old.

νεφροί [m.pl.] 'kidneys' (IA). ⊲IE neg^{wh}ro-* 'kidney'⊳ •VAR Also νεφρώ [du.] (Ar. Ra. 475), rarely sg. νεφρός.
•COMP As a second member in περί-νεφρος 'fat around the kidneys' (Arist.).
•DER νεφρία [n.pl.] 'id.' (pap. II-III^p); νεφρ-ίτης σφόνδυλος 'first vertebra of the sacrum' (Poll.), -ῖτις (νόσος) [f.] 'disease of the kidneys' (Hp., Th.) with -ιτικός 'suffering of νεφρῖτις, healing the v.' (medic.); νεφρ-ώδης 'kidney-like' (Arist.), -ιαῖος 'ptng. to the kidneys' (Dsc.); hypostasis ἐπινεφρ-ίδιος 'on the kidneys', of δημός 'fat' (Φ 204).
•ETYM The word νεφροί has a counterpart in the glosses given by Festus: nefrōnēs (Praeneste), nebrundinēs (Lanuvium) 'kidneys'. The Germanic word for 'kidney', OHG nioro, ME nēre (also kid-nēre > E kidney), OSw. niūre, etc., which requires a pre-form neuran-, points to IE neg^{wh}ro-. Both ἀδήν 'gland', inguen 'groin' and Lat. rēnēs, OIr. áru 'kidney' must be kept separate.

νέω 1 [v.] 'to swim' (Il.). ⊲IE sneh$_2$-* 'swim'⊳ •VAR Ipf. ἔ-ννεον (Φ 11), aor. νεῦσαι, perf. νένευκα (Att.), fut. νεύσομαι (H.), -σοῦμαι (v.l. X. An. 4, 3, 12).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. δια-, ἐκ-, περι-.

•DER νεῦσις [f.] 'swimming' (Arist.), ἀνάνευ-σις properly "swimming upward", 'revival' (LXX).
Beside νέω stands νήχω, usually -ομαι 'to swim', Dor. (Ps.-Theoc.) νᾱ́χω, -ομαι, fut. νήξομαι (epic poet. Od.), aor. νήξασθαι (Plb., Lyc., AP), perf. med. νενῆχθαι (Ath.), very often with prefix (mostly med.), e.g. παρα-, δια-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-. Thence νῆξις [f.] 'swimming' (Batr., Plu., medic.), διάνηξ-ις 'swimming through' (Herm. apud Stob.), νηχαλέος 'swimming' (Xenocr.), after μυδαλέος, etc.
•ETYM The present νήχω, νάχω, whence νήξομαι, etc., contains a velar enlargement of IE sneh$_2$-*, as seen in Skt. snā́ti 'to bathe', Lat. nāre 'to swim', OIr. snäim 'to swim, float, etc.'. For the root-extension -χ-, compare σμῆν beside σμήχω 'to salve'.
Deviating from νήχω in their vocalism, νέω and νεῦσαι agree with πλέω : πλεῦσαι and could be rhyme-formations. Verbal nouns with o-ablaut are supposed in νόα· πηγή. Λάκωνες 'source (Lacon.)' (H.; corrected to νοά by Bechtel 1921, 2: 378) and in Νοῦς ποταμός (Arcadia, Asia Minor; cf. Schwyzer: 310); a zero grade aorist occurs in ἔννυθεν· ἐκέχυντο (H.) (correct?).
Beside νήχω and νέω, there is ►νάω 'to bubble up, stream'.

νέω 2 [v.] 'to spin'. ⊲IE sneh$_1$-* 'spin'⊳
•VAR Present 3sg. νῇ (νῆ, νεῖ; Hes. Op. 777), 3pl. νῶσι (Ael., Poll.), ipf. ἔννη (Aeol.; Hdn., EM), inf. νῆν, ptc. νῶντα (H.), νώμενος (Poll.); also νήθω (Cratin., Pl., LXX); aor. νῆσαι, -ασθαι (since η 198); νῶσαι (Eup. 319, ptc.f.pl.(?); Meineke νῆσαι), pass. νηθῆναι and fut. νήσω (Att.), perf. med. νένησμαι (late).
•COMP Rarely with ἐπι-, δια-, συν-, κατα-.
•DER νῆμα [n.] 'thread, yarn' (Od.) with νηματ-ικός 'consisting of threads' (Ath. Mech.), -ώδης 'fibrous' (Plu.); νῆσις [f.] 'spinning' (Pl.); νῆτρον [n.] 'distaff' (Suid.); ►νήθουσα [f.] plant name.
•ETYM The dental enlargement in νήθω may be compared with κνήθω : κνῆν, πλήθω : πλῆτο (Schwyzer 703), and perhaps also κλώθω 'to spin' (Frisk).
Aeolic ἔννη and Homeric ἐΰ-ννητος 'well spun' point to original sn-*, which is etymologically expected on account of OIr. sniid 'spins, stitches'. The root is also found in Lat. nēre 'to spin' < (s)neh$_1$-*, and without s-mobile in Germanic, e.g. OHG nāen 'to sew'.
The question is what present formation PIE built on this root. The forms νῶσι, νῶντα, νώμενος are thematizations (from *νηουσι, *νήοντα, νηόμενος) of the old athematic verb found in the ipf. ἔννη < e-sneh$_1$-t. However, there are also forms that point to an i-enlargement: e.g., Ru. nit' 'thread', Lith. nýtis 'warp thread' < (s)nh$_1$i-ti-*. Lat. neō is ambiguous and could continue either a yod-present derived from this i-present, or an old athematic formation. Celtic points to a yod-present sniyo-*. Latv. snāju, snāt 'to wind together loosely' is perhaps related, but its apparent o-vocalism is unclear. The o* is also found in several nouns, e.g. OIr. snáth 'thread' (probably < snoh$_1$-to-* rather than snh$_1$-tó-*), OGutn. snōþ 'cord' = OE snōd 'headband, snood', Latv. snātene 'linen shawl'.
An important derivative from sneh$_1$-, which became lexicalized already in PIE, is sneh$_1$-ur/n- 'cord, sinew, etc.'; see on ►νεῦρον.

-νέω 3 [v.] 'to amass, pile up, load with sth.'. ◁?▷
•VAR Aor. νῆσαι, -ασθαι, perf. med. νένη(σ)μαι, also with ἐπι-, περι-, συν-, etc. (IA), aor. pass. νησθῆναι (Arr.), fut. νήσω (Suid.), νησόμεθα· κορεσθησόμεθα 'will be stuffed' (H.); ipf. also νήει, νήεον, aor. νηῆσαι (epic Il.), ναήσατο (B. 3, 33), besides νήνεον (only v.l. Ψ 139), ἐπ-, παρ-ενήνεον (Hom.).
•COMP Present stem only with ἐπι-, περι- (Hdt.).
•DER νήησις [f.] 'heaping up' (sch. A. R. 1, 403).
•ETYM Hom. -ενήνεον does not have intensive reduplication with lengthened grade (such formations are not assumed anymore, since δηδέχαται has been explained differently). Most scholars assume that it is a mistake for -ενήεον, but an objection is that is occurs several times (DELG). Therefore, the form remains unexplained.
The present νηέω, posited on the basis of νήει, νήεον, may have been formed from a non-presentic stem in -η, like aor. νηῆσαι. Likewise, -νέω may have arisen from νῆσαι (which may in turn be a contracted form of νηῆσαι). The gloss νῶντος· σωρεύοντος 'heaping up' (Phot.) can also be explained in various ways. In its entirety, then, the collection of forms remains unclear. There is no etymology.

νεωλκέω [v.] 'to haul the ship on land, bring the ship in dock' (Thphr., Plb., D. S.). ◁GR▷ •DER Also νεωλκός = ὁ νεωλκῶν (Arist., Cos I[a], Poll.), -ία [f.] 'docking' (Aen. Tact., Arist., Thphr.), -ια [n.pl.] 'docks' (App., H.).
•ETYM Synthetic compounds of ναῦς and ἕλκω. The forms νεωλκός < *νηϝ-ολκός and νεωλκ-ία, -ια may be back-formations from νεωλκέω (cf. δειροτομέω, πολιορκέω, etc.; Schwyzer: 726), but they may also be the basis of the latter.

νεώρια [n.pl.] 'dockyard, ship-arsenal' (Att.). ◁GR▷ •VAR Also -ιον [sg.].
•DIAL Dor. ναώριον (Corc. II[a]).
•DER Diminutive νεωρίδιον (Delos; II[a]); νεωρός· νεωριοφύλαξ 'guard of the dockyard' (H.), -οί [pl.] = ἐπιμεληταὶ τῶν νεωρίων (IG 1², 74: 11 [V[a]]).
•ETYM From *νηϝο-ϝόρ-ια (perhaps with haplology), originally 'place where ships are surveyed', a compound of ► ναῦς and a verbal noun of ► ὁράω, extended with the suffix -ιο-. The rarer form νεωρός may be a back-formation from this (like e.g. θυρωρός; cf. Leumann 1950: 223[20]).

νεώς [m.] 'temple'. ⇒ναός.

νέωτα [adv.] 'next year' (Semon. 1, 9). ◁GR?▷
•VAR Elsewhere εἰς (ἐς) νέωτα (X., Thphr.), Delph. [ἐν ν]εω [τ]α (*Del.*³ 323 A 12 [V-IV[a]]).
•DER In the same mg. ἐς νέω (Cyrene; also as a weakly attested v.l. in Theoc. 15, 143); unclear ἐς νέων (BGU 958 c 13 [III[p]]), see Maas Riv. fil. class. 56 (1928): 413f.
•ETYM Without a convincing explaination. The word νέωτα is traditionally analyzed as a compound of νέος and ἔτος 'year', but none of the advanced reconstructions (see Frisk) can explain the -ω-. DELG accepts the solution by Szemerényi 1969b: 233, who starts from the dative attestation in Semon. without the preposition ἐς, assuming that νεω was abstracted from νεω(ι)ετει, and that adverbial -τα (as in ἔπειτα, etc.) was added later.

νη- privative prefix in νη-κερδής 'useless', νη-πενθής 'free of sorrows', etc. (Il.). ◁GR▷ •VAR Dor. νᾱ-.
•ETYM Forms in νη-, να-, νω- arose from the IE negating prefix *n- combined with a following sequence *HC- (*H = *h_1, *h_2, *h_3, respectively). After reanalysis of such forms, νη- spread as a separate prefix to words without original initial laryngeal. See Beekes 1969: 98-113, and cf. the privative prefixes ► ἀ- and ► ν-, both from *n-.

νή [pcl.] assertory particle. ⇒ναί.

νηάς [f.] a gigantic animal, the remains of which were seen on Samos (Euph. apud Ael. N.A. 17, 28). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

νηγάτεος [adj.] epithet of χιτών (B 43), κρήδεμνον (Ξ 185), φᾶρος (h. Ap. 122), καλύβαι (A. R. 1, 775). ◁?▷
•ETYM The similarity with MoGr. Macedonian ἀνήγατος 'not worn yet, new' cannot be accidental. However, the etymology is unknown. Fur.: 374 does not help.

νήγρετος [adj.] 'which cannot (or hardly) be woken' (Od., Alex. poets). ◁IE *$h_1$ger- 'awake'▷ •ETYM From *n- and *$h_1$gr-eto- in ἔγρετο. See ► ἐγείρω.

νήδυμος [adj.] epithet of ὕπνος (Hom.), in late poets also of Μοῦσα, Ὀρφεύς, ὕδωρ, ἄνθος (h. Pan., APl., Nonn.). ◁GR▷ •ETYM Reinterpretation of ἥδυμος 'sweet' (see ► ἡδύς) by taking the preceding ephelcystic ν to the next word. This ν had been introduced after the loss of the ϝ in order to remove the hiatus (e.g. ἔχεν ἥδυμος ὕπνος B 2). See Leumann 1950: 44f. and Chantraine 1942: 14.

νηδύς, -ύος [f.] 'abdominal cavity, abdomen' (Il.). ◁?▷
•VAR -ῦς, secondarily -ΰς; see Schwyzer: 463f.
•DER With suffix -ιο-: νήδυια [n.pl.] 'intestines' (P 524, A. R., Nic.).
•ETYM Unexplained.

νηέω 'to heap (up)'. ⇒-νέω 3.

νήθουσα [f.] plant name (PMag. Par.). ◁PG▷ •ETYM Probably a Pre-Greek word; see Fur.: 197[55]. Details in Strömberg 1940: 106.

νήθω 'spin'. ⇒νέω 2.

νῆϊς, -ιδος, -ιδα [adj.] 'unknowing, nescius' (since H 198, θ 179). ◁?▷
•VAR Secondarily acc. -ιν.
•ETYM Perhaps contains the prefix ► νη-, which arose by reanalysis of the original privative prefix *n- (cf. νηκερδής) and a root noun *uid-.

νήκουστος [adj.] 'who does not hear' (Emp.). ◁IE *$h_2$kou- 'hear'▷ •ETYM From *n- and *h$_2$kous-, as in ► ἀκούω.

νηλ(ε)ής, -εές [adj.] 'without compassion, pitiless' (epic poet. since Il.), also 'unescapable, unavoidable', in νηλεὲς ἦμαρ, etc. ◄IE *n-h$_1$leu-es- 'pitiless', *n-h$_2$leu- 'unescapable'► •VAR Metrically lengthened νηλειής, -ειές (Hes. Th. 770 and h. Ven. 245 [verse-initial], A. R. 4, 476); see Chantraine 1942: 74 and 101.
•COMP As a first member in νηλεό-ποινος 'punishing without mercy' (Hes.), etc.
•ETYM In the sense 'without mercy', from the negation *n̥- and *h$_1$leu-o- (as in ► ἔλεος, ἐλεέω). In the sense 'unescapable', from the root *h$_2$leu-, as in ἀλέομαι. The PN Νηλεύς (Hom.) could be related, but could also be Pre-Greek. See Beekes 1969: 109 and index.

νηλίπους [adj.] 'without footgear, barefoot'. ◄GR► •VAR Gen. -ποδος (S. OC 349), νήλιπος, -ον (A. R. 3, 646, Lyc. 635, Theoc. 4, 56, where v.l. ἀνήλιπος [-ᾰλ-]).
•DER Cf. νηλίπεζοι ἢ νήλιποι· ἀνυπόδετοι 'without shoes' (H.).
•ETYM Acc. to sch. Theoc. 4, 56, it derives from an otherwise unknown and unexplained ἦλιψ (name of a Dorian shoe) and privative ν(η)-. If this is true, the oldest attestation νηλίπους may stand for *νηλιπο-πους with syllabic dissimilation (cf. Schwyzer: 263), or be a reformation of νήλιπος after πούς.

νήνεμος [adj.] 'without wind, calm' (Hom.). ◄IE *n̥-h$_2$nh$_1$-m-► •DER νηνεμίη (Il.) 'calm, lull', νηνεμέω [v.] 'to be still' (Hp.).
•ETYM From *n- and the root of ► ἄνεμος in the zero grade.

νηνέω 'to heap (up)'. ⇒-νέω 3.

νηνία [f.] public eulogy, sometimes accompanied by the flute (Cic. Leg. 2, 24, 62). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. It is supposed to be the origin of Lat. nēnia. The word νηνίατον is ascribed to Hipponax (fr. 163 Masson) by Poll. 4, 79. Cf. νηνίατος (correction for νινήατος)· νόμος παιδαριώδης καὶ φρύγιον μέλος 'childish tune, Phrygian melody' (H.).

νηπελέω 'to be powerless'. ⇒ὀλιγηπελέων.

νήπιος [adj.] 'under-aged, young, feeble, childish, foolish' (Il.). ◄?►
•COMP As a first member in νηπιό-φρων 'puerile, thoughtless' (Str.).
•DER νηπιέη [f.] 'puerility, childish behaviour' (Hom.) with Aeol. -έη for -ίη, probably after ἠνορέη (Leumann 1950: 110[72], Chantraine 1942: 83); hence νηπίεος = νήπιος (Opp.); νηπιότης [f.] 'puerility' (Pl., Arist.); νηπιάζω [v.] 'to be childish' (Hp. Ep., Erinn., 1 Ep. Cor. 14, 20, etc.).
Enlargements: 1. νηπίαχος 'id.' (Il.), whence -αχεύω [v.] 'to be childish, play children's plays' (X 502, verse-final; metrically conditioned, Chantraine 1942: 95 and 368), -άχω 'id.' (A. R., Mosch., Opp.), probably after στενάχω, ἰάχω; see also Schwyzer: 722f. 2. νηπύτιος 'id.' (Il., Ar. Nu. 868, Orph.), with -ίη (A. R.), -ιεύομαι (AP).

•ETYM The most recent discussion by Kazansky 2005 is not convincing: he assumes a root *h$_2$ep- 'strength' with an extension *h$_2$pel- in ἀνηπελίη· ἀσθένεια 'weakness' (H.), ► ὀλιγηπελέων, etc. Since the root *h$_2$ep- itself is not attested in the meaning 'strength', Van Beek (p.c.) suggests that it may be better to return to the proposal of Lacroix 1937: 261ff., who proposed that νήπιος consists of the negative prefix and ► ἤπιος. We may reconstruct *n̥-h$_2$p-i̯i̯o-, with the root *h$_2$ep- 'join' as found in Hitt. ḫapp-^{zi} 'to join', Lat. aptus 'fitting' and Gr. ἅπτω 'to attach, grasp'.

νήρειον [n.] the plant 'dolphin-flower' (Ps. Dsc. 3, 73). ◄?►
•DER νηρειάδιον (ib.).
•ETYM Neither νήριον nor Νηρεύς offers an etymology.

Νηρεύς, -έως [m.] sea god, son of Pontos and Gaia (h. Ap. 319, Hes. Th. 233 and 240). ◄PG?►
•VAR Epic Ion. gen. -ῆος.
•DER Νηρεῖος in Νηρεῖα τέκνα = 'fishes' (Euphro 8, 2) and Νήρειον, -άδιον = δελφίνιον, a plant name (Ps.-Dsc.) perhaps referring to νηρόν '(fresh) water'? Besides Νηρηΐς, -εΐς [f.], -ίδες [pl.] 'Nereids, seanymphs' (Il.).
•ETYM As Νηρεύς has relevance only as the father of the Nereids (see von Wilamowitz 1931: 219 and Nilsson 1941(1): 240; in Hom., he is probably mentioned as ἅλιος γέρων), we should consider whether the father was named after his daughters. He may also be called Πρωτεύς (West ad Hes. Th. 233). Not only Νηρεύς has been considered as a base form of Νηρη(ϝ)ίδ-, but other stems as well; cf. Schwyzer: 465 and Chantraine 1933: 345f. The glosses νηρίδας· τὰς κοίλας πέτρας 'hollow rocks' and νηρόν· τὸ ταπεινόν 'low-lying' (H.) are also worthy of consideration.
An IE etymology can hardly be expected. The word is probably Pre-Greek, as is suggested by the ending -εύς. See ► νάω.

νήριον [n.] name of a plant, 'Nerium Oleander, oleander' (Dsc. 4, 81, Plin.). ◄?► •ETYM May belong to νηρόν '(fresh) water' because of the characteristic property of this plant to follow the course of brooks (Strömberg 1940: 113).

νῆρις 1 [?] plant name, mostly taken as 'savin, Juniperus Sabina' (Nic. Th. 531), but sometimes identified with νήριον. ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

νῆρις 2 νηρίδας· τὰς κοίλας πέτρας 'hollow rocks' (H.). ◄?► •ETYM Unknown. DELG connects the word with νηρόν, but this is not obvious.

νηρίτης [m.] several kinds of sea-snails (Arist.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also written -εί-; besides we find ἀνᾱρίτᾱς (Ibyc., Epich.), ἀνηρίτης (Herod.).
•COMP νηριτοτρόφος (A. Fr. 312), but see Leumann 1950: 245.
•ETYM The more usual orthography with -εί- may be based on association with Νήρειος (from Νηρεύς); the connection with νηρόν 'water' (already improbable in itself) is refuted by the forms ἀναρ-, ἀνηρ- with vocalic anlaut. Fur.: 372 takes this initial variation as evidence for Pre-Greek origin. See Thompson 1947 s.v.

νήριτος [adj.] 'uncountable' (Hes. Op. 511, A. R.). ◄IE *h$_2$ri- 'count'.►

•COMP As a first member in νηριτόφυλλον· πολύφυλλον 'with many leaves' (H.), and in νηριτόμυθος (H.); cf. also νηρίται· μεγάλοι (H.), to be changed into νήριται· μεγάλαι.
•ETYM From $n̥\text{-}h_2ri\text{-}to$-, a compound of privative n- (see ►νη-) and a verb ἀρι- 'to count' (seen in ►ἀριθμός) with a suffix -to-. It also occurs in εἰκοσιν-ήριτος 'twentyfold' (X 349, with compositional lengthening), Arc. Ἐπάριτοι = ἐπίλεκτοι 'selected', etc. Hence, probably through reinterpretation, the mountain name Νήριτον (B 632, Od.) and the PN Νήριτος (ρ 207); see Leumann 1950: 243ff., as well as Ruijgh 1957: 161f.

νηρόν [adj.] · τὸ ταπεινόν 'low' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown. The connection with ►νῆρις 2 by DELG is not obvious.

νηρός [adj.] 'fresh', of fish, ἡμί-νηρος 'lightly salted'; also of water: τὸ νηρόν (ὁ νηρός) '(fresh) water' (Hell.), MoGr. νερό. ◁GR▷ •ETYM Contracted from νεαρός (Schwyzer: 250); see ►νέος and Kretschmer Glotta 15 (1927): 64.

νησίγδα [?] · ἐν Νυκτί (= Philem. 52) ἀποδιδόασι μάσημά τι ποιόν (H.), so a kind of dish. ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown. The suffix -ιγδα points to Pre-Greek origin.

νῆσος [f.] 'island' (Il.); also '(flooded) land near a river, alluvial land' (Tab. Heracl., pap.). ◁PG▷ •VAR Dor. νᾶσος (Rhod. νᾶσσος SGDI 4123, 4 [I[a]]).
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. νησο-φύλαξ 'guardian of the island' (D. S.), νησί-αρχος, -άρχης 'governor of the island' (Antiph. com., Hell. inscr., etc.), after ταξί-, πολί-αρχος, etc.; not from νησίς or νησίον; χερσό-νησος, Att. χερρό-, Dor. -νασος [f.] 'peninsula'; περίνησον 'with a fringe', of ἱμάτιον.
•DER 1. Diminutives: νησίς [f.] (Hdt., Th., Plb.), νησίδιον (Th., Arist., Str.), νησίον (Str.), νησύδριον (X., Isoc.). 2. Other nouns: νησιώτης, Dor. νασιώτας (-τις [f.]) 'islander', as an adjective 'insular' (Pi., Hdt., A.), after ἰδιώτης, στρατιώτης, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 311); thence νησιωτικός 'typical of an islander' (Hdt., Th., Ar., E.); νησίτης [m.] 'id.' (St. Byz.), fem. νασῖτις 'forming an island' (AP); νησαῖος 'insular' (E., Arat.), after λιμναῖος, etc.; Νησιάδεια [n.pl.] festival at Delos, -ειον [sg.] name of a fund (Delos III[a]), with -ι- like in νησί-αρχος, etc. 3. Verbs: νησίζω (Plb.), -ιάζω (Str., Ph.) 'to form an island'; νησεύομαι 'to form alluvial deposits' (EM 25, 48).
•ETYM The interpretations as "swimmer", derived from νήχω or the root $*sneh_2$- 'to bathe' (recently, Meier-Brügger KZ 106 (1993): 302, who follows Rix in assuming PGr. $*sn\bar{a}k^h\text{-}i̯o$-), should be abandoned. As words for 'island' differ from language to language, νῆσος is probably an Aegean loan (note that Lat. insula is also of unclear origin). Fur.: 387, who points to the variation between single σ and geminate, also assumes a Pre-Greek loan.

νῆσσα [f.] 'duck' (IA). ◁IE? $*h_2enh_2t$- 'duck', GR?▷
•DIAL Att. νῆττα, Boeot. (Ar. Ach. 875) νᾶσσα [f.].

•DER Diminutive νηττάριον (Ar., Men.), νηττίον (Nicostr. Com.), νησσίον (pap. VI-VII[p]).
•ETYM A formation in -i̯α like μυῖα, κίσσα, and other animal names (Chantraine 1933: 98). The first question is whether the word is related to other words for 'duck' that go back to $*h_2enh_2t$- (vel sim.). These are the following: an i-stem in Skt. ātí- [f.] and Balto-Slavic, e.g. Lith. ántis, Bel. úc [f.] < PSl. ǫtь* 'duck'. In Slavic, there is also an ū-stem, e.g. ORu. uty, gen. utъve (PSl. ǫty*). The various extensions go back to a t-stem, which was retained as such in Lat. anas, gen.sg. anatis, gen.pl. anat(i)um, and in some Germanic languages, e.g. OHG anut (i-stem in plur. enti), ON endr [pl.]. However, the stem $*h_2enH\text{-}t$- suggested by Lithuaninan and Latin would yield *ἀν- in Greek, even in a zero grade root. No solution has been found for this problem. Rix KZ 104 (1991): 186-192 suggested a dissimilation of $*h_2$ - h_2 to $*s$ - h_2, with adaptation to the root of νήχω 'to swim'. One may also envisage derivation within Greek from νηχ- 'swim' (thus Ruijgh, apud Schrijver 1991: 95). For older literature, see Hamp *KZ*92 (1978): 29-31.

νῆστις, -ιος, -ιδος [m., f.] 'not eating, fasting, jejune' (Il.); as a fem. subst. a part of the small intestine, 'intestinum ieiunum', as it was always found to be empty upon section (Hp., Arist.), see Strömberg 1944: 63. ◁IE $*n\text{-}h_1d\text{-}ti$- 'not eating, fasting, sober'▷ •VAR Dat. also -ει, nom.pl. also -εις. Secondary forms: νήστης [m.] (Semon., Arist.), νήστειρα [f.] (Nic. Al. 130), see Fraenkel 1910: 126[2]. With secondary ἀ-: ἄνηστις = ἄσιτος (A. Fr. 433 Mette, Cratin. 45).
•DER νηστεύω [v.] 'to fast', with νηστεία, -η [f.] 'fast' (IA) and the rare and late adjectives νήστ-ιμος (pap.), -ικός (Aët.) 'ptng. to fast'.
•ETYM From the negation n-* and the verb for 'eat', to which a suffix -ti- was added. The origin of this element used to pose a problem, but it also appears in ►ἄγρωστις, which Meier-Brügger KZ 103 (1990): 33f. convincingly analyzed as $*h_2e\acute{g}r\text{-}o\text{-}h_1d\text{-}ti$- 'field-fodder'. The synonym Arm. nawtʻi 'fasting' (which also translates Gr. νῆστις in the Gospels) may well be derived from the same pre-form $n\text{-}h_1d\text{-}ti$- (see the discussion in Clackson 1994: 154ff.), as proposed by Klingenschmitt, assuming a development -tt- > Arm. -wtʻ-. Meier-Brügger l.c. also gives possible parallel formations $*\text{-}h_1d\text{-}ti$- from Iranian and Luwian.

νήτη [f.] 'the lowest (string)'. ⇒νειός.

νήφω [v.] 'to be sober', often metaphorical. ◁IE $*h_1eg^{wh}$- 'drink', $*n(e)\text{-}h_1g^{wh}$- 'sober'▷ •VAR Dor. νάφω. In the older language only present, mostly ptc. (IA, Thgn., Archil.); aor. νῆψαι (J., 1 Ep. Pet. 4, 7).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐκ-.
•DER 1. νήφων, -ονος in νήφονες· νήφοντες (H.), dat.pl. νήφοσι (Thgn.); 2. νηφάλιος 'without wine', of libations, etc. (A.), later also of persons 'sober' (Ph., J.), whence νηφαλιεύω [v.] 'to bring a libation without wine' (Poll.), νηφαλίζω in νηφαλισμένον· ὕδατι, οὐκ οἴνῳ ἡγνισμένον 'purified with water, not with wine' (H.); besides νηφαλιεύς epithet of Apollo (AP 9, 525, 14, where -έα is a metrical enlargement in verse-final position, cf. Boßhardt 1942: 70); also νηφαλέος (Hdn. Gr., Ph.), after αὐαλέος, etc., and νηφαντικός 'sobering' (Pl. Phlb. 61, Porph.) as if from *νηφαίνω; cf. e.g. σημαλέος : σημαντικός. Verbal noun νῆψις [f.] 'soberness' (Plb., Str.).

•ETYM Arm. nawt'i is probably unrelated (see on ►νῆστις); see the discussion in Clackson 1994: 154ff. In view of the predominance of nominal forms (including the ptc. νήφων) and of the meaning, it is conceivable that the relatively rare present νήφω (with secondary νῆψαι) is denominative. This was already suggested by Frisk, and is elaborated by Weiss KZ 107 (1994): 91-98, who reconstructs n̥-h_1g^{wh}-on-* > νηφον-, from the root for 'drink' seen in Hitt. eku-^{zi} and in Lat. ēbrius < $h_1\bar{e}g^{wh}$-r- (perhaps rather h_1e*-h_1g^{wh}-r-*). Weiss also makes it clear (ibid. 97) that νάφω is a hyperdorism, which may have been created by an ancient commentator.
OHG nuoh-turn 'sober', earlier considered to testify for nā*g^{wh}-, is not related (it is rather a loan from Lat. nocturnus).

νήχυτος [adj.] 'streaming richly, overflowing', of ὕδωρ, ἅλμη, ἱδρώς, etc. (Hell. poetry). ◂GR▸ •VAR On ἐπινήχυτος 'id.' (δῶρα, Orph. A. 39, 312) see below.
•ETYM Can hardly be separated from other frequent formations in -χυτος (from χέω), like ἀμφί-χυτος, ἀ-διά-χυτος, οἰνό-χυτος; in this case, νη- must be secondary. However, since the compound ἐπινήχυτος clearly belongs to ἐπινήχομαι, the question arises whether νήχυτος was not secondarily connected with νήχομαι. This would agree better with the meaning. See ►νη-.

νήχω, νήχομαι [v.] 'to swim'. ⇒νέω 1.

-νι ⇒-νε.

νιβατισμός a Phrygian dance (Ath. 629d, H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Hypothesis by Haas 1966: 168; also, Haas Acta Ant. Acad. Hungar. 18 (1970): 57f.

νίγλαρος [m.] 'whistle' (Ar. Ach. 554), plur. 'trills, quavers' (Pherecr. 145), but a small flute acc. to Poll. 4, 82. ◂?▸
•DER νιγλαρεύω [v.] 'to whistle' (Eup. 110); cf. νιγλαρεύων· τερετίζων 'humming' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown.

νίδες [?] · αἰδοῖα ἢ ὀρχίδια παιδίων 'private parts or testicles of children' (Phot.), who cites the word as Sicilian. H. has νιίδες, which Latte corrects. ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

νίζω, -ομαι [v.] 'to wash, bathe' (Il.). ◂IE nei*g^{w}- 'wash'▸ •VAR Analogical νίπτω (Men., NT), -ομαι (v.l. σ 179, Hp.), aor. νίψαι, -ασθαι (Il.), pass. νιφθῆναι (Hp.). fut. νίψω, -ομαι (Od.), pass. νιφήσομαι (LXX), perf. med. νένιπται (Ω 419), νένιμμαι (Ar.).
•COMP Also (in Att. prose always) with prefix, especially ἀπο- and ἐκ-.
•DER 1. νίπτρον (ἀπό-) [n.] (mostly plur.) 'water for washing' (trag., Ar.), ποδάνιπτρα [pl.] (-ον) by syllable-dissimilation from *ποδ-απόνιπτρον, secondary ποδόνιπτρον, 'water for washing one's feet' (Od.); also ποδανιπτήρ [m.] (secondarily ποδο-) 'basin for washing one's feet' (Stesich., Hdt., inscr.), νιπτήρ [m.] 'washing basin' (Ev. Jo.); 2. κατανίπ-της [m.] 'washer', who washes the peplos of Athene Polias (AB, EM). 3. (ἀπό-, κατά-)νίμμα [n.] 'washing water'; 4. (ἀπό-, ἔκ-)νίψις [f.] 'washing' (Plu., medic.). On ►χέρνιψ, see s.v.
•ETYM The word νίζω goes back to a zero grade yod-present IE ni*g^{w}-ie/o-, which is also retained in OIr. nigim 'to wash'. Skt. nenikté has intensive reduplication, but cf. also impv. ninikta; further, a sigmatic aorist nikṣi [1sg.inj.med.], anaikṣīt [3sg.act.] with regular lengthened grade, and a thematic aor. anijam, both perhaps going back to a root aorist (see LIV²). Greek generalized the zero grade in νίψω, νίμμα, etc. Formal correspondences are found in the privative verbal adj. ἄνιπτος beside Skt. niktá- 'washed', OIr. necht 'pure'. An isolated verbal noun seems to have been preserved in Gm., e.g. OHG nihhus, nichus 'river-monster, water-spirit', fem. nihhussa, MoHG Nix, Nixe, PGm. nik-wes-, nik-us-. Lat. pollingō 'to wash corpses' probably does not belong here; it is connected by LIV² with u̯lei̯k*^{w}- 'to make wet'.

νῖκη [f.] 'victory, upper hand', in a battle, in a contest, before court, etc. (Il.), Νίκη 'goddess of victory' (Hes.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Dor. νίκα.
•COMP νικη-φόρος (Dor. -ᾱ-) 'carrying away victory' (Pi., A.), νικό-βουλος 'who wins in the council' (Ar. Eq. 615; hidden PN, connected with νικάω), φιλό-νικος 'fond of triumph, emulating, pugnacious', whence -ία, -έω (Pi., Democr., Att.), often written with -ει- and associated with νεῖκος 'quarrel'; Ὀλυμπιο-νίκης, Dor. -ας [m.] 'victor in Olympia' (Pi., IA); many PNs, e.g. Νικό-δημος, Ἱππό-νικος.
•DER 1. From Νίκη : νικάς, -άδος [f.], νικ-άδιον, -ίδιον '(small) Nike-statue' (inscr.); 2. Adjective νικαῖος 'ptng. to victory' (Call., J.), νικάεις 'rich in victories' (AP); on νικη-τήριος, -τικός see below.
Probably denominative νικάω [v.] 'to vanquish, overcome, conquer', Ion. νικέω, Aeol. νίκημι, aor. νικῆσαι, pass. νικ-ηθῆναι, fut. -ήσω (all Il.), perf. νενίκηκα (Att.), rarely with prefixes, e.g. ἐκ-, κατα-, προ-; on the epic use of νίκη and νικάω see Trümpy 1950: 192ff.
From νικάω: 1. νικάτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'victor', epithet of the kings Seleucus and Demetrius of Syria (Hell. inscr.) with νικατόρειον 'tomb of Νικάτωρ' (App.), also PN with the patronymic Νικατορίδας (Rhodos), cf. Fraenkel 1910: 163[1], νικήτωρ 'id.' (D. C.). 2. νικατήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'victor' (Dreros III-II[a]), νικητής [m.] 'id.' (III-IV[p]). 3. νίκημα (Dor. -ᾱ-) [n.] 'prize of victory, victory' (Hell., Crete). 4. νίκαθρον [n.] 'offering for victory' (Sparta), νίκαστρον [n.] 'prize of victory' (Phot., H.); on the formation see Chantraine 1933: 373 and 333f. 5. νικητήριος, [n.] -ον 'ptng. to victory, prize of victory' (Att.) and νικητικός 'conducing to victory' (X., Hell.), both also connected with νίκη.
An innovation for νίκη is νῖκος [n.] (Hell.), after κράτος (Fraenkel Glotta 4 (1913): 39ff., Wackernagel 1916: 81f.). Unclear is νικάριον [n.] name of an eye-salve (Alex. Trall.); cf. on ►νέκταρ.
•ETYM There is no good etymology. Skt. nīca- 'directed downwards', OCS nicь 'directed forward, on the face', Latv. nīcām 'down the stream', etc. are from ni-*h_3k^{w}o- and are unrelated, as this would have to yield a labial stop in Greek.

Connection with the root of νεῖκος and Lith. ap-nìkti 'to attack' is semantically gratuitous. Klingenschmitt's analysis (Klingenschmitt 1975: 162[22]) as ni-ih₁k-eh₂-* "Niederwerfung" is pure speculation, as the prefix ni-* is not attested elsewhere in Greek. The word could be Pre-Greek (not in Fur.).

νίκλον · τὸ λίκνον 'winnowing fan' (H.). •VAR Also -εῖ-. ⇒λικμάω, λίκνον.

νικύλεον [n.] 'a fig' in Crete (Hermonax apud Ath. 76e). ◁PG▷ •ETYM See Neumann Glotta 36 (1957): 156 and Neumann Glotta 40 (1962): 51-4, as well as Ruijgh 1967a: §10. The Mycenaean sign <ni> looks like a fig-tree.

νικύρτας [m.] · δουλέκδουλος 'born slave' (H.); cf. Hippon. fr. 28 M. ◁?▷ •ETYM See O. Masson 1962: 120f., as well as Haas 1966: 168.

νιν = αὐτόν, αὐτήν, etc. ⇒μιν.

νίννη [f.] 'grandmother, mother-in-law(?)'. ⇒νέννος.

νίννιον [n.] · pupus (gloss.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

νίννον [?] · τὸν † καταβάλλην ἵππον (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Perhaps a modification of ἴννον (DELG).

νίσομαι 'to travel, go, come'. ⇒νέομαι.

νίτρον [n.] 'sodium carbonate, soda, natron' (Sapph., Ion., Arist., Hell.). ◁LW Eg.▷
•VAR With dissimilation ν - τ > λ - τ: λίτρον (Att., Hp.), cf. Solmsen 1909: 235.
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. ὀξύ-νιτρον 'mix of vinegar and natron' (Paul. Aeg.), λιτρο-πώλης 'natron-seller' (inscr. IV[a]).
•DER 1. νιτρώδης (also λ-) 'natronlike, containing natron' (Pl., Arist.), with -ωδία (medic.); 2. νίτρινος 'of natron' (Delos II[a]); 3. νιτρία [f.] 'natron-mine' (pap. III[a], Str.), cf. Scheller 1951: 46, with νιτριώτης νομός name of an Egyptian province (Str.); 4. νιτρική [f.] and -κά [n.pl.] 'natron-taxes' (Hell. pap. and ostr.); 5. νιτρῖτις [f.], of λίμνη, 'producing natron' (Str.); 6. νιτρόομαι [v.] 'to be washed with natron' (Sor.), with νίτρωμα [n.] 'sodium carbonate' (PHolm., H.); also 7. νίτρασμα [n.] 'soap' (Sor.) as if from *νιτράζω.
•ETYM An Oriental loanword: Hebr. neter, Arab. naṭrūn > MoFr. natron, etc., and probably also Hitt. nitri- [n.], all from Eg. nṯr(j) 'natron'. See Lewy 1895: 53, Laroche BSL 51 (1955): xxxiif., Neumann 1961: 19, and WH s.v. nitrum (which is a Greek LW) for further considerations.

νοά [f.] · πηγή· Λάκωνες 'source, running water' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown; reminiscent of ►νάω. Cf. Perpillou BSL 67 (1972): 109ff.

νόθος [m.] 'procreated out of wedlock by a known father, illegitimate, bastard' (Il.); opposite γνήσιος. ◁PG?▷
•COMP νοθᾰ-γενής 'baseborn' (E.), with analogical ᾱ (Dor.) for ο (Schwyzer: 438).
•DER νοθεῖος 'ptng. to a νόθος' (Lys., Ar.), denominative νοθεύω [v.] 'to corrupt, adulterate' (LXX, J., Plu., Luc.), also with ὑπο-, with νοθεία [f.] 'birth out of wedlock' (Plu.), (ὑπο-)νοθευτής [m.] 'adulterer' (Ptol.), (ὑπο-)νόθευσις [f.] 'corruption, adulteration' (inscr. Mylasa).
•ETYM Unexplained.

νομή, νομός, νόμος ⇒νέμω.

νόος [m.] 'mind, sense, intellect, reason; purpose, aim' (Il., epic Ion.). ◁?▷
•VAR Contracted νοῦς (Att., also κ 240, etc.), perhaps Aeol. gen. νῶ (Alc.), acc. νῶν (Sappho)?
•COMP Very frequent as a second member, e.g. εὔ-νοος, -νους 'well-minded', whence εὐνο-έω, -ίη, -ιᾰ, etc. (IA); as a first member, e.g. in the compounds νου-θετ-έω [v.] 'to put in mind, remind of' (after νομοθετέω : νομοθέτης : νόμον θεῖναι, etc.), whence νουθέ-τησις, -τημα, -σία, -τεία, etc. (IA); νουν-εχ-ής 'prudent', νουνεχ-ῶς, -όντως [adv.] (to νοῦν ἔχει, ἔχων).
•DER Nouns: 1. νοερός 'intellectual' (Heraclit., Arist.); 2. νοήρης 'prudent, capable' (Herod., H.); 3. νοότης, -ητος [f.] 'intellectuality' (Procl.); 4. νόαρ [n.] 'illusion, phantom' (Theognost.), archaizing innovation.
Verbs: A. νοέω 'to meditate, observe, think, devise, have in mind' (Il.), aor. νοῆσαι (contracted νῶσαι), etc., very frequent with prefix, e.g. δια-, ἐν-, ἐπι-, προ-, μετα-, συν-; hence 1. νόημα [n.] 'thought, intelligence, decision' (Il.), -μάτιον (Arr.), -ματικός (late). -μων 'thoughtful, prudent' (Od., Hdt.); 2. νόη-σις (νῶσις) [f.] 'observation, understanding, thinking', also διανόη-σις, etc. (IA); 3. προ-νοία [f.] 'provision', δια-νοία, -νοιᾰ 'meditation, thought, aim', etc. (IA); 4. νοη-τικός (also προ-, etc.) 'mental' (Pl.); 5. προ-, δια-, ἐπι-, ὑπο-νοητής [m.] 'director', etc. (late).
B. νόομαι 'to be converted into νόος' (Plot.).
•ETYM No doubt an old inherited verbal noun (cf. λόγος, φόρος, etc.), though there is no certain etymology. An old proposal compares the Germanic group of Go. snutrs 'wise, prudent', which is possible, but not compelling. Heubeck Minos 20-22 (1987): 237 defended the connection with νεύω (cf. LIV² s.v. neu̯-). Formally, connection with nes- (mentioned by LIV²) is also possible, but the semantics seem to be difficult.

νορβεῖ [v.] ἐνταμεῖται 'will engrave' (H.). ◁?▷
•VAR νορβά· καλή (H.).
•ETYM Pok. 977 connects Go. at-snarpjan 'to touch', ON snarpr 'sharp, hard, uneven', snerpa 'to sharpen', MoDu. snerpen 'to bite (of wounds)', OHG snerfan 'draw together'. De Vries 1961 mentions Arm. snerb 'narrow'. The connections remain uncertain.

νορύη [f.] a plant, = στρύχνον (name of various plants), τιθύμαλλος 'spurge' (Thphr. apud Phot.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

νορύην · [ὀρύειν] ἔστι δὲ εἶδος ὀσπρίου 'a kind of leguminous plant' (H.). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

νόσος [f.] 'illness, disease; distress, need' (Il.). ◁?▷

•VAR Epic Ion. νοῦσος (see below).
•COMP νοσο-ποιέω [v.] 'to cause illness' (Hp.), ἐπί-νοσος 'prey to disease, unhealthy' (Hp., Arist.), Strömberg 1946: 85.
•DER A. Adjective: 1. νοσερός 'ill, unhealthy' (Hp., E., Arist.); 2. νοσηρός 'id.' (Hp., X.), cf. ὑγιηρός (Pi., Ion.); thence νοσήριον (H. s.v. κηρέσιον), perhaps for νοσητήριον or νοσηρόν? 3. νοσηλός 'ill, sickly' (Hp.), from νοσέω, cf. Chantraine 1933: 241; thence νοσήλια [n.pl.] 'diet for ill persons' (Opp.), νοσηλεύω [v.] 'to care for a patient', med. -ομαι 'to be ill' (Isoc., J.), νοσηλεία [f.] 'nursing, morbidity' (S., J., Plu.); 4. νοσακερός 'id.' (Arist.); 5. νοσώδης 'ill, unhealthy' (Hp., Att.); 6. Νόσιος epithet of Ζεύς (Milete VI-V^a).
B. Verbs: 1. νοσέω 'to be ill' (Att., also Ion.), whence νόσημα [n.] 'illness' (IA), diminutive νοσημάτιον (Ar.), -τικός, -τώδης 'sickly' (Arist.); 2. νοσεύομαι 'to be sickly', whence νόσευμα 'illness' (Hp.); 3. νοσάζ-ομαι 'to be ill', -ω 'to make ill', νοσίζω 'to make ill' (Arist., Gal.).
C. Substantives: 1. νόσανσις [f.] 'getting ill' (Arist.), cf. ὑγίανσις; 2. unclear νοσίμη (leg. -ήμη?) = νόσημα (Theognost.).
•ETYM Since Herodotus has νοῦσος beside νοσέω (which is predominant in Ionic anyhow), it is thought that the former is a Homerism in Hdt. Mechanically, we have to reconstruct a pre-form *νόσϝος on the basis of our material, but as Wackernagel 1916: 86 suggested, epic νοῦσος could also be understood as a false rewriting of ΝΟΣΟΣ, which would represent *νόσσος. The epic form must then have been taken over by Hdt. and Hp.
There is no good etymology. Recently, an attempt was made by Willi JHS 128 (2008): 153-172, who reconstructs n-$h_1$osu-o-, starting from the adjective $h_1$osu- 'good, in good condition'. This is taken to be a u-stem of the root $h_1$es-* 'be', and is supposed to be the same formation as found in Hitt. āššu- 'good, favorable' (cf., however, Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). Willi then posits a "regular" development of n-osuo-* to noswo-*, assuming that all instances of prevocalic ἀν- (the normal reflex) are analogical. In order to make this work, he assumes that intervocalic PIE -su- regularly yielded Gr. *-σϝ- (which is against the communis opinio). However, since this root (and all other roots which turn up with an initial vowel in Greek) started with a laryngeal, the regular outcome of n-$h_1$osuo-* (and of all similar cases) is anoswo-*. This disproves the whole account.

νόστος ⇒νέομαι.

νόσφι(ν) [adv., prep.] 'aside, far (from), without' (epic and lyr. since Il.). ◂?▸
•DER νοσφίδιος 'situated aside, secretly' (Hes. Fr. 187), νοσφιδόν [adv.] 'secretly' (Eust.); verb νοσφίζομαι 'to turn away (intr.), remove (oneself), steal' (B 81 = Ω 222), act. 'turn away (trans.), remove', aor. νοσφίσ(σ)ασθαι, pass. νοσφισθῆναι (Od.), fut. νοσφίσ(σ)ομαι (A. R.), also act. νοσφίζω (h. Cer., Pi.); sometimes with prefix, especially ἀπο-; thence νόσφισμα [n.] 'pilfering' (pap.).
•ETYM No etymology. Meier-Brügger MSS 48 (1987): 179-186 explains the form as containing nos* 'us', as seen in ἄμμε < n̥s-me*, and assumes an original meaning 'away from us'; this is semantically doubtful. Heubeck KZ 98 (1985): 257-259 defends Thieme's idea that the word is derived from the stem nos-* of the word for 'nose'; this is impossible, as the word for 'nose' was neh$_2$-s-, nh$_2$(e)-s- (see Beekes 1995: 180).

Νότος [m.] 'South(west) wind', which brings mist and wetness (Il.), 'the South, Southwest' (IA); on the mg. Nielsen Class. et Med. 7 (1945): 5ff. ◂PG?▸
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. Εὐρό-νοτος [m.] 'Wind between Εὖρος and Νότος' (Arist.).
•DER A. Subst.: 1. νοτία, -ίη [f.] 'wetness' (Θ 307, Arist., Thphr.; it could also be an abstract in -ία from νότιος, see Scheller 1951: 54 f.); from it νοτιώδης (Gal.) = νοτώδης (see below) and νοτιάω 'to be wet, drip', if not rather νοτ-ιάω (see below). 2. νοτίς, -ίδος [f.] 'wetness' (E., Pl., Arist.).
B. Adjectives: 1. νότιος 'rainy, wet' (epic, Hp.), 'southern' (IA); on the retention of -τι- Schwyzer: 270; 2. νοτερός 'id.' (IA); 3. νότινος 'id.' (pap.); 4. νοτώδης 'id.' (Hp.); 5. νοτ-ιαῖος 'south(west)ern' (Herm. apud Stob.).
C. Verbs: 1. νοτίζομαι, -ίζω 'to become, be wet, make wet', also with prefix, e.g. κατα-, ὑπο- (IA); hence νοτισμός 'wetness' (Sor.). 2. νοτέω (Hell.), νοτ-ιάω (Arist.; Schwyzer: 732; cf. above) 'to be wet, drip'.
•ETYM Connection of νότος with νέω and νήχω 'to swim' leads nowhere, since these continue a root sneh$_2$-*. A similar formation may be seen in Arm. nay 'wet, fluid' < PArm. nato-* or noto-*. The form may instead be Pre-Greek.

νουθετέω 'to admonish, warn'. ⇒νόος.

νοῦθος [adj.] only as an epithet of δοῦπος (Hes. Fr. 48), 'dull' vel sim. ◂IE? sneud^h-* 'cloud, dark', PG?▸ •ETYM Solmsen Glotta 2 (1910): 75f. adduces νυθόν· ἄφωνον, σκοτεινόν 'mute, dark', and νυθῶδες· σκοτεινῶδες (H.), comparing the IE word for 'cloud' in Av. snaoδa-, Lat. nūbēs, etc.; cf. on ►νυστάζω. However, the two glosses adduced, together with νοῦθος, may also form a Pre-Greek etymon (thus Fur.: 120[29]). One might also think of comparing ►νώθης 'indolent, etc.'.

νῦ [n.] name of a letter (Achae. Trag., Pl., inscr., pap.). ◂LW Sem.▸
•VAR Indeclinable.
•ETYM From Semitic; cf. Hebr. nūn. See Schwyzer: 140.

νυ, νῦν [pcl.] enclitic particle 'now', rarely adverbial. ◂IE nu*, nuH 'now'▸ •VAR νῦν [adv.] 'now' (Il.); νυν-ί (Att.), with deictic -ῑ like ὁδ-ί, etc.; on spread and use Ruijgh 1957: 57ff., also Risch Gnomon 30 (1958): 92.
•ETYM Old inherited adverb, retained in most branches: Skt. nú, nū́, nūn-ám, Lat. nu-diūs tertius "now (is) the third day", num, nun-c, OHG nū̆, late MHG nū̆n, Lith. nū, nù, nūn-aĩ, Hitt. nu [pcl.], ki-nun 'now', etc. Gr. νῦν may have either old -m* (Lat. num) or -n* (Skt. nūn-ám).

νυθόν, νυθῶδες ⇒νοῦθος.

νυκτάλωψ, -ωπος [m., f.] 'seeing in the night' = 'day-blind', as a msc. substantive 'day-blindness', secondary 'night-blind, night-blindness' (Hp., Arist., Gal.); cf. Gal. 14,

776: νυκτάλωπας δὲ λέγουσιν, ὅταν ἡμέρας μὲν βλέπωσιν ἀμαυρότερον δυομένου δὲ ἡλίου λαμπρότερον, νυκτὸς δὲ ἔτι μᾶλλον 'night-blind is called this, when people see less clearly at day, but more clearly when the sun sets, and even more clearly at night'· ἢ ὑπεναντίως, ἡμέρας μὲν ὀλίγα, ἑσπέρας δὲ ἢ νυκτὸς οὐδ' ὅλως 'or the opposite: at day they see only few things, while in the evening or at night they see nothing at all'; opposite ἡμεράλωψ (Gal. 14, 768e Dem. Ophth.). ◂PG▸
•DER νυκταλωπ-ικά [n.pl.] 'attacks of night-blindness' (Hp.), -ιάω [v.] 'to suffer from v.' (Gal.), with -ίασις (Orib.).
•ETYM On the suffix -ωπ-, see ►ἀγχίλωψ (with a variant αἰγίλωψ), which is Pre-Greek. The connection with νύξ (for the formation, compare αἱμάλωψ to αἷμα, and αἱμαλέος and θυμάλωψ to θυμ-ιάω, θυμός) must be folk-etymological.

νύμφη [f.] 'bride, young lady', also appellation of a goddess of lower rank, 'nymph' (Il.); also metaph., e.g. 'pupa' (Arist.), see Gil Fernández 1959: 208 ff. ◂PG▸ •VAR Dor. -ᾱ. Voc. -ᾰ (Γ 130; AP 14, 43).
•COMP νυμφό-ληπτος 'seized by the nymphs, raptured, delirious' (Pl., Arist.), μελλό-νυμφος 'about to be wedded', 'betrothed' (S., Lyc., D. C.).
•DER A. Nouns: 1. νύμφιος 'bridal' (Pi.), with different accentuation νυμφίος [m.] 'bridegroom' (Il.); 2. νυμφ-ίδιος 'bridal, wedding-' (E., Ar.), formation like κουρίδιος, see on ►κόρη; 3. -ικός 'id.' (trag., Pl. Lg.); 4. -εῖος, epic -ήϊος 'bridal, belonging to the bride' (Simon., Pi., S., Call.), like κουρήϊος, γυναικεῖος, -ήϊος, etc.; 5. -αῖος 'belonging or consacrated to the nymphs' (E., inscr.), -αία [f.] name of a water-lily (Thphr.); 6. νυμφάς, -άδος [f.] 'belonging to the nymphs' (πύλαι; Paus.); 7. νυμφίδες· ὑποδήματα γυναικεῖα νυμφικά 'women's wedding-shoes' (H.); 8. νυμφών, -ῶνος [m.] 'bridal chamber' (LXX, Ev. Matth.); 9. νυμφάσματα [n.pl.] 'ornaments of the bride' (Orac.), after ὑφάσματα; 10. Νυμφασία [f.] name of an Arcadian well.
B. Verbs 1. νυμφεύω 'to give in marriage, to marry (of the groom)', pass. 'to marry (of the bride)' (Pi., S., E.) with νυμφεύματα [n.pl.] 'marriage' (S., E.), sing. 'bride' (S.), νύμφευσις [f.] 'marriage' (LXX); νυμφευ-τής [m.] 'bridegroom' (E.) 'groomsman' (Poll.), -τήρ 'bridegroom, husband' (Opp.), -τρια [f.] 'bridesmaid' (Ar., Plu.), -τήριος 'bridal', τὰ νυμφευτήρια 'marriage' (E.). 2. νυμφ-ιάω 'to be in a frenzy', of a mare (Arist.), after the verbs of disease in -ιάω.
•ETYM Compared with Lat. nūbō 'to get married', OCS snubiti 'to love, court', from IE *$sneub^h$-. This is still followed by LIV[2] s.v. *$sneu̯b^h$-. However, the inner nasal in νύμφη remains unexplained this way. Therefore, νύμφη is rather a Pre-Greek word, perhaps containing a prenasalized stop. The voc. in -α may be the old nominative (cf. Pre-Greek endings). Note that Kretschmer Glotta 28 (1940): 273 also pleaded for substrate origin, comparing the source name Νυμφασία.

νύναμαι [v.]
•VAR νυνατός.
•ETYM Cret. for ►δύναμαι, δυνατός.

νύννιον [n.] · ἐπὶ τοῖς παιδίοις καταβαυκαλούμενόν φασι λέγεσθαι· ὁμοίως καὶ τὸ νύννιος 'in the case of children, they say that they are lulled to sleep; likewise νύννιος' (H.). ◂?▸

•ETYM An onomatopoeic Lallwort; cf. MoGr. νανναρίζω, ναννουρίζω 'I lull asleep' and Oehl IF 57 (1940): 19.

νύξ, νυκτός [f.] 'night' (Il.). ◂IE *$nek^wt$-, nok^wt- 'night', *$neg^{wh}$- 'become dark'▸ •COMP Often as a first member, e.g. νυκτο-μαχ-ία, -ίη [f.] abstract formation as if from *νυκτο-μάχος; νυκτο-μαχέω (Plu.), νυκτί-πλαγκτος 'wandering at night' (A.), with locatival first member, probably partly analogical; as a second member e.g. in ἀωρό-νυκτος 'at an untimely, nightly hour' (A. Ch. 34), μεσο-νύκτιος 'in the middle of the night' (Pi., Hp.), to μέσαι νύκτες; further -νυχ- in e.g. ἔν-νυχος, ἐν-νύχιος 'nightly, in the night' (Il.), νύχιος 'nightly' (Hes.), νυχεύω [v.] 'to wake all night long' (E., Nic.); cf. below.
•DER 1. νύκτωρ [adv.] 'at night' (Hes., Archil.); 2. νύκτερος 'nightly' (trag.) with νυκτερίς, -ίδος [f.] 'bat' (Od.), also as a fish-name (Opp.) and plant-name (Aët.), cf. Strömberg 1943: 111, see also Strömberg 1940: 74; νυκτερῖτις, -ιδος [f.] 'ἀναγαλλὶς ἡ κυανῆ' (Ps.-Dsc.), νυκτερεύω [v.] 'to pass the night, pass a sleepless night' (X.), also with δια-, ἐν-, etc., whence νυκτερ-εία [f.] 'hunting by night' (Pl.), -ευμα [n.] 'night-quarters' (Plb.), -ευτής [m.] 'who hunts by night' (Pl.), -ευτικός 'fit for hunting by night' (X.); 3. νυκτέριος 'nightly' (Aret., Luc.), τὰ νυκτέρεια = ἡ νυκτερεία (Eun.); 4. νυκτερινός 'id.' (IA) with νυκτερινία or -εία [f.] 'commander of the night watch' (Ephesus I[P]), spelled -ηα; 5. νυκτερήσιος 'id.' (Luc., S. E.), perhaps for -ίσιος (Fraenkel 1912: 151[1])? Rare νύκτιος 'nightly' (AP), νυκτῷον [n.] 'temple of the night' (Luc.), after μητρῷον, etc., Νυκτεύς [m.] PN (Apollod.).
Cf. also ►νυκτάλωψ. For νυκτέλιος epithet of Dionysus (AP, Plu., Paus.) haplological for *νυκτι-τέλιος, which is a hypostasis of νύξ and τέλος (τελέω), cf. νυκτελεῖν· ἐν νυκτὶ τελεῖν (H.).
•ETYM Old inherited word for 'night', retained in most IE languages: Lat. nox, gen.pl. noctium, Go. nahts, Skt. nák, acc. náktam (adverbial), Lith. naktìs, gen.pl. naktų̃, OCS noštь, etc., all from IE nokt-*. The i-stem forms in Lat. noctium, Lith. naktìs, OCS noštь, etc. are innovations of the separate languages. The deviating υ in νύξ is explained from *$nok^wt$- by Cowgill's Law (extensive treatment in Vine 1999b).
The aspirated and t-less form in νύχα· νύκτωρ (H.), ἔννυχ-ος, -ιος, εἰνάνυχες, νύχιος, etc., is attested only in Greek and in Anatolian (Hitt. $neku^{-zi}$ 'to become dark'). Schindler KZ 81 (1967): 290-303 reconstructed a static paradigm for a PIE root noun: nom. nok^wt-s, gen. nek^wt-s, because of Hitt. nekuz meḫur 'at night', which contains an old genitive. However, acc. to Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. $neku^{-zi}$, the consistent non-geminate spelling in Hitt. $neku^{-zi}$ and the aspirate in Greek νυχ- both point to a root *$neg^{wh}$-, which was lost in PIE after Anatolian split off. Subsequently, *$neg^{wh}t$- was assimilated to PIE *$nek^wt$- (cf. IIr. nákt-*). On -νυχ- as a second member, see also Sommer 1948: 64f.
The r-stem in νύκτωρ, etc. is also found in Lat. nocturnus < nokterino-*, although this may also be an independent formation. Otherwise, the formation of the adjectives is partly paralleled by derivatives of ►ἦμαρ, ►ἡμέρα: a) νυκτερινός : ἡμερινός, b) νυκτέριος : ἡμέριος; c) νυκτερήσιος : ἡμερήσιος; d) νυκτερεύω : ἡμερεύω.

νυός [f.] 'daughter-in-law' (Hom.), secondary 'bride' (Theoc.). ⊲IE snuso-* 'saughter-in-law'⊳ •ETYM An old feminine o-stem, identical with Arm. nu, gen. nuoy 'id.', from IE snuso-* [f.]. Lat. nurus was transformed into a u-stem is (after socrus); Skt. snuṣā́, to an ā-stem, as was the Germanic group of OHG snur, MoHG Schnur, and the Slavic one of CS snъxa. Alb. nuse 'bride' does not belong here. Connection to the group of νευρά, ►νεῦρον is impossible, as this word was sneh*$_1$-ur/n- and contained a laryngeal.

νυρίζει [v.] · νυσσει, ξύει 'to prick, pierce; scratch' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Also νυρῶν· νύσσων, ξύων (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. Perhaps related to ►νέυω and ►νύσσω; cf. Pok. 767.

νύσα [f.] = δένδρον (Pherecyd. 178 J). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

νῦσος [adj.] = χωλός, a Syracusan word (Nonn. D. 9, 22; EM 280). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

νύσσα [f.] 'turning post in the race-course, starting point and goal of the contest' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM Without a good explanation. Compared with ►νύσσω as *νύκ-ι̯α "the thrusting one", which seems possible. Untenable Semitic etymology in Lewy KZ 55 (1928): 24ff.; acc. to Jüthner Die Antike 15 (1939): 251, the word is Aegean (i.e. Pre-Greek).

νύσσω [v.] 'to thrust, sting, pierce' (on the epic use Trümpy 1950: 96f., 100ff.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Att. νύττω, aor. νύξαι (Il.), fut. νύξω, Hell. aor. pass. νυγῆναι, νυχθῆναι, perf. νένυγμαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. κατα-, ὑπο-.
•DER 1. νύξις [f.] 'thrust, sting' (Dsc., Plu.), κατάνυξ-ις 'stupefaction, bewilderment' to κατα-νύσσομαι 'to be stinged in the heart, be stunned' (LXX, NT); 2. νύγμα (also -χμα) [n.] 'stab, prick' (Nic., Epicur., Gal.) with νυγμα-τικός 'fit for stabbing' (medic.), -τώδης 'punctuated' (Arist., medic.); 3. νυγ-μός [m.] (D. S., Plu.), -μή [f.] (Plu.) 'id.'; 4. νύγ-δην 'by pricking' (A. D.). Further νυκχάσας = νύξας (H.), expressive enlargement with geminate and aspiration.
•ETYM Without an exact correspondence outside Greek. A formal similarity exists with some WGm. and Slav. expressions for 'nod, etc.', e.g. MLG nucken 'to move the head menacingly', nuck(e) 'sudden thrust forward and upward of the head when frightened, etc.', OCS nukati, njukati 'to encourage', which are sometimes connected with νεύω, Lat. nuō (assuming a velar enlargement). Following Brugmann IF 13 (1902-1903): 153ff., νύσσω has been analyzed in the same way, which would, however, imply a basic meaning 'to pull, thrust' for the root of νεύω.

νυστάζω [v.] 'to slumber, be sleepy' (Hp., Att.). ⊲IE? snud-* 'sleepy, slumber'⊳ •VAR Mostly present; aor. -άξαι (Thphr., LXX), -άσαι (Dionys. Com., AP).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ὑπο-, ἐπι-.

•DER νυσταγμός [m.] 'drowsiness' (Hp., LXX), νύσταγμα [n.] 'nap, short sleep' (LXX), νύσταξις (H.) as an explanation of νῶκαρ; νυστακτής as an epithet of ὕπνος (Ar. V. 12, Alciphr.), -ακτικῶς 'in a sleepy way' (Gal.). Also νυσταλέος 'sleepy' (Aret., H.), after ὑπναλέος, skipping the presential suffix (Debrunner IF 23 (1908-1909): 18), νύσταλος (Com. Adesp.) with νυσταλωπιᾶν· νυστάζειν (H.).
•ETYM Some Baltic expressions for 'slumber, sleepy' are strongly reminiscent of νυστάζω, e.g. Lith. snústi, 1sg. snúdau 'to slumber away', with snudà, snùdis 'sleeper, dreamer'; a different ablaut-grade appears in snáudžiu, snáusti 'to slumber', and (independent of Greek νυσταλέος) forms with an l-suffix: Lith. snaudãlius 'sleepy man', Latv. snaudule 'sleepy-head'. Thus, -τάζω would be just a formal enlargement, as in κλαστάζω (from κλαστ-, κλαδ-), βαστάζω, etc. If this is correct, the old connection with νεύω 'nod' should be abandoned. It is doubtful that νυθόν and ►νοῦθος also belong here.

νώ [pron. nom./acc.du.] 'we two, both of us' (Att., also Ε 219 and ο 475). ⊲IE neh*$_3$ 'we two'⊳ •VAR Att. gen. and dat. νῷν.
•DIAL Nom., acc. νῶϊ, gen., dat. νῶϊν (Hom.); acc. νῶε (Antim., Corinn.).
•DER Possessive νωΐτερος (Ο 39, μ 185).
•ETYM The old dual personal pronoun, identical with Av. nā, OCS na, from IE neh*$_3$. Further, with an old long diphthong, there is Skt. nau. Lat. nōs also belongs here. The other case forms are Greek creations: νῶϊ, perhaps from *νω-ϝι (?); νῶε, based on σφε or πόδε (Schwyzer: 602f.).

νώγαλα [n.pl.] 'dainties, candies' (com. IV^a). ⊲?⊳ •DER νωγαλέος = λαμπρός (Zonar.) and νωγαλίζω [v.] 'to chew candies' (com. IV^a), with νωγαλίσματα [pl.] = νώγαλα (Poll.); also -εύω 'id.' (Suid.) with -εύματα [pl.] 'id.' (com. V-IV^a).
•ETYM No good explanation. Grošelj Živa Ant. 1 (1951): 259 assumed dissimilation from *λώγαλα, derived from λώγη.

νωδός [adj.] 'toothless' (com., Arist., Theoc.). ⊲GR⊳ •COMP Determinative compound νωδο-γέρων 'toothless old man' (com.), see Risch IF 59 (1949): 277.
•DER νωδότης [f.] 'toothlessness' (Porph.).
•ETYM From n̥-h*$_3$d-, consisting of privative n-* (see ►ἀ-) and the root of ὀδών (ὀδούς) < h*$_3$d-ont-. The o-stem perhaps replaces older νώδων after the pattern of στράβων : στραβός, etc. (see Solmsen 1909: 29ff.). For the reconstruction of h$_3$-, see Beekes in Kortlandt 2003: 186.

νώδυνος [adj.] 'feeling no pain' (Pi.), 'alleviating pain' (S.). ⊲GR⊳ •DER νωδυνία 'painlessness' (Pi., Theoc.).
•ETYM From privative n-* and ὀδύνη; see on ►νωδός.

νωθής [adj.] 'slow, indolent, stubborn' (Λ 559), see Bechtel 1921(3): 319 and Leumann 1950: 316. ⊲?⊳
•DER Thence νώθεια [f.] 'indolence' (Pl., Luc.), νωθώδης 'lethargic' (Aret.).

More usual is νωθρός 'id.' (IA), whence νωθρ-ία, -ίη (Hp., Herod., pap.), -ότης [f.] (Hp., Arist., LXX) 'slowness, indifference'; -ώδης 'laming' (Hp.); fem. νωθράς, -άδος botanical name = βαλλωτή, also νωθουρίς (Ps.-Dsc.). Denominatives: 1. νωθρεύω, -ομαι [v.] 'to be slow, slack, indifferent' (Hp., Hyp., pap.), with νωθρεία 'slowness' (Erot.); 2. νωθρ-ιάω 'id.' (Dsc.).
•ETYM A number of etymologies has been proposed, none of which is really obvious: 1) from privative *n- and the root of ὄθομαι, meaning "who cares for nothing", with transformation of the second member after the s- and *ro-*stems; 2) from privative *n- and the root of ►ὠθέω, 'who does not let himself be pushed from his place'. 3) The old connection with Skt. ādhrá- 'weak, poor', which presupposes PIE $nh_3d^h$-ro-*, is again hesitatingly mentioned in Mayrhofer EWAia, but the meaning of the Sanskrit word, which is clearly derived from the root nādh- 'to be in need', is too remote.
Alternatively, Fur.: 390 connects νωφάλης and νωφρύς, but a variation θ/φ is otherwise unknown.

νῶκαρ, -αρος [n.] 'lethargy, coma' (Nic., Hdn.); the latter explains it as στέρησις τῆς ψυχῆς 'absence of the soul'; it is also translated as νύσταξις 'slumbering'. ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR Also [adj.].
•DER νωκαρώδης 'slothful, sleepy' (Diph.).
•ETYM Frisk includes νῶκαρ under the derivatives of the root neḱ- 'disappear' in Greek, but a long vowel is entirely unmotivated in this formation. On the other hand, Fur.: 133 connects νῶκαρ with νωχελής, which fits well semantically (the translation 'Todesschlaf' by Frisk is inspired by a wrong etymology), and he denies that it has anything to do with ►νεκρός, ►νέκυς. For Pre-Greek words in -αρ, see Fur.: 134[75].

νωλεμές, -έως [adv.] 'without pause, unceasingly' (Il.), usually verse-final with αἰεί; later 'firmly' (A. R.). ◁GR?▷
•ETYM Probably a compound of privative *n- and a neuter *ὄλεμος, which is rather hypothetically compared with a word for 'break, breakable' in Germanic, e.g. OHG lam 'crippled', which may further belong to OCS lomiti 'to break', Lith. lémti 'to ordain', 1sg. lemiù, and perhaps OIr. ro-laimethar 'to dare' (LIV² s.v. lemH-). The comparison with the Greek form presupposes, however, that the root reconstruction is $*h_3lem(H)$-.

νωμάω ⇒νέμω.

νωπέομαι [v.] 'to be downcast', = δυσωπεῖσθαι 'to shun, disapprove of' (Ion. Hist., Phot.). ◁?▷
•VAR νενώπηται· τεταπείνωται, καταπέπληκται 'is humble, is struck with amazement' (H., Phot.).
•ETYM Cf. ►προνωπής. Alternatively, does it derive from νώψ· ἀσθενὴς τῇ ὄψει 'weak qua sight' (H.)?

νωρεῖ [v.] · ἐνεργεῖ 'is effective, operates' (H.). ◁IE? noHr-▷ •ETYM It has been compared with Lith. nóras 'will' and nóriu, norė̃ti 'want'. This would point to noHr-, but a reconstruction that is only based on a gloss remains doubtful. At any rate, it does not belong to $*h_2ner$-, which is impossible because of the acute vowel in Lithuanian.

νῶροψ [adj.] mg. unknown. ◁PG?(S)▷
•VAR Only in νώρ-οπι, -οπα, as an epithet of χαλκῷ, -όν (Hom.); after this νώροπι πέπλῳ (Nonn.).
•ETYM Adjective of unknown meaning. Cf. νῶροψ· λαμπρός, ὀξύφωνος, ἔνηχος 'bright, shrill, resounding'. ἢ ὅτι τὴν ὄψιν ἀσθενῆ ποιεῖ 'or that which weakens sight' (H.), which would imply a meaning 'blinding'. It has often been compared with ►ἀνήρ, but this has an initial laryngeal. Comparison with νωρεῖ· ἐνεργεῖ 'is active' (H.), Lith. norė̃ti, 1sg. nóriu 'want', etc., which have incorrectly been compared with ἀνήρ, is perhaps possible, but gratuitous.
The suffix -οπ- may point to a Pre-Greek word. Kuiper MKNAW 14: 5 (1951): 5 suggested that it was taken from αἶθοπι.

νῶτον [n.] 'back' (Il.). ◁?▷
•VAR Secondary τὸν νῶτον and οἱ νῶτοι (Egli 1954: 84ff.).
•COMP νωτο-φόρος 'carrying on the back', 'bearer' [m.], 'beast of burden' [n.] (X., Hell.) with -έω, -ία (D. S.); ποικιλό-νωτος 'having a varicolored back' (Pi., E.).
•DER Adjectives: νωτ-ιαῖος (Hp., Pl., E.), see Chantraine 1933: 49, also -αῖος (Nic.), -ιος (Ti. Locr.) 'belonging to the back', fem. -ιάς (Hp.).
Substantives: νωτιδανός [m.] 'kind of shark' (Arist.), on the formation see Schwyzer: 530; also ἐπινωτιδεύς 'id.' (Epaen. apud Ath. 7, 294d), explanation uncertain (see Thompson 1947 s.v.; different Strömberg 1943: 49f.; cf. also Boßhardt 1942: 86); νωτεύς [m.] 'beast of burden' (Poll., H.), see Boßhardt 1942: 86.
Verb νωτίζω 'to turn one's back, cover one's back, besmear, beat on the back' (trag., cf. Kretschmer Glotta 5 (1914): 287), also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐπι-; thence νώτισμα [n.] 'cover of the back' = 'wing' (Trag. Adesp.).
•ETYM There are no obvious cognates. If connected with the Lat. natis, natēs, gen.pl. -ium [f.] 'the buttock', we may either assume an old root noun $*n(e)h_3t$- (Schrijver 1991: 169) or a root $*nh_2t$- (De Vaan 2008 s.v. natis), which became thematicized in Greek.

νωχελής [adj.] 'slow, dull, sluggish' (Hp., S., E., Hell. epic). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR Also νωχαλής (cod. νωφ-)· νωθρός 'id.' (H.), νωχαλίζει· βραδύνει 'to make slow, delay' (H.). MoGr. has ἀνώχαλος.
•DER νωχελίη, -ία [f.] 'slowness, laziness' (T 411), cf. Porzig 1942: 204 and Delebecque 1951: 156f., also -εια [f.] (Orib., H.); νωχελεύομαι 'to be slow, indolent' (Aq.).
The plantname νωχελίς, -ίδος [f.] = βαλλωτή (Ps.-Dsc.; cf. Strömberg 1940: 158) has a variant νωκελίς, and is therefore rather of Pre-Greek origin; note also νωφρύς (Fur.: 390).
•ETYM Fur.: 133 convincingly compares ►νῶκαρ 'lethargy', which points to Pre-Greek origin. The variant forms in -χαλ-, -κελ-, and the alternation χ/φ lead to the same conclusion (although there is no explanation for the latter).

Ξ

ξαίνω [v.] 'to card, comb wool', metaph. 'to scratch, mangle, lacerate' (ξ 423, IA). ◄IE? ksn-ie/o-*► •VAR Fut. ξανῶ, aor. ξῆναι (late ξᾶναι), pass. ξανθῆναι, perf. med. ἔξασμαι (Hell. also ἔξαμμαι).
•COMP Also with prefix, especially κατα- and δια.
•DER ξάντης [m.] 'wool-carder' (Pl.) with ξαντική (scil. τέχνη) [f.] 'the art of carding wool' (Pl.), fem. ξάντριαι (title of a drama by A.); ξάσμα [n.] 'carded wool' (S. Fr. 1073), also ξάμμα (H. s.v. πεῖκος), ἀναξασμός [m.] 'laceration' (med.), ξάνσις [f.] 'carding of wool' (gloss.), ξάνιον [n.] 'comb for carding' (Poll., AB, H.), also = ἐπί-ξηνον (Poll.), probably after κτένιον; ξανάω (Nic.) 'to work hard (carding wool)', -ῆσαι (S.Fr. 498), ἀποξανᾶν· κακοπαθεῖν 'to suffer' (H.); cf. ὑφανάω : ὑφαίνω and similar cases in Schwyzer: 700. Probably related is ► ἐπίξηνον 'chopping-block', with an unclear formation.
•ETYM Technical expression from the production of wool. Its formation may have been influenced by ὑφαίνω, which is semantically close. Probably somehow related to ► ξέω, ► ξύω, but the exact derivation is unknown. There are no correspondences outside Greek.

ξανθός [adj.] 'yellow, golden yellow, reddish, brownish, blond', of hairs (Il.), also of other things (post-Hom.); on the mg. Capelle RhM 101 (1958): 21f. ◄PG?►
•DIAL Myc. PN ka-sa-to, cf. Gallavotti Par. del pass. 12 (1957): 10f.
•COMP ξανθο-κόμης (also -ος) 'blond-haired' (Hes., Pi.), ἐπί-ξανθος 'almost yellow, yellowish' (X., Thphr.) beside ἐπι-ξανθίζομαι [v.] 'to become yellowish or brownish' (Pherecr.).
•DER 1. Ξάνθος [m.] name of a river, a town, a person, a horse (Il.), with oppositive accent; 2. ξάνθη [f.] name of a yellow stone (Thphr.); 3. ξάνθιον [n.] name of a plant used to bleach hairs (Dsc., Gal.); Strömberg 1940: 23; 4. ξανθότης, -ητος [f.] 'yellowness' (Str.); 5. Denominative verbs: a. ξανθίζω 'to make or be ξ.' (com., LXX) with ξάνθ-ισις, -ισμός 'yellow-colored' (medic.), ξανθίσματα (κόμης, χαίτης) 'blond curls' (E. Fr. 322, AP) ; b. ξανθόομαι 'to become ξ.', -όω 'to paint ξ.' (Dsc.), whence ξάνθωσις (Ps.-Democr. Alch.); c. ξανθύνομαι 'id.' (Thphr.).
•ETYM Unexplained. A remote connection with Lat. cānus 'grey' has been supposed, but this remains gratuitous. The comparison with Etr. zamθic, supposedly 'of gold', has little value (Heubeck Würzb. Jb. 4:2 (1949-1950): 202 compares Σκάμανδρος as well). The word may be Pre-Greek; cf. ► ξουθός.

ξεῖ [n.] Name of the letter (Callias apud Ath. 10, 453d). ◂LW Sem.▸ •VAR Indeclinable. Later ξῖ (Luc.).
•ETYM Formed after πεῖ = Sem. pē; see Schwyzer: 140.

ξένος [m.] 'foreigner, guest, host' (Il.), 'mercenary, soldier' (ξ 102, Att.); ξένη (scil. γυνή, γῆ) [f.] 'foreign woman, foreign country' (trag., X.); as an adjective 'foreign' (post-Hom.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Epic Ion. poet. ξεῖνος, Dor. ξένϝος (in Cor. Ξενϝοκλῆς, Corc., El. Ξενϝάρης), ξῆνος (Cyr. Φιλόξηνος), (hyper-)Aeol. ξέννος (Hdn.), cf. Schwyzer: 228.
•DIAL Myc. ke-se-nu-wo /ksenwos/, ke-se-nu-wi-ja /ksenwia/.
•COMP Many compounds like ξενο-, ξεινο-δόκος [m.] 'receiving foreigners or guests; host' (Il.), φιλό-ξε(ι)νος 'loving guests, hospitable' (Od.), πρόξενος, Corc. πρόξενϝος [m.] 'public guest, deputy' (post-Hom.), see Risch IF 59 (1949): 38f.; see ►Εὔξεινος πόντος.
•DER A. Adjectives: 1. ξένιος, ξείνιος 'regarding the foreigner', τὰ ξε(ί)νια 'friendly gifts' (Il.), = Myc. ke-se-nu-wi-ja. 2. younger ξε(ι)νικός 'id.' (IA); 3. ξεινήϊος in τὰ ξεινήϊα (or τὸ ξεινήϊον) = τὰ ξείνια (Hom.), after πρεσβήϊα; 4. ξενόεις 'full of foreigners' (E. [lyr.]).
B. Substantives: 1. ξε(ι)νίη, -ία [f.] 'guest-friendship, guest-right' (since ω); 2. ξεινοσύνη [f.] 'hospitality' (φ 35); 3. ξενών, -ῶνος [m.] 'guestroom, -house' (E., Pl.); ξενῶνες· οἱ ἀνδρῶνες ὑπὸ Φρυγῶν 'the men's apartments among the Phrygians' (H.); 4. ξενίς, -ίδος [f.] 'road leading into foreign countries' (Delph. II[a]); 5. ξενίδιον [n.] 'small guesthouse' (pap. III[p]); 6. ξεν-ύδριον (Men.), -ύλλιον (Plu.) depreciatory diminutive of ξένος (Chantraine 1933: 73f.).
C. Verbs. 1. ξε(ι)νίζω 'to entertain as a guest' (Il.), also 'to surprise' (Hell.), whence ξένισις [f.] 'hospitality' (Th.), ξενισμός [m.] 'id.' (Pl., inscr., Luc.), also 'strangeness, innovation' (Plb., D. S., Dsc.); ξενιστής [m.] 'host' (sch.). 2. ξε(ι)νόομαι 'to enter into a treaty of hospitality; entertain sbd. as a guest, to be entertained' (Pi., IA), also 'to live in (or: emigrate to) a foreign country' (S., E.), -όω 'to deprive of, embezzle' (Hld.); ξένωσις [f.] 'stay abroad' (E. HF 965). 3. ξενιτεύ-ομαι 'to serve abroad as a soldier' (Isoc., Antiph.), -ω 'to live abroad' (Timae. Hist., J.); after πολιτεύομαι, -ω to πολίτης and πόλις (Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 173); ξενιτ-εία [f.] 'being a mercenary, life abroad' (Democr., LXX), -ευτής [m.] 'who lives abroad' (VI[p]).
•ETYM The semantic agreement with the old PIE word for 'foreigner, guest', seen in Lat. hostis [m.] 'foreigner, enemy', Go. gasts 'guest', OCS gostь 'id.', IE g^hosti-, has led to attempts to connect these with ξένος, assuming a root etymology g^hes-. The word ξένος could be Pre-Greek.

ξερόν [n.] 'the dry (land)' only in ποτὶ ξερὸν ἠπείροιο (ε 402), ποτὶ ξερόν (A. R. 3, 322, AP), ἐπὶ ξερόν (Nic.). ⇒ξηρός.

ξέστης [m.] measure for fluid and dried things, = Lat. sextārius (Oropos [around 200[a]], J., AP), also 'pot, bottle' (Ev. Marc. 7, 4, pap.). ◂LW Lat.▸
•DER ξεστίον [n.] 'id.' (Ostr., Orib., Aet.); cf. ἀμνίον, λυχνίον, etc.; ξεστ-ιαῖος 'measuring a ξ.' (Gal.).
•ETYM Backformation from *ξεστάριον, which was borrowed from sextārius with metathesis, under the assumption that this was a diminutive. The suffix is like in κοδράντης (= Lat. quadrāns), etc. The word ξέστριξ κριθή· ἡ ἑξάστιχος. Κνίδιοι (H.) is probably similar.

ξέω [v.] 'to shave, carve, smooth, polish' (Il.). ◂IE? ks-es- 'carve'▸ •VAR Aor. ξέσ(σ)αι (Il.), pass. ξεσθῆναι, perf. med. ἔξεσμαι (IA), fut. ξέσω (Paul. Aeg.), perf. act. ἔξεκα (Choerob.), verbal adj. ξεστός (Il.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, κατα-, παρα-, περι-.
•DER 1. ξέσις (ἀπό-) [f.] 'planing' (Thphr., Delph. IV[a]); 2. ξέσματα [pl.] 'carving, chips, carved objects' (M. Ant., AP); 3. ξεσμοῖς [dat.pl.] (H. as an explanation of σπαράγμασι 'pieces torn off'); 4. ξόανον [n.] '(carved) image of a god' (S., E., X.), also name of a musical instrument (S. Fr. 238); ξοάνων· προθύρων ἐξεσμένων 'carved doorways' (H.); acc. to Latte Glotta 32 (1953): 35, who reads ξοανῶν προθύρων· ἐξεσμένων, it is also an adjective; diminutive ξοάνιον (Anaphe II[a]). 5. ξοΐς, -ίδος [f.] 'chisel' (Hell. inscr.) with ξοΐδιον (pap. III[p]) and ξοΐτης [m.] name of a profession (Isauria; Redard 1949: 36); probably directly from ξέω after κοπίς, δορίς, etc.; ξοός· ξυσμός, ὁλκός 'scratch, furrow' (H.). 6. Of the prefixed forms: διαξόος [m.] 'sculptor' (Delph. 341[a]), ἀμφί-ξοος (-ους) 'smoothing all around' (AP); ἐπι-, κατα-, παρα-ξοή, -ά 'carving, planing, etc.' (inscr.). On ►ξώστρα, see s.v.
•ETYM Probably related to ►ξύω and ►ξαίνω, but without a close correspondence outside Greek. The stem ξεσ- (reconstructed from ξεστός, aor. ξέσ(σ)αι, etc.) is the basis of all forms cited. It has traditionally (Pok. 585f.) been interpreted as ks-es-, the zero grade of the IE root kes- 'to scratch, comb', with an enlargement -es- (cf. on ►τρέω). This root is seen in OCS česati 'to comb', Lith. kàsti 'to dig, scrape', etc.; ►κεάζω and cognates could be related as well.
The form ξόανον follows the model of ὄχανον : ἔχω, πλόκανον : πλέκω, etc. See also ►κέσκεον.

ξηνός [m.] · κορμός 'squared trunk, block' (Suid.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Has been connected with ἐπίξηνον 'chopping-block', but further details are obscure.

ξηρός [adj.] 'dry, arid' (IA). ◂IE? ksero- 'dry'▸
•COMP Many compounds, e.g. ξηρ-αλοιφέω [v.] 'to rub dry with oil' (Lex Solonis apud Plu. Sol. 1), composed of ξηρὸν ἀλείφειν (to *ξηρ-αλοιφός); ξηρόβηξ, -χος [m.] 'dry cough' (medic.), opposed to ὑγρό-βηξ (Strömberg 1944: 100); κατά-, ἐπί-ξηρος etc. (Hp., Arist.) beside κατα-, ἐπι-ξηραίνω.
•DER 1. ξηρότης, -ητος [f.] 'dryness' (Att., Arist.); 2. ξηρίον [n.], ξηράφιον [n.] 'desiccative powder' (medic., pap.); 3. ξηρώδης 'dryish' (EM beside πυρώδης). 4. ξηραίνω [v.] 'to make dry', -ομαι 'to dry up', fut. -ανῶ, -ανοῦμαι (IA), aor. ξηρᾶναι (-ῆναι), -ανθῆναι (Il.), perf. med. ἐξήρασμαι (IA), -αμμαι (Hell.); often with prefixes like ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐπι-, κατα-. Thence (ἀνα-)ξήρανσις [f.] (Thphr., Gal.), (ἀνα-, ἐπι-, ὑπερ-)ξηρασία, -ίη [f.] (Hp., Arist., Thphr.), on the formation see Chantraine 1933: 85; (ἀνα-)ξηρασμός [m.] (medic.) 'getting dry'; (ἀνα-)ξηραντικός 'getting dry' (Hp., Thphr.).

•ETYM The word ξηρός can hardly be separated from ►ξερόν. If these belong together with Lat. serēnus 'bright, clear, dry' < kseres-no-*, serēscō 'to become dry', OHG serawēn 'id.', etc. (cf. Pok. 625), ξηρός must contain a lengthened grade, which is problematic. Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. kṣā rejects the old connection with Skt. kṣāra- 'burning, biting, sharp' and kṣā́yati 'to burn'. Alternatively, for ξερόν one might assume metathesis of σχερόν 'id.', possibly influenced by ξηρός. See Janko Glotta 57 (1979): 20-23 on this problem.

ξίμβ(ρ)α ⇒σίδη.

ξίρις [f.] 'Iris foetidissima' (Thphr.). ◄PG► •VAR Also ξιρίς (Dsc. 4, 22); σῖρις or σίρις (EM 209, 35); ξυρίς (Dsc., Plin. Gal.); ξειρίς (Ar., H.), all 'id.'.
•ETYM Frisk (s.v. ξυρόν, which is unrelated) asks whether the original form was ξιρ- or ξυρ-. Acc. to DELG, ξυρ- could be due to folk etymology (referring to Strömberg 1940: 44). Indeed, the form σῖρις/σίρις suggests that ξιρ- is the oldest form. The variants point to Pre-Greek origin.

ξίφος [n.] 'sword with a straight, double-edged blade' (Il.); see Trümpy 1950: 60ff.; metaph. of the ξίφος-like bone of the cuttle-fish (Arist.); as a plant name = ξιφίον (Thphr.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also σκίφος (sch., EM, H.).
•DIAL Myc. qi-si-pe-e /kʷsipʰeʰe/ [du.].
•COMP As a first member in ξιφη-φόρος 'sword-bearing' (A., E.) with analogical -η- (Schwyzer: 440). On σκιφα-τόμος see below. As a second member in ἄ-ξιφος 'swordless' (Lyc., A. D.), ἀξιφ-εί [adv.] (Hdn.).
•DER 1. diminutive ξιφίδιον (Ar., Th.), also plant name = σπαργάνιον, 'swordgrass' (Ps.-Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 44; 2. ξιφύδριον (σκιφ- Epich.) name of a crustacean (medic., H.). 3. ξιφίας (σκιφ- Epich.) [m.] 'swordfish' (Arist.), also name of a comet (Plin.); 4. ξιφίον [n.] 'cornflag, Gladiolus segetum' (Thphr., Dsc.); 5. ξιφήρης 'armed with a sword' (E., late prose). 6. ξιφήν· ὁ φέρων ξίφος 'who bears a ξ.' (Suid.). 7. ξιφίνδα παίζειν = ξιφίζειν (Theognost.). 8. ξιφίζω [v.] 'to dance the sword-dance' (Cratin.), ἀποξιφίζειν· ὀρχεῖσθαι ποιὰν ὄρχησιν, σκιφίζει· ξιφίζει. ἔστι δὲ σχῆμα μαχαιρικῆς ὀρχήσεως (H.). Thence ξιφ-ισμός (Ath., D. C.), -ισμα (Choerob., H.) 'sword-dance', ξιφιστύς· μαχαιρομαχία, μάχη ἐκ χειρῶν 'battle with daggers' (H.); ξιφ-ιστήρ [m.] (pap., Plu.); -ιστής (H.) 'sword-belt' rather directly from ξίφος in view of the mg.; cf. κορυφιστήρ s.v. ►κορυφή. With prefix δια-ξιφίζομαι [v.] 'to fight with the sword' (Ar.), διαξιφισ-μός [m.] 'battle with swords' (Plu.). Two further glosses from H.: ξίφαι· τὰ ἐν ταῖς ῥυκάναις δρέπανα ἢ σιδήρια 'sickles or tools in planes' and (with metathesis) σκιφίνιον· πλέγμα ἐκ φοίνικος 'sth. plaited of date-palm' (after κοφίνιον, etc.); perhaps also σκιφα-τόμος, a profession (Sparta I[a])? Cf. on ►κίφος.
•ETYM Oriental origin (Aram. sajᵊfā, Arab. saifun, Eg. sēfet 'sword') has been advocated by e.g. Lewy 1895: 176f.
Čop KZ 74 (1956): 231f. compared Oss. æxsirf 'sickle', assuming IE kʷsibʰró-*. Such an isolated comparison, however, is highly unlikely.

The Myc. form clearly points to Pre-Greek origin because of the variation kʷ-/k-. Perhaps the forms with σκιφ- also point in this direction. It is unlikely that Myc. qi-si-pe-e lost its labiovelar through dissimilation with the following φ (as per Heubeck Minos 6 (1958): 55ff.). Pre-Greek also had labiovelars, which did not always share the fate of the inherited ones (see Pre-Greek).

ξουθός [adj.] mg. uncertain, 'resounding, trilling, quick, agile, yellow'(?), said of the wings of the Dioscuri (h. Hom. 33, 13), of an eagle (B.), a cicada (AP); of the nightingale and its γένυς (A., E., Ar., Theoc.), of the swallow and other singing birds (Babr.), of bees (S. Fr. 398, 5, E.); also of the winds (Chaerem. Trag.), of ἀλκυόνες (AP), of the ἱππαλεκτρυών (A., Ar.); further of μέλι, αἷμα, λύκος (Emp., Opp.), with ξανθός as a v.l., probably referring to the color (cf. H. ξουθά· οὐ μόνον ξανθά, ἀλλὰ καὶ λευκὰ καὶ πυρρά 'not only ξ., but also white and tawny'). ◄?► •DIAL Myc. PN ko-so-u-to (Gallavotti Par. del pass. 12 (1957): 6f.).
•COMP As a first member in ξουθό-πτερος, of μέλισσα (E., Lyr. Alex. Adesp.).
•ETYM On the meaning, see Leumann 1950: 215. The etymology is unknown. The general similarity with ξανθός has long been observed. Cf. Taillardat 1962: §266 and Duerbeck MSS 24 (1968): 9-32.

ξυλαμάω [v.] 'to plant or sow green crops or fodder' (opposed to σπείρω), usually with dat. (χόρτῳ 'fodder'). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. -μῆσαι.
•DER ξυλάμησις [f.], also the back-formation ξυλαμή [f.] 'sowing green crops', ξυλαμητής (also -ιστής) [f.] 'sower of green crops' (Hell., pap.; Mayser 1906-1938, I: 3: 127, 66 and 79).
•ETYM Technical word without etymology. Neither ξύλον nor ἀμάω (ἀμάομαι) seems to yield an acceptable connection.

ξύλον [n.] 'wood, timber, firewood, tree, beam, stick; wooden block put around the neck, gallows; bench, table' (Il.); also as a measure of length: 'the side of the ναύβιον' (Hero Geom., pap.). ◄Non-IE substrate?►
•COMP Very frequent in compounds, e.g. ξυλουργός (-οργός, -εργός) [m.] 'carpenter', with -έω, -ία, -ικός (IA), cf. on δημιουργός; μονό-ξυλος 'made from one piece of wood', of πλοῖον, etc. (IA). On ►ξύλοχος, see s.v.
•DER 1. Diminutives: ξυλ-άριον 'small piece of wood' (LXX, pap., etc.), -ήφιον 'piece of wood' (Hp., Hell.), -άφιον 'id.' (Eust.); on -ήφιον, -άφιον see Wackernagel Glotta 4 (1913): 243f.; ξύλιον 'piece of wood' (pap. IV[p]).
Further substantives: 2. ξυλ-εύς [m.] 'woodcutter', name of a sacrificial attendant in Olympia (inscr. I[a], Paus., H.), with -εύω, -εύομαι 'to fetch wood' (Hell. inscr., Men., H.), -εία [f.] 'fetching wood, stock of wood, timber' (Plb., Str., pap.). ξυλίτης· ἰχθῦς ποιός 'kind of fish' (H.), explanation in Strömberg 1943: 25; ξυλῖτις (γῆ, χέρσος) [f.] 'bush' (pap.); 4. ξυλών, -ῶνος [m.] 'place for wood' (Delos III-II[a]).
Adjectives: 1. ξύλ-ινος 'of wood, wooden' (Pi., B., IA), 2. -ικός 'id.' (Arist.) with -ικάριος 'woodseller (?)' (Corycos), from Lat. -ārius, 3. -ηρός 'regarding wood' (Delos III[a]), -ηρά [f.] 'woodmarket'? (pap. I[p]), 4. -ώδης 'woodlike, -colored' (Hp., Arist., Thphr.).

Verbs: 1. ξυλ-ίζομαι 'to fetch wood' (X., Plu.) with -ισμός 'fetching wood' (Str., D. H.), -ιστής 'who fetches wood' (sch.); 2. ξυλ-όομαι, -όω 'to turn into wood, make of wood' (Thphr., LXX) with -ωσις [f.] 'woodwork' (Th., Hell. inscr.), -ωμα, -ωμάτιον 'id.' (Delos III[a], etc.); 3. ξυλ-εύω, see above on ξυλεύς.

•ETYM The word ξύλον appears as σύλον, σύλινος on younger Att. vases (see Schwyzer: 211). It seems to correspond with Lith. šùlas 'post, pole, stave' < IE ksulo-*, Ru. šúlo [n.] 'garden-pole', SCr. šûlj [m.] 'block' < IE kseulo-* (?). Germanic words like OHG sūl [f.] 'style, pole', Go. sauls 'pillar' have a similar appearance. The relation between the Slav., Balt., and Gm. words has been amply discussed, but hardly explained. Was the word taken from a non-IE substrate language? See Lehmann 1986 s.v. sauls. Original connection of ξύλον with ►ξύω is not probable, but secondary influence (Chantraine 1933: 240) is conceivable.

ξύλοχος [f.] 'λόχμη, lair', also 'thicket, bush'? (Hom., AP, Anacreont., also late prose). ◄GR?►

•DER ξυλοχίζομαι (-ισδ-) probably = ξυλίζομαι (Theoc. 5,65; see ξύλον).

•ETYM Explained from *ξυλό-λοχος with haplology, but the exact semantic interpretation remains uncertain; cf. Solmsen 1901: 97[1]. Because of the fem. gender (perhaps after λόχμη?), Bechtel 1914 s.v. points to the possibility of adjectival origin: "having dry wood as a bed", of εὐνή?

ξύν [adj., prep.] 'with, together' (Il., especially OAtt.). ◄?►

•VAR With dat.; since II[a] sometimes with gen. after μετά. Younger form σύν (since Il.); on the distribution of the forms see Schwyzer 1950 487[2]. On the use in Plato see Kerschensteiner MSS 1 (1952): 29ff.

•DIAL Myc. ku-su /ksun/.

•ETYM No clear correspondences exist outside Greek. The appurtenance of BSl. forms (Lith. sù 'with', OCS sъ, Ru. s(o) 'together with, down from, etc.') is doubtful. Dunkel Glotta 60 (1982): 55-61 assumes that ξυν arose from som* with k-* (seen in kom*, Lat. cum) added before it (thus a contamination).

The word ξύν is probably also contained in μεταξύ (cf. on ►μετά). See ►ξυνός.

ξῡνός [adj.] 'common, public, usual' (epic Ion., Il.), = κοινός. ◄GR►

•COMP Rarely in compounds, e.g. ἐπί-ξυνος = ἐπί-κοινος 'common' (M 422).

•DER 1. ξυνάων, -άν (Pi.), ξυνέων (Hes.), ξυνών (S.) [m.] = κοινάν, -ών 'comrade, companion', whence ξυνωνία (Archil.), ξυνωνός (Theognost.); see on κοινών, -νία, -νός (s.v. ►κοινός). 2. ξυνήϊα [n.pl.] 'common booty', i.e. not yet distributed (A 124, Ψ 809), after πρεσβήϊα, ξεινήϊα. 3. ξυνόομαι [v.] 'to have contact with' (Nearch., Man.), -όω 'to bring into contact with' (Nonn.).

•ETYM From *ξυν-ι̯ό-, derived from ξύν like ►κοινός from *κομ-ι̯ος < *κόμ (*κόν) = Lat. cum. On ξυνός: κοινός and their derivatives, see Leumann 1950: 224[3] and Björck 1950: 366f. See ►ξύν.

ξυρόν [n.] 'razor' (K 173). ◄IE ksuro-* 'razor'►

•VAR Also -ός [m.].

•COMP Rare as a first member, e.g. ξυρο-δόκη [f.] 'razor-case' (Ar.); as a second member with metrically conditioned enlargement in ὑπο-ξύριος (AP 6, 307; verse-final), "what is under the ξ.", whence 'on which the razor is whetted'. Backformation in ὑπό-ξυρος 'cut away as if by a razor', of the nose of an eagle, etc. (Hp.), ἀπό-ξυρος 'cut off, steep', of a rock (Peripl. M. Rubr., Luc.), κατά-ξυρος epithet of θυρίδες 'loopholes' (Ph. Bel.), cf. ὑπο-, ἀπο-, κατα-ξυράω, -έω below.

•DER 1. Diminutives: ξύρ-ιον (Hell.), -άφιον (Gal., sch.). 2. ξυρίας [m.] 'with a tonsure, clean-shaven man' (Poll., H.). 3. On ξυρίς, -ίδος [f.] see ►ξιρίς. 4. Denominative verbs: a. ξυρέω 'to shave clean' (Hdt., trag. and Att.), ξυράω, -άομαι (Hdt., Plu.), ξύρω, -ομαι, aor. ξῦραι, -ασθαι (Hp., Hell.), also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ὑπο-, κατα-; thence ξύρησις [f.] 'shaving' (LXX), -ήσιμος 'good for shaving' (Ael. Dion.), ξυρησμός [m.] 'id.' (Hdn.), ξυρητής [m.] 'barber' (pap.); b. ξυρίζω = -έω (sch.), whence ξύρισμα [n.] 'shaving' (Tz.).

•ETYM An inherited word, identical with Skt. kṣurá- [m.] 'razor' < IE ksuró-*. For further connections, see ►ξύω.

ξυστάδες [f.] · αἱ πυκναὶ ἄμπελοι, ἄμεινον δὲ τὰς εἰκῇ καὶ μὴ κατὰ στοῖχον πεφυτευμένας ἀκούειν 'vines planted closely togehter, but it is better to understand the plants planted at random and not those planted in a row' (H.). ⇒συστάς.

ξυστίς, -ίδος [f.] 1. 'robe of rich and soft material, worn with festive clothes as a robe of state' (com., Pl.), whence ξυστιδωτός (scil. χιτών) 'chiton like a robe of state' (Att. inscr.); 2. 'shaver, drawknife; currycomb' (Epich., Diph.). ◄GR►

•ETYM From ξυστός 'shaven clean, planed', probably a comic name: a cloth sweeping the ground (on the formation, see Chantraine 1933: 343f.), but also a "planing instrument" (Chantraine 1933: 338). See ►ξύω.

ξυστόν 1 [n.] 'shaft of a spear', usually 'spear' (Il., Hdt., E., X.). ◄GR► •ETYM From ►ξύω as "what has been smoothened; smoothened stick" (scil. δόρυ).

ξυστός 2 [m.] 'walking place in a garden, a gymnasium, etc., covered colonnade where athletes exercise in winter' (X., Hell., inscr., Vitr., Plu., Paus.). ◄GR►

•VAR Also -όν [n.].

•COMP As a first member in ξυστ-άρχης [m.] 'director of a ξυστός' with ξυσταρχ-έω, -ία (late inscr. and pap.).

•DER ξυστικός 'belonging to a ξ., who exercises in a ξ.' (late inscr. and pap., Gal.).

•ETYM Originally an adjective, ξυστός meant 'smoothened', of the floor of a promenade and a colonnade; thus still in ξυστὸς δρόμος (Aristias 5, V[a]). Cf. also ξύειν 'to smoothen', of δάπεδον (χ 456). The word ►ξυστάδες (beside which συστ-) is unrelated.

ξύω [v.] 'to shave, smooth, scratch' (Il.). ◄IE kseu-* 'shave, scratch'►

•VAR Aor. ξῦσαι, pass. ξυσθῆναι, perf. pass. ἔξυσμαι.

•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐπι-, κατα-, περι-.

•DER Action nouns: 1. ξῦσις (ἀπό-) [f.] 'shaving, scratching, ulceration, erosion' (Hp., inscr.). 2. ξῦσμα (ἀπό-) [n.] 'filings, chip, lint, etc.' (Hp., Arist.) with ξυσμά-τιον, -τώδης (medic.); -λιον [n.] 'erosive plaster' (Cyran.). 3. ξυσμή [f.] 'scratching'

(Sophr.), plur. 'scribbles' (AP, D. T.). 4. ξυσμός [m.] 'itching, irritation' (Hp.). 5. κατα-ξυή [f.] 'smoothing' (Didyma II[a]).
Agent and instrument nouns: 6. ξυστήρ, -ῆρος (περι-) [m.] 'shaver, plane, rasp, file' (Hp., Hell. inscr.), ξυστ-ηρίδιον (Phryn.), -ήριος (Paul. Aeg.). 7. ξύστρα [f.] 'plane, curry-comb' (Hp., Hell. inscr. and pap.). 8. ξῦστρον = -τήρ (Sparta II[p]), also 'sickle, scythe on a wagon' (D. S.); thence ξυστρίον (pap. II[a] Paul. Aeg.), ξυστρίς (H. s.v. στελγίς, = στλεγγίς), ξυστρωτός 'fluted, chamfered' (LXX, Hero), ξυστρόομαι [v.] 'to flute' (Mylasa). 9. περι-ξύστης [m.] name of a chirurgical instrument (Hermes 38, 283). 10. ξυήλη (-άλη) [f.] 'planing iron' (X., H., Suid.). 11. ξυστάλλιον = ξῦστρον (Delos III[a]).
Adjective ξυστικός 'ptng. to shaving, etc' (medic., etc.). See also ξυστίς, -όν, -ός and ►ξυρόν.
•ETYM There is no direct correspondence for the Greek system. An athematic lengthened grade present is found in Skt. kṣṇáuti 'to grind, whet, rub', zero grade pres. ptc. kṣṇuvāná-. If this contained a nasal infix, it is archaic, as is clear from Lat. novācula [f.] 'razor', a denominative or deverbative formation from novāre* < ksnovāre*. The nasal was also introduced in non-presentic forms, e.g. ptc.perf. kṣṇutá- (= Av. hu-xšnuta- 'well-sharpened'), verbal noun kṣṇótra- [n.] 'whetstone'. One may further compare Lith. skùsti, 1sg. skutù 'to shave, plane, etc.', if somehow transformed from ksu-*. See ►ξέω, ►ξαίνω.

ξώστρα [?] · ψυκτρίς, ψύκτρια (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM The gloss is probably corrupt, since ψυκτρ- is unknown. It has variously been corrected to ψηκτρίς, ψήκτρια, or the lemma changed to ξύστρα. The word is usually given under ξέω, but this need not be correct.

O

ὀ- 1 copulative prefix. ◁IE sem-* 'one'▷ •VAR In ὄ-πατρος 'of the same paternal descent' (Λ 257, Μ 371), ὀπάτριος (Lyc.); in ὄ-τριχες ἵπποι 'horses with like manes' (Β 765) and the glosses ὀγάστωρ· ὁμογάστωρ, ὄζυγες· ὁμόζυγες (H.); also in ►οἰέτεας.
•ETYM Probably, Aeolic for copulative ►ἀ- 1. Semantically, it often comes close to ►ὀ- 2. See ►ὄπατρος.

ὀ- 2 'close by, near, with' vel sim. ◁?▷
•ETYM Assumed to be a fossilized prefix cognate with Av. and Skt. ā- 'towards, away from' < *(H)o-, in order to explain ὀ- in ὀκέλλω 'to drive ashore' beside ►κέλλω, and further ὀτρύνω, ►ὄζος 1, ►ὄσχη, ►ὄψον; for further details, see the separate words. In view of the paucity of the examples, this analysis is probably wrong. More forms are mentioned in Pok. 280f., but almost all of these are now explained by an initial laryngeal.

ὁ [pron., art.] demonstrative 'this one, that one' (Il.), later article. ◁IE so*, to- 'this one'▷ •VAR Fem. ἡ, Dor. ἁ; the nom.pl. οἱ, fem. αἱ (epic, Att.) is analogical for τοί, ταί (epic, Dor.).
•DER Also substantivized ὅς, in καὶ ὅς, ἦ δ' ὅς 'said he', etc. (Il.).
•ETYM An old demonstrative, originally only nom.sg.msc. and fem., retained in several languages: e.g. Skt. sá(ḥ), fem. sā́, Go. sa, fem. so, ToB se, fem. sā, and OLat. sa-psa 'ipsa' with innovated forms sum, sam, sōs, sās 'eum, eam, eos, eas'. All are from IE so*(s), seh₂*.

ὀά [interj.] interjection of pain (A. Pers. 117 and 122 [lyr.]). ◁ONOM▷ •VAR Also ὀᾶ.
•DER Besides οὐά, οὐᾶ interjection of admiration (Arr. Epict., D. C., Ev. Marc. 15, 29); οὐαί of pain, 'woe' (LXX, J., NT).
•ETYM Cf. Lat. vāh, interjection in various mgs., as well as vae utterance of pain, Go. wai 'woe'; further forms in Pok. 1110f. On ὀ-, οὐ- as a rendering of a w-sound, see Schwyzer: 313.

ὄα 1 [f.] 'elderberry tree, mountain ash, Sorbus domestica' (Thphr.). ◁IE Hoi-ueh₂-* 'yew'▷ •VAR Ion. ὄη, οἴη; variant οὖα. The fruit is called ὄον or οὖον [n.] 'elderberry' (Pl. Smp. 190d, Hp., Thphr., Dsc.).

•ETYM Words reminiscent in form and meaning of ὄα are found in many languages: Lat. ūva [f.] 'grape', which may derive from IE $Hoiueh_2$-, like ὄα; a derivation oiu̯ii̯ā-* is assumed in Arm. aigi 'vine'. Further, Lith. (j)ievà, Latv. iẽva [f.] 'alder buckthorn', the Slavic group of Ru. íva [f.] 'willow', the Celto-Germanic word for 'yew', e.g. OIr. eó [m.], OHG iwa [f.], and OPr. iuwis 'yew'. It remains uncertain whether these words have a common origin, and/or whether we must reckon with old loans. Alb. vo-dhë, va-dhë 'rowan tree' were borrowed from Gr. ὄα, οἴη.

ὄα 2 'hem, border'. ⇒ᾤα.

ὄαρ, ὄαρος [f.] 'wife', only in ὀάρων [gen.pl.] (I 327); ὤρεσσιν [dat.pl.] (E 486); ὄαρας· γάμους. οἱ δὲ γυναῖκας 'wives, others: women' (H.). ◂PG?▸
•DER Thence ὀαρίζω [v.] 'to have a private conversation, to consort with someone intimately, to chat' (Il., h. Hom.), only pres. and ipf.; ὄαρος, usually plur. -οι [m.] 'cosy intercourse or conversation', also 'ditty' (h. Hom., Hes., Pi., Call.), probably a back-formation; also ὀαριστύς [f.] (Hom.), later ὀαρισμός, usually plur. -οί [m.] (Hes., Call., Q. S.), ὀαρίσματα [pl.] (Opp.) 'intimate, close or colloquial conversation, billing and cooing'; ὀαριστής [m.] 'close friend' (τ 179, Timo); on mg. and use of the verbal nouns see Benveniste 1948: 70, Porzig 1942: 181f.
•ETYM Looking at the denominative ὀαρίζω, it is thought that ὄαρ originally meant 'confidential intercourse', whence 'confidential company, wife'. A good etymology has not been found. Several proposals have been made (see Frisk) where the initial ὀ- would be either the Aeolic variant of copulative ►ἀ- 'equal, together with', or ►ὀ- 2 'to, with'. Regarding the second member, these proposals do not convince, however. Ruijgh 1967a: 386f. supposes that the Linear B ideogram for 'woman' (MULIER) developed into the sign for wo, suggesting that there was a Pre-Greek word woar* 'woman' (cf. ►δάμαρ).

ὄβδην [adv.] 'in the face, overtly, public' (Call. Fr. 522, Lampsakos; A. D. Adv. 198,7 [where also ὄβδην]). ◂IE *h_3ek^w- 'face'▸ •VAR Only in εἰς (ἐς) ὄβδην.
•ETYM Adverb in -δην from ὀπ-, the root found in ὀπή, ὄψομαι, etc., with εἰς like in ἐς ἄντα.

ὀβελός [m.] 'broach' (Il.), 'obelisk, bar of metal used as a coin or weight, obol' (= the sixth part of a drachme), 'obelus, horizontal line used as a diacritic'. ◂PG▸ •VAR Att. ὀβολός, Dor. Arc. ὀδελός (also Nic.), Thess. ὀβελλός.
•COMP ὀβολο-στάτης [m.] "obol weigher", i.e. 'petty usurer' (com.), τρι-ώβολον, Dor. -ώδελον [m.] (-ω- by compositional lengthening) 'coin worth three obols, amount of three obols = half a drachme' (Th., Ar.); also ὀδολκαί· ὀβολοί (H.) from *ὀδελ-ολκαί?
•DER 1. Diminutive ὀβελίσκος [m.] '(little) spit, needle, obelisk, etc.' (Att., Hell.); 2. ὀβελίας (ἄρτος) 'bread roasted on a spit' (Hp., com.); 3. ὀβελίτης = -ίας (Poll.); 4. ὀβελεία (= ία) [f.] name of an iron object (Att. inscr.), -ία [f.] 'obol tax?' (Cos I[a]); 5. ὀβελ-ιαῖος 'like a broach' (medic.), ὀβολιαῖος 'worth an obol, weighing an obol' (Arist.); 6. ὀβελίζω [v.] 'to mark with an obelus' (Cic., Hermog.) with ὀβελισμός [m.] 'marking with an obelus' (sch.); but ὀβολισμός [m.] 'carriage rate' vel sim. (pap. III[p]).
•ETYM The variation δ : β in ὀδελός : ὀβελός can seemingly be explained by assuming an original labiovelar *g^w, but a number of problems remain in the reconstruction of a pre-form: 1) non-Aeolic ὀβελός instead of expected ὀδελός cannot be easily explained by analogy, as e.g. Frisk s.v. states; 2) there is not enough evidence for early vowel assimilations in Greek, for which ὀβολός is taken to be one of the main examples (see Van Beek fthc.b). Thus, it was assumed (Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 321ff.) that unaccented e* regularly developed to o if accented ó* followed in the next syllable, with at least one consonant separating the vowels. However, if ὀβολός would reflect such an old assimilation ε > ο, then the vocalism of ὀβ/δελός in all other dialects would be hard to understand; 3) the geminate in Thess. ὀβελλός is unexplained; 4) the word was etymologically connected with βέλος 'missile', but the initial ὀ- cannot be accounted for (cf. ►ὀ- 2). Extensive discussion of the word (also in compounds) in Tod Numismatic Chronicle 7 (1947): 1-27. The word is clearly Pre-Greek (see Fur. 389).

ὄβρια [n.pl.] 'cubs of wild animals' (E. Fr. 616); cf. ἰβρίκαλοι· χοῖροι 'young pigs' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR ὀβρικάλοισι (A. Ag. 143 [lyr.]), ὀβρίχοισι (A. Fr. 474, 809 Mette).
•ETYM For ὄβριχα (perhaps -οι?), compare animal names and hypocoristic formations like ὀρτάλιχος, ὀσσίχος (Chantraine 1933: 403f.); ὀβρίκαλα (-οι?) seems to have a combination of suffixes -κ- and -λ-; further unclear. Vendryes REGr. 32 (1932): 496 supposes Sicilian origin. Fur.: 191[37], on the other hand, assumes Pre-Greek origin with interchange ὀ-/ ἰ-. Although this would be a rare interchange, the variation in the suffixes -κ- and -χ- seems to confirm this.

ὄβριμος [adj.] 'strong, mighty' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ὄμβριμος with prenasalization.
•COMP As a first member in ὀβριμο-πάτρη [f.], epithet of Athena and others, 'having a mighty father'.
•ETYM The word ὄβριμος is traditionally compared with words that have no initial ὀ- and a long stem vowel: βριμός· μέγας, χαλεπός 'huge, hard' (H.), βριμάομαι 'χαλεπαίνω, to be hard to deal with', Βριμώ [f.] epithet of Hecate, Persephone, and others (see ►βρίμη), all of which are probably related to βρίθω, βριαρός. The short ι in ὄβριμος may have been taken from ἄλκιμος and other near-synonyms, but the ὀ- yields serious problems: it is neither a prefix nor a prothetic vowel. The variation ὀβρι-/ βρι- probably points to Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 246, etc.), as does the prenasalization.

ὄβρυζα [f.] 'assaying of gold' (Just. Edict. 11). ◂?▸
•DER ὀβρυζιακός and ὄβρυζος 'pure, i.e. having been assayed', of gold (pap. IV-VI[p], sch.).
•ETYM A technical loanword, compared by Benveniste RPh. 79 (1953): 122ff. with Hitt. ḫupruš̱ḫi- name of a pot, as the word originally indicated the pot in which the gold was tested. Borrowed as Lat. obrussa (since Cic.), later obryza, -iacus (since IV^p).

ὄγδοος [adj.] 'eighth' (Il.). ⋖IE *h$_3$eḱteh$_3$ 'eight', *h$_3$eḱth$_3$-uo- (?) 'eighth'⋗ •VAR ὀγδόατος (Il.); after τέτρατος, etc.
•COMP As a first member probably in ὀγδόδιον· θυσία παρ' Ἀθηναίοις τελουμένη Θησεῖ 'sacrifice brought to Theseus by the Athenians' (H.), probably of a sacrifice brought "on the eighth day"; cf. on ►αὐτόδιον.
•DER ὀγδοαῖος 'appearing on the eighth day' (Plb., Plu.). On ὀγδοάς, -ήκοντα, etc. see ►ὀκτώ.
•ETYM The Greek ordinal 'eighth' goes back to *ὄγδοϝος (cf. Old Corinth. [ὀγ]δόϝα), which is an enigmatic form beside the cardinal ὀκτώ for at least two reasons: the voiced cluster -γδ- and the suffix -ow- that it seems to contain. It is possible that the voiced cluster is analogical after ἕβδομος from septm-o-;* Sommer 1950: 24f. even considered the possibility that the cluster in a pre-form oktu̯-o-* developed an anaptyctic -o-. However, nowadays one usually reconstructs (h$_3$)eḱt(e)h$_3$-uo- with a suffix -uo- added to the form, seen in the cardinal *h$_3$eḱteh$_3$. Rix 1976: 172 reconstructs *(h$_3$)eḱth$_3$u-h$_2$o-, assuming voicing of the cluster by the *-h$_3$-, which was afterwards vocalized to yield -o-; this is an ad-hoc solution.
Another question is whether or not the -u̯- is part of the stem (cf. Skt. aṣṭáu). It is found in Go. ahtuda 'ὄγδοος', OHG ahtowi [pl.] 'eighth (as an office)', and in Lat. octāvus (with -ā- perhaps by dissimilation *-eh$_3$uo- > *-eh$_2$uo-; Schrijver 1991: 300).

ὀγκάομαι [v.] 'to cry, roar', of the ass (Theopomp. Com., Arist., Luc.). ⋖IE? *h$_1$enk- 'groan'⋗ •COMP Also with προ-, συν-.
•DER ὄγκησις [f.] (Corn., Ael.), -ηθμός [m.] (Luc., Nonn.), -ημα [n.] (gloss.) 'roaring, bellowing', also of oxen; -ηστής [m.] 'crier' (AP), -ηστικός 'inclined to crying' (sch.); ὀγκώδης 'id.' (Ael.).
•ETYM An intensive formation, like ►βοάω, ►γοάω, ►μυκάομαι, etc. A direct formal counterpart is Lat. uncāre 'to drone', of a bear (Suet.). An e-grade (IE *h$_1$enk-) is found in Ru. jačát', 1sg. jačú 'to groan, call plaintively', Alb. nëkon, Gheg angój 'to groan, sigh, lament'. Celtic and Germanic have various forms in the same meaning from IE *h$_1$ong-, e.g. MIr. ong 'groan, sigh, lament', MLG anken 'to groan, sigh'; further, Lith. iñksti 'to groan, sigh', ùngti 'id.', etc.
The word may have been onomatopoeic in origin. However, De Lamberterie RPh. 73 (1999): 37f. now derives it from ὄγκος 'swelling'. Borrowed as Lat. oncāre 'to cry', of an ass (Suet.). See also ►ὄκνος 2 'bitter'.

ὄγκιον [n.] 'name of a chest for iron and bronze ware' (φ 61, Hermipp. 16). ⋖?⋗
•VAR Also -ίον.
•ETYM Details unknown; in Poll. 10, 165 σκεῦος πλεκτόν, a plaited tool. It is therefore unclear whether it belongs to ►ὄγκος 1 (as a chest with hooks or handles) or to ►ὄγκος 2 (as a carrier).

ὄγκος 1 [m.] 'barbs of an arrow, chock' (Il., Philostr. Im., Moschio apud Ath. 5, 208b). ⋖IE *h$_2$onk-o- 'curvature'⋗ •VAR Further ὄγκη· γωνία 'corner, angle' (H.).
•ETYM Identical with Lat. uncus [m.] 'hook', as an adjective 'curved'; Gr. ὄγκινος 'barbed hook' (Poll. 1, 137 v.l., sch.) comes from Lat. uncinus [m.] 'id.' (Vitr.). For further cognates (e.g. ἀγκάλη, ἀγκών), see on ►ἀγκύλος.

ὄγκος 2 [m.] 'mass, burden, weight; dignity, pride, show-off', also as a notion of style (IA). ⋖IE *h$_2$onk-o- 'curvature', ?*h$_1$onḱ-o- 'burden'⋗ •COMP Often as a second member, e.g. ὑπέρ-ογκος 'excessively large, exaggerated, haughty' (Pl., X.), rarely as a first member, e.g. ὀγκό-φωνος 'with a hollow and pompous tone' (of a trumpet; sch.).
•DER 1. Adjectives ὀγκ-ηρός 'bulky, extensive', mostly metaph. 'pompous' (Hp., X., Arist.); -ώδης 'bulky, bombastic' (Pl., X., Arist.); ὀγκύλον· σεμνόν, γαῦρον 'proud, haughty' (H.), together with (δι-)ὀγκύλλομαι, -υλόομαι [v.] 'to be swollen, be puffed up' (Hp., Ar.); compar. ὀγκότερος 'bulky' (Arist.), superl. -τατος (AP). 2. Verb ὀγκόομαι 'to be puffed up, swollen, elated', -όω 'to raise, exalt, etc.' (IA), also with prefix, e.g. δια-, ἐξ-; thence (δι-, ἐξ-)ὄγκωσις 'swelling' (Arist., medic.), (ἐξ-)ὄγκωμα 'swelling' (Hp., E.). From H.: ὀγκίαι· θημῶνες, χώματα 'heaps, piles'; ὄγκη· μέγεθος 'magnitude' (cf. on ►ὄγκος 1).
•ETYM In the sense "what is carried, load, burden", taken to be an o-grade verbal noun to the root *h$_1$enḱ- (seen in the reduplicated aorist ►ἐνεγκεῖν). A problem with this analysis is the Schwebeablaut that has to be assumed, as the root is rather *h$_1$neḱ-. Jouanna CRAI (1985): 31-60 has claimed that the meaning 'burden' is not attested, and that all attestations can be understood from a meaning 'swelling', which may have developed from 'curvature' (and, like ►ὄγκος 1, be derived from *h$_2$onk-).

ὄγμος [m.] 'furrow, swath, line of scythed grass or grain', also of the course of the moon and the sun, etc., 'strip of land, which is (or ought to be) scythed down or cultivated in another way', also as a field-measure (Il., pap. imperial period). ⋖IE *h$_2$oǵ-mo- 'trajectory'⋗
•DER ἐπόγμιος 'presiding over the ὄγμος', epithet of Demeter (AP); ὀγμεύω [v.] 'to form an ὄ., to move in an ὄ.' (X. Cyr. 2, 4, 20 of the drivers; S. Ph. 163 of the wounded Philoctetes), ἐπ-ογμεύω (κύκλον) [v.] 'to move in circles' (Tryph. 354); perhaps also Ὄγμιος name of Heracles among the Celts (Luc. Herc. 1)?
•ETYM A term of agriculture. As a verbal noun to ἄγω (ὄγμον ἄγειν Theoc. 10, 2), ὄγμος may be identical in origin with Skt. ájma- [m.] 'trajectory, draught'. It is hard to imagine parallel innovations, since the suffix -mo- was not productive in Greek. This is one of the good examples showing that *h$_2$o > Gr. o.

ὄγχνη [f.] 'pear tree, Pirus communis', also 'pear' (Od., Thphr.). ⋖PG?⋗
•VAR Also ὄχνη (Theoc., Call., Nic.), ὄγχνια· ἄπιον 'pear (tree)' (H.).
•ETYM Hypothetically connected with ►ἔγχος 'lance', if this was originally a lance of pearwood. Of course, this remains a wild guess. Cf. ►ἀχράς and ►ἄχερδος, both 'pear (tree)'. Fur.: 131[59] connects κόγχναι· αἱ ὄγχναι (H.), and thinks the word is Pre-Greek, also on account of the by-form ὄχνη (ibid. 279).

ὀδάξ [adv.] 'with the teeth, clenching one's teeth' (ὀδὰξ ἐν χείλεσι φύντες α 381 = σ 410 = υ 268; also com., e.g. Ar. V. 164 διατρώξομαι τοίνυν ὀδὰξ τὸ δίκτυον); perhaps in different mgs. at three places in the Il. (e.g. Λ 749 ὀδὰξ ἕλον οὖδας; cf. Χ 17, Β 418). ⊲PG⊳
•DER Three verbs: 1. ὀδακ-τάζω (Call., A. R.), -τίζω (D. H.) 'to bite, gnaw' (cf. λακτίζω : λάξ); ἀδακτῶ· κνήθομαι 'to itch' (H.). 2. ὀδάξ-ομαι, -ω 'to scratch (oneself), to itch, be scratchy, gnaw', also -άομαι (-έομαι), -άω; variant ἀδάξομαι, -άομαι; fut. -ήσομαι, perf. ptc. ὠδαγμένος (S.), aor. ὠδάξατο (AP); ὠδάγμην· ἐκνησάμην (H.); ὀδάξει· τοῖς ὀδοῦσι δάκνει 'bites with the teeth', folk-etymological explanation (H.); ὀδαγμός (ἀ-, S. Tr. 770), ὀδαξ-ησμός (Hp., Ph., Plu.) 'itch', -ητικός (Poll.), -ώδης (Aret.) 'scratchy, causing itch'. 3. ἀδαχεῖ 'scratches, itches' (Ar. Fr. 410), ἀδαχᾷ· κνᾷ, κνήθει κεφαλήν, ψηλαφᾷ 'scratches the head, touches' (H.).
•ETYM Both ὀδακ-τάζω, -τίζω and ὀδάξει in H. have been derived from ὀδάξ, which traditionally translated as 'with the teeth'. However, it is hard to derive ὀδάξ-ομαι, -άομαι, which is attested better and earlier, as well as ἀδαχ-εῖ, -ᾷ, if we start from such a meaning. For the oldest attestations of ὀδάξ (Il.), 'with the teeth' is not directly evident, although it seems possible. Bechtel 1914 rendered ὀδάξ in these places with 'itching, scratching' (after ὀδάξομαι). The later meaning 'with the teeth' would have arisen from a folk-etymological connection with ὀδών and δάκνω.
The forms with ἁ- have traditionally been explained by vowel assimilation (Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 391f.), but this has now become doubtful (see Van Beek fthc.b); they rather point to Pre-Greek origin. It is also quite possible that the original reading was ἁδαγ-, and that this was replaced by ὀδ- at some point by folk etymology, as ἁδαγ- was less well-known. The aspiration in ἁδαχ-ᾷ, -εῖ does not have to be explained as analogical (Schmidt l.c.), but may be a variant of a Pre-Greek phoneme as well. The same holds for the interchange between -κτ- and -ξ- in the verbal forms. For all these reasons, the former derivation from a zero grade *h_3*d-nt-* must be dropped. See ►ἀδαγμός.

ὀδαχᾶς [?] · καταπύγων. Ταραντῖνοι 'lecherous, lascivious (Tarentinian)' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

ὀδμή [f.] 'smell, scent'. ⇒ὄζω.

ὀδόλυνθοι [m.]? · ἐρέβινθοι 'chick-peas' (H.). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •ETYM Clearly a Pre-Greek word; cf. ►ὄλυνθος.

ὁδός 1 [f.] 'road, street, ride, journey, march' (Il.), metaph. 'way out, means' (Pi., IA). ⊲IE sod-* 'course'⊳ •COMP Many compounds, like ὁδο-ποιέω [v.] 'to clear a path, pave the way' (Att.), with -ποιία [f.] 'road construction' (X.), -ποιός [m.] 'road worker' (X., Aeschin., Arist.); ὁδοι-πόρος [m.] 'traveller, wanderer' (Ω 375, trag., com.) with -πορία, -ίη 'journey (on land)' (h. Merc. 85, Hp., Hdt., X.), -πορέω [v.] 'to cover a distance, travel, cross' (Ion., trag.); ὁδοι-δόκος [m.] 'highwayman, robber' (Plb.); the first member retained a locative ending in order to avoid a sequence of three shorts. As a second member e.g. in εὔ-οδος 'well-roaded' with εὐοδ-ία, -έω, -όω (Att.), also in εἴσ-, ἔξ-, μέθ-, σύν-οδος, etc. 'entrance, etc.' (since κ 90), used as verbal nouns of εἰσ-ιέναι.
•DER 1. ὅδιος (ἐν-, παρ-, ἐφ-, etc.) 'ptng. to the road' (Il.); 2. τὰ ὁδαῖα [n.pl.] 'goods traded along the way' (θ 163, ο 445; cf. ὁδάω below); 3. -οδικός, in e.g. μεθοδ-ικός 'methodical, systematic' (Hell.); 4. ὁδωτός 'equipped with roads, practicable, doable' (S. OC 495; cf. ὁδόω); 5. ὁδίτης (παρ-, etc.) [m.] 'traveler, wanderer' (Il.); 6. ὅδισμα [n.] 'road construction' (A. Pers. 71 [lyr.]), cf. τείχισμα.
Denominative verbs: 7. ὁδεύω 'to travel by road, wander' (since Λ 569), very often with prefix, e.g. δι-, ἐξ-, μεθ-, παρ-, συν- (partly from δί-οδος, etc.); thence (-)ὅδευσις (IA), etc.; 8. ὁδόω 'to show the way, lead' (Hdt., A., E.); 9. ὁδάω (ἐξ-) 'to sell' (E. Cyc.); ὁδεῖν· πωλεῖν 'to sell' (H.).
•ETYM Traditionally, ὁδός is connected with a Slavic word for 'course', e.g. OCS xodъ [m.] 'βάδισμα, δρόμος', Ru. xod 'course, progress', which (like ὁδός) frequently occurs with a prefix, and may have its initial (x- instead of s-) from compounds with prefix (pri-, u-, per-). However, the absence of traces of Winter's Law in the Slavic word (lengthening of the preceding vowel by influence of the glottalic stop d*) makes it probable that xodъ was borrowed from Iranian. A further connection has been proposed with IIr. verbs like Skt. ā-sad- 'to tread on, go on', Av. apa-had- 'to go away, become weak'.
The relation between all forms mentioned and the root sed-* 'sit' remains unclear. Thus, the Greek noun ὁδός remains isolated.

ὀδός 2 [m.] 'threshold'. ⇒οὐδός.

ὀδούς [m.] 'tooth'. ⇒ὀδών.

ὀδύνη [f.] 'pain, torment, harm, sorrow' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_3*d-un-* 'pain'⊳ •VAR Mostly plur. -αι.
•COMP As a second member in e.g. περι-ώδυνος 'very sore, painful' (Hp., Att.), -ω-compositional lengthening; thence περιωδυν-ία [f.] (Hp., Pl.), verbs -έω (medic.), -άω after ὀδυνάω; rarely as a first member, e.g. in ὀδυνή-φατος (ὀδυνήφατα φάρμακα Ε 401 = 900, also of ῥίζαν Λ 847; after this Orph. L. 345, 753) 'soothing, mitigating', an incidental poetical formation after ἀρηΐ-φατος, etc., but with remarkable active mg.
•DER ὀδυν-ηρός, Dor. -ᾱρός 'dolorous, painful' (Pi., Att.), -ωδῶς [adv.] 'painfully' (Gal.), -αίτερος 'more painful' (Hp.) as if from *ὀδυναῖος after σχολαίτερος, etc. (Schwyzer: 534); ὀδυνάω [v.] 'to hurt, grieve', -άομαι 'to be hurt, suffer pain' (IA), rarely with ἐξ-, κατ-; thence ὀδυνήματα [pl.] 'pains' (Hp.).
•ETYM Beside IA ὀδύνη stands Aeol. ἐδύνας [acc.pl.], cited in Greg. Cor. 597. On this basis, it was assumed that the vocalic interchange is due to vowel assimilation ε > ο before υ. However, this is improbable; as argued by Kortlandt 2003: 94 and 199, a form attested only in Gregory of Corinth (XII^p) cannot be taken so seriously.
The form ὀδύνη was taken to be an enlargement in -ᾱ- of a verbal noun in -ur, -uen-, -un- from the root *h_1*ed-* 'eat'. Semantic parallels were adduced by Frisk (Hor. curae edaces, Lith. ėdžiótis 'to trouble oneself' beside ėdžióti 'to devour, bite', from ė̃sti 'to eat'), and ►ὀδύρομαι 'to wail' was compared as well. A further representative of $h_1$ed-ur, -un- has been seen in Arm. erkn, gen. erkan 'birth-pain, heavy pain'. On the further basis of OIr. idu 'birthpangs', from which he derived from PCelt. edwon-*, Schindler KZ 89 (1975): 53-65 reconstructed an original feminine paradigm $h_1$édu̯ō(n)*, gen. $h_1$dun-és, nom.pl. $h_1$édu̯on-es*.

However, the initial laryngeal was h_3-, like in ► ὀδών; cf. Kortlandt 2003: 94 and 199, where Schindler's analysis of the Irish and Greek words is criticized on good grounds. The comparison with Armenian is doubtful, because acc. to Kortlandt, a cluster dw did not yield Arm. rk (ibid. 88ff.). He starts from a root $h_3$ed-* 'to bite, sting' also seen in Lith. úodas 'gnat' < $h_3$od-o-*. Van Beek (p.c.) suggests that this root is continued in the verbal roots meaning 'stink, smell' (Gr. ► ὄζω) and 'hate' (Lat. ōdī), on which see LIV² s.vv. 1. $h_3$ed-* and 2. $h_3$ed-*, but that the original meaning was 'to sting'. Within Greek, ► ὠδίς may also be related.

ὀδύρομαι [v.] 'to wail loudly, lament, grieve, mourn, bewail' (Il.). ⋖IE? h_3d-ur, h_3d-un- 'pain'⋗ •VAR Non-presentic forms are rare: aor. ὀδύρασθαι, pass. ὠδύρθην, fut. ὀδυροῦμαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀπ-, κατ-.
•DER ὀδυρμός [m.] (trag., Pl.), ὄδυρμα [n.] (trag.) 'wail, lamentation', ὀδύρ-της [m.] 'who breaks out in lamentations' (Arist.), -τικός 'inclined to lament or to wail' (Arist., J. Plu.).
•ETYM Perhaps a denominative yod-present to the r-stem alternating with the n-stem in ► ὀδύνη, so originally 'to feel pain'. As a rhyme of μύρομαι, ► δύρομαι arose.

ὀδύσ(σ)ασθαι [v.aor.] 'to be angry, grumble' (Il.). ⋖IE? $h_3$ed-* 'hate'⋗ •VAR Perf. pass. ὀδώδυσται (ε 423), aor. pass. ὀδυσθῆναι (H.).
•ETYM Beside the aor. ὀδύσ(σ)ασθαι (ὀδύσαντο Ζ 138, ὀδυσσάμενος τ 407), we find οὐδύεται· ἐρίζει 'fights, quarrels' (H.), probably with metrical lengthening: a formation like ► ἠπύω, ἱδρύω, μεθύω, etc. If not analogical after other verbs denoting a state in -ύω, ὀδύομαι may derive from a u-stem noun odu-* (ὀδυσθῆναι, ὀδώδυσται may have a secondary -σ-). This has been compared with a verb for 'hate' seen in Lat. ōdī, odium, Arm. ateam, and with a Germanic adjective for 'dreadful': OS atol, ON atall (Hitt. ḫatuki- 'terrible, frightful' is unrelated; see on ► ἀτύζομαι 'to be terrified' and Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. ḫatuk-^{zi}).

Ὀδυσσεύς [m.] son of Laertes and Anticleia, king of the island Ithaca (Il.). ⋖PG(V)⋗ •VAR Epic also Ὀδυσεύς (metrical shortening? Cf. on Ἀχιλλεύς). Several by-forms with λ (cf. Schwyzer: 209 and 333, Heubeck 1961: 24ff.): Ὀλυσ(σ)εύς, Ὀλυτ(τ)εύς, Ὀλισεύς, etc. (vase-inscr.), Οὐλιξεύς (Hdn. Gr.), Lat. Ulixēs. The form with -δ- is only ascertained by epic literature.
•DER Ὀδυσήϊος (σ 353); Ὀδύσσεια [f.] 'the Odyssey' (Hdt., Pl.) with Ὀδυσσειακός 'belonging to the Odyssey' (Hdn. Gr., sch.), τὰ Ὀδύσσεια 'Odyssean games' (Magn. Mae. IIIᵃ); Ὀλισ-σεῖδαι [m.pl.] name of a family (φράτρα) in Thebes and Argos (inscr.).
•ETYM Connected by the epic poets (e.g. τ 407ff.) with ὀδύσσομαι, which is folk-etymological (Linde Glotta 13 (1924): 223, Risch 1947: 82f., Stanford Class. Phil. 47 (1952): 209ff.). Modern interpreters sought the origin of the name in the Greek West or on the continent on the one hand, and in Asia Minor on the other. Those who argue for western, Illyrian-Epirotic origin are Helbig Herm. 11 (1876): 281 (doubts by Kretschmer 1896: 280ff. with Ed. Meyer), Krahe IF 49 (1931): 143, and van Windekens Herm. 86 (1958): 121 ff.; for continental origin, Boßhardt 1942: 138f. (also on the phonetics); for origin in Asia Minor, Hrozný Arch. Orbis 1 (1929): 338, Gemser Archiv für Orientforschung 3 (1926): 183 (from Babyl. Hitt. Ul(l)uš?; on this, see Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1930): 215), and Kretschmer Glotta 28 (1940): 253 and 278 (Odysseus as an Anatolian hero, related to Hatt. Λύξης, Lyd. Λίξος). Doubtful attempts to connect the name Ὀδυσσεύς with the name of his maternal grandfather Αὐτόλυκος by Bolling AmJPh. 27 (1906): 65ff. and Bolling Lang. 29 (1953): 293f.
However, the name is typically Pre-Greek (see Fur. index) on account of the many variants. Faure's connection with ὀλίγος (Faure 1980: 33) is therefore wrong.

ὀδών [m.] 'tooth' (Ion.). ⋖IE h_3d-(o)nt-* 'tooth'⋗ •VAR ὀδούς (Arist., LXX); gen. ὀδόντος; Aeol. plur. ἔδοντες (only Procl., Greg. Cor.).
•COMP ὀδοντ-άγρα [f.] 'forceps for drawing teeth' (Hp., Arist.), χαυλι-όδων (Hes. Sc. 387, ntr. -όδον and -όδουν Arist.) 'with protruding teeth'.
•DER 1. ὀδοντάριον 'little cog' (Heliod. apud Orib.), ὀδοντ-ίς [f.] name of a fish (pap. IIIᵃ), -ᾶς [m.] 'dentatus', -ίας [m.] 'dentiosus' (gloss.); odontītis [f.] 'toothwort, Dentaria' (Plin.). 2. Adjective ὀδοντ-ικός 'ptng. to the teeth' (medic.), -ωτός 'equipped with teeth' (Hero, Luc., Gal.), with ὀδοντόομαι [v.] 'to be equipped with teeth' (Poll.). 3. Verbs: ὀδοντ-ιάω 'to teethe' (Gal.) with -ίασις [f.] 'teething' (Dsc., Gal.), -ίζω 'to equip with teeth' (Orib.), 'to polish (with a tooth)' (pap.), together with -ισμός (Poll.), -ισμα (Eust.) 'the grinding of teeth'.
•ETYM The younger nom. ὀδούς for ὀδών is perhaps after διδούς. The form ὀδών, gen. ὀδόντος agrees with the old name of the tooth in Skt. dán [m.], Lith. dantìs [m., f.], and OHG zan(d), all from IE h_3d-ont-. A zero grade h_3d-nt- is found in Go. tunþus (unextended tund- still in Go. aihvatundjai 'horse's tooth'; cf. De Lamberterie RPh. 74 (2000): 278), Lat. dēns, etc. The original ablaut is still alive in Skt.: gen.sg. datás < $h_3$dn̥t-ós* beside acc. dántam; cf. also the Germanic forms. The zero grade is assumed by some in Myc. o-da-ke-we-ta, -tu-we-ta, -twe-ta '(wheels) with teeth', but this is uncertain; see Aura Jorro 1985-1993 2, 16.
Aeol. ἔδοντες (with secondary barytonesis) was taken to suggest that ὀδόντ- stands for earlier ἐδόντ-* with vowel assimilation. Therefore, one used to reconstruct h_1d-ont-* as 'the eating one'. However, there are a couple of problems with this view. First of all, the attestation of the Aeolic form (twice in a late secondary source) is doubtful. Further, the initial ὀ- is neatly matched by Arm. atamn (Kortlandt 2003: index), which points to h_3-. It is further confirmed by νωδός, which requires n̥-h_3d-o- and can hardly be secondary. The root h_3d-* means 'to bite' and is also seen in Lith. úodas, Latv. uôds 'gnat', both from $h_3$od-o-* with long vowel by Winter's Law, and within Greek with ► ὀδύνη (see there for further suggestions). The Aeolic form can easily have ἐδ- after ἔδω. See ► νωδός, ► αἱμωδέω.

ὄζος 1 [m.] 'branch, twig, bough, offshoot' (Il.), also 'knot or eye on a tree' (Thphr.). ⊲IE *$h_3$esdo-, *Hosdo- 'branch'⊳ •VAR Aeol. ὔσδος (Sapph.).
•COMP As a second member in e.g. πέντ-οζος 'with five knots', as a name of the hand (Hes. Op. 742), πεντά-οζος 'with five knots' (Thphr.).
•DER ὀζ-ώδης 'branchy, having many knots' (Thphr., Dsc.), -ωτός 'branchy', -αλέος 'id.' (AP), after ἀζαλέος; ὀζόομαι [v.] 'to put forth branches' (Hp., Thphr.).
•ETYM Old inherited word for 'branch', identical with Arm. ost, gen. -oy, Go. asts, OHG ast, from IE *Hosdo-. Beside these, we find OS and MLG ōst 'knot in wood, knarl' with deviating length. Traditionally analyzed as *o-sd-o- 'sitting on (the stem)', containing a prefix ► ὀ- 2 and the zero grade of *sed-; cf. on ἵζω (s.v. ► ἕζομαι). It has also been compared with Lat. nīdus 'nest' < *ni-sd-o-.
However, Lubotsky draws attention to the fact that there are various words with similar formation and meaning: Skt. ádga- 'knot, sprout (of bamboo)', MP 'zg 'twig', and MoP azg 'twig' seem to reflect *Hodsg$^{(w)}$o-, and OIr. odb 'knot', MW oddf 'knot' go back to *osbo- < *Hosg^{w}o-. Hitt. ḫašduer- can also be compared; see the discussion in Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. Taken together with Gr. ὄζος, Arm. ost and Go. asts 'branch' < *Hosdo-, we seem to be dealing with a preform *Hosdg^{w}o- (that may have undergone metathesis to *Hodsg^{w}o- in Indo-Iranian). Lubotsky therefore assumes that the word was in fact an old compound with the first element *$h_3$est(H)- 'bone'.

ὄζος 2 in ὄζος Ἄρηος, a nickname of brave heroes (Il.). ⇒ἄοζος.

ὄζω [v.] 'to smell, scent' (IA). ⊲IE *$h_3$ed- 'smell'⊳ •VAR Also ὄσδω, -ομαι (Theoc., Xenoph.); aor. ὀζῆσαι, fut. ὀζήσω (Att.), also ὀζέσαι, -έσω (Hp. Superf., Hell.), plpf. ὀδώδει (Od.), perf. ὄδωδα (Hell.).
•COMP Also with prefixes like ἀπ-, προσ-. As a first member in the governing compound ὀζό-στομος 'with smelling breath' (AP, M. Ant.), as a second member in plantnames like κυν-όζολον (Ps.-Dsc.).
•DER 1. ὀδμή [f.] 'odour, scent' (Il.), ὀσμή (Att., Hippon.); on σμ from δμ see below; as a second member e.g. in εὔ-οδμος, -οσμος 'sweet-smelling, odorous' (Pi.), also in ὄνοσμα [n.] plantname? (Dsc.); thence ὀδμ-αλέος (Hp.), -ήεις (Nic.), -ηνός (H.; cod. ὀδ-) 'strong-smelling'; ὀσμ-ώδης (Arist., Thphr.), -ηρός, -ήρης (Nic.) 'id.'; ὀσμύλ-η, -ος, -ιον 'strong-smelling octopus' (Ar., Arist.), ὀσμ-ίτης (gloss.), -ῖτις (Ps.-Dsc.) plantname, -άς [f.] = ὄνοσμα (Dsc.); ὀδμ-, ὀσμ-άομαι [v.] 'to scent' (Ion., Arist.), with -ησις (Aret.).
2. From the present: ὄζ-αινα [f.] = ὀσμύλη (Call.), 'stinking adenoid' (Gal.) with -αινικός 'belonging to the ὄζαινα' (Ps.-Dsc.); ὄζολις [f.] = ὀσμόλη (Arist.); ὄζη [f.] 'malodorant breath' (Cels.), 'skin of the wild ass' (Suid.), because of the smell; ὀζηλίς· ἡ βοτάνη (Theognost.); ὀζώδης = ὀδμώδης (EM, sch.); also Ὀζόλαι [m.pl.] name of a Locrian people (Hdt., Str., Plu.)? Lengthened present ὀζαίνομαι = ὄζω (Sophr.), after ὀσφραίνομαι. 3. From the perfect: ὀδωδή [f.] 'scent' (AP). 4. the suffix -ώδης in εὐ-ώδης 'sweet-smelling, odorous' (Il.), etc.; it became a highly productive suffix, but with a faded mg.

•ETYM Apart from the perfect ὄδωδα, all verbal forms are clearly innovations based on the present ὄζω. The derivations are largely based on this present, as well. The formation of ὀδωδή (derived from the perfect?), as well as of ὀδμή and -ώδης, is isolated within Greek. Both can be old: ὀδμή may match Alb. amë 'unpleasant smell' < IE *$h_3$ed-mh_2-, and -ώδης may represent (with compositional lengthening) the s-stem of Lat. odor, OLat. odōs, probably also seen in Arm. hot, gen. -oy 'smell, odor' < IE *$h_3$ed-os-. The form ὀσμή rather derives from *od-s-mā than phonetically from ὀδ-μή.
Both IE *$h_3$ed-mh_2- and *$h_3$ed-os- presuppose a primary root present, which is continued in thematic form in Lat. olō, olĕre (with l for d); beside this, we find the more common innovation oleō, -ēre (after the intransitive verbs). The yod-present ὄζω was first thought to differ in vocalic length from Baltic forms like Lith. úodžiu 'smell', but the formation is in fact identical, as it is now known that the Baltic vocalism is due to Winter's Law: lengthening before a glottalic (i.e. voiced non-aspirated) consonant. Arm. hotim 'to smell' is a denominative of hot (see above). The present Arm. hototim (with intensive reduplication) may present a formal parallel to the reduplicated perf. ὄδωδα. See ► ὀσφραίνομαι.

ὄθιζα · ἀπήνη ἡμιονική 'wagon drawn by mules' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM Lagercrantz KZ 35 (1899): 273 and Frisk 1966: 283 adduce ► ὄθομαι. Possibly Pre-Greek.

ὀθνεῖος [adj.] 'foreign, alien' (Democr., Att., Arist.), 'irregular' (Gal., Aret.).
•COMP ὀθν(ε)ιό-θυμβος 'buried abroad' (Man.). ⇒ἔθνος.

ὄθομαι [v.] 'to attend, turn to, take heed' vel sim., only with negation (Il., A. R.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Only presentstem, except ὄθεσαν· ἐπεστράφησαν 'turned around, paid attention to' (H.).
•DER From H.: ὀθέων· φροντίζων 'heeding', ὄθη· φροντίς, ὤρα, φόβος, λόγος 'thought, care, fear, mind (etc.)' and ὄθεσαν (see above).
•ETYM Not well explained; the o-vocalism is remarkable in a present. Several proposals have been made, but all at best hypothetical: a) connection to Go. ga-widan, etc.; b) to ὀθεύει· ἄγει, φροντίζει (H.), Lith. vedù 'to lead, bring', etc.; c) to ► ἔθων, ► ὠθέω, ► ἔθειρα (see Frisk s.v.). See ► νωθής.

ὀθόνη [f.] 'delicate cloth, linen, sheet, canvas' (Hom., Emp., Act. Ap., Luc., Gal., AP). ⊲LW Eg.⊳
•VAR Usually plur. Also ὀθόνιον [n.], often plur. (Hp., Att., Hell.).
•COMP ὀθονιο-πώλης 'salesman of linen' (pap.).
•DER ὀθόνινος 'made of ὀ.' (Pl. Com., Luc.). From ὀθόνιον: ὀθονι-ακός [m.] 'id.' (pap., inscr.), -ηρά [f.] 'linen tax' (pap., Ostr.); diminutive ὀθον-ίδιον (pap.).
•ETYM A culture word of foreign origin. Acc. to Lewy 1895: 124f., it is from Hebr. 'ēṭūn of uncertain meaning; however, Spiegelberg KZ 41 (1907): 129f. has proposed Egyptian origin for this word (Eg. idmj 'reddish linnen').

ὀθόννα [f.] 'greater celandine, Chelidonium maius', also of the sap of this and other plants (Dsc., Plin.); name of an Egyptian stone (Paul. Aeg.); as a botanical name also ὀθόν<ν>ιον (Dsc.). ◂LW Eg.▸ •ETYM Recalls ὀθόν-η, -ιον, and hardly accidentally. Acc. to Dsc. 2, 182, it originates ἐν τῇ κατ' Αἴγυπτον Ἀραβίᾳ, and acc. to Plin. HN 27, 12, it is Syrian.

ὄθριξ [adj.] 'with the same hair' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Composed of ▸ὀ- 1 and ▸θρίξ.

ὄθροον [adj.] · ὁμόφωνος, σύμφωνος 'having the same voice' (H.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Composed of ▸ὀ- 1 and a verbal noun of ▸θρέομαι.

Ὄθρυς, -υος [f.] high chain of mountains in Thessaly (Hdt., Str.), also ὄθρυν· Κρῆτες τὸ ὄρος 'mountain (Cret.)' (H.). ◂PG▸ •DER From it ὀθρυόεν· τραχύ, ὑλῶδες, δασύ, κρημνῶδες 'overgrown, forest-like, rough, steep' (H.).
•ETYM Acc. to Mahlow 1927: 497, it stands for ὀφρῦς, with variation θ : φ (cf. Schwyzer: 302f.). Fur.: 198 compares Myc. o-du-ru-we, -wo (cf. Ruijgh 1967a: 185[439]). The name is no doubt Pre-Greek.

οἴ [pcl.] onomatopoeic, expressing pain or suffering (trag.). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR ὀί acc. to Ar. Pax 933. ⇒ὀϊζύς, οἴμοι.

οἴαξ, -ᾱκος [m.] 'handle of the rudder, rudder' (trag., Pl.), οἴηκες [pl.] name of a device on the yoke (a handle? rings? Ω 269). ◂IE $h_2(o)iH$-s- 'pole, shaft'▸ •VAR Ion. -ηξ, -ηκος.
•COMP As a first member in οἰακο-νόμος [m.] 'helmsman' (A. [lyr.]), cf. Sommer 1948: 166; as a second member perhaps in κερ-οίακες (from κερα(ι)-οίακες) [pl.] 'ropes belonging to the yard-arm' (Luc. Nav. 4).
•DER Diminutive οἰάκιον (Eust.); οἰακ-ηδόν [adv.] 'in the manner of an οἴαξ' (A. D.); denominative οἰακ-ίζω (-η-) [v.] 'to pilot, steer' (IA), with -ισμα 'steering' (Trag. Adesp.), -ιστής (Suid.); οἰάκ-ωσις 'steering' (Aq.). Also οἰήϊον [n.] 'rudder' (Hom.).
•ETYM An instrument name, οἴαξ is formed like πόρπᾱξ 'handle of a shield', τρόπηξ 'handle of an oar', and οἰήϊον like λαισήϊον 'a kind of shield', ἐργαλήϊον 'tool', etc. The base of the Greek words was an old s-stem PIE $h_2(o)iH$-s-, reflected in thematicized Skt. īṣā́ [f.] 'pole, shaft' and Hitt. ḫišša- 'id.', which both point to a zero grade. The origin of the Greek o-grade is unclear. The s-stem is also found in Slavic, e.g. Sln. ojê, ojêsa [n.] 'thill'. The nautical usage is a Greek innovation; cf. on ▸ἱστός, which came to mean 'mast'. The IE noun is also preserved in Fi. aisa 'bar of the forked pole (thill)', probably from Baltic aisō* or aisa-*. According to H. Katz 2003: 252, the noun is preserved as an IIr. loan in other Uralic languages too.

οἶβος [m.] 'back of the neck of a cow' (Luc. Lex. 3). ◂?▸ •ETYM Does it occur in ὄχθοιβος?

οἴγνυμι [v.] 'to open' (Il.). ◂IE h_3ueig- 'give way'▸
•VAR Also οἴγω, Aeol. inf. ὀείγην (SGDI 214, 43), later also ἀν-οιγνύω (Demetr. Eloc.), ipf. ὠΐγνυντο (B 809, Θ 58), ἀνα-οίγεσκον (Ω 455), -ῷγον, -έῳγον, aor. οἶξαι (ᾦξε, ὤϊξε Hom., ἀν-έῳξε Hom., Att.), pass. οἰχθῆναι (Pi., Att.), fut. οἴξω, perf. ἀν-έῳγα (intr., Hp. and late), with -έῳχα, *-έῳγμαι (Att.), ὤϊκται (Herod.), ἀν-ῷκται (Theoc.).
•COMP Mostly with prefix, especially ἀν- (to which ὑπ-, παρ-ανοίγνυμι, ὑπ-, συν-ανοίγω, etc.), with the secondary past tenses ἤνοιγον, ἤνοιξα, ἠνοίχθην, ἠνοίγην, ἠνέῳξα, etc. (X., LXX).
•DER Few derivatives: ἄνοιξις [f.] 'opening' (Th., Thphr.), ἄνοιγ-μα [n.] 'opening' (LXX), -εύς [m.] 'opener' (Dam. Pr.), ἐπανοίκ-τωρ (Man.), -της (Arg. Man.) [m.] 'who blows up'. As a second member in πιθ-οίγ-ια [n.pl.] 'opening of a barrel', opening of the Anthesteriae in Athens (Plu.).
•ETYM The judgment of these forms remains rather uncertain. The most recent discussion is by Forssman 2005. He concludes that on the basis of the Greek evidence, an ablauting root *ὀϝειγ-/ *ὀϝιγ- can be reconstructed. Starting from epigraphically attested ὀείγην < ὀϝείγην and the zero grade ὠ(ϝ)ίγνυντο (cf. ἴγνυντο· ἠνοίγοντο [H.]), ἀναοίγεσκον, ἀνέῳγε, ἀνέῳξε in Homer can be replaced by earlier *ἀν-οϝείγεσκον, *ἀν-ό(ϝ)ειγε, *ἀν-ό(ϝ)ειξε. There is no certain etymology. The form ὀϝιγ-, ὀϝειγ- corresponds formally to Skt. vijáte, vejate 'to tremble; to shrink, start back', Skt. véga- = Av. vaēya- [m.] 'violent movement, pressure, clash, blow' < IE $h_3$uóigo-, etc. See ▸ἐπῴχατο.

οἶδα [v.] 'to know' (Il.). ◂IE ueid-* 'see, look, know'▸ •VAR 2sg. οἶσθα (Il.+), οἶσθας (com., Att.), οἶδας (Ion.); 1pl. ἴδμεν, Att. ἴσμεν after the 2pl. ἴστε. The initial ἰ- in the 3pl. ἴσᾱσι is measured both long and short in Homer; this is explained by assuming a pre-form u̯id-san*, with different dialectal developments, by Ringe (Jr.) MSS 50 (1989): 123-157. For the forms (e.g. subj. εἴδομεν, inf. εἰδέναι, ἴδμεναι, plpf. ᾔδη) see Chantraine 1961: 189f.
•ETYM An old perfect, identical with Skt. véda [1sg.], vidmá [1pl.], Go. wait [1sg.], witum [1pl.] 'know', from IE uóid-h_2e* [1sg.], uid-mé* [1pl.]. Other cognates are OCS vědě 'I know' with middle inflection, formally = Lat. vīdī. From the perfect arose the present Arm. gitem 'to know'. Other correspondences are, among others, 2sg.ipv. ἴσθι = Skt. viddhí, ptc. εἰδώς = Go. weitwoþs 'witness', fem. ἰδυῖα = Skt. vidúṣī. In Greek, ▸ἰδεῖν 'to note, observe' is used as an aorist; cf. also ▸νῆϊς.
De Lamberterie (in DELG Supp. s.v. οἶδα) wrongly assumes a root h_1u̯id- on account of νῆις (Call.), which is a late form and can easily be a secondary formation, while there are no forms with ἐ(ϝ)ιδ- or ἐ(ϝ)ειδ- (and cf. ἴδρις, ἰδμοσύνη, βιδυιοι). On the basis of Celtic evidence, Schrijver KZ 112 (1999): 264-272 argues that the plpf. ᾔδη 'he knew' continues a stative stem ueid-eh_1-*.

οἰδέω [v.] 'to swell' (ε 455). ◂IE $h_2$oid-eie- 'swell'▸ •VAR Also οἰδάω (Plu., Luc.), οἰδαίνω (Hell. poet.); οἰδάνομαι, -ω (I 646 and 554, Ar., A. R.), οἰδίσκομαι (medic.), act. -ω 'to make swell', aor. οἰδῆσαι (IA), οἰδῆναι to οἰδαίνω (Q. S.), perf. ᾤδηκα (Hp., Theoc.).
•COMP With prefix, especially ἀν-οιδέω, -οιδίσκομαι, -οιδαίνω; also with δι-, ἐξ-.
•DER 1. οἶδμα [n.] 'flood of water' (Il.), after κῦμα; cf. κυέω : κῦμα, δοκέω : δόγμα (or from a lost primary verb); οἰδματόεις 'flowing' (A. Fr. 69 = 103 Mette, Opp.). 2. οἶδος

[n.] 'swelling' (Hp., Nic., Aret.); cf. κρατέω : κράτος. 3. οἴδ-ημα [n.] 'swelling' (Hp., D.) with -ημάτιον (Hp., Aët.), -ηματώδης (medic.); (ἀν-, δι-, ἐξ-, etc.)-οίδησις [f.] 'bulge' (Pl., medic., Thphr.). 4. (ἐπ-, ὑπ-)οιδαλέος 'swollen' (Archil., Hp.), to οἰδαίνω like κερδαλέος : κερδαίνω. 5. οἴδᾱξ [m.] 'unripe fig' (Poll., Choerob.), from οἶδος or οἰδέω. 6. Backformations: ὕποιδος 'somewhat swollen' (Gal.), to ὑπ-οιδέω; ἐνοιδής 'swollen' (Nic.), to ἐν-οιδέω. See also ► Οἰδίπους.

•ETYM Of the presentic forms, only οἰδέω could be old. The causative οἰδάνω arose by enlargement, together with the intr. οἰδάνομαι, and in the same way οἰδίσκομαι, -ω; οἰδαίνω would be analogical after κυμαίνω, ὀργαίνω, etc., or perhaps from οἰδῆσαι after κερδῆσαι : κερδαίνω, etc. The late and rare form οἰδάω was formed to οἰδῆσαι. Sometimes, οἰδέω is held to be an iterative-intensive formation, but a corresponding primary verb is not attested. A certain cognate is Arm. aytnum 'to swell' with the primary aor. ayteay and the noun ayt (i-stem) 'cheek' < IE $h_2$oidi-* or $h_2$eidi-;* the nu-present is an Armenian innovation. Germanic presents a few isolated nouns, like OHG eiz, MoHG (dial.) Eis 'abscess, ulcer', from PGm. aita-* < IE h_2e/oid-o-*, cf. formally close οἶδος [n.]; a suffix -r- is found in e.g. OHG eittar [n.] 'pus' < PGm. aitra-* [n.], and perhaps also in HNs like Eiter-bach. Lat. aemidus is isolated as well (probably after synonymous tumidus), deviating from οἰδέω in vocalism, but in this way it proves that the root was $h_2$eid-, not $h_3$eid- (the other non-Greek forms may continue both IE $h_2$oi-* and $h_2$ei-*). The Slavic group of OCS jadъ 'poison' is open to more interpretations: they can also be derived from $h_1$ed-* 'eat'.

Οἰδίπους [m.] king of Thebes, son of Laios, who unknowingly married his mother Iocaste after he had killed his father. ◄GR►

•VAR Also -πος (AP), -που, -πουν (Hdt., trag.), -ποδος (Apollod.), -ποδα (Plu.); besides, after the patronymics, the following metrical variants of *Οἰδιπόδᾱς, -ης: gen. -πόδᾱο, -πόδᾱ, acc. -πόδᾱν (epic poet.), -πόδεω (Hdt.), etc.; see Schwyzer: 582, Fraenkel 1912: 163f., Sommer 1948: 38, Egli 1954: 14 and 17.

•DER Οἰδιπόδεια [f.] 'the saga of Oedipus' (Arist.; after ἡ Ὀδύσσεια), also τὰ Οἰδιπόδεια 'id.' (Paus.) from Οἰδιπόδειος [adj.] (Plu., Paus.).

•ETYM Properly "with a swollen foot", with regular change i : ro in Οἰδι- and IE $h_2$oid-ro-* , which is found in Gm., e.g. OHG eittar 'pus'; see ► οἰδέω. Improbably, on the meaning of the first element, Schröder Gymnasium 63 (1956): 72 ff. (to ON eista 'testicle'); quite hypothetically, Kretschmer Glotta 12 (1923): 59f. (chthonic interpretation).

οἰέτεας [acc.pl.] 'of the same year, of the same age' (B 765). ◄IE sm-* 'same' + uet-s-* 'year'►

•ETYM For *ὀ-έτεας (see ► ὀ- 1 and ► ἔτος 2) from *ὀϝέτης, with οι as a reversed notation for metrical lengthening. This notation can be understood in connection with the antevocalic change of οι to ο in Attic (e.g. ἐπόησε); it also occurred in Ionic.

ὀϊζύς [f.] 'bale, wailing, suffering' (Il.). ◄ONOM►

•VAR οἰζῦς (trag., Herod.), -ύος.

•COMP πάν-οιζυς 'consisting of nothing but misery' (A. [lyr.]).

•DER ὀϊζῡ-ρός (also -ρώτερος, -ρώτατος metrical lengthening, see Chantraine 1942: 102 and 258), secondarily οἰζῠρός 'woeful, miserable, poor' (epic Ion. since Il., Ar.); ὀϊζύω (ῡ̆) [v.] 'to wail, suffer', aor. -ῦσαι.

•ETYM An expressive word, ultimately derived from the interjection οἴ (Ion. ὀΐ after Ar. Pax 933), probably through a verb οἴζω, ὀΐζω (only A. D. Adv 128, 7ff.). See ► οἰμώζω, ► οἶκτος.

οἴη 1 [f.] 'elderberry tree'. ⇒ὄα.

οἴη 2 [f.] 'village' (Chios IV[a], A. R., H., Theognost.); Att. deme name Ὄα (also Οἶα, Ὄη, Οἴη). ◄?►

•COMP Perhaps as a second member in Οἰνόη.

•DER οἰῆται [m.pl.] 'villagers' (S. Fr. 134), οἰατᾶν· κωμητῶν 'villagers' (H.), Οἰᾶται [m.pl.] inhabitants of a deme in Tegea (Paus. 8, 45, 1; reading uncertain). Besides ὠβά [f.] name of a Spartan tribe (IG 5(1), 26: 11 [II-I[a]], Plu. Lyc. 6) with ὠβάτας· τοὺς φυλέτας 'tribal members' (H.), ὠβάξαι 'to divide into ὠβαί' (Plu. ibid.); also ὠγή (= ὠϝή)· κώμη 'village' (H.), ὠάς (ὦας cod.)· τὰς κώμας, οὐαί· φυλαί 'tribes' (H.). Details in Baunack Phil. 70 (1911): 466f.

•ETYM The word οἴη has been identified with ὠβά = *ὠϝά under a pre-form *ὠϝίᾱ. Formerly derived from *ὀϝι̯ᾱ and compared with Go. gawi 'χώρα, περίχωρος, district', which is interpreted as PGm. ga-awja-* [n.]. This is unlikely, however; see Lehmann 1986 s.v. Further details are obscure.

οἰήϊον ⇒οἴαξ.

οἶκος [m.] 'house, dwelling of any kind, room, home, household, native land' (Il.). ◄IE ueik-*, uoik- 'house'►

•VAR Dial. ϝοῖκος.

•DIAL Myc. wo-i-ko-de /woikon-de/ 'homeward'.

•COMP Very many compounds, e.g. οἰκο-νόμος [m.] 'housekeeper', with -νομέω, -νομία (Att.), compound of οἶκον νέμειν, -εσθαι; μέτ-οικος (IA), πεδά-ϝοικος (Arg.) 'sbd. living among others, small farmer, tenant'; ἐποίκ-ιον [n.] 'outbuilding, countryhouse, village' (Tab. Heracl., LXX, pap.), hypostasis of ἐπ' οἴκου.

•DER A. Substantives: 1. τὰ οἰκία [pl.] (Il.), sing. τὸ οἰκίον (since LXX) 'residence, palace, nest'. 2. οἰκία, Ion. -ίη [f.] (post-Hom.), ϝοικία (Cret., Locr.) 'house, building' together with the diminutive οἰκῑ́διον [n.] (Ar., Lys.), οἰκιή-της (Ion.), ϝοικιά-τας [m.] (Locr., Thess., Arc.) = οἰκέτης (see 5.), οἰκια-κός 'belonging to the house, housemate' (pap., Ev. Matt.). 3. Rare diminutives οἰκ-ίσκος [m.] 'little house, little room, bird cage' (D., Ar., inscr.), -άριον [n.] 'little house' (Lys.). 4. οἰκεύς (Il.), ϝοικεύς (Gort.) [m.] 'housemate, servant'; fem. ϝοικέα (Gort.). 5. οἰκέ-της (IA), Boeot. ϝυκέ-τας [m.] 'housemate, servant, domestic slave', fem. -τις (Hp., trag.), together with -τικός (Pl., Arist., inscr.), -τεία [f.] 'the whole of domestic servants, attendants' (Str., Aristeas, J., inscr.); οἰκετεύω [v.] 'to be a housemate, occupy' (only E. Alc. 437 [lyr.] and H.); compound πανοικεσίᾳ [adv.] 'with all οἰκέται, with the whole of attendants' (Att.).

B. Adjectives: 6. οἰκεῖος (Att.), οἰκήϊος (Ion. since Hes. Op. 457) 'belonging to the house, domestic, familiar' together with -ειότης (-ηϊότης), -ειόω (-ηϊόω), whence -είωμα, -είωσις, -ειωτι-κός. 7. οἰκίδιος 'id.' (Opp.); κατοικ-ίδιος (to κατ' οἶκον) 'indoors' (Hp., Ph.).
C. Verbs. 8. οἰκεω (Il.), ϝοικέω (Locr.) 'to live, reside', also 'to be located, occupy, manage', very often with prefix, e.g. ἀπ-, δι-, ἐν-, ἐπ-, κατ-, μετ-. Thence οἴκ-ησις (late also διοίκ-εσις), -ήσιμος, -ημα, -ηματιον, -ηματικός, -ητήρ, -ητήριον, -ήτωρ, -ητής, -ητικός. 9. οἰκίζω 'to found, settle' (since μ 135 ἀπῴκισε), often with ἀπ-, δι-, κατ-, μετ-, συν-, etc., whence οἴκ-ισις, -ισία, -ισμός, -ιστής, -ιστήρ, -ιστικός.
Adverbs: 10. οἴκο-θεν (Il.), -θι (epic), -σε (A. D.) beside the fossilized locative οἴκ-οι (Il.), -ει (Men.), a recent formation? 11. οἴκα-δε 'homeward' (Il.), ϝοίκαδε (Delph.), probably from (ϝ)οἶκα [n.pl.] like κέλευθα, κύκλα, etc.; οἴκα-δις (Meg.); further οἶκόν-δε (epic).
•ETYM Old name for 'abode, house', identical with Lat. vīcus [m.] 'group of houses, village, quarter', Skt. véśa- [m.] 'house', especially 'brothel'; IE *uóik̂-o- [m.]. Additionally, there is a zero grade root noun in IIr. and Slav.: Skt. viś- [f.], acc. viśam, Av. vīs- [f.], acc. vīsəm, OP viϑam 'abode, house, community', also 'house of kings' in Iranian; OCS vьsь [f.] (secondary i-stem) 'village, field, piece of ground', Ru. ves' 'village', from IE *uik̂- [f.]. Next to these old root nouns, IIr. has a verb Skt. viśáti, Av. vīsaiti, IE *uik̂-e/o- meaning 'to sit down, settle, enter'. IE *uóik̂-o- must be derived from this verb, originally as an action noun, properly "settlement". Gr. τὰ οἰκία and Skt. veśyà- [n.] 'house, village', though formally identical, are separate innovations (Schindler BSL 67 (1972): 32). The word ►τριχάϊκες is probably unrelated.

οἶκτος [m.] 'lamentation, compassion, pity' (Od.). ◂ONOM▸ •COMP Rarely as a second member, e.g. ἔπ-οικτος 'pitiable' (A.), ἄν-οικτος 'pitiless' (S., E.).
•DER Primary superlative οἴκτιστος (X 76), φιλ-οίκτιστος 'loving pity the most' (S.) from φίλ-οικτος (A. [lyr.]); thus the rare οἰκτικός 'ptng. to lamentation, lamenting' (An. Bachm.) and οἰκτοσύνη [f.] = οἶκτος (Hdn. Epim.). Old is οἰκτρός 'woeful, wailing, deplorable' (Il.), as a first member e.g. in οἰκτρό-γοος 'with woeful lamentation' (Pl. Phdr. 267c); probably (in spite of the difference in gender) to οἶκτος after αἶσχος : αἰσχρός, ἔχθος : ἐχθρός, etc., cf. also the pair οἴκτιστος : αἴσχιστος.
Denominative verbs: 1. From οἰκτρός: οἰκτῑ́ρω 'to pity, commiserate, bewail' (Il.), Aeol. οἰκτίρρω (Hdn. Gr.), aor. οἰκτῖραι, fut. οἰκτιρῶ (Att. also -τερῶ after itacistic -τεῖραι, -τείρω) late -τ(ε)ιρήσω (LXX, NT), also with κατ-, etc.; thence οἰκτιρ-μός [m.] 'compassion, pity' (Pi., LXX, NT), -μων 'compassionate, pitiful' (Gorg., Theoc., LXX) with -μοσύνη (Tz.); *οἰκτίρ-i̯ω is supposed to continue *οἰκτρ-i̯ω with an i-colored schwa secundum. 2. From οἶκτος: οἰκτίζω, -ομαι 'id.' (trag., Th., Arist.), also with κατ-, etc., whence οἰκτ-ισμός [m.] 'bewailing' (A., X.), -ίσματα [n.pl.] 'id.' (E.), κατοίκτ-ισις [f.] 'wailing, compassion' (X.).
•ETYM Like ὀϊζύς with comparable meaning, οἶκτος probably also derives from the interjection οἴ via οἴζω; the close connection appears from the backformation ►δυσοίζω, from δύσ-οικτος. Comparable nouns from interjective verbs in -ζω are frequent, e.g. αἴαγμα, αἰακτός (to αἰάζω, αἰαῖ), βάβαξ, βαβάκτης (from βαβάζω, βαβαί), etc. Doubtful non-Greek combinations, such as Go. aihtron 'beg' and MIr. éigid 'screams', are given in Pok. 298. See ►ὀϊζύς, ►οἰμώζω.

οἴκυλα [n.pl.] 'a kind of pulse' (Epic. in Arch. Pap. 7, 7). ◂?▸ •VAR οἴκελος ὁ πίσος (Theognost Can. 20.); οἴκυλος· τὸ ὀσπρίον (ibid. 21).
•ETYM Recalls Lat. vicia.

οἶμα [n.] 'rush, attack, rage', of a lion and an eagle (Il.), of a snake (Q. S.). ◂IE? *$h_3$eis- 'move quickly'▸ •DER Verbal forms: aor. οἰμῆσαι 'to plunge, dash forth', said of birds of prey and of people compared to birds of prey (X 140, 308, 311, ω 538), fut. οἰμήσουσι (Orac. apud Hdt. 1, 62), of θύννοι, with οἴμημα· ὅρμημα 'rush, incitement' (H.). A supposed but unattested present *οἰμάω seems, just like the o-vowel, to presuppose a noun *οἶμος or *οἴμη (beside an original ntr. *εἶμα).
•ETYM Probably from *οἶσμα, related to Av. aēšma- [m.] 'anger', which is compared with an IIr. verb 'to put in quick movement, urge forward' (e.g. Skt. pres. íṣyati, Av. išiieiti, perhaps related to ►ἰαίνω) as a primary noun. Lat. īra 'anger' belongs to this group as well. See ►ὀϊστός, ►οἶστρος.

οἴμη [f.] 'song, chant, saga, tale' (Od., A. R., Call., etc.). ◂IE? *soh_2i-m- 'song, spell'▸ •VAR In similar use also οἶμος ἀοιδῆς (h. Merc. 451), ἐπέων οἶμον (Pi. O. 9, 47), λύρης οἴμους (Call. Iov. 97).
•DER ἄοιμον· ἄρρητον 'unsaid' (H.), substantivized hypostasis προοίμιον (Pi., Att. prose), φροίμιον [n.] (trag.), properly "what stands πρὸ οἴμης or πρὸ οἴμου (older οἴμου, see οἶμος)", 'start of the song, introductory chant, introduction, preamble', borrowed as Lat. prooemium. Unclear is ►παροιμία.
•ETYM Because of the occasional connection of msc. οἶμος with song and play, it has been thought obvious to connect οἴμη with ►οἶμος 'path, way'. It is supposed, then, that the word acquired a special meaning in the language of the aoidoi.
Alternatively, however, οἴμη and οἶμος 'song, chant' can be separated from οἶμος 'path, way' and connected with ON seiðr [m.] 'kind of sorcery', Skt. sā́man- [n.] 'song', which would presuppose a root *seh_2-i- 'bind' (also found in Gr. ►ἱμάς), as was proposed by Bader BSL 85 (1990): 36. In this case, the connection with οἶμος 'road' is folk etymology. The form οἶμος cannot reflect *sh_2om-io- (cf. Hitt. išḫamāi-^{i} 'to sing' < *sh_2m-oi-), as *-VmiV- should have yielded Gr. -VινV-.

οἴμοι [excl.] exclamation of pain (Thgn., trag.). ⇒ὀϊζύς, οἶκτος.

οἶμος [m.] 'streak' (Λ 24 οἶμοι κυάνοιο, on a θώρηξ), 'path, road, track', also 'strip, tract of land' (Hes. Op. 290, Pi., trag., Pl., Call., Men.), also connected with song and play (see ►οἴμη). ◂?▸
•VAR Also [f.] after ὁδός, etc.; also aspirated οἷμος, see below.
•COMP Few compounds: δύσ-οιμος (τύχα A. Ch. 945 [lyr.]); acc. to H. = ἐπὶ κακῷ ἤκουσα, δύσοδος; ἄοιμος· ἄπορος 'without way' and πάροιμος· ὁ γείτων 'neighbour' (H.). See also ►παροιμία.

•ETYM Perhaps related to ►οἴμη. Since an aspirated form οἶμος is ascertained, e.g. by Hdn. Gr. 1, 546, and by φροίμιον (see on ►οἴμη) and ἄοιμος, a pre-form IE $h_1$oi-mo-, which is at the basis of Skt. é-man- [n.] 'path, walk', cannot be considered. Sommer 1905: 29 therefore proposed a modified reconstruction $h_1$oi-s-mo-. Osthoff BB 24 (1899): 168ff. earlier proposed a pre-form u̯oi-mo-, belonging to ►ἵεμαι 'to pursue, hasten, desire'. Finally, Schulze 1933a: 665 connected ►οἰρών 'εὐθυωρία'. Λ 24 requires initial ϝ-, and ἄοιμος· ἄπορος (instead of ἄνοιμος) may also point to this, but Hes. Op. 290 does not have ϝ-.

οἰμώζω [v.] 'to wail loudly, cry, lament' (Il.). ◄ONOM► •VAR Aor. οἰμῶξαι (Il.), fut. οἰμώξ-ομαι (Att.), -ξω (Plu., AP).
•COMP Also with ἀν-, ἀπ-, etc.
•DER οἰμωγ-ή [f.] (Il.), -μα [n.] (A., E), -μός [m.] (S.); privative adjective ἀν-οίμωκ-τος 'not wailed for', adverb ἀν-οιμωκ-τί (-τεί) 'without lamentation' = 'unpunished' (S.). An innovation is οἰμώττω 'id.' (Lib.).
•ETYM Derived from the interjection οἴμοι (οἴ μοι) 'woe me'. See ►ὀϊζύς, ►οἶκτος.

οἴνη [f.] 'the ace on a die' (Achae., Zen.). ◄IE Hoi-no- 'one, only'.► •VAR Also οἰνός [m.] (Poll.).
•DER οἰνίζειν· τὸ μονάζειν κατὰ γλῶσσαν 'be alone regarding speech', οἰνῶντα· μονήρη 'solitary' (H.).
•ETYM Old word for 'one, only', found as a numeral in several languages: Lat. ūnus (OLat. oino), OIr. óin, Go. ains, OPr. ains, IE *Hoino-. In Greek, ►εἷς was used in this meaning. The accentual variation οἴνη : οἰνός may be related to the substantival use of the former. A parallel fomation is ►οἶος < Hoi-u̯o-.

οἶνος [m.] 'wine' (Il.). ◄IE u̯oh₁i-no- 'wine', u̯eh₁-i- 'turn, twist'► •VAR Dial. ϝοῖνος.
•COMP Very many compounds, e.g. οἰνο-χόος [m.] 'cupbearer', together with -χοέω [v.], aor. -χοῆσαι 'to be a cupbearer, pour wine' (Il.), epic also -χοεύω (only present), metrically conditioned (Chantraine 1942: 368); οἰν-άνθη [f.] 'fruit-bearing bud, blossom of the vine', also metaph. of the grape (since Pi., Thphr.), also name of a plant, 'meadowsweet, Spiraea flipendula', because of its smell (Cratin., Arist.), name of an unknown bird (Arist.); ἄ-οινος 'without wine' (IA), ἔξ-οινος 'drunk' (Alex., Plb.), back-formation from ἐξ-οινόομαι 'to get drunk' (E.). On Οἰνόη cf. ►οἴη 2.
•DER A. Substantives: 1. Diminutives, mostly belittling: οἰν-άριον (D., Hell.), not from οἴναρον because of the mg. (cf. Chantraine 1933: 74); -ίσκος (Cratin., Eub.), -ίδιον (Apollod.). 2. οἴνη [f.] 'vine' (Hes.), like ἐλαία : ἔλαιον, etc.; οἰνάς [f.] 'id.' (AP, Nic.), also 'rock dove, Columba livia', after the color (Arist.); also adjectival 'belonging to the wine' (AP, APl.). 3. οἴν-αρον [n.] 'vineleaf, grapevine' (X., Thphr.) with -αρίς, -αρία, -άρεος, -αρίζω (Ibyc., Ar., Hp., Thphr.). 4. οἰνοῦττα [f.] 'wine cake' (Ar.), also name of a plant with intoxicating effect (Arist.). 5. οἰνών, -ῶνος [m.] 'wine cellar' (X., Hell.). 6. ϝοινώα [f.] 'vineyard?' (Thespiae), cf. προθυρῴα etc. in Hdn. Gr. 1, 303. 7. Some glosses in H.: οἴνωτρον· χάρακα, ᾗ τὴν ἄμπελον ἱστᾶσι 'pole by which the grapevine is held upright', γοίνακες (= ϝ-)· βλαστοί 'sprouts', γοινέες· κόρακες 'ravens', cf. οἰνάς.

B. Adjectives: 8. οἰν-ηρός 'containing wine, abundant in wine' (Pi., Ion., Arist.); 9. -ώδης 'wine-like, redolent of wine' (Hp., Arist.); 10. -ικός 'ptng. to wine' (Hell., inscr. and pap.).
C. Verbs: 11. οἰν-ίζομαι 'to furnish oneself with wine' (Il., late prose), -ίζω 'to resemble wine' (Thphr., Dsc.); with οἰν-ιστήρια [n.pl.] name of an Attic festival (Eup., H., Phot.); cf. Ἀνθεστήρια, χαριστήρια, etc. 12. οἰν-όομαι, -όω 'to intoxicate (oneself)' (Ion., Od., trag.) with -ωσις [f.] 'intoxication' (Stoic., Plu.). On the PN Οἰνεύς see Boßhardt 1942: 106f.; on the HN Οἰνοῦς [m.] (Laconia) and on Οἰνοῦσσαι [f.pl.] (islands), see Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 2 (1950-1951): 233.
•ETYM Greek (ϝ)οῖνος looks similar to other words for 'wine' in Soutern European languages: Lat. vīnum < uih₁no-, U vinu, etc., Arm. gini < u̯oin-i̯o-, Alb. Gheg vênë < u̯oinā-.
The IE word for 'wine' may be reconstructed from these forms; together with related ►ἴτυς 'willow', Lat. vītis 'vine', and various other words, it may be derived from the root ueh₁-i- 'turn, bend'. As the wild vine was indigenous in southern Russia and in certain parts of central Europe, this assumption is acceptable from a historical point of view. However, as the cultivation of the vine started in the Mediterranean region, in the Pontus area and in the south of the Caucasus, most scholars are inclined to look for the origin of the word in these countries. This would point to non-IE origin. However, if we put the homeland of viticulture in the Pontus and the northern Balkans, the word for 'wine' might come from there. In this case, not only would the words mentioned from Greek, Lat., Arm., and Alb. derive from this IE source, but also Hitt. u̯ii̯an(a)-, HLuw. wii̯an(i)-, and the relevant Semitic words, like Arab. wain, Hebr. jajin. In Beekes MSS 48 (1987): 21-26, it was pointed out that the Hitt. form requires u̯ih₁-on-o-; this is now accepted by Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. (with the modification that the Hittite form is not thematic).
The Celtic and Germanic words were borrowed from Lat. vīnum, and from Germanic or Latin again the Slavic and Baltic words for 'wine'. From Arm. gini comes e.g. Georg. γvino.

οἴομαι [v.] 'to suspect, expect, think, believe, deem' (Od.). ◄IE $h_3$uis- 'suppose, assume', $h_2$uis- 'see clearly'► •VAR New presents: ὑπ-οίζεσθαι· ὑπονοεῖν 'to distrust' (H.), ὑπερ-οιάζομαι 'to be arrogant, conceited' (Phot., Suid.; also H.?). By-forms ὀΐομαι (Hom.), οἶμαι (trag., Att.), also active ὀΐω, οἴω (Il.), οἰῶ (Lac. in Ar., etc.), aor. ὀΐσ(σ)ασθαι, ὀϊσθῆναι (epic), οἰη-θῆναι (IA), -σασθαι (Arat.), fut. οἰή-σομαι (Att.), -θήσομαι (Gal.).
•COMP Sometimes with prefix, e.g. συν-.
•DER οἴη-σις [f.] (IA), -μα [n.] (Plu., D. C.) 'conceit, smugness, belief, opinion' with -ματίας [m.] 'prig' (Ptol., H., Suid.), -τικός 'arrogant' (Ph.); ἀν-ώϊσ-τος 'unimagined, unthought of' (epic since Φ 39), -τί [adv.] (δ 92).
•ETYM We may consider ὀΐομαι (ῑ) and ὀΐω (both ῑ and ῐ) to be the original forms, and thence οἴομαι, οἴω. Furthermore, οἶμαι arose in unstressed position, together with the ipf. ᾤμην (Ar.) beside ᾠόμην. The oldest forms point to a reconstruction PGr. owis-i̯e/o-, which is supported by ὀϊσθῆναι and ἀν-ώϊστος. Then, ὀ(ϝ)ίομαι developed into *ὄ(ϝ)i̯ομαι > οἴομαι.

Etymological details are unclear. Beekes 1969: 58 assumes a root $h_3$uis-. The comparison with Lat. ōmen 'portent' (OLat. osmen) from o̯uis-men-* is dubious (see De Vaan 2008 s.v. for alternatives). It seems preferable to depart from an adverbial pre-form $h_2$ouis directly comparable to Skt. āviṣ 'evidently, before the eyes'. Then, ὀίομαι must be formed with the denominative suffix -ie/o- from this adverb. The root $h_2$euis is also found in Gr. ►ἀίω 'to perceive' and with enlargement in ►αἰσθάνομαι 'id.'.

οἷος [rel.pron.] 'of which quality' (Il.).
•VAR οἷα, οἷον.
•ETYM From the relative pronoun ►ὅς; see also ►τοῖος.

οἶος [adj.] 'alone, only, single' (= class. ►μόνος). ⊲IE Hoi-uo-* 'one, only'⊳ •VAR Fem. -α (-η), ntr. -ον (Hom., Hes., Pi., A., S.); Cypr. οἶϝος.
•DIAL Myc. o-wo-we /oiw-ōwes-/ 'with a single ear'.
•COMP As a first member in οἰο-πόλος 'wandering solely, alone' (Hom., Pi.), together with οἰοπολ-έω (E. [lyr.], AP).
•DER οἰόθεν 'all alone' (H 39, 226); explanation in Leumann 1950: 258ff.; denominative aor. οἰωθῆναι 'to be left alone' (Il., Q. S.). Details on the use of οἶος in Ruijgh 1957: 127f.
•ETYM Identical with Old Iranian words for 'alone, one': Av. aēuua-, OP aiva- from IE Hoi-uo-*. Fomation like *μόνϝος > ►μόνος), ὅλϝος > ►ὅλος. Beside it stands IE Hoi-no-; see ►οἴνη. Further connection with pronominal $h_1$ei- is probable.

οἰρών, -ῶνος [m.] 'furrow of a plough, ἡ χάραξις τοῦ ἀρότρου' (Eratosth., Hdn.), 'straight line (in measuring fields), ἡ ἐκ τῆς καταμετρήσεως τῆς γῆς εὐθυωρία' (H.); probably also in Cypr. i-to-i-ro-ni, i.e. ἰν (= ἐν) τῷ οἰρῶνι 'in the region'. ⊲IE? soHi-r-* 'furrow, limit'⊳ •VAR Also οἱ-.
•ETYM Probably a derivative in -ών, which is often used to indicate places, from a noun *οἶρος vel sim. Compared with Skt. sītā- [f.] 'furrow', sīra- [n.] 'plough', sīmā [f.] 'frontier' by Schulze 1933a: 665, which is semantically and formally quite possible. The relations between the Skt. words, however, are debated.

ὄϊς [m., f.] 'sheep' (Il.). ⊲IE $h_3$eui- 'sheep'⊳ •VAR Hom. gen. ὄϊος, nom.pl. ὄϊες, etc.; Att. οἶς, gen. οἰός (also Hom.), nom.pl. οἶες; Arg. ὄϝις. Details on the inflexion in Schwyzer: 573, Chantraine 1942: 219. In prose, it was ousted by πρόβατον.
•COMP Rare compounds and derivatives: οἰο-πόλος 'herding sheep' (h. Merc., Pi.), -νόμος 'id.' (Delphi IV^{a}, AP, APl.). Diminutive ὀΐδιον (Theognost.); οἴεος 'of sheep' (Hdt., Cos), ὀέα· μηλωτή 'sheepskin'; οἰίας (dialectal for -έας)· τῶν προβάτων τὰ σκεπαστήρια δέρματα 'the covering skins of sheep' (H.); also οἶαι· διφθέραι, μηλωταί 'hides, sheepskins'; ὄα· μηλωτή (H.). Perhaps with lengthened grade (?) ᾦα [f.] 'fleece of sheep' (com., Att. inscr. IV^{a}, Poll., H.). ►οἰσπώτη and ►οἰσύπη are probably unrelated.

•ETYM Old name of the sheep, found in nearly all IE languages, e.g. Skt. ávi-, HLuw. ḫawi-, Lat. ovis, Go. awistr 'sheepfold', Lith. avìs, all from IE $h_3$éui- [m., f.]. The accusative ὄϊν matches Skt. ávim, while the gen. ὄϊος equals Skt. ávyaḥ. Additionally, Gr. οἴεος corresponds to Skt. ávy-aya- (usually -áya-), but perhaps only as a parallel innovation (see recently Schmitt 1997).
We also find Lyc. χawa-, with transition to the a-declension (Melchert 1993: 66). This Lycian χ- can point to h_3e-, contrary to what has often been assumed (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. ḫāu̯i-). The reconstruction h_3e- is also backed by the absence of ā in Skt. (no reflex of Brugmann's Law).

οἶσος [m.] kind of wicker, 'chasteberry' (Thphr., Ael. Dion.). ⊲IE uoh₁i-tu-* 'wind, bend', or PG?(S)⊳ •VAR Also -ός.
•COMP οἰσό-καρπον [n.] 'fruit of the οἶσος' (sch., Eust.), for the ntr. gender cf. on ►βούτυρον.
•DER οἶσον = σχοινίον 'cord, thread' (H.); οἶσαξ, -ακος [f.] kind of willow (Gp.); on the formation see Strömberg 1940: 78. Further οἰσύ-α, -η [f.] 'λύγος, willow' (Poll.), οἰσύα ἀγρία = ἑλξίνη (Ps.-Dsc.), with οἰσυουργός [m.] 'basket-maker' (Eup.), τὰ οἴσυα [n.pl.] 'basket market' (Lycurg.), οἰσύ-ινος 'made of οἰσύα' (ε 256, Th.).
•ETYM The pre-forms u̯oi-tu̯-o-* and u̯oi-tu-ā* have been assumed, which would both be enlargements of uoHi-tu-, derived from the IE verbal root ueh₁i- 'to wind, twist' with a suffix -tu-* and an old o-grade. See on ►ἰτέα, ►ἴτυς. An enlargement is found in OCS větvь [f.] 'branch' < uoHi-tu-i-*. However, the form in -ύα does not look Indo-European; moreover, οἶσαξ has a Pre-Greek suffix. Is the word Pre-Greek?

οἰσοφάγος [m.] 'esophagus, upper opening of the stomach' (medic., Arist., Thphr.). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM A learned formation, created by a physician. There are hardly any good attestations of this purely scientific expression. Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 174 explains it as 'the one that carries what is eaten', from ►οἴσειν and the common second member -φάγος. The formally much easier explanation as "οἶσος-eater" (Strömberg 1944: 61ff.) cannot be defended. A similar Semitic designation of the esophagus is Akk. šērittu "that which carries down"; cf. Mayrhofer BiOrbis. 18: 274[19].

οἴσπη ⇒οἰσύπη.

οἰσπώτη [f.] 'greasy dirt of unshorn sheep's wool, especially on the buttocks', also 'sheep droppings' (Cratin., Ar., D.C., Poll.). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •VAR -ωτή (Hdn. Gr. 1, 343, H.), like μηλ-, κηρ-ωτή, etc. Also οἴσπη (v.l. Hdt. 4, 187 [cf. οἰσύπη], Gal.), οἴσπαι· προβάτων κόπρος, ῥύπος 'sheep droppings, filth' (H.).
•ETYM Analyzed as *ὀϝι-σπωτη, but with an unclear second member. Connection with the stem syllable of ►σπατίλη 'ordure, diarrhoea', etc. is uncertain, as the semantic function of σπα(τ)- is in need of explanation. The word is rather Pre-Greek; cf. the suffix -ωτ- in ἀσκαλαβώτης (s.v. ►ἀσκάλαβος). See Fur.: 188, 384, and further on ►οἰσύπη.

ὀϊστός [m., f.] 'arrow' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳

•VAR οἰστός (Att.).
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ὀϊστο-δέγμων 'holding arrows' (A. [lyr.]).
•DER ὀϊστεύω [v.] 'to shoot arrows' (Hom., Nonn., AP), also with δι-, ἀπ-; thence ὀϊστευ-τήρ (Nonn., AP), -τής (Call.) 'archer', -μα [n.] 'shot of an arrow' (Plu.).
•ETYM No convincing etymology. The traditional analysis (see Frisk) as a prefixed verbal adjective ὀ-ϊσ-τός, related to Skt. iṣyati 'to bring in quick movement' via a proper meaning "rushing on, flying towards" (or "urged on, sent off"), is extremely improbable. DELG correctly supposes this word to be of Pre-Greek origin (not in Fur.).

οἶστρος [m.] 'gadfly, Tabanus bovinus' (χ 300, A., Arist.), also of a water-insect and a bird (Arist., perhaps Sylvia trochilus), 'sting' (S., E.), 'rage, madness, fierce desire' (Hdt., Pl., S., E.). ◂IE *h_3eis- 'set in movement, irritate'▸ •COMP οἰστρο-πλήξ, -γος 'stung by a gadfly, driven by rage' (trag., of Io, also of the Bacchantes).
•DER οἰστρ-ώδης 'enraged' (Pl., Epicur.), -ήεις 'full of stings, stinging, stung' (Opp., Nonn.), -ηδόν 'with rage' (Opp.); οἰστρ-άω 'to rouse, rage, roar' (trag., Pl., Arist.), also -έω (Theoc., Luc., Jul.), aor. -ῆσαι, also with ἀν-, ἐξ-, παρ-, δι-. Thence οἴστρ-ημα [n.] 'sting' (S., AP), (παρ-)οἴστρ-ησις [f.] 'rage, passion' (Corp. Herm., PMag. Par.); back-formation πάροιστρος 'enraged, mad' (Simp.).
•ETYM Agreeing in its barytonesis with κέστρος, χύτρος, etc., οἶστρος must originally be an instrument noun or an agent noun (which amounts to the same thing). If it is cognate with οἶμα < *οἶσμα, and if (like the latter) it is derived from a verb 'to set in vehement movement, urge, irritate', the word originally meant "urger, irritator". The actual meanings 'gadfly', 'sting', 'anger' can be explained from this starting point. An identical formation, except for the gender, is Lith. aistrà [f.] 'vehement passion'; for further cognates, see on ▸οἶμα. See also Gil Fernández 1959: 157. Fick KZ 43 (1909-1910): 136 compared ἰστυάζει· ὀργίζεται 'rages' (H.) as a parallel zero grade τυ-derivation His-tú-, but Latte judges the gloss to be corrupt.

οἰσύα, -η ⇒οἶσος.

οἰσύπη [f.] 'the greasy extract of sheep's wool' (Hdt. 4, 187, Hp.); cf. Dsc. 2, 74 with an extensive description of the preparation; acc. to H. it is ὁ τῆς οἰὸς ῥύπος 'sheep's ordure'. ◂PG▸ •VAR οἴσυπος [m.] (Dsc. 2, 74, Plin., H.); οἶσπαι· προβάτων κόπρος, ῥύπος 'sheep's dung, ordure' (H.); οἴσπη (v.l. Hdt. 4, 187, Gal., Suid.).
•DER οἰσυπ-ίς [f.] 'greasy flock of wool' (Hp.), -ηρός (Ar.), -όεις, -ώδης (Hp.) 'greasy' (of wool); -ον = λάδανον (Plin.); οἰσύπειον· ἔριον ῥυπαρὸν προβάτων 'greasy wool of sheep' (H.).
•ETYM Explained as *ὀϝι-σύπη, like the synonym ▸οἰσπώτη, with an unclear second member. There is clear evidence for the variant οἴσπη, but it is difficult to decide whether the form with υ or the form without it is secondary; cf. Fur.: 188[22] on θαλ(υ)π-. In any case, the word is most probably Pre-Greek (the meaning also speaks for this). One might think of a labialized s, thus *ois^wp-.

οἴσω, -ομαι [v.] 'I will bear, bring' (Il.). ◂IE *h_3eit-s- 'fetch'▸ •VAR Dor. οἰσῶ, -εῖται (Ar., Theoc., Archim.), pass. οἰσθήσομαι (E., D., Arist.), aor. inf. οἶσαι (Ph. 1, 116), ἀν-οῖσαι (Hdt. 1, 157; -ῶσαι codd.). Subj. ἐπ-οίσΕ (Arc.), οἴσωμεν· κομίσωμεν 'transport' (H.); verbal adj. οἰστός 'bearable' (Th.), mostly with prefix, e.g. δύσ-οιστος 'hard to bear' (Hp., trag.), ἀν-ύπ-οιστος 'unbearable' (Timae., D. H.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀν-, ἀπ-, ἐπ-, συν-. As a first element perhaps in ▸οἰσοφάγος 'esophagus', perhaps also in Οἰσε-ζέα (Lesbian fieldname), cf. Schwyzer: 442 and 445.
•ETYM Except for a few isolated aorist forms (see above) and for οἰστός, οἴσω is limited to the future tense (on οἶσε, οἰσέμεν(αι), etc., see Schwyzer: 788 and Chantraine 1942: 417f.). It stands in suppletion to the durative present φέρειν and to the perfective aorist ἐνεγκεῖν. The Boeot. PN Ἀνεμ-οίτας, adduced by Bechtel 1917a: 8f., supposedly meaning 'who carries the wind'(?), cannot be taken as a proof for οἰ-, nor can the other names in -οίτης, -οιτος (Bechtel 1917b: 346).
Until Tichy Glotta 78 (2002), there was no etymology for οἴσω. Tichy connects it with Lat. ūtī 'to use' from PIt. oit-, and argues that the meaning may have developed from 'fetch (in one's own interest)' to 'use'. Greek οἰσ- < oiss- is explained as an s-present oit-s-*. Melchert 2007 proposes to compare CLuw. hizza(i)- 'to fetch' < *h_3eit-s-e/o- as well, which was previously translated as 'to bring', but rather means 'to fetch'.

οἰτόν ⇒ὕδνον.

οἶτος [m.] 'fate of men, (unfortunate) destiny' (Il., trag. [lyr.]). ◂IE *h_2oi-to- 'share'▸ •COMP As a second member in μεγάλ-οιτος 'burdened with a heavy fate, unhappy' (Theoc.) and in PNs like Ἐχ-οίτης (Athens; Bechtel 1917b: 345); as a first member in Οἰτό-λινος [m.] "linos of fate" (Sapph. 140b, from Pamphos).
•ETYM The derivation of οἶτος from the root of ἰέναι 'to go' as *h_1oi-to- is formally possible. An identical formation is supposed in the Celto-Germanic word for 'oath', OIr. óeth, Go. aiþs, OHG eid, if it originally denoted the walk to confirm an oath; cf. MoSw. edgång. As an alternative, consider Av. aēta- [m.] 'punishment, guilt', which was identified with οἶτος by Bartholomae IF 12 (1901): 139 under an original meaning 'part, share'. It cannot be separated from ▸αἶσα, ▸αἴτιος, etc., and may reflect an ablaut *h_2ei / *h_2oi. Thus, οἶτος may rather derive from *h_2oi-to-, originally 'what has been granted'; this is semantically much more convincing.

οἴφω [v.] 'futuo' (Thera, Gort., Plu. Pyrrh. 28). ◂IE *h_3ieb^h-, *h_3e-h_3ib^h- 'enter, copulate'▸ •VAR Uncertain -έω (Mimn.).
•COMP As a second member in φιλ-οίφᾱς [m.] (Theoc. 4, 62), Att. PN Κόρ-οιφος, also Κόρ-οιβος, for which Kretschmer Glotta 14 (1925): 199 suggested Phrygian origin.
•DER οἰφ-όλης [m.] 'fututor' (Naxos; H.), -όλις [f.] (H.).
•ETYM The synonym Skt. yábhati, OCS jebǫ, Ru. jebú, can hardly be separated from οἴφω. Moreover, ToB yäp- 'to enter' formally identical. It is supposed that Tocharian preserves the original meaning, and that the other languages initially started to use the word as a euphemism, perhaps after the departure of the Tocharians. The comparison with ► ζόφος and ► Ζέφυρος is doubtful; see s.vv. LIV² reconstructs a prefix ὀ- added to a root *ieb^h- to account for the Greek form, but it is better to assume a reduplicated present *h_3e-h_3ib^h-, as suggested by Cheung 2007: 175, since the prefix mentioned hardly occurs in Greek (see on ► ὀ- 2).

οἰχμή · δούλη, οἵ δε οἰχμᾶν (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

οἴχομαι [v.] 'to go (away), leave, disappear, die' (Il.), mostly used in a situation with an accompanying or preceding action, which is expressed by a pres. ptc.: 'to be gone away, be vanished'. ◂?▸
•VAR Fut. οἰχήσομαι (Att.), perf. ᾤχωκα, οἴ- (K 252), ᾤχηκα (K 252 v.l., Hell.), med. ᾤχημαι, οἴ- (Ion.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀπ-, ἐπ-, παρ-, δι-, μετ-.
•DER οἰχνέω [v.] 'to go, come, walk, approach', also with ἐξ-, εἰσ-, etc. (Hom., Pi., trag.), also = οἴχομαι (S.).
•ETYM The pair οἴχομαι : οἰχνέω may be compared with ὑπ-ίσχομαι : ὑπ-ισχνέομαι. The perfect οἴχωκα, which is attested early, probably arose by analogy with some semantically close example (Frisk suggests μέμβλωκα).
The main problem with οἴχομαι is its curious meaning, which seems not to have been proper to οἰχνέω, which is durative. It is suggested in LIV² s.v. *h_3eig^h- that οἴχομαι continues an old perfect.
An acceptable connection is provided by the nasal present Arm. ijanem 'to come down' (beside Gr. οἰχνέω, although both may be innovations), 3sg. aor. ēǰ < oig^h-(i)e-t*. On the Armenian verb, see Klingenschmitt 1982: 208f. Furthermore, ToB yku 'gone' [ppp.] is considered to be related; see Adams 1999: 61. A few isolated nouns are also adduced: OIr. óegi 'guest' < oig^h-ēt-; Lith. eigà [f.] 'course', but the latter is rather directly derived from h_1ei- 'go'. The analysis as an "extension" of the root h_1ei- 'go' is gratuitous. See ► ἴχνος.

οἰωνός [m.] 'bird of prey, observed by the soothsayer' (Il.), 'prognosticating bird, omen' (Il., also in prose). ◂IE? h_2eu-i- 'bird'▸ •VAR ὀϊωνός (Trypho; also Alcm. 60 B 6?).
•COMP As a first member in οἰωνο-πόλος [m.] 'interpreter of birds' (Il., Pi., A. [lyr.]); in D. H. = augur.
•DER οἰωνίζομαι [v.] 'to observe the prognosticating bird or the auspices, to deem an omen, tell fortunes' (X, D., Hell.), rarely with prefixes like μετ-, ἐξ-. Thence οἰωνιστής [m.] 'interpreter of birds, augur' (Il., Hes. Sc., D. H.), -ιστικός 'belonging to the bird-interpreter or to soothsaying' (Pl., Arist.), -ισμα [n.] 'omen' (E., LXX), -ισμός [m.] 'id.' (LXX, Plu.), -ιστήριον [n.] 'omen' (X. Ap. 12), probably after τεκμήριον; 'place for observing birds, augurale' (D. H.); οἰωνευτής = οἰωνιστής (pap.).
•ETYM Explanation debated. Because of the comparable formation in υἱωνός (: υἱύς, υἱός), it is probably best derived from a nominal basis. Therefore it is connected with the IE word for 'bird' seen in Lat. avis, Skt. viḥ, etc. (also reflected in Gr. ► αἰετός).

The initial ὀ- has been explained as a case of vowel assimilation since Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 374, but this is unnecessary: one may assume an o-grade, as does Beekes Sprache 18 (1972): 21, who departs from a nominative h_2ou-i-ōn that was subsequently thematicized. By others, it has been combined with ► οἶμα, ► οἶστρος, ► ὀιστός and connected with the root Heis- 'to put in vehement motion', but this is doubtful. The connection with ᾠόν 'egg' by Schmeja IF 68 (1963): 35f. was defended by Peters 1980a: 292-305.

ὄκα, ὄκκα ⇒ὅτε.

ὀκέλλω ⇒κέλλω.

ὀκίστια [n.pl.] 'harrow' (SEG 13, 13, 120, Athens). ◂IE h_2ok- 'sharp'▸ •ETYM Cf. Lat. occa and Gr. ► ὀξίνα.

ὄκκαβος [?] 'bracelet', = κρίκος (EM 383, 21), = ψέλια (H.). ◂PG?▸ •VAR Lat. inscr. occabus.
•ETYM Unknown. With a suffix -β- (Chantraine 1933: 262); Pre-Greek?

ὀκιμβάζω ⇒σκιμβός.

ὀκκῦλαι · τὸ ὀκλάσαι καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν πτερ<ν>ῶν καθίζεσθαι 'to prostrate, sit down on one's heels' (H.). ⇒ὀκλάζω.

ὀκλάζω [v.] 'to prostrate, crouch down, squat', metaph. 'to sink, abate', trans. 'to abate' (N 281, Hld.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. ὀκλάσαι (S.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. μετ-, ὑπ-.
•DER ὄκλα-σις [f.] 'crouching' (Hp., Luc.), -σμα [n.] name of a Persian dance (Ar. Fr. 344b); also ὀκλα-δίας [m.] 'camp stool' (Att. inscr., Ar.), -δία = ὄκλασις (Suid.), -δόν (A. R., Nonn.), -δις (Hdn. Gr.), -διστί (Babr.) [adv.] 'crouchingly, squattingly, prostratingly'; ὀκλάξ [adv.] 'id.' (Hp., Pherecr.), after γνύξ, πύξ, etc.; Ὄκλασος [m.] PN (sch.), like Δάμασος, etc.
•ETYM A noun like *ὄκλος, *ὀκλή, or *ὀκλάς, but also a verb *ὀκλάω (cf. δαμάω : δαμάζω), may have served as a basis of ὀκλάζω. Etymology unknown. Note the glosses κλωκυδά· τὸ καθῆσθαι ἐπ' ἀμφοτέροις ποσίν 'sitting down on both feet', ὀκκῦλαι· τὸ ὀκλάσαι καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν πτερ<ν>ῶν καθίζεσθαι 'to prostrate, sit down on one's heels' (H.).

ὄκνος 1 [m.] 'hesitation, doubt, shyness' (Il.). ◂?▸
•COMP Also as a second member, e.g. ἄ-οκνος [adj.], -ως [adv.] 'without hesitation, determined' (IA, Hes.), with ἀοκν-ία [f.] 'determination' (Hp.).
•DER Adjective ὀκν-ηρός 'hesitant, doubtful, arousing doubt' (Pi., IA), whence -ηρία [f.] = ὄκνος (LXX, pap. VI^p), -ηρεύω [v.] 'to inspire doubt' (LXX); in the same mg. also ὀκν-ηλός (Theognost.), -ώδης (Dionys. Av.), -αλέος (Nonn.). Denominative ὀκνέω (-είω E 255 is metrically conditioned) [v.] 'to hesitate, tarry, scruple, recoil' (Il.), also with ἀπ-, κατ-, δι-; thence (ἀπ-)όκνησις [f.] 'doubt, reluctance' (Th., Plu.).

•ETYM Hackstein 2002: 232 suggests the possibility of dissimilation from *$h_2$onk-no- (to ὄγκος 'hook'), comparing Lat. cunctārī 'to hang, tarry'.

ὄκνος 2 [m.] name of a big bird, family of the heron, perhaps 'bittern' (Arist., Paus., Ael.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Identical with ► ὄκνος 1? The name clearly refers to the motionlessness of the bird by day.

ὀκορνός ⇒ἀκορνός.

ὄκρις [m.] 'top, protruding point, corner' (Hp.). ⊲IE *$h_2$ok̂-ri- 'top, protruding'⊳ •COMP As a first member in ὀκρί-βας, -αντος [m.], properly "walking on the top", 'elevated place, stage, stand' (Pl.). Fur.: 217[n] takes this word as Pre-Greek, but without sufficient reason.
•DER ὀκρι-όεις 'sharp-edged, spiky' (Hom., A., Hell. poet.); ὀκρίς [f.] 'spiky', epithet of φάραγξ (A. Pr. 1016); ὀκρι-άομαι [v.] in ὀκριόωντο 'they incited themselves, they were fierce' (σ 33), ὠκριωμένος (Lyc. 545); ὀκρι-άζω [v.] 'to be brusque, be bitter' (S. Fr. 1075).
•ETYM Identical with Lat. ocris [m.] 'stony mountain', U ukar, gen. ocrer 'arx, mons', MIr. och(a)ir 'edge, border', Skt. áśri- [f.] 'corner, sharp edge'; an o-grade with suffixal -ri- from *$h_2$ek̂- in ► ἄκρος, etc.

ὀκρυόεις [adj.] 'morbid, spooky, ghastly' (Z 344, I 64, A. R., AP). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM Arose from κρυόεις by false separation in the genitives ἐπιδημίοο κρυόεντος (I 64) and κακομηχάνοο κρυοέσσης (Z 344); see Leumann 1950: 49f. The phonetically close ὀκριόεις may have been an influence (Ruijgh 1957: 103).

ὀκτάδιον [n.] · καλάθιον πρός ὀρνιθάρια 'basket for small birds' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

ὄκταλλος ⇒ὀφθαλμός.

ὀκτώ [num.] 'eight' (Hom.). ⊲IE *$h_3$ek̂teh$_3$ 'eight'⊳ •VAR Boeot. Lesb. ὀκτό like δύο, Heracl. hοκτώ after ἕξ, ἑπτά, El. ὀπτώ after ἑπτά.
•COMP As a first element, we usually find ὀκτα- (after ἑπτα-, ἑξα-, etc.) in ὀκτακόσιοι 'eighthundred' and in many bahuvrīhis like ὀκτά-μηνος 'eight months old, eight monthly' (Hp., X., Arist.). Besides, there is ὀκτω- in ὀκτω-καίδεκα, ὀκτω-δάκτυλος 'with a breadth of eight fingers' (Hp., Ar.), etc.
•DER Further ὀγδοή-κοντα, which (like ἑβδομή-κοντα) may have started from the basic word, see ► ὄγδοος. A cross with ὀκτώ gave rise to ὀγδώ-κοντα (B 568 = 652). After ὀγδοήκοντα the late ὀγδοάς [f.] 'group of eight' (Plu.) for ὀκτάς [f.] (Arist.). Further derivatives: ὀκτά-κι(ς), -κιν 'eight times' (Hdt.), ὀκτα-σσός 'eightfold' (pap. III[p]), after δισσός, etc., -χῶς 'in eight ways' (EM, comm. Arist.).
•ETYM Gr. ὀκτώ, Lat. octō, Skt. aṣṭā́(u), Go. ahtau, Lith. aštuoni, and other cognate forms go back to IE *$h_3$ek̂teh$_3$(u). Arm. ut' was reshaped after the word for 'seven', like El. ὀπτω. The IE word for 'eight' was clearly an old dual, but further analysis is quite uncertain.

ὀκωχή [f.] 'arrest, custody' (EM). ⊲GR, IE *segʰ- 'hold'⊳ •DER ὀκώχ-ιμος 'answerable, liable' (Cyrene IV[a]; after ἀγώγιμος?), ὀκωχεύειν· ἔχειν, συνέχειν 'to hold (together)' (H., also S. Fr. 327). In literary sources (and perhaps originally) only with ἀν-, δι-, κατ-, etc. (from ἀν-έχω, etc.).
•ETYM Reduplicated formation from ►ἔχω; see also ►ἀνοκωχή and ►συνοκωχότε.

ὀλαγμεύειν, ὀλαιμ- ⇒οὐλαί.

ὀλαί [f.pl.] 'barley corn used at a sacrifice'. ⇒οὐλαί.

ὀλαιτοί [m.pl.] · σπερμολόγοι 'gossip'. καὶ ὀλατοί (H.). ⊲PG⊳ •VAR Also ὄλαιτος (Orus apud EM 622, 9).
•ETYM Clearly a Pre-Greek word on account of the variation αι/ α. Fur.: 338 also connects λειτόν· βλάσφημον 'slanderous' (H.), which is not immediately evident.

ὀλβάχιον ⇒οὐλαί.

ὄλβος [m.] 'prosperity, blessed state, wealth, happiness' (Il.). ⊲PG⊳ •COMP ὀλβο-δότης, Dor. -δότας [m.], -δότειρα [f.] 'giver of wealth' (E. [lyr.], Hell.) ἄν-ολβος 'without prosperity, unhappy' (Orac. apud Hdt. 1, 85, trag.).
•DER 1. ὄλβιος 'blessed, well-to-do, happy' (Il.), voc. ὀλβιό-δαιμον (Γ 182), superl. ὀλβιστος (Hell.); 2. ὀλβήεις 'id.' (Man.); 3. ὀλβ-ία [f.] = ὄλβος (Phot.); 4. ὀλβίζω [v.] 'to bless (oneself)' (trag.), ἐπ- (Nonn.), with ὀλβιστήρ, -ῆρος 'blesser' (late).
•ETYM Various older hypotheses are found in Frisk s.v. Fur.: 155 connects ὄλπα· χόνδρου τις ἕψησις. ἔδεσμά τι 'cooking of groats, kind of food'. ἢ ὄλβος (H.); if the gloss is cognate, it must be Pre-Greek, which is certainly a good possibility.

ὄλεθρος [m.] 'destruction'. ⇒ὄλλυμι.

ὀλέκρανον [n.] 'point of the elbow'. ⇒ὠλέκρανον.

ὀλιβρόν [adj.] · ὀλισθηρόν, λεῖον, ἐπισφαλές 'slippery, smooth, unstable' (H.), beside ὠλίβραξαν· ὤλισθον 'slipperiness' and, without ρ, ὀλιβάξαι· ὀλισθεῖν 'to slide' (H.). ⊲IE? *$h_3$lib-ro- 'slippery, smooth'⊳ •ETYM May be cognate with OE slipor, OHG sleffar 'slippery, smooth' (with MoNw. slipra 'glide'), from *(s)lib-ro-. Thence the primary verb OHG slīfan, MLG slīpen 'to slide', etc. Further cognates in Pok. 663 and 960. See also ► λίμβος and ►ὀλισθάνω. The problem of *s- beside prothetic vowel has not been solved; see Beekes 1969: 82-87. Perhaps Germanic added the s- after the loss of the initial laryngeal.

ὀλιγηπελέων [adj., ptc.] 'weak, powerless' (O 24 and 245, ε 457), -έουσα (τ 356). ⊲IE? *$h_2$pel- 'strength'⊳ •DER Metrically enlarged from ὀλιγ-ηπελής (AP, Opp.). Thence ὀλιγηπελ-ίη [f.] 'weakness, impotence' (ε 468); likewise εὐηπελ-ίη [f.] 'strength, thriving' (Call.), εὐηπελής (H.), opposite κακηπελ-ίη, -έων (Nic.); also ἀνηπελίη· ἀσθένεια 'weakness' (H.) and νηπελέω = ἀδυνατέω (Hp.).
•ETYM The form (ὀλιγ)-ηπελής is derived from a neuter *ἄπελος 'strength' (with compositional lengthening), and is compared with the Germanic group of ON afl, OE afol [n.] 'strength'; the El. PN Τευτί-απλος (possibly Illyr.), Illyr. PN Mag- aplinus, etc. also belong here. However, since the Germanic words must be connected with Lat. ops, opus, etc. < $h_3$ep-s-, the Gr. ἀ- would be unclear in this comparison. We have to reconstruct $h_2$pel- (νηπελ-έω < n̥-$h_2$pel-), and the connection with Lat. ops may have to be abandoned. The denominative ἀν-απελάζω in ἀναπελάσας· ἀναρρωσθείς 'recuperated' (H.) belongs here as well. Cf. also on ► νήπιος.

ὄλιγγος [?] a kind of locust (Phot., Suid.). ◄PG?(V)►
•VAR ὀλίγιοι· εἶδος ἀκρίδων 'id.', τινές ῥιζίον, ὅμοιον βολβῷ 'a small root, like a bulb' (H.); thus Latte, but the ms. has (unaccented) ολιγιοι. DELG thinks that the correct form should be ὄλιγγοι.
•ETYM Connection with λιγύς does not help (Frisk, DELG). In view of the prenasalization, the word may be Pre-Greek (not in Fur.). Cf. Gil Fernández 1959: 95. See ► ὀλίγος.

ὀλίγος [adj.] 'small, inferior' (Il.), 'little, few' (post-Hom.). ◄IE? $h_3$lig- 'little'► •COMP Often as a first member, e.g. ὀλιγ-αρχ-ία [f.] 'rule of the few, oligarchy' (IA; after μοναρχία, see ► μόνος) together with ὀλιγαρχ-έω, -ικός (Att.); -ης [m.] (D. H.) On ► ὀλιγηπελέων, see s.v., on ὀλιγο-δρανέων see ► δράω, on ὀλίγ-ωρος see ► ὥρα.
•DER Grades of comparison: ὀλίγ-ιστος (Il.), ὀλίζων (Il.), ὀλείζων (Att. inscr.; after μείζων); ὀλιγότης, -ητος [f.] 'small number' (Pl., Arist.), ὀλιγόομαι, -όω 'to become small or faint-hearted, to diminish' (LXX); ὀλιγ-άκις 'seldom' (Ion.), -αχόθεν 'from few places' (Hdt., Arist.), -αχοῦ 'in few places' (Pl., Arist.). Perhaps also ὀλίγιοι· εἶδος ἀκρίδων. τινές ῥιζίον, ὅμοιον βολβῷ (H.), see ► ὄλιγγος.
•ETYM For ► ὄλιγγος, connection with λιγύς does not help - perhaps the word is Pre-Greek? The adjective ὀλίγος may be identical with Arm. ałk'at 'poor' < oliko-* < $h_3$ligo-*. However, Alb. lig 'angry, meager' could rather belong to ► λοιγός 'ruin', which should not be connected with ὀλίγος. Less clear are OIr. líach 'miserable, unhappy' and OPr. licuts 'small' (which fits well semantically), which both derive from a root in -k-.

ὄλινοι [m.] · κριθῆς δεσμοί. καὶ λῖνος παρὰ Κυπρίοις 'sheaves of barley, also λ. (Cypr.)' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM Fur.: 375 gives "λῖνος (usually λίνον)".

ὀλινύω ⇒ἐλινύω.

ὄλισβος [m.] 'penis coriaceus', = 'of leather' (com., Herod.). ◄PG(S)► •ETYM Obscene word with a suffix -β-. Chantraine (DELG) and others suggested that it was transformed from ὄλισθος after other familiar and vulgar words. However, as the suffix shows, the word is rather Pre-Greek.

ὀλισθάνω [v.] 'to slide, slip, glide' (Att.). ◄IE $h_3$lid^h-, $h_3$slid^h- 'glide'► •VAR -αίνω (Arist., Hell.), aor. ὀλισθ-εῖν (Il.), -ῆσαι (Hp., Hell.), -ῆναι (Nic.), 2sg. ὤλισθας (epigr. I^a-I^p), fut. ὀλισθήσω (Hell.), perf. ὠλίσθηκα (Hp.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀπ-, δι-, ἐξ-, κατ-, ὑπ-.

•DER 1. Verbal nouns: ὀλίσθ-ημα [n.] 'fall, sprain' (Hp., Pl.), -ησις (also ἀπ-, κατ-, περι-) [f.] 'slipping, spraining' (medic., Plu.); back-formation ὄλισθος [m.] 'lubricity' (Hp., Hell.), also the name of a slippery fish (Opp.). 2. Verbal adjectives: ὀλισθ-ηρός 'slippery' (Pi., IA), -ήεις 'id.' (AP), -ανωτέρα 'id.' [nom.sg.f.] (Gal.), from *ὀλισθανος, but which accentuation? Further ὀλισθός 'id.' (Hdn. Gr. 1, 147), probably from ὄλισθος with shift of accent, -ητικός 'making slippery' (Hp.). On its own stands ὀλισθράζω = ὀλισθάνω (Epich., Hp. apud Gal. 19, 126) as if from *ὄλισθρος, cf. ὀλιβ(ρ)άξαι from ► ὀλιβρός.
•ETYM All forms derive from the thematic root aorist ὀλισθεῖν. A present in -άνω (later -αίνω) arose from this, which recalls -δαρθεῖν : δαρθάνω, αἰσθέσθαι : αἰσθάνομαι, and may (like these two) contain an enlarging element IE -d^h-, with Gr. -σθ- coming from -d^h-d^h-. An alternative is to assume metathesis $h_3$slid^h-* > $h_3$lisd^h-*; see Mayrhofer EWAia: II, 787. This pre-form may be compared with a verb for 'glide, slide' in Germanic and Baltic: e.g. OE slīdan (MoE slide), MHG slīten, Lith. slýsti, 1sg.pret. slýdau (with secondary y beside slidùs 'smooth, slippery'). There are also some isolated nouns in Slavic and Celtic: OCS slědъ, Ru. sled [m.] 'trace' < IE sloid^h-o-*, MoIr. slaod 'gliding mass'. Skt. srédhati 'to stumble, make a mistake' vel sim. may also belong here. See also ► λοῖσθος 1.

ὁλκή [f.] 'dragging, drawing, towing, inhalation, draught, drink, attraction, drawing down of the scales = weight' (IA). ◄IE selk-* 'draw'► •VAR ὁλκός [m.] "drawer", 'machine for hauling ships on land, strap' (Hdt., Th., S., E.), also 'track, furrow, ditch; orbit, coil' (E., Ar., Hell.), also the name of a spider (Dsc.); adjective ὁλκός 'drawing to oneself, attracting' (Pl., Arist.), 'dragging on, leaning, tarrying' (Ph., Hld.).
•DER From ὁλκή: 1. ὁλκάς, -άδος [f.] 'towed ship, trading vessel' (Pi., IA) with ὁλκαδι-κός (Arist.); 2. ὁλκεῖον (-ίον) [n.] 'large bowl or basin, out of which water is drawn' (com. and inscr. since IV^a), after ἀγγεῖον, with ὁλκίδιον (pap. III^p); 3. ὁλκεῖς· οἳ τὰ ἀμφίβληστρα ἐπισπῶνται 'who draw the fishing nets towards themselves' (H.); 4. ὁλκαῖος 'ptng. to drawing, making a twist' (Nic., Lyc.), -αῖον [n.] 'stern(post)' (A. R.), -αία, -αίη [f.] 'tail' (Nic., A. R.); 5. ὅλκ-ιμος 'drawable, flexible, viscous' (medic., Plu.), 'useful for drawing' (Paul. Aeg.), perhaps after στάσιμος; 6. -ήεις 'weighty' (Nic.); 7. -άζω 'to draw' (pap., H.).
•ETYM Verbal nouns from ἕλκω, built according to regular patterns. Lat. sulcus [m.] 'furrow' may be an old formal correspondence to ὁλκός, but it may also be a zero grade; cf. OE sulh [f.] 'plough, furrow' < IE slk-*. Further details s.v. ► ἕλκω.

ὄλλιξ, -ικος [f.] 'wooden cup for drinking' (Pamph. apud Ath. 11, 494f.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

ὄλλυμι, -μαι [v.] 'to ruin, destroy, lose', intr. med. 'to be ruined, be lost' (Il.). ◄IE $h_3$elh_1-* 'destroy'► •VAR Also -ύω, -ύομαι (Archil.), ὀλέκω, -ομαι (Il.); aor. ὀλέσαι, ὀλέσθαι (Il.), pass. ὀλεσθῆναι (LXX), fut. ὀλέσ(σ)ω (epic), ὀλέω (Ion.), ὀλῶ (Att.), ὀλέομαι, ὀλοῦμαι (Il.), perf. ὀλώλεκα (Att.), intr. ὄλωλα (Il.).

•COMP Very often with prefix, especially ἀπ- (thus exclusively in Att. prose), with ἐξαπ-, συναπ-, προσαπ-, etc.; also with δι-, ἐξ-, etc. As a simplex only epic.
•DER 1. ὄλεθρος [m.] 'destruction, ruin, loss, death' (Il.) with ὀλέθρ-ιος 'disastrous' (Il.), -ιάω 'to be on the verge of death' (Archig.), after other verbs of disease in -ιάω; (ἐξ-)ὀλεθρ-εύω, assimilated (ἐξ-)ὀλοθρ-εύω 'to destroy' (LXX), together with -ευσις, -ευμα, -εία (beside -ία), -ευτής; MoGr. ξολοθρεύω. 2. ἀπόλε-σις [f.] 'loss' (Hippod. apud Stob.); as a first member e.g. in ὀλεσ-ήνωρ 'destroying men' (Thgn. [?], Nonn.), ὠλεσί-καρπος 'losing its fruit' (κ 510, etc.; ὠ- metri causa). 3. ὀλε-τήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'destroyer, murderer' (Σ 114, etc.), -τειρα [f.] (Batr.), ἀνδρ-ολέτειρα (Hes., A.), ὀλέ-της [m.] (Epigr. Gr.), ἀνδρ-ολέτης (poet. inscr.), ὄλετις [f.] (AP), παιδ-ολέτωρ, -ορος [m., f.] 'child-killer' (A. [lyr.]). On the PN Ὀλετᾶς (Halicarn., etc.; Carian?) see O. Masson Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 10 (1975): 163f.
•ETYM The disyllabic forms ὄλεθρος, ὀλέσαι, etc. at first sight point to a root *h_3elh_1- (the commonly accepted reconstruction). The present ὄλλυμι derives from *ὄλνυμι; for the pattern, compare στορέσαι: στόρνυμι. However, in view of the metathesis which regularly occurs in this type, we may also consider a root *h_1elh_3-, and in this case, the Greek present is certainly recent. If athematic, ὀλέσθαι also reflects the root-final laryngeal, while ὀλόμην, etc. are thematicized forms. For the enlargement in ὀλέκω, cf. ἐρύκω, etc. Within Greek, ►ὀλοός 'pernicious, fatal' is related as well. An obvious cognate of ὄλλυμι is Lat. -oleō (LIV² s.v. *h_3elh_1-) as found in dēleō and ab-oleō, which represents an iterative formation *-h_3olh_1-eie/o-. Since Puhvel HED, ḫallanna-[i] 'to trample down, flatten (fields and plants)' is also compared, which may in principle derive from older *$h_{2/3}elH$- (Kloekhorst 2008: 271), and would be in agreement with the reconstruction *h_3elh_1- assumed for Greek and Latin. Hackstein 1995: 248ff. adduces ToB alāṣṣäṃ 'is exhausted'. See recently Neri 2007 on the thesis that the root *h_3elh_1- is also contained in verbs for 'fall', like Lith. pùlti, 3pres. púola, and OHG fallan and cognates. We may note that the reconstruction *h_1elh_3-, tentatively suggested above for the Greek forms, is possible for Latin (if we assume that the verbal suffix *-eie/o- was restored), but not for Hittite. See ►ὀλοός.

ὄλμος [m.] 'mortar', metaph. of mortar-like, i.e. hollowed objects, e.g. 'mouthpiece of a flute, drinking cup, tripod of the Pythia' (Λ 147). ⊲IE *uel- 'turn'⊳ •VAR Psilotic ὄλμος.
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. ὀλμο-ποιός [m.] 'manufacturer of mortars' (Arist.), ὑφ-όλμ-ιον [n.] 'stand of an ὄλμος' (com., Poll.).
•DER Diminutive ὀλμίον [n.] (pap.), also ὀλμίσκος [m.] 'socket of a door hinge, of a tooth' (pap., S. E., Ruf., Poll.); ὀλμειός [m.] = ὄλμος (sch. Ar. V. 238), after στελε(ι)ός, etc.
•ETYM From uol-mo-, originally 'roll, cylinder', after the cylinder-like form of the mortar made of a hollowed tree (cf. Palmer Eranos 44 (1946): 54f.). Further related to ►εἰλέω 'to roll, turn'.

ὀλόκληρος 'entire'. ⇒κλῆρος.

ὀλοκόττινος [m.] name of a gold coin, Lat. solidus (pap. IV-VI[p]). ⊲LW Lat.⊳
•VAR Also -ον [n.]. and ὀλοκότιον (BGU 1082).

•ETYM From ►ὅλος and Lat. (aurum) coctum = ὁλό-χρυσος 'consisting entirely of pure gold' (with ct borrowed as ττ); see Frisk.

ὀλολύζω [v.] 'to cry out loudly; to call, shout with joy, moan (to the gods)', especially of women (mostly poet.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •VAR -ύττω (Men.), aor. ὀλολ-ύξαι (Od.), fut. -ύξομαι (E.), -ύξω (LXX).
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἀν-, ἐπ-.
•DER ὀλολυγ-ή [f.] (Z 301) with -αία [f.] epithet of the νυκτερίς (epitaph), -μός [m.] (A.), -μα (E.) 'loud outcry', mostly of women invoking a god; -ών, -όνος [f.] 'quacking of a frog, etc.' (Arist., Ael., Plu.), also name of an unknown animal (bird), Lat. acredula (Eub., Theoc., Arat.), see also Thompson 1895 s.v.; ὀλολύκ-τρια [f.] 'professional wailing woman' (Pergam. II[a]), -τόλης [m.] 'crier' (An. Ox.), cf. e.g. σκωπτόλης, ὑλακτέω. Backformations ὄλολοι [m.pl.] = δεισι-δαίμονες (Theopomp. Com., Men.), ὄλολυς [m.] (acc. to Phot. = ὁ γυναικώδης καὶ κατάθεος καὶ βάκηλος 'woman-like, superstitious and womanish'; Anaxandr., Men.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic reduplicated formation with the same ending as in ἰύζω, βαΰζω, etc. Similar formations, genetically cognate or of identical structure, are Lat. ululāre 'to howl', ulula [f.] 'owl', Skt. ululí- 'crying loudly', úlūka- [m.] 'owl', Lith. ulula (bañgos) '(the waves) howl', all with u. Beside these stands ὀλολύζω, with dissimilation ο-υ or perhaps ablauting to ►ἐλελεῦ; cf. Pok. 306 and 1105. See ►ὀλοφύρομαι.

ὄλονθος [m.] 'wild fig'. ⇒ὄλυνθος.

ὀλοοίτροχος [m.] 'round piece of rock, boulder, large stone' (N 137, Democr. 162, Orac. apud Hdt. 5, 92 β). ⊲IE *uel- 'turn', *d^hreg^h- 'run'⊳ •VAR Accent uncertain. Also ὀλοίτροχος (Hdt. 8, 52, Theoc. 22, 49), ὀλοίτροχος (X. An. 4, 2, 3).
•ETYM Probably properly 'circle-runner', a technical term for a round stone, which rolls downhill or is taken forth by a vehement stream. The first element belongs to ►εἰλέω 'to roll, turn' and looks like a locative; acc. to Bechtel 1914 s.v., it derives from a noun *ϝολοϝο- 'whirl, rotation', closely connected with ►εἰλεός; this is rejected by Shipp 1967: 49f. (who follows the ancients in connecting ὀλοός 'pernicious', assuming that -οι- is metri causa).

ὀλοός [adj.] 'destructive, sinister, ominous' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_3olh_1-uo- 'destructive'⊳ •VAR Also ὀλοιός (A 342, X 5, h. Ven. 224), ὀλώιος (Hes. Th. 591, Nonn.), οὐλοός (A. R.), vocative ὀλέ (Alcm. 55), ὀλόεις (S. Tr. 521 [lyr.]).
•COMP As a first member in ὀλοό-φρων 'with destructive intent', of ὕδρος, λέων, σῦς κάπρος (Il.), also 'crafty', of Ἄτλας, Αἰήτης, Μίνως (Od.); also ὀλο-εργός, -εργής 'having a destructive effect' (Nic., Man.) with loss of ο (cf. Schwyzer: 252f.).
•ETYM Derived from the root of ὀλέσαι, ὄλεθρος, etc. (see ►ὄλλυμι), and traditionally explained as *ὀλο-ϝός < *ὀλε-ϝός with vowel assimilation (Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 332f., 337). All formal variations are secondary: ὀλοιός with οι spelling lengthened ο (Chantraine 1942: 168; cf. on ►οἰέτεας); οὐλοός with metrical lengthening and/or after οὖλος; ὀλώϊος after ὀλοφώϊος acc. to Frisk, but corrected to ὀλοίιος by Nauck; ὀλόεις with poetical enlargement (Schwyzer: 528 with lit.); voc. ὀλέ from *ὀλοέ (or *ὀλε[ϝ]έ?) with loss of vowel by hyphaeresis(?); cf. ὦ μέλε. Suggestions on the formation in Ruijgh Minos 20-22 (1987): 537 and García Ramón 2000: 69-71.

ὀλόπτω [v.] · λεπίζειν, τίλλειν, κολάπτειν 'to peel, pluck, peck' (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Aor. ὀλόψαι (Call., Euph., Nic.) 'to strip off, tear off, pluck'.
•ETYM Can hardly be related to ►λέπω, ►λοπός, etc., but rather a Pre-Greek variant of ►ὀλούφω.

ὅλος [adj.] 'complete, whole' (ρ 343 and ω 118, Att., Hdt.), οὖλε [voc.] 'salve' (ω 402). ⊲IE *sol(H)-uo- 'whole'⊳ •VAR οὖλος (epic Ion.).
•COMP Often as a first member, almost only Hell. and late (instead of παν-, see Leumann 1950: 105), e.g. ὁλό-κληρος (see ►κλῆρος), ὁλο-σχερής (see ►ἐπισχερώ), ►ὁλοκόττινος.
•DER ὁλό-της, -ητος [f.] 'wholeness' (Arist.), ὁλόομαι [v.] 'to be constituted as a whole' together with ὅλωσις [f.] (Dam.), οὐλέω in οὐλείοιεν· ἐν ὑγείᾳ φυλάσσοιεν 'may they keep watch in health' (H.). Besides ὁλοός = φρόνιμος καὶ ἀγαθός 'clever and able' (Suid., H.) with ὁλοεῖται· ὑγιαίνει 'is healthy' (H.). Uncertain Οὔλιος, Ionic epithet of Apollo, acc. to Str. 14, 635 and Suid. as a healing god; cf. ►οὖλος 3.
•ETYM Identical with Skt. sárva-, Av. hauruua- 'whole', from IE *sol(H)-uo-. For ὁλό-της, compare Av. hauruua-tāt- and Skt. sarvá-tāt(-i)- [f.] 'wholeness, etc.', which are probably independent innovations. Beside the Indo-Iranian forms, we find Lat. salvus 'sound, safe' (on the a-vocalism, see Schrijver 1991: 294-297 and Nussbaum 1997: 186ff.) and, with disyllabic stem, Osc. σαλαϝς 'id.', Pael. Salavatur 'Salvator', which points to an older ablauting u-stem slh_2-eu-. Perhaps the Greek and Indo-Iranian forms derive from a thematization of a neuter $solh_2$-u?
Other cognates are ToA salu 'complete', ToB solme 'id.' (with a different suffix), and Alb. i gjallë 'alive, lively'. A different suffix is found in OIr. slán 'healthy' < slh_2-no-, perhaps Lat. sollus < sol(H)-no- and possibly in Hitt. šalli- / šallai- 'big, main, chief, etc.' < $solh_2$-i- (Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). On the question whether the Saussure effect operated in this word (as advocated by Nussbaum 1997), see Pronk 2009.

ὀλός [m.] name for a bleary liquid, from the juice of squids (Hp., Phryn. PS, Phot.), for blood (AP 15, 25, 1. ὀλὸς λιβρὸς ἰρῶν). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM Unclear. A cross between θολός and ὀρός, as assumed by Frisk, is improbable. A Pre-Greek word is possible.

ὁλοσχερής [adj.] 'complete, whole, general' (Hell.).
•DER ὁλοσχέρεια [f.] (Phld. Rh., Str.). ⇒ἐπισχερώ.

ὀλουρίδας [?] · εἶδος κόγχης 'kind of mussel' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR ὀλουροισιν· ἄνω τῆς θύρας στρόφιγγες 'pivot above the door' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown.

ὀλούφω [v.] = ὀλόπτω (Phot.), ὀλουφεῖν (ὀλούφειν Schmidt)· τίλλειν 'to pluck hair', διολουφεῖν (-φειν Schm.)· διατίλλειν ἢ διασιλλαίνειν 'to mock' (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •ETYM The present etymon is evidently a variant of ►ὀλόπτω, with variations ο/ ου and φ/ πτ that point to a Pre-Greek word. The IE etymology proposed by Grošelj Živa Ant. 4 (1954): 173, which connected it with the IE word for 'bark, etc.' in Lat. liber [m.] 'bark, book' < luber, Ru. lub 'bark', can therefore be forgotten.

ὀλοφλυκτίς [f.] 'bladder, pustule with blood and water' (Hp.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Also -φυκτίς (H.); ὀλοφυγδών (Theoc. 9, 30) or -φύγγων (H.).
•ETYM From ὀλός and φλυκτίς; see ►φλύκταινα.

ὀλοφύρομαι [v.] 'to wail, lament, bewail, bemoan' (Il.). ⊲IE? $Holb^h$- 'cry, lament'⊳ •VAR Aeol. -ύρρω (Hdn. Gr.), aor. ὀλοφύρασθαι, ptc. pass. ὀλοφυρθείς (Th. 6, 78), fut. ὀλοφυροῦνται (Lys. 29, 4 codd.).
•COMP Often (especially in prose) with prefix, e.g. ἀν-, ἀπ-, κατ-.
•DER ὀλοφυρ-μός [m.] (Ar., Th., Pl.), -σις [f.] (Th., J.) 'lamentation, wail'; -τικός 'prone to wail' (Arist., J.). Further ὀλόφυς· οἶκτος, ἔλεος, θρῆνος 'lamentation' (H., Sapph. 21, 3), Aeolic for *ὀλοφῦς acc. to Schulze KZ 52 (1924): 311, ὀλοφυδνός 'lamenting, wailing' (Hom., AP).
•ETYM The ending is also seen in synonymous ὀδύρομαι, μύρομαι, κινύρομαι, μινύρομαι; ὀλοφύρομαι may have been formed after them, and it is unnecessary to suppose a prior adjective *ὀλοφυρός. The form ὀλοφυδνός may be an innovation as well, e.g. after ἀλαπαδνός, σμερδνός, etc. (cf. Chantraine 1933: 194) and γοεδνός (Frisk). Likewise, was *ὀλοφύς formed after ὀϊζύς?
In view of Arm. ołb, gen. -oy 'lament', Lith. ulbúoti 'to call, sing', one might asssume a pre-form *ὄλφος (= Arm. ołb) or *ὀλφύς, which would have received an anaptyctic -ο- from synonymous ►ὀλολύζω.

ὀλοφώιος [adj.] mg. uncertain. Hom. only ὀλοφώϊα [n.pl.], substantivized or as an epithet of δήνεα 'plans' (Od.); Hell. in sing. of λύκων ἔρνος (Theoc. 25, 185), and of ἰός 'poison' (Nic. Th. 327). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Formation like μητρώϊος, ἡρώϊος, λεχώϊος (Hell.), etc., so perhaps derived from a substantive in -ως or -ώ. By the ancients it was associated with ὄλλυμι and interpreted as 'pernicious' (H. ὀλοφώϊα· ὀλέθρια, οἷον ὀλοποιά, δεινὰ βουλεύματα); it was connected with ἐλεφαίρομαι in Hom. in the sense of 'deceitful'.

ὄλπη [f.] 'oil flask'. ⇒ἔλπος.

Ὄλυμπος [m.] name of several mountain ranges in Greece and the Near East, especially at the borders of Thessaly and Macedonia; seat of Zeus and of the gods (Il.). ⊲PG⊳ •VAR With metrical lengthening Οὔλ-. Ruijgh 1967a: 173 points to a variant Οὐλυμπ-, Myc. u-ru-p-.
•DER Ὀλύμπιος 'Olympic' (Il.), Ὀλυμπία [f.] region in Elis Pisatis with a famous temple of Zeus (Pi., IA; cf. von Wilamowitz 1931: 224).
•ETYM Probably originally an appellative 'mountain', and without a doubt Pre-Greek. Report of the discussion in van Windekens 1952: 66ff. (see also van Windekens BNF 6 (1955): 117). Cf. also Nilsson 1941(1): 353f. Perhaps Myc. u-ru-pi-ja-(jo-) points to an original PG u-, which is one of the phonemes that could be reflected as Gr. ο (though the interpretation of the Myc. word is debated). Was the original word Ulump(-) ?

ὄλυνθος [m.] 'wild, unripe fig' (Hes. Fr. 160, 1, Hdt. 1, 193, Hp., Thphr., LXX). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ὄλονθος.
•COMP As a first member in ὀλυνθο-φόρος 'bearing ὄλ.' (also ὀλονθο-, pap.), with -έω (Thphr.).
•DER ὀλύνθ-η [f.] 'wild fig-tree, ἐρινεός' (Paus.); -άζω [v.] 'to caprificate, ἐρινάζω' (Thphr.).
•ETYM A technical Pre-Greek word with a suffix -νθ-. Note bolunda· ὄλυνθος (Corp. Gloss Lat. 2, 517, 40), which points to original *ϝ-, and cf. ►μηλολόνθη, ►ὀδόλυνθος. As -ονθ- is very rare, the second -ο- in ὄλονθοςcould be due to assimilation from *-υ-. Fur.: 358 further compares Ὄλομπος.

ὄλυνος [?] · τὸ ἀπότριμμα καὶ ἀποκάθαρμα 'what is rubbed or cleansed off' (H.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Unknown. Is the word Pre-Greek?

ὄλυραι [f.pl.] kind of grain like ζειαί, usually translated as '(corn) of spelt', also as 'durra' (Egypt) (Il., Hdt., D., Thphr.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Rarely sg.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ὀλυρο-κόπος [m.] 'ὄλυραι-beater, -baker' (pap. III[a]).
•DER ὀλύρ-ινος 'containing ὄλυραι, made of ὄλυραι' (pap. III[a] Gal.), -ίτης (ἄρτος) [m.] 'bread made of ὄλυραι' (LXX).
•ETYM An isolated cultural term. By-forms like ►ἔλυμος 2, ►ὄλυνθος, and ►οὐλαί suggest that it is Pre-Greek. Cf. ►ἄχυρα for the suffix.

ὅμαδος [m.] 'clamorous crowd, melee, turmoil, clash' (Il.). ◂?▸
•DER ὁμαδέω, -ῆσαι [v.] 'to clamor, speak or shout all at once' (Od., A. R.).
•ETYM For the formation, see perhaps κέλαδος, χρόμαδος, etc. Usually connected with Skt. samád- [f.] 'battle' and connected with ὁμός = Skt. samá-, but this is rather improbable: samád- should be interpreted differently as sam-ad- (Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 703f.), and ὅμαδος could belong to ►ὁμάζω (although DELG rejects this comparison because of the semantics).

ὁμάζω [v.] 'to growl, grumble', said of bears and panthers (Zenod.). ◂ONOM▸ •ETYM Probably onomatopoeic. Here also ►ὅμαδος. See ►ὁμός.

ὁμαλός [adj.] 'equal, level, smooth' (ι 327). ◂IE semh_2-l-* 'level, smooth'▸ •VAR Innovation ὁμαλής 'id.' (Pl., X., Arist.).
•COMP As a second member e.g. in ἀν-ώμαλος 'unequal' (IA), with compositional lengthening.
•DER ὁμαλ-ότης, -ητος [f.] 'equality, even surface' (Pl., Arist.), -εύς [m.] 'leveller' (who levels the soil, pap. III[a]). Denominative verbs: 1. ὁμαλ-ίζω 'to level, make even' (X., Arist.), also with δι-, ἐξ-, etc. Thence ὁμαλ-ισμός [m.] 'leveling' (LXX, S. E.), -ιξις [f.] 'leveling' (Delph., Didyma), -ιστῆρες [m.pl.] 'instruments for leveling' (gloss.), -ιστρον (H.); hardly to λίστρον. 2. ὁμαλ-ύνω [v.] 'to make equal, make even' (Hp., Pl., Arist.), also with δι-, προ-, συν-; -υντικός 'emollient' (Gal.). 3. *ἀν-ομαλ-όω in ἀνομάλω-σις [f.] 'equalization' (Arist.).
•ETYM The formation is like that of Lat. similis 'like', OIr. samail < semh_2-l-*. The o-grade of ὁμαλός is often thought to have been imported from ►ὁμός. Cf. also the l-stem in Lat. semel 'once' < s(e)mli-*, Go. simle 'one time' = 'once'. Arm. amol 'harnessed pair of cows' is probably unrelated.

ὁμαρτέω [v.] 'to meet, join' (Hom.). ◂IE sm-* 'together' + $h_2$er-* 'join'▸ •DER ὁμαρτῇ 'together', see ►ἁμαρτῇ.
•ETYM The identification of the frozen instrumental ἁμαρτῇ (ὁμ-) with Skt. (Ved.) sám-ṛtā 'at the meeting, in battle' (e.g. Schwyzer: 433) is wrong, as the latter is the locative of sám-ṛti- 'coming together, battle'. The form with ἁμ(α)- must go back to sm-$h_2$er-* containing the root $h_2$er-* 'to join', while the probably more recent formation with ὁμ- derives from ►ὁμός, ὁμοῦ. See ►ὅμηρος.

ὄμβρος [m.] 'rain, shower, thunderstorm', also 'rainwater', metaph. 'water' (Il.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ὀμβρο-φόρος 'bringing rain' (A., Ar.); often as a second member, e.g. in ἔπ-, κάτ-ομβρος 'rainy, wet with rain' (Hp., Arist.).
•DER Adjectives: ὄμβρ-ιος 'ptng. to rain, like rain' (Pi., Ion.), -ηρός 'wet' (Hes.), -ηλός 'id.' (Theognost.), cf. ὑδρηλός; -ώδης 'abundant in rain' (Thphr.), -ικός 'id.' (Vett. Val.), -ιμος = 'ptng. to rain, rainy' (Nic. Th. 388, v.l., PMag. Lond.); also ἀνομβρήεις 'abundant in rain' (Nic. Al. 288, of Ὄλυμπος), from ἀν-ομβρέω, cf. below.
Substantive ὀμβρία [f.] 'rain' (sch.); cf. ἀντλία, ὑετία.
Verbs: 1. ὀμβρέω 'to (make) rain, moisten' (Hes., LXX, A. R.), aor. -ῆσαι, also with ἀν-, ἐπ-, etc. Thence (ἐπ-)όμβρησις [f.] 'raining, etc.' (Suid., sch.), ὄμβρημα [n.] 'rainwater' (LXX); 2. ὀμβρίζω = -έω (Eust.); 3. ὀμβροῦται· imbricitur (gloss.).
•ETYM Often compared with Lat. imber, -ris [n.] 'rain(shower)', with the same meaning, and with Skt. abhrá- [n.] 'cloud', with slightly deviating meaning (e.g. Pok. 315f.). An old r-stem was assumed for these words, beside which stood the s-stem in Skt. ámbhas- [n.] 'water, rainwater'. However, the assumption that Gr. -β- could represent an IE aspirate in the position after nasal is wrong (pace Schwyzer: 333).
In an recent and yet unpublished talk, Kroonen started from the old paradigm neb^h-s-, gen. nb^h-es-s for Lat. imber and Skt. abhrá-, so from the root seen in Gr. ►νέφος, ►νεφέλη, etc. The locative nb^h-es-i* gave rise to Lat. imber-i and (with revocalization and thematicization) to Skt. ámbhas-.
In view of the -b^h-*, ὄμβρος cannot belong to this group. For the same reason, Arm. amb, amp, gen. -oy 'cloud' must be kept separate from the Greek word. Thus, ὄμβρος has no good etymology. Szemerényi 1964: 241f., 249 assumes a loanword, so it is possibly a Pre-Greek word.

ὁμείρομαι [v.] 'to desire' (LXX, NT; inscr. Phrygia JHS 38 (1918) 157). ◂?▸
•VAR ὁμείρονται· ἐπιθυμοῦσιν 'they desire' (H.).

•ETYM Unknown.

ὀμείχω [v.] 'urinate' (Hes. Op. 727; codd. ὀμῖχεῖν, see below.). ◄IE *$h_3mei\acute{g}^h$- 'urinate'► •VAR Aor. ὀμεῖξαι (Hippon. 55 A; codd. -ι- or -η-); ἀμῖξαι· οὐρῆσαι 'to urinate' (H.).
•DER ὀμείχματα = οὐρήματα (A. Fr. 435 = 487 Mette; codd. -ί-).
•ETYM The persistant itacistic notation is probably due to the popular character of the word. The old thematic root present ὀμείχω, which was ousted by the more decent verb οὐρέω (after which ὀμιχέω arose), corresponds exactly to Skt. méhati, Av. maēzaiti and ON míga 'to urinate', while sigmatic ὀμεῖξαι recalls Lat. mīxī, perf. of meiō 'to urinate' < $h_3mei\acute{g}^h$-ie/o-. Other present formations: Lat. mingō (innovation?), OLith. minžu, Arm. mizem (a denominative from mēz 'urine', where a reflex of the initial laryngeal is lacking, but see Martirosyan 2008: 542f.; alternatively, we are dealing with an Iranian loan), etc. Connection with ►μοιχός can be debated; the gloss with ἀμ- is unexplained.

ὁμηγερής [adj.] 'assembled' (Il., Pi.; v.l. -υρής). ◄GR► •VAR Dor. ὁμᾱγ-.
•ETYM From ὁμοῦ and ἀγείρειν with formation of the second member after the adjectives in -ής. Thus also ὁμήγυρις [f.] 'meeting' (Υ 142, Dor. ὁμάγ-) after the simplex ἄγυρις (see ►ἀγείρω) with contraction or compositional lengthening.

ὁμῆλιξ [adj.] 'of the same age'. ⇒ἧλιξ.

ὁμηρέω [v.] only in ὡμήρησε 'met' (π 468) and in the ptc. ὁμηρεῦσαι [f.pl.] (= -οῦσαι) 'meeting, agreeing' (Hes. Th. 39). ◄GR► •ETYM From ►ὅμηρος; cf. ὁμήρης 'united, (being) together ' (Nic. Al. 70), after the s-stems.

ὅμηρος [m.] 'pledge, hostage, bail, warrant' (IA). ◄GR► •VAR Plur. also -α.
•DER ὁμηρεύω [v.] 'to serve as a hostage, guarantee, take as a pledge, take hostage' (Att. Rhet., E. Rh. 434, Antiph.), also with ἐξ-, συν-; thence ὁμηρ-εία [f.] (Pl., Th., Plb.), -ευμα [n.] (Plu.) 'pledge, hostage', ἐξομήρευσις [f.] 'taking of hostages' (Plu.).
•ETYM Probably a compound of ὁμοῦ and ἀρ- in ἀραρεῖν, etc.: properly "joined together, sbd. who is forced to accompany", with a development of meaning similar to that in Lat. obsēs (: obsideō) 'hostage, bail'. The original meaning is still found in ►ὁμηρέω and ὁμηρέταις· ὁμοψήφοις, ὁμογνώμοσιν 'who have the same vote/opinion' (H.); cf. also ►ὁμαρτέω and ►ἁμαρτῆ. The word ὅμηρος = ὁ τυφλός (Lyc., H.) is probably an appellative use of the poet's name. On attempts to connect the name Ὅμηρος (Cret. Ὅμαρος) with the appellative, see the litt. in Frisk.

ὅμῖλος [m.] 'throng, band of warriors, crowd, turmoil of battle' (Il.). ◄PG(S)► •VAR Aeol. ὄμιλλος (EM) could be hyperdialectal.
•COMP As a second member in ἐξ-όμιλος 'standing beside the crowd, strange, uncommon' (S. [lyr.]), etc.
•DER Denominative ὁμιλέω (Aeol. pres. ὀμίλλει Alc.) [v.] 'to be together, associate with (friendly or adversely), keep company, converse' (Il.), also with prefixes like καθ-, προσ-, ἐξ-; thence ὁμιλ-ία, -ίη [f.] 'company, intercourse, association, speech, sermon' (IA), formally from ὅμιλος; -ημα [n.] 'association' (Pl., E.), -ητής (συν-) [m.] 'companion, adherent, student' (X., Luc.), fem. -ήτρια (Philostr. VA), -ητικός 'sociable, affable, talkative' (Isoc., Plu.). ὁμιλᾰδόν [adv.] 'in bands' (Il.), -ηδόν Hes. Sc.), 'together with' (A. R., Opp.).
•ETYM Frisk argues for an analysis ὅμ-ῑλο-ς (related to ὁμός, etc.) with the rare suffix -ῑλο- (as in στρόβιλος, πέδιλον, etc.), taking ὄμιλλος, ὀμίλλει to be hyper-Aeolisms. However, it rather seems that the word is Pre-Greek. Suffixes with V̄C were frequent in Pre-Greek; the interchange -ιλ-ο-/ -ιλλ-ο- may represent a suffix -il^y-o-. The form ὅμῑλος recalls ►ἅμιλλα (which seems to be Pre-Greek, as well).

ὀμιχέω ⇒ὀμείχω.

ὀμίχλη [f.] 'fog' (Il., A., Ar., X.). ◄IE *h_3mig^h-lh_2- 'fog'► •VAR Att. ὁ- (secondary aspiration).
•COMP ἀν-όμιχλος 'without fog' (Arist.).
•DER ὀμιχλ-ώδης 'hazy' (Hell.), -ήεις 'id.' (Nonn.). Verbs -όομαι (Hell.), -αίνω (Lyd.) 'to vaporize'.
•ETYM Identical with a Balto-Slavic word for 'fog', e.g. Lith. miglà, OCS mъgla [f.], from IE h_3mig^h-lh_2- (suffixed like νεφέλη). Beside this old l-formation, to which MoDu. (dial.) miggelen 'to mizzle' also belongs, stands a zero grade root noun in Skt. mih- [f.] 'fog' on the one hand, and a full grade o-stem on the other, e.g. Skt. meghá- [m.] 'cloud' < h_3moig^h-o-.
It is sometimes assumed that ►ὀμείχω 'to urinate' and cognates (IE *$h_3mei\acute{g}^h$-) are related, but this would mean that we have to reconstruct an original palatal for the current entry as well, which was then depalatalized before *l (cf. Lith. klausýti ~ Ru. slúšat' 'to listen' < klouH-s- < ḱlouH-s-, the s- in the latter going back on restored ḱ). This is a problematic assumption, however, since IIr. $Hmaig^h$- seems to exclude a palatal.
Also probably related is Arm. mēg 'mist, fog' < h_3meig^h-o/h_2-, which acc. to Martirosyan 2008 shows regular loss of the reflex of initial laryngeal before m (cf. Arm. magil 'claw' with secondary m next to Gr. ὄνυξ 'nail'). Armenian dialectal material points to a verb mglim 'to cloud', which parallels the formation of Gr. ὀμίχλη. On ►ἀμιχθαλόεσσα, see s.v. and also Ruijgh 1957: 145.

ὄμμα, -ατος [n.] 'eye; look, sight, face', metaph. 'sun, light' (Il.). ◄IE *h_3ek^w- 'see'► •COMP As a first member e.g. in ὀμματο-στερής 'depriving sbd. of eyesight' (A. [lyr.]), 'deprived of eyesight, blind' (S., E. [lyr.]); often as a second member, e.g. μελαν-όμματος 'with black eyes' (Pl., Arist.).
•DER Diminutive ὀμμάτιον [n.] (Arist., AP), = MoGr. μάτι; further ὀμμάτειος 'belonging to the eyes' (S. Fr. 801), ὀμματόω [v.] 'to provide with eyes, enlighten' (A., D. S.), ἐξ- 'to deprive someone of his eyes' (E. Fr. 541), 'to open sbd.'s eyes, illuminate' (A., S., Ph., etc.), ἐν- 'to provide with eyes' (Ph.).
•ETYM The usual form is ὄμμα, but there are also the rare forms ὄππατα (Sapph.) and ὄθματα (Call., Nic., Hymn. Is.), which may, like ὄμμα, have arisen from *ὄπμα by progressive assimilation and by differentiation (Frisk), respectively. Or is ὄθματα rather an artificial reshaping with -θμα (Chantraine 1933: 175)?

If ὄμμα is a verbal noun in -μα from the root ὀπ- 'see' (►ὄπωπα, ὄψομαι), it must originally have meant 'look, glance', but it may also be an enlargement of the root noun seen in the dual ὄσσε < *h_3ek^w-ih_1. The form ►ὀφθαλμός is unrelated. See further ►ὄσσε.

ὄμνυμι, -μαι [v.] 'to swear, affirm with an oath, take a vow' (Il.). ◄IE *h_3emh_3- 'insist, urge'► •VAR Also -ύω, -ύομαι, aor. ὀμό-σ(σ)αι, -σ(σ)ασθαι, fut. ὀμοῦμαι (Il.), perf. ὀμώμο-κα, -(σ)μαι, aor. pass. ὀμο(σ)θῆναι (Att.).
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. ἀπ-, ἐξ-, ἐπ-, συν-, ὑπ-.
•DER ἀνώμοτος 'unsworn', together with -τί [adv.], further συνωμό-της [m.] 'confederate' together with -σία, etc. (IA); for ὁρκωμότης see ►ὅρκος.
•ETYM The aorist ὀμόσαι points to a root *h_3emh_3- (cf. ἀρόσαι 'to plough' < *h_2erh_3-); the future ὀμεῖται was created analogically for older *ὀμοῦται. The present formation ὄμνυμι is reminiscent of ►ὄλλυμι, etc., and confirms that the root-final laryngeal was *h_3. The perfect is a clear innovation.
Traditionally, ὄμνυμι, ὀμόσαι are connected with the disyllabic athematic root-present Skt. ámī-ti 'to take hold of, swear'. Currently, Lat. amāre 'to love' is compared as well, and on this basis the root *h_2emh_3- has been reconstructed (see LIV² s.v.). A huge problem with this view is that one has to assume vowel assimilation ὀμο- < *ἀμο- for Greek, which is certainly not regular (see Van Beek fthc.b). It is therefore best to assume a root PIE *h_3mh_3- reflected as PIt. ama- in front of a vowel; cf. Schrijver 1991: 318. See ►ὁμοίϊος, ►ὀμοκλή.

ὁμόγνιος 'of the same ancestry'. ⇒γίγνομαι.

ὁμοίϊος [adj.] epithet of πόλεμος, νεῖκος, θάνατος, γῆρας (Hom.), traditionally (e.g. by H.) identified or connected with ὁμοῖος, and explained as 'common to all, equalizing, impartial', which is supported by synonymous ξυνὸς Ἐνυάλιος (Σ 309). ◄?►
•VAR On -οίϊος for -οῖος cf. γελοίϊος (s.v. ►γελάω).
•ETYM Acc. to an alternative interpretation by Anon. apud Apollon. Lex., however, it means κακός, for which an etymological argument has been raised: ὀμοίϊος (with lenis) < *ὀμοιϝιος from *ὀμοι-ϝᾱ, or rather for *ὀμο-ϝιος from *ὀμο-ϝᾱ corresponding to Skt. ámīvā [f.] 'misery, vexation, suffering', ámīti 'urge, press' (cf. on ►ὄμνυμι). Uncertain.

ὅμοιος, ὁμοῖος ⇒ὁμός.

ὀμοκλή [f.] 'threatening cry, reprimand, command' (Hom., Hes. Sc.; also Emp. [-έων], Pi. [-αῖς], A. Fr. 57, 5 = 71, 5 [άν]); 'attack, onset' (Hell.), perhaps falsely deduced from Π 147? ◄IE? *h_3emh_3- 'seize' + *$kleh_1$- 'call'► •VAR Also ὁ-? See below.
•DER Further (probably as a denominative) the more usual ὁμοκλ-άω, -έω (also ὁ-) 'to cry threateningly, call, urge', in 3sg.ipf. ὁμόκλα (Σ 156, Ω 248), 3pl. ὁμόκλ-εον, 1pl. -έομεν (Ο 658, etc., ω 173), aor. ὁμοκλῆσαι (Hom., S. El. 712), iterative ipf. ὁμοκλήσασκε (Β 199). Thence ὁμοκλη-τήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'shouter, warner' (Μ 273, Ψ 452), fem. -τειρα (Lyc. 1337).
•ETYM Since the elision in ὑπ' ὀμοκλῆς (e.g. Hes. Sc. 341), κέκλετ' ὀμοκλήσας (v.l. Υ 365) points to original lenis, the connection with ὁμός, etc. was already doubted in antiquity. A counterpart for ὀμο- could be found in Skt. áma- [m.] 'violence, pressure, turbulence', Av. ama- [m.] 'attacking power, strength'; thus, ὀμο-κλή would originally be a determinative compound meaning "attacking cry".
The second member must belong to ►καλέω < *klh_1-eie/o- and may be a root-noun $kleh_1$-, but it can also be explained as an abstract omo-klā- related to omo-klo-* (cf. on ►μεσόδμη), with loss of laryngeal like in νεογνός. The former interpretation seems to be excluded by ὀμοκλάν (A.), but an artificial Dorism cannot be excluded.
On the variation -άω : -έω in the verb, see Chantraine 1942: 361.

ὀμόργνυμι, -μαι [v.] 'to wipe (oneself), dry (oneself)', med. with ἐξ- also 'to give sbd. a beating; to imprint'. ◄IE *$h_3merǵ$- 'wipe off'► •VAR Aor. ὀμόρξαι, -ασθαι (Il.), fut. ὀμόρξω, -ομαι, pass. aor. ὀμορχθῆναι, perf. ὤμοργμαι (Att., Arist.).
•COMP In prose only with prefix, especially ἀπ-, ἐξ-.
•DER ἐξόμορξις [f.] 'stamp, imprint, impression' (Pl.), ἀπόμοργμα [n.] 'which is wiped off' (Eust.).
•ETYM The Greek aor. ὀμόρξαι is probably secondary (with vocalism from the present ὀμόργνυμι) for ὄμαρξον· ἀπόμαξον 'wiped off' (H.), which can be equated with the zero grade aor. Skt. amr̥kṣat. Further connection within Greek with ►ἀμέργω is conceivable (for the semantics, cf. Lat. verrō 'to sweep' next to Hitt. u̯arš-ⁱ 'to reap, harvest, wipe'), but the variation in the initial vowel is unexplained (there is no sufficient reason to assume vowel assimilation). The initial vowel is absent in the late forms μόρξ-αντο, -άμενοι (Q. S.), probably via reanalysis as ἀπο-μ-.

ὁμός [adj.] 'common, one and the same, equal, similar, level' (Il.). ◄IE *som-h_2-o- 'same, equal'► •COMP Very often as a first member, e.g. ὁμό-φρων 'of similar character, like-minded' (Χ 263).
•DER ὁμ-όσε 'to one and the same place', -οῦ 'at the same place, together' (Il.), -όθεν 'from the same place' (ε 477); ὁμῶς 'equally, likewise' (Il.), ὅμως 'nevertheless, all the same' since Μ 393; ὁμοῖος (Il.), ὅμοιος (young Att.) 'like, similar, the same' (Il.), after ποῖος, τοῖος, etc., with ὁμοι-ότης, -ητος [f.] 'similarity' (IA), verb -ωθῆναι (Il.), -όομαι (IA), -όω (Th., E.) 'to equalize, unite, make the same'; further ὁμοί-ωμα, -ωσις, etc. See also ►ὁμαλός and perhaps ►ὅμιλος.
•ETYM Old word for 'one and the same, equal', identical with Skt. samá-, OP hama-, and Gm. words like ON samr, sami, Go. (sa) sama (secondary n-stem), etc., from IE *somh_2-ó- with root-final *h_2, because there is no reflex of Brugmann's Law in Skt. Other cognate formations are ►εἷς, ►ἕτερος, ►ἅμα, and ►ἁ- 1.

ὄμπνη [f.] 'food, corn', plur. 'cake of flour and honey, honeycombs' (Call., Nic., H., EM). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR Also ὄμπη.
•DER ὄμπν(ε)ιος 'ptng. to corn, nutritious, fruitful' (S. Fr. 246, Hell. poet.), fem. Ὀμπνια epithet of Demeter (Call., Nonn.; after πότνια); ὀμπνειόχειρ· πλουσιόχειρ, πλούσιος 'with rich hand, rich' (H.); ὀμπνιακός 'id.' (AP); ὀμπνηρὸν ὕδωρ· τρόφιμον 'nutritious' (H.).
•ETYM Traditionally connected with Skt. ápnas- [n.] 'produce, property, possession', ON efni [n.] < PGm. afnija-* 'material, goods' (also ON efna, OE æfnan 'to carry out, work'), Hitt. ḫappin-ant- 'rich'. The inner nasal in Greek was explained by anticipation of the suffix, and ὄμπη by dissimilation from this form. These assumptions are ad hoc and therefore doubtful.
Frisk further states that ὀμφύνειν· αὔξειν, σεμνύνειν, ἐντιμότερον ποιεῖν 'to strengthen, respect, honor' (H.) is unclear. However, acc. to Fur.: 161, it shows that we have a by-form ὀμφυν-, and a Pre-Greek word. The word ► ἄφενος is unrelated.

ὀμφαλός [m.] 'navel, navel string' (Il.), very often metaph. of navel-shaped elevations: 'knob of the shield or yoke' (Il.), 'centre' (α 50). ◄IE $h_3$enb^h-, $h_3$mb^h-, $h_3$neb^h-* 'navel'► •COMP Compounds like ὀμφαλη-τόμος [f.] 'cutter of the navel string, midwife' (Hippon., Hp.; on -η- see Schwyzer: 438f.), μεσ-όμφαλος "in the middle of the navel", 'in the centre', especially of Delphi and its oracle (trag.), also 'having a navel (an elevation) in the center' (trag., com.); also with enlargement of the second member, e.g. ἐπ-ομφάλ-ιος 'situated on the navel (the shield knob)' (H 267, Parth.), also 'equipped with a navel' (AP 6, 22).
•DER 1. Diminutive ὀμφάλιον [n.] (Arat., Nic.); 2. ὀμφαλίς [f.] 'navel string' (Sor.); 3. ὀμφαλ-όεις 'equipped with an ὀ.' (Il.), -ωτός 'id.' (Pherecr., Plb.), -ώδης 'ὀ.-like' (Arist.), -ιος 'belonging to the ὀ.' (AP), -ικός 'id.' (Phan. Hist.); 4. ὀμφαλιστήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'knife used for cutting the navel string' (Poll., H.; cf. on βραχιονιστήρ).
•ETYM The old word for 'navel' closely corresponds to Lat. umbilīcus (probably from umbilus* = ὀμφαλός), OIr. imbliu < PCl. imbilon-* < IE $h_3$mb^h-l-*. This originally athematic l-stem (perhaps retained in the Epirotic tribal name Ὀμφαλ-ος [gen. sg.], -ες [nom. pl.]; see Schwyzer: 484) alternates with an n-stem in Lat. umbō, -ōnis [m.] 'boss of a shield', probably also in a WGm. word for 'belly, abdomen': OHG amban (secondary a-stem), -on [m.], OS ambon [acc.pl.m.], PGm. amban-* < QIE Homb^{h}on-* (cf. on ► ὄμφαξ). The variation l : n recalls ἀγκάλη : ἀγκών.
In the eastern languages, we find forms with a different ablaut grade, like Skt. nā́bhi- [f.] 'navel, nave', OPr. nabis 'id.', Latv. naba 'navel', but also Gm. forms like OHG naba [f.] 'nave of a wheel', nabalo [m.] 'navel' (suffix like in ὀμφαλός, etc.), all from IE $h_3$neb^h-. The Schwebeablaut Homb^h- / Hnob^h- is probably due to the development of the zero grade $h_3$nb^h-* in the western languages, so the original root shape was $h_3$neb^h-, with ὄμφαλος continuing the zero grade $h_3$nb^h-l- (with vocalization of the laryngeal according to the so-called Lex Rix).

ὄμφαι [pl.] barbaric word for the best quality of nard (Gal. 14, 74). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

ὄμφαξ, -ᾰκος [f.] 'unripe grape' (η 125), also of olives (Poll.); metaph. of a young girl, an undeveloped nipple, etc. (poet.). ◄PG(S,V)► •VAR Late also [m.].
•DER 1. ὀμφάκιον [n.] 'juice of unripe grapes or olives' (Hp., pap.); 2. ὀμφακίς, -ίδος [f.] 'cup of a certain kind of oak' (Paul. Aeg.), because of the astringent taste; 3. ὀμφακ-ίας (οἶνος) [m.] 'wine of sour grapes' (Gal.), metaph. 'sour, unripe' (Ar., Luc.); -ίτης (οἶνος) [m.] 'id.', also name of a stone (Gal.; codd. -τίτης), -ῖτις [f.] of ἐλαίη (Hp.), 'kind of oakapple' (Dsc., Gal.); 4. ὀμφακώδης 'ὄ.-like' (Hp., Arist.), -ινος 'made of ὄ.' (Hp., pap.), -ηρὰ (ἀγγεῖα) [n.pl.] 'vessels for ὄ.' (medic., pap.); 5. ὀμφακίζω [v.] 'to be sour, unripe', also of other fruits (LXX, Dsc.), -ίζομαι 'to pick sour grapes' (Epich.).
•ETYM By itself, ὄμφαξ could derive from an unattested pre-form ὀμφων* (= Lat. umbō, etc.; see on ► ὀμφαλός), but the semantic explanation as a navel-like knob is hardly convincing. Fur.: 341 connects ἀμφίας 'a bad Sicilian wine' and ἀμφής· οἴνου ἄνθος 'wine blossom'. οἱ δὲ μέλανα οἶνον 'red wine' (H.). The variation would point to Pre-Greek origin; note that the suffix -αξ is also typically Pre-Greek.

ὀμφή 1 [f.] 'divine voice or revelation, oracle, emblem' (Il.), 'voice, speech' in general (Pi., trag.). ◄IE seng^{wh}-* 'sing'► •COMP Ὀμφο-κλέϝης [m.] a Cyprian in Abydos, εὔ-ομφα ὀνόματα 'auspicious names' (H.); enlarged in παν-ομφαῖος 'sending all omens, witness of everything', epithet of Zeus (Θ 250, Simon., Orph.), also of Ἥλιος (Q. S.) and Ἥρα (EM), transformed into παν-ομφής (ὄνειροι, Orac. apud Porph.).
•DER ὀμφ-αῖος, -ήεις 'predicting' (Nonn.), Ὀμφαίη [f.] name of a goddess (Emp.), ὀμφητήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'prognosticator' (Tryph.), after νικη-τήρ : νικάω, etc. Cf. Ruijgh 1957: 134.
•ETYM An archaic inherited word, which is isolated in Greek and has cognates only in Germanic. Beside ὀμφή < IE song^{wh}-eh$_2$-* stands e.g. Go. saggws [m.] 'song, music, lecture' < IE song^{wh}-o-*. The basic primary verb is retained only in Germanic, e.g. Go. siggwan 'to sing, lecture' < IE seng^{wh}-e/o-*.

ὀμφή 2 [f.] · πνοή 'breath' (H.). ◄?►
•VAR Also ὀμφά· ὀσμή. Λάκωνες 'scent (Laconian)' (H.).
•COMP As a second member in εὔ-ομφος = εὔοσμος (Arcad. acc. to Timachidas apud Ath.; codd. -φαλον).
•DER Verb ποτ-όμφει· προσόζει 'to smell, stink' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. It cannot be related to the group of ► νέφος, ► νεφέλη (thus Frisk, on which see the litt. s.v.), since that word had no initial laryngeal.

ὄμφορα [n.pl.] · ὅσα ἀπὸ τῶν ἱερῶν ἐκφέρεσθαι ὁ νόμος κωλύει 'what the law forbids to carry away from shrines' (H.). ◄GR► •ETYM Latte notes: ἀνάφορα reportanda ad aram; thus it would have dialectal ὀν- for ἀνα-.

ὄμωρος [?] 'a Sicilian bread' (Epich. 52, Sophr. 27). ◄?►

•VAR Cf. ὅμουρα· σεμίδαλις ἑφθή, μέλι ἔχουσα καὶ σησάμην 'cooked flour containing honey and sesame' (H.); also ὁμορίτας (Redard 1949: 90).
•ETYM Unknown.

ὀναλα [f.] = ἀνάλωμα, 'expenditure, cost' (Thess. III[a]). ◄GR?►
•ETYM Backformation from ἀναλόω, perhaps influenced by δαπάνη : δαπανάω (cf. also δαπαν-ούμενα, -ώσει after ἀναλ-ούμενα, -ώσει). See Fraenkel 1912: 88.

ὄναρ [n.] 'dream', especially 'fortune-telling dream, vision' (Il.), as an adverb 'in a dream' (trag., Att.). ◄IE _*h$_3$en-r_ 'dream', _*h$_3$ner-io-_► •VAR Only nom. and acc.; further ὄνειρος [m.] 'god of dreams, dream' (Il.), -ον [n.]; other case forms are ὀνείρ-ατος, -ατι, -ατα, etc., 'vision, phantom' (Od.); thence the back-formation ὄνειαρ [n.] (Call., _AP_). Note Aeol. ὄνοιρος [m.] (Sapph.); Cret. ἄναιρον· ὄνειρον, ἄναρ· ὄναρ (H.).
•COMP E.g. ὀνειρο-πόλος [m.] 'interpreter of dreams' (Il.), εὐ-όνειρος 'having good dreams' (Str., Plu.).
•DER 1. Diminutive ὀνειρ-άτιον (sch.). 2. Adjectives ὀνείρ-ειος (δ 809, Babr.), -ήεις (Orph.), -ατικός (comm. Arist.) 'concerning dreams, pertaining to dreams', -ώδης 'dream-like' (Philostr.). 3. Verbs: ὀνειρ-ώσσω, -ώττω (ἐξ-) 'to dream, have a seminal discharge while sleeping' (Hp., Pl., Arist.), with (ἐξ-)ονείρ-ωξις [f.] (Pl., medic.), -ωγμός [m.] (Arist.), -ωκτικός (Arist., Thphr.); ἐξ-ονειρόω 'id.' (Hp.); *ἐξονειρ-ιάζω in ἐξονειριασμός [m.] (Diocl. Med.).
•ETYM ὄναρ < _*h$_3$en-r_ and Lesb. ὄνοιρος, Cret. ἄναιρον < _*h$_3$n-r̥-io-_ show gradation with ὄνειρος < _*h$_3$n-er-i̯o-_ (with full grade of the suffix; for the addition of _*-io-_, see ►ἥλιος). The case forms ὀνείρ-ατος, -ατι, etc. probably arose by a cross of *ὄνατος, etc. with ὄνειρος; from ὀνείρατ- in turn arose the late and rare form ὄνειαρ for ὄναρ. The neuter gender of ὄνειρον (for ὄνειρος) was influenced by εἴδωλον, ἐνύπνιον.
The word is limited to Greek and two neighbouring languages, in both of which it only occurs with a suffix _-i̯o-_: Arm. _anurǰ_ < _*onōr-i̯o-_ (cf. τέκμωρ beside τέκμαρ; Arm. _a-_ < _o-_ is a regular development in a pretonic open syllable, like in _anun_ to ὄνομα, etc.), and Alb. _ândërrë_ (Gheg), _ëndërrë_ (Tosk), the details of which are debated. Note also Cret. ἄναιρος, of which the α- is unexplained (cf. Beekes _Sprache_ 18 (1972): 126).
Through the rise of ὄναρ and cognates, the meaning of old ►ὕπαρ shifted (s.v.).

ὄνειαρ, -ατος [n.] 'utility, value, help, refreshment'; plur. -ατα 'refreshments, foods, valuables, gifts' (Il.). ◄IE _*h$_3$neh$_2$-_ 'help, be useful'► •ETYM False writing for ὄνη(ϝ)αρ < *ὄνᾱ-ϝαρ, a verbal noun of ►ὀνίνημι; perhaps influenced by ἀλείατα (s.v. ►ἀλέω), εἶδαρ (s.v. ►ἔδω), etc.

ὄνειδος [n.] 'reproach, rebuke, abuse, disgrace' (Il.). ◄IE _*h$_3$neid-_ 'revile'► •DER Thence ὀνειδείη [f.] 'id.' (Nic.), cf. on ἐλεγχείη s.v. ►ἐλέγχω, ὀνείδειος 'baling, scolding' (Hom., _AP_), ὀνειδείω [v.] 'to blame' (Thebaïs _Fr._ 3) < _*-es-i̯e/o-_; mostly ὀνειδίζω 'to make reproaches, abuse, scold', also with prefixes like ἐξ-, προσ-, with several derivatives: ὀνείδ-ισμα [n.] 'reproach, abuse' (Hdt.), -ισμός (ἐξ-) [m.] 'id.' (D. H., J.), -ιστήρ (E.), also κατ- (Man.), -ιστής (Arist.) 'who reproaches', (ἐξ-)ονειδιστικός 'abusive' (Hell.); on itself stands ἐπ-ονείδ-ιστος 'deserving a reproach, worthy of blame' (Att.), probably for *ἐπ-ονειδής after other verbal adjectives in -ιστος.
•ETYM ὄνειδος is an old verbal noun, isolated in Greek. The basic primary verb, which was replaced by the denominative ὀνειδίζω in Greek, is retained in other languages: Skt. athem. _nid-āná-_ 'reproved' [aor.ptc.], beside which stand the passive formation _nidyá-māna-_ 'id.' and the nasal present _níndati_ 'to reproach', Av. _nāis-mī_ < _*nāid-s-mi_ 'I reproach', as well as Baltic forms like Lith. _niedė́ti_ 'to despise', Latv. _nîdêt_, 1sg. _nîdu_ 'to squint at, exclude, hate', which derive from a stative _*h$_3$neid-eh$_1$-_. Germanic has a secondary formation in Go. _ga-naitjan_ 'to revile', etc. Especially interesting for Greek, because of its prothetic vowel, is Arm. _anicanem_, aor. _anici_ < _*h$_3$neid-s-_ (for Arm. _a-_ < _o-_ in pretonic open syllable, cf. on ►ὄναρ).

ὄνθος [m.] 'droppings, excrement of animals' (Ψ 775, 777, A. _Fr._ 275 [= 478 Mette]). ◄?► •VAR Late also fem. after κόπρος.
•COMP ὀνθο-φόρος 'dungbearer' (pap. IV[p]).
•ETYM Unexplained. For older lit., see Frisk s.v.

ὀνθυλεύω [v.] 'to stuff, pad, fill up with stuffing', of food (com. IV-III[a]). ◄PG?(V)► •DER ὀνθυλεύσεις [pl.] 'stuffed foods' (com. IV-III[a]); further μονθυλεύω (rejected by Phryn. 334, sch.), μονθυλεύσεις (Poll. 6, 60) 'id.'.
•ETYM Expression of culinary art without etymology. We may start from a noun *ὀνθύλη, -ος like κορδύλη, κανθύλη, κρωβύλος, etc. Frisk suggests that the initial μ- in μονθυλεύω was perhaps taken from ►ματτύη (with related meaning) or from μολγός 'bag' (less probable). Fur.: 246 explains the variation μ/zero from initial ϝ-. Probably a Pre-Greek word.

ὄνιγλιν [?] · εἶδος οἴνου 'kind of wine' (H.). ◄PG?(V)► •VAR Ὀνογλιν (Alcm. 117 _apud_ Ath. 1, 31d).
•ETYM Unknown.

ὀνίνημι [v.] 'to be of use, help, avail' (Il.). ◄IE _*h$_3$neh$_2$-_ 'help, be useful'► •VAR Aor. ὀνῆσαι, fut. ὀνήσω (Il.), Dor. ὀνασεῖ (Theoc.), med. ὀνίναμαι (Att.), aor. ὀνήσασθαι (late), ὠνήμην, opt. ὀναίμην, epic ἀπ-ονήμην, -όνητο (Il.), ὠνάμην, inf. ὄνασθαι (E., Pl.), fut. ὀνήσομαι (Il.).
•DIAL Myc. _o-na-to_ /onaton/, _o-na-te_ /onatēr/.
•COMP Often with ἀπο- 'to benifit, gain, enjoy, relish'.
•DER 1. ὄνηαρ (written ►ὄνειαρ, s.v.); 2. ὄνησις [f.] (φ 402), ὄνασις (Dor., etc.) 'benefit, advantage, gain, enjoyment' with ὀνήσιμος 'useful, beneficial' (_h. Merc._); 3. Ὀνήτωρ, -ορος [m.] PN (Π 604, etc.), Dor. ὀνάτωρ (conj. Pi. _O._ 10, 9) 'helper', ὀνήτωρ name of a plaster (medic.); 4. Ὀνήτης [m.] PN (Eretria IV[a]); for the PNs in Ὀνησι-, etc. see Bechtel 1917b: 348ff.; 5. ὀνήμων = ὀνήσιμος (_Cat. Cod. Astr._). 6. Primary compar. forms: superl. ὀνήϊσ-τος 'most useful' (Ion., etc.), compar. ntr. ὀνήϊον (Nic.), Dor. ὀνάϊον (Dodona III[a]); reinterpreted as a positive, details in Leumann _Mus. Helv._ 2 (1945): 7ff.

•ETYM The full-grade medial aorist forms ἀπ-ονήμην, -όνητο, -ονήμενος, etc. are noteworthy. They may have their vocalism from the s-aorist ὀνῆσαι, as Kümmel remarks in LIV². In Euripides, ὠνάτο, ὄνασθαι may have the old vocalism from *h_3nh_2-, or have their -ᾰ- from the present ὀνίναμαι, with productive short vowel (cf. ἵσταμαι : ἵστημι). The late present ὀνίσκω (Ath. 2, 35c) was formed from ὀνήσω after εὑρήσω : εὑρίσκω, etc.
There are no obvious cognates. Skt. nāthá- [n.] 'refuge, help' was compared by Wackernagel 1955(2): 946, and looks like a primary noun from a root nā-*, but is further isolated (cf. Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 33f.). LIV² s.v. *h_3neh_2- compares ON unnum [1pl.] 'to love, grant' if from $h_3n̥$-nh_2-m̥é, but remarks that the -ns- in related forms like Go. ansts 'favor' is difficult to explain with this reconstruction. Moreover, additional assumptions are needed to arrive from the assumed nasal present formation at Greek ὀνίναμαι.

ὄνιννος [m.] name of a parasite in seaweed, 'kind of centipede' (Thphr. HP 4, 6, 8). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM To be analyzed as ὄν-ιννος, acc. to Strömberg 1944: 11f., thus a compound from ►ὄνος and ►ἴννος 2; however, this is most improbable. Probably a Pre-Greek word (not in Fur.).

Ὀνογλιν •ETYM See ►ὄνιγλιν.

ὀνόγυρος ⇒ἀνάγυρος.

ὀνοκίνδιος [m.] 'donkey-driver'. ⇒κίνδαξ.

ὄνομα, -ατος [n.] 'name' (Il.), gramm. 'word' (Att.), as a part of speech = nomen (Arist.). ◂IE h_3neh_3-mn, h_3nh_3-men- 'name'▸ •VAR Epic (also Hdt.) οὔνομα (metrical lengthening), Aeol. Dor. ὄνυμα; Dor. also *ἔνυμα if found in Ἐνυμα-κρατίδας, Ἐνυμαντιάδας (Lacon.), but the interpretation of these PNs is doubtful.
•COMP ὀνομά-κλυτος 'with a famous name' (X 51), ►ἐξονομακλήδην; ὀνοματο-ποιέω [v.] 'to give a name, name' (Arist.), after other compounds with -ποιέω (ὀνοματο-ποιός Ath., Zos. Alch., -ποιία Str.); νώνυμ(ν)ος 'nameless' (epic); more recent is ἀν-ώνυμος (θ 552).
•DER A. Nouns: 1. Diminutive ὀνομάτιον (Arr., Longin.); 2. Adjectives ὀνοματ-ώδης 'having the nature of a name, concerning the name' (Arist.), -ικός 'ptng. to the ὄνομα' (D. H.).
B. Verbs: 1. ὀνομαίνω 'to call, proclaim', almost only aor. ὀνομῆναι, also with ἐξ- (mostly epic Il.), fut. ο(ὐ)νομανέω (Hdt.), pres. (Dor.) ὀνυμαίνω (Gortyn, Ti. Locr.). 2. ὀνομάζω 'to call (by the name), name, enunciate', aor. ὀνομάσαι (Dor. Aeol. ὀνυμάζω, aor. ὀνυμάξαι) often with prefixes like ἐξ-, ἐπ-, κατ-, παρ-, μετ-. Thence ὀνομασία [f.] 'name, expression' (Hippias Soph., Pl., Arist.), ὀνομαστής [m.] = Lat. nominator (pap. IIIᵖ), ὀνομ-αστί (-εί) 'by name' (IA), -αστικός 'ptng. to naming' (Pl.), ἡ ὀνομαστικὴ (πτῶσις) 'casus nominativus' (Str., gramm.). 3. ὀνοματίζω [v.] 'to dispute about names' (Gal.), -ισμός [m.] 'list of names' (inscr. Thess.).

•ETYM Old word for 'name', directly comparable with Arm. anun < onomn-* < anomn-* (with o > u before m and a > o in pretonic open syllable); Arm. anun may represent both the zero grade h_3nh_3-mn- (originally found in the oblique cases) and the full grade h_3neh_3-mn from the nominative, but the Greek word must have the old zero grade. Further, OPhr. onoman, NPhr. ονομαν also have their initial o- from *h_3- (Kortlandt SCauc. 7 (1987): 63).
The e in other languages has a different origin: Alb. emër (Gheg), êmën (Tosk) may be a loan from Latin nōmen, while in OPr. emmens [gen.sg.m.] < $h_3n̥h_3$-men-s, the initial e- is the reflex of a vocalic nasal (cf. also the group of OCS imę). Celtic (e.g. OIr. ainm) is derived from anmen-* < $h_3n̥h_3$-men-), and ToB ñem, ToA ñom points to nēm-*, which perhaps derives from a preform h_3neh_1-m- by dissimilation of the second h_3. If the e- found in Laconian Ενυμακρατιδας belongs here at all, it is not well explained, but it need not be due to (incidental) vowel assimilation; it may also be due to dissimilation of the first laryngeal against the second (cf. on Tocharian).
The Greek u-vocalism in ὄνυμα, νώνυμνος, etc. is due to Cowgill's Law (see Vine 1999b).
All languages have generalized one of the two ablaut grades: Lat. nōmen = Skt. nā́ma < IE $h_3neh_3$mn. In Germanic, Go. namo [n.], etc. < IE h_3nh_3mōn goes back on a zero grade, while OFr. nōmia, MHG be-nuomen, MoDu. noemen have the old full grade *h_3neh_3-; see Beekes Sprache 33 (1987): 1ff. (against this, Stüber Die Sprache 39/1 (1997): 74-88, but unconvincing).
The Anatolian evidence is highly complicated (see Kloekhorst 2008): Hitt. lāman- [n.] < h_3neh_3-mn- (like Latin), with regular loss of the *h_3- and then *n- > l- by dissimilation; lamnii̯a- [v.] 'name' from h_3nh_3-mn-; but HLuw. a-ta$_{4/5}$-ma-za (interpreted as /ʔlāman=tˢa/ in Kloekhorst KZ 117 (2004)) preserves the reflex of initial *h_3-.
Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. ḫannaⁱ- has also made it clear that the root of the word is *h_3neh_3-, as still preserved in the Hittite verb ḫannaⁱ- 'to sue, judge' and in Greek ►ὄνομαι. A denominative yod-present like ὀνομαίνω is found in other branches, too: Go. namnjan 'to name', Hitt. lamnii̯a-. The original n-stem is still clearly seen in νώνυμν-ος < n̥-h_3nh_3-mn-; ἀνώνυμος is younger.

ὄνομαι [v.] 'to scold, blame, insult' (Hom., also Hdt.). ◂IE *h_3neh_3- 'name'▸ •VAR Aor. ὀνόσ(σ)ασθαι (ὤνατο P 25; cf. below), fut. ὀνόσσομαι, with κατα- in κατ-ώνοντο, -ονοσθῇς (Hdt. 2, 172 and 136).
•DER Verbal adjective ὀνοτός (Pi., Call., A. R.), ὀνοστός (I 164, Lyc.) with analogical -σ-; dental formation in ὀνοτάζω = ὄνομαι (h. Merc., Hes., A.); ὀνητά· μεμπτά 'reproached' (H.), probably after the oppositum ἀγητά 'admired'; ὄνοσις [f.] 'blame' (Eust.).
•ETYM All forms except ὤνατο (which is rather aor. then ipf.), ὄναται· ἀτιμάζεται 'dishonors' (H.), and the debated form οὔνεσθε (Ω 241) are based on a root ὀνο-; thus, ὀνα- is not an old ablauting variant but a secondary deviation. The comparison with the Celtic group of MIr. on 'shame', anim 'blemish, fault' remains highly hypothetical, while that with the unreliable ptc. (hapax) OAv. nadant- 'slandering, reviling' and with Skt. níndati 'to blame, revile' (as ní-nd-ati; but rather ní-n-d-ati, for which see ► ὄνειδος) is based on the wrong assumption that ὀνόσσ-ασθαι, -ομαι, and ὀνοστός go back to *ὀνοδ-, instead of being analogical.

Kloekhorst 2008 has recently convincingly argued for connection with Hitt. ḫanna-^{i} 'to sue, judge' (3sg. ḫannāi, 3pl. ḫannanzi), which he retraces to *h$_3$e-h$_3$nóh$_3$-ei, *h$_3$e-h$_3$nh$_3$-énti by regular sound laws. For the semantics of the Greek word, starting from the meaning 'to call, name', one may compare the English expression 'to call names'.

ὄνος [m., f.] 'ass, female ass' (Λ 558), often metaph., e.g. 'windlass, winch, the upper millstone' (ὄνος ἀλέτης), as a fishname (after the grey color, or after the large head as a sign of stupidity?), see Strömberg 1943: 100. ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Myc. o-no /onos/.
•COMP Very often as a first member, e.g. in plantnames like ὀνο-θήρα, -κάρδιον, -πορδον, ὄνοσμα (see Strömberg 1940: 138 and 61); on ► ὄνιννος, see s.v., on ὄναγρος = ὄνος ἄγριος 'wild ass' see Risch IF 59 (1949): 286f.; as a second member in ἡμί-ονος [f., m.] 'mule' (Il.), cf. Risch l.c. 22f.
•DER 1. Several diminutives, partly in metaph. mg.: ὀν-ίσκος [m.] (Hp., Ph. Bel.), -ιον (-ίον?) [n.] (pap.), -ίδιον (Ar.), -άριον (Diphil. Com.), -αρίδιον (pap.), -ύδιν (?; pap. IV^p). 2. Other substantives: ὀνίς [f.] 'donkey droppings' (IA); ὀνῖτις [f.] 'kind of marjoram, Origanum heracleoticum' (Nic., Dsc., Gal.); ὀνίας [m.] 'kind of σκάρος' (Ath.); ὀνεῖον [n.] 'donkey stable' (Suid.). 3. Adjectives: ὄν-ειος 'of a donkey' (Ar., Arist.), -ικός 'belonging to a donkey' (NT, pap., inscr.), -ώδης 'donkey-like' (Arist.). 4. ὀνεύω [v.] 'to draw with a windlass, draw up' (Th., Stratt.). On ► ὄνωνις, see s.v.
•ETYM Doubtfully explained by Brugmann IF 22 (1907-1908): 197ff. from osonos* (which via ohonos* > hoonos* would have been reinterpreted as ὁ ὄνος), which together with Lat. asinus is supposed to be a loan from a South Pontic language. Arm. ēš, gen. iš-oy is rather from *h$_1$ek̑uo-. Sum. anšu 'ass' was also compared (see Neumann IF 69 (1964): 61).
Not related to Lat. onus 'burden' (Grégoire Byzantion 13 (1938): 287ff.), nor to Hebr. 'ātōn 'female ass'. Probably a Pre-Greek word.

ὄνυξ 1, -υχος [m.] 'nail, claw, hoof', often metaph. in several mgs. (Il.). ⊲IE *h$_3$nog^h- 'nail'⊳ •DIAL Myc. o-nu-ka /onuka/ or /onuks/, cf. Guilleux RPh. 75 (2001): 149.
•COMP ὀνυχο-γραφέομαι [v.] 'to be carved by a nail' (Hp.), γαμψ-ῶνυξ and -ώνυχος 'with curved claws' (Il., also Arist.); on ► μῶνυξ, see s.v.
•DER Diminutive ὀνύχιον [n.] (Arist., pap.); ὀνυχιστήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'hoof' (LXX), cf. on βραχιονιστήρ and ὀνυχίζομαι below; ὀνυχ-ιμαῖος 'of the size of nail-parings, tiny' (Com. Adesp.), -ιαῖος 'as broad as a nail' (Eust.); ὀνυχ-ίζομαι [v.] 'to cut one's nails' (Cratin., LXX) with -ισμός [m.] (Str.), -ιστήριον [n.] 'nail scissors' (Posidipp. Com.); -ίζω [v.] 'to test with one's nails' (Artem.); -όω [v.] 'to equip with claws, bend in a claw-like fashion' (Orib., sch.).
•ETYM Old name of the nail and the hoof, retained in most branches in various formations. Disyllabic ὄνυξ (ὀνυχ-) obtained its υ-vocalism from *h$_3$nog^h- by Cowgill's Law, which would require a neighboring Proto-Greek labiovelar (see Vine 1999b). Therefore, we may propose a u-stem *h$_3$nog^h-u- (for which OCS nogъtь 'hoof' < *Hnog^{h}u-ti- has been compared), or reconstruct *h$_3$nog^{wh}-.
The Greek form agrees with Arm. ełungn 'nail', which is a secondary n-stem like ot-n 'foot' < acc. pod-m* (see ► πούς). Kortlandt assumes that *h$_3$nog^h- / h$_3$ng^h- yielded PArm. onog / ong*, which were contaminated in onong*; this became enong* by dissimilation, which gave ełungn, on which see Kortlandt 2003: 76. The other languages have a monosyllabic stem: either *h$_3$ng^h- (Lat. unguis, OIr. ingen [f.]) or *h$_3$nog^h- (OHG nagal [m.] 'nail', BSl., e.g. Lith. nāgas [m.] 'nail, claw'). IIr. has a voiceless aspirate, e.g. Skt. nakhá- [m., n.] 'id.'.

ὄνυξ 2, -υχος [m.] name of a precious stone, 'onyx' (Ctes., LXX). ⊲?⊳
•COMP σαρδ-όνυξ 'sardonyx' (Philem. Com., J.); cf. σάρδιον.
•DER ὀνύχιον [n.] 'kind of onyx' (Thphr., LXX), -ιος [adj.] (Suid.),-ίτης [m.], -ῖτις (λίθος) [f.] 'onyx-like stone' (Str., Dsc.), -ινος 'made of onyx, onyx-colored' (Hell.).
•ETYM Perhaps identical with ὄνυξ 'nail' because of its white glaze, like that of a fingernail; alternatively, is it just a foreign word reshaped by folk etymology? Untenable Semitic etymologies in Lewy 1895: 58.

ὀνυρίζεται [v.] · ὀδύρεται 'laments' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Fur.: 356[58] mentions this form after ἰνύρετο· ἐμύρετο (H.).

ὄνωνις [f.] plantname, 'restharrow, Ononis antiquorum' (Thphr.); cf. Strömberg 1940: 61, 155. ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Also -ίς.
•DER ὀνωνῖτις [f.] 'id.' (Ps.-Dsc.).
•ETYM Fur.: 340f. compares ἀνωνίς (Dsc.), with variation α/ ο, thus it is probably a Pre-Greek word.

ὀξαλίς ⇒ἀναξυρίς.

ὀξερίας [m.] name of a Sicilian cheese (Com. Adesp. 880 from Poll. 6, 48), acc. to H. = τυρὸς ἀχρεῖος 'useless cheese'. ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Formation like ὀπίας (from ὀπός) 'kind of cheese', ὀβελίας (from ὀβελός) 'kind of bread', and other names of victuals; thus perhaps from *ὀξερός (from ὀξύς) like γλυκερός (from γλυκύς; Scheller MSS 6 (1955): 87). Acc. to Bolling Lang. 12 (1936): 220, it is incorrect for ὁ ξερίας (from ξερός, ξηρός) vel sim.; however, the article to be assumed creates difficulties.

ὀξίνα [f.] · ἐργαλεῖόν τι γεωργικόν, σιδηροῦς γόμφους ἔχον, ἑλκόμενον ὑπὸ βοῶν 'an agricultural tool having iron teeth, drawn by cows' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Probably connected with the IE word for 'harrow' seen in Lat. occa, W oged, OHG egida, Lith. akĕčios (also ek-), from IE *h$_2$ok-et-h$_2$-, although the Latin word is unclear (see De Vaan 2008 s.v.). The Greek word was perhaps reshaped after ὀξύς and has an ending like ἀξίνη 'axe', but the latter has a long ι, while here the length is unknown. Note that Pre-Greek has a suffix -ιν-.

ὄξος [n.] 'wine vinegar' (IA). ⊲PG?⊳

•COMP ὀξο-πώλης [m.] 'vendor of wine vinegar' (Lib., Poll.), ὀξ-άλμη [f.] 'broth made of ὄξος and ἅλμη' (com.), κάτ-οξος 'drenched with wine vinegar' (Posidipp. Com.).
•DER 1. Substantives: diminutive ὀξίδιον [n.] (pap.); ὀξίς, -ίδος [f.] 'vinegar flask' (com., pap.); ὀξίνης (οἶνος) [m.] 'sour wine', also metaph. and as an epithet of men: 'sour, ill-tempered' (Hp., Ar., Thphr.), cf. e.g. κεγχρίνης, ἐλαφίνης; ὀξαλίς, -ίδος [f.] 'sorrel, Rumex' (Nic., Ps.-Dsc.) with ὀξάλ-ειος 'tartish' (Apollod. Car.), to *ὄξαλος; ὀξηλίς [f.] plant name (Theognost.).
2. Adjectives: ὀξ-ηρός 'relating to wine vinegar, acetic' (S., Ar., medic.), -ωτός 'in salt' (Ar. Fr. 130), -ώδης 'like wine vinegar, sour' (Gal.), -ῖτις [f.] 'tasting like wine vinegar' (PHolm.). 3. ὀξίζω [v.] 'to taste or smell like wine vinegar' (medic.).
•ETYM From ►ὀξύς, like ἧδος to ἡδύς, εὖρος to εὐρύς, etc.

ὀξύα, -η [f.] 'beech, Fagus silvatica' (Xanth., Thphr.), 'spear shaft (made of beech wood), spear' (Archil., E.). ◄?►
•VAR Secondarily ὀξέα, -εῖα (but cf. below).
•DER ὀξυ-όεις 'made of beechwood', of ἔγχος, δόρυ (Il.); hardly enlarged from ὀξύς, as per Bechtel 1914: 55; ὀξύ-ϊνος (-εϊνος) 'id.' (Thphr., Delos III^{a}).
•ETYM On the variation ὀξύα, -η, see Schwyzer: 189; late ὀξέα after ἰτέα, μηλέα, etc.; ὀξεῖα after the adjective.
Probably identical with the old IE word for 'ash', which got the meaning 'beech' in Albanian as well (cf. on ►φηγός). The Albanian, Armenian, and Germanic forms come closest to Greek: Alb. ah (from ask-* or osk-*), Arm. hac'i (from askiio-*?), ON askr, OHG asc (PGm. aska-, aski-). The suggestion that ὀξύη was reshaped after ὀξύς is not strong, and the assumption of an old metathesis like in ξύν, etc. is untenable (Sánchez Ruipérez Emerita 15 (1947): 67).
The other languages have a deviating stem formation: e.g., Lith. úosis, Ru. jásen' < PIE Heh$_3$s-* (see Derksen 2008 s.v. àsenь*). Other European forms have a short initial vowel, e.g. Lat. ornus [f.] 'mountain-ash' (if from os-Vn-o-*), OIr. uinnius [m.] 'ash-tree' < osno-, and also the Gm., Arm., and Alb. forms mentioned above. This may be taken to point to ablaut Heh$_3$-s- / Hh$_3$-es-*.
The IE character of these words is far from sure, despite the tradition to compare them. The forms are unclear. The vocalic variation in Greek, which is not sufficiently explained by assuming the intervention of an adjective, may in principle also point to a Pre-Greek word. The word ►ἀχερωΐς is unrelated. Witczak Linguistica Baltica 1 (1992): 201-211 connects Arm. hac'i 'ash' with ἀκτέα, while he connects ►ὀξύα with Arm. uši and hoši.

ὀξύγγιον [n.] 'lard' (Dsc., Orib.). ◄LW Lat.?►
•VAR Also ἀξουγγία = Lat. axungia, ἀξούγγιον, Lat. oxingion (gloss.).
•ETYM Borrowed from Lat. axungia. Fur.: 341 thinks that it is rather a loan, not a native Latin word.

ὀξυρεγμία [f.] 'sour eructation of the stomach'. ◄GR► •VAR Also -ίη.
•COMP ὀξυρεγμι-ώδης, -άω (medic.), κρομμυ-οξυρεγμία (Ar. Pax 529).

•ETYM A compound of ὀξύς and ἐρυγμός with a suffix -ία-, so from *ὀξυ-ερυγμ-ία with dissimilatory interchange of the vowels; cf. Strömberg 1944: 99.

ὀξύς [adj.] 'sharp, stinging'; 'sour, tartish' (of taste), 'shrill, loud' (of the voice), 'fierce, acute, rapid', of emotion and movement (Il.). ◄?►
•COMP Very often as a first member, also with prefix, e.g. ἄπ-οξυς 'pointed' (Hp., Dsc., Gal.), with back-formation from ἀπ-οξύνω.
•DER ►ὄξος [n.] 'wine vinegar'; ὀξύτης, -ητος [f.] 'sharpness, sourness, acuteness', gramm. 'high-tonedness' (IA); ὀξύς, -ύδος [f.] 'dock, Rumex' (Plin., Gal.), cf. ἐμύς, κροκύς.
Denominative verbs: 1. ὀξύνω 'to sharpen, whet, sour, heat' (IA), also with prefix (especially παρ-), whence ὄξυντρα [n.pl.] 'wages for sharpening tools' (Hell. inscr.), ὀξύσματα [n.pl.] 'whetting, sharpening' (Delos III^{a}), παροξυσμός [m.] 'irritation, embitterment' (Hp., D.), -ντικός 'enlivening, irritating, embittering' (IA), -νταί [pl.] (H.; ὀξύντης Hdn. 1, 77, 25). 2. ἐξοξέω 'to sharpen' (inscr. Delos), cf. Hellmann 1992: 67.
•ETYM Without correspondences outside Greek. It has been compared with ►ὄκρις, which is an o-grade of the root of ►ἄκρος, but there are no further examples for u-stem adjectives with o-vocalism. Alternatively, Narten 1986 reconstructs a root h$_3$ks-* on the strength of the comparison with Skt. akṣṇoti 'to mark the ear', but this is doubtful. See ►ὀξίνα.

ὀπάζω [v.] 'to chase, oppress; to make follow, give as a companion, provide with, grant', med. 'to take as a companion' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. ὀπάσ(σ)αι, -ασθαι, fut. ὀπάσ(σ)ω.
•COMP Rarely with κατα-, περι-, ἐπι-.
•ETYM From ►ἕπομαι (with epic Ionic psilosis), best taken as an iterative-intensive or causative with secondary dental inflection (*ὀπάω : ὀπάζω). Derivation from a noun (*ὀπός, *ὀπή) is possible as well; see on ►ὀπάων, and cf. also ►ὀπηδός.

ὀπάλλιος 'opal' = Lat. opalus (late).
•ETYM See E-M.

ὄπατρος [adj.] Probably 'of the same paternal descent' (A 257, M 371). ◄GR► •ETYM From copulative ►ὀ 1 and πάτρη 'paternal descent' (see ►πατήρ). Wackernagel 1955(1): 491ff., however, thinks it is Aeolic for ὀ-πάτριος (Lyc. 452) 'having the same father', which is certainly possible.

ὀπᾱων, -ονος [m.] 'fellow, companion' (Il.). ◄GR, IE sek^{w}-* 'follow'► •VAR ὀπέων, -ωνος (Hdt.).
•DIAL Myc. PN o-qa-wo-ni /^{h}ok^{w}āwōni/ (Lejeune 1964: 87, Ruijgh 1967a: 256[113]).
•ETYM The form *ὀπά-ϝων 'belonging to the retinue' is derived from *ὀπά [f.] 'followers, retinue', a verbal noun from ►ἕπομαι. The psilosis is also found in ►ὀπάζω. Cf. synonymous κοινών, -άν < -άων. See Ruijgh Minos 9 (1968): 109-155.

ὄπεας [n.] 'awl' (Poll. 10, 141). ◄GR, IE h$_3$ek^{w}-* 'see'► •VAR Also v.l. -εαρ; dat.sg. ὑπέατι (Hdt. 4, 70); ὑπέατα· ὀπήτια (H., ὕπεα· τὰ ὀπίσθια cod.).

•DER Diminutives ὀπήτ-ιον [n.] (Hp., LXX; ὑπ- in gloss.), -ίδιον [n.] (Poll. 7, 83); unclear Nicoch. 9.
•ETYM Vine Glotta 72 (1994): 31-40 rejects Schwyzer's interpretation and assumes a stem in -ur/n-, also from opā-* 'hole'; this gives a substantive opā-u̯r̥ / opā-u̯n̥t-. The word would properly mean 'hole-making thing' = 'awl', rather than 'provided with an eye'. The nominative would then yield ὄπεαρ, and was replaced by ὄπεας. The form *ὀπηατ- > *ὀπεᾱτ- gives ὀπητ- by contraction. Vine adds a discussion of Myc. o-pa-wo-ta, ultimately rejecting the derivation from ὀπή.
The form with ὑπ- remains difficult; folk etymology was assumed, e.g. by Frisk, and dialectal origin (cf. Aeol. ὐπίσσω = ὀπίσσω) may also be considered.

ὀπή [f.] 'light opening, hatch, hole, hollow' (Ar., Arist.), 'sight' (Cerc. 4, 23; beside ἀκουά). ◄IE h₃ekʷ-* 'see'► •VAR Dor. -α.
•COMP As a second member in στε(ι)ν-ωπός 'with a narrow opening, narrow' (Il.), πολυ-ωπός 'having many holes, mesh' (χ 386, etc.), ω analogical or metrical; also in ►ἐνόπαι, ►μετόπη, etc.; further also in ►ἀνόπαια?
•DER ὀπαῖος 'having an opening', of a tile (Diph. Com., Poll.), ὀπαῖον [n.] 'skylight, chimney-flue' (Att. inscr., Plu.), cf. Bérard REGr. 67 (1954): 4; ὀπήεις 'having a hole', of δίφρος (Hp.).
•ETYM If it is a verbal abstract from ὀπ- 'see', ὀπή must originally have meant 'sight' (thus as an incidental poetic formation in Cerc.; see above), whence 'that through which one sees'. It can, however, also be an extension from a root noun, thus an agent or instrument noun in origin. See ►ὄμμα.

ὀπηδός [m.] 'attendant, companion' (h. Merc. 450, late prose). ◄GR► •VAR Dor. (also trag., etc.) ὀπᾱδός.
•DER ὀπηδέω, ὀπαδέω [v.] 'to attend, accompany' (Il.), -εύω (A. R.) with ὀπάδησις [f.] 'attendance' (Criton apud Stob.), ὀπηδητήρ· σύνοδος, ἀκόλουθος 'fellow, companion' (H.).
•ETYM On ὀπάων, ὀπαδός in tragedy, see Björck 1950: 109f. Since ὀπηδός can hardly be separated from synonymous ὀπάων, an analysis ὀπη-δός (ὀπ-ηδός?) has been considered. Such a formation is unknown, however, especially for an agent noun (but several in -ηδών do exist). Meier-Brügger Glotta 69 (1991): 171f. therefore derives the word from an adverb *ὀπηδόν 'in company'; the substantive would have been derived from the verb ὀπηδέω.
The connection with Hitt. ḫapati- 'servant, etc.' must be abandoned (see Tischler 1983ff.: 163f.).

ὀπῑπεύω [v.] 'to look after something, stare or peek at someone' (Il.). ◄IE opi-h₃kʷ-* 'look at'► •VAR Aor. ὀπιπεῦσαι; the pres. ὀπιπτεύω arose after ὀπτεύω.
•COMP As a second member παρθεν-οπῖπα [voc.] 'one who stares at maidens' (Λ 385), after which παιδ-οπῖπαι [pl.] (Ath.), etc.

•DER ὀπιπευτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'sbd. who stares' (Man., Nonn.), ὀπιπᾷ· ἐξαπατᾷ 'deceives' (H.).
•ETYM Because of the strong productivity of the verbs in -εύω, several nominal stems can be considered as a basis. A verbal noun ὀπῑπή, like ὀπωπή and ►ἐνῑπή, is most likely; thence the denominative ὀπιπᾷ and the second member -οπῖπα in compounds. The stem consists of a preverb ὀπι- (see ►ὄπισθεν) and the zero grade of h₃ekʷ-, giving opi-h₃kʷ-* > ὀπῑπ-.

ὄπις [f.] 'revenge, punishment, retribution of the gods' (Hom., Hes.), 'help, assistance from the gods' (Pi. P. 8, 71); 'awe, obedience, solicitude' (Hdt., Pi., Mosch.). ◄IE h₃ekʷ-* 'see'► •VAR Acc. -ιν, -ιδα; dat. -ι.
•DER ὀπίζομαι 'to awe, fear, shy' (Il.), also with ἐπι-, post-Hom. 'to worry about', e.g. ὀπίδδομαι (Lacon. epigram), late aor. ὠπίσατο (Q. S.); ὀπιδνός [adj.] 'awesome' (A. R. 2, 292), rather verbal than nominal, cf. Chantraine 1933: 193 and 195. PN Δηϊ-οπίτης, Ὀπίτης [m.] (Λ 420 and 301).
•ETYM The connection with ὀπ- in ὄψομαι, etc. can hardly be rejected. This implies an older meaning 'sight, look, glance', whence 'animadversion, punishment' on the one hand, 'consideration, respect, reverence' on the other. The development of meaning of the noun was partly influenced by ὀπίζομαι. Cf. on ►ἐνιπή.

ὄπισθεν [adv., prep.] '(from) behind, at the back, after(wards)' (Il.). ◄IE h₁epi, h₁opi 'close upon, at, behind'► •VAR Also -ε (Ion. poet.); ὄπιθε(ν) (Il.).
•COMP Many compounds like ὀπισθό-δομος [m.] 'backmost hall of the temple of Athena' (Att.); on ὀπισθέναρ see ►θέναρ. As a second member in μετ-όπισθε(ν) 'behind, after' (Il.), etc.
•DER ὀπίσθ-ιος (IA), -ίδιος (Sophr., Call., AP) 'situated in the back'; grades of comparison ὀπίστατος (Θ 342, Λ 178), instead of *ὀπίσθ-ατος(?), and thence -τερος (Arat., Nonn.) beside ὀπισθό-τερος (Arat.). Further ὀπίσ(σ)ω (Il.), Aeol. ὐπίσσω (Sapph.) 'backwards, afterwards' with ὀπισώ-τατος (Hell.); ἐξ-οπίσω 'id.' (Il.), etc.
•ETYM The old adverb/preposition ὄπι (Myc. o-pi) is retained in ὄπι-θεν. Later, ὄπισθεν was formed from this after πρόσ-θεν and ὀπίσ(σ)ω. The latter stands for opi-ti̯o-*; cf. on εἴσω s.v. ►εἰς for the suffix. For connections outside Greek, see on ►ἔπι; the o-grade is also found in Lat. ob, etc.

ὀπιτίων [m.] a plant with a bulb, perhaps 'Bunium ferulaceum' (Thphr.). ◄PG(V)► •ETYM Fur.: 240 compares οὔιτον 'an Egyptian truffle'; οὔιτον τὸ ὑπ' ἐνίων οἰτόν (H.) beside ἴτον a Thracian mushroom (Ath. 2, 62a v.l. οἰτόν; iton Plin.), which he analyses as pointing to (ὀ)ϝιτον. He further connects ὕδνον, οἴδνα. The variations point to a Pre-Greek word.

ὁπλή [f.] 'the unsplit hoof of a horse' (Λ 536 = Υ 501), 'the split hoof of oxen, cattle' (h. Merc., Hes., Pi., IA). ◄?►
•DER ὁπλή-εις 'with hooves' (Poeta apud D. Chr. 32, 85).

•ETYM Unexplained. The formally obvious connection with ὅπλον is semantically hard to explain. Connection with ἁπλή 'simple', with *sn̥- > ὁ-, could be envisaged, although the conditions of this development would remain unclear.

ὁπλίας [?] · Λοκροὶ τοὺς τόπους ἐν οἷς συνελαύνοντες ἀριθμοῦσι τὰ πρόβατα καὶ τὰ βοσκήματα 'the Locrians thus call the places where they drive together their catlle and count it' (H.). ⋖?⋗ •ETYM The thesaurus suggests that in these places many traces of hoofs were seen; hardly the correct solution.

ὅπλον [n.] 'implement, tool, instrument, marine instruments', notably 'tackle, (heavy) weapons' (Il.). ⋖IE *sep- 'care, prepare', *sop-lo- 'instrument'⋗ •VAR Mostly ὅπλα [pl.].
•COMP ὁπλο-μάχ-ος 'who fights with heavy weapons', -έω, -ία (Att.). ἔν-οπλος 'under arms, armed' (Tyrt., S., E.), enlarged ἐν-όπλιος 'id.', also substantivized (scil. ῥυθμός) as the name of a military rhythm (Pi.); on ►ὑπέροπλος, see s.v.
•DER 1. Diminutive ὁπλάριον (Hell.). 2. Ὅπλη-τες [pl.], gen. Ὁπλήθων name of one of the four oldest Ionian phylai (Hdt., Milete); -θ- after πλῆθος, or by transfer of aspiration? 3. ὁπλί-της Dor. -τας [m.] 'heavily armed (warrior)' i.e. 'hoplite' (Pi., IA), fem. -τις (Poll.), together with -τικός, -τεύω, -τεία (Att.). 4. ὁπλ-ικός 'pertaining to arms' (Vett. Val.). 5. Ὁπλεύς [m.] PN (Hes. Sc.). 6. Ὁπλό-σμιος [m.] epithet of Zeus in Arcadia (Arist., inscr. III^{a}), -σμία [f.] epithet of Hera in Elis, etc. (Lyc.), -δμία [f.] name of a phyle in Mantinea (IV^{a}); formation unclear. 7. ►ὁπλίας: Λοκροὶ τοὺς τόπους, ἐν οἷς συνελαύνοντες ἀριθμοῦσι τὰ πρόβατα καὶ τὰ βοσκήματα (H.) is unclear. 8. ►ὁπλότερος. 9. Denominative verbs: a) ὁπλέω = ὁπλίζω only in ὥπλεον ζ 73; b) ὁπλίζω, -ομαι 'to prepare', of food and drinks, etc. (Hom.), 'to arm, equip (oneself)' (Il.), aor. ὁπλίσ(σ)αι, -ασθαι, -σθῆναι, late perf. ὥπλικα, often with prefix, e.g. ἐξ-, ἐφ-, καθ-. Thence ὅπλ-ισις [f.], -ισμός [m.] 'arming, armament, equipment, equipage' (Att.), -ισμα [n.] 'arm(s)' (E., Pl.), ἐξοπλισ-ία [f.] 'equipment, position, muster, (military) review' (X., Ain. Tact., etc.), also ἐξοπλασία [f.] 'id.' (Arist., inscr.), probably after δοκιμασία, γυμνασία, etc.; ὁπλιστής, Dor. -τάς [m.] 'armed warrior', also attributive (Vett. Val., AP). c) ὅπλε-σθαι 'to prepare', of δεῖπνον (Τ 172, Ψ 159), formation after the thematic root-presents (Schwyzer: 722f.), if not simply a mistake of the tradition for ὁπλεῖσθαι, as per Solmsen 1901: 90. On the use of ὅπλον and derivatives in Hom. see Trümpy 1950: 81ff.
•ETYM Greek formation with suffix -λ- and o-grade (Chantraine 1933: 240), from the inherited root of ►ἕπω 'to care for, perpetrate'.

ὁπλότερος, -τατος [adj.] 'junior, youngest' always of persons, also applied to women (Il.). ⋖GR⋗ •ETYM Oppositional formation in -τερος, like κουρότερος, ἀγρότερος, and ὀρέστερος. According to a remarkable interpretation from antiquity, it properly means 'able to wear arms, sturdy', as opposed to the γέροντες. Extensive argumentation in Bechtel 1914 s.v.; cf. also Barone Boll. fil. class. 13 (1906-1907): 283.

ὁποκάρπασον ⇒κάρπασον.

ὀπός [m.] 'plant juice', especially 'juice of the fig-tree used to curdle milk, fig curd' (E 902). ⋖IE *sok^{w}o- 'juice, resin'⋗ •COMP Some compounds like πολύ-οπος 'juicy', ὀπο-βάλσαμον [n.] 'the juice of a balm' (Thphr.) for ὀπὸς βαλσάμιος (alternative explanation by Risch IF 59 (1949): 287), likewise ὀπο-κάρπαθον (Plin.), -κάλπασον (Gal.), see Thiselton-Dyer Journal of Phil. 34 (1915): 305ff.
•DER 1. ὄπιον [n.] 'poppy juice, opium' (Diocl. Fr. 94), with ὀπικός 'made of opium' (pap. II-III^{p}); 2. ὀπίας (τυρός) [m.] 'cheese made of milk, curdled with fig juice' (E., Ar.); 3. ὀπώδης (Hp., Arist.), ὀπόεις (Nic.) 'juicy'; 4. as a TN Ὀποῦς (< -όεις), -οῦντος [m.] capital of the eastern Locrians (Il., inscr.) with Ὀπο(ύ)ντιοι [m.pl.], hοποντίων [gen.] (Th., inscr.); on the phonetics see Schwyzer: 253; also a HN, see Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 2 (1950-1951): 233; 5. ὀπίζω 'to press out the juice, curdle with ὀπός' (Arist., Thphr.), also with ἐξ-; thence ὀπισμός [m.] 'pressing out of juice' (Thphr., Hell. pap.), ὄπισμα [n.] 'pressed-out juice' (Dsc.).
•ETYM The form ὀπός, with Ionic psilosis for *ὀπός (cf. hοποντίων), matches with a Balto-Slavic word for 'plant juice, etc.', e.g. OCS sokъ 'juice', Lith. sakaĩ [pl.] 'resin' < IE *sok^{w}o-. A by-form with initial *su̯- is Lith. svekas, Latv. svakas, sveķi 'resin, rubber'. Perhaps Alb. gjak 'blood' is also related (Demiraj 1997 s.v.). Lat. sūcus, probably from *souko- or *seuko-, is clearly deviant.

ὀπτάζομαι, ὀπτάνομαι, ὀπτός ⇒ὄπωπα, ὄσσε.

ὀπτάω [v.] 'to fry, roast, bake' (Od.). ⋖PG?(V)⋗ •VAR ὀπτεύμενος (Theoc.), aor. ὀπτῆσαι (Il.), ὀπτηθῆναι (Od.), perf. ὤπτηκα, -ημαι (Euphro or Ar.), fut. ὀπτήσομαι (Luc.).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐπ-, ἐξ-, κατ-, παρ-.
•DER ὄπτησις [f.] 'frying' (Milete V^{a}, Hp., Arist.), with ὀπτήσιμος 'fit for frying' (Eub.), ὀπτ-ήτειρα [f.] epithet of κάμινος (Call.), -ητήρια (H. as an explanation of ὠψά, alphabetically wrong, so very doubtful); also ὀπτευτήρ [m.] 'smith', of Hephaistos (Coluth. 54 V-VI^{p}) as if from *ὀπτεύω; cf. καμινευτήρ, etc. As a second member in γαστρ-όπτης, fem. -όπτις 'sausage fryer' (Delos IV-III^{a}). Backformation ἔξ-οπτος 'well-done' (Hp.), from ἐξ-οπτάω (IA). Further ὀπτός 'fried, roasted, baked' (Od.); with ὀπτ-αλέος 'fried, roasted' (Hom., Ath.), enlarged from ὀπτός after αὑαλέος, etc.; ὀπτανός 'fried, fit for frying' (com., Arist.), formed like ἑψανός with related mg. From ὀπτανός further ὀπτάν-ιον 'kitchen' (com., inscr.), -ικός 'fit for frying' (pap. III^{p}), -εύς [m.] 'kitchen master' (pap.) with -εῖον (-ήϊον) 'kitchen' (Plu., Luc., Hdn. Gr.); ὀπτανάριος· assator, coctarius (gloss.). Formally isolated is ὀπτασία [f.] 'roasting, kiln' vel sim. (PHolm. 9, 39 δὸς εἰς ὀπτασίαν ὀπτᾶσθαι), probably to ὀπτάω after θερμασία vel sim.
•ETYM As to its formation, ὀπτάω is a verb in -τάω like ἀρτάω, φοιτάω, οὐτάω, etc. It is commonly assumed that the verbal adjective ὀπτός (or rather τὰ ὀπτά) forms its basis. Etymology unclear. Fur.: 263 compares ὄψον 'any cooked dish' as a variant, which seems a good possibility; the variation is Pre-Greek.

ὀπτίλ(λ)ος ⇒ὀφθαλμός.

ὀπυίω [v.] 'to marry, take as a wife', late also 'to have sexual intercourse with', pass. 'to get married', of women (Il., also Cret. and late prose). On the mg. see Ruijgh 1957: 107f. (against Leumann 1950: 284). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Also ὀπύω (Arist., Cerc., Moer.), fut. ὀπύσω (Ar. Ach. 255).
•DER ὀπυστύς [f.] 'marriage' (Cret.), with analogical -σ-; from the present stem ὀπυιηταί [pl.] 'spouses' (Herod.). ὀπυόλαι· γεγαμηκότες 'married women' (H.); aor. subj. pass. ὀπυασθώμεθα (Lyr. Alex. Adesp. 1, 52) as if from *ὀπυάζομαι.
•ETYM Hitt. ḫapuš- 'penis' is not related: it was cited in this form and compared with ὀπυίω by Watkins 1982, but actually has a quite different form ḫāpūša(šš)-, and also a different meaning, viz. 'shaft, shin-bone'; see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. for details. The old comparison with Etr. puia 'wife' (Hammarström Glotta 11 (1921): 212) is tempting; if correct, it is probably a Pre-Greek Mediterranean word.

ὄπωπα [v.perf.] 'to watch, observe, view, contemplate' (Il.). ⊲IE *h_3ek^w- 'see'⊳ •VAR Innovated ipf. ὀπώπεον (Orph.) and aor. ὀπωπήσασθαι (Euph.). Further fut. ὄψομαι (Il.), which like the following forms often occurs with prefixes like ἀπ-, ἐπ(ι)-, κατ-, προ-, ὑπ-, ὑπερ-: aor. pass. ὀφθῆναι (IA) with fut. ὀφθήσομαι, perf. med. ὦμμαι (Att.). As a suppletive present to ὄπωπα, ►ὁράω is used.
•DER ὀπωπ-ή [f.] 'observation, view, eyeball', plur. 'eyes' (Od., A. R.), -ητήρ [m.] 'scout' (h. Merc. 15), -ια [n.pl.] (scil. ὀστέα) 'the bones of the eyes' (Hp.). Derivatives: 1. verbal adjective ὀπτός (Luc. Lex. 9, Ath.), earlier and more common as a derivation from prefixed verbs, e.g. ὕπ-, ἄπ-, κάτ-, πρό-οπτος (προὖπτος); thence ὑπ-, ἀπ-, κατ-οπτ-εύω, ὑποψ-ία, etc.; 2. agent and instrument nouns: a) ἐπ-, κατ- (h. Merc. 372), ὑπερ-, δι-όπτης, etc., also ἐπ-, κατ-, ὑπερ-, δι-οπτ-εύω (K 451), διοπτήρ (K 562); thence the simplex ὀπτεύω (Ar. Av. 1061); b) ὀπτήρ [m.] 'scout' (Od.), also with δι-, ἐπ-, κατ-; thence ὀπτήρ-ια [n.pl.] 'gifts upon seeing a person' (E., Call.); c) δί-, εἴσ-, ἔν-, κάτ-οπτρον [n.] (Alc., Pi., A.) with derivatives; 3. Adjectives: ὀπτ-ικός 'ptng. to sight', -ική [f.] 'optics' (Arist.), older (Pl.) συν-, ἐπ-, ὑπερ-οπτικός. 4. Action noun: ὄψ [f.], gen. ὀπός 'eye, face, look' (Emp. 88, Antim. 65), more frequent as a second member, e.g. οἶν-οψ 'wine-colored' (Hom.); ὄψις (ἔπ-, πρόσ-, σύν-) [f.] 'sight, vision, view, appearance' (Il.); ὄψανον [n.] 'appearance' (A. Ch. 534). 5. For ὀπτίλ(λ)ος [m.], see on ►ὀφθαλμός. 6. Verbs: ὀπτ-άνομαι (LXX, Hell.), -άζομαι (LXX) 'to appear, become visible', probably after αἰσθάνομαι and αὐγάζομαι; ὀπταίνω (Eust.), like παπταίνω, etc.
•ETYM The verbal root is also found in YAv. aiβii-āxšaiia- 'to watch over' < h_3ek^w-s- (other interpretations in LIV² s.v. h_3ek^w-) and in Skt. īkṣate 'to perceive' < h_1i-h_3k^w-s-, which (like the Greek future) are originally desideratives. The root is also contained in ►ὄπις, ►ὄσσε, ►ὄμμα, and ►ὤψ.

ὀπώρα [f.] 'end of the summer, beginning of autumn' (Il.), 'harvest, fruit' (post-Hom.), cf. on θέρος s.v. ►θέρομαι. ⊲IE *h_1opi 'at, on' + h_1os-r/n- 'harvest-time, summer'⊳ •VAR Ion. -η. Also ὀπώρα; Lac. (Alcm.) ὀπάρα (see below).
•COMP As a first member e.g. in ὀπωρο-φύλαξ [m.] 'fruit watcher, garden watcher' (Arist.).

•DER 1. ὀπωρ-ινός 'belonging to ὀπ.' (Il.); 2. τὰ ὀπωρ-ιαῖα [n.pl.] 'fruits' (Thphr.); 3. -ιμος 'fructiferous' (Anon. apud Suid.), after κάρπιμος; 4. -ιμεῖος 'of fruit, belonging to fruit' (PLond.; uncertain); 5. -ικός 'belonging to ὀπ.', also name of a medicine against dysentery (Plin., Gp.); 6. Ὀπωρεύς [m.] epithet of Zeus in Akraiphia (inscr.); hoπορίς [f.] PN (Lacon. or Mess. inscr.), Hopora [f.] PN (Lat. inscr.). 7. ὀπωράριον = pomarium (gloss.). 8. Denominative verb ὀπωρ-ίζω 'to reap (fruit), harvest in autumn' (IA) with -ισμός [m.] 'vintage' (Aq.). Hypostasis μετ-όπωρον (μεθ-) 'what comes after ὀπώρα', φθιν-όπωρον 'when the ὀπ. ends', '(late) autumn' (IA), a verbal governing compound with them. enlargement. Thence μετ-, φθιν-οπωρ-ινός (IA), etc.
•ETYM The aspiration is not original and must have been taken from a word with closely related meaning, e.g. ὥρα. The form is a contraction from op-oharā, yielding Lacon. ὀπάρα; it consists of the preposition ὀπι- (see on ►ἔπι and ►ὄπισθεν) and a heteroclitic neuter ohar < h_1os-r. The Greek word properly means 'the time following summer'. The oblique form h_1os-n- is continued in Balto-Slavic and Germanic as an n-stem, e.g. CS jesenь, Ru. ósen' [f.] 'autumn', Go. asans [f.] 'harvest, summer', OHG aran, MoHG Ernte 'harvest'.

ὀραυγέομαι [v.] 'to inspect closely' (Aesar. apud Stob. 1, 49, 27). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM Verbal dvandva-compound from ὁράω and αὐγέομαι; cf. Wahrmann Glotta 19 (1931): 178. On the topic in general, see Schwyzer: 645.

ὁράω [v.] 'to look, perceive, contemplate, see' (Il.). ⊲IE *uer- 'observe, note'⊳ •VAR Ion. also ὁρέω (Hdt.), also ὅρηαι (ξ 343), ὅρητο (A 56 and 198 acc. to Zenodotus, uncertain accent), ὁρῇς, -ῇ, -ῆν (Hp., Democr., Herod.), Aeol. ὄρημι (Sapph.), ὄρη (Theoc.); ipf. ἑώρων (Att.), epic 3sg. ὅρα, Ion. ὥρα (Hdt.), etc.; present also ὅρονται (ξ 104) with -ντο (γ 471), ὅρει· φυλάσσει 'guards, watches' (H.); innovated perf. act. ἑόρακα (Att., also ἑώρ-), Ion. ὀρώρηκα and ὥρηκα (Herod.), Dor. ptc. ὡρακυῖα (Epid.), med. ἑώραμαι (late Att.), aor. pass. ὁραθῆναι (Arist., D. S.), plpf. also ὀρώρει (Ψ 112).
•COMP Highly frequent with prefix, e.g. ἐφ- (ἐπ-), καθ- (κατ-), παρ-, προ-, συν-, ὑπερ-.
•DER Almost all derivatives are Hell. and late, as opposed to the older ones which derive from primary ὀπ- (see ►ὄπωπα) and from ►ἰδεῖν: 1. ὁρᾱτός 'visible' (Hp., Pl.), προ-ορατός 'which can be foreseen' (X. Cyr. 1, 6, 23) as against πρό-οπτος (προὖπτος) 'foreseen, apparent' (IA); 2. ὅραμα [n.] 'sight, spectacle, appearance' (X., Arist., LXX), also παρ- (Hell. and late), with ὁραματίζομαι (Aq.) against ►ὄμμα, ►εἶδος; 3. ὅρασις [f.], also with προ-, παρ-, ὑπερ-, etc., 'sight, face, look, apparition', plur. also 'eyes' (Demad., Arist., Men.) as opposed to ὄψις; ὑφόρασις 'suspicion' (Plb.) for older ὑποψία; 4. ὁρατής [m.] 'viewer' (LXX, Plu.) against ὀπτήρ 'scout'; ὁρατήρ (H. as an explanation of ὀπτήρ); 5. ὁρατικός 'able to see, provided with sight' (Arist., Ph.), with ἐφ- 'fit for oversight' (X.), as against ἐποπτικός 'belonging to the ἐπόπτης' (Pl.). 6. ὁρατίζω [v.] 'to catch sight of, aim for' (medic. IVᵖ). 7. See ►οὖρος [m.] 'watcher' and ►ἐπίουρος.

•ETYM The ipf. ἑώρων < *ἠ-ϝόρων, with aspiration after ὁρῶ, and the perf. ἑόρακα < *ϝε-ϝόρακα, also ἑώρ- after the ipf., seem to point to an original ϝ-, which has left a trace neither in Homer nor epigraphically, and is also absent in Myc. o-ro-me-no. It remains uncertain whether the rough breathing is connected with the older ϝ-.
The presentic forms, from which all non-presentic forms are derived, including the verbal nouns, seem to require three different stems: 1. ϝορᾱ- in ὁρά-ω, whence perhaps regularly Ion. ὁρέω; 2. ϝορη- in Aeol. ὄρημι, ὄρη, epic ὄρηαι, etc. (see above); 3. ϝορ- in ὄρονται, -ντο, ὄρει.
Original worā-i̯e/o-* can be either an iterative-intensive deverbative of the type ποτάομαι, which fits the meaning well, or be explained as a denominative from a feminine worā*, as found in φρουρά < *προ-hορά < *προ-ϝορά, and in Germanic, e.g. OHG wara [f.] 'attentiveness', wara neman 'observe', ToA war, ToB were 'flavor'. The Germanic and Tocharian words are usually reconstructed as verbal nouns uor-eh*$_2$-, uor-o-, respectively, but Hackstein 2002: 123-131 reconstructs the root as su̯erh$_3$-, and connects it with ►ἔρυμαι.
More difficult to judge, however, are Aeolic (ϝ)όρημι and other seemingly athematic verbal forms. The forms ὁρῇς, -ῇ, -ῆν may have been transformed from this by thematization. One may compare Lat. verēri 'to venerate', though it has an ablauting stem vowel.
The primary thematic formation ὄρονται, -ντο, to which perhaps also belongs ὄρει (H.), is built on the root. It is attested in the formulaic expression ἐπὶ δ' ἀνέρες ἐσθλοὶ ὄρονται (-ντο), and modified in the plpf. ἐπὶ δ' ἀνὴρ ἐσθλὸς ὀρώρει. The o-vocalism is remarkable, though analogous cases can be found, e.g. ὄθομαι, οἴχομαι.
From the primary verb are derived both *προ-ϝορ-ά in ►φρουρά (see above) and *-ϝορός 'guardian', a form which occurs only as a second member in compounds, e.g. θυρ-, τιμ-ωρός, κηπουρός from θυρα-, τιμα-, κηπο-ϝορ-ός. Formally, we may compare Germanic adjectives like OS war 'attentive, cautious, aware', OHG giwar 'id.'.
Further instances of a root uer-* include Latv. veruôs, vērtiês 'to inspect, observe', ToA wär, ToB wär-sk- 'to smell'.
See ►οὖρος 2, ►ὥρα.

ὀργάζω [v.] 'to soften, mold, tan'. ⇒ἐόργη.

ὄργανον [n.] 'implement, tool, instrument, sense organ, organ' (Hp., Ctes., Att., Arist.). ◂IE uerǵ-* 'work'▸ •COMP Few compounds, e.g. ὀργανο-ποιός [m.] 'instrument maker' (D. S.).
•DER Diminutive ὀργάν-ιον (AP, M. Ant.), -ικός 'instrumental, operative, practical' (Arist.), -ίτης [m.] 'engineer' (pap. IV[p]), -ιστής [m.] 'engineer of waterworks' (pap. II[p]), unattested *ὀργανίζω, but δι-, κατ-οργανίζω (AP, Alchem.); ὀργανάριος = fistularius (gloss.); ὀργαν-όομαι 'to be organized, be provided with organs' (S. E., Iamb.), also with δι-, whence (δι-)ὀργάν-ωσις [f.] 'organisation' (Iamb.). Ὀργάνη [f.] epithet of Athena (Thasos V[a], Athens), cf. Ἐργάνη; as an adjective ὀργάνα 'operative, formative', of χείρ (E. Andr. 1014, not quite certain).

•ETYM Formation like ξόανον (from ξέω, -ξοος), ὄχανον (from ἔχω, ὄχος, -οχος), πλόκανον (from πλέκω, πλόκος), ὀρκάνη (from ὅρκος, ἕρκος), etc. (Chantraine 1933: 198, Schwyzer: 489f.); similarly, ὄργανον stands beside -οργός, ὄργια, ἔοργα, ἔργον. It is unclear whether it was derived directly from the verb or from -οργός or ἔργον. See ►ἔργον and ►ἔρδω.

ὀργάς, -άδος [f.]⇒ὀργή, ὀργάω.

ὀργεών, -ῶνος [m.]⇒ὄργια.

ὀργή 1 [f.] 'psychical drive, propensity, character, (strong) emotion, passion, wrath' (h. Cer. 205, Hes. Op. 304); on the mg. see Marg 1938: 13f., cf. Diller Gnomon 15 (1939): 597. ◂IE uerǵ-* 'swell of juice, strength, anger'▸ •COMP As a second member in ἄν-, δύσ-, εὔ-οργος (Cratin., S.), analogically enlarged in ἀν-, δυσ-, εὐ-όργητος (Hp., Gorg., Th., cf. ἄνοος : ἀνόητος, etc.), with -ησία [f.] (Hp., E.); transformed into an s-stem, e.g. περι-οργής (Th.).
•DER ὀργ-ίλος 'irascible' (Hp., X., D., Arist.) with -ιλότης [f.] (Arist., Plu.).
The verb ὀργάω 'to bristle, swell with nourishing liquids and juice' (of the earth and of fruits), 'to bristle with, be full of lust and desire' (of men), 'to desire strongly' (IA), rarely with ἐξ-, etc., is probably a denominative, and mostly presentic. Thence: 1. back-formation νέ-οργος 'freshened', of γῆ (Thphr.); 2. ἐξόργησις [f.] 'stong desire' (Herm. in Phdr.); 3. ὀργητύς· ὀργή (H.); 4. ὀργασμός [f.] 'orgasm' (sch. Hp.), after σπασμός, etc.
From ὀργή in the sense 'wrath': 1. ὀργίζομαι [v.] 'to be angry', also -ίζω 'to make angry', also with prefix, e.g. συν-, δι-, ἐξ-, παρ-, περι-, (Att.), with παροργ-ισμός [m.], -ισμα [n.] 'provocation, wrath' (LXX, Ep. Eph.); 2. ὀργαίνω [v.] 'to make wrathful, be wrathful' (S., E.).
From ὀργάω (if not from ὀργή or an older root-noun, see below) also ὀργάς, -άδος [f.] 'luxuriously fertile', of earth, marshes (Att.).
•ETYM ὀργή has a direct correspondence in Skt. ūrjā́ [f.] 'nourishment, strength', but the latter is an enlargement of older ū́rj- 'id.', and the formal identity of ὀργή and ūrjā́ is secondary. At first sight, the Skt. form seems to require urHǵ-*, but the same problem occurs in Skt. ūrdhvá- beside ὀρθός, and there is yet no definite solution for this.
Semantically, ū́rj(ā́) fits much better with ὀργάω, which preserved the original concrete meaning. The transference to the psychological sphere in ὀργή is found in OIr. ferc [f.] 'rage' < IE uerǵ-h*$_2$-.
For semantic influence of ἔργον on ὀργή (S. Ant. 355) and ὀργάς, etc., see Tovar Emerita 10 (1942): 228ff.

ὀργή 2 [f.] a difficult word in Herond. IV 46; perhaps an adjective opposed to βέβηλος. Cf. V. Schmidt 1968: 109-114, who thinks that the underlying substantive is γυνή rather than γῆ; it could mean 'initiated' and belong to ὄργια. ◂?▸ •ETYM Uncertain.

ὄργια [n.pl.] 'secret religious customs, sacred secret service' (IA). ◂?▸
•VAR Rarely -ιον [sg.].

•DER ὀργιάς, -άδος [f.] 'belonging to ὄ., orgiastic' (Man.), ὀργιάζω 'to celebrate ὄ., to initiate into the ὄ.' (E., Pl., Ph.), also with ἐξ-, συν-, etc., with ὀργιασ-μός [m.] 'celebration of the ὄ.', -τής [m.] 'participant in the ὄ.' (Str., Plu.); -τικός 'orgiastic, passionate' (Arist.).
ὀργεών, also -(ε)ιών, -ῶνος [m.] 'member of a religious brotherhood' (h. Ap. 389, Att.), with ὀργεωνικός (inscr.), from ὄργια with suppression of -ια after other nouns in -εών (see on this topic Chantraine 1933: 163f., Schwyzer: 521); positing a pre-form *ὄργος is unnecessary.
•ETYM Traditionally interpreted as a derivative from the root of ἔργον, ἔρδω, with o-vocalism like in ►ὄργανον, etc. Alternatively, is it related to ὀργή and ὀργάω? Chantraine 1933: 55 considers foreign origin because of the meaning. On history and meaning of ὄργια, see van den Burg 1939.

ὄργυια [f.] 'fathom' (Ψ 327). ◅PG▻
•VAR Att. inscr. -υα, also ὀρόγυια (Pi.), gen. -ᾶς, -ῆς, plur. αἱ (cf. below).
•COMP As a second member, beside regular and usual -όργυιος (λ 312), also δεκ-ώρυγος 'ten fathoms long', etc. (X. Cyn. 2, 5) with compositional lengthening and remarkable u-vocalism, which can hardly be explained by Cowgill's Law.
•DER ὀργυι-αῖος (AP), -όεις (Nic.), 'a fathom long or wide', ὀργυι-όομαι in (δι-, περι-)ωργυιωμένος 'outstretched (a fathom wide)' (Ctes., Hipparch., Lyc.).
•ETYM Traditionally explained as a substantivized perf. ptc. fem. from ὀρέγω 'to stretch (the arms)' without reduplication, reminiscent of ἄγυια, ἅρπυια, etc.; see Beekes 1969: 27f. This explanation meets with semantic and formal difficulties: why use a feminine form to express this notion, and why a perfect? The supposed archaic ablaut ὄργυια: ὀρόγυια is problematic as well; one rather expects that the ο was anaptyctic, as suggested by DELG s.v. Anaptyxis could also explain the variant *-ορυγ-, seen in compounded -ωρυγ-.
Most problems have been solved by De Lamberterie Die Sprache 35 (1991-1993): 128-130, who assumes that the word originally occurred in a syntagm ὄργυια χείρ, which was used in the dual; this presupposes an adjective *ὀργύς. Further traces of a u-stem of the root *$h_3$reǵ- are found in Skt. r̥jú-, Av. ərəzu-, and especially in Ved. r̥ju-hásta- 'with outstrechted hands'. See ►ὀρέγω.

ὄρδειλον ⇒τόρδῦλον.

ὄρδ<η>μα [n.] · ἡ τολύπη τῶν ἐρίων 'ball of wool', ὄρδικον· τὸν χιτωνίσκον. Πάριοι 'short frock' (H.). ◅?▻
•VAR Or <ι>, <ω>?
•ETYM Isolated in Greek. Taken as a verbal noun of Lat. ōrdior 'to begin a web, start', e.g. by Pok. 60, which seems doubtful. The form ὠρδυλευσάμην· ἐμόχθησα 'was weary, etc.' (H.) also belongs here, which is from ὀρδυλεύω, deriving from *ὄρδυλος, -ύλη with a formation like in κόνδυλος, κορδύλη, etc.; cf. τολυπεύειν, which also means μοχθεῖν.

ὀρεᾶνες = ἄνδρες in the language of the Pythia (Plu. Mor. 406e). ⇒ὀρε(ι)ᾶνες.

ὀρέγω, -ομαι [v.] 'to reach out (one's hand), hand over, stretch oneself, to stretch out for'. ◅IE *$h_3$reǵ- 'stretch, direct'▻ •VAR Aor. ὀρέξαι, -ασθαι, fut. ὀρέξω, -ομαι (Il.), perf. and plpf. med. 3pl. ὀρωρέχαται, -το (Il.), ὤρεγμαι (Hp.), aor. pass. ὀρεχθῆναι (E., X., Hp. Ep.). Other presentic forms: 1. ptc. ὀρεγ-νύς (Α 351, Χ 37), -νύμενος (AP, Mosch.); 2. ὀριγ-νάομαι (Hes. Sc. 190, Herod., Theoc.), together with the innovated aor. ὠριγν-ήθην (Antipho Soph., Isoc.), fut. -ήσομαι (D. C.); for ι as a secondary prop vowel, cf. κίρνημι (s.v. ►κεράννυμι).
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἐπ-.
•DER 1. ὀρεκτός 'stretched out' (Β 543, Str.), see Ammann 1956: 20, 'desired, longed for' (Arist.) with ὀρεκτεῖν· ἐπιθυμεῖν 'to desire', ὀρεκτιῶν· ἐπιθυμῶν (H.); ἀν-όρεκτος 'without desire for, undesired' (Arist.), with ἀνορ-εκτέω, -εξία (late). 2. ὄρεγμα [n.] 'stretching (e.g. of the hand, also of the foot), step', also as a measure of length (A., E., Arist., Tab. Heracl.). 3. ὄρεξις [f.] 'desire, appetite' (Democr., Arist.) with ὀρεκτικός 'inclined to desire, pursuing' (Arist., Arr.), 'arousing appetite' (Dsc.). 4. ὀρέγδην 'by stretching out' (sch., H.). On ►ὄργυια, see s.v.
•ETYM As a thematic root present, ὀρέγω agrees with Lat. regō 'to direct, lead, govern' and OIr. rigim 'to stretch out'; other Graeco-Latin correspondences are ὀρέξαι ~ rēxī and ὀρεκτός ~ rēctus (Lat. long ē is due to Lachmann's Law). Gm. words like Go. raihts 'straight, right' and Av. rāšta- 'directed, arranged, straight' also belong here. Independent formations are ὄρεγμα, Av. rasman- [m., n.] 'line of battle', and Lat. regimen [n.] 'leadership'. It is uncertain whether there is an old connection between the isolated ptc. ὀρεγ-νύς, -νύμενος and the Av. adjective raš-nu- 'straight'; the present ὀριγνάομαι, with suffixed nasal, is probably independent from Skt. r̥ñjáti 'stretches itself, runs' with nasal infix.

ὀρε(ι)ᾶνες [m.pl.] acc. to Plu. 2, 406e = ἄνδρες in the language of the oracle of the Pythian Apollo; cf. ὀρείονες· ἄνδρες (H.). ◅?▻ •ETYM Formation like Ἀκαρνᾶνες, etc.; further unclear. Acc. to Güntert 1921: 122f., it belongs to ἄρσην, etc.

ὀρεμπότης name or epithet of rivers in the language of the Pythia (Plu. Mor. 406e). ⇒Ὀρομπάτας.

ὀρέοντο [v.] 'they stirred, hurried' (Β 398, Ψ212). ◅?▻
•ETYM If not poetic licence for ὄροντο, it is best taken (with Bechtel 1914 s.v.) as an intensive of ἔρετο· ὡρμήθη 'was stirred' and the aor. ἔρσῃ· ὁρμήσῃ 'will move' (H.), from a root *$h_1$er- 'move'; see on ►ἐρέθω and ►ὄρνυμι.

ὀρεσκῷος [adj.] 'living in the mountains' (Α 268, ι 155, Hes. Fr. 79, 5). ◅IE *ḱei- 'lie'▻ •VAR ὀρεσκόος (A., E.).
•ETYM Compound of ►ὄρος and ►κεῖμαι with o-grade (cf. e.g. δορυ-σσόος to σείω); the irregular length (cf. Skt. -śay-á- 'lying') is probably metrically conditioned, and the -ι- is analogical after κοῖτος, etc. Acc. to Bechtel 1914 s.v., we should write -οι- for -ῳ-. An innovation (after the adjectives in -ιος) is ὀρέσκιος epithet of Dionysus (AP); the same holds for ὀρεσκεύω 'to live in the mountains' (Nic.).

ὀρεσχάς, -άδος [f.] 'vine with grapes', = ὄσχη, -ος (Harp., H.). ◅PG(V)▻

•ETYM The word is evidently related to ►ἀρασχάδες, and as variants, both are of Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 348).

ὀρεύς [m., f.] 'mule', replacing original Att. ἡμίονος (Il., Ar., Arist.). ◄IE *$h_1$er- 'go', *$h_3$er- 'raise'► •VAR Ion. οὐρεύς.
•COMP As a first member in ὀρεω-κόμος [m.] 'mule driver' (Att.), etc. (perhaps for ὀρεο- with influence of the gen. ὀρέως?).
•DER ὀρικός 'belonging to a mule' (Is., Aeschin.).
•ETYM Derived from ὅρος, Ion. οὖρος 'frontier', which originally means 'furrow'. Thus, ὀρεύς would properly mean 'furrow-drawer'. The lack of aspiration in ὀρεύς may be explained through secondary association with ὄρος; on the psilosis, see Chantraine 1942: 185.

ὀρεχθέω [v.] expressive epic poetic verb of unclear mg., in Hom. of βόες σφαζόμενοι (Ψ 30, traditionally explained as 'to rattle'), in Theoc. of the sea (θάλασσαν ... ὀρεχθεῖν 11, 43) 'to roar, surge', but in Ar. (Nu. 1368), A. R. (1, 275), Opp. (H. 2, 583) of the heart (καρδία, κέαρ), also of θυμός (A. R. 2, 49); after this in Nic. (Al. 340) of the κύστις and in the tragedian Aristias (6; V^a) of πέδον, which is rather obscure. ◄?► •ETYM The acoustic notion, which is undeniable in Theoc. and obvious in Homer, cannot possibly be assumed for the other attestations. Etymologically unclear. The ancient connection with ῥοχθέω 'to rustle, roar' is formally difficult, and does not explain all attestations; that with ὀρέγω (assuming an enlargement -θ-; cf. Schwyzer: 703) is gratuitous as long as the meaning is unclear. See DELG s.v. for interpretations from antiquity.

ὀρθαγορίσκος [m.] 'sucking-pig' (Ath., H.), also as a fish-name (Plin.), after its grunting sound, acc. to Strömberg 1943: 69. ◄GR► •DER Further βορθαγορίσκια· χοίρεα κρέα. καὶ μικροὶ χοῖροι βορθαγορίσκοι (-θάκεοι cod.). Λάκωνες 'pig meat; also, small pigs are called β. (Laconian)' (H.).
•ETYM Acc. to several sources in Ath. 4, 140b, it stands for *ὀρθραγορίσκος, "ἐπεὶ πρὸς τὸν ὄρθρον πιπράσκονται", 'because they are sold at day-break'. Thus it would literally mean 'who has its market at day-break', a qualification which Bechtel 1921, 2: 328 rightly finds remarkable. Still, he considers it to be beyond doubt, and the name would then be a word of pleasantry. Acc. to Pisani Paideia 13 (1958): 143, it was created by the Lacedaemonians with unfriendly reference to Ὀρθαγόρας, the first tyrant of Sicyon, whence ὀρθρ- by folk etymology. The meaning was much discussed.

(ϝ)ορθαία [f.] epithet of Artemis (Lacon. and Arc. inscr. since VI^a, X., Plu.). ◄IE? *uerd^h- 'grow'► •VAR Also ϝωρ-, -θεια, -θεα, -θια.
•DER ϝορθασια (Lacon. and Arc. inscr. since V^a), ὀρθωσία (Pi., Hdt., Meg. inscr.); doubtful explanation by Kretschmer Glotta 30 (1943): 155f., see Risch Mus. Helv. 11 (1954): 29[41].

•ETYM Traditionally connected with ὀρθός, but this is doubtful, since the latter has no initial ϝ-, and the semantic connection with Artemis is not clear either. Ruijgh 1967a: §130[315] has suggested that the epithet denotes Artemis as a goddess of growth and fertility; he derives (ϝ)ορθαία from the IE root *uerd^h-, Skt. várdh- 'to grow'.

ὀρθός [adj.] 'upright, straight, right, true' (Il.). ◄IE *h_3rd^huo- 'high, upright'► •DIAL Myc. o-to-wo-, o-tu-wo- and o-two-wo- point to /ort^{h}wo-/.
•COMP As a first member in several compounds, e.g. ὀρθό-κραιρα (see ►κραῖρα), ὀρθό-μαντις, -πολις (Pi.), ὀρθο-στάτης [m.] 'column standing upright, etc.' (Att. inscr., E.); rarely as a second member, e.g. ἔξ-ορθος 'upright' (Ath.), a back-formation from ἐξ-ορθόω (Pl.).
•DER 1. ὄρθ-ιος (-ιο- formal enlargement) 'upright, steep, going up, shrill, loud, arranged in columns' (Λ 11), on the difference of mg. against ὀρθός, see Chantraine 1933: 37; thence ὀρθ-ίαξ [m.] (-ίας H.) 'the lower part of the mast' (Epich.), -ιάζω [v.] 'to cry loudly' (A.), -ιάσματα [pl.] 'high pitch' (Ar.), also 'to raise' (APl.), -ίασις [f.] 'erection' (medic.); -ιάω = -όω (gloss., sch.). 2. ὀρθ-ηλός 'tall, straight' (Hell. inscr.), after ὑψηλός; also -ηρός 'id.' (pap. I^a). 3. ὀρθέσιον· ὄρθιον, μακρόν, ὀξύ, μέγα 'tall, sharp, large' (H.), cf. θεσπέσιος. 4. Ὀρθάννης (Pl. Com., inscr.), also single -ν- (Phot., H.) [m.] name of a Priapus-like demon (-νν- hypocoristic gemination; cf. Ἐργάνη, etc.). 5. ὀρθότης [f.] 'uprightness, straight position; correctness' (IA); -οσύνη [f.] 'uprightness' (Democr.). 6. Denominative verbs: a) ὀρθόω 'to raise, straighten, improve, succeed' (Il.), aor. -ῶσαι, often with prefix, especially δι-, κατ-, ἀν-. Thence (δι-, κατ-, ἀν-)όρθωσις [f.] 'raising, etc.' (Hp., Arist.), δι-, κατ-, ἀπ-όρθωμα [n.] '(implement for) raising, right act, etc.' (Hp., Arist.), δι-, κατ-ορθωτής [m.] 'improver, etc.' (LXX), ὀρθωτήρ [m.] 'raiser, upholder' (Pi.), δι-, κατ-ορθωτικός 'improving, successful' (Arist.); b) (δι-)ορθεύω = (δι-)ορθόω (E.).
•ETYM Traditionally, ὀρθός is identified with Skt. ūrdhvá- 'raised, high' and derived from uord^h-uo-; for the initial ϝ-, the gloss βορσόν· σταυρόν. Ἠλεῖοι 'pole, stake (Elean)' (H.) is compared. The words are thought to derive from the verbal root *uerd^h-, preserved in Skt. várdhati 'to raise, grow (trans.)' and in Av. varəd- 'id.'. However, it is highly awkward to disassociate ὀρθός and ūrdhvá- from the group of Lat. arduus 'steep, lofty', OIr. ard 'high, great', and especially Av. ərəduua- 'high', etc. We have to leave the reflex of the initial in Skt. ūrdhvá- as an inner-Sanskrit problem. Note that a similar problem occurs in the correspondence between ὀργή 'impulse, drive' and Skt. ūrj- 'refreshment, strength'.
There is no evidence for initial w- in Mycenaean. This has been explained in a number of different ways, in order to maintain the connection with Skt. várdhati, e.g. the assumption that PGr. wo-* > o-* at an early date. See ►ὄρθρος and ►(ϝ)ορθαία.

ὀρθόκραιρα ⇒κραῖρα.

ὄρθρος [m.] 'time before daybreak, time of the cock-crow, first dawn', later 'morning' (h. Merc. 98, Hes. Op. 577). ◄IE? *h_3r-d^hro- 'sunrise'► •COMP ὀρθρο-βόας [m.] name of the cock (AP), cf. ►ἠϊκανός; τὸ περί-ορθρον 'dawn' (Th., Hdn.).

•DER 1. Adjectives ὄρθρ-ιος 'belonging to dawn, happening at dawn' (h. Merc. 143), Ὀρθρία [f.] name of a goddess (Schwenn RhM 86 (1937): 298); -ινός 'id.' (Arat., LXX, AP), cf. ἑωθινός, etc.; -ίδιος 'id.' (AP), cf. ἀΐδιος, etc.; grades of comparison ὀρθριαί-τερος, -τατος (Hdn.), adverbial also ὀρθρί-τερον (pap.) after πρωΐ-, ὀψί-τερον.
2. Verbs: a) ὀρθρ-εύω, -ομαι 'to be sleepless or awake in the early morning' (E., Theoc.), back-formation Ὄρθρος [m.] name of a mythical dog (Hes. Th. 309), see Kretschmer Glotta 13 (1924): 270, with ἐπ- also 'to be out of bed early' (D. Chr., Luc.); b) -ίζω 'id.' (LXX, Ev. Luc.) with (ἐπ-)ορθρισμός [m.] (Aq, Plu.).
•ETYM The best etymology proposes $*h_3r\text{-}d^hro\text{-}$, from the root $*h_3er\text{-}$ 'to rise' also found in Lat. ortus 'rise of a star', oriens 'sunrise'. Acc. to Frisk, the meaning 'time before daybreak, first light of the morning' would seem to contradict this etymology, but it is unclear why. Frisk further adduced ►ὀρθαγορίσκος as proof for *ϝορθρ-, but the relevance of this word for the present entry is doubtfyl. At any rate, a direct comparison between ὄρθρος and OCS ranъ 'ὄρθριος', Ru. ráno 'early' as $*ur\bar{o}d^h\text{-}no\text{-}$ is useless, in view of the unmotivated lengthened grade in the reconstruction.

ὀρῖγανον [n.] name of a sharp or bitter tasting herb, 'marjoram, organy, orīganum' (Epich., Hp., Ar., Arist.). ◅?▻ •VAR Also -ος [f.]; also written ὀρεί-; variant ἐριγ- (pap. II^{a}).
•COMP With determining first member: ἀγρι-ορίγανον (Dsc.), cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 257, τραγ-ορίγανον (Nic., Dsc.).
•DER ὀριγαν-ίς (-ις) [f.] = μᾶρον, a kind of salve (Ps.-Dsc.), -ίτης (οἶνος) 'wine spiced with ὀ.' (Dsc.), -όεις 'belonging to ὀ.' (Nic.); -ίων [m.] name of a frog (Batr.), -ίζω 'to be like ὀ.' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Unexplained word of foreign origin. Marjoram originates from Northern Africa. Was it folk-etymologically adapted to ὄρος and γάνος? Incorrectly, Carnoy REGr. 71 (1958): 97f.

ὀρίνδης (ἄρτος) [m.] 'bread made of rice flour' (S. Fr. 609 from Ath. 3, 110e, Poll. 6, 73). ◅LW Iran.▻
•DER ὀρίνδιον σπέρμα (Poll.); ὀρίνδα· ἥν οἱ πολλοὶ ὄρυζαν καλοῦσι 'what most people call rice' (Phryn. PS 93).
•ETYM Acc. to Ath. and Poll. l.c., ὀρίνδης would be Ethiopian, but in fact it is an Iranian loan; cf. MoP birinǰ and Arm. brinj (from Iranian), and see the discussion in Brust 2005: 488ff. See ►ὄρυζα.

ὀρῖνω, -ομαι [v.] 'to excite, stir' (Il.). ◅IE $*h_3r\text{-}i\text{-}$ 'set in movement'▻ •VAR Lesb. ὀρίννω (only Hdn., -ν- Alc.; see Hamm 1957: 36 and 131), aor. ὀρῖναι, -ασθαι, pass. ὀρινθῆναι.
•COMP Also with συν-, ἐξ-, ἀν-.
•DER ὀρίντης [m.] 'exciter' (Theognost.). Uncertain is the appurtenance of the Corinthian horsename Ὀριϝων (Fraenkel Gnomon 22 (1950): 238).
•ETYM The present ὀρῖνω, whence the other forms derive, may either be from *ὀρι-ν-ι̯ω (a yod-present built on a nasal present, like κλίνω) or from *ὀρῖ-νϝ-ω (a thematicized νυ-present).

Disyllabic ori-* is found also in Arm. ari [ipv.] 'stand up', aor. y-are-ay (< -ari-*) 'I stood up', as well as in Lat. orior. These derive from an earlier i-present which is found in Anatolian: Hitt. arai-^{i} / ari- 'to arise, raise' < $*h_3r\text{-}oi\text{-}$, $*h_3r\text{-}i\text{-}$; cf. Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. This is an extension of the root $*h_3er\text{-}$ 'rise' seen in ►ὄρνυμι.

ὀρκάθους · ἐφ' ὧν τὰ σῦκα ψύχουσιν 'on which figs are dried' (H.). ◅PG?(S)▻ •ETYM Unknown. Probably Pre-Greek.

ὀρκάνη ⇒ἕρκος.

ὅρκος [m.] 'oath' (Il.), 'object to swear by', originally of the water of the Styx (B 755, Hes., h. Cer. 259). ◅?▻
•COMP ὀρκ-ωμότης [m.] 'who takes an oath' (Arc., Locr. inscr. VI-V^{a}) with ὀρκωμοτ-έω [v.] 'to take an oath' (trag., etc.), a compound of ὅρκον ὀμόσαι with a suffix -τη-; εὔ-ορκος 'faithful to one's oath' (Hes.) with εὐορκ-έω; ἔν-ορκος 'bound by oath' (Att.) with ἐνορκ-ίζομαι [v.] 'to bind by oath'; but ἔξορκος 'sworn' (Pi.) is a back-formation from ἐξ-ορκόω, -ορκίζω; on ►ἐπίορκος, see s.v.; πεντορκ-ία [f.] "taking of five oaths", 'oath by five gods' (Locr. V^{a}), with a suffix -ία-.
•DER 1. ὅρκια [pl.], rarely -ιον [n.] 'objects to swear by, oath pledge, animals sacrificed for an oath, oath, solemn treaty' (Il.), ὅρκιος 'belonging to an oath, sworn by' (Att., Leg. Gort.). 2. ὁρκικός 'belonging to an oath' (Stoic.). 3. ὁρκόω [v.] 'to make one swear, put under oath' (IA), aor. -ῶσαι, often with ἐξ-, whence ὁρκώματα [pl.] 'oath' (A.), ὀρκωτής [m.] 'who makes swear, who puts one under oath' (Att.), ἐξόρκω-σις [f.] 'swearing, adjuration' (Hdt., J.). 4. ὁρκίζω [v.] 'to make one swear, adjure, administer an oath' (Ion., X., D., Hell., also Dor.), aor. -ίσαι, Dor. fut. ὀρκιξεω (Delph.), also with δι-, ἐξ-. Thence ὀρκίσματα [pl.] 'adjurations' (Megara I-II^{p}), (δι-, ἐξ-)ορκισμός [m.] 'swearing, adjuration' (LXX, Plb.), ἐξορκισ-τής [m.] 'exorcist' (Act. Ap.). 5. ὀρκίλλομαι [v.] 'to swear in vain' (Phot.), as if from a pejorative diminutive *ὀρκίλος. 6. -ορκέω only in derivatives from compounds, with analogical formations: εὐορκ-έω (with εὐορκ-ία) from εὔ-ορκος (see above), ψευδορκ-έω from ψεύδ-ορκος (Risch IF 59 (1949): 258), with ἐμπεδ-, ἀληθ-, δυσ-, παρ-ορκέω, etc.; for ἐπιορκέω see on ►ἐπίορκος.
Isolated, with a different mg., ὀρκάνη [f.] 'enclosure' (A., E.) beside late ἑρκάνη, like Ὀργάνη : Ἐργάνη (see on ►ὄργανον and ►ἔργον); cf. also PN Ὅρκατος (Calymna II^{a}).
•ETYM Formally, ὅρκος seems to be connected with ἕρκος 'fence' (thus already Eust. and EM), in which case it would properly denote the oath as the bounds that one assumes, a restriction, tie, or obligation. A meaning 'tie, bond' is indeed found in ὅρκοι· δεσμοὶ σφραγῖδος 'bonds of a seal' (H.), perhaps to be corrected to *σφραγῖδες; cf. also ►ὀρκάνη. Discussion in Luther 1935: 90ff. and Luther 1954: 86ff., who assumes that ὅρκος is originally a magical power that fences in the swearer. Bollack *REGr.*71 (1958): 1ff. and Hiersche REGr. 71 (1958): 35ff. identify ὅρκος with the Στύξ, by which the gods swear, and take it as the world-embracing fence (μέγας ὅρκος).
Criticism of these views by Benveniste 1969:2: 165ff., who thinks of ὅρκος as a sacralizing object, and refuses to give an etymology. Similarly, Leumann 1950: 91f.

proposed that ὅρκος = Lat. sorcus* or surcus* in surculus 'twig', in which case it could denote a staff which is raised when swearing; ὄμνυμι 'to swear' would then properly mean 'to grasp', and ὅρκον ὀμόσαι 'to grasp the staff' (cf. on ►ὄμνυμι). See ►ἕρκος.

ὀρκύπτειν · τὸ ὑπερκύπτειν <πρὸς τὸ> ἰδεῖν τι· τὸ ἐκτείνειν ἑαυτὸν καὶ ἐπ' ὀνύχων ἵστασθαι 'to raise one's head in order to see sth.; overstretch oneself and to stand on one's toe-nails' (H.). Cf. ὤρκυπτεν· ὑπερέκυπτεν ἐπαιρόμενος (Suid.), i.e. 'to stand on the tips of one's toes, in order to see over the heads of others'.
•ETYM Contains κύπτω; acc. to DELG, the first part is suggestive of ὄρνυμαι or ὀρθός, but the spiritus is unexplained.

ὄρκῡς, -ῡνος [m.] 'tuna' (middle com., Arist.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Later ὄρκῡνος (Dorio and Hikes. [I[a]] in Ath.).
•DER ὀρκυνεῖον [n.] mg. uncertain (Halicarn. V[a]). On the stem-formation see Schwyzer: 458 and 488. Also ὀρκύαλος 'id.' (v.l. Xenocr. apud Orib.), like φύσαλος, etc. (Strömberg 1943: 127f.).
•ETYM Unexplained loanword; cf. Thompson 1947 s.v. Probably Pre-Greek; note the suffix and the meaning.

ὄρμενος [m.] 'shoot, stalk, stick, especially of cabbage and asparagus' (Diph. Siph. and Posidipp. [III[a]] in Ath.). ◂?▸
•VAR Plur. also -α; also ὀρ-.
•DER ὀρμενόεις 'having a (long) stalk' (Nic.); ἐξ-ορμενίζω 'ὄρμενα ἐκβάλλειν, to put forth shoots' (S. Ichn. 275 [uncertain], Nicostr. Com., Phryn., Poll.).
•ETYM Formally identical with the aor. ptc. of ὄρνυμι, which is semantically quite plausible. Cf. ►ἔρνος.

ὁρμή [f.] 'onset, assault, onrush, outset, effort' (Il.). ◂IE sor-meh$_2$-* 'flow, stream' or h_3(o)r-sm-* 'uprising'▸ •COMP As a second member in ἐφορμή 'onset, assault' (χ 130, Th.), ἀφορμή 'starting point, resource, etc.' (IA), but these are back-formations from ἐφ-, ἀφ-ορμάω (cf. Chantraine 1933: 149).
•DER Denominatives: 1. ὁρμαίνω [v.]'to (re)consider, ponder' (Il.), aor. -ῆναι (rarely with ἐφ-, ὑπερ-); on the mg. as opposed to μερμηρίζω, etc. see Voigt 1934, later 'to put in violent motion, be eager' (A., Pi., B.); perhaps ὁρμανόν· ἀνεστηκός, χαλεπόν 'stirred up, troublesome' (H.); analogical ὁρμάστειρα [f.] 'she who urges on' (Orph. H.) like θερμάστρα, etc. beside θερμαίνω. 2. ὁρμάω [v.] 'to incite, excite', intr. (also midd.) 'to rise quickly, charge, begin' (Il.), aor. -ῆσαι, often with prefix, especially ἀφ-, ἐφ-, παρ-, ἐξ-. Thence ὁρμήματα [pl.] 'onrush' (Β 356 = 590), (παρ-)όρμημα [n.] 'onset, incitement' (LXX, Epicur.), (παρ-, ἐφ-, ἐξ-)όρμησις [f.] 'incitement, onset, assault, eagerness' (X., Plb.); ὁρμ-ητήριον, Dor. -ᾱτήριον [n.] '(operation) base' (Att., Cret. III-II[a]), -ητής [m.] 'he who urges on' (Philostr. Iun.), -ητίας [m.] 'id.' (Eust.), (ἐφ-, ἀφ-, παρ-, ἐξ-)ορμητικός 'offensive, desiring, eager, etc.' (Ti. Locr., Arist.); back-formation ἄφορμος 'setting off, leaving' (S.).

•ETYM Traditionally compared with Skt. sárma- [m.] 'flowing, streaming' (only RV 1, 80, 5), from a verbal root seen in Skt. sí-sar-ti, sár-ati 'to flow, stream', also 'to hurry, drive, etc.', which is formally excellent and semantically possible. However, within Greek one might also compare ὄρνυμι 'stir' and propose a pre-form or-smā-* (a similar formation is perhaps continued in ►ἅρμα). The form ἐρμή· ἔξοδος 'way out' (H.), with a variant ἐρίμη 'id.', is difficult to assess.

ὅμικας ⇒μύμηξ.

ὅρμῑνον [n.] 'sage, Salvia Horminum' (Thphr.). ◂PG(S)▸
•VAR Also -ος [m.]; also -μῖν-.
•ETYM Formation like σέλῑνον, κύμῑνον, καρδαμῖνη, βολβῖνη, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 204, Schwyzer: 491). Frisk mentions three options: a loan (like the first two words), a derivative from ὅρμος (though the semantics would need further argumentation), or one from ὁρμή 'assault, onrush' (Strömberg 1940: 93), as the plant was used as an aphrodisiac. However, the word is no doubt Pre-Greek, just like the other words with a suffix -ῑν- (not in Fur.).

ὅρμος 1 [m.] 'chain, necklace, lace' (Σ 401); name of a dance in a ring (Luc.). ◂IE sor-mo-* 'string'▸ •DER 1. Diminutive ὁρμ-ίσκος [m.] 'small necklace' (Att. inscr., LXX), 'signet-cord' (LXX, J.) together with -ίσκιον name of a precious stone (Plin.); 2. -ιά [f.] 'fishing-line' (Pl. Com., Antiph., Arist.), ὁρμια-τόνος [m.] 'angler' (E. Hel. 1615); 3. ὁρμ-αθός [m.] 'string, chain' (ω 8, Ar., Pl.), on the formation see Chantraine 1933: 367, although -αθος seems to be Pre-Greek, cf. ►γνάθος), with -άθιον (Gal.), -αθίζω [v.] 'to string' (H., Suid.). 4. ὑφ-όρμιον [n.] acc. to Ael. Dion. Fr. 417 παρὰ τοῖς παλαιοῖς χρυσοῦν τι κοσμάριον 'among the ancients, a little golden ornament'.
•ETYM Old thematic derivative with a suffix -mo-, from the root seen in ►εἴρω 1 'string'. Martirosyan 2010 s.v. connects it with Arm. orm 'wall', which is formally impeccable.

ὅρμος 2 [m.] 'anchorage, road(stead), harbour', also metaph. (Il.). ◂IE? sor-mo-* 'string'▸ •COMP ὁρμο-φύλαξ 'harbour-master' (pap.); often as a second member, e.g. πάν-ορμος 'offering anchorage to all (ships)' (λιμένες, ν 195), often as a PN (Sicily, etc.), δύσ-ορμος 'with a bad harbour, inhospitable' (A., X.); often with preposition, partly as back-formations from the relevant verbs: ἔξ-ορμος 'sailing out' (E.), to ἐξ-ορμέω, ὕφ-ορμος 'at anchor, fit for anchoring' (Ph., Str.), also [m.] 'anchorage' (Arist., Str.), to ὑφ-ορμέω, πρόσ-ορμος [m.] 'id.' (Str.), to πρόσ-ορμέω, -ορμίζω.
•DER Two denominatives: 1. ὁρμέω 'to be at anchor (in the harbour)' (IA), also with ἐφ-, ἐξ-, ὑφ-, etc., with ἐφόρμησις [f.] and (as a back-formation) ἔφορμος [m.] 'being at anchor, blockade' (Th.). 2. ὁρμίζω 'to bring to an anchorage or harbour', -ομαι 'to anchor, moor' (Il.), aor. -ίσαι, -ίσασθαι, often with prefix, e.g. ἐν-, προσ-, καθ-, μεθ-. Thence (προσ-, etc.)όρμισις [f.] 'anchoring' (Th.), (ἐν-)όρμισμα [n.] 'anchorage, anchoring' (App.), προσορμισμός [m.] 'anchoring' (sch.), προσορμιστήριον (H. as an explanation of ἐπίνειον [cod. ἐπήνιον]), ὁρμιστηρία [f.] 'rope for anchoring, attaching' (Ph., D. S.), ὁρμίστρια [f.] "the anchoress" epithet of Isis (pap. II^{p}).

•ETYM No certain etymology. Often connected with ►ὁρμη 'impulse', but with various ways of argumentation for the semantics (details in Frisk). Connection with ► εἴρω 'to string' is more promising, starting from an original meaning 'attachment' and identity with ὅρμος 'chain'. Comparison with ►ἕρμα, in plur. 'supporting stones', has also been proposed (unclear).

ὄρνεον [n.] 'bird' (N 64). ◄IE *$h_3$er-n- 'bird'► •VAR Also ὄρνῑς, -ῑθος [m., f.] '(augural) bird' (Il.), in later Att. especially 'hen, cock', acc.sg. also -ιν, plur. also -εις, -ῑς (trag., D.), Dor. -ῑχος, etc. (Pi., Alcm., B., Theoc., Cyrene), dat.pl. -ίχεσσι and -ιξι, whence nom.sg. -ιξ, gen.pl. -ίκων (Hell. pap.).
•COMP A few late compounds, e.g. ὀρνεο-θηρευτική [f.] 'the art of bird-catching' (Ath.). Often as a first member, e.g. ὀρνιθο-θήρας [m.] 'bird-catcher' (Ar., Arist.), ὀρνιχο-λόχος [m.] 'id.' (Pi.). Also as a second member, e.g. δύσ-ορνις 'with bad auspices' (A., E., Plu.), πολυ-όρνιθος 'rich of birds' (E.).
•DER A: From ὄρνεον: ὀρνε-ώδης 'bird-like' (Plu.), -ώτης [m.] 'bird-catcher' (Poll.), -ακός 'avian' (Tz.), -άζομαι 'to twitter' (Aq.), 'to hold one's head up high' ("watching the birds", Com. Adesp.).
B: From ὄρνις: 1. diminutives ὀρνίθ-ιον (IA), -άριον (com., Arist.), also ὀρν-ύφιον (Thphr., Dsc.), rather from ὄρνεον. Substantives: 2. ὀρνιθ-ᾶς, -ᾶ [m.] 'poulterer' (pap. II-VI^{p}); 3. -ίαι [m.pl.] "bird-winds", which bring migratory birds (Ion., Arist.), χειμὼν ὀρνιθίας (Ar.); cf. ἐτησίαι, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 95); -ίας [m.] 'bird-fancier' (Lib.); -ίων [m.] PN (Att.); 4. ὀρνιθ-ών, -ῶνος [m.] 'henhouse' (inscr., pap.); 5. ὀρνιθία [f.] 'poisoning by bird dung' (Hippiatr.). Adjectives: 6. ὀρνίθ-ειος 'of a bird, of a chicken' (Att.); 7. -ικός 'belonging to birds, hens' (Luc.); 8. τὰ ὀρνιθιακά name of a work on birds by D. P. (on the formation Schwyzer: 497 with lit.); 9. -ώδης 'bird-like' (Arist.). Verbs: 10. ὀρνιθ-εύω 'to catch birds' (X.), -εύομαι 'to watch the birds, auspicari' (D. H.) together with -εία [f.] 'auspicium' (Plb.), -ευτής [m.] 'bird-catcher' (Att.), -ευτική [f.] 'the art of bird-catching' (Pl.); 11. ὀρνιθ-όομαι 'to be changed into a bird' (Philoch.); 12. ὀρνιθ-ιάζω 'to speak the language of birds' (sch. Ar. Av.).
Further ὄρνιος = ὀρνίθ-ειος (AP), ὀρνίζω 'to twitter' (Aq.), uncertain; cf. ὀρνεάζομαι above. On itself stands ὀρναπέτιον [n.] (Boeot., Ar. Ach. 913), hypocoristic and contempting, with unclear α; cf. further κινώπετον, ἑρπετόν, etc., also Bechtel 1921, 1: 308. On the various formations see F. Robert 1944: 67ff.
•ETYM Both ὄρν-εον and ὄρν-ῑ-ς derive from an n-stem *$h_3$er-n-, which in ὄρνεον was enlarged with a suffix -ε(ι)ο-, probably marking gender (Chantraine 1933: 62). The more common form ὄρνῑς is originally a feminine derivative in *-ih_2, to which the suffixes -θ-, Dor. -χ- were later added.
The n-stem that must be assumed for Greek is also found in the Germanic and Anatolian words for 'eagle': Go. ara, gen. *arins, ON ari, and ǫrn < *arn-u-, OE earn, etc., Hitt. ḫāran-. Balto-Slavic has an l-stem, e.g. Lith. erēlis from older arēlis, OCS orьlъ, Ru. orël 'eagle'.

ὄρνυμαι [v.] 'to stir, rise, rush away, hurry' especially 'to excite, incite, revive' (Il.). ◄IE *$h_3$er- '(a)rise'► •VAR Aor. ὠρόμην, -ετο, often older athem. ὦρτο, ptc. ὄρμενος, etc., fut. ὀροῦμαι, ὀρεῖται, perf. ὄρωρα; act. ὄρνυμι, also -ύω, aor. ὦρσα, redupl. 3sg. ὤρορε, fut. ὄρσω, aor. pass. 3pl. ὤρθεν (Corinn.).
Further ὀρούω 'to rise quickly, rush away' (Il.), fut. ὀρούσω, in Hom. only aor. ὀροῦσαι, often with prefix (e.g. ἐπ, ἀν-, ἐν-, ἐξ-).
•COMP Also with prefixes like ἐπ-, ὑπ-, ἀν-. As a first member in governing compounds, e.g. ὀρσο-τρίαινα [m.] 'wielder of the trident' (Pi.), ὀρσί-αλος 'stirring the sea' (B.), PNs like Ὀρσέ-λαος (Boeot.), Ὀρσί-λοχος (Il.) beside Ὀρτί-λοχος (Dor.); see Schwyzer: 442, Bechtel 1917b: 353f., Wackernagel 1916: 236[1]. As a second member in the compound κονι-ορτός (see ►κόνις), in verbal adjectives like θέ-ορτος 'sprung from the gods' (Pi., A.), νέ-ορτος 'newly arisen' (S.).
•DER Perhaps ►ὁρμή. Further only ὄρουσις [f.] 'rise, ὅρμησις, ὁρμή' (Stoic.), ὀρούματα· ὁρμήματα, πηδήματα 'leaps' (H.); remarkable ὀρσότης, -ητος [f.] = ὁρμή (Critias), ὀρσίτης [m.] name of a Cretan dance (Ath.).
•ETYM The pervasive o-vocalism points to a reconstruction *$h_3$er-. Traces of an e-grade have been supposed in ἔρετο· ὡρμήθη 'was excited' (H.), etc. (see ►ἐρέθω), as well as in Λα-έρτης (related to ►λαός), but such forms can never derive directly from *$h_3$er-. It is best to derive these forms from the root *$h_1$er-, or to assume secondary ablaut in Greek.
Kümmel 2000a: 253-266 has found a distinction in Indo-Aryan between the roots [1]ar- 'sich in Bewegung setzen' < *$h_3$er-, aor. ā́rta (= ὦρτο), pres. īrte, and [2]ar- 'treffen, stoßen auf, wohin gelangen' < *$h_1$er-, pres. ṛcchati (cf. ►ἔρχομαι). This gives a solid foundation to the formal distinction between PIE roots *$h_1$er- and *$h_3$er- on the basis of the root vocalism.
The presents ὄρνυμι, Skt. ṛṇóti, and Hitt. arnu-^{zi} 'to deport, etc.' may be old parallel formations (though Hitt. may rather derive from *h_1r-nu- as a productive causative formation).
An original form *ἴρνυμι (ι was assumed to be a schwa secundum like in κίρνημι; see on ►κεράννυμι) was formerly found in the epithet Ἐπιρνύτιος· Ζεὺς ἐν Κρήτῃ (H.), but the connection is arbitrary, and formally impossible in laryngealist terms (*h_3r- always gives Gr. ὀρ-). Under an analysis *h_3r-n-eu-, we may compare the aorist ὀροῦσαι, whence later the rare present ὀρούω, as an o-colored full grade (cf. κρούω, κολούω) from an extended root *h_3r-u-; compare Lat. ruō 'to rush, collapse'. See ►ὀρίνω, ►ὄρος, ►οὖρος 1.

ὄροβος [m.] 'chickpea, Vicia Ervilia', plur. 'chickpea seeds' (Hp., D., Arist., Thphr.). ◄PG(V)► •COMP ὀροβ-άγχη [f.] name of a weed, "smotherer of the ὄροβος", 'Cuscuta' (Thphr., Dsc., Gp.); πεντ-όροβος (also -ώρ- with compositional lengthening) [m.] properly "with five ὄρ.", name of the γλυκυσίδη, usually metaph. of an architectural ornament (Hell. inscr., Dsc., Plin.).
•DER 1. Diminutives: ὀρόβ-ιον [n.], also 'flour made of ὄρ.' (Hp., Ph., Dsc.), = χρυσοκόλλης εἶδος 'kind of dish of linseed and honey' (H.); -άδιον [n.] = ὀρόβαξ (Ps.-Dsc.). 2. -ίας [m.] name of a kind of ἐρέβινθος and a kind of λίβανος (Thphr., Dsc.). 3. -ίτης [m.] (λίθος), name of an ὄροβος-like stone (D. S.), -ῖτις [f.] 'prepared χρυσόκολλα' (Plin.). 4. -αξ [f.] = γλυκυσίδη (Ps.-Dsc.), -ακχος σίδης [pl.] 'fruit of the pomegranate' (Nic.), -άκχη· βοτάνη τις. οἱ δὲ τῆς ῥοιᾶς τοὺς καρπούς 'a plant; others: the fruit of the pomegranate tree' (H.). 5. -ηθρον [n.] plant name = ὑποκισθίς (Ps.-Dsc.), cf. θορύβ-, κόπ-ηθρον, etc., Chantraine 1933: 373f. 6. -ινος ἄλευρον 'meal of ὄ.' (Ph., Dsc.). 7. -ιαῖος 'of the size of a ὄρ.' (Dsc.). 8. ὠροβισμένοι· κεχορτασμένοι ἀπὸ τῶν βοῶν (leg. ὀρόβων?) 'fed, fattened, of cows' (H.).

•ETYM Like ἐρέβινθος, Lat. ervum, etc., an old substrate word, probably from the eastern Mediterranean area. In any case, ὄροβος need not have undergone assimilation from *ἔροβος, as per Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 325. For further details, see ► ἐρέβινθος.

ὀρόδαμνος [m.] 'branch, twig' (Thphr., Call., Nic., AP). ◄PG(V)► •DER Diminutive ὀροδαμνίς [f.] (Theoc.).
•ETYM Probably for Aeol. ϝρόδαμνος = ► ῥάδαμνος, with ὀ- as a graphic indication for ϝ (cf. ► ὀρίνδης). The form ὄραμνος 'id.' (Nic., AP) is unclear; it is probably not a cross with ὄρμενος.

ὀροθύνω [v.] 'to excite, incite, revive' (Il., also A. Pr. 202). ◄GR?►
•VAR Aor. ὀροθῦναι.
•COMP Also with ἐξ-, ἀμφ-.
•ETYM Acc. to Frisk, a secondary formation from ► ἐρέθω, replacing earlier *ὀροθέω (after θαρσύνω, ὀτρύνω, etc.), or directly from a lost noun *ὄροθος. Not assimilated from *ἐροθύνω; see Van Beek fthc.b.

ὄρομαι [v.] •VAR Only ὄρονται, -ντο (epic). ⇒ ὁράω.

ὄρον [?] · σκεῦός τι γεωργικὸν ὡς Ἰσαῖος (fr. 5) 'an agricultural tool acc. to I.' ... μήποτε μέντοι τὸ ὄρον παρά τε Αἰσχύλῳ καὶ παρὰ Μενάνδρῳ σημαίνει ᾧ τὴν πεπατημένην σταφύλην πιέζουσι (Harp. 139) so the piece of wood with which bunches of grapes are crushed; also for olives (Poll. 7, 150); cf. SEG 11, 244. ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

ὀρόντιον [n.] 'cuckoo-pint', name of a plant used as a remedy against jaundice (Archig. apud Gal.). ◄PG► •ETYM Acc. to Strömberg 1944: 51, from the PN Ὀρόντης; naming motive unknown. Fur.: 345 refers to Gams in DKP 1: 602f., who connects it with ἄρον 'Natterwurz', a kind of shore-weed.

ὀρός [m.] 'the watery part of curdled milk, whey', also metaph. of other liquids (Od., Hp., Pl., Arist.). ◄IE ser-* 'flow', sor-o-*► •COMP ὀρο-ποτέω [v.] 'to drink whey', with -ίη [f.] (Hp.).
•DER ὀρώδης 'whey-like' (Thphr.); ἐξορ-ίζω [v.] 'to press out the whey' (EM, H.).
•ETYM An oxytonized agent noun (like τροφός, etc.; see Chantraine 1933: 9f.) with Ionian psilosis, beside the action noun in Lat. serum [n.] 'id.', Skt. sará- 'flowing, liquid', from the verbal root ser-* 'run, flow' retained in Skt. sísarti, sárati, aor. ásarat.

ὅρος [m.] 'border, boundary mark (pole, column, stone), term, limit, mark, appointment, definition' (Att.). ◄IE? uerh₁-*► •VAR οὖρος (Il.).
•DIAL Myc. wo-wo /worwos/, Corc. ὀρϝος, Cret., Arg. ὦρος, Heracl. ὅρος. Brixhe REGr. 109 (1996): 640 adds ὅρρος (Heracl. Pont.) < *hόρϝος, also ὅρρος (Chalcid., Megar.), cf. RPh. 71 (1997) 170.
•COMP As a first member, e.g. ὁρο-θεσία [f.] 'the fixing of boundaries' (Hell. inscr., Act. Ap., pap.), like νομο-θεσία, etc., formally from ὁρο-θέτης (gloss.), a composition of ὅρον θεῖναι with a suffix -τη-; often as a second member, e.g. δί-ωρος 'with two boundary stones' (Arc. IV^a), ἀμφ-ούριον [n.] 'toll paid by the seller to the owner of the neighbouring estate as a fixation of the sale' (pap. III^a, Rhod. inscr. II^a), ἀμφουριασμός [m.] (*ἀμφουρι-άζω); on ► εὐθυωρία, see s.v.
•DER 1. ὅρια [n.pl.] (rarely sg.) 'borderline, border areas, etc.' (Hp., Att., Arc.); 2. ὁρία [f.] 'border' (Att. inscr.); 3. ὅριος 'belonging to the border' (Ζεὺς ὅρ., Pl., D.) = Lat. Terminus (D. H., Plu.); 4. ὁρικός 'ptng. to definition' (Arist.); 5. ὁρ-αία τεκτονική = gruma, -ιαῖος λίθος (gloss.); 6. ὁρίζω (Ion. οὐρ-) [v.] 'to border, demarcate, separate, determine, define' (IA), aor. -ίσαι, often with prefix, e.g. δι- (ἐπι-δι-, etc.), ἀφ-, περι-, προσ-, with (ἀφ-, περι-, δι-)ὅρισμα (also οὔρ-) 'delimitation, border' (Hdt., E.), (ἀφ-, περι-, etc.)ὁρισμός 'delimitation, determination, etc.' (Att.), (δι-)ὅρισις (Pl., Arist.), ὁρισ-τής [m.] 'land surveyor' (Att., Tab. Heracl.), -τικός 'ptng. to delimitation or determination, limiting, defining' (Arist.). 7. On ► ὀρεύς, see s.v.
•ETYM In view of Mycenaean, all Greek forms must go back to ϝόρϝος. This can be connected wih Lat. urvāre (amb-) 'to mark out a boundary with a furrow' (Enn. apud Fest., Dig.); the basic noun is urvum 'curved part of a plough' (Varro) < u(o)ru-o-*, which may in principle continue the same formation as *ϝόρϝος.
Within Greek, further connection wih ► ἐρύω 'to draw' is probable. See ► οὐροί, ► οὖρον 2.

ὄρος [n.] 'mountain, height'; also (in Egypt) 'desert' in contrast to the cultivated plain (Il.). ◄IE h₃er-* 'rise', h₃er-s-*► •VAR With metrical lengthening οὔρ-εος, -εα, etc. (epic), also ὤρ-εος, -εα (Theoc.).
•DIAL Myc. o-re-a₂ /ore^{h}a/.
•COMP As a first member: 1. with unenlarged stem i.a. in ► ὀρεσκῷος; 2. thematically enlarged in ὀρεο-σέλινον [n.] 'mountain-parsley' (Thphr.); 3. often in loc.sg., e.g. ὀρει-δρόμος 'going through the mountains' (Pi., E., Nonn.); thence i.a. ὀρεί-χαλκος [m.] 'mountain ore, brass' (h. Hom. 6, 9, Hes. Sc. 122), borrowed as Lat. orichalcum, folk-etymological auri-; also ὠρό-χαλκος (Peripl. M. Rubr., PGiss. 47, 6), perhaps ὠ- = Lat. au-; 4. in loc.pl., e.g. ὀρεσί-τροφος 'grown up in the mountains' (Hom.).
•DER 1. ὀρέσ-τερος 'living in the mountains, consisting of mountains' (X 93); 2. ὄρειος (epic lyr. οὔρ-) 'mountainous' (h. Merc. 244) < ores-i̯o-*, fem. -ειάς (AP), as a substantive 'mountain-nymph' (Bion, Nonn.); 3. ὀρεινός < ores-no-* 'id.' (IA); 4. Ὀρέσ-της [m.] PN (Il.), with Ὀρεστ-άδης, ὀρέστ(ε)ιον [n.] = ἑλένιον (Dsc., Plin.);

Ὀρέσ-ται [m.pl.] "highlanders", name of an Epeirotic people (Th.); ὀρεστ-ιάδες νύμφαι (Z 420, h. Hom. 19, 19), metrical for *ὀρεστ-άδ- (Schwyzer: 508); ὀρεστ-ίας [m.] 'mountain wind' (Call.), like Ὀλυμπίας, etc.; 5. ὀρώδης 'mountainous' (EM).
•ETYM The original meaning is "elevation", a verbal noun $h_3$er-s- related to the root of ►ὄρνυμαι 'to rise, etc.'. A further derivative of this s-stem may be found in Skt. ṛṣvá- 'rising up, high'. See ►ὄρρος, ►ὀρσοθύρη.

ὀρούω ⇒ὄρνυμαι.

ὀροφή, -φος ⇒ἐρέφω.

ὄρπαξ [?] · θρασὺς ἄνεμος 'rough wind' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM Fur.: 327f. compares Ὄρπα· Ἐρινύς (H.) and Ὄριψα· Ἐρινύς (H.) with anaptyctic vowel, as well as ►ἁρπάζω. Probably Pre-Greek. Perhaps Ἅρπυια (Fur.: 327, 347) also belongs here?

ὄρπας [?] · τῆς ἀκρίδος ὁ γόνος, ἔνθεν γάρον ποιοῦσι 'offspring of the locust, from which sauce is made' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

ὄρπη [f.] · σίδηρος ἐν ᾧ τὸν ἐλέφαντα τύπτουσι 'metal in which ivory is beaten' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM DELG compares ►ἅρπη 'elephant-goad'.

ὅρπηξ [m.] 'sprig, twig, (shaft of a) spear' (Φ 38, Hes. Op. 468). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •VAR Also ὅ-; Dor. Aeol. -ᾱξ, -κος.
•COMP εὐ-όρπηξ 'with fair twigs' (Nonn.).
•ETYM Formation like σκώληξ, κάχληξ, νάρθηξ, etc. without a clear etymology. The comparison with Lith. várpa 'ear' is not very illuminating; derivation from the root of Lat. sarpō 'to trim the vines', sarmentum 'osiers', ►ἅρπη 'sickle' is unlikely, as an o-grade of this root is not attested elsewhere. Frisk connects ἕρπω in the sense of a slow movement over the ground: "crawler, sneaker".
It is rather a Pre-Greek word, given the suffix -ᾱκ-.

ὄρρος [m.] 'rump, arse' (Ar.), 'end of the os sacrum' (Gal.). ⊲IE $h_1$ers-, $h_1$ors- 'bottom, arse'⊳ •COMP As a first member in ὀρρο-πύγ-ιον, Ion. ὀρσο-, see ►πυγή. As a second member in παλίν-ορσος 'moving back' (Γ 33, Emp.); -ρρ- (Ar. Ach. 1179); not in ►ἄψορρος.
•DER ὀρρώδης 'belonging to the rump' (Hp., Gal.), ὀρροχμόν· ἔσχατον, ἄκρον 'utmost, extremity' (H.), perhaps after ►νεοχμός.
•ETYM Old inherited expression for 'bottom, ass', avoided by the epic because of its vulgar status, and identical with the Germanic group of OHG ars, MoE arse, Arm. or̄, plur. or̄-kʿ (i-stem), and Hitt. arra- 'id.', all pointing to IE Hors-o-, Hors-i-. Regarding the color of the laryngeal, OIr. err 'tail' seems to point to original $h_1$ers-h_2- but, alternatively, the Celt. e-vocalism is a secondary development. In the latter case, the word could be understood as enlargement of an s-stem $h_3$er-(o)s- 'elevation', and would thus be closely related to ►ὄρος 'mountain'.

The intervocalic sequence -rs- was probably retained in Greek when preceded by the accent (it subsequently became -ρρ- in Attic), but *s dropped with compensatory lengthening if the accent followed (cf. on ►οὐρά). See ►ὀρσοθύρη.

ὀρρωδέω [v.] 'to shudder, fear, dread' (Att.). ⊲GR?⊳
•VAR Ion. ἀρρωδέω (Hp., Hdt.).
•COMP Also with prefix, especially κατ-.
•DER ὀρρωδία, ἀρρωδίη [f.] 'fear, dread' (Hdt., Th., E.).
•ETYM Not definitively explained. The proposal by Bréal MSL 8 (1894): 309 is semantically attractive: ὀρρωδέω comes from ὄρρος 'ass' through *ὀρρώδης 'afraid, anxious', like in MoFr. couard, Ital. codardo from Lat. coda. However, this would amount to assuming that the Att. form with -ρρ- came into Ionic with substitution of ἀρρ- for ὀρρ- (perhaps after ἀρρωστέω, -ία?), which is hard to believe. Acc. to Schmidt KZ 25 (1881): 112, Att. ὀρρ- developed from older ἀρρ- by assimilation to the folowing ω; a better option seems folk-etymological influence of ὄρρος on original ἀρρ-.
Taillardat RPh. 71 (1997): 170 (also DELG Supp.) defends the old interpretation as τὸν ὄρρον ἱδροῦν 'to shit in the pants' vel sim. The ἀ- would be due to Ionic dissimilation of ὀ - ω.
Fur.: 342 considers the word to be Pre-Greek, which would make the variation ἀ-/ ὀ- understandable.

ὀρσοδάκνη [f.] name of an insect which eats the buds of plants (Arist. HA 552a). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM See Gil Fernández 1959: 140. The word probably contains ►ὄρρος (-ρσ-) and ►δάκνω.

ὀρσοθύρη [f.] especially a side-door or side-opening at the back, leading from the men's hall in the λαύρη to the rooms upstairs (χ 126, 132, 333); see Wace JHS 71 (1951): 203ff., Bérard REGr. 67 (1954): 18ff.; also sens. obsc. (Semon. 17). ⊲IE Hors-o-* 'back' + d^huer-* 'door'⊳ •DER With ὀρσο-, we also find: ὀρσολόπος epithet of Ares, who cuts the enemy into pieces (Anacr. 70 = 393 P), ὀρσολοπεύω (metrical for -έω) [v.] 'to attack, revile' (h. Merc. 308, Max. 102), -έομαι 'to be teased or disquieted' (A. Pers. 10); ὀρσολόπος 'attacker' vel sim., properly = ὁ λέπων τὸν ὄρρον 'who thrashes the back', scil. τοῦ φυγόντος πολεμίου 'of the fleeing enemy', cf. Lasso de la Vega Emerita 23 (1955): 114f. Further ►ὀρσοδάκνη [f.] name of an insect that eats buds (Arist.); naming motive unknown.
•ETYM It is clear that the first element should be identified with ὄρρος, ὄρσος 'back, ass', for which we may compare παλίν-ορσος in Homer (but not ἄψορρος). The word means 'back door', which is a very natural interpretation.
Following sources from antiquity, others explained it as a high door, connecting either Skt. ṛṣvá- 'high' or varṣ- in várṣ-man- [n.] 'culmen'; cf. also εἰρεθύρη (H.) and ἔρθυρις (EM). See Risch IF 59 (1944): 20. In the same sphere belongs ὀρρόβηλος· ὁδός (cod. ὀδ-). Ἰταλιῶται 'threshold' (H.).

However, there is no indication in our texts that the door is located above the ground, and the obscene use in Semon. (though in an unclear context) proves the connection with ὀρρος.

ὀρσοί [m.] · τῶν ἀρνῶν οἱ ἔσχατοι γενόμενοι (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The word resembles ►ἔρσαι, with different vocalism and with different inflexion.

ὀρταλίς [f.] 'hen' (Nic. Al. 294). ◂?▸
•DER ὀρτάλιχος [m.] 'young bird' (A. Ag. 54, Ar. Ach. 871, AP, Opp.), 'young animal' (S. Fr. 793), 'chick' (Theoc.), -ιχεύς [m.] 'id.' (Nic. Al. 228: accus. -ῆα, metrical enlargement in verse-final position). Denominative ἀν-ορταλίζω [v.] 'to prance, clap the wings like a hen (cock)' vel sim. (Ar. Eq. 1344).
•ETYM Popular formations in -ίς and -ιχος (cf. ἀηδονίς, κόψιχος, etc.; see Chantraine 1933: 344 and 403), or perhaps rather with -αλίς like in συκ-αλίς, δορκ-αλίς (to δορκάς), etc. It is assumed to be derived from a noun *ὀρτος of unknown meaning. The obvious connection with ὄρνυμαι 'rise, come into movement' (cf. κονι-ορτός, θέορτος) does not mean much semantically.

ὄρτυξ [m.] 'quail, Coturnix vulgaris' (Epich., IA); also as a plant-name = στελέφουρος, 'Plantago Lagopus' (Thphr.), cf. Strömberg 1937: 50. ◂IE? uort-* 'quail'; PG?▸
•VAR Fem. in Lyc. 401; γόρτυξ (i.e. ϝόρτυξ), -ῦγος (H.), -υκος (Philem. 245).
•COMP As a first member in ὀρτυγο-μήτρα [f.] "quail-mother", 'corncrake, Rallux crex' (Cratin., Arist., LXX), acc. to H. = ὄρτυξ ὑπερμεγέθης; as a second member in φιλ-όρτυξ 'quail-loving' (Pl. Ly. 212d).
•DER Diminutive ὀρτύγιον [n.] (com.); Ὀρτυγία, -ίη [f.] old name of the island Delos and other islands (Od., Str.), see Tréheux BCH 70 (1946): 560ff., thence epithet of Artemis (S.); patronymic Ὀρτυγίων (Euboea).
•ETYM Formed like the rare bird names ἴβυξ, βαῖβυξ; cf. also κόκκῡξ, πτέρυξ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 397, Schwyzer: 498). Except for the ending, ϝόρτυξ corresponds to Skt. (Ved.) vártikā [f.] 'quail', later attested as vartaka- [m.], with the highly productive suffixes -ikā- and -aka-. Note also MoP vardīj- 'id.'. The original form of the word cannot be reconstructed. Fur.: 122 points out that both the suffix and the variation κ/γ point to a loan.

ὀρύα 1 [f.] 'intestine' (Epich.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR In H. also -ούα.
•ETYM Not certainly explained. The connection with Lat. arvīna [f.] 'grease, fat, lard, especially around the intestines' is doubtful (see Pok. 782 and WH s.v.); E-M points out that the ending -īna recalls the Etr. ending -ēna, -in(n)a. The variation -υα/ -ουα might point to a Pre-Greek word.

ὀρυα 2 [f.] name of an instrument used in a quarry (PCair. Zen. 759 [III^a]).
•ETYM See ►ὀρύττω.

ὄρυζα [f.] 'rice' (Aristobul. Hist., Megasth., Str.). ◂LW Eastern Iran.▸
•VAR ὄρυζον [n.] (Thphr.).

•COMP ὀρυζο-τροφέω [v.] 'to grow rice' (Str.).
•DER Diminutive ὀρύζ-ιον [n.] (sch.), -ίτης πλακοῦς 'rice-cake' (Chrysipp. Tyan.).
•ETYM Eastern Iranian loan; cf. Afghan. vrižē [f.pl.] 'rice', as well as Skt. vrīhí- [m.] 'id.'; earlier history unknown. See Brust 2005: 494ff., as well as on ►ὀρίνδης.

ὀρυμαγδός [m.] 'noise, din' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR ὀρυγμάδες· θόρυβοι 'noise' (H.).
•ETYM Expressive word with the same ending as κέλαδος, χρόμαδος, ῥοῖβδος, etc., and with a comparable meaning. Cf. ►ὠρύομαι and ὠρυγμός, as well as ἐρυγεῖν, ἐρύγμηλος (Kretschmer KZ 38 (1905): 135); further details are unclear.

ὄρυμος · βωμός. οἱ δέ ὄρυμβος 'altar; others: ὄ.' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Clearly a Pre-Greek word, due to the variations.

ὀρύσσω [v.] 'to dig (up, in, out), scrape, bury' (Hom.). ◂IE? $h_3$reu-k-* 'dig up, grub'▸ •VAR Att. -ττω, late -χω (Arat.), ipv. ὄρυγε (Seriphos); aor. ὀρύξαι, fut. ὀρύξω (Hom.), pass. aor. ὀρυχθῆναι, fut. ὀρυχθήσομαι, perf. ὀρώρυγμαι (IA), prefixed κατ-ώρυγμαι, act. ὀρώρυχα (Att.), them. aor. ὀρυγεῖν, pass. ὀρυγῆναι (late).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. κατ-, δι-, ἀν-, περι-.
•DER 1. back-formation ὄρυξ, -υγος [m.] 'pickaxe' (AP), usually name of an Egyptian and Libyan (also Indian) gazelle or antelope (Arist., LXX), seemingly after the pointed horns, but rather a folk-etymologically transformed loan; also name of a large fish (Str.). Prefixed compounds, e.g. κατ-ῶρυξ, -υχος 'buried, dug in, underground' (ω by compositional lengthening), as a fem. noun 'grave, crypt' (trag.); dat.pl. κατωρυχέεσσι (λάεσσι, λίθοισι ζ 267, ι 185), probably metrical enlargement; δι-ῶρυξ, -υχος (late mostly -υγος) [f.] 'ditch, channel, mine' (Ion., Th., Tab. Heracl., pap.). 2. (δι-, ὑπ-)όρυγμα [n.] 'hole, grave' (IA); 3. ὀρυγμός [m.] 'id.' (Priene). 4. (δι-)ορυχή [f.] (-ωρ-) 'digging' (D., Delos), also -γή (LXX). 5. (κατ-, ἐπ-, ὑπ-)όρυξις [f.] 'id.' (Arist.). 6. ὀρυκτή [f.] = ὄρυγμα (Ph.). 7. ὀρυκ-τήρ [m.] 'miner' (Zeno Stoic.), -της [m.] 'digger, tool for digging' (Aesop., Str.); (δι-)ορυκτρίς [f.] epithet of χελώνη 'mine protection roof' (Poliorc.). 8. ὀρυγεύς· fossorium (gloss.).
•ETYM The basis of all verbal forms and derived nouns seems to be a stem ὀρυχ-; the voiced stop in ὀρυγ- and the present ὀρύχω are secondary.
Thus, we can explain the primary yod-present ὀρύσσω from $h_3$rug^h-ie/o-. However, cognate forms appear to continue a root $h_3$ruk-, e.g. the secondary nasal present Lat. runcō, -āre 'to weed out, root up', runcō, -ōnis [m.] 'weeding hook', Latv. rūkēt 'to dig, scrape', Skt. luñcati 'pluck off' (with l- for IE r*).
Further cognates include Ir. rucht < ruk-tu-* 'swine', Alb. rrah 'excavation, reclaimed land' < rouk-so-* (Restelli RILomb. 91 (1957): 475). Therefore, we have to assume that the aspirated stop, which is seen only in Greek, is analogical.
It is possible that the root-final k* is a root extension; a root $h_3$reu-* is perhaps found in ►οὐροί [m.pl.] 'trench'. Connection with ►ὅρος 'boundary' is impossible because of Myc. wo-wo, etc.

ὀρφανός [m.] 'orphaned, orphan', metaph. 'bereft, abandoned' (υ 68). ◂IE $h_3$orb^h-o-* 'orphaned, bereft'▸

•COMP As a first member in ὀρφανο-δικασταί [m.pl.] "orphan-judge" (Leg. Gort.).
•DER 1. Adj. ὀρφαν-ικός 'belonging to ὀρφανοί' (Il., Pl., Arist.), -ιος 'abandoned, lonely' (AP). 2. Substantive ὀρφαν-ία [f.] 'orphanhood, bereavement' (Pi., Att.), -ότης [f.] 'id.' (Cappadocia). 3. Verbs. a) ὀρφαν-ίζω (also ἀπ-) 'to make an orphan, bereave of' (Pi.); thence formally -ιστής [m.], but in the sense of 'guardian' (S. Ai. 512), also name of an official (Selymbria); b) -εύω 'to bring up orphans', med. 'to be orphaned' (E.) with -ευμα [n.] 'orphanhood' (E.), -εία [f.] (if not itacistic for -ία) 'id.' (pap.); c) -όομαι 'to be bereft' (AP, sch.).
•ETYM The glosses ὀρφοβόται· ἐπίτροποι ὀρφανῶν 'guards of orphans', ὀρφοβοτία· ἐπιτροπή 'guardianship', and ὤρφωσεν· ὠρφάνισεν (H.) point to the previous existence of a noun *ὀρφος. From this noun, ὀρφανός (with the same meaning) seems to be a purely formal enlargement after other adjectives in -ανός.
This pre-form *ὀρφος agrees exactly with Arm. orb, -oy 'orphan', and Lat. orbus 'orphaned, bereft' < IE *Horb^{h}o-. A i̯o-derivative is supposed in the Celtic and the Germanic word (perhaps a Celtic loan?) for 'heritage', e.g. OIr. orb(b)e, orpe [n.], Go. arbi, OHG arbi, erbi [n.]; thence 'heir', e.g. OIr. orb(b)e [m.], Go. arbja, OHG arpeo, erbo [m.].
Melchert fthc., for which see Kloekhorst 2008, argues that Hitt. ḫarp-$^{tta(ri)}$, ḫarp-^{zi} 'to separate oneself and reassociate, change allegiance, join with' (from an original middle $h_3$erb^h-to) preserves the original verbal root, with a derivative $h_3$orb^h-o- which developed a specialized meaning 'bereft, orphan' in some languages (Gr., Lat.) but a meaning 'inheritance, heir' in other (Celt., Gm.).
Compare loanwords into Uralic languages, e.g. Fi. orbo, orvo 'orphan'.

ὄρφνη [f.] 'dark(ness), murk, night' (Thgn., Pi.). ◁?▷
•VAR Dor. -ᾱ.
•DER ὀρφν-αῖος 'dark, murky' (Il.), -ώδης 'id.' (Hp.) and several expressions for 'dark color, dark red': ὄρφν-ινος (Pl., X.), -ιος 'id.' (Arist., Plu.), -ήεις (Q. S., Man.), -ός (Nic.); unclear ὀρφν-ίτας [m.] (Dor.), epithet of τάλαρος (AP).
•ETYM The similarity with ἔρεβος has often been observed. If related to ὄρφνη, we would have to posit a basis $h_1$rg^w-sno- (with the same suffix as in the opposite λύχνος < luk-sno-) > PGr. erk^{wh}no-, from which a feminine org^{wh}nā- was created, with secondary o-grade (Schwebeablaut with $h_1$org^w-sno- is unattractive).
Also compared with a Germanic adjective for dark shades of color, e.g. OHG erpf 'fuscus', OE eorp, earp 'dark-colored, blackish', from PGm. erpa-; to this also belong names of the partridge (with different ablaut), e.g. OHG repa-huon, and Slavic words with nasal, e.g. Ru. rjab 'motley', CS jerębь 'partridge'.
Comparison with Arm. arǰn 'dark brown' < QIE arg^{wh}en-, org^{wh}en- has been proposed as well (Scheftelowitz BB 29 (1905): 17). ToB erkent-, ToA arkant- 'black' are unclear, as are ToB orkamo 'dark', ToA orkäm 'darkness'. All in all, neither comparison is convincing.

ὀρφώς name of a large seafish of the genus of the perches, 'Serranus gigas' or 'Polyprion cermum' (com., Arist.). ◁?▷

•VAR Also -ῶς, -ώ, -ών; secondary ὀρφός or ὄρφος (Arist.); acc. to Hdn. Gr. 1, 224, ὄρφος κοινῶς, ὀρφῶς δὲ Ἀττικῶς.
•DER ὀρφ-ίσκος [m.] = κίχλη as a fish name (Pancrat. Ep. apud Ath.), -ακίνης [m.] 'young ὀρφώς' (Dorio apud Ath.), derived from *ὄρφαξ (cf. δέλφαξ, etc.) with a suffix -ινη- like in δελφακ-ίνη, ἐλαφ-ίνης, etc.; ὀρφ-εύς [m.] = ὀρφώς (Marc. Sid., Alex.), with allusion to the PN. Details in Thompson 1947 s.v. and Strömberg 1943: 21f.
•ETYM Formation like the fish names λαγώς, -ός (originally a compound?), ἀχαρνώς, etc. Often compared to ὄρφνη, with reference to the color (see Strömberg 1943: 21f.), but unclear in detail. Connected with ὀρφός in ὀρφο-βόται (see ►ὀρφανός) by Bechtel 1917a: 32, but without semantic argumentation; perhaps because of its solitary way of life (described by Arist. as μονήρης)? Borrowed as Lat. orphus, MoHG Orf.

ὄρχαμος [m.] only in the Homeric formulae ὄρχαμος ἀνδρῶν, ὄρχαμε λαῶν, later ὄρχαμος στρατοῦ (A. Pers. 129 [lyr.]), etc. ◁PG?▷
•ETYM Etymology and meaning debated. Traditionally derived from ἄρχω with a superlative suffix -μο-, and interpreted as 'leader'. If inherited, the o-vocalism must be due to ablaut (cf. ὄγμος : ἄγω). Fur.: 342 thinks that ἀ-/ ὀ- (in ἄρχω/ ὄρχαμος) points to a Pre-Greek word. However, Bechtel 1914 s.v. and others proposed to compare ὄρχατος 'ordered plantation' and cognates (see on ►ὄρχος) in the sense 'protecting wall (of the men)', like ἕρκος Ἀχαιῶν; Wright Class. Rev. 29 (1915): 111f. compared ὄρχος 'row of trees'.

ὀρχάς 1 [f.] 'kind of olive' (Nic.). ⇒ὄρχις.

ὀρχάς 2 · περίβολος, αἱμασιά 'enclosure, wall' (H.). •VAR ὄρχατος. ⇒ὄρχος.

ὀρχέομαι [v.] 'to dance', act. 'to make dance' (Il., Ion., trag.). ◁IE? $h_1$erg^h- 'mount(?)'▷ •VAR Aor. ὀρχήσασθαι (Od.).
•COMP Also with prefixes like ὑπ-, κατ-, ἐξ-.
•DER 1. Action noun ὀρχ-ηθμός [m.] 'dance' (Hom., h. Ap.), -ησμός [m.] 'id.' (A.), -ηστύς [f.] 'id.' (Hom., E. Cyc. 171), like κιθαριστύς; younger -ησις [f.] 'id.' (post-Hom.), -ημα (ὑπ-) [n.] 'id.' (Simon., S., Pl.). 2. Agent noun ὀρχ-ηστήρ (Il.), -ηστής, Dor. -ηστάς (Il., Thera, OAtt.) [m.] 'dancer' with fem. -ηστρίς (com., Pl.), -ήστρια (Moer.). 3. the nomen loci ὀρχ-ήστρα [f.] 'dancing-room, orchestra' (Pl., Arist.). 4. adjective -ηστικός 'ptng. to dance(r)s, fit for dancing' (Pl., Arist.).
•ETYM Taken by Frisk as an iterative-intensive formation from primary ►ἔρχομαι (but DELG finds this unconvincing, both formally and semantically). Skt. r̥ghāyáti 'to tremble, scream, rage', which is traditionally compared (see Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 249), is indirectly connected at best. In inscriptions, ὀρχέομαι is often found in the meaning 'to mount' (Watkins BSL 70 (1975): 11-26, especially 18-19, and LIV[2] s.v. $h_1$erg^h-; the latter remarks that the semantic developments are unclear in detail). However, in view of the reconstruction given under ►ὄρχις, Watkins's connection with the word for 'testicle' is dubious.

ὀρχίλος [m.] name of a small bird, probably 'wren' (Ar., Arist., Thphr.); details in Thompson 1895 s.v. ◂?▸ •VAR On the accent Schwyzer: 485; also -ιλος (mss.).
•ETYM Formation like κορθ-, τροχ-ίλος, etc., perhaps from ὀρχέομαι because of the liveliness of the bird. Unclear.

ὄρχις, -εως [m.] 'testicles' (IA); also the plant name 'orchid' (Thphr., Dsc.), after the shape of the root, and a kind of olive (Colum.), after the shape of the fruit (see Strömberg 1940: 37 and 55). ◂IE *h$_3$(e/o)rǵ^h-i- 'testicle'▸ •VAR Ion. gen. -ιος, plur. mostly -εις, -ιες.
•COMP ὀρχί-πεδα [n.pl.] 'scrota, testicles' (Ar.), whence ὀρχι-πεδίζω (Ar., H.); ἔν-ορχις 'provided with testicles, uncastrated' (Hdt., Luc.), also ἔν-ορχος (Ψ 147, Hp.), ἐν-όρχης also 'buck' (Ar., Arist., Theoc.), with substantivizing -ης (see Schwyzer: 451), -ής (Milete VI^a), with shift to an s-stem (see Schwyzer: 513).
•DER Diminutives ὀρχίδια [pl.n.] (Dsc.) and ὀρχάς, -άδος [f.] 'kind of olive' (Nic., Verg.).
•ETYM An old inherited word, retained in several languages. Ignoring enlargements, ὄρχις agrees with Arm. orjikʿ [pl.] 'testicles', gen. -wocʿ < IE *h$_3$(o)rǵ^{h}i-i̯o-, and with Alb. herdhë [f.] 'id.' < QIE *h$_3$erǵ^h-ih$_1$ [du.], MIr. uirgge [f.] 'id.' < *Horǵ^{h}ii̯ā-.
Av. ərəzi [m.du.] 'id.' points to a zero grade IE *Hrǵ^h-i-h$_1$. Beside the inherited i-stem in Hitt. arki- [c.] 'testicle' < *h$_3$rǵ^h-i-, Hittite also has a verbal root ark-$^{a(ri)}$, ārk-^{i} / ark- 'to mount, cover, copulate' < *h$_3$rǵ^h-, *h$_3$orǵ^h-, with loss of initial *h$_3$ in front of *r and of *o (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.).
A derivative in -l- is found in Baltic, e.g. Lith. er̃žilas, dial. ar̃ž- [m.] 'stallion', where the vocalism of the former can be explained to be secondary by Rozwadowski's change (a recent overview of this effect is found in Derksen Baltu Filologija 11 (2002): 5-12).
The material shows that we may safely reconstruct initial *h$_3$- for PIE, which is also what the o-vocalism in most languages points to. In our reconstruction *h$_3$(o)rǵ^h-i-, it is unknown what the exact original ablaut pattern looked like: Greek and Hittite may continue a zero grade, Avestan certainly attests to it, and Armenian may do so as well, if *h$_3$e- yields Arm. ho- as opposed to *h$_3$o- > o-, as per Kortlandt 2003: 42.

ὄρχος [m.] 'row of vines or fruit trees' (η 127, ω 341, Hes. Sc. 296, B., Ar., X., Thphr.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR ὀρχός [m.] 'border of the eyelid, ταρσός' (Poll. 2, 69); ὀρχάς· περίβολος, αἱμασιά 'enclosure, wall' (H.), ὀρχάδος στέγης (S. Fr. 812); ὀρχηδόν (Hdt. 7, 144) is explained by H. as ἡβηδόν 'from youth upwards', but usually as 'in a row, general'.
•DER ὄρχατος [m.] 'ordered plantation, garden' (η 112, ω 222, AP), plur. 'rows of garden plants, fruit trees or vines' (Ξ 123, E. Fr. 896, 2, Moschio Trag. 6, 12), metaph. ὀδόντων, κιόνων ὄρχατος (AP, Ach. Tat.).
With a suffix -μι-: ὀρχμαί· φραγμοί, καλαμῶνες, φάραγγες, σπῆλυγξ 'fences, reed-beds, chasms, caves' (H.); ὀρχμούς· λοχμῶδες καὶ ὄρειον χωρίον οὐκ ἐπεργαζόμενον 'bushy and mountaineous area, uncultivated land' (Lex.); in the same mg. ὀρχάμη (Poll. 7, 147).

•ETYM If the hapax ὀρχηδόν is correctly understood as 'following the row', the meaning 'row' has to be accepted for ὄρχος, as well. The word ὄρχατος was probably a collective abstract meaning 'order of rows (of plants)'. Thus, it seems hardly possible to combine the above words under a notion 'fence, enclosure', which hardly fits ὄρχος. Thus, the traditional connection with IE *u̯erǵ^h- 'to turn, wind together, fence in' in Lith. veržiù 'to fence in, string', ON virgill 'snare', MoHG er-würgen, etc. becomes unlikely for semantic reasons; the same holds for the comparison with Lith. sérgmi 'to preserve, watch over' (Fraenkel KZ 72 (1955): 193ff.).
The connection of the TNs Ὀρχομενός (older Ἐρχ-; cf. Schwyzer: 255) and Illyrian Ὀργομεναί (Krahe ZNF 7 (1931): 25[4] and Krahe ZNF 11: 81) is commonly accepted.
As there is no IE etymology, it seems more probable that the word is Pre-Greek (note the agricultural meanings, and the name of the town with its variants). See ▸εἴργω, ▸ἔρχατος, and ▸ὄρχαμος.

ὅς 1 [pron.rel.] 'who, which' (Il.). ◂IE *h$_1$i-o- 'which'▸ •VAR ἥ, ὅ.
•DER ὅτερος 'who, which of the two' (Cret.), also ὅσ-τις, ὅ-τε, οἷος, ὅσος, etc.
•ETYM Inherited and identical with Skt. yás, yā́, yád, Av. yō, yā, yat̰, OPhr. ios, NPhr. ιος, from IE Hi-o-s, Hi-eh$_2$, Hi-o-d. Old too is ὅτερος = Skt. yatará-, Av. yatāra- 'id.'. The original function was not relative, but rather demonstrative (the pronominal stem *h$_1$i-); see Gonda Lingua 4 (1954-1955): 1ff., Gonda 1956: 96f., 126, and Monteil 1963: 1-17. Thus, in the framework of the development of initial *i̯- versus *Hi̯-, ὅς testifies to PIE *Hi̯- > PGr. j-, PIE *i̯- > Gr. ζ-.

ὅς 2 [pron.demonstr.] •VAR in καὶ ὅς, etc. ⇒ὁ.

ὅς 3 [pron.poss.] 'suus'. ⇒ἑ.

ὅσιος [adj.] 'sanctioned or permitted', by the gods or by nature, 'pleasing to the gods, just (= Lat. fas), devout, ritually pure' (Thgn., IA), cf. ὁσίη below. On the mg. of ὅσιος, -ίη, see on ▸ἱερός and also Terstegen 1941, Jeanmaire REGr. 58 (1945): 66ff., van der Valk REGr. 64 (1951): 417ff. ◂?▸
•VAR Substantivized τὸ ὅσιον, τὰ ὅσια.
•COMP As a second member in ἀν-όσιος (IA), probably a bahuvrīhi 'who is without τὸ ὅσιον, ἡ ὁσία' (Frisk 1941: 10f.), ἀφ-όσιος = ἀν-όσιος (Eg. inscr. I^a), see Strömberg 1946: 41.
•DER ὁσία, Ion. -ίη [f.] 'divine or natural law, law, holy custom, holy service' (Od.), probably for ὁσιία (Frisk); ὁσιό-της [f.] 'divine obedience, piety' (Pl., X.).
Denominative ὁσιό-ομαι, -ω 'to purify (oneself), hallow' (IA), especially with ἀφ-, also with καθ- and ἐξ-. Thence (ἀφ-, καθ-)οσίωσις [f.] 'purification, hallowing' (D. H., Plu.), ἀφοσιώματα· καθάρματα, καθάρσια 'purifications' (H.), ὁσιωτήρ [m.] "purificator", name of a sacrificial animal in Delphi (Plu.).
•ETYM There is no convincing etymology. Often explained as a derivative in -ιο- from a participial form s-o-to- beside alleged seto- in ἐτά· ἀληθῆ (see ▸ἐτάζω). However, the root for 'to be' is now established as *h$_1$es-, and the type of formation assumed is untenable. The older connection with Skt. satyá- 'true' < IE *h$_1$s-nt-iofails because there is no reflex of the laryngeal, and because of the vocalization *n̥ > o, which is not found in this environment in any dialect.

The derivation from *soto- (from a different root *set-, seen in ► ἐτάζω and ► ἐτεός) is defended by Pinault 1996: 43f.: *sotii̯o- 'conforme à l'ordre établi, pieux'. Cf. Benveniste 1969:2: 198-202. A recent attempt by Willi JHS (2008): 153-172 is unconvincing (see on ► νόσος).

ὀσμή = ὀδμή. ⇒ὄζω.

ὅσος [pron.rel.] 'how great' (Il.). ◄IE *h_1*i-o-* 'who'► •VAR Epic ὅσσος, -η, -ον.
•ETYM Derived from the relative ► ὅς; see s.v. and on ► τόσος.

ὄσπριον [n.]. 'pulse, legumen' (IA). ◄?►
•VAR Mostly plur.; late also -εον.
•COMP ὀσπριο-πώλης [m.] 'pulse trader' (Att. inscr.), ὀσπρ-ηγός < *ὀσπρε-ηγός (Schulze 1933a: 430^4) 'transporter of ὄ.' (Abydos V-VI^p).
•DER ὀσπρι-ώδης 'like a pulse' (Aq., Orib.), -γίτης [m.] (-γ- spirantic indicator of hiatus) 'pulse trader, pulse planter' (pap. VI^p); ὀσπρ-εύω [v.] 'to sow with ὄ.' (Att. inscr.).
•ETYM No etymology; probably a loan (Chantraine 1933: 55). IE hypotheses (see Frisk s.v.): connection with σπεῖρον 'cover' or with σπείρω 'to sow', but these are impossible, since ὀ- is not a prothetic vowel.

ὄσσα [f.] '(prognostic) voice, rumour' (B 93). ◄IE *uok^w-ih_2 'voice'► •VAR Att. ὄττα.
•DER ὀττεύομαι [v.] 'to wait for omens, interpret, predict' (Ar., Plb., D. H., Plu.), ὀττεία [f.] 'prediction' (D. H.); probably after μαντεύομαι.
•ETYM Formation like γλῶσσα (to γλῶχες), derived with a suffix -i̯α from ὀπ- 'voice', as seen in accus. ὄπα, etc. (see ► *ὄψ/ 1).

ὄσσε [n.du.] 'both eyes' (Il.). ◄IE *h_3ek^w- 'see, face'► •COMP As a second member in τρι-οττ-ίς [f.] 'pendant provided with three eyes (eye-like ornaments)' (cf. τρίγλημα ἕρματα) with the diminutive suffix -ιον (Hdn. Gr., Eust.); also -ης [m.] (Phot., EM).
•ETYM An inherited dual, from PGr. *ok^wi̯e < *$h_3ek^wih_1$, identical with OCS oči 'both eyes', Arm. ačʿkʿ [pl.] 'eyes'. See Forssman MSS 25 (1969): 39f. See ► ὄμμα, ► ὄπωπα, and ► ὄσσομαι.

ὄσσομαι [v.] 'to look, forebode, presage' (Il.). ◄IE *h_3ek^w- 'see'.► •COMP Also with προτι-, ἐπι-, κατ-.
•ETYM An old yod-present from PIE *h_3k^w-ie/o-, from the root *h_3ek^w- 'see, face'. The present ὄσσομαι had a semantic development different from the non-presentic forms ὄπωπα, ὄψομαι, etc.; cf. Treu 1955: 62f. Att. ὀττεύομαι is rather derived from ► ὄσσα. See ► ὄπωπα, ► ὄμμα, and ► ὄσσε.

ὀστακός ⇒ἀστακός.

ὀσταφίς ⇒ἀσταφίς.

ὀστέον [n.] 'bone' (Il.), also 'stone of a fruit' (pap. III^a), see below. ◄IE *h_3esth_1-i- 'bone'► •VAR Att. ὀστοῦν, Aeol. plur. -ια, Dor. (Theoc.) -ία.
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. ὀστ(ε)ο-κόπος [m.] name of a bone-disease (Hp., Thphr., Gal.), ὀλ-όστεον [n.] 'Plantago Bellardi', a substativized bahuvrīhi "consisting only of bones", because of its healing power; cf. ὀστεο-κόλλος [f.] and Strömberg 1940: 88f. and 32.
•DER Diminutives: ὀστ-άριον [n.] (medic.), -αρίδιον [n.] (Pall.); adjectives -έϊνος (IA), -ινος (Ar. Ach. 863 [Boeot.], Arist.), -όϊνος (Aq.) 'made of bone', -ώδης (X., Arist.), -εώδης (Plu.) 'bony'; -ίτης [m.] 'ptng. to the bones' (Ruf.).
•ETYM The PIE word for 'bone' was originally a neuter root noun, as evidenced by Av. ast- (e.g. gen. astō, acc. asča < *ast-ča) and by Lat. os < oss < *ost, gen. ossis.
It was transformed in various ways in other languages, e.g. Skt. ásth-i [nom.acc.], asth-n-ás [gen.] with interchange of i and n, and Hitt. ḫaštāi / ḫašti- with ablaut *ōi : i. The root shape must have been *HestH- (as shown by Skt. -th-). The initial laryngeal is shown to be *h_3- by Lat. os (root nouns generally have e-vocalism), while Greek ὀστέον shows that root-finally we have *-h_1-. The Greek ending -εον < *-ei-o- is probably a thematization of the full grade of the IE suffix *-i-, which also seems to be found in Skt. hŕ̥d-aya- [n.] 'heart' beside hā́rd-i 'id.' (cf. ► καρδία).
The words ► ὄστρακον, ► ἀστράγαλος, ► ἀστακός, ► ὀστρύα, and ► ὀσφύς are unrelated.

ὄστλιγξ, -ιγγος [f.] 'lock of hair, tendril, vine, curling flames, tentacle of an octopus' (Thphr., Call., A. R., Nic., Hdn. Gr.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also ἄστλ- (Hdn. Gr. 1,44).
•ETYM Formation like εἴλιγξ, στρόφιγξ, θῶμιγξ, πύλιγγες, etc., with comparable meanings (Chantraine 1933: 399f., Schwyzer: 498); otherwise obscure. The word is Pre-Greek, as is shown by the varying anlaut and the suffix -ιγγ-. Fur.: 276 also refers to *ὄστρυγξ in ὀστρύγγιον ἢ ἐπιφυλλίς 'racemus', 'stalk of a bunch of berries' (gloss.; not in LSJ). H. has ἄστλιγγας· αὐγάς ἢ ἄστριγγας; EM 159, 38 has ἄστριγας.

ὄστρακον [n.] 'hard shell of snails, mussels, turtles, etc.' (h. Merc., A., Hp., Arist.), 'earthen potsherd (for writing on, e.g. at a vote), earthen vessel' (Hp., Att.). ◄PG(V)► •COMP Few, e.g. ὀστρακό-δερμος 'having a shell for skin, with a hard skin' (Batr., Arist.), μαλακ-όστρακος 'with a soft shell' (Arist.).
•DER A. Substantives: 1. Diminutive ὀστράκ-ιον [n.] (Arist., Str.); 2. -ίς, -ίδος [f.] 'pine-cone' (Mnesith. apud Ath.); 3. -εύς [m.] 'potter' (APl.). 4. -ᾶς [m.] 'id.' (inscr. Corycos, Hdn. Gr.); 5. -ίτης [m.] name of a stone (Dsc., Plin.), of a kitchen (Ath.), fem. -ῖτις 'calamine' (Dsc., Plin.); 6. -ίας [m.] name of a stone (Plin.).
B. Adjectives: 7. -ινος, 8. -ε(ι)ος, 9. -όεις (AP), -οῦς (Gal.) 'earthen'; 10. -ώδης 'shell- or sherd-like, full of sherds' (Arist., LXX, pap.). 11. -ηρά [n.pl.] 'crustaceans' (Arist.).
C. Adverb: 12. -ίνδα 'played with potsherds' (Ar.), see Taillardat REA 58 (1956): 189ff.
D. Verbs: 13. -ίζω 'to write sbd.'s name on a potsherd and thus vote for his exile; to exile' (At., Arist.) with -ισμός [m.] 'ostracism' (Arist.); 14. -όομαι 'to crack into pieces' (A.), 'to become covered with a shell' (Lyc., Gal.), -όω 'to turn into a shell, harden' (Arist.), 'to cover with sherds' (Att. inscr. IV^{a}).

•ETYM Traditionally (Schwyzer: 497, Chantraine 1933: 384), it was assumed to be a formation in -ακο- derived from an r-stem ὀστ-ρ-, seen also in ►ὄστρεον. This r-stem was assumed to interchange with the i/n-stem in Skt. ásthi, gen. asthnás (see ►ὀστέον). However, there is no alternation between r/n* and i* in IE, nor a suffix -ηko- (as per DELG) leading to Gr. -ακο-. Therefore, the word must be Pre-Greek (not in Fur.).
The suffix -ακο- is also seen in ►ἀστακός 'smooth lobster; hollow of the ear', which may be related as a Pre-Greek word, displaying typical variations. The same holds for ►ἀστράγαλος.

ὄστρειον, -εον [n.] 'oyster, mussel, sea-snail; purple dye' (A., Epich., Att.). ◂PG(S)▸ •COMP ὀστρειο-γραφής 'painted with purple' (Eleg. apud Plu.), λιμν-όστρεα [pl.] 'pond oysters' (Arist.).
•DER ὀστρ-έϊνος 'mussel-like, provided with a shell(?)' (Pl.), -ῖνος 'purple' (POxy. 109, 5; III--IV^{p}), probably from Lat. ostrīnus 'id.' (since Varro), cf. below; -ε(ι)ώδης 'oyster-like' (Arist., Str.), -ειακός 'belonging to oysters' (Zonar.), -ίτης [m.] kind of stone (Orph. L.).
•ETYM The old etymology, which analyzes ὄστρε(ι)ον as a suffix -ε(ι)ο- added to a stem ὀστρ- 'bone', which is also assumed for ὄστρακον, is wrong, as there is no evidence for an Indo-European pre-form ostr-* meaning 'bone' (see on ►ὄστρακον). Therefore, the word must be Pre-Greek. I assume that -ε(ι)- continues a Pre-Greek suffix -ay- (Pre-Greek: Suffixes s.v. -αι-/-ε(ι)-). For a word with this meaning, substrate origin is most likely in any case.
It was borrowed as Lat. ostreum [n.], ostre- [f.] (from ὄστρεα [n.pl.]), together with ostr-īnus (whence Gr. ὀστρῖνος; see above), -eātus, -eārius, etc.; thence MoHG Auster, etc.

ὄστριμον [n.] 'stable, fold' (Antim., H.), Ὄστριμα [pl.] name of a mountain (Lyc.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Improbable hypothesis by Bezzenberger BB 27 (1902): 174, who reconstructs $h_1od^h$-tro-*, comparing the Germanic group of OS edor 'fence' < $*h_1ed^hro$- and the Slavic group of OCS odrъ 'bed' < $h_1od^hro$-: both the Greek suffixation and the formation in -tro- remain unexplained. Acc. to Frisk, ὄστριμον belongs to ►ὄστρακον, ►ὄστρεον, assuming a prior meaning *'protecting roof', for which he gives a parallel in Lat. lestūdō 'tortoise', also 'protecting roof'.
Since there is no IE etymology, the word may be Pre-Greek, although there appears no further indication for this.

ὀστρύα, -ύη [f.] name of a tree with hard, white wood, 'hop hornbeam, Ostrya carpinifolia' (Thphr., Plin.). ◂PG▸ •VAR Also ὀστρύς, -ύος (or -υς, -υος?), and ὀστρυΐς, -ίδος.
•ETYM Frisk compares ►ὄστρεον, but the semantics are weak. The assumption of syllable dissimilation from *ὀστρο-δρυς is extremely doubtful. Heubeck 1961: 37 and Neumann Glotta 37 (1958): 106-112 consider ὄστρυς to be Pre-Greek. Indeed, the enlargements -ύς, -ύα, -υίς are typical for an adapted foreign word. Not in Fur.

ὀσφραίνομαι [v.] 'to catch scent of, smell' (IA). ◂IE $*h_3ed$- 'smell' + $*g^{wh}reh_1$-▸ •VAR Aor. ὀσφρ-έσθαι (Att.); ὤσφραντο (Hdt. 1, 80), fut. ὀσφρ-ήσομαι (Att.), also ὀσφραν-θῆναι (Hp., Arist.), -θήσομαι (LXX), younger present ὀσφρ-ᾶται (Paus., Luc.), aor. ὠσφρ-ήσαντο, -ήθη (Arat., Ael.). Rare and late causative ὀσφραίνω 'to give to smell, make smell' (Gal., Gp.), also with ἀπ-, συν-, παρ-, etc.
•COMP Rarely with περι-, ὑπ-, κατ-. Compound καπν-οσφράντης [m.] 'who smells smoke' (Com. Adesp., Alciphr.).
•DER 1. ὄσφρ-ησις [f.] 'olfactory sense or organ' (Pl., Arist.), 2. -ασία [f.] 'smell, smelling' (LXX, Arr.), 3. -ανσις [f.] 'olfactory sense' (Clearch.). 4. back-formation ὄσφραι [f.pl.] 'flavours, smell' (Ach. Tat.) with ὀσφράδιον [n.] 'bunch of flowers' (Eust.). 5. ὀσφρ-αντήριος 'smelling, sniffing' (Ar.), 6. -αντικός 'smelling, able to smell' (Arist.), -ητικός 'id.' (Gal., D. L.); 7. -αντός (Arist.), -ητός (S. E., Gal.) 'smellable'.
•ETYM The triad ὀσφρέσθαι : ὀσφρήσομαι : ὀσφρητός corresponds to αἰσθέσθαι : αἰσθήσομαι : αἰσθητός, which is semantically related and much more frequent; ὀσφραίνομαι may have been built after this on the basis of examples like ἀλιτέσθαι : ἀλιταίνομαι, βήσομαι : βαίνω, πεφήσεται : φαίνω, etc.; ὀσφρανθῆναι possibly after εὐφρανθῆναι, and ὤσφραντο (Hdt.) probably after ἠνείκαντο, etc.
It is widely agreed that the initial syllable contains a zero grade s-stem from the root $*h_3ed$- seen in ►ὄζω, ►ὀδμή, ►ὀσμή. This s-stem also occurs in the suffix -ώδης (s.v. ►ὄζω). Against further identification of ὀσ-φραίνομαι with ἀ-, εὐ-φραίνω (which belong to ►φρήν) speak the non-presentic forms ὀσ-φρέσθαι, -φρήσασθαι, for which no parallels exist in ἀ-, εὐ-φραίνω.
Brugmann's old connection (e.g. Brugmann IF 6 (1896): 100ff.) with Skt. jíghrati, ghrāti 'to smell', ghrāṇa- [n.] 'scent, nose' is now followed by LIV^2 s.v. $*g^{wh}reh_1$-. The verbal compound in Gr. ὀσ-φρη- < $*h_3eds$-$g^{wh}reh_1$- was compared with $*mens$-d^heh_1- in IIr. $*manz$-$d^h\bar{a}$- by Schindler 1975: 266. Thus, all Greek forms derive from the future.
Seebold 1980: 482 also connected OE brǣð 'smell, breath', etc.

ὀσφῦς, -ύος [f.] 'hips, loin(s)' (IA). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Accented thus in Hdn. Gr.; the codd. often have -ύς.
•COMP As a first element e.g. in ὀσφυ-αλγής (A. Fr. 361 = 111 M., Hp.) 'suffering from a hip-disease (lumbago)', with -έω, -ία (Hp.).
•DER Diminutive ὀσφύδιον [n.] (Theognost.).
•ETYM For the formation, cf. ἰξύς, νηδύς, etc. Often connected (but without serious argumentation) with ὀστ-έον, assuming different second members, e.g. φῡ- as in ἔφυν, or σφυ- as in σφυδῶν· ἰσχυρός ... 'strong' (H.). Fur.: 375 adduces φύς = ὀσφύς (AB 1096), with Doric loss of initial σ- before φ, pointing to a Pre-Greek prothetic vowel. He also accepts (op.cit. 393) the connection with ψύαι 'loin-muscles' and ►ψόαι, which was suggested already by Prellwitz and is too obvious to be discarded. Thus the word is clearly Pre-Greek.

ὄσχη 1 [f.] 'scrotum' (Hp.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR In the same mg. also ὀσχ-έα [f.], -εος [m.] (Arist.), -εον [n.] (Poll., H.). Also ὄσχεα· βαλλάντια, μαρσύππια ἢ τὸ τῶν διδύμων ἀγγεῖον 'bags, purses or a sack of twins (sens. obsc.)' (H.).
•COMP ἀν-οσχήν· ἄνανδρος 'unmanly' (H.).
•ETYM Explained by Frisk as a metaphorical use of ►ὄσχη 2. DELG considers this possible, but uncertain. Improbable is derivation from a prefix ὀ- (see ►ὀ- 2) and σχεῖν (suggestion by DELG). The word may well be Pre-Greek.

ὄσχη 2 [f.] in ὄσχαι· κλήματα βοτρύων γέμοντα 'branches full of bunches of grapes' (H., similar Harp.; unclear Nic. Al. 109). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also ὤσχη· κληματίς 'vine-branch' (EM, Suid., H.); msc. plur. ὠσχοί· τὰ νέα κλήματα σὺν αὐτοῖς τοῖς βότρυσι 'young branches, with the bunches themselves' (H.); likewise, among others, EM 619, 32 with οἰ-, perhaps after οἶνος; sg. in Aristodem. apud Ath. 11, 495f.
•COMP Frequently in ὠσχο-φόρια [n.pl.] name of an Athenian festive day, together with -φόροι [m.pl.], -φορικός (since IV^a); on the mg. see Rutgers van der Loeff Mnem. 43 (1915): 404ff.; codd. also ὀ- (cf. ὄσχος Ar. Ach. 997 as a conjecture). Hypostasis ἐπ-όσχιον [n.] 'offshoot of a vine' (Gal.).
•ETYM Scheftelowitz IF 33 (1913/1914): 141, 144f. hypothetically compares MP azg 'branch', MoP azay 'twig, bud', but this word is further isolated. Previously connected with σχεῖν 'to hold' with prefixed ὠ-, ὀ- (see Frisk for lit.), but this prefix does not exist in Greek (see ►ὀ- 2). The variation of the initial vowel rather shows that the word is Pre-Greek (not in Fur.).

ὅτε [conj.] 'when, as', mostly temporal (IA, Arc., Cypr.). ◂IE *h_1i-o- 'if, when'▸ •DIAL Myc. o-te, Aeol. ὄτα, Dor. ὅκα.
•ETYM Usually explained from the relative ὅ- < IE *h_1i-o- and the particle -τε, -τα, -κα (cf. on ►εἶτα, ►ἡνίκα and Schwyzer: 629).

ὄτλος [m.] 'burden, load, suffering' (A. Th. 18, S. Tr. 7 sch.). ◂PG?▸
•DER ὀτλ-έω (Call., A. R., Lyc.), -εύω (A. R., Babr.) [v.] 'to bear, undergo', -ημα [n.] 'distress' (H., Theognost.).
•ETYM Taken as a verbal noun to τλῆναι 'to bear, suffer', under the dubious assumption that the prothetic vowel ὀ- was rhythmically conditioned, or a prefix. However, this is no explanation, and moreover *tlh_2-o- would give Gr. *ταλο-, so the etymology is wrong. The word is probably Pre-Greek.

ὄτοβος [m.] 'noise, sharp sound' (Hes., A., S., Antim.). ◂ONOM, PG?▸
•DER ὀτοβ-έω 'to produce noise' (A.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic with a suffix -βο- like in θόρυβος, κόναβος, etc. Besides, there is the reduplicated interjection ὀτοτοῖ 'ah!, woe!' (trag.), with ὀτοτύζω 'to cry ὀτοτοῖ, lament' (A., Ar.); see Schwyzer: 716.

ὀτόστυλλον [n.] name of an unknown plant (Epich. 161 cited in Ath. 70f). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

ὀτραλέως [adv.] 'swift, quick' (Γ 260, Τ 317, τ 100, Hes. Sc. 410, Sapph. 44, 11, A. R. 1, 1210). ◂?▸
•VAR Also -λέος [adj.] 'id.' (Opp., Q. S.). Cf. ὀτρηρός 'id.' (Hom., Ar.).
•DER ὀτρῡ́νω [v.] 'to encourage, urge, incite, stir up' (Il.), aor. ὀτρῦναι, fut. ὀτρυνῶ, also with prefix (always in prose), especially ἐπι-. Hence ὀτρυν-τύς, -ύν [f.] 'incitement' (Τ 234f., Antim. 91), -τικός 'inciting' (Eust.), -τεύς [m.] name of a Lydian, together with -τείδης (Υ 383f., 389); ἐργότρυς· κατάσκοπος ἔργων 'labour inspector' (H.), a back-formation.
•ETYM Like κλῑ́νω < *κλῐ-ν-ι̯ω, ὀτρῡ́νω < *ὀτρυ-ν-ι̯ω is an older nasal formation to which a presential yod-suffix was added. ὀτρηρός is undoubtedly a recent formation in -ηρός (on which, see Chantraine 1933: 231ff.); perhaps ὀτραλέος was formed to ὀτρύνω after the model θαρσαλέος : θαρσύνω.
The variation in ὀτρύνω : ὀτραλέως recalls that in τρῠφάλεια : τράπεζα < *(k^w)tu̯r̥-. The form ὀτρύνω has therefore been analyzed as *ὀ-τρῠ-ν-ι̯ω, consisting of a prefix ὀ- and a zero grade IE *tu̯r̥- which metathesized to τρυ- (cf. on ►τρυφάλεια). In this way, connection with Skt. tvárate 'to hurry' and with the Germanic group of OHG dweran 'to turn round quickly' < IE *tuer- became possible. This analysis seems quite uncertain, however, since a prefix ὀ- probably did not exist in Greek; cf. ►ὀ- 2. See ►τορύνη 1.

ὀτρύγη, -φάγος ⇒τρύγη.

ὀτρύνω ⇒ὀτραλέως.

ὀττεύομαι ⇒ὄσσα.

οὐ [pcl.] 'not' (Il.). ◂IE? *$h_2$eiu- 'lifetime, long period'▸ •VAR Antevocalically οὐκ, οὐχ (Il.), οὐκί (epic), οὐχί (trag., also Hom. and Att. prose).
•DIAL Myc. o-u-qe 'and not'.
•ETYM Pre-Greek origin has been considered for a long time, until Cowgill Lang. 36 (1960): 347ff. connected the element with ►αἰών and cognates, assuming a basic expression *ne $h_2$oiu k^wid, where *ne is the sentence negative; it lost its meaning to the second element, a development which occurs more often. The syntagm would also explain Arm. oč' and Alb. as (cf. Kortlandt 2003: index).
The other Greek forms are easily explained in this way: Hom. οὐ-κί contains the IE indefinite pronoun *k^wid and is the oldest form; thence οὐκ by elision and οὐχ with aspiration, if the latter was not elided from οὐ-χι, containing the stressing particle IE *ǵ^{h}i (Pok. 417f.), like ναί-χι, ἤ-χι, etc. = Skt. hí (in na-hí 'since not', etc.), Av. zi.
From οὐδὲ εἷς arose οὐδείς, younger Att. and Koine οὐθείς 'nobody'; in the same way, οὐδ-αμοῦ, -αμοῖ, -αμῶς, -αμός, and -άμινος arose from ►*ἁμο-, ἅμα.

οὐαί [excl.] 'alas!' (LXX). ◂LW Sem.▸
•ETYM A loan from Semitic; see Lowe Hermathena 105 (1967): 34-9.

οὐγγία, οὐγκία [f.] = Lat. uncia.
•VAR Also ὀγκία (Epich. 203).

•ETYM A loan from Latin by the Greeks of Sicily.

οὖδας, -εος [n.] 'ground, soil' (Il.). ◄PG?, ?►
•VAR Dat. -ει. On the inflexion see Chantraine 1942: 210f.
•DER οὐδαῖος 'on or under the ground' (Lyc., Orph., AP) and several hypostases: κατ-ουδαῖος 'subterranean' (Hes. Fr. 60, h. Merc., Call.), ὑπ-ουδαῖος 'id.' (Plu., Opp.), ἐπουδαῖοι· ἐπιχθόνιοι 'who dwell on the earth' (H.); προσ-ουδ-ίζω, -ίσαι [v.] 'to throw on the ground' (Hdt., Plu., D. C.), ἐποτούδιξε· κατέβαλεν ἐπὶ γῆν 'threw to the ground' (H.), containing the prefix ποτ-.
•ETYM There is no good etymology. Semantically attractive but phonetically difficult is the connection with Arm. getin 'bottom of the earth' < ueden-o-*, Hitt. utnē 'land' < ud-n-i-*, but then οὐ- remains unexplained; see ►οὐδός 'threshold' for details. See Peters 1980a: 57f. for a discussion of all possible reconstructions. One also compared ►ἔδαφος 'ground, bottom'.

οὐδός [m.] 'threshold' (Il.). ◄PG?, ?►
•VAR ὀδός (Att.), ᾠδός (Cyrene, H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. A basis *ὀδϝός enables connection with οὖδας, but only if one accepts that this is a generalized Ionic form (Att. *ὄδας would be expected). The further connection of Arm. getin and Hitt. utne with οὖδας and οὐδός used to be justified by the assumption of a form *ὀ-ϝοδ- besides ὀδός from *ϝοδ-ός, but a prothetic vowel cannot be assumed anymore in an inherited word. In any case, *$h_3uC$- did not give οὐC- (as per Peters 1980a: 72f.). In principle, οὐδός and οὖδας could be variants of the same Pre-Greek word. See ►οὖδας.

οὐδών, -ῶνος [m.] 'kind of felt-shoe made of goat hair' (Poll. 10, 50). ◄LW Asia Minor► •DER Diminutive -ώνιον (Edict. Diocl. [Asine]), -ωνάριον (Charis., gloss.).
•ETYM Borrowed as Lat. ūdō, -ōnis [m.], also odō. Acc. to Martialis 14, 140, the word is Cilician, thus a foreign word from Asia Minor; cf. WH s.v. and Neumann 1961: 33.

οὖθαρ, -ατος [n.] 'udder', also metaph. (Il.). ◄IE *$h_1e/ou(H)d^h$-r/n- 'udder'► •DER οὐθάτιος (AP), -όεις (Nic., Opp., Orph.) 'belonging to udders, fertile'.
•ETYM Old inherited word for 'udder', preserved in several languages. The original r/n-stem is also seen in Skt. ū́dhar, gen. ū́dhnas. In Lat. ūber, -eris [n.] (secondarily with adjectival mg. 'rich, fertile'), the r-stem was generalized, like in Germanic, e.g. MHG ūter, ON júgr < jūdr* with deviating initial, and in Lith. ūdr-óti, 1sg. -óju 'to be pregnant', pa-ūdróti 'to get an ever larger udder', of pregnant swines and dogs. If the Germanic forms with initial e-* are not secondary, the root starts with *$h_1$- and shows ablaut e / o / zero. Slavic rebuilt the word after the neuters in -men, e.g. SCr. vȉme, Ru. výmja [n.].
The variations in anlaut seem to point to an old ablaut *$HeuHd^h$-, $HouHd^h$-, $HuHd^h$-. Acc. to Schindler BSL 70 (1975): 7f., this reflects a PIE static heteroclitic formation. To explain the Greek form, the Saussure Effect is assumed: loss of the laryngeal after a root with o-grade and a resonant or semivowel. However, if the length in Skt. could be explained in a different way, there is no need to reconstruct the internal laryngeal at all, since in Balto-Slavic, initial HuC-* merges with uHC-* (see Pronk fthc.c).

οὐλαί [f.pl.] '(unground) barley corns, roasted and sprinkled between the horns of the sacrificial animal' (Ion. since γ 441); Lat. mola salsa. ◄PG(V)► •VAR ὀλαί (Att.), ὀλοαί (Arc. II^a). Cf. ὄλπα· χόνδρου τις ἕψησις. ἔδεσμά τι 'cooking of groats, a dish'. ἢ ὄλβος 'wealth, blessed state' (H.).
•COMP As a first member in οὐλο-χύτας [acc.pl.f.] 'id.' (Hom.); οὐλόχυτα· τὰ κατάργματα 'first offerings' (H.); compounds of οὐλαί and ►χέω with a suffix -το- (cf. e.g. ἀκμό-θετον); οὐλο-χύτας took the gender of οὐλαι (but acc. to Schwyzer: 439, it stands for *οὐλὰς χυτάς); thence οὐλοχυτ-έομαι [v.] 'to besprinkle with οὐ.' (Thphr. apud Porph.). Also οὐλο-χόϊον (-χοεῖον?)· ἀγγεῖον, εἰς ὅ αἱ ὀλαὶ ἐμβάλλονται πρὸς ἀπαρχὰς τῶν θυσιῶν 'vessel in which the ὀ. are thrown at the beginning of sacrifices' (H.); as if from *οὐλο-χόος, -χοέω.
•DER Also (with ὀλβ- = ὀλϝ-) ὀλβ-άχνιον [n.] 'basket for the ὀλαί' (EM 257, 53 [Syracuse]), ὀλβάχιον· κανοῦν. Δεινόλοχος (H.); ὀλβακήϊα 'id.' (Dor., acc. to H. s.v. εὔπλουτον κανοῦν); ὀλαγμεύειν· ὀλὰς βάλλειν 'to throw ὀ.' (Phot.) with ὀλαιμεύς· ὁ (cod. τὸ) τὰς ὀλὰς βάλλων 'he who throws the ὀ. (H.).
•ETYM The second ο in Arc. ὀλοαί may stand for ϝ (cf. δοάν = δϝάν, see ►δήν), from which we obtain a basic form ὀλϝαί. The comparison with ὄλυραι and ►ἔλυμος 'barley' is hypothetical. In view of the gloss ὄλπα (H.), which Fur.: 155 and 240 connects with ►ὄλβος under an original meaning 'Nährung, Getreide', it is probably Pre-Greek.

οὐλαμός [m.] 'throng, crowd' (Il.: οὐλαμός ἀνδρῶν); metaph. of bees (Nic.); technical usage 'troop of cavalry' (Plb., Plu.). ◄IE? uel-* 'press together'► •COMP As a first member in οὐλαμη-φόρος, οὐλαμ-ώνυμος (Lyc.); details in Trümpy 1950: 159.
•ETYM From γόλαμος (=ϝόλ-)· διωγμός 'pursuit' (H.), a pre-form (ϝ)ολαμός with metrical lengthening is deduced (cf. Chantraine 1942: 124f.). This is derived from ►εἰλέω 1 'to press together', with an o-grade root and suffixal -αμ-, like ποταμός, πλόκαμος.

οὔλαφος [m.] · νεκρός 'corpse' (H.). ◄PG(S)► •DER Also in οὐλαφη-φόρος 'bearer of corpses' (Call. Iamb. 1, 234).
•ETYM Often connected with ►οὖλος 3 as containing a suffix -φο- (cf. Chantraine 1933: 263). However, it rather seems to be an independent Pre-Greek word.

οὖλε 'salve' (ω 402). ⇒ὅλος.

οὐλή [f.] 'scarred wound, scar' (Od.). ◄IE uel-* 'draw, tear'► •COMP οὐλο-πρόσωπος 'with scarred countenance' (Cat. Cod. Astr.).
•DER οὐλόομαι, -όω [v.] 'to scar, cause scars' (Arist.), with -ωσις (Gal.), -ωμα (Suid.) 'scarring'.
•ETYM From a pre-form wolnā-*, but without a direct counterpart outside Greek. Closest is Lat. volnus [n.] 'wound' < PIt. welanos-* < QIE *$uelh_3$-nos-. Celtic words like MW gweli [m.] 'wound', also 'blood' < uelīso-* (vel sim.), OIr. fuil [f.] 'blood' < uolH-i-* are root-related.

As a common basis for these nouns, the root uelh$_3$-* 'to strike' must be assumed, as represented by Hitt. u̯alḫ-^{zi} 'to hit', Lat. vellō 'to pull out' and, within Greek (with change of meaning), ► ἁλίσκομαι 'to be caught'. The loss of laryngeal in uolH-n̥eh$_2$-* > PGr. wolnā- can be attributed to the Saussure Effect; for an alternative, see Van Beek 2009.

οὔλιος 'baneful'. ⇒οὖλος 3.

οὖλον [n.] 'gums' (Hp., A., Pl., Arist.). ◂?▸
•VAR Mostly plur. -α.
•ETYM The basic form is uncertain: *(ϝ)όλσον, *(ϝ)όλνον, or even (if an Ion. loan into Att.) *(ϝ)όλϝον? It is etymologically uncertain as well: both the connection with εἰλέω, εἴλομαι 'press together' (referring to the compact, massive structure of the gums) and that with εἰλέω 'to turn, wind', εἰλύω 'to envelop' (properly *"tumor, envelopment"; Pok. 1141, WH s.v. gingīva) seem conceivable.

οὖλος 1 'whole, entire'. ⇒ὅλος.

οὖλος 2 [adj.] A. 'frizzy, shaggy, woolly, crinkly', of κόμη, λάχνη, χλαῖνα, τάπητες, etc. (Il.), as a first member in οὐλό-θριξ, -κάρηνος, -κομος, etc. (Od., Hdt., Alex., Arist.); also of plants like ἕλιξ, σέλινον (Simon., Hdt.); B. Later, of ξύλον, δένδρον, etc. (Thphr.), also of the voice (Plu., AP), of movements (Call.) 'compact, dense, thick, πυκνός, συνεστραμμένος'. ◂IE? uol(H)-no-* 'wool'▸ •VAR Myc. wo-ro-ne-ja was interpreted as /wloneja/ with metathesis for /wolneja/ by Ventris and Chadwick 1973: 322; uncertain.
•DER From A. οὐλάς [f.], of χαίτη (Nic.); from B. οὔλιος [adj.], of χλαμύς; οὐλάς also as a substantive = πήρα, θύλακος (Call., AP, H.).
•ETYM In the meaning 'frizzy', οὖλος can be connected with ► εἰλέω 2 'to roll, turn, wind' (Bechtel 1914). The later-attested meaning 'compact, thick, etc.' agrees better with ► εἰλέω 1 'to press together', but we may also be dealing with a semantic shift 'twisted' > 'compact' (cf. ► συστρέφειν), and it is often difficult to separate the two verbs.
However, the morphology is difficult: a base form like *ϝόλνος fits better with a substantive. A reduplicated *ϝό-ϝλ-ος is improbable. If Myc. wo-ro-ne-ja stands for /wolneja/, we may reconstruct uol(H)-no-* 'wool', either from uel-* 'to twist' or uelH-* 'to pluck' (Lat. vellō). See ► ἴουλος.

οὖλος 3 [adj.] 'baneful', epithet of Ares and Achilles, also of Ὄνειρος (Il.); of Eros (A. R.), also of χεῖμα (Bion), of στόμιον (Nic.); probably also in οὖλον κεκλήγοντες (P 756, 759; acc. to the sch. and McKenzie Class. Quart. 21 (1927): 206 'thick, loud, violent', to ► οὖλος 2). ◂IE h$_3$lh$_1$-u-* 'destructive'▸ •DER With a suffix -ιο- and in the same mg.: οὔλιος, said of ἀστήρ (Λ 62), of Ares, etc. (Hes. Sc., Pi., S.); also of Apollo and Artemis (Delos, Milete), probably originally as bringers of pest and death (= λοίμιος), later connected with Apollo as a healing god and connected with ὅλος (whence Ἀπ. Ὄλιος in Lindos; cf. on ὅλος). On ► οὔλαφος, see s.v.
•ETYM Derived from the root h$_3$elh$_1$-* of ► ὄλλυμι, but the details of the derivation are disputed. It seems best to assume an original u-stem h$_3$elh$_1$-u-, h$_3$lh$_1$-eu-, which is probably continued in ὀλοός, as well.
As an epithet of Ὄνειρος, οὖλος was interpreted by Bechtel 1914: 259f. as 'deceiving' and connected with Lith. vilti 'to deceive', which Frisk calls "verlockend aber überflüssig".

οὖλος 4 [m.] 'sheaf of corn', secondarily 'song to worship Demeter' (Ath. 14, 618d); οὖλοι· δράγματα 'sheaves' (H.). ◂?▸
•DER Οὐλώ [f.] epithet of Demeter (Semus 19). Egetmeyer Kadmos 32 (1993): 35f. compares the Cyprian epithet of a goddess wo-lo-we-a-i /wolweai/ [dat.sg.f.].
•ETYM Unknown. Hardly the same word as ► ἴουλος, as assumed e.g. by Frisk.

οὖν [adv.pcl.] 'well, so', also (originally?) affirmative: 'in fact, indeed, certainly' (Hom., Att.). ◂?▸
•VAR Post-Hom. Ion. ὦν (also attested as οὖν), Lesb. Boeot. Dor. ὦν, Thess. οὖν (< ὦν?).
•ETYM The relation between οὖν and ὦν is unclear. Unconvincing explanations in Brugmann-Thumb 1913: 633 and in Schwyzer 1950: 586f. On οὖν in Homer, cf. Reynen Glotta 36 (1957): 1ff. and Reynen Glotta 37 (1958): 67ff.

οὕνεκα, -κεν [rel. adv., conj.] 'wherefore, because of which, for the reason that' (Il.), as a preposition 'because of' = ἕνεκα (mostly Att. poetry, Herod.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM As a relative, compounded from οὗ ἕνεκα; as a preposition, arisen from ἐκείνου ἕνεκα > ἐκεινούνεκα (vel sim.) by false division.

οὖνον •VAR οὖνει.
•ETYM Acc. to Mayer Acme 14 (1961): 233ff., it was borrowed from Eg. wny (cf. Copt. ου(ε)ινι) 'to run'. See ► ἐριούνης.

οὐρά [f.] 'tail' (Il.), later often metaph. 'rear (guard)' (X., Plb.). ◂IE h$_1$ers-* 'tail', PG?▸
•VAR Ion. -ή.
•COMP οὐρ-ᾱγός [m.] 'leader of the rear guard', with -έω, -ία (X., Plb., LXX); on κόλ-ουρος see ► κόλος; see also ► κόθουρος, ► πάγουρος.
•DER 1. Diminutive οὐράδιον (Gp.); 2. Adjectives οὐρ-αῖος 'belonging to the tail' (Ψ 520, Hp.) with -αία [f.] (like κεραία, etc.) 'tail' (Aret.), -αῖον [n.] 'id.' (E.). 3. οὐρ-αχός [m.] 'foetal organ, point, outer end', e.g. of the heart, of the eyebrows, of a stalk (medic., Ael.), -ίαχος [m.] 'lower end of a spear' (Il., A. R., AP; metrically conditioned?); cf. κύμβ-αχος, στόμ-αχος, etc. 4. οὐρώδης 'belonging to the tail' (Hp. v.l.). See also ► οὖραξ.
•ETYM The alternation between οὐρά and ὄρρος, -ορσος mirrors that between κουρά and κόρρη, κόρση. The cause for this alternation may have been the accent: *ὀρσά gave οὐρά, while -ρσ- remained when the accent preceded: ὄρσος (> Att. ὄρρος). Note OIr. err [f.] 'tail' < IE h$_1$ers-h$_2$-*.

The form οὐραχός is remarkable, with a suffix that is probably Pre-Greek; here again there are the parallels with -αχ-, -ιχ-, -υχ- (cf. Chantraine 1933: 403). Even stranger is the form οὐρίαχος, which has been considered to be a metrical licence (there is no other word in -ιαχος). One might suppose, therefore, that the preceding consonant was palatalized, i.e. -rs^y-; cf. Beekes 2008. This might lead to the conclusion that the word for 'tail' is Pre-Greek (unless one concludes that οὐρ(ι)αχός is not cognate with the tail-word). See ► ὄρρος.

οὐρανός [m.] 'heaven, sky' (Il.), also personified (Hes.). ◂PG?, IE? uors-o-* 'rain'▸ •VAR Dor. Boeot. ὠρανός, Aeol. ὤρανος, ὄρανος (both probably for ὄρρ-, see below).
•COMP Often as a first member, e.g. οὐρανο-μήκης 'sky-high' (ε 239); in hypostases like ἐπ-ουράνιος 'in the sky' (Il.).
•DER 1. Diminutive οὐρανίσκος [m.] 'tent-roof, palate' (Hell.), also name of a constellation (sch.); 2. οὐράν-ιος 'heavenly' (Pi., IA), -ίς [f.] (AP); -ία [f.] name of one of the Muses (Hes.); 3. Οὐραν-ίωνες (θεοί) [m.pl.] 'the heavenly (gods)' (Hom., Hes.), also 'the Titans' (E 898; from Οὐρανός); -ίδης, Dor. -ίδᾱς 'son of Ouranos', plur. 'the Titans', also 'the heavenly' (Hes., Pi.); 4.Οὐραν-ιάς [f.] 'game to worship Ourania' (Sparta); 5. οὐραν-ίζω or -ίζομαι 'to go up high' (A. Fr. 766 M.), -ιάζω 'to toss up high' (H. s.v. οὐρανίαν), -οῦσθαι 'to become deified' with -ωσις (Eust.).
•ETYM As the Aeolic variation ὠρ-, ὀρ- probably stands for geminated ὀρρ-, the basis is likely to have been (ϝ)ορσανός, accented like ὀρφανός and perhaps an enlargement of a noun uorsó- = Skt. varṣá- [n., m.] 'rain'.
Alternatively, like e.g. ὄχανον : ἔχω, ξόανον : ξέω, it has been supposed that οὐρανός, as an agent noun, derives from a verbal root uers-* as seen in Skt. várṣati 'to rain'; alternatively, that it derives from the iterative ► οὐρέω, in the way that Indo-Iranian nouns in -ana- are connected with verbs in -ayati (= Gr. -έω); it would then mean "rainmaker" or "moistener, impregnator". However, the identity of the suffixes Gr. -ανο- and IIr. -ana- can only be accepted under the doubtful assumption of PIE a*.
Specht KZ 66 (1939): 199ff., Fraenkel 1955 s.v. viršùs and others interpreted it as "der zur Höhe in Beziehung stehende", from the root of Skt. varṣman- [m., n.] 'height', Lith. viršùs 'upper, highest seat', to which Ἔρρος· ὁ Ζεύς (H.) has also been connected, so from IE uers-*; however, this is not to be preferred, neither semantically nor formally.
The old identification with the theonym Skt. Váruṇa- is certainly wrong; see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v.
It has also been suggested that the word is of foreign, i.e. Pre-Greek, origin (DELG); note that -αν- is difficult to account for if the word represents an old IE formation.

οὖραξ, -αγος [f.] Att. name of the bird τέτριξ (Arist.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM The suffix occurs in Pre-Greek, and it has parallels with three Pre-Greek vowels: -υγ- -ῑγ- (with long vowel, as appears often in Pre-Greek); see Chantraine 1933: 397, and cf. ►λάταξ. This means that the word is Pre-Greek and probably has nothing to do with the word for 'tail'. Cf. ►οὐρά.

οὐρέω [v.] 'to urinate' (Hes., IA). ◂IE uers-* 'urinate'▸ •VAR Ipf. ἐούρουν, aor. οὐρῆσαι, fut. -ήσω, -ήσομαι, perf. ἐούρηκα.

•COMP Also with prefixes like ἐν-, ἐξ-, προσ-, κατ-.
•DER (ἐξ-, ἀπ-)οὔρησις [f.] 'micturition', -ητήρ [m.], -ήθρα, Ion. -η 'urethra', -ημα [n.] 'urine', -ητικός 'urinating frequently, promoting urine' (Hp., Arist.); also as back-formation οὖρον [n.] 'urine' (Hdt., Hp., Thphr.), together with δυσουρέω [v.] 'to have difficulties with micturition', -ία [f.] 'difficult micturition' (medic.) as if from *δύσ-ουρος. From οὖρον or οὐρέω: οὐράνη [f.] 'chamber-pot' (A. Fr., S. Fr.) = οὐρητήρ (Poll.).
•ETYM Iterative formation uors-eie/o-* from the primary root present seen in Skt. várṣati 'to rain' < IE uérs-e/o-* and YAv. aiβi.varəšta- 'rained upon'. It is a euphemistic expression for ► ὀμείχω; cf. ► οὐρανός and ► ἔρση. The cluster -rs- lost its s with compensatory lengthening when followed by the accent.
Lat. ūrīna goes back to uh_1-r-* (Skt. vā̆r- [n.] 'water', ON úr [n.] 'drizzle'), and therefore cannot be connected. See CEG 1 (RPh. 70, 1996): 117f.

οὐρία [f.] name of a duck-like waterbird (Alex. Mynd. apud Ath. 9, 395e). ◂?▸ •ETYM Unclear. It cannot be combined with the word for 'water' in Lat. ūrīna, etc.; see on ► οὐρέω.

οὐροί [m.pl.] 'trench or keel-furrow, through which ships are pulled into the sea' (only B 153). ◂IE uoru-o-* 'drawer', uerH-u-* 'draw'▸ •ETYM Formerly, words mentioned s.v. ► ὅρος 'frontier, etc.' were connected, but also ► ὀρύσσω 'to dig'. Recently, however, García Ramón 2004 (see also DELG Supp.) has analyzed οὐροί as an agent noun uoru-ó-* built on the same root as ἐρύω 'to drag', illustrating the etymology with examples from Homeric phraseology.

οὖρον 1 [n.] 'urine'. ⇒οὐρέω.

οὖρον 2 [n.] in οὖρον (-α) ἡμιόνοιϊν (-νων) (θ 124, K 351) and δίσκου οὖρα (Ψ 431, δίσκουρα Ψ 523) as a measure of length. ◂?▸
•VAR Later only οὖρα (A. R. 2, 795).
•ETYM Because the concrete meaning is unknown, the word has no certain explanation. Wackernagel 1955(2): 1082 supposed that οὖρα was originally a collective plural of οὖρος 'frontier, furrow' (or to οὐροί?, Frisk adds), from which the singular οὖρον was an innovation. Details in Bechtel 1914: 261f.

οὖρος 1 [m.] 'fair wind' (Il.). ◂IE $h_3$er-* 'arise'▸
•DER οὔριος 'with a fair wind, favourable', also as an epithet of Zeus, ἡ οὐρία (sc. πνοή) = οὖρος (IA); οὐρίζω 'to carry with a fair wind' (trag.), οὐριοω 'id.' (AP); often in hypostases like ἐπουρ-ίζω 'id.', also intrans. 'to blow fairly, etc.' (Att.); cf. ἔπ-ουρος 'blowing fairly' (S.).
•ETYM May be derived from the root $h_3$er-, extended $h_3$er-u-, in ►ὄρνυμαι, ►ὀρούω starting from a pre-form orwo-*. Att. οὔριος must then be a Homerism or Ionism.

οὖρος 2 [m.] 'watcher, guard(ian)' (Il.); in Hom. almost only in οὖρος Ἀχαιῶν, epithet of Nestor. ◂IE uer-* 'observe'▸ •VAR Myc. wo-wo /worwos/.

•COMP Cret. οὐρεύω [v.] 'to watch, guard' with οὐρεῖα [n.pl.] 'fortress' (III[a]), ὠρεῖα (I[a]); ὀρεύειν· φυλάσσειν 'id.' (H.).
•ETYM Can hardly be separated from ► ὁράω, and probably derives from *ϝόρϝος, which is attested in Mycenaean wo-wo. On the Cretan forms, see Bechtel 1921, 2: 691 and 791, as well as Thumb-Kieckers 1932: 153. See ► ἐπίουρος.

οὖρος 3 [m.] 'border'. ⇒ὅρος.

οὖρος 4 [n.] 'mountain'. ⇒ὄρος.

οὖς [n.] 'ear', metaph. 'handle' (Il., IA). ◄IE *$h_2$eus-, *h_2e/ous-n- 'ear'► •VAR ὦς (Theoc., Hell.); gen. ὠτός (IA, with nom. acc. plur. ὦτα, etc.), also οὔατος, -ατα, etc. (Simon., with nom. acc. sing. οὖας); also the gloss ἄτα (cod. ἄτα)· ὦτα. Ταραντῖνοι (H.); probably also sing. αὖς (Paul. Fest. 100, 4; see Wackernagel 1955(2): 1252ff.).
•DIAL Myc. a-no-wo-to /an-ōwotos/ 'without handles'; also a-no-we /anōwes-/ like ἀμφ-ώης 'with two ears or handles' (Theoc.), beside ἄμφ-ωτος (Od.).
•COMP ὠτ-ακουστέω [v.] 'to eavesdrop, listen, pay attention' (Hdt., X., D., Plb.), a compound built on ὠτὶ ἀκουστόν (opposite ἀν-ηκουστέω : οὐκ ἀκουστόν), with ὠτακουστής [m.] 'eavesdropper, listener' (Arist.); ἀν-ούατος 'without ears, without handles' (Theoc.), ἄ-ωτος 'id.' (Philet., Plu.); μυόσ-ωτον (μύ-ωτον) [n.], μυοσωτίς [f.] "mouse-ear", i.e. the plant 'madwort, Asperugo', from μυὸς ὦτα 'id.' (Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 42. On ► λαγώς, see s.v.
•DER ὠτ-ίον [n.] 'handle, ear' (Theopomp. Com., LXX, NT), -άριον [n.] 'id.' (com. IV[a]); οὐατ-όεις 'with ears, handles' (Simon., Call.), which can also be reconstructed in Hom. and Hes. for ὠτώεις, acc. to Wackernagel 1916: 168f.; ὠτ-ικός 'belonging to the ear' (Gal., Dsc.). Also ὠτίς, -ίδος [f.] 'bustard' (X., Arist.), perhaps after the cheek-plumes or the tuft, Thompson 1895 s.v.; besides ὦτος [m.] 'eared owl' (Arist.), after the ear-plumes. See also on ► ἐνῴδιον, ► ἐνώτιον.
•ETYM The nominatives οὖς, ὦς (cf. βοῦς, βῶς) can be derived from IE Hōus. The color of the initial laryngeal is determined by Lat. auris, aus-cultō, etc., which must continue an e-grade *$h_2$eus-. This e-grade may also be found in the gloss ἄτα, if from *αὖσ-ατα; see perhaps also on ► ἀάνθα; it is certainly found in ► παρειαί 'cheeks' < par-aus-(i̯)ai. It has been supposed that the o-vocalism in οὖς was taken from the word for 'eye'.
OAtt. ΟΣ is noteworthy; it cannot contain an inherited diphthong ou- and thus seems to point to a contraction from ōwo-. An s-stem *$h_2$ous-os was reconstructed on this basis, for which support was found in OCS ucho [n.] 'ear', gen. ušese < *$h_2$eus-os, gen. *$h_2$eus-es-es. However, it is also possible to interpret the OAtt. form as ὦς, analogical after ὠτός, etc. This would eliminate the problem that Homeric οὖς at Υ 473 (there are also problems with Λ 109) contains a contraction which cannot be resolved. Cf. Fischer MSS 56 (1996): 42 and the discussion in Haug 2002: 85ff.
The other case forms can be derived from pre-forms *$h_2$ous-nt- (see Kiparsky Lang. 43 (1967): 619-635), so it is no longer necessary to assume a lengthened root grade *h_2ōus-nt-, as per Frisk. This gives Hom. (Aeol.) οὔατος, with a geminate as a reflex of the cluster -Rh-, and IA ọ̄watos with compensatory lengthening, contracting to ὠτός. The n-stem continued by these forms is also found in Arm. un-kn (with -kn after akn 'eye'; cf. on the Greek vocalism above) and in Gm., e.g. Go. auso, ausins. However, n-stems were highly productive in Germanic, which excludes them as evidence for the original flexion.

To summarize, the Homeric instances may show a trace of an original root noun *h_2ōus (represented in Lith. gen.pl. ausų̃), while the rest of the Greek forms (including OAtt. ΟΣ) may have been built on the n-stem *$h_2$ous-n-, which need not be inherited (though note the Armenian parallel). Other notable forms are the old duals Av. uši < IE *$h_2$us-ih$_1$ with zero grade, OCS uš-ī < IE *$h_2$eus-ih$_1$.
On the reconstruction of the initial laryngeal, see Beekes Sprache 18 (1972): 123f.; extensive treatment of οὖς and derivative compounds in Szemerényi SMEA 3 (1967): 47-88. Perhaps related are ► ἀκούω, ► ἀκροάομαι.

οὐσία [f.] 'property, homestead; being, presence, existence, reality, substance' (Att.). ◄IE *h_1s-ont- 'being'► •VAR Ion. -ίη, Dor. ὠσία.
•COMP Often with prefix (from ἄπ-ειμι, etc.), e.g. ἀπ-, ἐξ-, μετ-, παρ-, συν-ουσία, -ίη (mostly Att.). Compounds ἐξ-ούσιος 'bereft of property' (Ph.), ὑπερ-ούσιος 'above being', μετ-ούσιος 'below being' (Them., comm. Arist., etc.).
•DER οὐσ-ίδιον [n.] 'small property', -ιότης [f.] 'nature'; -ιώδης 'substantial, real' (Epicur.), -ιακός 'belonging to property'; verbs συν-ουσιάζω [v.] 'to be together', ἐξ-ουσιάζω 'to have power' (since IV[a]; οὐσιάζω only PMag. Lond.), whence συνουσιαστής [m.] (Pl., X.), -αστικός (Ar.) etc.; οὐσι-όω, -όομαι 'to provide (be provided) with substance', συν- 'to be connected to something' with (συν-)οὐσίωσις (late).
•ETYM Abstract formation in -ία from the ptc. ὤν, οὖσα, ὄν (cf. the pair γερουσία : γέρων). On this was modeled Dor. ὠσία, but also ἐσσία on Dor. Aeol. ἔσσα [f.], ἔντες [pl.] (Pl. Cra. 401c); see also ἐστώ s.v. ► εἰμί. Suppositions on the formation in Collinge Glotta 49 (1971).

οὖσον [n.] 'ship's tackle, ropes' (Lyc. 20, Antim. 57 Wyss, H.), mostly plur. ◄?► •ETYM von Wilamowitz Herm. 59 (1924): 273 compares σοῦσον (?).

οὐτάω [v.] 'to harm, wound' (Il., also trag.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Present only ipv. οὔταε (χ 356); 3sg. οὐτᾷ (A. Ch. 640 [lyr.] conj. Hermann); more frequent is the present οὐτάζω; aor. οὐτ-άσαι, -ῆσαι, -ηθῆναι, fut. -άσω, -ήσω, pret. 3sg. οὖτα, inf. οὐτ-άμεν(αι), ptc. -άμενος, perf. pass. οὔτασται.
•DER ἄ-ουτος, ἀν-ούτατος 'unwounded', νε-ούτατος 'newly wounded' (Il.), later also -ητος (Nic., Nonn.). ἀν-ουτητί [adv.] 'without wounding, without wounds' (X 371, Q. S.).
•ETYM Athematic οὖτ-α, -άμεν(αι), -άμενος, which certainly function as aorists, should probably be considered to be the common basis of the above forms. Thence οὔταε and (if correctly restored) οὐτᾷ, together with οὐτ-ῆσαι, -ηθῆναι, -ήσω on the one hand, and the s-aorist οὐτ-άσαι, whence in turn -άσω, -άζω, -ασται. See Chantraine 1942: 356, 380, 410f.; on the use in Hom., see Trümpy 1950: 92ff.
Morphologically and etymologically unclear. Often connected with ► ὠτειλή (οὐταμένην ὠτειλήν Ξ 518, Ρ 86) and with ► ἀάω. Already Meister 1921: 229 had thought of Pre-Greek origin, which seems to be the best solution, by the interpretation of ὠτειλή as a variant. A root of the shape $h_3u(a)th_2$- (e.g. Peters 1980a: 60ff.) is impossible for PIE.

οὐτιδανός [adj.] 'worthless, insignificant' (Il., also A. Th. 361). ◄GR► •ETYM Derivation from οὔτι like ἠπεδανός, πευκεδανός, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 362), although the δ could also belong to original *οὔ-τιδ < h_2oiu k^wid; see on ► οὐ. See ► ἀλλοδαπός, ► ἡμεδαπός.

οὗτος [pron.dem.] 'this, this one, that one, iste' (Il.). ◄IE so-* + h_2u-to-* 'that one'► •VAR αὕτη [f.], τοῦτο [n.].
•ETYM The form οὗτος < so/to-* + h_2u-to- (Beekes 1995: 202), a univerbation of the so/to-* pronoun with the stem that also figures in ► αὐτός. For the element h_2u* 'away, again' (Skt. ava 'away', Gr. αὖ) used in proniminal stems, cf. OCS ovъ ... ovъ 'the one ... the other'. This element is also found in Skt. só < sá u* < so h_2u*, and perhaps also πάνυ (see on ► πᾶς) ὀφείλω [v.] 'to owe, be obliged, be due' (IA, also Il.). ◄IE h_3b^hel-* 'owe, be obliged'► •VAR ὀφέλλω (Aeol., Arc., also Hom.), ὀφήλω (Cret., Arc., Arg.), sigm. aor. ὀφειλ-ῆσαι, pass. -ηθῆναι, fut. -ήσω (Hell. also -έσω), perf. ὠφείληκα (Att.), them. aor. ὤφελον, ὄφελον (Il., Att.).

Further ὀφλισκάνω 'to be guilty, incur punishment, be sentenced', fut. ὀφλ-ήσω, s-aor. -ῆσαι, perf. ὤφληκα (Att.), ptc. ϝοφληκόσι [dat.pl.], 3pl. [ϝο]φλέασι (Arc.), them. aor. ὀφλεῖν (IA), also with ἐπ-, προσ-.
•DIAL Myc. o-pe-ro 'deficit', etc.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. προ-, προσ-.
•DER A. From the present ὀφείλω: ὀφειλ-έτης [m.], -έτις [f.] 'debtor' (S., Pl.) with -έσιον [n.] 'small debt' (Eust.), -ημα [n.] (Th., Pl., Arist.); ὀφήλωμα (Cret.) after ἀνάλωμα; ὀφείλ-ησις [f.] (pap. III^a) 'debt, indebted sum'; -ή [f.] 'debt, leasing' (pap., NT).
B. From the aorist ὀφλεῖν: ὄφλ-ημα [n.] (D., Arist., pap.), -ησις [f.] (LXX) 'penalty, fine'; -ητής [m.] 'debtor' (gloss.), ὀφλοί· ὀφειλέται, ὀφειλαί (H.).
•ETYM The system ὀφλεῖν : ὀφλισκάνω : ὀφλήσω : ὤφληκα neatly corresponds to εὑρεῖν : εὑρίσκω, εὑρήσω, εὕρηκα, except for the presentic enlargement -άνω (see Schwyzer: 700). The aorist ὀφλῆσαι (Lys. and late) was built on the future. Arc. [ϝο]φλέ-ασι also has the same enlarged zero grade without secondary -κ-. This system was built on the zero grade thematic aorist; beside it stands another system, based on the full grade aorist ὤφελον, whence the nasal present *ὀφέλνω was derived (like ἔτεμον : τέμνω), giving the various dialectal forms ὀφείλω, ὀφέλλω, ὀφήλω. As the formation of the present ὀφείλω became opaque by its phonetic development, it was able to become the basis of another system. The form ὀφείλω ~ ὄφελον was also separated from ὀφλεῖν semantically.
An old problem is ϝο-, which only appears in an Arcadian inscription. It cannot be a prefix, but it may be that ϝο- is a notation of (earlier) ὀ-. On the forms, see Hamp Glotta 60 (1982): 227f.
For references to attempts to connect ὀφείλω with ► ὀφέλλω 2 'to augment', see s.v.

ὀφέλλω 1 'to owe'. ⇒ὀφείλω.

ὀφέλλω 2 [v.] 'to increase, enlarge, augment, advance' (epic, Pi., A., Theoc.). ◄IE h_3b^hel-* 'increase, augment'► •VAR Aor. opt. ὀφέλλειεν (Π 651, β 334), beside which the ambivalent forms ὀφέλλωσιν (A 510), ὄφελλε(ν) (B 420, Theoc. 25, 120), ὤφελλε (π 174).
•DIAL Myc. no-pe-re-a$_2$ /nōp^{h}ele^{h}a/ 'useless' [nom.pl.n.] < n̥-h_3b^hel-es-h_2*.
•COMP Also with ἐξ- (ο 18).
•DER ὄφελ-μα [n.] (S. Fr. 1079), -μός [m.] (inscr. Lydia) 'increase, advantage', -σιμος 'advantageous, useful' (Call., Orph., Opp.), after χρή-, ὀνή-σιμος; also ὀφέλλιμος 'id.' (Max.) with direct connection to ὀφέλλω.
ὄφελος [n.] 'promotion, use, advantage, gain' (Il.); as a second member in e.g. ἀν-ωφελής 'useless' (IA), replacing *νωφελής seen in Myc. (see above); secondary simplex ὀφελής (pap. II^p); Ὀφελέσ-της [m.] PN (Il.); Ὀφέλ-ανδρος [m.] (VI^a) perhaps after Ἀλέξ-ανδρος (Sommer 1948: 198).
Denominative (with ὠ- from the compounds) ὠφελέω [v.] 'to be of use, help, support' (IA), whence -ίη, -ία, secondary -εια [f.] 'use, help' (IA), -ημα [n.] (trag.), -ησις [f.] (S.) 'benefit, use', -ήσιμος [adj.] 'useful' (S., Ar.); much more common is ὠφέλιμος 'id.' (Att.), probably from ὠφελέω, -ία. More details in Leumann 1950: 120ff. with an attempt to explain the lengthening of the initial vowel. Hamp Glotta 60 (1982): 229f. thinks that ὠφελέω was extracted from the negative compound Myc. no-pe-re-a$_2$ /nōp^{h}ele^{h}a/.
•ETYM The old verbal noun ὄφελος is widespread in Greek. Beside it stands a yod-present ὀφέλλω < *ὀφελ-ι̯ω, and an s-aorist ὀφέλλειεν with Aeolic development of *ὀφελ-σ-.
The form ὄφελος can be directly identified with Arm. awel* in awel-i 'more' and the denominative y-awel-um 'to add to', in ar̄-awel 'more' and ar̄-awel-um 'to increase': all are from an IE root h_3b^hel-*. It is mostly agreed that ► ὀφέλλω 3 contains the same root as the present lemma, since Armenian also has this meaning; various scholars also believe that ► ὀφείλω derives from the same root as well (see e.g. De Lamberterie 1992, of which a summary is found in DELG Supp.). However, opinions differ on the semantic scenario to be proposed for Greek (is 'increase' or 'sweep' primary?); see the discussion in Clackson 1994: 156-158.

ὀφέλλω 3 [v.] 'to sweep, broom' (Hippon. 51). ◄IE h_3b^hel-* 'sweep'► •DER ὄφελμα [n.] 'broom' (ibid., Eust.), ὀφέλμασι· σαρώμασιν 'sweepings' (H.), ὄφελτρον· κάλλυντρον 'broom' (H.), whence ὀφελτρεύω (Lyc. 1165).
•ETYM Identical with Arm. awelum 'to sweep', awel 'broom', except for the formations. Doubts on the identity of the Greek and Armenian etyma were expressed by Jahukyan and Arutjunjan (see Clackson 1994: 158 with fn. 232), who assume borrowings from Near Eastern words. See ► ὀφέλλω 2.

ὀφθαλμός [m.] 'eye' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR Boeot. ὄκταλλος, Epid. Lacon. ὀπτίλ(λ)ος.

•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. μον-όφθαλμος (μουν-) 'with a single eye, one-eyed' (Hdt., Plb., Str.), ἑτερ-όφθαλμος 'bereft of one eye' (D., Arist.); also as a first member, e.g. ὀφθαλμ-ωρύχος 'digging out the eyes' (A.).
•DER 1. Diminutive ὀφθαλμ-ίδιον [n.] (Ar.); 2. -ία, Ion. -ίη [f.] 'eye-disease' together with -ιάω 'to suffer from an eye-disease' (IA), whence -ίασις [f.] (Plu., H.); 3. -ίας [m.] name of a kind of eagle (Lyc.), also of a fish (Plaut.); because of the fixing glance, Strömberg 1943: 42; 4. -ικός 'ptng. to the eyes', msc. 'eye-doctor' (Gal., Dsc.); 5. -ηδόν 'like eyes' (gloss.).
6. Verbs ὀφθαλμίζομαι 'to be inoculated' (Thphr.), 'to suffer from ὀφθαλμία' (Plu.); with preposition ἐν-οφθαλμ-ίζω 'to inoculate' (Thphr.), -ίζομαι pass. (Delos) with -ισμός (Thphr.); also -ιάζομαι (Plu.); ἐξ-οφθαλμιάζω 'to disregard, disparage' (pap. IV^p); ἐπ-οφθαλμ-ίζω (Pherecyd., Plu.), -ιάω (Plu., pap. III^p), -έω (pap. IV^p) 'to ogle, peep at'.
•ETYM Understandably, attempts have been made to derive the word from the root ὀπ- 'to see'. However, there are variants in Boeot. ὄκταλλος, Epid. Lacon. ὀπτίλ(λ)ος. This interchange κτ : πτ : φθ was interpreted by Frisk as follows: -κτ- is old, πτ is analogical and φθ is expressive. This κτ / πτ was then compared with group kṣ in Skt. ákṣi 'eye', and a correspondence between the suppletive n-stem in Skt. gen. akṣṇás and a putative l-stem in ὀφθ-αλ-μός was assumed by Specht.
However, since an IE labiovelar became a labial before a consonant, the explanation that takes -κτ- as a regular reflex is just plain wrong. Also, expressive aspiration is a meaningless explanation for -φθ-. Moreover, the repeated attempts to explain ὀφθαλμός as a compound are all wrong (e.g., from θάλαμος 'bedroom' and θάλλω 'to flower'; for literature see Frisk s.v. ὀφθαλμός).
Finally, not only the variation cannot be explained from Indo-European; the rise of a suffix -αλ(λ)- would be incomprehensible as well. In Beekes 2008, it is shown that ὄκταλλος has a Pre-Greek suffix (thus already Beekes 1969: 193); it continues a palatalized *l^y, which was represented as a geminate. This leads to a PGr. reconstruction *ok^wt-al^y-(m)-. Here the labiovelar could become a labial, but the labial element could also be ignored, which yielded ὀκτ-. Aspiration was not phonemic in Pre-Greek, hence the variant ὀφθ- is unproblematic on this account. In ὀπτίλ(λ)ος, *a apparently became i by influence of the following palatalized consonant. The fact that PGr. *ok^wt- strongly resembles IE *h_3ek^w- is a mere coincidence, and such accidents may be expected to occur every now and then.
By way of contrast, the gloss ὄκκον· ὀφθαλμόν (H.) may well be of IE origin (related to Arm. akn?). For words derived from the inherited root ὀπ- 'see', see ► ὄμμα, ► ὄσσε, ► ὄπωπα.

ὄφις [m.] 'snake' (M 208). ◁IE *$h_3eg^{wh}i$- 'snake'▷ •VAR Gen. -ιος, -εος, -εως.
•COMP As a first member in the constellation name ὀφι-οῦχος [m.] 'snake-holder', Lat. Angui-tenens (Eudox., Arat.), see Scherer 1953: 184f.
•DER Diminutive ὀφ-ίδιον (ι and ῑ) [n.] (Att. inscr., Arist.); -ίασις [f.] (to *ὀφιάω) "snake-disease", name of a disease of the skin (Gal.); -ιώδης 'rich of snakes, snaky' (Pi., Arist.); -ιόεις 'rich of snakes' (Antim.), HN Ὀφιοῦς [m.], Ὀφιοῦσσα [f.] name of several islands (Antim., Arist.), of a plant (Plin.); -ιακός 'belonging to snakes', τὰ ὀφιακά title of a work (sch. Nic.); -ῑόνεος 'snaky' (Opp.), perhaps from *-ι-ίνεος (Schwyzer: 491[1]); -ίτης (λίθος) [m.], -ιῆτις πέτρη [f.] 'serpentine' (Orph. L.), after the color, Redard 1949: 59, 'erysipelas' (Gal.); Redard 1949: 104.
•ETYM Probably identical with Skt. áhi-, Av. aži- [m.] 'snake' from IE *$h_3eg^{wh}i$- (the absence of reflexes of Brugmann's Law points to IE e-vocalism). The traditional connection with Arm. iž, instr. -iw 'id.' is problematic, since it presupposes a pre-form *$H\bar{e}g^{wh}i$- (with unexplainable lengthened grade). The appurtenance of the first member of the Germanic word for 'lizard' (OHG egi-dehsa, etc.) is unclear, since one expects $h_3eg^{wh}i$- to yield PGm. awi-. The lengthening of the ὀ- in M 208 (after which Hippon. 49, 6, etc.) is metrically conditioned; see O. Masson 1962: l.c. See on ► ἔχις and (unrelated) ► ἔγχελυς.

ὀφλισκάνω ⇒ὀφείλω.

ὀφνίς [?] · ὕννις, ἄροτρον 'ploughshare, plough' (H.). ◁IE *uog^{wh}-n-i- (?) 'coulter, ploughshare'▷ •ETYM Can be identified with OPr. wagnis 'coulter' < IE *$uog^{wh}ni$-. Beside this stands Lat. vōmis (-er), -eris [m.] 'ploughshare', from an unclear base form; see De Vaan 2008 s.v. It is probablye that ὄφατα· δεσμοὶ ἀρότρων 'ties of the plough'. Ἀκαρνᾶνες (H.) also belongs here; see Bechtel 1921, 2: 76. See ► ὕνις.

ὄφρα [adv., conj.] 'so long as, until; in order that'; in correlation τόφρα 'so long as, meanwhile' (Il.); on the use in Hom. see Bolling Lang. 25 (1949): 379ff. ◁IE *-b^hr-▷ •ETYM From relative ὀ- and demonstrative το-, perhaps comparable to Arm. erb 'when?' (IE *h_1e-b^hr-), ToA ku-pre 'when', tä-preṃ 'so much', etc. Ehrenfellner KZ 107 (1994): 101-104 explains the second member as the zero grade of *b^her- 'to bear' as 'auf welches hinzielend'.

ὀφρῦς, -ύος [f.] 'eyebrow', mostly plur.; metaph. 'elevated edge, brow of a hill' (Il.). ◁IE *h_3b^hreuH- 'eyebrow'▷ •VAR Details on the inflexion in Schwyzer: 571.
•COMP As a second member in σύν-οφρυς 'with meeting eyebrows' (Arist.).
•DER Diminutive ὀφρύ-διον [n.] (H. s.v. ἐπισκύνιον, Theognost.), MoGr. (ὀ)φρύδι; ὀφρύη, -α 'elevation' (Hdt., Argos) like ἰχθύ-η, -α, etc.; -όεις 'situated on an edge, terraced' (X 411), -ώδης 'protrusive' (Gal.).
Denominative verbs: 1. ὀφρυ-όομαι [v.] 'to be haughty' (Timo, Luc.) with -ωσις [f.] 'elevation, edge' (Paul. Aeg.), older συν-οφρυόομαι [v.] 'to knit one's brows' (S., E.); with κατ- in κατωφρυωμένος 'to be provided with brows' (Philestr. VA, Luc.); 2. ὀφρυ-άζω 'to beckon with the eyebrows', also as an expression of pride (Amips. Com. V-IV^a); 3. -άω 'to be hilly' (Str.); 4. ὀφρυγνᾷ· ὁμοίως (i.e. = -άζει). Βοιωτοί (H.); unclear, perhaps after ὀριγνάομαι.
•ETYM ὀφρῦς continues an old root noun *h_3b^hruH-, identical with Skt. bhrū́- [f.], acc. bhrúvam, and with forms from Celtic and Gm.: OIr. for-bru [acc.pl.], OS brū. The root noun is also visible in Balto-Slavic: OCS brъvь, Lith. bruvė̃, dial. -ìs. The IE paradigm was nom. *$h_3b^hr\bar{e}uH$-s, gen. *h_3b^hruH-os, which explains the Gm. forms OHG brāwa [f.] 'eyebrow', wint-prāwa 'eyelash', which belong with OS brāha 'id.' to OE brǣw [m.] 'eyebrow', ON brá [f.] 'eyelash'.

The root noun was extended as an n-stem in ON brún, while ToB pärwāne [du.] may contain the regular dual ending in this language. An extension with dental is found in Av. bruuat̰-biiąm [dat.pl.f.], MIr. brúad [gen.du.], and in ἀβροῦτες· ὀφρῦς. Μακεδόνες (H.).

ὄχα [adv.] 'by far', before ἄριστος (Hom.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Backformation from ἔξοχα 'id.' (ἔξοχος, ἐξέχω); see Leumann 1950: 133ff.

ὀχάνη •VAR ὄχανον, ὀχή, etc. ⇒ἔχω.

ὀχεή [f.] 'cave, grotto' (Arat., Nic., Orph.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Hellenistic for ►χειή after ►ὀκρυόεις for κρυόεις; perhaps through cross with sematically related ὀχετός.

ὀχετός ⇒ὀχέω.

ὀχεύω [v.] 'to cover, mount', med. 'to copulate' (IA). ◂GR▸ •VAR Aor. -εῦσαι.
•COMP Also with ἐπ-, κατ-, παρ-, etc.
•DER ὀχ-εῖος 'serving as a cover' (Din.), -εῖον [n.] 'covering place, stallion' (Lycurg., Arist.); -εία [f.] (X., Arist., pap.), ὀχή [f.] (Arat.), -ευσις [f.] (J.) 'covering, impregnation', -ευμα [n.] 'product of the body' (Arist.); -ευτής [m.] 'stallion' (pap. III[a]), -ευτικός 'ruttish' (Arist., Thphr.); -εύτριαν (H. s.v. ψόαν). Also ὀχῶν· ὀχευτικῶς ἔχων (H.), ὀχέωνται (Arat. 1070 verse-final) = ὀχεύωνται.
•ETYM Etymology debated. Acc. to older interpretations, it is related to ὀχέομαι 'to drive, ride', in which case the ending -εύω and the active diathesis would be remarkable in ὀχεύω. Others connected ►ἔχω in the sense 'to overpower'. More attractive is the hypothesis by Boßhardt 1942: 30, who takes ὀχεύω as a denominative from ὀχεύς 'door-bolt, etc.' (which also derives from ἔχω): this was originally a wooden pin which was fitted in a hole in the wall to block the door. The hapaxes ὀχῶν, ὀχέωνται are secondary innovations.

ὀχέω, -έομαι [v.] 'to carry, bear, endure, sustain', 'to let mount or ride', 'to anchor' (Od., E. Hel. 277); more frequent in med. 'to drive, ride, swim, be at anchor' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Aor. and fut. (not in Att. prose) act. ὀχῆ-σαι (Call.), -σω (A., E.), med. -σασθαι, -σομαι (Hom.), pass. -θῆναι (Hp.).
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἐπ-οχέομαι.
•DER 1. ὀχ-ετός [m.] (from ὄχος?) 'canal, furrow' (Pi., IA) together with -ετεύω 'to conduct by a canal', whence -ετεία, -έτευμα, etc.; ὀχετ-ηγός 'drawing a canal' (Φ 257); 2. ὄχετλα· ὀχήματα (H.); 3. ὄχ-ημα [n.] 'vehicle', also metaph. (Pi., IA) with -ηματικός; 4. -ησις [f.] 'driving, riding' (Hp., Pl.).
•ETYM The middle is an iterative of ►ἔχω 2 'to carry, offer' (Schwyzer: 717); the meaning 'to drive, ride, transport' is old; cf. especially Lat. vehō, etc. The rarer active forms can also be understood from this meaning, but in some instances, the meaning of the active has shifted by influence of ►ἔχω 1 'to hold, possess, etc.': note ὀχέοντας ὀϊζύν (η 211) beside πόνον τ' ἐχέμεν καὶ ὀϊζύν (N 2, θ 529). See ►ὄχος, ►ὄχλος.

ὀχθέω [v.] 'to cherish resentment, get angry or wrathful'. ◂GR▸ •VAR Only aor. ptc. ὀχθήσας and 3pl. ὤχθησαν (Hom.), fut. ὀχθήσω (Q. S.), ὀχθεῖ· στένει, στενάζει 'to wail, sigh, groan' (H.); cf. ὀχθᾶσθαι· ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄχθη. οἱ γὰρ στένοντες ἑαυτοὺς μετεωρίζουσιν 'from ὄχθη; for the wailing elevated themselves' (H.); enlarged ὀχθ-ίζω (Opp. H.), προσ-οχθ-ίζω, -ίσαι, -ιῶ, -ώχθικα (LXX).
•DER ὄχθησις· θόρυβος, τάραχος 'noise, agitation' (H.), προσόχθισ-μα [n.] 'displeasement, object of indignation' (LXX), προσοχθισμός· πρόσκρουσις, δεινοπάθεια 'offence, exaggerated complaint' (H.), etc.
•ETYM Probably a causative or iterative-intensive of ἔχθομαι, ἔχθω (see ►ἔχθος), like φοβέω : φέβομαι, σοβέω : σέβομαι, θροέω : θρέομαι; ποτάομαι : πέτομαι, etc. Connection with ►ἄχθος, -ομαι is phonetically less convincing.

ὄχθη [f.] 'high and rocky edge by the water, bank, shore' (Il.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Usually plur. -αι.
•DER ὄχθος [m.] 'height, hill' (Ion. since h. Ap. 17), 'hunch, outgrowth, tubercle' (medic.) with ὀχθ-ηρός 'hilly' (Hell.), -ώδης 'full of outgrowth, tuberculous' (D. H., medic.).
•ETYM Seems to display a suffix like in μόχθος, βρόχθος, etc., but the connection with ἔχω 'to hold' is semantically unconvincing. Cf. further ►εὔοχθος, -έω. Fur.: 110, etc. compare ἀκτή 'promontory, edge', which would point to a Pre-Greek word with obvious variations.

ὄχθοιβος [m.] 'purple stripe or edge of a chiton' (Ar., Pherecr.); 'tuft neckband' (Att. inscr.); cf. Kretschmer Glotta 16 (1928): 169. ◂PG▸ •ETYM Technical word with a suffix -β- like in ►κόσυμβος, ►κόλλαβος, etc. Connection with ὄχθη 'high edge' seems possible. Cf. also οἶβος (Luc. Lex. 3)?; acc. to Poll. τοῦ τραχήλου τοῦ βοὸς τὸ κάλλιστον 'the best part of the neck of a bovine'. No doubt a Pre-Greek word; cf. Fur.: 321.

ὀχλεύς •VAR -έω, -ίζω. ⇒ὄχλος.

ὄχλος [m.] 1. '(orderless) crowd, multitude, throng', plur. 'crowd, people'; 2. 'disturbance, perturbation, annoyance' (Pi., IA). ◂IE *$uo\acute{g}^h$-(s)lo-, *$ue\acute{g}^h$- 'drive, ride, transport'▸ •COMP ὀχλο-κρατία [f.] 'mob-rule' (Plb., Plu.), ἄ-οχλος 'without disturbances, not disturbing' (Hp.).
•DER Adjectives 1. ὀχλ-ηρός 'bothersome, annoying' (IA) with -ηρία [f.] (LXX); 2. -ικός 'belonging to the crowd, mobbish' (Hell.); 3. -ώδης 'annoying' (IA), 'popular, common' (Plu.).
Substantives 4. ὀχλεύς· μοχλός, στρόφιγξ, δεσμός 'bolt, pivot, tie' ... (H.); ἐποχλεύς [m.] 'brake shoe on a cart' (Ath.), probably for *ἐποχεύς; ἐποχλίζομαι 'to be bolted' (Apollon. Lex.).

Denominative verbs 5. ὀχλέω 'to put in (rolling) motion, roll away' (Φ 261), 'to disturb, perturb, bother' (Ion., Hell.; with prefix, especially ἐν-, also Att.); ἀν-οχλέω = ἀν-οχλίζω (S. E.). Thence ὄχλ-ησις (ἐν-) [f.] 'bothering, interference, perturbation' (Democr., Hell.), (ἐν-)ὄχλ-ημα 'id.' (Epicur., medic.), ὀχλητι-κός = ὀχλικός (Procl.); 6. ὀχλεύονται = ὀχλεῦνται· κυλινδοῦνται 'roll' (H.); 7. ὀχλ-ίζω 'to pull up or out of place' (Il.), also with μετ-, ἀν-, etc.; 8. ὀχλ-άζω 'to be disturbed or confused' (LXX).
•ETYM The original meaning of the verbal noun ὄχλος, which was concretized in the sense 'crowd', cannot be established with certainty; in the sense of 'perturbation, etc.', it may have been influenced by ὀχλέω.
Starting from *uog̑ʰ-(s)lo- (on the lack of a ϝ- in Homer, see Chantraine 1942: 125), ὄχλος corresponds with the well-known verb 'drive, carry' seen in ϝέχω (see ► ἔχω 2), ὀχέομαι, Lat. vehō, etc. Several possibilities exist for the semantic development: e.g. an agent noun *'driving, carrying, moving', or an instrument noun *'driver, carrier, mover'. ON vagl [m.] 'tiebeam, roost' (properly *'bearing-bar, carrier') is formally identical. The primary nouns Lat. vectis and ON vǫg < IE *uog̑ʰ-h₂- 'lever' agree semantically with the denominatives ὀχλ-ίζω 'to raise', ὀχλ-έω 'to roll away' (both by using a lever), and with ὀχλ-εύς 'bolt, etc.'. An original meaning 'drive' could easily develop into both 'stirred mass, mob' and 'spiritual excitement, unrest'; the same holds for the denominative ὀχλέω (cf. Lat. turba, -āre).

ὄχμα •VAR ὀχμάζω, ὄχμος. ⇒ἔχω 1.

ὄχος [m.] 'cart, carriage, vehicle'. ◂IE *uog̑ʰ-o-, *ueg̑ʰ- 'carry, drive'▸ •VAR Gender: msc. (Pi. O. 6, 24 [ὄκχος, see below], Hdt., A., etc.), often plur. -οι (since h. Cer.); also ntr. plur. ὄχεα, -εσφι (Hom., Pi.).
•ETYM Old verbal noun from ϝέχω 'to carry' (see ► ἔχω 2), ὀχέομαι 'to drive', thus from *ϝόχος (on the loss of the ϝ- in Hom., see Chantraine 1942: 125), and identical with Slav. words like OCS vozъ [m.] 'wagon', IE *uóg̑ʰo-. The e-vocalism expected in an s-stem is preserved in ἔχεσφι· ἅρμασιν 'with carts' (H.); ὄχεα is modeled on ὄχος, ὀχέομαι.
The forms *ϝόχος and [ϝ]όχεα correspond to Skt. vā́has- [n.] 'vessel' (metaph. for the song of praise), vāhá- [m.] 'draught animal', as well as 'vessel', Av. vāza- [m.] 'draught animal' (would be Gr. ὄχος). A derivation in -n- with the same meaning was formed in the Western languages: OIr. fén 'kind of wagon' < IE *ueg̑ʰ-no-, OHG wagan 'wagon' < IE *uog̑ʰ-no-; a suffix *-tlo- is used in Lat. vehiculum [n.] 'vessel', Skt. vahi-tra- [n.] 'ship', and appears also in ὄχετλα· ὀχήματα (H.). The geminate in ὄκχος, ὀκχέω (Pi.) is unexplained. Cf. ► ὀχέω, ► ὄχλος, and ► γαιάοχος.

ὄχνη ⇒ὄγχνη.

ὀχυρός ⇒ἐχυρός.

ὄψ 1 [f.] 'voice, sound, word' (Il.). ◂IE *uekʷ- 'speak'.▸
•VAR Only in ὄπα, -ός, -ί.
•COMP On ► εὐρύοπα, see s.v.
•DER On ► ὄσσα [f.], see s.v.

•ETYM A root noun from IE *uokʷ-s. Lat. vōx has a long vowel, which must stem from the nom.sg. Skt. has vā́k, acc. vā́cam pointing to a paradigm *uōkʷs, *uokʷ-m. Besides these, there is an s-stem in ► ἔπος. Cf. ► ἐνοπή.

ὄψ 2, ὀπός [f.] 'eye, face'. ⇒ὄπωπα.

ὀψέ [adv.] 'afterwards, after a long time, late (in the evening), too late' (Il.). ◂IE *h₁e/op- 'on'▸ •VAR ὄψι (Aeol., Lyr. Adesp. 57).
•COMP Often ὀψι- as a first member (after ἀγχι-, ἠρι-, etc.), e.g. ὀψί-γονος 'late arrival, younger' (Il., Hdt., Arist.); also ὀψ-, e.g. ὀψ-αρό-της [m.] 'who ploughs late' (Hes. Op. 490). As a second member in ἀπ-οψέ (A. D.), κατ-οψέ (Alex. Trall.) 'late (at night)', cf. κατ-όπιν, ἀπο-πρό, etc.
•DER 1. ὀψι-αίτερος, -αίτατος (Att.), after παλαίτερος, etc. 2. ὄψ-ιος 'late' (Pi., Arist.) with ὀψιό-της [f.] (Thphr.), like πρῴϊ-ος; -ιμος 'id.' (X., Hell.), like πρῴϊ-μος (perhaps by reinterpretation of ὄψιμος 'visible' B 325); -ινός 'id.' (imperial period), after ἑωθι-νός, etc. 3. ὀψίχα· ὀψέ. Βυζάντιοι (H.), diminutive like ὀσσ-ίχος, etc. 4. ὀψ-ία [f.] 'evening' (IA). 5. ὀψ-ίζω 'to be late, be overdue' (Lys., X.) with -ισμός [m.] 'delay' (D. H.).
•ETYM The final accented -έ in ὀψέ is unexplained. The form ὄψι recalls ὕψι 'in a high place', but it must in fact have spread from compounds with *ὀψι-. We can therefore assume a basic form *ὄψ, which recalls ► ἄψ and is identical with Lat. ops- 'towards' (beside op, ob), e.g. in o(b)s-tendō.

ὀψιανός [m.] of λίθος, a black stone (Peripl. M. Rubr. 5, Plin. HN 36, 196 ntr.pl. obsiana). ◂LW Lat.▸ •ETYM Acc. to Pliny, it is named after a person called Obsius, who discovered it.

ὀψείοντες [m.pl.] 'wishing to see' (Ξ 37), desiderative ptc. to ὄπωπα, etc. ◂IE?▸ •ETYM Hypothesis by Wackernagel KZ 28 (1887): 141ff.: from ὄψει ἰόντες, whence the Hom. ind. ὀψείω and the other post-Hom. desideratives in -σείω; hardly probable, acc. to DELG. See Schwyzer: 789 and Chantraine 1942: 453; see also Lindeman BSL 60 (1965): 46f.

ὄψις •VAR ὄψομαι. ⇒ὄπωπα.

ὄψον [n.] 'side-dish, especially meat'; in Athens and other places especially 'fish' (Il.). ◂GR, IE *h₃op-s▸ •COMP ὀψο-ποιός [m.] 'cook' (IA), εὔ-οψος 'rich of side-food, especially fish' (middle com.). ὀψ-αρτυ-τής [m.] 'cook' with -τικός, -σία (com.), back-formation ὀψαρτύω (Hell.).
•DER Diminutive ὀψάριον [n.] (com., pap.), MoGr. ψάρι 'fish'; ὀψ-ών-ης [m.] 'buyer or trader of side-dishes' (Ar. Fr. 503) together with -ία, -έω (Critias, Ar.), -ιον [n.] "meant for buying ὄψον", 'cash salary, wages' (Hell.) together with -ιάζω, etc.; borrowed as Lat. opsōnium [m.] 'side-food', opsōnāre (to ὀψωνέω) together with -ātor, re-borrowed as ὀψωνάτωρ, cf. WH s.v.

•ETYM Convincing analysis by Taillardat in DELG Supp.: thematicized from the adverb *ὄψ, reconstructed for ὀψέ 'late' and ὄψι, and seen in Lat. obs-. The ὄψον was a supplementary dish, which was always eaten on top of e.g. grain or bread. This suggests the comparison with Myc. o-pi. Taillardat adduces other parallels from Greek for the use of a prefix ἐπι- with verbs for eating, expressing the same sense of a supplementary meal.

Π

πάγασα [f.] · θύρα. καὶ παγασαί 'door' (H.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Fur.: 157[57] identifies the word with the town Παγασαί in Thessaly. Other place names in -ασα, such as Περγασα, are mentioned by Fur.: 64[268]. The word is Pre-Greek.

πάγη [f.] 'snare, trap' (IA). ◂IE peh$_2$ǵ-* 'make fast, stiff'▸ •COMP ἐπίπαγος [m.] 'hardened frozen crust' (Plu., medic.; back-formation to ἐπιπήγνυμι, -μαι).
•DER παγίς, -ίδος [f.] 'id.' (Ar. Fr. 666, Hell.), derivatives -ιδεύω, -ίδευμα (LXX). πάγος [m.] 1. 'pinnacle, cliff, hill' (epic Ionic since ε 405, 411); 2. 'ice, hoarfrost, frost' (A., S., Pl., Arist.), late also ntr. after ῥῖγος, κρύος. Thence (or from παγῆναι, πήγνυμι) 1. παγετός [m.] = πάγος (Pi., IA), παγετώδης 'ice-like, icecold' (Hp., S., Arist.); 2. παγερός 'freezing, icecold' (D. Chr., Arist.; after κρυερός); 3. παγώδης = παγετώδης (Thphr.).
•ETYM Verbal nouns in ph$_2$ǵ-h$_2$/o/i-* of ►πήγνυμι 'to fasten, attach'. See ►πάξ, ►πάσσαλος, and ►πάχνη.

πάγουρος [m.] '(edible) crab, Cancer pagurus' (Ar., Arist.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Usually interpreted as "whose tail (οὐρά) consists of πάγος", due to the hard short back of the body (as opposed to the softer tail of other species). However, this traditional etymology is unconvincing; see σκίουρος for a similar case. More probably, πάγουρος is a Pre-Greek word. Fur.: 165 and 331 connects φάγρος, φάγωρος 'kind of fish' (H.); with secondary r, we find φαγρώριος. The word was borrowed into Latin as pagurus, whence Middle French, MoFr. pag(r)ure 'Cancer pagurus'.

πάγχυ [adv.] 'altogether' (Il., Sappho, Hdt.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Derived from *παντ- 'all' (ntr. πᾶν), but -χυ is unclear. Most often considered to be a transformation of *πάγ-χι (like ἧ-χι) et al. on the model of πάνυ 'altogether'. Others have suggested haplology from *πὰν ἀγχύ (related to Skt. aṃhú- 'narrow'; see ►ἄγχω and ►ἄγχι), or a dissimilation from *πάγχνυ after πρόχνυ (see Frisk s.v.). Meier-Brügger KZ 107 (1994): 87f. assumes a compound 'completely poured', with a second member *-k^{h}u-t- from χέω 'to pour'.

πάθνη [f.] 'crib'. ⇒φάτνη.

πάθος [n.] 'incident, experience, misfortune; emotion, passion; state, condition'. ⇒πάσχω.

παιάν, -ᾶνος [m.] 'choral song, hymn', especially for Apollo, 'paean'; also personified as 'divine physician' (Hom.); epithet of Apollo, 'physician, savior'; also name of a foot (Arist., Heph.). ⊲PG?⊳

•VAR παιήων, -ονος (Il.), παιών, -ῶνος (IA), πάων, -ονος (Aeol.); παιάν, -ᾶνος (Dor., trag., Hell.).

•DIAL Myc. pa-ja-wo-ne /Paiāwonei/ [dat.].

•DER 1. παιών-ιος 'belonging to a paean, healing, saving' (A., S., Ar.), fem. -ιάς (AP), -ίς (S. E.); also -ία [f.] epithet of Athena (Paus.), as a plant name 'peony' (Thphr., Ps.-Dsc.); παιανίδες [pl.] epithet of ἀοιδαί (Pi.); Παιηόνιος = Παιώνιος (APl.); παιανίας [m.] 'paean-singer' (Sparta). 2. παιωνικός = παιώνιος (Plu., Gal.), παιανικός 'paean-like' (Ath.). 3. παιηοσύνη· ἰατρεία 'medical treatment' (H.). 4. παιωνίζω (IA), -ανίζω (Dor.) 'to strike up a paean, to worship with a paean', παιωνισμός [m.] (Th., Str., D. H.), -ισται [m.pl.] 'guild of the paean-singers' (Rome, Piraeus, II-III^{p}).

•ETYM Probably taken from the exclamation ἰὴ παιήων, ἰὼ παιάν (as the begining of a song). The basis is *παιά-(ϝ)ων like Ἰά(ϝ)ονες, κοινά(ϝ)ων (see ► Ἴωνες and ► κοινός), but is otherwise unclear. Perhaps 'who heals illnesses through magic (Apollo)', from *παῖϝα, *παϝίᾱ 'blow', related to ► παίω 'beat'; otherwise, related to παύω? In origin, the word may well be Pre-Greek.

παιπάλη [f.] 1. 'fine flour, flour dust' (Ar. Nu. 262, Apollon. Med.), 2. 'shrewd person, crafty person' (Ar. Nu. 260). ⊲?⊳

•COMP 1. δυσ-παίπαλος, epithet of a valley (Archil.), the waves (B.), Mount Othrus (Nic.), etc.; 2. δυσ-οδο-παίπαλα [n.pl.] 'difficult and rugged' (A. Eu. 387, reading uncertain); 3. πολυ-παίπαλος, of the Phoenicians (ο 419), of the air (Call. Fr. anon. 225).

•DER Several formally close, but semantically doubtful fomations: 1. παιπαλ-όεις [adj.] 'rugged', of islands, mountains, roads (Il., epic); 2. -ιμος [adj.] 'artful, shrewd' (Theognost., sch.); 3. -ώδης 'id.' (EM, Suid.); 4. -εος (meaning unknown) of πιπώ 'woodpecker' (Antim.). Verbs: 1. παιπαλᾶν· περισκοπεῖν, ἐρευνᾶν 'to look around, inquire' (H.), παιπάλημα [n.] (Ar., Aeschin.) = παιπάλη, probably enlargement; 2. παιπάλλειν· σείειν 'to shake' (H.); 3. παιπαλώσσω· τὸ παίζω καὶ τὸ παροινῶ 'to dance and act like a drunk' (Theognost.). παίπαλά τε κρημνούς τε (Call. Dian. 194) is probably a back-formation.

•ETYM The adjective παιπαλόεις, used by the epic poets as an epitheton ornans, is most often interpreted as 'raw, steep' or 'twisted'; hence δυσ-παίπαλος 'rough and steep'. In view of the glosses παιπάλλειν· σείειν 'to shake' (H.) and παιπαλώσσω (Theognost.), παι-παλ- could be an intensive reduplication of the root *παλ- of ► πάλλω 'to swing, rock', thus 'be agitated' vel sim. Acc. to Tichy 1983: 306ff., meaning 1. is a ghost word.

παῖς, παιδός [m., f.] 'child, boy, son, slave, servant', more rarely 'girl, daughter' (Il.). ⊲IE peh_2-u-* 'few, little'⊳ •VAR Also πάϊς (epic Lesb., Boeot.).

•COMP παιδ-αγωγός [m.] 'children's attendant, schoolteacher', ἄ-παις 'childless' (IA), etc.

•DER A. Nouns. Several hypocoristic diminutives, partly replacing παῖς: 1. παιδ-ίον [n.] (IA), -ιότης [f.] 'childhood' (Aq.), -ιώδης 'childish' (D. H.). 2. diminutive παιδ-ίσκος [m.], more usually -ίσκη [f.] (Att.), -ισκι-ωρός [m.] (Sparta) 'guard of girls'?, -ισκάριον (Hell.), -ισκεῖος (IV^{a}), -ισκεῖον 'brothel' (Ath.). 3. παιδ-άριον (Att.) 'little boy', -αρίσκος (Hld.), -αρίδιον (gloss.), -αριήματα· παιδάρια 'little boys' (H.), -αρίων (H.), -αριώδης 'childish' (Pl., Arist.), -αρικός 'belonging to slaves' (pap. VI^{p}), -αριεύομαι [v.] 'to behave childishly' (Aristox.). 4. πάϊλλος 'male child' (Tanagra). 5. παιδ-ία 'childhood' (Hp.), -ιά 'child's play, pleasantry, pastime' (Att.); -ιώδης 'playful' (Ion Hist., Arist.). 6. παίγνιον [adj.] 'playful', -ίη [f.] 'play'.

B. Adjectives: 1. παιδ-νός 'in infancy, childish' (Od., epic). 2. παίδ-ειος, -εῖος, -ήϊος 'childlike' (Pi., trag., Pl.); τὰ -ήϊα name of a festival (Delph. V--IV^{a}). 3. παιδ-ικός 'concerning the child, childlike'; τὰ παιδικά 'dear' (B., Att.). 4. παιδοῦς, -οῦσσα 'having many children, pregnant' (Call., Hp.).

C. Verbs: 1. παίζω [v.] 'to behave like a child, play' (Od.), also with ἐν-, e.g. ἐμπαίκ-της, -γ-μός, -γ-μονή (LXX, NT), κατα-, συν-, etc., aor. παῖσαι, analogically also παῖξαι (Crates Com., Ctes., Hell.), παῖγ-μα 'play' (E.), φιλο-παίγμων 'fond of playing' (ψ 134), -μοσύναι [pl.] 'id.' (Stesich.); παιγ-νίη 'play' (Hdt.), -νιήμων 'playful' (Hdt.), -νιον (Att.), -χ-νιον (Erinna, Theoc. in pap. Antin., Call.) 'play, jest'. Probably, παιγ-ν- for *παιδν- because of an early connection with παίζω. (συμ-)παίκ-της 'player, team-mate' (AP), -τρια [f.] (Ant. Lib.), (συμ-)παίσ-της [m.] (Pl. Min., pap.), -τικός 'jocular' (Clearch.), -τρη [f.] 'playground' (Herod.); συμπαίκ-τωρ, -παίσ-τωρ (X., AP). 2. παιδ-εύω [v.] 'to raise, breed, educate' (also with ἐκ-, συν-, etc.) (IA), with παιδ-εία [f.] 'upbringing, education, breeding' (A., Democr., Att.), also 'childhood, youth'; -ευσις [f.] 'upbringing, education' (Pi., trag., Pl.), -ευμα 'subject, outcome of the upbringing, pupil' (Att.), -ευτής 'instructor, teacher' (Pl.), -ευτικός 'belonging to the upbringing' (Pl., etc.), -ευτήριον 'school' (D. S., Str.). 3. *παιδ-όω in παίδ-ωσις [f.] 'adoption' (Elis).

•ETYM Disyllabic πάϊς points to original παϝ-ι-δ-. The unenlarged stem is still seen in Att. παῦς (vase inscr.) and in the Cypr. gen. Φιλό-παϝ-ος; uncertain is Cypr. διπας, = δί-παις? A parallel enlargement occurs in ► παῦρος < peh_2u-ro-, cf. Lat. parvus 'small'. Other cognates are Lat. paucus 'few' < peh_2u-ko-*, pau-per, if from peh_2u-(o-)p(o)rh_3-o-* 'providing little' (see de Vaan 2008 s.v.), and Go. fawai [pl.] 'few'. The appurtenance of Lat. puer < ph_2u-ero-* 'smaller' is not certain.

παισά [n.pl.]? · πλακούντια παρὰ Κώοις '(flat) cakes (Cos)' (Iatrocl. apud Ath. 646f.). ⊲?⊳

•ETYM Unknown.

παιφάσσω [v.] mg. uncertain: 'to twitch, sway, move vehemently?'; πυκνὰ ἀπ' ἄλλου ἐπ' ἄλλον ὁρμᾶν, ἐνθουσιαστικῶς ἔχειν, σπεύδειν, θορυβεῖν, πηδᾶν 'to move often to another and from another, be inspired, hasten, make noise, leap' (H.), 'to flash, flicker?' (B 450, E 803, A. R., Q. S., Opp.); cf. παραιφάσσει· τινάσσει, πηδᾷ, παρακινεῖ

'shakes, leaps, stirs up', διαφάσσειν· διαφαίνειν 'to show through', παιπάσσουσα· παντὶ φαινομένη (B 450) 'completely clear' (H.). ◂?▸
•VAR Only present stem.
•COMP Rarely with ἐκ-, περι-.
•ETYM Probably a reduplicated intensive present, but the uncertain meaning does not allow us to establish an etymology. See Tichy 1983: 309ff. for further suggestions.

παίω [v.] 'to strike, hew, thrust, hit, bump' (IA, Cret.; relatively rare in Attic prose). ◂IE ph_2u-ie/o-▸ •VAR Boeot. πήω (Hdn.), aor. παῖσαι, pass. παισθῆναι, fut. παίσω, -ήσω, perf. πέπαικα, -σμαι.
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. παρα-, ἀντι-, ἐν-, συν-, ὑπερ-.
•DER παῖμα [n.] 'impression' (Crete), παραπαίσματα [pl.] 'attacks of madness' (Oenom.), παραίπαιμα· παρακοπή 'frenzy' (H.); ἀνάπαι-στος 'struck back', [m.] 'anapest' (com., Arist.); ἔμπαι-στος 'embossed, coined', -σμα [n.] 'embossment' (Delos II[a]). -στικὴ τέχνη 'the art of embossing' (Ath.); back-formations ἔμπαι-ος, πρόσπαι-ος (to ἐμ-, προσ-παίω) 'bursting in, suddenly' (A.).
•ETYM All Greek forms are based on the present παίω. Cognate forms: Lat. paviō, -īre 'to thump, pound, strike' (< ph_2u-ie/o-), Lith. pjáuti 'to cut' (3s. pjáuna), Latv. pļaũt 'to mow, harvest' < peh_2u- (or $pieh_2$-u-). LIV² follows Hackstein 1992: 161 and reconstructs a pres. pi(e)h_2-u-ie/o-, which would have lost the first *i̯ due to dissimilation (LIV²) or simple phonetic loss (Hackstein). The development may have been pih_2u-i̯- > ph_2u-i̯-, the absence of laryngeal metathesis being due to the following *i̯ instead of a stop. Perhaps connected with the group of ToB pyakar [3pl.] 'they struck down', Gr. ►πταίω 'to hit', ToAB putk- 'to divide', Lat. putāre 'to prune (trees)'.

παλάθη [f.] 'cake made of preserved fruits' (Hdt. 4, 23, Thphr., LXX). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER Diminutive παλαθ-ίς [f.] (Ph. Bel., Str.), -ιον [n.] (Polem. Hist.), παλάσ-ιον (Ar. Pax 574; v.l. -θιον); adj. -ώδης (Dsc.).
•ETYM Has often been connected with ►πλάσσω 'to knead' < *πλαθ-, but the latter requires a preform in pld^h-, whereas παλά-θη would have to reflect word-initial plh_2-e-. If this line is followed, it can be compared with παλά-μη, παλα-στή, 'flat of the hand, etc.'; the word πέλα-νος 'dough, pulp' could show the full grade of the root in $pelh_2$-n-, and the PIE root would be plh_2- 'to hit', whence the roots plh_2g/k- in LIV² may derive. However, the semantics of this etymology are not compelling, of course. Alternatively, παλάθη could reflect a loanword. Fur.: 259 cites παλάσια · τὰ συγκεκομμένα σῦκα. καὶ διὰ τοῦ θ παλάθια 'harvested figs, also παλάθια with -θ-' (H.); the variation θ/ σ could point to a Pre-Greek word.

πάλαι [adv.] 'of old, formerly, long ago, bygone, earlier' (Il.). ◂IE plh_2- '?'▸ •DIAL Myc. pa-ra-jo /palaios/.
•COMP παλαι-γενής 'born long ago, of high age' (Il.), ἔκ-παλαι 'long since, long ago' (Hell.).
•DER παλαιός 'old, ancient, former' (Il.), παλαι-ότης 'age, antiquity' (Att.), -όομαι, -όω [v.] 'to grow old, make old, declare archaic' (Hp., Pl., Arist.); hence παλαί-ωσις [f.] 'aging' (Hp., LXX, Str.), -ώματα [pl.] 'antiquity' (LXX). Compar. παλαί-τερος, -τατος (Pi.), also παλαιό-τερος (Ψ 788), -τατος (Pl.).
•ETYM Formation like χαμαί, παραί, except for the accent. A frozen case-form, perhaps originally a dative. The Mycenaean form precludes a labio-velar, and points to plh_2-ei; see Chadwick Glotta 54 (1976): 68-70. Thus, the earlier connection with ►τῆλε 'far away, far' < k^w- must be abandoned.

παλαίω [v.] 'to wrestle, survive a wrestling match' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aeol. -αιμι, Boeot. -ήω (Hdn. Gr.); aor. -αῖσαι, -αισθῆναι, fut. -αίσω.
•COMP Also προσ-, κατα-, συν-.
•DER 1. Παλαίμων, -ονος [m.] 'wrestler', only as the name of a sea-god and an epithet of Heracles (E., Call., Lyc., inscr.); from 'wrestler' were derived παλαιμον-έω [v.] 'wrestle' (Pi.) and παλαι(σ)μο-σύνη 'art of wrestling' (Hom., Simon.). 2. πάλαι-σμα 'wrestling, bout in wrestling, trick' (IA), 3. -σις [f.] 'prize fight' (Ptol.); 4. -στής 'wrestler', fighter' (θ 246), -στικός 'belonging to wrestling, to the wrestler' (Arist.); 5. -στρᾱ [f.] 'wrestling school, gymnasium, arena' (IA) with -στρίδιον, -στρίτης, -στρικός, -στριαῖος. The noun πάλη [f.] 'wrestling, wrestling match' (Il.) is a back-formation, hence ἀντί-παλος [m.] 'rival, opponent' (Pi., IA), δυσ-παλής 'hard to beat' (Pi.; with transition to the s-stems) et al. Similarly, διαπάλ-η [f.] (Pln.) from δια-παλαίω (Ar., Ph.).
•ETYM One could derive 'wrestle' from 'rock, sway', and connect παλαίω with ►πάλλω, for which a root plh_1- has been suggested. Gr. παλαίω may be a recent enlargement of a stem *παλα- (cf. κεραίω : κερά-σαι), but there is no way to arrive at a sequence παλα- from a preform plh_1-. Alternatively, one could connect πίλναμαι 'to approach' < plh_2- (semantics: 'to make close contact' > 'wrestle'), and posit a zero-grade verbal formation plh_2-e- > παλα-. However, since no synchronic traces of such a verbal stem remain, this remains hypothetical.

παλάμη [f.] '(flat) hand, device, means, function' (Il.). ◂IE plh_2-(e)m- 'hand'▸ •COMP δυσ-πάλαμος 'mischievous, helpless' (A. [lyr.]).
•DER πάλαμις (cod. -ίς)· τεχνίτης παρὰ τοῖς Σαλαμινίοις 'craftsman (Salam.)' (H.), παλαμίς [f.] 'mole' (Alex. Trall.). Denominative παλαμ-άομαι, -ήσασθαι 'to handle, perform, plan' (Alc., E., Ar., X.) also παλαμήσας· τεχνάσας, ἐργάσας 'having wrought, produced' (H.), -ημα [n.] 'performance, plan' (Com. Adesp., Ael.). Furthermore ἀπάλαμνος (also ἀ-πάλαμος) 'without hand', 'unadept, helpless, indeliberate, inconsiderate' (E 597); παλαμναῖος 'who does sth. with his own hand', euphemistically 'murderous, murderer' (trag.); both from *πάλαμα [n.].
•ETYM Related to Lat. palma [f.] 'flat hand', OHG folma, OIr. lám 'hand', all with an old zero grade m-derivation (plh_2-m-) of a lost verb for 'spread out'. Greek requires plh_2-em-; cf. Beekes 1975: 10ff. Other derivations of the same verb have been suspected in ►παλαστή and ►πέλαγος; see also ►πέλανος, ►πλάσσω, and ►πλανάω, as well as ►ἐπιπολῆς.

παλάσσομαι [v.] 'to draw lots'. ⇒πάλλω.

παλάσσω [v.] 'to besprinkle, stain, taint' (Il.). ◂?▸

•VAR Fut. inf. παλαξέμεν, perf. ptc. πεπαλαγμένος, plpf. πεπάλακτο.
•COMP ἐμ-παλάσσομαι 'to be tampered, be entangled' (Hdt., Th.), ἐμπαλάξαι· ἐμπλέξαι 'to entwine' (H.), with ἐμπαλάγματα [pl.] 'entanglements, embracements' (A. Supp. 296).
•DER πάλαξις [f.] 'sprinkling' = 'priming' (Epid. III[a]).
•ETYM Possibly connected with ►πάλλω 'to swing', though this verb itself has no certain etymology. One would have to posit a Proto-Greek root pal-* with the suffix -άσσω, also found e.g. in ►σταλάσσω, αἱμάσσω, et al.

παλαστή [f.] 'surface of the hand, breadth of four fingers' (IA). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR -άστα (Aeol.), -αιστή (Hp., Arist., pap.; perhaps secondary after παλαίω?), also -αιστής [m.] (LXX, Hero); after μετρητής, etc.
•COMP τρι-πάλα(ι)στος 'measuring three handbreadths' (IA, Hell.).
•DER παλα(ι)στ-ιαῖος 'measuring a handbreadth' (IA, Hell.).
•ETYM Frisk derives this noun from the same verb for 'spread out' as ►παλάμη, with a suffix -st-. However, the word rather seems Pre-Greek, as is confirmed by the variation σ/ ισ (which probably points to a palatal s^y*); cf. Fur.: 296.

παλεύω [v.] 'to act as a decoy, lure into, tempt' (Ar. Av., Ph., Plu.). ⊲PG?⊳
•DER παλευταί· οἱ τὰ λίνα ἱστῶντες, οἷς τὰ θηρία παλεύεται 'those setting up the nets by which animals are trapped' (H.), -ευτικόν (cod. πατ-)· θηρευτικόν 'related to hunting' (H.), -ευτά· τὰ λίνα οἷς τὰ θηρία ἁλίσκεται 'nets by which wild animals are caught' (Phot.), -εύτρια [f.] 'decoy bird' (Eub., Arist.), -ευτρίς [f.] (Phot.), -ευμα 'bait, lure' (anon. apud Greg. Cor., p. 1017 Schaefer).
•ETYM A technical word, probably Pre-Greek.

παλέω [v.]⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Only in the aor.opt. παλήσειε, said of a fleet which cannot fight (Hdt. 8,21), ind. ἐπάλησεν· ἐφθάρη 'to destroy' and perf. πεπαληκέναι· ἐκπεσεῖν 'to fall out', πεπαλημέναι· βεβλαμμέναι 'who are disabled or hindered' (H.); furthermore (as if from πάλλω) πεπαλμένος· βεβλαμμένος, ἔξαρθρος γεγονώς 'disabled; who has got dislocated joints' (H.), πεπαλκέναι λέγεται τὸ ἐκπίπτειν τὰ πλοῖα 'suffer shipwreck' (Phot.).
•DER ἐκπαλής 'dislocated' (Hp., H.), ἐκπαλέω [v.] 'to dislocate, disjoint' (Hp.), ἐκπάλησις, -εία [f.] 'dislocation' (medic.).
•ETYM If Frisk's proposal is correct -- viz. that the rare simplex could be a backformation from ἐκπαλέω, a denominative of ἐκπαλής 'jumped out', which in turn was from from ἐκ-πάλλομαι 'to jut out' (see ►πάλλω 'to sway, rock') -- then this entire lemma is secondary. Only the forms πεπαλμένος and πεπαλκέναι must be older. Fur.: 149 connects these words with glosses in βαλ-, and with the root βλαβ-, which could show that the word is Pre-Greek.

πάλη 1 [f.] 'wrestling match'. ⇒παλαίω.

πάλη 2 [f.] 'fine flour, fine dust' (Hp., medic., Pherecr.). ⊲?⊳
•DER πάλημα [n.] 'id.' (Nic.), -ημάτιον (Ar.Fr. 682). Reduplicated ►παιπάλη; perhaps to παλάσσω and παλύνω.

•ETYM Has been derived from πάλλω 'to swing, rock' = 'to sieve flour', which is conceivable but not compelling. Alternatively, one could connect πάλη with Lat. pollen 'flour, powder' < pol(H)-*, Gr. ►πόλτος, Lat. puls, -ltis 'kind of porridge' < polt-*.

πάλιν [adv.] 'backwards, reverse; again; anew' (Il.). ⊲IE k^wlH-i-* 'turn'⊳ •VAR Also πάλι (Hell. poet.).
•COMP As a second member in originally prepositional expressions like ἔμ-παλιν 'reversely, on the contrary', ἀνά-παλιν 'backwards, aback' with ἀναπαλεύω [v.] 'to take back, cancel' (pap.). Very often as a first member, e.g. παλίν-ορσος (see ►ὄρρος), παλῖωξις [f.] 'pursuit, counterattack' (Il., App.) < *παλι-ϝίωξις, where παλι- was formed after other first members in -ι.
•ETYM Frozen accus. of a noun *πάλις 'turning, turn' (from ►πέλομαι; see also ►πάλαι), which may first have been used as an accus. of content in cases like πάλιν ἰέναι, βαίνειν, διδόναι. See Dihle Glotta 83 (1985): 7-14 on the mg. of παλῖωξις: it may be a technical term used in chariot fighting during the second millennium, from πάλιν ϝιώκειν.

παλίουρος [m.] plant name, 'Christ's thorn, Paliurus australis' (Thphr., Theocr.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM A connection with οὐρά 'tail' makes little sense, nor it is to be taken with οὖρον 'urine' (thus DELG). The word is most probably Pre-Greek (cf. Dihle Glotta 51 (1973): 270f.); see ►πάγουρος.

παλλακή [f.] 'concubine' (IA, Hell.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR παλλακίς (Hom., X., Hell.).
•DER παλλακ-ίδιον (Plu.), -ῖνος [m.] 'son of a concubine' (Sophr.), -ία (also -εία to -εύω) 'concubinage' (Is., Str.); -εύομαι, -εύω [v.] 'to take as a concubine, be a concubine' (Hdt., Str., Plu.). A probable back-formation is πάλλαξ [f.], also [m.] 'youth' (gramm.), -άκιον = μειράκιον 'boy' (Pl. Com., Ael. Dion.), παλλακός· ἐρώμενος (ἐρρωμένος cod.) 'eromenos' (H.), Phot.; πάλληξ [m.] (Samos III--II[a], Ar. Byz.), παλληκάριον (pap., written. -ι-), MoGr. παλληκάρι. A different suffix is found in πάλλᾶς, -αντος [m.] 'youth' (Philistid.; after γίγᾶς). Athena's epithet Παλλάς, -άδος [f.] (Il.) is isolated; among the Greeks in Thebes (Egypt), it functions as a sacral term for 'girl'; -άδιον 'statue of Pallas', originally 'doll, female idol' (Hdt., Ar., inscr.).
•ETYM The word may well be Pre-Greek, with a suffix -ακ-. Similarly, Levin General Linguistics 23 (1983): 191-197 regards Latin paelex 'mistress' as a loanword from a Mediterranean language, maybe a Semitic one, in view of Hebr. plgš /pi(y)leyeš/ 'concubine'. The remaining connections that have been proposed, particularly those with Ir. airech, gen. airige [f.] 'concubine', Avestan pairikā [f.] 'witch', MP parīk, MoP parī < PIr. parīkā*, should all be dismissed for formal or semantic reasons.

παλλάντιον [n.] kind of grass (Hippiatr. 66). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Fur.: 344 compares ἀπολάντιον 'id.', but the analysis of the latter is unknown.

παλλιχίαρ [n.] · πεμμάτιόν τι παρὰ Λάκωσι 'small cake (Lacon.)' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳

•ETYM DELG suggests a compound of πᾶν and λείχω (after Bourguet 1927: 148[1]), but it may rather be a Pre-Greek word.

παλλύτας [?] ὄργανον βασανιστήριον 'instrument of torture' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM From πᾶν and ►λύω?

πάλλω [v.] 'to sway, rock, draw lots', med. 'to vault', also 'to jump, hop'. ⊲?⊳
•VAR Aor. πῆλαι (Il.), med. πήλασθαι (Call.), πάλτο (ἀν-, κατ-έπαλτο), reduplicated ἀμ-πεπαλών (Hom.; see below on πεπάλ-εσθε, -έσθαι, if for -ασθε, -άσθαι or -αχθε, -άχθαι), aor. pass. ἀνα-παλείς (Str.), perf. med. πέπαλμαι (A.).
•COMP Also ἀνα- (ἀμ-). As a second member in ἐγχέσ-, σακέσ-παλος 'swaying the spear, shield' (Il.).
•DER 1. πάλος [m.] '(shaken) lot' (Sapph., Hdt., trag.), ἄμπαλος [m.] 'fresh casting' (of the lot, Pi.); ἀναπάλη [f.] name of a dance (Ath.); 2. παλτόν [n.] 'javelin' (A., X.), ἐπάλταξα 'threw the javelin' (H.), παλτός [adj.] (S.); 3. παλμός [m.] 'vibration, pulsation' (Hp., Arist., Epicur.), -ώδης 'full of vibrations' (Hp.); παλματίας σεισμός 'heavy earthquake' (Arist.); 4. πάλσις (ἀνά-, ἀπό-) [f.] 'pulsation, etc.' (Arist., Epicur.). Intensive verb παι-πάλλειν 'to shake' (H.). A velar enlargement seems to be present in *παλάσσομαι, πεπάλαχθε, -άχθαι (H 171, ι 331); these difficult perfects must perhaps be read as reduplicated aor. -εσθε, -έσθαι.
•ETYM The forms πάλτο and back-formed πάλλομαι arose through metanalysis of the compounds κατ-επ-αλτο, ἀν-επ-αλτο, which belong to ἅλλομαι 'to jump', as containing augmented ἔ-παλτο. The remaining forms show a common basis παλ- (pres., reduplicated aor., etc.). In LIV[2], Gr. παλ- 'to swing' is connected with Slavic material such as Sln. pláti, 1sg. pọ́ljem 'to surge, let seethe', as well as Gr. ►πελεμίζω and ►πόλεμος. The root would be PIE $pelh_1$-, whence a nasal present pl-n-h_1-e/o- > Gr. πάλλ-ε/ο- (with similar phonetics as in βάλλω), and a reduplicated aorist pe-plh_1-e/o- > πεπαλ-ε/ο-. This analysis is possible in theory, but note that there is no independent evidence for πάλλω continuing a nasal present. Thus, everything remains uncertain. Alternatively, we could be dealing with a different, Proto-Greek stem pal-, to which παλύνω and παλάσσω could belong as well. The appurtenance of πόλεμος is semantically uncompelling. The noun πάλος is probably deverbal, as the meaning suggests. See ►παλαίω.

πάλμυς, -υδος, -υν [m.] 'king' (Hippon., A. Fr. 437 = 623 M., Lyc., AP 15, 25), also PN of a Trojan (N 792). ⊲LW Lyd.⊳ •ETYM Originally a Lydian word (Lyd. qaλmλus).

πάλος [m.] 'lot'. ⇒πάλλω.

πᾶλος [m.] 'gladiator'. ⊲LW Lat.⊳ •ETYM From Lat. pālus 'stake', a gladiator's rank.

παλύνω [v.] 'to sprinkle flour; to besprinkle with flour, dust, snow, etc.' (Il.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Aor. παλῦναι.
•COMP Rarely with ἀμφι-, δια-, ὑπερ-.
•ETYM Either a direct derivative of ►πάλη 2 'fine flour' or from an unattested u-stem pal-u-* 'flour'.

παμπήδην [adv.] 'wholly, throughout', = πάμπαν (Thgn., A., S.). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR -ηδόν, -ηδονίς (Theognost.).
•ETYM Transformation of πάμπαν after the adverbs in -ήδην, -ηδόν. See ►ἔμπης.

παμφαίνω [v.] 'to shine brightly, radiate' (Il., epic). ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Only present; iterative παμφαίνεσκε (Eratosth.).
•DER παμφανόων, -όωσα, -όωντα [ptc.], as if from *παμφανάω.
•ETYM Reduplicated intensive of ►φαίνω.

παμφαλάω [v.] 'to gaze around in astonishment' (Hippon., Anacr., Herod.), ἐπαμφάλησεν· ἐθαύμασε, περιεβλέψατο 'wondered, gazed around' (H.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •ETYM Reduplicated intensive in -άω. Frisk assumes that it represents a dissimilation of *φαλ-φαλ-άω, probably from φαλός 'white' (H.; see ►φαλακρός), with the same semantic development as assumed for λευκός 'white' > λεύσσω 'to look'. Fur. 161 equates παμφαλάω with παπταλάομαι 'to look around' (Lyc.), assuming Pre-Greek origin.

πάμφι [adv.] παντάπασι 'altogether' (H.). ⊲GR⊳ •ETYM An instrumental in -φι, derived from πᾶν [n.] 'all'?

Πάν [m.] pastoral god from Arcadia (h. Hom., Pi., Hdt.). ⊲IE? peh_2us-⊳ •VAR Case forms Πα-νός, -νί; Πάονι (Arc. VI[a]); plur. Πᾶνες (Ar.).
•DER 1. Diminutive Πανίσκος (Cic.); 2. Πάνιος 'belonging to Pan' (A. Fr. 98 = 143 M.), -ιον [n.] 'sanctuary of Pan' (Epid. III[a]), -ειον [n.] 'id.' (Str.), τὰ Πάνεια 'festival of Pan' (Delos III[a]), fem. Πανιάς (Nonn.); 3. Πανικός 'id.' (Hell.); 4. Πανιασταί [m.pl.] 'worshippers of Pan' (Rhod., Perg.; like Ἀπολλωνιασταί etc.; Πανισταί conj. in Men. Dysc. 230); 5. πανεύω 'to treat in the manner of Pan' (Heracl. Paradox.).
•ETYM Often identified with Skt. Pūṣán- [m.] 'god who protects and augments the herds', assuming an IE ablauting paradigm peh_2us- (> PGr. pauh-on- > Πάν) / ph_2us- (> Skt. Pūṣ-án-), derived from PIE root peh_2- 'to protect'. Doubts by Mayrhofer EWAia 2 s.v.

πανδούρα, -δοῦρα [f.] three-stringed lute (Euph. apud Ath. 183f., Poll.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR πάνδουρος (Euph. l.c., inscr. Seleucia ad Calycadnum), φάνδουρος (Nicon. Harm. 4).
•DER -δούριον, -δουρίς (H.), -δουρίζω, -δουριστής.
•ETYM Probably a Pre-Greek word. Hübschmann 1897: 395 compares Arm. p'andir, Oss. fændur, and Georg. panṭuri.

πάνθηρ, -ηρος [m.] 'panther' (Hdt., X., Arist.). ⊲LW Orient.⊳
•COMP λυκο-πάνθηρος [m.] 'wolf-panther' (Hdn. Epim.).
•DER Diminutive -ηρίσκος (Hero).
•ETYM Foreign word of Oriental origin. Compare Skt. (lex.) puṇḍarīka- [m.] 'tiger'; if connected with ►πάρδαλις, one might consider original *πάρθηρ, which was changed to πάνθηρ by folk-etymological association with πᾶν 'all' and θηράω 'to hunt'. See Fur.: 190[33].

πᾶνός [m.] 'torch' (A. Ag. 284 [codd. φαν-], S. Fr. 184, E. Ion 195 and 1294 [codd. πταν-], Men.). ◂PG?(V)▸ •ETYM Unexplained. Fur.: 318 thinks the word may be Pre-Greek because of the variant with πτ-.

πανσῦδί (-εί) [adv.] 'rushing in collectively or jointly, with the entire army' (Th., Pherecr., X.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Also πασσ-.
•DER -δίῃ (Il., A. R.), -δίᾳ (E., X.) 'id.', also 'in a great hurry', -δίην (EM, H.); -δόν 'together' (Nonn.); denominative πασ<σ>υδιάζω [v.] 'to assemble' (Cyme; imperial period).
•ETYM Compound of πάν and ►σεύομαι (aor.3sg. σύτο), with the adverbial suffix -δί, etc.

πάνυ ⇒πᾶς.

πάξ [adv.] 'enough, well' (Men., Diph., Herod.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Probably from ►πήγνυμι, παγῆναι, with adverbial -s like in ►ἅπαξ.

παξαμᾶς [m.] 'biscuit'. ◂?▸
•DER παξαμίτης, παξαμίδιον (Gal.).
•ETYM Allegedly from the name of a baker, Πάξαμος (Gal., Suid.).

παπαῖ [adv.] exclamation of pain and astonishment (IA). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR On the accent see Hdn. Gr. 2, 933.
•DER παπαιάξ (Ar., E., Luc.); redupl. παπαπαπαῖ (Ar. Th. 1191).
•ETYM Nursery word.

πάππă [m.voc.] 'papa!' (ζ 57, etc.) ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Accus. -ăν.
•COMP πρό-παππος 'great-grandfather, proavus' (Att.), ἐπί-παππος 'great-grandfather, abavus, forebear in general' (Jul., Lib., Poll.).
•DER πάππος 'grandfather, ancestor' (IA), 'down (on seeds, on the chin)', name of an unknown bird; παππ-ῷος 'ancestral' (Ar.), -ικός 'id.' (pap. II^{p}), -ώδης 'fluffy' (Thphr.). Denominatives παππ-άζω (E 408, Q. S.), -ίζω (Ar.) [v.] 'to say papa, call papa', -ασμός [m.] 'calling out "papa"' (Suid.); hypocoristic παππ-ίᾶ, -ίδιον (Ar.). Fully inflected: πάπας, -αν, -ᾳ (Hell.).
•ETYM Reduplicated nursery word πάπραξ, -ακος [m., f.] name of a fish in the Thracian lake Prasias (Hdt. 5, 16). ◂PG?(S)▸ •ETYM Has been connected with πέρκη 'perch', περκνός 'spotted', or explained as onomatopoeic after the supposed sound of the fish; cf. βαβράζειν 'to chirp'. The word may be Pre-Greek (suffix -ακ-).

παπταίνω [v.] 'to look around, glance at sth.' (Il.). ◂PG?▸

•VAR Aor. παπτῆναι, also -ᾶναι (Pi.), fut. -ανέω.
•COMP Rarely with ἀπο-, δια-, περι-.
•DER πεπτήνας· περιβλεψάμενος 'looking around' (H.); παπταλώμενος (Lyc.).
•ETYM Intensive reduplicated formation πα-πτ-αίνω. Could be connected with πέτομαι 'to fly', assuming the image of a restless gaze, but this is hardly compelling. No good IE etymology. Other forms which have been connected: some Cypriot glosses from H., such as ἰμπάταον· ἔμβλεψον. Πάφιοι 'looked at (Paph.)', ἰνκαπάταον· ἐγκατάβλεψον 'id.', etc. (see Frisk s.v.).

πάπῡρος [m., f.] 'papyrus shrub, linen, paper' (Thphr., Dsc., pap.). ◂LW▸ •DER Diminutive παπύρ-ιον [n.] (Dsc.), -(ε)ών [m.] 'bed of papyrus' (Aq., inscr.); -ινος [adj.] 'made of papyrus' (Delos II^{a}, Plu., pap.), -ικός 'id.' (pap.), -ώδης (Gal., sch.).
•ETYM Loanword of unknown origin. Note that Pre-Greek has a suffix -ῡρ-.

πάρα [adv., prep.] 'besides, by; from, next to, alongside, against' (Il.). ◂IE prh$_2$-, preh$_2$- 'beside, by'▸ •VAR With gen., dat., acc. Also παρά, epic also παραί (Παραι-βάτᾱς in dial. inscr.), non-IA mostly πάρ.
•DIAL Myc. pa-ro.
•ETYM Discussion by García Ramón 1997: 47-62. For Indo-European, he distinguishes prh$_2$-* 'at the front, beside', with a loc. preh$_2$-i*, also pr̥-* 'id.' and pres-* in πρέσβυς. Beside these, there is also a gen.-abl. prh$_2$-es* > πάρος, and finally, pro* and pro-h$_1$* 'to the front'.
The words παραί, παρ, and παρά are synonymous; παραί may derive from preh$_2$-i* with analogical pr̥-*. The word παρά lost the meaning 'forward' to πρό. See ►πάρος, ►πέρα, ►πέρι, ►πρίν, ►πρό, and ►πρός.

παραγαύδης [m.] 'garment with purple border' (Lyd. Mag. 1, 17; 2, 4). ◂LW OP▸ •VAR παραγώδας (cod. παραγώγας) 'a Parthian garment' (H.).
•DER παραγαύδιον (POxy. 1026, 12; V^{p}; Ed. Diocl.).
•ETYM A loanword from Old Persian; see R. Schmitt Glotta 49 (1971): 107-110.

παράδεισος [m.] 'enclosed park with animals' (X.), 'garden' (LXX, Hell., pap., inscr.), 'garden of Eden' (LXX), 'abode of the blessed, paradise' (NT). ◂LW Pers.▸ •ETYM Loanword from Av. pairi-daēza- [m.] 'enclosure', MIran. pardēz*, MoP pālēz 'garden'. Iranian daiźa-* is cognate with Gr. ►τεῖχος, from the IE root d^{h}eiǵ^h-*.

παρακλαυσίθυρον 'lover's complaint sung at his mistresses's door, serenade' (Plu.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Univerbation of παρα-, κλαῦσις, and θύρα (Leroy 1969: 223-237).

παρασάγγης [m.] Persian length measure (Hdt., X.). ◂LW OP▸ •ETYM From OP; cf. MP frasang, MoP farsang. The view that παρασάγγης was used in the meaning 'ἄγγελος' is probably due to a misunderstanding (Pearson on S. fr. 520).

πάραυτα, -τά [adv.] 'immediately' (Aesch., D).

•ETYM From παρ' αὐτὰ τὰ πράγματα.

παραψιδάζω [v.] 'to spatter' (Hippon. 92 M.).
•ETYM Masson cites Coppola, who adduced ψίδες· ψιάδες, ψακάδες 'drops, drops of rain' (H.). See ►ψίζομαι.

παρδακός [adj.] 'wet, damp' (Archil., Semon., Ar. Pax 1148); πάρταξον (-ζον cod.)· ὕγρανον. Λάκωνες 'wetting' (?) (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR V.ll. πορ-, -δοκός.
•ETYM The variations α/ο and δ/τ show that the word is Pre-Greek. Fur. 241 further adduces ἄρδω 'to irrigate' < *ἀ-ϝάρδω (Kretschmer Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 29f, Neumann 1961: 91); he also compares Basque forms.

πάρδαλις, -ιος, -εως [f.] 'panther, leopard' (Il.); also name of a fish of prey (Ael., Opp.), of a bird, perhaps 'red-backed shrike, Lanius' (Arist. [-λος], H.). ⊲LW?⊳
•VAR Also πόρδ-.
•COMP παρδαλή-φορος 'borne by a panther' (S. Fr. 11), καμηλο-πάρδαλις [f.] 'giraffe' (Agatharch., LXX).
•DER παρδαλ-έη, -έα, -ῆ [f.] 'pelt of a panther' (Il.), -ια [n.pl.] 'panthers' (Arist.), -ιδεύς 'young panther' (Eust.), -ε(ι)ος 'belonging to the panther, panther-like' (Arist.), -ώδης (Ath.), -ωτός 'spotted like a panther' (Luc.); πάρδος [m.] 'panther' (Ael. NA 1,31 [v.l. πάρδαλος]); as a second member in ►λεόπαρδος.
•ETYM Loanword from an unknown Oriental source; compare several Iranian words for 'panther, leopard', e.g. Sogd. pwrδnk, Pashto pṛāng, MoP palang, and Skt. pŕ̥dāku- 'panther'. Gr. πάρδος might be a back-formation from Lat. pardus (Lucan). H.'s statement that πόρδαλις is male, πάρδαλις female probably represents a secondary distinction. For the suffix, compare δάμαλις and, more remotely, κνώδαλον, ἔταλον, ἴξαλος, et al. See ►πάνθηρ.

παρειαί [f.pl.] 'cheeks' (Il.). ⊲IE *$h_2$eus- 'ear'⊳
•VAR Rarely sing. -ιά (trag.), for -ιᾰ (cf. ἀγυιαί to sing. -ιᾰ)? Aeol. παραῦαι [pl.] (Theoc. 30, 4 [cod. -αύλαις], Hdn.). Furthermore παρήϊον [n.] (also plur. -α) 'cheek(s), bridle' (Hom.; Ceos V[a]?).
•DIAL Myc. pa-ra-wa-jo [du.] 'bridle'?
•COMP καλλι-πάρῃος (-ηος, -ειος) 'having fair cheeks' (Il.), μαλο-πάραυος (Aeol.) = λευκο-πάρειος (Theoc., H.; literally 'having apple-colored cheeks'), εὐ-πάραος = εὐ-πάρειος (Pi.).
•DER 1. παρηΐς, -ίδος (-ῄς, -ῇδος) [f.] 'cheek' (trag., AP); 2. παρειάς (-ηϊάς), -άδος [f.] 'cheek, cheek band' (Hell. epic, medic.); 3. παρείας (ὄφις) [m.] 'kind of snake' (after the light spots on both sides of the neck; Att.); also παρούας (Apollod. apud Ael.; after οὖς).
•ETYM From PGr. *par-aws-ā, *par-aws-i̯o- 'that which is next to the ears', a compound of παρά and the (original) e-grade of οὖς, either with or without a suffix -ιο-. The Greek words present some phonetic problems; cf. the discussion in DELG, Forssman 1966: 153, Ruijgh 1967a: §32, and especially Peters 1980a: 295ff. on the question whether a separate form *par-aws-i̯ā should be assumed.

παρήορος [m.] '(horse) in the same harness' (Il.), metaph. 'walking beside the track, irrational', also 'outstretched, sprawling' (through false interpretation of Π 471?). ⊲IE *$h_2$uer- 'bind, connect, hang'⊳ •VAR Also -άορος (A. Pr. 363; v.l. -ή-), -ᾱρος (Theoc. 15, 8), -ῳρος (Tryph., AP).
•DER A rhythmic byform is παρηόριος 'driven out of course', of a ship (A. R.), 'irrational' (AP). Thence παρηορίαι [f.pl.] 'side-traces' (Il.), metaphorically 'outlying reaches of a river' (Arat. 600); παρηρία (for -ηορία?)· μωρία 'folly' (H.).
•ETYM Verbal noun of παρ-αείρω; see ►ἀείρω 2.

παρθένος [f.] 'virgin, girl, young woman' (Il.). ⊲IE? *psteno- 'breast'⊳ •VAR Also παρσένος (Ar.).
•COMP παρθεν-οπῖπα (Λ 385), see ►ὀπιπεύω; καλλι-πάρθενος 'having fair virgins, of a beautiful virgin' (E.).
•DER A. Nominal: 1. Diminutive παρθεν-ίσκη, -ισκάριον (Hdn. Gr., gloss.); 2. παρθένιος (analogical -ειος, -ήϊος) 'vestal' (Il.); 3. -ική [f.] 'maiden' (Il.), -ικός 'vestal' (LXX, D. S.); 4. -ιον, -ικόν, -ίς names of several plants, 'artemisia' et al. (Hp., Dsc.); 5. -ώδης 'vestal' (St. Byz.); 6. -ιανός 'born under the sign of Virgo' (Astr.); 7. -ίας [m.] 'son of a maiden' (Arist., Str.); 8. -ών (-εών AP, etc.), -ῶνος [m.] 'bower', usually the name of the temple of Athene παρθένος (Att.). 9. παρθενία (-εία), -ίη 'virginity' (Sapph., Pi.).
B. Verbs: 1. παρθενεύομαι, -ω (also with ἀπο-, δια-, ἐκ-) [v.] 'to be a maiden, treat as a maiden' (Ion., A., E.), -ευμα [n.] 'maiden's work, son of a maiden' (E.), -ευσις [f.] = -ία (Luc.), -εία 'id.' (E.). 2. ἀπο-παρθενόω [v.] 'to deflower' (LXX).
•ETYM Klingenschmitt 1974 proposed a reconstruction *pr̥-steno- 'having protruding breasts', with a development of *-rst- to -ρθ-. The -σ- in Ar. is the Laconian development of θ. Though one might expect *pro- or *pra-, the development to PGr. *parsteno- is considered acceptable. For *steno-, cf. Skt. stána-, Arm. stin; however, note that the original form was probably *psteno-, as proven by YAv. fštāna- 'breast', ərəduua-fšnī- 'having firm breasts' < *-pstn-ih_2-.

Παρνᾱσ(σ)ός [m.] mountain chain in Phocis (Pi., Od., Hdt.). ⊲PG(S,V)⊳
•VAR Epic Ion. -ησ(σ)ός.
•ETYM Acc. to ancient sources (St. Byz., EM. sch. A. R.), the older name of the mountain was Λαρνασσός. It clearly contains a Pre-Greek suffix; note the interchange σσ/σ. Beekes JIES 37 (2009): 191-197 explains the phoneme σσ/ττ from Pre-Greek *k^y.

πάρνοψ [m.] 'grasshopper' (Ar.). ⊲PG(V)⊳
•VAR Aeol. Boeot. (Str. 13, 1, 64) πόρνοψ, also κόρνοψ (Str. l.c.), gen. -οπος. We also find the variants πρανώ· ἀκρίδος εἶδος 'kind of grasshopper', and κάρνος· μεγάλη ἀκρίς 'big grasshopper' (both H., see Fur.: 344, 388).
•DER Παρνόπιος (-πίων) Ἀπόλλων (Paus., Str.), who protects against grasshoppers; Κορνοπίων, gen. -ωνος, epithet of Heracles in Oitaia (Str.); thence the Aeolic month name Πορνόπιος, -πίων (Cyme, Str.). Also κορνώπιδες· κώνωπες 'gnats, mosquitos' (H.).

•ETYM The formation is reminiscent of δρύοψ, σκάλοψ, and other animal names; -οπ- is a Pre-Greek suffix. Given the vacillation in the form of the word, it is unlikely that π- and κ- are due to a simple dissimilation. Probably the word had an initial labiovelar stop in Pre-Greek, the labial element of which could have been lost before ο. The ο itself may reflect α after a labiovelar.

παροιμία [f.] 'proverb, saying' (Att., etc.), also 'incidental remark' (Herod. 2, 61), 'comparison' (Ev. Jo.). ◄GR► •DER παροιμιώδης 'proverbial' (Plu.), -ιακός 'id.', also name of a meter (Plu., Heph.); -ιάζομαι, -ω [v.] 'to speak in proverbs' (Pl., Arist.).
•ETYM An abstract from πάρ-οιμος 'by the road, neighbor' or παρ' οἶμον, οἴμην; semantically unclear. Traditionally derived from οἶμος 'course, way', e.g. by H.: 'proverb which is spoken along the road' (cf. πάροιμος 'neighbor', παροιμώσαντες 'turned aside from the road'). Alternatively, one could derive it from ►οἴμη 'song, tale'; see Frisk s.v.

πάρος [adv., prep.] 'before, sooner, previously'; prep. (+ gen.) 'before' (Il.). ◄IE prh$_2$-os 'before, earlier'► •DER πάροι-θε(ν) 'in front of, beforehand' (Il.), -τερος 'former, earlier' (Il.), -τατος (A. R.).
•ETYM An adverb that can be traced back to PIE, probably deriving from an earlier gen.sg. in -os. Cognates: Skt. purás 'in front of, before' (beside purā́ 'earlier'), Av. parō 'in front, earlier'. The forms in παροι- have a locatival origin. See ►πάρα, ►πέρι, ►πρό, ►πρός, etc.

παρῶαι [f.pl.] 'sorrel' (Phot., Arist.). ◄GR?, ?► •VAR παρόαν, παρούαν, παραύαν [acc.sg.].
•COMP μαλο-παρούαν [adj.] 'white and sorrel-colored'.
•DER παρωαῖος [adj.] (Call. Artemis 91, if correct).
•ETYM It is assumed that the word is an Aeolism, and was derived from the snake name παρείας (s.v. ►παρειαί); see Hoffmann & Debrunner 1954(2): §76. However, the variation of the vowels remains unexplained.

πάρων, -ωνος [m.] 'light ship' (Plb.). ◄?►
•VAR -ών LSJ.
•ETYM No etymology.

πᾶς [adj.] 'whole, all, every' (Il.). ◄IE ph$_2$-ent- 'all'► •VAR fem. πᾶσα (Cret. Thess. Arc. πάνσα, Aeol. παῖσα), ntr. πᾶν (Dor. Aeol. πᾰ̃ν), beside πᾰν-, ἅ-πᾱν, etc.
•DIAL Myc. pa-te /pantes/ [nom.pl.], pa-to /pantos/ [gen.sg.], pa-sa /pansa/ [nom.sg.f.], pa-si /pansi/ [dat.pl.]; ku-su-pa /ksumpans/, to-so-pa /tosospans/.
•COMP Very often as a first member πᾰν-, e.g. παν-ῆμαρ 'all day' (ν 31); more rarely παντο-, e.g. παντο-μισής 'all-hateful' (A.), παντο-κράτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'the Almighty' (LXX; older παγ-κρατής, see on ►κράτος).
•DER παντ-οῖος [adj.] 'various, manifold' (Il.), -οδαπός 'id.' (since h. Cer.); -οσε 'in all directions' (Il.), -οτε 'always' (Arist., Hell.), -αχῇ, -αχοῦ, -αχόθεν, -αχόσε, etc. '(from) everywhere, every way' (IA). ►πάγχυ, πάν-υ 'altogether, very' (Att., also Ion.).
•ETYM Gr. πᾶς < *παντ-ς, with analogical πᾶν << πᾰ̃ν (< *πάντ). Furthermore, we find ἅ-πᾱς 'the whole' < sm-pant-. The Myc. forms prove initial p- (rather than $*k^w$-), and enable connection with ToA puk, pont-, ToB po, pont- 'all' (Adams 1999: 402). The -υ in ►πάγχυ and πάνυ is unexplained.

πάσασθαι [v.aor.] 'to acquire'. •VAR πάσομαι [fut.]. ⇒πέπαμαι.

πασπάλη [f.] 'fine flour, etc.' = παιπάλη, πάλη (Ar. V. 91 [metaphor for a very small measure], H., Phot., Suid.). ◄?► •COMP πασπαλη-φάγος 'eating πασπάλη' (Hippon.).
•DER πάσπαλος 'millet', πασπαλέτης 'grinding millet' (Gal.); PN Πασπαλᾶς.
•ETYM Formation and origin unknown. It seems obvious to connect παιπάλη, but the relation is unclear.

πάσσαλος [m.] 'plug, pin, peg' (Il.). ◄PG► •VAR Att. πάτταλος.
•DER Diminutive πασσαλ-ίσκος (Hp.) and -ιον (H.); -εύω (often with προσ-, also with δια-, κατα-) [v.] 'to pin, hang up' (Hdt., Att.); instrument noun -εῖον (Plb., EM); -όομαι [v.] 'to be provided with a peg' (sch.), προσ-πασσαλόω [v.] 'to pin' (Thphr.). Gr. πάσσᾱξ, -ᾱκος [m.] 'πάσσαλος' (Megar., Ar. Ach. 763), with derivatives -άκιον, -ακίζω (H.); πασσάριος· σταυρός 'stake, pole' (H.).
•ETYM This word is usually derived from PIE ph$_2$k- 'stiff, hard', but this is improbable: a pin has not become stiff (like a peg of ice); it has been fastened or fixed to a wall or a pillar. The suffix -αλ- is Pre-Greek and cannot be IE; the same goes for the suffix -ᾱκ-; cf. πόρπᾱξ, κνώδᾱξ, etc. Hence, πάσσαλος is probably Pre-Greek (pak^y-al-).

πάσσω [v.] 'to strew, sprinkle' (Il.), also 'to weave' images 'into' a piece of cloth. ◄?►
•VAR Att. πάττω (Ar.), aor. πάσ-αι, -ασθαι, πασθῆναι (Att.), perf. med. πέπασμαι (LXX, A. R.).
•COMP Frequently with prefix, e.g. κατα-, ἐπι- (προ-επι-, παρ-επι-, προσ-επι-), ἐν- (συν-εν-, παρ-εν-, προσ-εν-).
•DER πασ-τός [adj.] 'strewn, sprinkled' (Hp.), χρυσό-παστος 'gold-stitched' (A.), κατά-παστος 'bestrewn, decorated (with figures)' (Ar.); παστός [m.] 'knitted curtain, blanket, bridal bed', also 'bridal chamber' (Hell.); παστόω 'to build a bridal chamber' (Aq.); (κατά-, ἐπί-, διά-, σύμ-)πάσμα [n.] '(medicinal) powder' (Thphr., medic.); πάστρια [f.] 'embroiderer' (sch.).
•ETYM With a similar form and meaning, we find πῆ- in πῆ καὶ πῆν ἐπὶ τοῦ κατάπασσε καὶ καταπάσσειν (H.); note especially ἐπιπῆν φάρμακον (inscr. Epid.) beside ἐπι ... φάρμακα πάσσεν (E 900).
Under a reconstruction $*k^w h_2 t$- (ignoring the ē to which the Epidauric form points), it would be possible to connect Lat. quatiō 'to shake' and PCl. $*k^w$āti- 'chaff, husks', which is almost identical with the glosses πήτεα· πίτυρα 'husks of corn', πητῖται· πιτύρινοι ἄρτοι. Λάκωνες 'bran-like breads (Lacon.)' (H.). Perhaps related is Lat. quālus 'wicker basket', if from 'sieve'.

Semantically good, but phonetically very uncertain is the comparison with ToAB kät^{ā}- 'to strew' (which points to a root KeT*- and is usually connected with ► σκίδνημι).

παστάς, -άδος [f.], often [pl.] 'annex, porch, atrium', also 'inner room, bridal chamber' (through association with ► παστός 'bridal chamber'; Ion., Delph.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM From παρ-στάς = παρα-στάς, pl. -άδες [f.] 'door-post, pillar, atrium, etc.', from παρα + sth$_2$- 'stand'. With a different dissimilation, we find παρτάδες (-άδαι cod.)· ἄμπελοι 'grape-vine' (H.). A parallel development is shown by Lat. postis '(door)-post' < pr-sth*$_2$-i- 'standing forth' or po-sth*$_2$-i- 'standing upright'.

παστός ⇒πάσσω.

πάσχω [v.] 'to experience, undergo, suffer' (Il.). ◂IE b*^{h}end^{h}- 'bind'▸ •VAR fut. πείσομαι, aor. παθεῖν, perf. πέπονθα (πέποσχα Stesich., Epich., pap. III^a).
•COMP Also with ἀντι-, συν-, προ-, etc.
•DER 1. πένθος [n.] 'sorrow, grief' (Il.), whence πενθέω [v.] 'to grieve, sorrow' (Il.), πένθ-ημα, -ήμων, -ητήρ, fem. -ήτρια, etc.; πένθ-ιμος [adj.] 'belonging to grief' (poet.; perhaps after θανάσιμος), -ικός 'id.' (X., LXX), -ηρός 'id.' (Anaxil.); PN Πενθεύς, reshaping of Τενθεύς. 2. πάθος [n.] 'experience, passion, suffering' (IA); πάθ-η [f.], -ημα [n.] 'id.', -ησις, -ητικός, -ικός, etc.; ἀντι-, συμ-παθής 'feeling repulsion' or 'sympathy', with derivatives -εια [f.], -έω [v.] (Ar., Hell.), to the verb ἀντι-, συμ-παθεῖν. Denominative παθ-αίνομαι, -αίνω 'to be filled with πάθος; to arouse πάθος' (Hell.). 3. πασχ-ητιάω 'to feel an (unnatural) lust', -ητιασμός (Luc.).
•ETYM On the semantic development of παθεῖν, see Dörrie 1956, and Boreham Glotta 49 (1971): 231-244. Old ablaut: zero grade in πάσχω (< πάθ-σκ-ω) and παθεῖν < PGr. p$^{(h)}$nt^{h}-, e-grade in πείσομαι < *πένθ-σ-ομαι) and πένθος, o-grade in πέ-πονθ-α. The further etymology is uncertain. LIV^2 supports the old connection with Lith. kenčiù 'to suffer, endure', OIr. céss(a)im 'id.', but a root k*^{w}end^{h}- would violate the PIE root structure contraints. Alternatively, the Greek forms could belong to the root b*^{h}end^{h}- 'bind' (see ► πενθερός), with a semantic shift in intransitive usage from 'be bound' to 'suffer'; thus Janda 2000: 128f. after E. Leumann ZII 6 (1928): 10 and Pedersen REIE 1 (1938): 192 ff. See ► πῆμα.

πάταγος [m.] 'clatter, crash, rattle' (Il.). ◂PG?▸
•DER 1. παταγ-έω (also ἀντι-, ὑπο-, etc.) [v.] 'to make noise, splash, roar' (Alc. [πατάγεσκε]), -ή [f.] (D. P., Longos), -ημα [n.] (Men.) = πάταγος. 2. πατάσσω (aor. πατάξαι, also ἐκ-, συν-, etc.) [v.] 'to knock, beat, hurt' (Il.; Att. mostly as an aor. and fut.act. to the present τύπτω). 3. πατάξ [interj.] (Ar. Av. 1258). 4. καπατᾷ· κατακόψεις. Πάφιοι 'you break down (Paph.)' (H.).
•ETYM Possibly an onomatopoeic verb. On the derivation of πάταγ-έω, compare Tucker 1990: 106. The suffix in -γ- is found in semantically close forms, such as λαλαγή, σμαραγέω (Σμάραγος), οἰμωγή, etc. Fur.: 279 compares σπαταγγίζειν· ταράσσειν 'to agitate, disturb' (H.); the word may be Pre-Greek.

πατάνη [f.] '(flat) dish' (Sophr. 13, Poll.). ◂PG?▸ •VAR Dor. -ᾱ, ntr. -ον 'id.' (Poll. v.l., H.).
•COMP As a first member in πατάν-εψις, name of a (boiled) eel (Epich. 211).
•DER Diminutive -ιον [n.], -ίων [m.], name of a cock (com. IV^a).
•ETYM Probably a Pre-Greek word, as per Fur.: 149, who connects πέταχνον/πάτ- 'broad flat cup'; also compare the suffix of λεκάνη 'dish, pot', οὐράνη 'chamber-pot', etc.

πάτελλα [f.] 'large cup' (Poll). ◂LW Lat.▸
•VAR βάτελλα.
•ETYM A loanword from Lat. patella (see E-M s.v. patera).

πατέομαι [v.] 'to dine, enjoy, eat and drink' (Hdt.). ◂IE ph*$_2$t- 'graze, feed'▸ •VAR Aor. πάσ(σ)ασθαι and perf. med. πέπασ-μαι (Il.), fut. πάσομαι (A.).
•DER ἄ-πασ-τος 'uneaten, sober' (Il.). Backformation πάτος = τροφή (sch.).
•ETYM Present stem with enlargement *-t- from the PIE root peh*$_2$- 'to protect, graze'. In Germanic, we find Go. fodjan 'to feed' < peh*$_2$-t-, a short vowel only in OHG ka-vat-ōt 'pastus'. See ► ποιμήν and ► πῶμα 1 for further derivatives of the root peh*$_2$-.

πατέω [v.] 'to step, tread, enter, tread underfoot', 'to despise' (poet. since Pi.), 'to tread grapes, grain' = 'to press, thresh' (LXX, pap.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. πατῆσαι, etc.
•COMP With prefix, especially περι-, κατα-, ἀπο-.
•DER From the verb: πατ-ησμός [m.] 'treading' (A.), 'threshing' (pap.); -ησις [f.] 'treading (of grapes)' (Corn.); -ημα 'refuse, sweepings, waste' (LXX); -ητής [m.] 'grape-treader' (pap.), -ητήριον 'treading place' (Mylasa); πατηνόν· πεπατημένον, κοινόν 'trodden, common' (H.). From περι-πατέω: περιπάτησις 'walk-around' (late), -ητικός name of a school of philosophers (Hell.). From κατα-πατέω: καταπάτησις 'treading' (LXX), 'tour, inspection' (pap.), -ημα 'that which is trodden underfoot' (LXX). From ἀπο-πατέω 'to retire' = 'to do one's needs' (IA): ἀποπάτημα, -ησις (com., Gal.), also -ος [m.] 'excrement, dung' (Hp., Ar.). From πηλοπατέω [v.] 'to tread in the mud' (pap., sch.): πηλοπατ-ίδες [f.pl.] "mud-treaders" = kind of shoes (Hp.). πάτος [m.] 1. 'road, path' (Hom., A. R.), ἐκπάτιος 'astray, extraordinary' (A.); 2. 'treading, place where one treads, floor'; 'trampling, trampled matter, threshing, dust, dirt' (Hell.); περίπατος [m.] 'walk-around, place for walking, discussion', name of a philosophers' school (Att., etc.).
•ETYM The meaning 2. of πάτος shows that it is a back-formation from πατέω. In the meaning 'way, path', however, Frisk regards πάτος as a possible old variant of πόντος; πατέω could then be its denominative. Yet it is not evident that 'way, path' would yield 'to tread', an action which focuses on the individual movement of the legs. DELG doubts the connection with ► πόντος. If the latter is rejected, πατέω has no etymology.

πατήρ [m.] 'father' (Il.). ◂IE ph*$_2$tēr 'father'▸ •VAR Gen. πατρός, acc. πατέρα (Il.).

•DIAL Myc. pa-te.
•COMP Many compounds, e.g. πατρο-φόνος 'parricidal, parricide' (trag., Pl.), acc. -ῆα (Od.); -φόντης [m., f.] 'id.', ἀ-πάτωρ 'fatherless' (trag., Pl.).
•DER 1. Diminutive πατρ-ίδιον (com.), also πατέρ-ιον (Luc.), -ίων [m.] (late; from voc. πάτερ). 2. πάτρα, Ion. -η [f.] 'paternal ancestry, tribe; native city, country, homeland' (Il.). 3. πατριά, Ion. -ιή [f.] 'paternal ancestry, lineage, family' (Hdt., El., Delph., LXX, NT), -ιώτης, Dor. -ιώτας, [f.] -ιῶτις 'from the same lineage, native, fellow-countryman' (Att., Troezen, Delphi V[a]), -ιωτικός 'belonging to fellow-countrymen, homeland' (Delphi IV[a], Arist.). 4. πάτριος 'paternal, hereditary, customary' (Pi., IA), fem. πατρ-ίς 'paternal, homeland' (Il.); younger πατρ-ικός 'paternal' (Democr., Att., Hell.). 5. πατρόθεν 'from one's father' (Il.). 6. εὐ-πατρίδης, Dor. -ίδας, fem. -ις 'of a noble father, noble', usually as a name of the Old Attic aristocrats (trag., Att.), antonym κακο-πατρ-ίδας, fem. -ις (Alc., Thgn.). 7. πάτρως, gen. -ωος and -ω [m.] 'male relative; father's brother, uncle' (Pi., Cret., IA); hence πατρώ-ϊος, πατρῷος 'belonging to the paternal clan, paternal' = πάτρως, πατρικός (Il.). 8. πατρωός 'stepfather' (Hell.; formation unclear), also πατρυιός. 9. Verbs: πατερίζω (Ar. V. 652) 'to call father' (from the voc.), -εύω 'to hold the office of πατὴρ πόλεως (πατερ-ία)' (Milete VI[p]); πατρῴζω 'to take after one's father' (Philostr., Alciphr.), -ιάζω 'id.' (Poll.).
•ETYM Inherited word for 'father' (as the head of the family), preserved in most IE languages, e.g. Skt. pitár-, Lat. pater, Go. fadar. Skt. pítriya and Lat. patrius agree with πάτριος. Possible cognates of πάτρως, with formation like ►μήτρως, include Lat. patruus and Skt. pitr̥vyà- 'id.'.

πάτος 1 [m.] 'road, path'. ⇒πατέω.

πάτος 2 'nourishment, τροφή'. ⇒πατέομαι.

πάτος 3 [n.] ἔνδυμα τῆς Ἥρας 'garment of Hera' (Call. Fr. 495, H.). ◄IE? (s)pen- 'spin'► •ETYM Has been connected with PIE (s)pen- 'to spin' (see on ►πένομαι), or explained as a back-formation of πατέω as 'what is tread' = 'long garment reaching to the feet, train'. Neither is convincing.

παῦνι [?] mg. uncertain (Hipp. 79 M.). ◄?►
•VAR παῦνι· μικρόν· οἱ δὲ μέγα· ἢ ἀγαθόν 'small', others say 'big' or 'good'; παῦνις· ἀποχρέως 'sufficient'; παῦνον· μέγα (all H.).
•ETYM If the explanation as 'small' is correct, one might connect it with παῦρος.

παῦρος [adj.] 'small, little', plur. 'few' (Il.). ◄IE? peh_2u-ro-► •VAR Fem. παυράς (Nic.).
•DER Adv. παυράκις· ὀλιγάκις 'seldom' (H.); παυρακίς· τὴν πέμπτην Σαμιοθρᾷκες καλοῦσιν 'the pinky finger (Samothr.)' (H.); diminutive παυρίδιος (Hes. Op. 133).
•ETYM Cognate with Lat. parvus 'small'. With different suffixes, Lat. pau-cus 'few', paul(l)us 'small, few' (basic form unclear). Without a suffix, we find Att. παῦ-ς = ►παῖς.

παύω, -ομαι [v.] 'to withhold, hold back, arrest, stop (trans.)', med. 'to cease, stop, run out' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Aor. παῦσαι, -ασθαι, etc.
•COMP Often with prefix, especially ἀνα-, κατα-.
•DER 1. ἀνά-, κατά-, διά-παυμα [n.] 'rest, ease, placation' (Il., Hes.), ἀνάπαυμα also 'fallow land', adj. -ματικός (pap.). 2. ἀνά-, κατά-, διά-παυσις [f.] 'rest, ease, relaxation' (Pi., IA), rare παῦσις (Hp., LXX). 3. παυσ-ωλή (μετα-) [f.] 'id.' (B 386, T 201), probably derived from the aor. παῦσαι. 4. παῦλα (ἀνά-) [f.] 'id.' (Hp., Att.). 5. παυστήρ, -ῆρος (S.), παύστωρ, -ορος (Isyll.) 'stopper, terminator', adj. παυστήριος 'ending' (S.), with ἀνα- 'fit for resting' (Hdt., X.). 6. ἀνα-, κατα-παυστικός 'giving rest, relaxing' (Phld., Ptol.). 7. παυσι- in governing compounds, e.g. παυσί-πονος 'ending pain' (E., Ar.), παυσ-άνεμος 'calming the wind' (A.).
•ETYM Unexplained. The form would allow for a PIE reconstruction peh_2-u-, as per LIV[2] s.v., but there are no certain cognates outside Greek.

παφλάζω [v.] 'to bubble, boil' (N 798). ◄ONOM► •VAR Aeol. -άσδω (Alc.).
•COMP Rarely with ἐκ-, ἐπι-, etc.
•DER παφλάσματα [n.pl.] 'bubbles, bombastic words' (Ar.), ἐκπαφλασμός [m.] 'boiling over' (Arist.).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic reduplicated formation like καχλάζω, βαβράζω, etc. With reduplication, we find the aor. φλαδεῖν 'to crush, tear up (intr.)' (A. Ch. 28 [lyr.]); with ε-vocalism, φλεδών, -όνος [f.] 'babble' (Plu.), φλέδων, -ονος 'babbler' (A., Timo); with long vowel, φληδῶντα· ληροῦντα 'talking nonsense' (H.). A similar onomatopoeia is Lat. blatiō, -īre 'to babble, prate'. See ►φλέω and ►φλύω.

πάχνη [f.] 'hoar-frost, rime', also metaphorically, e.g. of clotted blood (ξ 476). ◄IE $peh_2\acute{k}/\acute{g}$- 'make compact, congeal'► •DER παχν-ήεις (Nonn.), -ώδης (Gp., Hymn. Is.) 'frosty'; -όομαι (also with περι-) [v.] 'to become covered with rime', -όω 'to cover, (make) clot' (P 112).
•ETYM From earlier *πάκ-σν-ᾱ or *πάγ-σν-ᾱ, related to the root of ►πήγνυμι. A similar semantic development is shown by πάγος 'hill; ice, hoar-frost' (see ►πάγη). Compare νύξ … πηγυλίς 'icy-cold' beside πάχνη (ξ 475f.).

παχύς [adj.] 'thick, fat, well-fed, dense, stout' (Il.). ◄IE $b^h\eta\acute{g}^h$-u- 'dense, thick'► •COMP παχυ-μερής 'consisting of thick parts, gross, massive' (Ti. Locr., Arist.); ὑπέρ-παχυς 'too fat' (Hp.).
•DER 1. Compar. πάσσων, only acc. -ονα (Od.), superl. πάχ-ιστος (Il., Call.), -ίων (Arat.), -ύτερος, -ύτατος (IA). 2. πάχετος (rather -ετός [mss.]) = παχύς (θ 187, ψ 191, Hp.); also as a ntr. noun (Nic., Opp.); 3. πάχητες· πλούσιοι, παχεῖς 'wealthy, thick' (H., after πένητες); PN Πάχης, -ητος [m.] (Th.). 4. παχυλῶς 'in large draughts' (Arist.). 5. πάχος [n.] 'thickness, strength, force' (since ι 324). 6. παχύτης (-υτής?) 'thickness'. 7. Denominative παχύνω (sporadicaly with ἐπι-, ἐκ-, συν-, ὑπερ-) [v.] 'to fatten, batten' (IA), πάχυνσις [f.] 'thickening', -τικός 'fattening' (medic.), -υσμός [m.] (Hp.), -υσμα [n.] (Aët.). 8. παχῶσαι [aor.] 'to fatten' (medic., Herm. 33, 343).

•ETYM An old u-stem adjective, cognate with Skt. bahú- 'many, much, numerous', OAv. bəzuuaitē [dat.sg.m.] 'dense', Arm. bazum [adj.] 'much', Hitt. panku- [adj.] 'total'.

πέαρ [n.] · Γλαυκίας λιπαρόν 'radiant' (H.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM A contamination of πῖαρ and στέαρ 'fat', or the result of a phonetic development ia > ea in some dialect.

πεδά [prev.] 'after, with, amidst', = μετά (Aeol., Dor., Arc.). ◂IE ped-* 'foot'▸ •COMP Πεδα-γείτνιος [m.], a month name (Rhodes, etc.) = Att. Μεταγειτνιών.
•ETYM Probably from ped-* 'foot, trace', as attested in πούς, ►πέδον; thus literally 'on the floor, in the tracks, vel sim.'. Compare Arm. y-et, z-het 'after' from het 'trace' (= πέδον). The rare form πετά is probably a contamination with μετά. For the ending -α, compare μετά, ἀνά, διά, etc.

πέδη [f.] 'shackle, fetter' (Il.). ◂IE ped-* 'foot'▸ •VAR Dor. -α, mostly plur. -αι.
•COMP Often as a second member, especially in poetry and in late prose, e.g. ἱστο-πέδη (see on ►ἱστός).
•DER Diminutive πεδίσκη [f.] (Thebes III^{a}), -ιον (EM); πεδήτης [m.] 'fettered, prisoner' (com., Herod., LXX), πέδων, -ωνος [m.] 'id.' (Ar. Fr. 837); denominative πεδάω (rarely with κατα-, ἀμφι-, συν-) [v.] 'to fetter, bind, shackle' (especially poet. since Il.), to which πεδα-τάς [m.] (Dor.) 'fetterer' (AP).
•ETYM Derivative of PIE ped-* 'foot'; cf. ►πέδον and ►πέζα. The same semantics are found in Lat. ped-ica 'shackle', im-ped-iō 'to hinder', ON fjǫturr [m.] 'shackle' (< PGm. fetura-*).

πέδῖλον [n.] 'sole under the foot, sandal', secondarily also of other footwear (Il.; also Hdt. and Plu.). ◂IE? ped-* 'foot'▸ •VAR Mostly plur. -α.
•DIAL Myc. pe-di-ro.
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. χρυσο-πέδιλος 'with golden sandals' (Od.).
•ETYM Derived from ped-* 'foot' with a suffix -ῖλο-. The suffix might be Pre-Greek.

πέδον [n.] 'soil, earth, ground' (Il.). ◂IE ped-o-* [n.] 'trace, footstep'▸ •VAR πέδον-δε (N 796).
•COMP As a second member in δά-πεδον, κράσ-πεδον, etc.; ἔμ-πεδος 'standing on the ground, firm' (epic poet., late prose), whence ἐμπεδόω [v.] 'to confirm, consider inviolable' (Att., etc.); ἄπεδος 'flat' (Hdt., Th., X.) (< sm-pedo-* 'having one surface'); as a first member e.g. in πεδο-βάμων 'earth-walking' (A.). Adverbs πεδ-όσε, -όθεν, -οι (epic poet.).
•DER πεδίον [n.] 'surface, plain, field' (Il.); Cypr. πεδίjα 'plain', fem. after χώρα, γῆ? Thence: 1. πεδιάς, -άδος [f.] 'flat, level, on the plain' (Pi., IA); 2. πεδιεινός (also πεδεινός, -ϊνός) 'flat, level' (IA); 3. πεδιακός 'belonging to the plain', plur. 'inhabitants of the plain of Attica' (Lys. Fr. 238 S., Arist., pap.); 4. πεδιεῖς [m.pl.] 'id.' (Plu., D. L.); 5. πεδιάσιος 'on the plain' (Str., Dsc.); 6. πεδιασιμαῖος = campester (gloss.); 7. πεδιώδης 'flat' (sch.); 8. Πεδιώ [f.] 'goddess of the plain' (Hera; Sicily).

•ETYM Derived from ped-* 'foot'. Cognate forms from PIE pedo-*: Hitt. peda- [n.] 'place', Skt. padá- [n.] 'footstep, piece of ground', OAv. pada-, YAv. paδa- [n.] 'footstep', Lat. oppidum 'fort', U peřum 'ground, place', Arm. het 'footprint', OPr. pedan 'ploughshare', Lith. pėdà, (dial.) pẽdas 'footprint', Latv. pę̂da 'foot-sole, footstep' < ped-o-*; ON fet 'step'.

πέζα [f.] 'instep', usually metaphorically 'foot-end, lower edge, border of a garment, coast, net, mountain range, etc.' (Ω 272, medic., Hell.). ◂IE ped-* 'foot'▸ •DER Independently of the simplex: ἀργυρό-πεζα [adj.f.] 'with silver feet', said of Thetis, etc. (Il.), msc. -πεζος (AP). πεζίς, -ίδος [f.] 'seam' (Ar., Att. inscr.).
•ETYM Derived from ped-* 'foot' with a suffix -ι̯α. A comparable form is found in PGm. fet-ī* [f.] > ON fit, gen. fit-jar 'web', and perhaps also in OHG fizza, MoHG Fitze 'winding, thread'. See ►τράπεζα.

πέζις [m.] 'puffball, lycoperdacea' (Thphr. HP 1, 6, 5). ◂IE pesd-* 'break wind'▸ •ETYM From pesd-*, the root of Lat. pēdō, Gr. βδέω; see Forssman MSS 29 (1971): 47-70.

πεζός [adj.] 'going on foot, living on the land', said of men and animals, 'walker, footsoldier', as a collective 'infantry, land-force' (Il.); metaphorically 'common, prosaic' (Hell. and late). ◂IE ped-* 'foot'▸ •COMP Frequently, e.g. πεζο-μάχας, -ος 'fighting as a footsoldier' (Pi., IA).
•DER πεζικός 'of a πεζός' (Att., etc.), -ίτης [m.] = πεζός (Suid.: ὁπλίτης), -ότης, -ητος [f.] 'being πεζός' (comm. Arist.); πεζεύω [v.] 'to go on foot, be a pedestrian' (Att., Arist.), -ευτικός 'going on foot' (Arist.).
•ETYM Except for the accent, the word is formally identical to Skt. pád-ya- 'regarding the foot' < PIE ped-i̯o-*. See ►πούς.

πεῖ [n.] name of the letter. ◂LW Sem.▸
•VAR Later πῖ.
•ETYM Indeclinable; equal to Semitic pē.

πείθομαι [v.] 'to trust, rely, obey, be persuaded' (Il.). ◂IE b^hid^h-* 'convince, trust'▸ •VAR fut. πείσομαι, aor. πιθέσθαι, πεπιθέσθαι, perf. πέποιθα (all Il.), aor. pass. πεισθῆναι, fut. -θήσομαι, perf. πέπεισ-μαι (Att.), med. πείσασθαι (Hell.), aor. ptc. πιθήσας (Il.), fut. πιθήσω (φ 369); act. πείθω, πείσω, πεπιθεῖν with fut. πεπιθήσω, πεῖσαι (all Il.), πιθεῖν (Pi., A.), πέπεικα (young Att.) 'to convince, persuade'.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐπι-, παρα-, συν-. As a first member in governing compounds, e.g. πείθαρχος 'obedient to the authorities' (A.), PN Πεισίστρατος; as a second member in ἀ-, εὐ-π(ε)ιθής (Thgn., A., Att.), aor. ἀπίθησε (Il.), fut. ἀπιθήσω (K 129, Ω 300); thence πιθήσας and πιθήσω.
•DER A. From the root aorist: 1. πιστός 'faithful, reliable, credible' (Il.), πιστό-της 'faith' (IA), πιστεύω (δια-, κατα-, etc.) [v.] 'to rely, trust, believe, confide' (IA), whence -ευμα, -ευσις, -ευτικός; πιστόομαι (κατα-, συν-, προ-), -όω [v.] 'to trust entirely, warrant, assure; to make reliable' (Il.), whence -ωμα, -ωσις, -ωτής, -ωτικός. 2. πίστις [f.] 'faith, trust, authentication, assurance' (IA), whence πιστικός 'faithful' (Plu., Vett. Val.; if not for πειστικός; see below). 3. πιθανός 'trustworthy, reliable, believable, obedient' (IA), πιθαν-ότης, -όω (Pl., Arist.). 4. πίσυνος 'relying on somebody or something' (mostly epic poet. Il.), probably after θάρσυνος.

B. From the present: 1. Πειθώ [f.] '(goddess of) persuasion, conviction, obedience' (Hes.), thence Boeot. aor. ἐπίθωσε, -σαν (III^a)?; 2. πειθός 'pesuading (easily), persuasive' (Ep. Cor.). 3. πειθήμων 'obedient, persuasive' (late epic).
C. From the present or s-aor. (more recently): 1. πεῖσα [f.] 'obedience', 2. -πειστος as a second member in εὔ-, δυσανά-, ἀμετά-πειστος etc. (Att.), as opposed to older ἄπιστος. 3. πειστικός 'fit for persuasion, convincing' (Pl., Arist.), -ήριος 'id.' (E.). 4. πεῖσμα [n.] 'conviction, confidence' (Plu., Arr., S. E.), -μονή [f.] 'id.' (Ep. Gal., pap.). 5. πεῖσις (παρά-, κατά-) [f.] 'conviction, etc.' (Plot., Hdn., sch.). 6. πειστήρ 'who obeys' (Suid.) 7. Πειστίχη epithet of Aphrodite (Delos).
D. From the perfect: πεποίθ-ησις [f.] 'trust' (LXX, Phld.), -ίαν 'hope, expectation'.
•ETYM Present πείθομαι < PIE pres. or aor. subj. b^{h}eid^h-e/o-*, aor. πιθ- < PIE aor. b^{h}eid^h- /b^{h}id^h-. Cognate with Lat. fīdō, -ere < IE b^{h}eid^h-e/o-*, fīdus 'faithful, reliable', fidēs, -ēī 'trust, guarantee', foedus, -eris [n.] 'treaty, agreement'; Alb. bē [f.] 'oath', besë [f.] 'faith', bindem 'to be convinced, believe'; OCS běda 'distress, necessity' < b^{h}oid^h-eh$_2$*, běditi 'to force, persuade', 1sg. běždǫ < b^{h}oid^h-eie-*. Probably also related to Go. beidan 'to wait', baidjan 'to force', OE bǣdan, OHG beitten 'to demand'.

πείνη [f.] 'hunger, famine' (ο 407, Pl.). ◄?►
•VAR More recent πεῖνα (Pl. Resp. 437d, Arist.).
•COMP γεω-πείνης 'hungry for land, without land' (Hdt.); with transition to the o-stems, ὀξύ-πεινος 'very hungry' (Arist.), πρόσ-πεινος 'hungry' (medic., Act. Ap. 10, 10).
•DER πειν-αλέος 'hungry' (com., Plu., AP; after διψαλέος et al.), -ώδης 'id.' (Gal.). Verbal forms: ptc. πεινάων (Il.), inf. πεινήμεναι (υ 137), πειν-ῆν, -ῇς, -ῇ (Ar., Pl.), fut. -ήσω, aor. -ῆσαι, perf. πε-πείνηκα (Hdt., Att.) [v.] 'to hunger, be hungry'; later πεινᾶν, -ᾷ, -ά̄σω, -ᾶσαι (LXX); rarely with δια-, ὑπο-, ὑπερ-, ἀνα-. Gr. πείνη could be a back-formation to πεινῆν, like δίψα to διψῆν.
•ETYM Fur.: 339, 378 compares ἠ-παν-ᾷ, -εῖ 'flows off', which is rather doubtful. According to De Lamberterie RPh. 74 (2000): 280, πεῖνα may be the older form; in that case, short -α may be the Pre-Greek ending.

πεῖρα [f.] 'test, research, experience' (Alcm., Thgn., Pi., IA). ◄IE per-* 'cross, pass'► •COMP ἔμ-πειρος 'experienced'; ἱππο-πείρης [m.] 'horse specialist' (Anacr. 75, 6), μονο-πεῖραι (λύκοι) 'hunting alone' (Arist., Men.); ἀπείρων 'unexperienced' (S.). Backformations such as ἀνά-, ἀπό-, διά-πειρα (Pi., IA) from ἀνα-πειράομαι, etc.; ταλαπείριος 'who has suffered much'.
•DER Three denominatives: 1. πειράομαι (more rarely -άω, often with prefix like ἀνα-, δια-, ἀπο-, ἐκ-) [v.] 'to tempt, put to the test, try' (Il.). Thence πειρᾱτής [m.] 'pirate' (Hell.), -τικός 'belonging to pirates' (Str., Ph.), -τεύω [v.] 'to act like a pirate' (LXX); πειρατήριον (Ion. -ητ-) [n.] '(juridical) trial' (Hp., E.). 'gang of pirates, pirates' nest' (LXX, Str.), πειρητήριος 'exploring, trying' (Hp.); πείρασις [f.] 'temptation, assault' (Th., D. C.; may also belong to 2.). 2. πειράζω, aor. -άσαι, -ασθῆναι (also with κατα-, ἐκ-, ἀπο-, etc.) [v.] 'to tempt, put to the test, assault' (Od., Arist., Hell.), fut. πειράξω (Cret.), κατα-πειράσω (Lys.). Thence πειρ-ασμός [m.] 'temptation' (LXX, NT), -αστής [m.] 'tempter' (Ammon. Gramm.), -αστικός 'belonging to, fit for tempting, trying' (Arist.), ἀπείραστος 'unexperienced, untempted' (Hell.). 3. πειρητίζω (only present) [v.] 'to tempt, explore, assault' (Il.).

•ETYM From PGr. per-i̯a* (Aeol. πέρρα acc. to Choerob. An. Ox. 2, 252), from the root per-* 'to cross, pass'. See further ►πείρω and ►περάω.

πεῖραρ, -ατος [n.] 'end, boundary, outcome, goal, decision' (Il.); epic also 'rope, cable'. ◄IE per-ur* / per-u(e)n-* 'ford, crossing'► •VAR mostly plur. -ατα (περ(ρ)άτων Alc.), younger πεῖρας (Pi.), πέρας (Att.).
•COMP As a second member in ἀ-πείρων (Il.), remade into an o-stem ἄ-πειρος (Pi., Ion., trag., Pl., Arist.) 'endless, unlimited', also ἀ-πε(ί)ρατος 'id.' (Pi., Ph.); here also ἀπειρέσιος, ἀπείριτος; ἀπέρονα· πέρας μὴ ἔχοντα 'without boundary' (H.); πολυ-πείρων 'with many (wide) boundaries' (h. Cer. 296, Orph.).
•DER 1. πειραίνω (Hom.), περαίνω (Att.), aor. πειρῆναι, περᾶναι (also with δια-, συν-, etc.) [v.] 'to bring to an end, finish, conclude', ἀ-πέραντος (-εί-) 'unlimited' (Pi., Att.), περαντικός 'conclusive' (Ar., Arist.), συμπέρασμα [n.] 'end, conclusion' (Arist.), -ματικός (Arist.). 2. περατόομαι, -όω (also with ἀπο-, συν-) [v.] 'to end, bring to an end, limit' (Arist.), ἀποπεράτ-ωσις (medic.). 3. ἀπο-περατίζω 'to end' (sch.). 4. περατεύει· ὁρίζει 'delimits' (H.). Also περάτη [f.] 'extremity of the heavens' (ψ 243, Arat., Call.), after the superlatives; περάτ-ηθεν 'from the boundary, from beyond' (A. R.).
•ETYM From a basic form πέρϝαρ* with PIE r/n-inflexion, from the root per-* 'to cross, pass through'. From the n-stem, Greek derived ἀ-πείρων; πεῖρας, ►πέρας are remakes as well. Compare Skt. párur [nom.acc.sg.n.], párvaṇas [gen.abl.] 'knot, joint, section'. The mg. 'rope, cable' may derive from the use of ropes for measuring or delimiting a space. See further ►πείρω and ►πέρᾱ.

πείρινθα [acc.sg.f.] 'basket on a cart' (ο 131, Ω 190). ◄PG(S)► •VAR Gen.sg. -ινθος (A. R. 3, 873), nom.sg. πείρινς (gramm.).
•ETYM Like many words in -νθ-, this word is probably Pre-Greek. Several TNs have been connected with it: Πειρήνη, Πειραιεύς, etc.

πείρω [v.] 'to perforate, pierce, pervade' (Il.); as a simplex epic poet., with prefix also in (late) prose. ◄IE per-* 'cross, pass'► •VAR Aor. πεῖραι, perf. midd. πέπαρμαι, aor. pass. παρῆναι (Hdt.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. δια-, ἀνα-, κατα-, περι-.
•DER A. With e-grade: 1. διαμπερ-ές [adv.] 'right through, continuously' (Il.). 2. περ-όνη [f.] 'brooch, buckle' (Il.), also -ονίς, -όνιον, -ονίδιον, -ονάω, -όνημα, -ονητήρ, -ονητρίς.
B. With o-grade: 1a. πόρος [m.] 'passage, ford, narrowing, journey, road, way; means, way out', plur. 'earnings' (Il.), whence πορ-εύς, -ιμος; b. πορεύομαι, -εύω [v.] 'to carry, provide' (IA), whence -εία, -εῖον, -ευμα, -ευσις, -ευτικός; c. πορίζω, -ίζομαι 'to bring about, provide oneself' (IA), whence -ισμός, -ισμα, -ιστής, -ιστικός. As a second member in ἄ-πορος 'without escape, impassable, destitute' (Pi., IA), whence ἀπορέω, -ία. 2. πορθμός [m.] 'ferry, strait, sound, etc.' (IA), whence -θμίς, -θμιος, -θμικός, -θμεύς, -θμεύω, -θμεία, -θμεῖον, -θμευμα et al.

•ETYM Gr. πείρω < *per-i̯e/o-, πόρος < *por-o-, πορ-θμός < *por-dʰmo-. The old meaning 'to carry over, ferry over' is still found in Greek in πόρος, πορθμός. Cognates are Skt. píparti [3sg.act.pres.], aor. pārṣ- 'to bring across', Av. (fra)frā [1sg.subj.aor.act.] 'to cross', YAv. pāraiia- 'to bring, lead'; Go. faran 'to wander', farjan 'to ferry over'; Lat. portāre 'to carry, transport' (denominative). See also ►πορεῖν and ►πέρνημι.

πεῖσμα [n.] 'rope, cable' (Il.). ◄IE *bʰendʰ- 'bind'► •DER πεισμάτ-ιον 'navel-string' (sch.), -ιος 'concerning cables' (Orph.); also -ικός 'cable-like' = 'persistent, unaccommodating' (pap., Eust.)?
•ETYM From *πένθ-σμα, derived from the PIE verb 'to bind', which Greek may have retained in ►πάσχω, albeit in a totally different meaning. An isolated derivative is ►πενθερός; ►φάτνη is unrelated. The zero grade *bʰn̥dʰ-sm- might be preserved in πάσμα· ᾧ συνήρτηται πρὸς τὸ φυτὸν τὸ φύλλον 'by which the leaf is joined to the plant' (H.); a mixed form is πέσμα· ἤ πεῖσμα, ἤ μίσχος 'stalk, husk, shell'. ἔστι δὲ ἐξ οὗ τὸ φύλλον ἤρτηται 'by means of which the leaf is attached' (H.).

πέκω [v.]. 'to comb (oneself), card, shear' (Il.). ◄IE *peḱ- 'pluck, card'► •VAR πείκετε (σ 316) and πείκειν (Hes. Op. 775) are metri causa; aor. πέξαι, -ασθαι.
•DIAL Myc. po-ka /pokā/ 'shorn wool'.
•COMP Also with ἀπο-. Furthermore πόκ-υφος [m.] 'wool weaver' (pap. IIᵃ); εἰρο-πόκος 'wool-fleeced', εὔ-ποκος 'with fair wool' (A.); νεόποκος 'newly shorn' (μαλλός, S.).
•DER 1. πόκος [m.] 'sheep's wool, fleece' (M 451, Hell.), ποκ-άριον (Sammelb. III--IVᵖ), -άδες [f.pl.] 'lock or tuft of wool or hair' (Ar.), Πόκιος [m.] "shearing month", Locr. month name (inscr.); verbs: ποκίζομαι 'to shear wool' (Theoc.), whence -ισμός, -ιστί (pap.); -άζω 'id.' (sch., Suid.); -όομαι 'to be covered, as if with a fleece' (AP). 2. πόκτος [m.] = πόκος (Lyr. Adesp. 73, Hdn.). 3. πέκος [n.] 'id.' (An. Ox. 3, 358), πεῖκος· ἔριον, ξάμμα '(carded) wool' (H.). 4. πεκτήρ (Suid.), ποκτήρ (pap. IIᵖ; after πόκος) [m.] 'shearer'. Enlarged verb πεκ-τέω 'to shear wool' (Ar.).
•ETYM Gr. πέκω < PIE *peḱ-e/o-; cf. Lith. pešù, pèšti 'to pluck, pull out'; for πεκτ-έω < *peḱ-t-, cf. Lat. pectō 'to comb, card', OHG fehtan 'to battle' (if originally 'to pluck each other'). Gr. πέκος phonetically agrees with Lat. pecus [n.] '(small) cattle, sheep' < PIE *peḱ-e/os- [n.]; πόκος is probably an innovation. Latin has a present *pekte/o- and a noun pecten, with unknown quantity of the final vowel in the nom.sg. (Sommer in De Vaan 2008). Traditionally, a present with a suffix *-t-e/o- is reconstructed on the basis of Lat. pectō and Gr. πεκτέω, but this formation is very rare in IE. The alternative reconstruction proposed by Pinault MSS 62 (2006) is therefore quite attractive: reduplicated *pe-pḱ- with dissimilation to *petḱ-, whence the n-stem *petḱ-n-, *ptḱ-én- 'comb'. A reduplicated present fits the repetitive meaning of 'to comb, pluck' very well. See also ►κτείς.

πέλαγος [n.] 'high seas, sea' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•COMP Late: πελαγο-δρόμος 'sailing on, flying over the sea' (Orph., PMag. Par.), εὐ-πελαγής 'lying by a fair sea' (Orph.).
•DER πελάγ-ιος 'belonging to the sea' (trag., Th., X., Arist.; after ἅλ-ιος, θαλάσσ-ιος), -ικός 'id.' (Plu.), -ῖτις [f.] 'id.' (AP); -αῖος epithet of Poseidon (Paus.). Verbs: πελαγίζω (also with ἐν-) [v.] 'to form a sea, be flooded, be out in the open sea, sail the sea' (Hdt., X., Str.), -ισμοί [pl.] 'experiences at sea' vel sim. (Alciphr.); -όομαι 'to form a sea, overflow' (Ach. Tat.).
•ETYM Frisk connects πέλαγος with ►πλάξ, -ακός [f.] 'plain, plain of the sea, etc.', πλάγ-ιος 'athwart, transverse, sloping, curved', and ►πέλανος. However, nothing confirms a connection of πέλαγος with the root *pelh₂- 'to spread out', and the connection with πλαγ/κ- is phonetically impossible. Thus, the word rather seems to be Pre-Greek.

πέλανος [m.] 'liquid flour dough, flour pulp, honey and oil', often presented as a sacrifice, 'sacificial cake' (A., E., Pl., Att. inscr., Herod.); name of a weight or coin (Delph., Arg. V--IIIᵃ), = ὀβολός (Nic. Al. 488). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also -ός (Hdn. Gr. 1, 178).
•DER Cf. πέλανορ· τὸ τετράχαλκον 'a coin', πέλαινα· πόπανα, μειλίγματα 'round cakes, propitiations' (H.). On πελάχνιν· τρύβλιον ἐκπέταλον 'outspread cup or bowl' (H.) see πέταχνον (s.v. ►πετάννυμι).
•ETYM The original meaning and etymology are uncertain. If the original mg. was 'flat cake, flat dough', which the coin name πέλανος in particular seems to evidence, πέλανος could be derived from PIE *pelh₂- 'to be flat, level' as *pelh₂-no-. Fur.: 338 compares πέλαινα, and concludes that it is a Pre-Greek word. The argument is uncertain, but the conclusion may well be correct.

πελᾱργός [m.] 'stork' (Ar., Pl. Alc. 1, 135d, Arist.); also = ἄγγος τι κεράμεον 'kind of earthen vessel' (H.), after the form? ◄?►
•VAR The length of the α is mentioned by Phrynichos 88.
•DER πελαργ-ιδεύς [m.] 'young stork' (Ar., Plu.), -ικός 'of a stork' (H., Suid.), -ώδης 'stork-like' (Str.), -ῖτις [f.] 'kind of ἀναγαλλίς 'pimpernel' and γεράνιον 'crane' (Ps.-Dsc.). Denominative ἀντι-πελαργ-έω 'to show love in return (like storks do)' (Aristaenet., Iamb.); ἀντιπελάργ-ωσις, -ησις, -ία (Com. Adesp. 939, 1570). On Πελαργικόν (τεῖχος), see ►Πελασγοί.
•ETYM Uncertain. EM 659, 7 already connected the name with the black and white feathers of a stork; Kretschmer Glotta 3 (1910-1912): 294f. therefore analyses the word as *πελαϝ-αργός, from ἀργός 'white' and *πελαϝός 'blackish' (connected to Lith. pal̃vas 'sallow', πελιός, etc.). This seems improbable.

πέλας [adv.] 'near, nearby' (Od.). ◄IE *pelh₂- 'approach'► •VAR ὁ πέλας 'next, nearest, neighbour' (IA).
•DER 1. πελά-της, Dor. -τας [m.] 'one who comes near, serf, jobber' (trag., Pl.), [f.] -τις (Plu.), with -τικός (D. H.); ἐμπελάτειρα [f.] = πελάτις (Call., Euph.); 2. πέλασις [f.] (ἐμ-, προσ-) 'approach' (S. E., Procl.); 3. ἄ-πλητος (epic), ἄ-πλᾱτος (Dor., trag.) 'unapproachable, appalling'; 4. πλᾶτις, -ιδος [f.] 'wife' (Ar., Lyc.); 5. τειχεσι-πλῆτα [voc.] epithet of Ares (E 31, 455); 6. πλήτης· πλησιαστής 'neighbour' (H.).

Adverb πλησίον (Il.), Aeol. πλᾱ́-σιον, Dor. πλᾱτίον 'near', adjective πλησίος 'standing nearby, neighbouring' (Il., epic Ion.); πλησιό-χωρος 'neighbouring' (IA), πλησι-ότης [f.] 'neighbourhood' (A. D.); πλησι-άζω (Dor. πλᾱτι-) 'to approach, accompany, associate with' (Att.), whence -ασμός, -ασμα, -ασις (Arist.).
•ETYM Clearly related to the verbs meaning 'to approach' (see below), but the morphological analysis is unclear. Gr. πέλας has been explained as an old nom.sg. 'who is near'; the forms in πλη-, πλᾱ- reflect the zero grade plh$_2$-. See ►δασπλῆτις, ►πίλναμαι, ►πλᾱ́θω, ►πλήν, and ►πλήσσω.

πέλεθος [m.] 'ordure'. ⇒σπέλεθος.

πέλεθρον [n.]⇒πλέθρον.

πέλεια [f.] 'wild pigeon' (Il.). ◄IE pel-* 'gray'► •VAR πελειάς, gen. -άδος, mostly plur. -άδες [f.].
•COMP As a first member in πελειο-θρέμμων 'feeding pigeons' (A.); also metaphorically as a name of the priestesses of the sanctuary at Dodona (Hdt., S., Paus.).
•DER πελείους· Κῷοι καὶ οἱ Ἠπειρῶται τοὺς γέροντας καὶ τὰς πρεσβύτιδας 'old men and women in Cos and Epirus' (H.).
•ETYM The msc. πελείους is a secondary innovation. The bird was clearly named after its color, like e.g. Lat. palumbēs 'dove', palleō 'to be pale'. It could reflect a u-stem *πελύς 'grey', cognate with πελιός, πολιός, πελιτνός. The priestesses in Dodona (like the aged people in Cos and Epirus) were called "doves" because of the color of their hair. Cf. ►πελιδνός.

πελεκάν, -ᾶνος [m.] 'pelican' (Anaxandr. Com., Arist.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Cf. πελεκανός 'fulica' (gloss.).
•DER πελεκᾶς, -ᾶντος [m.] 'green woodpecker' (Ar. Av.); πελεκῖνος [m.] 'pelican' (Ar. Av., Dionys. Av.); more usually as the name of several plants, "axeweed", especially 'Securigera Coronilla' (Hp., Thphr., Dsc.), and in the architectural technical expression 'dovetail' (Ph. Bel., Hero Bel.).
•ETYM Derived from πέλεκυς 'axe' because of the functional and/or formal similarity with an axe. For πελεκάν, compare especially the ethnonyms in -άν (Ἀκαρνάν, etc.). Fur. 320 compares σπέλεκτος· πελεκάν (H.).

πέλεκυς [m.] 'axe, double axe, hatchet' (Il.). ◄PG(S,V)► •VAR Gen. -εως, Ion. -εος; also βέλεκκος, see below.
•DIAL Myc. pe-re-ku-wa-na-ka (?, Puhvel KZ 73, 221f.).
•COMP ἑξα-πέλεκυς = Lat. sexfascalis (Plb.), σφυρο-πέλεκυς 'hammer-axe' (Att. inscr.); ἡμι-πέλεκκον [n.] "half-axe", 'axe with one edge' (Ψ 851) (< adj. *ἡμι-πέλεκϝ-ος 'consisting of half an axe').
•DER Diminutive πελέκ-ιον (Att. inscr.), πέλεκκον (-ος) 'axe-handle' (N 612, Poll., H.; from -κϝ-ον), πελεκυ-νάριον 'id.' (Theo Sm.); πελεκᾶς, -ᾶτος 'axe-smith' (Ostr. I^a). Denominatives: 1. πελεκ-άω (-εκκάω ε 244 < *-εκϝ-άω; rarely with ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐκ-, κατα-) 'to cut with an axe' (ε 244), whence -ημα, -ησις, -ητής, -ήτωρ, -ητρίς, -ητός (Hell.); 2. πελεκίζω (ἀπο- AB) 'to chop off with an axe', especially 'to behead'

(Plb., Str.), whence -ισμός (D. S.). The gloss πέλεκρα· ἀξίνη 'axe' is obscure and may be late. Gr. πέλυξ 'id.' (LXX, pap.) on the model of instrument names in -υξ, whence πελύκ-ιον (Peripl. M. Rubr., pap.).
•ETYM Compare Skt. paraśú- [m.] 'axe, battle-axe', Oss. færæt 'axe' (from Iranian into Tocharian: ToA porat, ToB peret 'axe') < QPIE peleḱu-*. These words have long been identified with Akk. pilakku, which however never means 'axe', but rather 'spindle'. Thus, this comparison must be given up. Fur.: 150f. points to βέλεκκος· ὄσπριόν τι ἐμφερὲς λαθύρῳ μέγεθος ἐρεβίνθου ἔχον 'pulse resembling a λ. with the size of a chick-pea' (H.). Further, compare his notes 39 and 40. He also assumes that the -κκ- represents Pre-Greek gemination. πέλεκρα, too, may be a Pre-Greek formation, like πέλυξ.

πελεμίζω [v.] 'to vibrate, shake', pass. 'to tremble' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Aor. -ίξαι, -ιχθῆναι.
•ETYM Denominative formation in -ίζω, from an unknown noun, *πέλεμα vel sim. Possible cognates are identified in Germanic, e.g. in the compounds Go. us-film-a 'frightened, appalled' (usfilmei 'fright, horror'), ON felms-fullr 'full of frightening', which would presuppose a noun PGm. felma-* 'fright'. If the suffix was -mo-*, one could connect it to πάλλω 'to sway, rock'. Another cognate may be ►πόλεμος. Fur.: 151 calls πελεμ- "entschieden ungriechisch"; the suffix -εμ- would be Pre-Greek.

πελιδνός [adj.] 'blue, dark color, pale, bloodshot' (Hp., Arist., Nic.; also Th. and com.?) ◄IE? peli-* 'pale, grey'► •VAR πελιτνός (Att. according to gramm.; perhaps to be restored in Th. 2, 49, Alex. 110, 17 et al.).
•DER πελιδν-ήεις (Marc. Sid.), -αῖος (Nonn.), whence -ότης [f.] 'blue stain' (Aret., Gal.), -όομαι [v.] 'to turn blue, etc.' (Hp., Arist.), whence -ωμα, -ωσις (medic.). Also πελιός 'blue, dark' (Hp., D., Thphr., Nic., etc.), πελι-ώδης (sch.), -ότης [f.] (medic.), -όομαι (Hellanic., Hp., LXX), whence -ωσις, -ωμα (medic., sch.), -αίνομαι (Hp.); πελλός (πέλλος?) 'dark-colored' (S. Fr.?, Arist., Theoc.), -ᾶς [m.] 'old person, very old man' (Hdn., H.). With γ-enlargement: πελιγόνες [m.pl.] = γέροντες (Lac., Massal.), = οἱ ἐν τιμαῖς (Macedonian acc. to Str. 7 Fr. 2); πελιγᾶνες· οἱ ἔνδοξοι. παρὰ δὲ Σύροις οἱ βουλευταί 'esteemed ones, in Syrian councillors' (H.).
•ETYM Traditionally explained as an enlargement of πελιός, or a transformation of older πελι-τν-ός, which would have the same combination of suffixes as Skt. páliknī [f.] < pali-t-n-ī* 'grey' beside msc. pali-t-á- (would be Gr. *πελιτός; thence perhaps πελιτ-νός after the fem.?). An i-stem has been assumed as the basic form, which may be retained in πελιός (probably for *πελι-ϝό-ς), and perhaps also in πελλός (if from *πελιός). See on ►πέλεια for a different formation. ► See also ►πολιός.

πέλλα 1 [f.] 'milk pail', also 'drinking bowl, goblet' (Π 642, Hippon., Theoc., Nic.). ◄PG? (S, V)► •VAR Also -η acc. to Arc. 108, 1.
•DER πελλίς, -ίδος [f.] 'id.' (Hippon., Hell. poetry); πέλιξ, -ικος [f.] = κύλιξ or προχοΐδιον (Cratin.); -ίκη, Aeol. -ίκα [f.] = χοῦς, λεκάνη 'a liquid measure = 12 κοτύλαι; dish, pot or pan' (Poll.); πελλίχνη [f.] = πέλλα (Alcm., Hell. poetry; after κύλ-ιξ, -ίχνη; cf. further ἑλίκ-η from ἕλιξ). πελλητήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'milk pail, drinking bowl' (Hell. authors in Ath. 11, 495e), πελλαντῆρα· ἀμολγέα 'milk pail' (H.) (to *πελλαίνω).

•ETYM The comparison with Lat. pēluis [f.] 'bowl, dish' or Skt. pālavī [f.] 'kind of barrel, vessel', pārī [f.] 'milk-pail' is unconvincing, and does not lead to a PIE reconstruction. Fur.: 134 posits a Pre-Greek word because of the vacillation -ικ-, -υκ- (and -λ-, -λλ-).

πέλλα 2 [f.] · λίθος 'stone' (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Cf. φελλεύς below.
•ETYM Assuming PGr. *πελσᾱ, it has been connected with OHG felis 'rock', MIr. all 'crag' (< PCl. palso-*), Skt. pāṣāṇá- [m.] 'stone, rock', Psht. parśa 'id.' (< IIr. pars-, IE pels-); however, the variation pelso- / peliso-* does not seem IE (cf. Fur.: 162[77]). The noun could be identical to the Macedonian town Πέλλα. Fur.: 161f. further compares φελλεύς 'stony ground', which shows a different anlauting consonant, and therefore points to Pre-Greek origin.

πελλοράφος [comp.] an artisan who sews together hides (gloss.). ⊲LW Lat.⊳ •ETYM Hybrid form containing Lat. pellis 'hide' and ῥάπτω.

πέλλῡτρα [n.pl.] 'foot-wrapper, foot bandage' (A. Fr. 259 = 435 M., S. Fr. 1080; H., who also gives the suspicious forms πελλασταί, πελλύτα and πελλύτεμα). ⊲IE? ped-* 'foot'⊳ •ETYM Analyzed as *πεδ-ϝλῡ-τρα, a compound of πεδ- 'foot (see ►πούς) and the root εἰλύω 'to wrap', with a suffix -τρο-. Nevertheless, monosyllabic ϝλυ- and its length are surprising.

πέλμα [n.] 'sole of the foot or shoe' (Hippon., Hp., LXX, Hell.). ⊲IE? pel-* 'hide'⊳ •COMP As a second member in βαθύ-, δί-, μονό-πελμος (AP, Edict. Diocl.).
•DER κατα-πελματόομαι 'to be soled' (LXX), πελματίζω 'to sole' (pap. VI[p]), 'to sleek the soles' (Anon. on EM 659, 43).
•ETYM For the formation PIE pel-mn* 'skin, hide', compare OS filmen, OFris. filmene, OS æger-felma 'pellicle of an egg'. With n-suffix: Lat. pellis < pel-n-i-* 'skin, hide', Lith. plėnė̃ 'membrane', OPr. pleynis 'cerebral membrane', Ru. plená 'membrane' < pl-ēn-(i)ā-*; OCS pelena 'band for swathing children', Ru. pelená 'shroud, (dial.) nappy', Sln. plẹ́na 'bandage' < pel-en-h_2-*, OHG fel, -lles, OE fell, ON fjall [n.] 'hide' < PGm. fel-n-*. Perhaps ►ἐρυσίπελας [n.] name of a skin-disease belongs here as well. There is no corresponding primary verb. See also ►πέλτη, ►ἐπίπλοον, and ►σπολάς.

πέλομαι [v.] 'to stir' (in compounds), 'to become, take place, be' (Il.). ⊲IE k^wlh_1-* 'go round'⊳ •VAR More rarely πέλω, aor.med. 2sg. ἔπλεο, 3sg. -το, act. ἔπλε (M 11; v.l. ἦεν).
•COMP Also with prefix (especially in aor.ptc. περι-, ἐπι-πλόμενος).
•DER 1. πόλος [m.] 'axis, world axis, pole, vault of heaven, disc of the sundial, etc.' (IA); denominative ptc. ὁ πολεύων (Cod. Astr., PMag. et al.). 2. -πόλος in compounds like αἰ-πόλος, ►δικασπόλος, ἱπποπόλος 'horse-breeding' (Il.), νυκτιπόλος 'travelling by night' (E. [lyr.]); τρίπολος 'ploughed thrice' (Hom., Hes.); from the prefixed verbs are derived ἀμφίπολος (see s.v.), περίπολος, etc. 3. deverbatives: a. πολέω, -έομαι (often with prefix, e.g. ἀμφι-, ἀνα-, περι-, προσ-) [v.] 'to go about, wander around, take care of, etc.' (Pi., Att., etc.); also with nominal first member, e.g. πυρ-πολέω 'to watch a fire' (Od., X.), 'to ravage with fire, destroy' (IA); here belong, partly as back-formations: περί-, πρόσ-πολος, πυρ-πόλος, πύρ-πολος, etc.; trans. 'to turn (said of the earth), root up, plough' (Hes. Op. 462, Nik. Al. 245). b. πολεύω (χ 223, trans. S. [lyr.]) 'id.', from ἀμφι-πολεύω (epic Od., Hdt.), metri causa for -έω; c. πωλέομαι (also with ἐπι-) [v.] 'to come or go frequently' (Il.) ἐπιπώλησις [f.] 'muster, review of the army' (name of Il. 4, 250ff. in gramm., Str., Plu.).

•ETYM Greek has a thematic present πέλομαι, -ω < PIE k^welh_1-e/o-*, like Lat. colō, -ere (< k^wel-e/o-*) 'to build upon, inhabit, attend, honor', Skt. cárati 'to move around, wander, drive (on the meadow), graze', Alb. siell 'to turn around, turn, bring'. The zero grade them. aor. ἔ-πλ-ετο has no counterpart. Because of π- before ε, πέλομαι must be an Aeolic form; the expected τ- of Ionic-Attic is seen in ►τέλομαι, ►τέλλομαι, τελέθω, ►τέλος. The PIE connotation of cattle-breeding and agriculture is preserved in compounds such as ►αἰπόλος, ►βουκόλος, τρί-πολος. The formal similarity of πωλέομαι and the Skt. causative cāráyati is secondary. Whereas πόλος may be a productive o-derivative from the verb, ►ἀμφίπολος (= Lat. anculus) and several words for 'car, wagon' (see ►κύκλος) may be inherited nominals. Note also περίπολος 'patrolling guardian' (Epich., Att.) = Skt. (Ved.) paricará- [m.] 'servant'. See ►πάλιν, ►τῆλε, ►ἐμπολή, and ►ἔπιπλα.

πέλτη [f.] 'small light shield without an edge, mostly made of wattle-work, with a cover of leather' (Hdt., Tab. Heracl., Att.). ⊲LW? Thrac.⊳ •DIAL Dor. -ᾱ.
•COMP As a first member in πελτο-φόρος (X., Plb.), Boeot. -φόρας, also -α-φόρας = πελταστής.
•DER Diminutive πελτ-ίον (Men.), -ίδιον (sch.), -άριον (Callix., Luc.). Denominative πελτάζω [v.] 'to bear a shield' (X., App.), πελτ-αστής 'shield-bearer, peltast, lightly-armed man' (Att.), -αστικός 'of a peltast' (Att.). A probable back-formation is κατα-πελτάζω 'to overpower with peltasts' (Ar. Ach. 160).
•ETYM Acc. to Hdt. 7, 75 and other sources, the πέλτη was carried by the Thracians; thus perhaps it is a loanword. Usually connected with ►πέλμα, Lat. pellis, etc. as a derivation in -t-. Semantically, this is quite possible, but there are no good cognates with a t-suffix.

πέλτης [m.] 'the pickled Nile fish κορακῖνος' (Diph. Siph apud Ath. 121b, H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Unknown. See Strömberg 1943: 131 and Thompson 1947 s.v.

πέλτον [n.] 'base of an altar, tomb' (inscr. Lycaonia). ⊲LW Asia Minor⊳ •ETYM LW from Asia Minor, belonging to Hitt. palzaḫḫa- 'pedestal, base' (Haas Jahrbuch für kleinasiatische Forschung 3 (1953): 132); accepted by Neumann 1961: 99f.

πέλυξ ⇒πέλεκυς and πέλλα 1.

πέλωρ [n.] 'monster, monstrosity' (Hom., Hes., h. Ap., Nonn.). ⊲?⊳

•VAR Plur. πέλωρα beside sing. πέλωρον [n.].
•DER Adj. πέλωρ-ος (certainly first in Hes.), older and more usual -ιος (Il.), 'monstrous, enormous'. Diminutive πελωρ-ίς (Xenocr. Med.), -άς (Hell. and late poetry) [f.] 'kind of shell'.
•ETYM Old formation in -ωρ (to which perhaps the PN πελάρης [Styra] belongs). Hesychius gives the variants τέλωρ· πελώριον, μακρόν, μέγα 'long, big' and τελώριος· μέγας, πελώριος 'big, monstrous' (H., also grave inscr. Memphis I[a]). This suggests an original *k^w-, and Aeolic origin for πέλωρ. Frisk compares τέρας 'marvel, monster' and suggests that πέλωρ arose from dissimilation of *k^w*erōr*; however, the latter would not easily explain τέρας (from *k^w*erh₂-s*?), so this word is better left aside. Thus, πέλωρ remains without etymology.

πέμπελος [adj.] 'old, old man' (Lyc. 682, 826). Glossed by Gal. 6, 380 as παρὰ τὸ ἐκπέμπεσθαι εἰς Ἀιδου πομπήν 'after the sending of a procession to Hades', 'id.' in Suid.; H. gives στωμύλον, λάλον, οἱ δὲ λίαν γηραλέον 'wordy, loquacious; very old'. ◄?► •ETYM Galen's explanation is a folk etymology based on the similarity with πέμπω. Blanc RPh. 72 (1998): 134 proposes reduplicated *πελ-πελ- > πέμπελος, from the root for 'grey' seen in πελιδνός, πελιός (see also Blanc KZ 110 (1997): 233f.).

πέμπω [v.] 'to send, dispatch, guide, accompany', med. (mostly with prefix) also 'to send for someone, fetch'. ◄?► •VAR Aor. πέμψαι, fut. πέμψω (Hom.), aor. pass. πεμφθῆναι (Pi.), perf. πέπομφα (IA), med. πέπεμμαι (Att.).
•COMP Very often with different prefixes, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐκ-, ἐπι-, μετα-, προ-.
•DER 1. πομπή (ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐκ-, προ-, etc.) [f.] 'conduct, escort, procession, pompa' (Il.). 2. πομπός [m.], also [f.] 'escort, messenger' (Il.), also adj. 'guiding, bringing a message' (A., Ael.); prefixed compounds, e.g. προπομπ-ός 'escort, escortess, guide (m./f.), guiding, escorting' (A., X.); as a second member in compounds, e.g. ψυχο-πομπ-ός 'guide of souls' (E.). From 1. or 2. (not always discernable): a. πομπ-αῖος 'guiding, leading' (Pi., trag.), ἀπο- (LXX, Ph.); b. -ιμος 'id.' (Pi., trag.), 'sent off' (S.), also ἀνα-, δια-, etc. (D. S., Luc.); c. -ικός 'belonging to the procession' (X., Hell. and late); d. -ιος 'led' (Plot.); e. -ίλος [m.] name of a fish that accompanies ships, 'Naucrates ductor' (Erinna, A. R.); f. πομπεύω (προ-, συμ-, ἐπι-, δια-) [v.] 'to escort, guide, partake in a procession' (Il.); thence πόμπευ-σις, -τής, -τήριος, -τικός; -εῖα [pl.], -εία [f.]; probably also, as back-formation, πομπεύς 'escort, partaker of a procession' (Od., Att.). 3. πέμψις (mostly with ἀπό-, ἔκ-, ἐπι-, μετά-, etc.) [f.] 'sending' (IA). 4. πεμπτήρ 'escort' (S. Fr. 142 II 10 [lyr.]); προπεμπτήρ-ιος 'escorting' (Philostr. VA), ἀπο-, προ-πεμπ-τικός (Men. Rh.); 5. ► εὐπέμπελος.
•ETYM All forms belong to productive derivational patterns. The verb has no IE etymology, nor does it show characteristics of loanwords or Pre-Greek vocabulary.

πεμφηρίς [f.] a small fish mentioned by Numen. apud Ath. 309f. ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown. Cf. Thompson s.v.

πέμφιξ, -ῖγος [f.] poetic word of unstable mg., partly due to the artificialities of Hell. poets: 'bubble of air or water' (secondarily of the soul), 'blister on the skin, drop (of water or blood), drizzle, spraying spark, also said of the sunlight' (Ibyc., trag., Hell. poetry). ◄PG?►
•DER πεμφιγώδης 'full of vesications' (Hp.). πεμφίς, only attested in the gen.pl. -ίδων (Lyc. 686; v.l. -ίγων). With o-grade: πομφός [m.] 'blister on the skin' (Hp.); more often with λ-suffix in πομφρολύζω (-ύσσω?), only aor. 3pl. πομφόλυξαν 'sprang up' (of tears; Pi.), and πομφόλυξ, -ῠγος [f.], also [m.], 'bubble' (Hp., Pl., Arist., Thphr.), metaphorically of a female hair ornament (Ar., Att. inscr.), of an architectural ornament (Att. inscr.), of shield-knobs (H.), of a zinc oxyde (medic.). As a first member in πομφολυγο-παφλάσματα [pl.] jocular formation (Ar. Ra. 249). Thence πομφολυγ-ωτός 'provided with bosses' (Ph. Bel.), -ώδης 'like bubbles', -ηρόν [n.] 'plaster with zinc oxyde' (medic.), -όω [v.] 'to make bubbles' (Arist.), -όομαι, -ίζω 'to bubble' (medic.).
•ETYM Possibly Pre-Greek words. They might be onomatopoeic in origin; compare similar expressions for 'swelling, etc.' in Baltic: Lith. pam̃pti 'to swell', pempùs 'fat-bodied', pumpùlis 'roundish, thick-bellied thing', also bum̃balas 'knob, bladder'. Cf. ► βέμβιξ and ► βόμβος.

πεμφρηδών, -όνος [f.] 'kind of wasp, tree wasp' (Nic.). ◄PG?► •ETYM The suffix is the same as in the synonyms ► τενθρηδών, ► ἀνθρηδών. The base was probably onomatopoeic, and possibly Pre-Greek: compare words for 'humming, buzzing', such as SCr. bȕmbar 'bumble-bee', Skt. (lex.) bambhara- [m.] 'bee', Arm. bor̃, -oy 'bumble-bee, hornet'; also, Skt. bhramará- 'bee', OHG breman 'to hum', Latin fremō 'to roar' < *b^h*rm*-, etc. Cf. Kuiper 1956: 222 and Fur.: 222.

πενέσται [m.pl.] name of the serf population of Thessalia; as an appellative 'slaves, servants, poor farm laborers' (Att., Arist.). ◄LW? Illyr.►
•VAR Rarely sing.
•DER πενεστ-ικός 'belonging to the penestai' (Pl.), -εία [f.] 'the class of penestai' (Arist.).
•ETYM Possibly identical with the Illyrian PN Penestae (cf. also the Apenestae in Apulia). The ancients connected πενέσται with πένης 'poor', πένομαι 'to toil', which in itself is possible (from pen-e/os-* [n.]).

πένης, -ητος [adj.] 'poor'; as a msc. subst. 'poor man'.
•DER πενία 'poverty'. ⇒ πένομαι.

πενθερός [m.] 'father-in-law = father of the wife' (cf. ἑκυρός), also 'brother-in-law, son-in-law' (Il.). ◄IE *b^h*end*^{h}- 'bind'► •DER πενθερά, Ion. -ή [f.] 'mother-in-law' (D., Call.), -ιδεύς 'son-in-law' (inscr. Asia Minor, imper. time.), -ίδης 'id.' (pap. VI[p]; Schwyzer 510); -ιος (Arat.), -ικός (Man.) 'belonging to the πενθερός'.
•ETYM Inherited kinship term *b^h*en̥d*^{h}-er-o-, formally almost completely agreeing with Lith. beñdras 'participant, sharer'; compare Skt. bándh-u- [m.] 'relative'.

Derived from 'to bind', hence literally "ally". The oxytone accentuation of πενθερός is after ►ἑκυρός. See ►πεῖσμα.

πένθος [n.] 'sorrow'. ⇒πάσχω.

πένομαι [v.] 'to exert oneself, toil, work, prepare, provide' (Il.), 'to exert onself, (have to) do hard labor, be poor, lack sth.' (Sol., trag., Pl.). ◄IE (s)penh_1-►
•VAR Only pres. and ipf.
•COMP Often with ἀμφι-, also συν-.
•DER 1. πενία, Ion. -ίη [f.] 'poverty, lack' (ξ 157); 2. πενιχρ-ός 'poor, devoid of sth.' (γ 348; cf. μελιχρός s.v. ►μέλι), -ότης [f.] (S. E.), -αλέος 'id.' (AP). 3. πένης, -ητος [m.] (fem. πένησσα· πτωχή 'beggary' [H.]) 'who has to live from the labor of his hands, needy, poor', πενέσ-τερος, -τατος (X., D.); thence πενητ-εύω 'to be poor' (Emp.), -υλίδας [m.] "son of poverty" (Cerc.), which presupposes a hypocoristic *Πενητ-ύλος. 4. πόνος [m.] '(hard) labor, effort, struggle, sorrow, pain' (Il.); also as a second member, e.g. παυσί-πονος 'ending pain' (E., Ar. [lyr.]); but ματαιο-πόνος et al. to πονέομαι. Thence πον-ηρός 'toilsome, useless, bad, evil' (IA), whence -ηρία, -ηρεύομαι, -ήρευμα; πονόεις 'id.' (Man.). 5. Iterative deverbative πονέομαι (also with ἀμφι-, δια-, etc.) [v.] 'to exert oneself, provide, suffer' (Il., mostly in the older language), and active πονέω (also with δια-, ἐκ-, κατα-, etc.) also trans. 'to cause pain' (post-Hom.). As a second member in ματαιο-πονέω [v.] 'to labor in vain' (Democr.), whence -πονία (Str.), -πόνημα (Iamb.), -πόνος (Plu., Gal.). Deverbal πόν-ημα (δια-) [n.] 'labor, work' (Pl., E.), -ησις (δια-, κατα-) 'labor, effort' (Plu., D. L.); as a back-formation e.g. διάπον-ος 'working hard, weary' (Plu.) from δια-πονέω. 6. πονάω only in ἐπονάθη (Pi.) and ἐπόνασαν (Theoc.).
•ETYM A primary formation is the present πένομαι; iterative πονέομαι, -έω and the noun πόνος may be productive derivatives. The only viable cognates are words for 'to stretch, twist, weave' in PIE (s)penh_1-, e.g. Lith. pìnti 'twist', OCS pęti 'stretch', Arm. hanum and henum 'weave', Go. spinnan, etc. Greek would then have undergone a semantic shift from 'to stretch' > 'tense, strain' > 'exert oneself'.

πέντε [num.] 'five' (Il.). ◄IE penk^{w}e 'five'► •VAR Aeol. πέμπε, Pamph. πέ(ν)δε.
•COMP As a first member, beside πεντε- and πεμπε-, we mostly find πεντα- (Il.), after ἑπτα-, δεκα-, τετρα-, etc.
•DER Ordinal πέμπτος 'fifth', Arc. πέμποτος (after δέκοτος), Gortyn πέντος, whence πεμπταῖος 'belonging to the fifth (day), happening on the fifth (day)' (ξ 257); πεντάκις [adv.] (Pi.) beside πενπάκι (Sparta), πεμπτάκις (D. S.) 'five times'; collective πεμπάς [f.] 'quintet' (Pl., X.) besides πεμπτάς (Pl. Phd. 104a), πεντάς (Arist.)., whence πεντάδ-ιον [n.] 'quintet' (pap. II-III^p), πεμπαδ-ικός 'fivefold' (Dam.). Adverb πέντα-χα (M 87), -χοῦ, -χῇ, -χῶς; adjective πενταξός 'fivefold' (Arist.); noun πεντάχα· ἡ χείρ 'the hand' (H.), cf. MoGr. Lac. πεντόχτη 'hand' (Κουκουλές Ἀρχ. 27, 61 ff.). A denominative verb, probably from πεμπάς, is πεμπάζομαι, -ω [v.] 'to count (by the five, with the five fingers)' (δ 412, A.), with ἀνα- 'to estimate, calculate, think over' (Pl., Plu.) with πεμπαστάς [m.] (Dor.) 'the counting one' (A. [lyr.]). From πεντήκοντα 'fifty': πεντηκοσ-τύς [f.] 'body of fifty', part of a Spartan λόχος (Th., X.), πεντηκοστήρ, sec. -κοντήρ [m.] 'commander of a πεντηκοστύς' (Cos, Th., X., Att. inscr.).

•ETYM Non-Aeolic πέντε, whence Pamph. πέ(ν)δε, Aeol. πέμπε and the other IE words for 'five', e.g. Skt. páñca, Lat. quīnque, Lith. penkì, Go. fimf, all go back to IE pénk^{w}e. Similarly, Gr. πέμπτος < penk^w-to-, like Lat. quīntus, Lith. peñktas, Go. fimfta. The lengthening in πεντή-κοντα (PGr. *ē) not only appears in Skt. pañcā-śát- [f.], but also in Arm. yi-sun (i < *ē); the lengthening was caused by the glottal feature which resulted from the loss of *d in *dḱomt- (see ►ἑκατον; Kortlandt MSS 42 (1983): 97-104). A parallel development is found in Lat. quinquā-gintā 'fifty' (after quadrā-gintā 'forty'?).

πέος [n.] 'penis' (Ar. Ach.). ◄IE pes-os- n. 'penis'► •DER πεοίδης 'with a swollen member' (Com. Adesp.), also πεώδης 'id.' (Luc. Lex.).
•ETYM Identical with Skt. pásas- [n.] 'id.', cognate with Hitt. pešan- / pešn- / pišen- 'man, male' [c.] < *pés-ōn, pes-(e)n-, Lat. pēnis 'tail, penis' < pes-n-is. See ►πόσθη.

πέπᾱμαι [v.] 'to possess, acquire' (Argos V^a). ◄IE ḱueh$_2$- (?)► •VAR Aor. πᾱ́σασθαι, fut. πᾱ́σομαι (Dor., Arc., poet. since Pi., Sol.); pres. ἐμ-πιπάσκομαι 'to acquire'.
•DER 1. πᾶμα [n.] (Arc., Arg., Cret.), ἔππαμα (< ἐμ-π-; Boeot.) 'possession'. Derivations: πολυ-πάμων 'wealthy' (Δ 433), ἐχέ-πᾱμον (γένος) 'having possessions, inheritor' (Locr.), ἔκ-παμον· ἀκλήρωτον 'without lot' (H.); with transition to the o-stems: ἐμ-πάμῳ (cod. ἐμπαγμῶ)· πατρῴχῳ 'heiress'; ἐπι-<πα>ματ-ίδα· τὴν ἐπίκληρον 'heiress' (H.); παμῶχος· ὁ κύριος 'lord' (H.), whence παμωχέω 'to possess' (Tab. Heracl.). 2. ἔμπᾱσις (Corc., Meg.), ἴνπᾱσις (Arc.), ἔππᾱσις (Boeot.) [f.] 'acquisition', πᾶσις· κτῆσις 'possession' (H.). 3. παμ-πησία [f.] 'full possession' (A., E., Ar.). 4. πάτορες· κτήτορες 'possessors' (Phot.), πᾱτήρ 'possessor' (Critias). 5. With analogical -σ-: πάστας [m.] 'possessor, lord' (Gort.); also PN Εὔ-παστος (Argiv.), Γυνο-, Θιό-ππαστος (Boeot.), probably also πέπασται (Thgn. 663).
•ETYM The forms τὰ ππάματα (Boeot.), Γυνό-ππαστος, etc., with geminate ππ, show a trace of the original cluster *ku̯ (cf. ἵππος). Thus, πέ-πᾱ-μαι, πᾱ́-σασθαι, πᾱ́-σομαι continue a monosyllabic full grade. A connection with PIE 'to swell' ḱu̯eh$_1$- is impossible because of the different laryngeal. There is no exact correspondence outside Greek. The zero grade ḱuh$_2$-, which correponds with IE ḱu̯eh$_2$-, is found in ἄ-κῡ-ρ-ος, ►κύριος 'lord, possessor'.

πεπαρεῖν [v.aor.inf.] 'to demonstrate, show', acc. to H. = ἐνδεῖξαι, σημῆναι (Pi. P. 2, 57; v.l. πεπορεῖν). ◄IE prh$_3$- 'give, provide'► •VAR πεπαρεύσιμον· εὔφραστον, σαφές 'easy to make intelligible, wise' (H.).
•ETYM Floyd AmJPh. 92 (1971): 676-9 demonstrated that the word contains the root prh$_3$- of πορεῖν, with -παρ- < -pr̥h$_3$-V-; for the development, we may compare ἁλίσκομαι with ϝαλ- < u̯l̥h$_3$-V- (see Beekes, in: Bammesberger 1988: 75). Cf. ►πορεῖν.

πέπερι [n.] 'pepper' (Eub., Antiph., Arist.). ◄LW Orient.►
•VAR Gen. -ιος, -εως; also -ις, -ιδος [m.]. Rarely πί-.

•COMP πιπερό-γαρον [n.] 'peppered fish broth', μακρο-πέπερι [n.] 'long pepper' (medic.).
•DER -ις, -ιδος [f.] 'pepper tree' (Philostr. VA). Thence πιπερῖτις [f.] plant name 'siliquastrum' (Plin., etc.); πεπερίζω [v.] 'to taste like pepper' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Oriental LW, first from MInd. pipparī (Skt. [epic cl.] -lī), further of unknown origin.

πέπλος [m.] 'woven cloth, blanket' (Hom., trag.), usually 'female or male garment, women's skirt' (Il.). ⋖IE? pel-* 'fold'⋗ •COMP e.g. εὔ-πεπλος (ἐΰ- epic) 'having a beautiful garment' (Il.).
•DER πέπλωμα [n.] 'robe, garment' (trag.).
•ETYM In theory, it could be a reduplicated formation πέ-πλ-ος of the root PIE pl(H)-* 'to fold', found e.g. in Gr. ἁ-πλ-ός, ►ἁπλόος 'single, simple', διπλόος, διπλοῦς 'double, twofold', OIr. díabul 'double'. Alternatively, the root might be pl-* 'skin, hide'; see ► πέλμα. Neither solution is compelling.

πέπνῡμαι [v.perf.] 'to be prudent, clever, clear-minded', very often in ptc. πεπνῡμένος 'to be prudent, clever, clear-minded' (Il., also late prose); also aor. pass. opt. 2sg. πνῡθείης (Nic.). ⋖IE? pneuH-*⋗ •COMP ἄμ-πνῡτο 'regained consciousness'.
•ETYM The verb is generally derived from the root pneu-* of ►πνέω 'to blow', but LIV^2 posits a separate root pneuH-* to explain the length of πνυ-. The appurtenance of Hitt. punušzi, punuššanzi 'to ask' < pnuH-s-*, however, is difficult for reasons of both phonetics and semantics (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.).

πέπρωται 'it is destined by fate'. ⇒πορεῖν.

πεπρίλος ⇒πέρδομαι.

πεπρωίων [gen.pl.] perhaps the name of a phratry or deme (Erythrae, IV^a). ⋖?⋗
•ETYM Unknown.

πέπων, -ονος [adj.] 'ripe', metaphorically 'soft, mild' (IA). ⋖IE pek^w-* 'cook'⋗ •VAR Hom. only voc. πέπον. πέπων is used for msc. and fem., but fem. also πέπειρα (Anacr., Hp., S., Ar.), new msc. πέπειρος (Hp., Thphr., LXX); compar. πεπαί-τερος, superl. -τατος (after πεπαίνω?), also πεπειρό-τερος, -τατος.
•DER πεπαίνω (aor. πεπᾶν-αι, -θῆναι with -θήσομαι, perf. inf. πεπάνθαι (Arist.), also with ἐκ-, κατα-, ὑπερ-) [v.] 'to make ripe, ripen', metaphorically 'to mollify, mellow, soothe' (IA), whence πέπαν-σις [f.] 'ripening' (Arist.), -τικός 'making ripe' (Hp., Dsc.); back-formation πέπαν-ος (-ός) 'ripe' (Paus., Artem.); πέπανας· πλακούντια 'flat cakes' (H.) (= πόπανα, see ► πέσσω).
•ETYM A derivative PIE pek^w-on-* from the root pek^w-* 'to cook, ripen'. The verb πεπαίνω < pe-pan-i̯e/o-* continues pek^w-n-ie/o-* with the zero grade of the suffix.

περ [pcl.] enclitic pcl. of emphasis (Il.). ⋖IE per* 'going through?'⋗ •ETYM Identical in form and function with Lat. -per in nu-per, parum-per, etc.; see ►πέρι.

πέρᾱ [adv.], also [prep.] + gen. 'beyond, further, longer, more, past' (Att.). ⋖IE per* 'beyond, across'⋗ •COMP compar. περαι-τέρω (Att.), -τερον; adj. -τερος (Pi.).
•DER πέρᾱν, Ion. -ην [adv., prep.] + gen. 'over, across, beyond, opposite to' (Il.). adj. περαῖος 'ulterior', especially ἡ περαία (χώρα, γῆ) 'the country on the other side', also PN (Hdt., A. R., Plb., Str.). Thence 1. Περαΐτης [m.] 'inhabitant of the Περαία' (J.); 2. περαιόθεν 'from the other side' (A. R., Arat.); 3. περαιόομαι, -όω (also with δια-, etc.) 'to cross over, bring over' (since ω 437), 'to accomplish' (Gort.), 'to end' (medic.), περαίωσις [f.] 'crossing' (Str., Plu.). Denominative verb περάω (aor. -ᾱσαι, Ion. -ῆσαι, also with prefix, especially δια- and ἐκ-) [v.] 'to pass through, go beyond, reach the end' (Il.), (δια-)πέρ-αμα [n.] 'crossing' (Str.), ἐκπέραμα 'coming out' (A.), πέρ-ασις [f.] 'stepping through' (S.), -άσιμος 'crossable, passable' (E., Str.); -ατός, Ion. -ητός 'id.' (Pi., Hdt.); -ατής 'ferryman' (Suid., Procl.), also 'stranger, emigrant' (LXX; probably from πέρᾱ); περᾱ-τικός 'foreign', and -τός 'id.' (pap. III^a). Often with intensifying ἀντι-: ἀντιπέραια [n.pl.] 'the stretches of coast on the opposite side' (B 635), -αια [f.sg.] (A. R., Nonn.); ἀντιπέρας 'opposite' (Th., X.), -πέραν, -ην (Hell.), -πέρᾱ (Ev. Luc.) 'id.'; -πέρηθε(ν) 'from the opposite coast' (A. R., AP).
•ETYM Gr. πέρᾱ and πέρᾱν are petrified case forms of a noun 'other side': the latter continues the acc.sg. of a noun per-h$_2$-* [f.], while the former allows for several interpretations (instr.sg.fem. or nom.pl.ntr.?). See ►πέρι and ►πάρος.

πέρας, -ατος [n.] 'end, boundary'. ⇒πεῖραρ.

πέργουλος ⇒σποργίλος.

πέρδιξ, -ῑκος [m., f.] 'partridge' (Archil., Epich., S., Ar., X.). ⋖PG⋗ •VAR Cret. πήριξ (H.), with -ηρ- < -ερδ-.
•COMP e.g. περδικο-θήρας [m.] "partridge-hunter", kind of hawk, συρο-πέρδιξ = Σύρος πέρδιξ (Ael.).
•DER Diminutive περδίκ-ιον (com.), -ιδεύς [m.] 'young partridge' (Eust.), adjective -ειος 'of the partridge' (Poll.), -ιάς, -ιάδος [f.] (Gal.), -ίτης [m.] name of a stone (Alex. Trall.).
•ETYM Frisk explains the word as a derivative in -ικ- from ►πέρδομαι 'to fart', due to the droning sound when partridges take the air.

πέρδομαι [v.] 'to fart' (Ar.). ⋖IE perd-* 'fart'⋗ •VAR Perf. πέπορδα (with resultative mg.), aor. -παρδεῖν, fut. -παρδήσομαι.
•COMP Also with ἀπο-, κατα-, προσ-, ὑπο-.
•DER 1. πορδή [f.] 'fart' (Ar.), whence πόρδων, -ωνος [m.] nickname of the cynics (Arr.); 2. πράδησις [f.] 'farting' (Hp.); 3. πραδίλη [f.] 'id.' (Theognost.); reduplicated πεπραδῖλαι [pl.] 'id.', also name of a fish (H., Phot.), equally πεπρίλος· ἰχθῦς ποιός 'kind of fish' (H., after the sound it produces). 4. with additional suffix πήραξον· ἀφόδευσον 'they shitted' (H.), Cret. for *πέρδαξον as if from *περδ-άζομαι; furthermore ἀποπαρδακᾷ (-κα?)· τοῦτο εἴρηται παρὰ τὸ ἀποπαρδεῖν (H.).

•ETYM A thematic present *perd-e/o- from the root *perd- 'to fart' of Skt. pardate, OHG ferzan, Lith. pérsti, 1sg. pérdžiu, Ru. perdét', Alb. pjerdh. See ► σιληπορδέω and ► πέρδιξ.

πέρθω [v.] 'to destroy, devastate' (Il.). ◄IE? *b^herd^h-► •VAR Aor. πέρσαι, πραθεῖν, fut. πέρσω (Il.). Inf. pass. πέρθαι (Π 708; aor. *περθ-σ-, or with haplology from *πέρθεσθαι); unclear is πέρθετο (M 15, etc.), semantically aoristic.
•COMP Also with δια-, ἐκ-, συν-. As a first member in governing compounds περσέ-π(τ)ολις 'destroying cities' (A. [lyr.]); second member in πτολί-πορθος 'id.' (Il.), also -ιος (ι 504), -ης (A. [lyr.]). πέρσις [f.] 'destruction', title of several poems (Arist., Paus.).
•DER Deverbative πορθέω (aor. πορθῆσαι, also δια-, ἐκ-, etc.) [v.] 'to destroy, devastate, pillage' (Il.), whence (ἐκ-)-πόρθησις (D.), -ημα (Pl.), (ἐκ-)-ήτωρ (A., E.), -ητής (E.), *-ητήριος (Tz.), -ητικός (H.).
•ETYM Without a convincing etymology. Janda 2000: 240-242 and LIV[2] propose a PIE root *b^herd^h- < *b^her- + *d^hh_1- "Beute machen" = 'capture'.

πέρι [adv.] 'around, round; excessively, quite; by, at, concerning' (Il.). ◄IE *per- 'cross, pass'► •VAR Prep. περί (dial. also πέρ), + gen., dat., acc.
•DIAL Myc. pe-ri-, as a first element in compounds.
•DER Adv. πέριξ (suffix -k-), also prep. 'around, round' (mostly Ion. poet.), + *-ιο- in περι-σσός, -ττός 'excessive, extraordinary, superfluous', whence -σσεύω, -ττεύω, etc. (Hes.).
•ETYM From a PIE loc.sg. *per-i 'in crossing, in passing' > Skt. pári, Av. pairi 'around, about, among, etc.'; Lat. per 'through, across', per- 'very', -per 'through, during', Ven. per 'for' < *peri, Lith. per̃ [prep.] 'over, around, through', OCS prě-, Ru. pére- 'over, through, very, exceedingly' < *per; OCS prědъ 'in front', Ru. péred(o) 'before, in front of' [prep.] < *$per\text{-}d^hh_1\text{-}om$; Go. fairra 'far'. See ► περ.

περιάγνυται [v.] Meaning uncertain. Used of ὄψ 'voice' (Π 78), thence of ἠχώ 'echo' (Hes. Sc. 279). ◄GR► •ETYM The allegedly late occurrence in Π 78 is about a voice which is broken. Thus is it derived from ἄγνυμι 'to break' as "is broken on all sides"? Or is it cognate with Skt. vagnú- [m.] 'sound, call, invocation', Lat. vāgiō 'to lament'?

περιβᾱρίδες [f.pl.] 'kind of women's shoes' (com.). ◄?►
•VAR Also περίβαρα [n.pl.] 'id.' (Poll., H., Phot.).
•ETYM Formation like περισκελίδες 'foot-clasps, -rings', but further unclear. Jocular derivation of βᾶρις, Egyptian name of a ship?

περιημεκτέω [v.] 'to be very reluctant, be upset' (Hdt.). ◄?►
•VAR Thence ἠμεκτεῖ· δυσφορεῖ 'is angry' (H.).
•ETYM The formation is reminiscent of synonymous ► ἀγανακτέω and of ὑλακτέω, but the origin is unclear. Frisk hesitatingly suggests *περι-εμέω 'to vomit', with compositional lengthening as in εὐ-ημέτης.

περίναιος (-εος) [m.] 'perinaeum, the space between the anus and the scrotum' (medic., Arist.), plur. 'male genitals' (Arist.). ◄?►
•VAR Also -ον [n.]. Doubtful by-forms are: περινῷ· περινέῳ Gal.; περίνα (for πηρῖνα?)· περίναιον. τὸ αἰδοῖον 'pudenda' and περίνος· τὸ αἰδοῖον ... ἢ τὸ τῶν διδύμων δέρμα, ἤγουν ὁ ταῦρος 'pudenda; the skin of the testicles or male pudenda' (H.).
•ETYM Body part derived from περί and ἰνάω, -έω 'to empty', with a suffix -ιο- (-εο-), thus literally "empty region". See ► πήρα.

περίνεως, -ω [adj.] "exceeding the ship (the equipment of the ship, its crew)", so 'surplus'; as a msc. subst. 'fellow passenger, passenger' (Att. inscr., Th.). ◄GR► •ETYM A hypostasis from περὶ *νᾱϝός, with περί 'over, in excess'.

περιρρηδής [adj.] Uncertain. Usually explained as 'falling over, tumbling away' (χ 84, A. R. 1, 431), 'bent, misplaced' (Hp. Art. 16, Mul. 2, 158). ◄?►
•DER περιρρήδην (A. R. 4, 1581).
•ETYM Formation like περι-καλλής 'very beautiful', thus probably from a noun *ῥῆδος. The root etymology is unknown. It has been connected with ► ῥαδινός 'flexible', ► ῥάδαμνος 'branch'; hence, *$\underset{\frown}{u}reh_2d$- has been proposed.

περισκελής 1 [adj.] 'very rough, very hard, inflexible' (S., Hp., Thphr.). ◄GR► •DER περισκέλ-εια, -ία [f.] 'harshness, roughness' (Arist., Porph.), -ασία 'id.' (Orib.); same extension as in θερμασία, φλεγμασία, etc.
•ETYM Probably literally 'completely dried' (cf. ► σκληρός; from *σκέλος 'barrenness') > 'dry all around'. The same is also supposed for ► ἀσκελής. See ► σκέλλω.

περισκελής 2 [adj.] 1. 'going around the legs', in τὰ περισκελῆ 'trousers', sing. τὸ -ές (LXX). 2. 'with the legs around', i.e. 'with the legs put apart' (sch.). ◄GR► •DER From 1. is derived περισκελίς [f.] 'leg-band, -ring' (Hell.), with -ίδιον (Delos II[a]).
•ETYM From ► σκέλος 'leg'.

περισσός, -ττός ⇒ πέρι.

περιστερά [f.] 'pigeon' (IA). ◄?►
•VAR Secondary -ός [m.] 'cock pigeon' (com.).
•COMP περιστερο-πώλης 'pigeon-vendor' (Hell. pap.).
•DER Diminutive περιστερ-ίς [f.] and -ιον [n.] (also used as decoration of women), -ίδιον (com., pap.), -ιδεύς (Hell. pap.); -(ε)ών [m.] 'pigeonry' (Pl., pap.). Gr. περιστερ-ιον, -εών also occur as a plant-name for 'Verbena officinalis, supina' (Dsc, Ps.-Dsc.), which are visited by pigeons.
•ETYM Not certainly explained. Perhaps from πελιός 'dark, blue', πέλεια 'wild pigeon', by a wrong restitution of earlier *πελιστερά (cf. MoGr. πελιστέρι).

περιώσιον, -ια [adv.] 'excessive, immoderate', also + gen. (Il., Pi.). ◄GR► •DER Adj. -ιος 'id.', also 'extraordinary' (Sol. and Emp.); περώσιον· μέγα 'big' (H.).

•ETYM From πέρι, with the same suffix as ἐτώσιος 'fruitless', perhaps created after the latter. An intermediate form *περι-ο- can hardly be justified. Hence ὑπερώσιος 'id.' (EM 665, 29).

περκνός [adj.] 'spotted, having dark spots', also the name of a kind of eagle (Ω 316, Hp., Arist.). ◂IE perḱ-* 'variegated, motley'▸ •DER ἐπί-περκνος 'somewhat spotted' (X.). πέρκος [m.] 'kind of eagle' (Arist.), πέρκη [f.] 'redfin perch, Perca fluviatilis' (Emp., com., Arist.), -ίς, -ίον, -ίδιον (com., pap., Dsc.); περκάς [adj. f.], attribute of κίχλη, probably as a fish name (Eratosth.). Denominatives: a. περκάζω, -ομαι (also with ὑπο-, ἐπι-, ἐν-) [v.] 'to get dark spots, start ripening', act. also 'to darken' (η 126, Thphr., LXX); b. περκαίνω, -ομαι (ἐμ-) [v.] 'id.' (E., H.); c. ἀπο-περκόομαι [v.] 'to become dark', of ripening grapes (S. Fr. 255, 6). Here περκώματα· τὰ ἐπὶ τοῦ προσώπου ποικίλματα 'spots on the face' (H.). Furthermore: 1. with zero grade: πρακνόν· μέλανα 'black' (H.); 2. with different full grade, probably secondary: πρεκνόν· ποικιλόχροον ἔλαφον 'deer with various colors' (H.), to which belongs 3. with o-ablaut ▸πρόξ, -κός [f.] and προκάς [f.] 'deer- or roe-like animal', Πρόκνη PN 'Nightingale' or 'Swallow'; 4. with lengthened grade ▸πρώξ, -κός [f.] 'dewdrop'.
•ETYM An adj. *περκός lies at the basis of the nouns πέρκος, περκάς, the adj. περκνός, and the verbs περκ-άζω, -αίνω, -όομαι. Compare MIr. erc (W erch) 'spotted, dark-red', 'salmon, trout', also 'cow, lizard'. The form πρακνόν is from a zero grade pr̥ḱ-n-*; cf. Skt. pŕ̥śni- 'spotted, variegated', OHG forhana 'trout', OE forn(e) [f.]; further cognate forms are MoSw. färna fish name < perḱ-n-;* OHG faro, farawa 'variegated' < IE porḱ-uó-*. Perhaps Lat. pulc(h)er 'beautiful' < pelk-ro-* for perk-ro-* belongs here too?

πέρνᾱ, -ης [f.] 'ham' (Str., pap. II^{p}, Ath.). ◂LW Lat.▸
•VAR By epic influence, or as an error of transmission, also πτέρνα (Batr., Poll. 2, 193).
•ETYM Loanword from Lat. perna 'id.'. See also ▸πτέρνη.

πέρναξ ⇒θρίδαξ.

πέρνημι [v.] 'to sell' (Il.). ◂IE perh*$_2$- 'sell'▸
•VAR πέρναμαι (Il.), aor. περασ(σ)αι (Il., also Aeol. and Ion. inscr.), fut. inf. περάαν (Φ 454), pass. πρᾱθῆναι, Ion. πρηθ-, with fut. -ήσομαι, perf. med. πέπρᾱμαι, -ημαι (IA), fut. πεπράσομαι (Ar., X.); recent Att. innovations are act. πέπρᾱκα and pres. πιπράσκομαι, later -ω (Thphr. [?], Luc., Plu.), -ήσκω (Call.). Further forms: ἔπρησα (Samos VI^{a}; to ἐπρήθην), πέρνησον· πώλησον 'sell!' (H., from the present); πεπερημένος (Φ 58; for πεπρημένος after περάσαι).
•COMP Also with ἀπο-, παρα-, συν-, etc.
•DER 1. πρᾶσις, Ion. πρῆσις (διά-, ἀπό, etc.) 'sale' (IA), πράσιμος 'for sale' (Pl., X.). 2. ἀπόπραμα [n.] 'subletting' (Hell. pap.). 3. πρατήρ, Ion. πρη- 'salesman' (IA), -ήριον [n.] 'selling point, market' (Hdt.; Hell.); also πράτωρ, -ορος 'salesman' (Hell. inscr. and pap.; also with προ-, Din. and Is. in Poll.), πρατορεύω [v.] 'to act as a salesman' (Tenos III^{a}). 4. πράτης, -ου 'salesman' (also συμ-, προ-; Att. orators in Poll., pap.); in late papyri, often in compounds like ἐλαιο-, οἰνο-πρά-της. 5. adj. πρατικός in -ή 'sales tax', -όν 'sale on commission' (pap.).
•ETYM The system περᾰ́σαι, πέπρᾱμαι, πρᾱθῆναι points to a root prh*$_2$-, with a root aorist and a nasal present pr-n(e)-h*$_2$- (cf. LIV^2). The forms πέρνημι, περναμαι must have analogical ε for the original zero grade, which is preserved in πορνάμεν· πωλεῖν 'to sell', πορνάμεναι· πωλούμεναι 'selling' (H.), which are probably Aeolic. There are no certain cognates of perh*$_2$- outside Greek, since OIr. renaid, -ren 'to sell' may belong to a root h*$_2$reiH- 'to count' (Schumacher 2004: 551f.). See ▸πόρνη.

περόνη ⇒πείρω.

πέρπερος [m.] 'dandy, boaster'; as an adj. 'vain, boastful' (Plb., Arr., S. E.). ◂LW Lat.▸
•DER περπερ-ότης [f.] 'boasting' (Chrysost.), -εύομαι [v.] 'to be a windbag, boast' (1 Ep. Cor. 13, 4, M. Ant.); also ἐμ- (Arr.); -εία [f.] (Clem. Al.); ῥωπο-περπερ-ήθρα [f.] 'empty boasting' (Com. Adesp.).
•ETYM A loanword from Lat. perperus 'perverse, wrong-headed', attested since Hellenistic times.

περσέα (-αία, -ία, -είη) [f.] name of an Egyptian tree, 'Cordia myxa', which originated from Persia (Hp., Hell.). ◂GR▸ •DER περσεΐνος 'belonging to the persea tree' (pap.), πέρσ(ε)ιον [n.] 'its fruit' (Thphr.); diminutive -ίδιον (pap.).
•ETYM Named after its Persian origin; suffix like in μηλέα, etc.

περσεύς [m.] name of an unknown fish from the Red Sea (Ael. NA 3, 28). ◂?▸
•VAR Also πέρσος 'id.' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown.

Περσεφόνη [f.] spouse of Hades (Pluto), queen of the underworld; as a daughter of Demeter, identified as Κόρη (Ion. since h. Cer. and Hes.) ◂IE perso-*g^{wh}n-t-ih$_2$ 'threshing'▸ •VAR Also Περσε-φόνεια (Il., Od.). Several by-forms are found: Φερσε-φόνα (Simon., Pi., Thess.), -φόνεια (H.), Πηριφόνα (Locr.), Πηρεφόνεια (Lac. acc. to H.); with a different ending: Περσέ-φασσα (A.), Φερσέ-φασσα (S., E.), Φερρέ-φαττα (Pl., Ar., Att. inscr.) etc., περσό-φαττα (Att. inscr.), name of the sanctuary Φερ(ρ)εφάττιον [n.] (D., AB).
•DER Plant name Περσεφόνιον, Φερ- (Ps.-Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 100.
•ETYM It was long thought that the original form of the first member was Φερσε-, whence the various other forms would have arisen by dissimilation of aspiration, compositional lengthening, etc. The name was always considered obscure until Wachter Kratylos 51 (2006): 139-144: the original form is περσόφαττα, as found in eight attestations, seven of which are on 5th c. BC Attic vases (by seven different painters). Note that the form περσόφαττα was not even mentioned by Frisk. It should be analyzed as containing a first member perso-*, cognate with Skt. parṣá- [m.] 'sheaf of corn' (following a suggestion by Weiss, Wachter l.c. also mentions the possibility that Lat. porrum 'leek' and πράσον 'id.' are related, perhaps implying a meaning 'ear of corn' for Περσο- and Skt. parṣá-). The second member is derived from *-$g^w n$-t-ih$_2$ (to *g^{wh}en- 'to hit, strike'). Thus, the name refers to a female thresher of corn.

The forms in -φόνεια beside -φόνη (cf. Πηνελόπεια beside -η) may be folk-etymological; Περσε-, etc. too, after πέρθω.

πέρυσι(ν) [adv.] 'last year' (IA). ◂IE per*, uet*- 'year'▸ •VAR Dor. πέρυτι(ς).
•DIAL Myc. pe-ru-si-nu-wo.
•DER περυσινός 'from last year' (Att.).
•ETYM PIE adverb of time per-ut-i*, literally 'on the other side of a year', a loc.sg. of a compound of per* and uet*- 'year'. Cognate forms: Arm. heru, ON í fjorð, MHG vert 'id.', OIr. ónn-urid 'ab anno priore' < peruti*. Without final -i in Skt. parút 'last year'. See ▸ἔτος.

πέσκος [n.] 'skin, rind' (Nic. Th. 549); πεσκέων· δερμάτων 'hides' (H.); ἀ-πεσκής 'without a cover' (of τόξα; S. Fr. 626; not quite certain). ◂?▸ •ETYM The word rhymes with ▸μέσκος 'skin, fleece'. Perhaps from πέκ-σκ-ο-, from peḱ- 'to comb' (cf. πόκος 'fleece')? Rejected by Frisk.

πεσσός [m.] 'the oval stone in board games', mostly plur. 'gaming piece, board game, checkers', often metaphorically in several mgs. (α 107). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Att. πεττός.
•COMP As a first member in πεσσο-νομέω 'to arrange the gaming pieces', also metaphorically (A., com.).
•DER πεσσάριον [n.] 'pessary' (medic.); πεσσ-ικός, -ττ- 'belonging to board games' (Apion); -εύω (rarely with δια-, μετα-) [v.] 'to play on a board with pieces' (IA), whence -εία, -ευτής, -ευτικός, -ευτήριον (Pl., pap.).
•ETYM Loanword of unknown origin. A Semitic etymology (belonging to Aramaic pīs(s)ā 'stone, small table') has been proposed. Fur.: 270 cites Hitt. piššu [n.] 'rock, block of stone' (without conclusion). The word may well be Pre-Greek (perhaps pek^y*-).

πέσσω [v.] 'to ripen, bake, cook, digest' (Il.). ◂IE pek^w*- 'cook'▸ •VAR Att. πέττω, aor. πέψαι (Il.), fut. πέψω (Ar.), pass. perf. πέπεμ-μαι, aor. πεφθῆναι with πεφθήσομαι (Hp., Att.). The pres. πέπτω (Arist.) is an innovation.
•COMP Also with κατα-, περι-, συν-. Nominal: ἀρτο-κόπος (Hdt.), Myc. a-to-po-qo /artopok^wos/ 'baker', δρυ-πεπ-ής 'ripening on the tree' (com., AP).
•DER 1. πέμμα [n.] 'pastry, cake' (IA), whence -άτιον (Ath.); 2. πέψις [f.] 'digestion, cooking, ripening' (Hp., Arist.). 3. πεπτός (E. Fr. 467, 4, pap., Plu.), more usually in compounds, e.g. ἄ-, δύσ-πεπτος 'indigested, hard to digest' (Hp., Arist.), whence ἀ-, δυσ-πεψ-ία [f.] (Arist., Hell.); 4. πεπτ-ικός 'fit for digestion' (Arist.), -ήριος 'id.' (Aret.). 5. πέπτρια [f.] 'bakeress' (H.). With o-grade: 6. πόπανον [n.] 'pastry' (Att., Hell.), whence -ώδης 'like pastry' (H.), -ευμα [n.] 'id.' -εῖον· panificium (gloss.). 7. ποπάς, -άδος [f.] 'id.' (AP).
•ETYM Gr. πέσσω is from PIE pek^w-io/e*-, like Skt. pácyate [3sg.med.] 'ripens'. Other cognate forms: thematic root present pek^w-o/e*- > Skt. pácati, Lat. coquō, W pobi-, OCS pekǫ, Lith. kepù (with metathesis), Alb. pjek 'to cook, bake'. Nominal formations: πέμμα < pek^w-mn*, ἀρτο-κόπος < -pok^w-o*- with metathesis; πέπτρια presupposes a msc. pek^w-tr*- 'baker'. See ▸πέπων.

πετάννυμι, -ύω [v.] 'to spread out, unfold, open' (Att.). ◂IE peth*$_2$- 'spread out'▸ •VAR πίτνημι, -άω (Il.; ἔπιτνον Hes. Sc. 291), πετ-άζω (LXX), -άω (Luc.), aor. πετά-σ(σ)αι. Pass. -σθῆναι, perf. med. πέπταμαι (all Il.), πεπέτασμαι (Orac. apud Hdt., D. S.), act. πεπέτακα (D. S.), fut. πετ-άσω (E. [lyr.]), -άσσω (Nonn.), -ῶ (Men.).
•COMP Often with prefix, especially ἐκ-, ἀνα-, κατα-.
•DER 1. πέταλον [n.] 'leaf' (Il.), 'metal or gold plating' (Att. inscr.); also -ηλα [pl.] (Hes. Sc.; metri causa); πετάλ-ιον, -ια, -ίς, -ειον, -ῖτις, -ώδης, -όω, -ωσις, -ίζω, -ισμός; hypostasis ἐμπεταλ-ίς· ἔδεσμα διὰ τυροῦ σκευαζόμενον 'a dish prepared from cheese' (H.). 2. πέτασος [m., f.] 'broad-brimmed hat', also metaphorically (Hell.), whence πετάσ-ιον, -ώδης, -ών, -ῖτις. 3. πέτασμα (also with κατα-, παρα-, ὑπο-, etc.) [n.] 'blanket, curtain, etc.' (IA). 4. ἐκπέτασις [f.] 'spreading out' (Plu.). 5. πετασμός [m.] 'id.' (LXX). 6. πέταχνον [n.] 'drinking bowl' (Alex.), -ακνον (H.). 7. πέτηλος (-λός) 'grown onto' (μόσχος, βοῦς; Ath., H.), "ἀναπεπταμένα τὰ κέρατα ἔχων", 'having the horns spread out'. 8. ἀναπετ-ής 'spread out', whence -εια [f.] 'spreading out' (medic.). 9. ἐκπέτα-λος 'open, flat' (Mosch., ἀγγεῖον). With unclear semantics: πετήλας· τοὺς μικροὺς καὶ θαμνώδεις φοίνικας 'small and shrubby date-palms'; πετηλίς· ἀκρίς 'top, peak' (H.); πετηλίας καρκίνος (Ael.).
•ETYM The forms πετά-σαι, πίτ-νη-μι, πέ-πτᾰ-μαι point to a root p(e)th*$_2$-; the present πετά-ννυμι was formed analogically after the aor. πετά-σαι, etc. The old nasal present πίτνημι has a secondary -ι- introduced in earlier zero grade pt-neh*$_2$-. Cognate verbal forms are found in Lat. patēre 'to be open' < pt-ē*-, with patulus 'spread out broadly', and the nasal present Lat. pandō 'spread out', Osc. patensíns [3pl.ipf.subj.] 'to open' < patn*- < pt-n-h*$_2$-. With an l-suffix like πέταλον, we find OHG fedel-gold [n.] 'leaf-gold'.

πέτευρον [n.] 'hen-roost, acrobat's bar or framework, high platform, public noticeboard' (Ar. Fr. 839, inscr. IV^a, Hell.). ◂PG(V)▸
•VAR Also -αυρον, πέντευρον, see below
•DER πετεύρ-ιον [n.] 'small noticeboard' (Erythrae IV^a), -ίζομαι [v.] 'to act as an acrobat' (Phld.), whence -ισμός, -ιστής, -ιστήρ (Plu., Man.).
•ETYM Technical expression with vacillation between ευ and αυ, and between πετ- and πεντ-. No good IE etymology is available. Thus, it is probably a Pre-Greek word; cf. Fur.: 291, 353.

πέτομαι [v.] 'to fly' (Il.). ◂IE pet*- 'fall'▸ •VAR Aor. πτάσθαι, πτέσθαι (all Il.), with pres. πέταμαι (poet. since Sapph., Arist.), aor. πετασθῆναι (Arist., LXX), ἵπταμαι (late; s.v.); aor. act. πτῆναι, ptc. πτάς, etc. (poet. Hes., also Hell. prose); fut. πτήσομαι (IA), πετήσομαι (Ar.), perf. κατ-έπτηκα (Men.).
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἀπο-, δια-, εἰσ-, ἐκ-, κατα-, ὑπερ-. Compounds: a. -πέτης, Dor. -πέτας [m.], e.g. ὑψι-πέτης, -ας 'flying high' (Hom., Pi.), enlarged -ήεις (Hom.); b. -πετής, e.g. ὑπερπετής 'flying over' (Hell.); c. ἐκπετ-ήσιμος 'ready to fly' (Ar.); d. ἀερσι-πότης and -πότη-τος 'flying high' (Hes., AP, Norm.), from ποτάομαι.

•DER 1. ποτή [f.] 'flying, flight' (ε 337, h. Merc. 544 [v.l. πτερύγεσσι]); 2. πτῆσις [f.] 'id.' (A., Arist.), whence πτήσιμος (Jul.); πτῆμα [n.] 'id.' (Suid.). 3. Adj. in -no-: a. πτηνός, Dor. πτᾱνός 'winged' (Pi., trag., Pl.); b. πετεινός, -ηνός 'id.' (Thgn.; Πετήνη Att. ship's name [inscr.]; from πέτομαι); c. πετε-ηνός, -εινός 'id.' (Il.), with diectasis; d. ποτᾱνός 'id.' (Pi., Epich., trag. [lyr.]; -ηνός epic poetry in Pl. Phdr. 252b), probably modelled on ποτάομαι. 4. Deverbative: ποτάομαι, -έομαι (also with ἀμφι-, περι-, ἐκ-, etc.) 'to fly, flap' (Il.); πωτάομαι (also with ἐκ-, ἐπι-, ὑπερ-) 'id.' (M 287, h. Ap. 442, etc.); thence πωτήεις 'flapping' (Nonn.), also πωτήματα [pl.] 'flight' (A. Eu. 250; usually corrected to ποτ-).

•ETYM The Greek root aorist πτά-σθαι, ἔ-πτα-το, πτά-μενος, with full grade in πτῆ-ναι, ἔ-πτᾱ-ν, πτή-σομαι, seems to require a root $*peth_2$-, whereas most of the cognates in the other IE languages (Lat. petō 'to make for, reach', MW ehedec 'to fly' < PCl. -fet-e/o-*, OIr. én, W edn 'bird' < fetno-* [m.]; Hitt. pattai^{i}- / patti- 'to run, fly, flee', ^{LÚ}patteịant- 'fugitive', Skt. pátati 'to fly, fall', Av. auuapasti- 'falling', pata- 'to fly', hąm.pata- 'to fall down', OP ud-pata- 'to fall down, become unfaithful') can or should be explained on the basis of pet-. Hackstein 2002b: 140-143 argues that the root was originally pet- in Greek as well. The pres. πέτα-μαι may be analogical to πτά-σθαι, after πτέσθαι next to πέτομαι. Gr. ποτέομαι and Skt. patáyati 'fly, hurry' agree in their formation, but πωτάομαι is independent. See ►πτερόν and ►πτέρυξ.

πέτρᾱ, -η [f.] 'rock, rocky mountain range, cliff, ridge; rock cavern, cave' (Il.), 'boulder, stone' (Hell.). ◄PG►

•COMP πε·τρ-ηρεφής 'covered with rocks' (A., E.), πετρο-βόλος 'throwing rocks', whence -ία (X., Plb.); ὑπό-πετρος 'rocky' (Hdt., Thphr.).

•DER πέτρος [m., f.] 'boulder, stone' (Il.). Several adjectives in the meaning 'rocky, stony': πετρ-αῖος (poet. since μ 231), also as an epithet of Poseidon (Pi.), -ήεις (Il.), -ινος (Ion. poet.), -ώδης (IA), -ήρης (S.), -ώεις (Marc. Sid.). Diminutive -ίδιον (Arist.); adverb -ηδόν (Luc.). πετρών, -ῶνος [m.] 'rocky place' (Priene II^a). Denominative πετρόομαι, -όω (also with κατα-, ὑπο-) [v.] 'to be stoned to death, turn / be turned into stone' (E., X., Lyc.), πέτρωμα [n.] 'stoning' (E.), also 'heap of stones' (Paus.). Several plant names: πετρ-ίνη, -αία, -αῖον, -ώνιον, -ίς, ἐπί-πετρον, etc.

•ETYM We find πέτρος 'stone' and its collective, πέτρα. There is no etymology. The suggestion by Meier-Brügger KZ 94 (1980): 122ff. that πέτρος derives from per-tro-* 'Instrument zum Hindurchkommen' is improbable. The word is probably Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 272 etc.

πεύθομαι ⇒πυνθάνομαι.

πεύκη [f.] 'pine', especially 'Pinus Laricio' (Il.), metaphorically 'torch' (trag.). ◄IE peuḱ-* 'sting'►

•DER πευκ-ήεις, Dor. -άεις 'made of pine, belonging to the torch, stinging, sharp' (trag. [lyr.], D. P., Opp.); -ινος 'made of pine' (S., E., Plb.); -ών, -ῶνος [m.] 'pine forest' (Hdn. Gr.); -ία [f.] 'taste of pitch' (Tz.). πευκάλιμος, epithet of φρένες (Il.), also of πραπίδες, μήδεα (Orac. apud D. L., inscr.); πευκεδανός, epithet of πόλεμος (K 8), of βέλεμνα, ἀσπίς (Orph.), of θάλασσα (Opp.); with oppositional accent, we find πευκέδανον, the name of a bitter umbelliferous plant, 'sulphur weed' (Thphr.).

•ETYM Similar names of pine and fir-trees are found in Baltic, Germanic, and Celtic: OPr. peuse [f.] (< PIE peuḱ-*), Lith. pušis (< puḱ-*), OHG fiuhta, MIr. ochtach [f.] (< peuḱ-t-, puḱ-t-). A by-form is found in ►πυγμή. If πεύκη has the same origin as the second member of ἐχε-πευκής, περι-πευκής 'stinging, sharp', it can be derived from an adj. *πευκός 'sharp, stinging'. Gr. ἐχε-πευκής may contain an s-stem *πεῦκος [n.] 'stinging, point'. From the same basis, we find the adjectives πευκάλιμος and πευκεδανός, for which a meaning 'sharp, intrusive, stinging, bitter' must be posited. The λ-suffix also occurs in πευκαλέον· ξηρόν 'dry', πευκαλεῖται· ξηραίνεται 'dries up' (H.). For Indo-Iranian cognates, see Morgenstierne NTS 13 (1942): 229 and Turner 1966 No. 8407 pōśi*.

πεφνεῖν ⇒θείνω.

πήγανον [n.] 'rue, Ruta graveolens' (Diocl. Gr., com., Thphr.). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR φαίκανον· πήγανον 'id.' (H.).

•COMP ἀγριο-πήγανον 'Syrian rue' (H., Aët.), πηγαν-έλαιον 'rue oil' (medic.).

•DER πηγάν-ιον [n.] 'rue' (Thphr., Nic.); adj. -ινος, -ειος (Gal.), -όεις (Nic.) 'belonging to the rue', -ώδης 'rue-like' (Thphr.); -ίτης οἶνος (Gp.), -ῖτις χολή (Sopat.); -ηρά [f.], -ηρόν [n.] 'rue plaster' (medic.); -ίζω [v.] 'to be like a rue' (Dsc., Gal.).

•ETYM Probably a Pre-Greek word; note the formal variation in φαίκανον (Fur.: 162). The suffix recalls other plant names, such as λάχανον, βάκανον, πλάτανος, and ῥάφανος.

Πήγασος [m.] name of the mythical horse, that Poseidon conceived with Medusa (Hes.). ◄LW Anat.►

•VAR Dor. Πάγ-.

•DER Πηγάσ-ειος, fem. -ίς 'belonging to Pegasus' (Ar., Mosch., AP).

•ETYM It is now agreed upon that Pegasus derives from the first element of piḫaššašši-, an epithet of the Hittite and Luwian Storm-God (Starke 1990: 103-6). The adjective piḫaššašši- is to be regarded as a Luwian genitival adjective of a stem piḫašš-*, which is attested in HLuw. pihas-. Acc. to Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. piḫa-, the meaning of this onomastic element in Anatolian is 'strong' vel sim., and not 'lightning'. Based on the latter translation, which has been current for some time, scholars have proposed a formation $*b^h\bar{e}h_2$-o- to $*b^heh_2$- 'shine', but Kloekhorst argues that this unappealing reconstruction (unmotivated lengthened grade) should be abandoned.

πηγή [f.] 'well, hot spring', also plur. 'waters, stream' (Il.). ◄GR?, PG?►

•VAR Dor. παγά.

•DER Diminutive πηγ-ίον (pap. II^a), -ίδιον (Suid.); adj. -αῖος 'belonging to a well' (IA), -ιμαῖος 'id.' (Hdn. Epim.); -άζω (also with ἀνα-, κατα-) [v.] 'to spring up' (Ph., AP), παγάσασθαι [aor.inf.] 'to bathe in a well' (Dodona; late.).

•ETYM Since 'wells' are often denominated as being 'cold' (e.g. OCS studenьcь : studenъ, Lith. šaltìnis : šáltas, Gr. νίβα [= νίφα]· χιόνα, καλεῖται δὲ οὕτως καὶ κρήνη ἐν Θρᾴκῃ 'snow, also the word for "source" in Thracia' [Phot.]), a derivation from the root of πήγνυμαι 'to get stiff' has been proposed; cf. πηγυλίς 'ice-cold', παγετώδης 'ice-cold', παγετός 'ice'. While theoretically possible, we have no further evidence for this suggestion. Alternatively, we could be dealing with a Pre-Greek word.

πήγνυμι [v.] 'to fix, stick, join, congeal or coagulate' (Il.). ◂IE peh$_2$ǵ-* 'coagulate, fix'▸ •VAR Dor. Aeol. πάγ-, also -ύω (X., Arist.), πήσσω, -ττω (Hell.), aor. πῆξαι (ἔπηκτο Λ 378), pass. παγῆναι, πηχθῆ-ναι, fut. πήξω, perf. act. intr. πέπηγα (all Il.), trans. plpf. ἐπεπήχεσαν (D. C.), med. πέπηγμαι (D. H., Arr.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἐν-, συν-, κατα-, παρα-. Compounds: πηγεσί-μαλλος 'having dense wool' (Γ 197); -πηξ, e.g. in ἀντί-πηξ, -γος [f.] 'kind of chest' (E.); ναυ-πηγ-ός [m.] 'shipbuilder' (Att., etc.); -πηγ-ής and -παγ-ής, e.g. εὐπηγής, εὐπαγής 'well built' (φ 334, Pl.), περιπηγής 'frozen around' (Nic.); συμπαγής 'put together' (Pl.).
•DER A. From the full grade: 1. πηγός 'solid, dense, strong', originally 'attaching'; in late poetry 'white', also 'black'. 2. πηγάς, -άδος [f.] 'hoar-frost, rime' (Hes.); 3. πηγυλίς [f.] 'frosty, icecold' (ξ 476, A. R.), 'hoar-frost, rime' (AP et al.). 3. πῆγμα (διά-, παρά-, σύμ-, πρόσ-, etc.) [n.] 'joint together, stage, scaffold, etc.' (Hp., Hell.; conjecture apud A. Ag. 1198), -μάτιον (Ph., Procl.); 4. πῆξις (σύμ-, ἔκ-, ἔμ-, etc.) 'fixing, fastening, coagulation' (Hp., Arist.); πήγνυσις 'id.' (Ps.-Thales). 5. πηκτός, Dor. πᾱκ- (κατά-, σύμ-, εὔ-, etc.) 'solid, etc.' (in Att.); πηκτή [f.] 'net, framework' (Ar., Arist.), πακτά [f.] 'fresh cheese' (Theoc.); ἐμπήκτης [m.] 'who posts up' (Arist.); πηκτίς (Dor. Aeol. πακ-), -ίδος [f.] name of a Lydian harp (IA); πηκτικός (ἐκ-) 'coagulating' (Thphr., Dsc.). 6. πηγετός [m.] = παγ- (D. P.).
B. From the zero grade: πάγος, -ετός, -ερός, ►πάγη, ►πάξ, ►πάχνη; also πάγιος 'stout, solid' (Pl., Arist.), παγεύς [m.] 'pedestal' (Hero). Further also πᾰκ-τός in καταπακ-τός, (Hdt.) and πακτό-ω (ἐπι-, ἐμ-) 'to fix' (IA; πακτός for traditional πηκτός in Hom.?).
•ETYM From PIE peh$_2$ǵ-* 'to coagulate, become fixed' > πηγ-, zero grade ph$_2$ǵ-* > παγ-. Cognate verbal forms in other IE languages: Lat. pangō, -ere 'to insert firmly, fix' < ph$_2$-n-ǵ-*, Skt. pajrá- 'solid, firm' with loss of the laryngeal by Lubotsky's Law (Lubotsky MSS 40 (1981): 133-138), pā́jas- [n.] 'side, surface?', Khot. pāysa- 'surface', Lat. compāgēs 'joint' (etc.), pāgus 'district', pāgina 'column'.

πηδάω [v.] 'to leap, jump; to beat' (of the heart or pulse) (Il.). ◂IE ped-* 'foot'▸ •VAR Hyperdoric παδ-; aor. πηδῆσαι.
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, ἐκ-, ἀπο-.
•DER (ἀνα-, ἐκ-)πήδ-ημα [n.] 'leap' (trag.), -ησις (ἀνα-, ἐκ-, ἀπο-, etc.) 'jumping, leaping' (IA), -ηθμός [m.] 'pulse beat' (Hp.), -ητής (ἐπ-εισ-) [m.] 'leaper' (Ptol., gloss.), -ητικός (ἐκ-) 'fit for jumping' (Arist.). Backformation τρί-πηδος or -ον "three-jump", 'trot' (Hippiatr.).

•ETYM Deverbative or denominative formation on the basis of a form pēd-, which could be the lengthened grade of the root ped- 'to tread, fall', whence ped-* 'foot' and several verbal forms derive, such as Skt. pád-ya-te 'falls, treads', OE fetan 'to fall'. The Greek verbal stem suggests a denominal formation, thus from a noun pēd-o-*; see ►πηδόν 'blade of an oar'.

πηδόν [n.] 'blade of an oar' (Od., Hell. epic). ◂IE ped-* 'foot'▸ •DER πηδάλιον [n.] 'rudder, fin-rudder' (Od.), πηδαλι-ώδης 'like a fin-rudder', -ωτός 'equipped with a rudder' (Arist.), -όομαι [v.] 'to be equipped with a rudder' (Simp.).
•ETYM From a preform pēd-o-* 'sole' or 'footstep'. Often compared with Lith. pėdà, dial. also pė̃das, 'sole of the foot', but these have acute long ė from e* before d*, according to Winter's Law. Thus, the long vowel in Greek was taken from the root noun ped-, pēd-. Semantically, the use of 'foot' for 'rudder' can be explained by the flat form and low position of a ship's rudder. The verb πηδάω must have been formed before pēd-o-* 'sole' or 'footstep' acquired its nautical meaning.

πηδός [m.] name of an unknown tree (Thphr. HP 5, 7, 6, EM 669, 40). ◂?▸
•VAR Also πῆδος.
•DER πήδινος, old v.l. for φήγινος (Ε 838, acc. to Eust., EM, H.); perhaps also πηδήεσσα (v.l. Λ 183 for πῖδ-); πάδος tree name (Thphr. HP 4, 1, 3).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. Pliny HN 3, 16 mentions padus as a Gaulish word for 'pine'.

πηΐσκος [m.] 'offspring, son' (Crete V^a). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unexplained.

πηκτίς ⇒πήγνυμι.

πηλαμύς, -ύδος [f.] '(young) tuna' (S. Fr. 503, Phryn. Com., Arist.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Also παλαμίς (Cyran.).
•DER -υδεία [f.] 'catching tuna', -υδεῖον [n.] 'site for catching tuna' (Str.).
•ETYM Strömberg 1943: 79ff. (also 128ff.) extensively argues for derivation from πηλός 'mud', after the habitat of the fish. Nevertheless, this is improbable; the word is no doubt Pre-Greek.

πήληξ, -ηκος [f.] 'helmet' (Il.). ◂PG(S)▸ •ETYM Like so many other expressions for weapons and armor, it is probably a loanword or a Pre-Greek word; note the suffix -ηξ < -ᾱξ, which often occurs in Pre-Greek words.

πηλίκος [pron.adj.] 'how big?, how old?' (IA). ◂IE kʷo-* 'how'▸ •ETYM An interrogative adjective kʷeh$_2$-l-i-, derived from the interrogative pronoun kʷo- 'which'. Compare demonstrative ►τηλίκος (Dor. τᾱλ-) 'this big, this old', and relative ►ἡλίκος 'how great, how old'. An identical formation (without a suffix -ko-*) is found in Lat. quālis 'what kind of', tālis 'such' and, with short initial vowel, OCS kolikъ 'how much'. The element kʷeh$_2$-* 'to what extent' may continue the PIE nom.acc.pl.ntr. of the pronoun. See ►πόθεν.

πηλός [m.] 'loam, clay, mud, dung, bog' (IA). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Dor. πᾱλός (Sophr., inscr.).
•COMP e.g. πηλο-φορέω [v.] 'to carry clay' (Ar.), ἀκρό-πηλος 'with mud on top' (Plb.).
•DER πήλ-ινος 'made of clay' (D., Arist.), -αῖος 'made of clay; living in mud' (Man., Paus.), -ώδης 'loamy, muddy' (IA), -ώεις 'id.' (Opp.); -όομαι, -όω (rarely with περι-, etc.) [v.] 'to be covered with loam, burden with clay' (late), -ωσις [f.] 'besmearing', -ωμα [n.] 'mud' (Charis.). Denominative προ-πηλακίζω [v.], literally "to tread in the mud in front of oneself" = 'to taunt, insult' (Att.), probably formed directly from πηλός after other verbs in -ακ-ίζω; thence -ισμός [m.] 'dishonor, reproach' (IA), -ισις [f.] 'insulting' (Po.).
•ETYM Without a convincing etymology. Pre-Greek?

πῆλυξ [?] · ῥαγάς 'fissure in the soil, crevice' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM See ►σπήλαιον. πῆμα [n.] 'disaster, sorrow, distress' (Il.). ◂IE? peh_1-▸ •COMP Often as a second member, e.g. ἀ-πήμων 'without disaster, undamaged' (Il.); thence πήμων 'baleful' (Orph.). Denominative πημαίνω [v.] 'to do harm, damage' (Il.).

•DER πημον-ή [f.] 'id.' (trag., treaty in Th. 5, 18), πημο-σύνη [f.] 'id.' (A., E., Orph.), ἀπημο-σύνη [f.] 'freedom from worries' (Thgn.) = ἀπημον-ίη [f.] (Call.).
•ETYM Primary verbal noun in pē-*, as suggested by the vocalism of πῆμα in Pi. and S. [lyr.]. Within Greek, it could be related to ►ταλαίπωρος 'enduring hardship'; see s.v. In Indo-Iranian, Av. pāman- [n.] name of a skin disease, Skt. pāmán- [m.] 'kind of skin disease, scratch' could reflect peh_1-mn-. Formally, these forms could be connected with the root peh_1-i- 'to taunt', as reconstructed by LIV[2] for Skt. pīyati 'to taunt, scold'.

πῆ, πῆν 'to sprinkle'. ⇒πάσσω.

πηνέλοψ, -οπος [m.] 'duck or wild goose with colored neck' (Alc., Ibyc., Ar., Arist.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Aeol., Dor. πᾱν-.
•ETYM Formation like other animal names in -οψ, such as δρύοψ, κέρκοψ, πάρνοψ et al. The bird may have served as the base for the PN ►Πηνελόπεια. The stem is also found in Πηνέλ-εως [m.], name of a Boeotian leader (Il.). Because of its suffix, the word may be Pre-Greek in origin.

πήνη [f.] 'the thread of the woof, wound around the bobbin; woof' (E., AP). ◂?▸
•VAR πῆνος· ὕφασμα 'woven robe, web' (H.).
•DER πηνίον, Dor. πᾱν- [n.] 'spool with thread' (Ψ 762, Thphr., AP), also metaphorically of a kind of puppet (Ar. Fr. 377, Arist.); Πηνῖτις (Πᾱν-), -ίτιδος [f.] "weaveress", epithet of Athena (Ael., AP), Πανίτης [m.], PN of a Messenian (Hdt.). πηνίζομαι (Dor. πανί-σδομαι (Theoc.); also with ἀνα-, ἀπο-, ἐκ-) [v.] 'to reel (off)' (com., Arist., Thphr.), whence πήνισμα [n.] 'reeled wool' (Ar. Ra. 1315 [parody of A.], AP).

•ETYM Has been connected with the verb ►πένομαι 'to spin', but this is impossible because of Doric -ᾱ-. Lat. pannus 'piece of cloth, rag', Go. fana [m.] 'cloth, towel', OHG fano 'cloth', MoHG Fahne, OE fana 'banner' < fan-ōn* have a different meaning and short -a-* (and no PIE etymology).

πηνήκη [f.] 'false hair, wig' (Luc. Dial. Mer. 5, 3, etc., Phot., Poll.). ◂GR▸ •DER πηνηκίζειν· ἀπατᾶν 'deceive' (H., Cratin. 319), also with δια- (Cratin. 282); πηνηκισμάτων· φενακισμάτων 'cheatings' (H.).
•ETYM As a wig may seem a bobbin of threads, the word has probably been derived from πήνη on the model of φενάκη 'wig'.

πηνίκα [adv.] 'when?' (Att.). ◂IE k^wo- 'who?'▸ •ETYM Formed from the interrogative pronoun, on the model of ἡνίκα 'when'.

πηός [m.] 'kinsman by alliance' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Dor. Aeol. πᾱός.
•DER παῶται· συγγενεῖς, οἰκεῖοι. Λάκωνες 'kinsmen, relatives (Lac.)' (H.), perhaps after πατριῶται. Also in the patronym Πολυ-παΐδης (Thgn.). Denominative παόομαι [v.] 'to become a kinsman' in παώθεις (Alc.). Abstract πηοσύνη [f.] (A. R.).
•ETYM Kinship term without certain connection. As PGr. pāso-* it has often been connected with Lat. pār, paris 'equal, matching' (perhaps from parVs*, pās-i-*), but this is formally not compelling; also, the etymology of the Latin word is disputed. Unrelated to ►πηΐσκος 'son, offspring'.

πήρα [f.] 'leather bag, knapsack' (Od., Ar.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Ion. -η.
•COMP πηρό-δετος (ἱμάς) 'binding a knapsack' or 'bound around the knapsack' (AP).
•DER Diminutive πηρίδιον [n.] (Ar., Men.); πηρ-ίς or -ίν, gen. -ῖνος [f.] 'scrotum' (Nic.); enlarged -ίνα [f.] (Gal.) = περί-ναιον.
•ETYM Unexplained; cf. on ►θύλακος and ►σάκκος. Fur.: 152 compares βηρίδες· ὑποδήματα, ἃ ἡμεῖς ἐμβάδες λέγομεν 'sandals, which we call ἐμβάδες' (H.) and περι-βᾱρίδες 'womens shoes'; he further mentions Lat. perō 'soldiers shoes' and pre-Romance barr-* 'small vase'.

πηρία [f.] · Ἀ<σ>πένδιοι τὴν χώραν τοῦ ἀγροῦ 'region of the field (Aspendos)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The connection with Go. fera, OHG fiara [f.] 'side, region' is very doubtful. It is unknown whether the Thess. PN Πηρείη (B 766) belongs here.

πηρός [adj.] 'infirm, invalid', of the eyes 'blind', of the limbs 'lame', etc. (B 599, Semon., Hp., Luc.). ◂?▸
•VAR Att. πῆρος acc. to Hdn. Gr. 1, 190.
•COMP πηρο-μελής 'crippled' (AP), ἄ-πηρος 'unmaimed' (Hdt.), ἔμ-πηρος 'maimed, crippled' (Hdt., Hp.), ἔμπαρος· ἔμπληκτος 'stunned' (H.); s-stem ἀπηρής (A. R.), ἀπαρές· ὑγιές, ἀπήρωτον 'healthy, unimpaired' (H.).
•DER πηρώδης (H. s.v. γυιός), beside νοσώδης. Denominative πηρόομαι, -όω (Dor. πᾱρ-) [v.] 'to be maimed, maim' (IA, Gortyn), whence πήρ-ωσις [f.] 'maiming' (IA), -ωμα [n.] 'id.', also 'maimed animal' (Arist., Gal.). Backformation πᾶρος [n.] 'infirmity' (Alc.; uncertain).

•ETYM Isolated. Cannot be connected with πῆμα 'sorrow' because of the *ā, as shown by Doric πᾶρ-.

πῆχυς [m.] 'forearm, arm', as a measure 'cubit', and other metaphorical mgs. (Il.). ⊲IE $b^heh_2\acute{g}^h$-u- 'lower arm, elbow'⊳ •VAR Dor. Aeol. πᾶχυς, gen. -εος, -εως.
•COMP δί-πηχυς 'two cubits long' (IA).
•DER 1. diminutive πηχίσκος [m.] (Anon. apud Suid.); 2. adjectives πηχυ-αῖος (IA, παχυ- Epich.), -ιος (Mimn., A. R.) 'one cubit long'; 3. verbs: πηχίζω [v.] 'to measure by the cubit' (LXX), whence πηχ-ισμός [m.] 'measuring by the cubit' (LXX, pap.), -ισμα [n.] 'cubit-measure' (Sm.); πηχύνω (περι-) [v.] 'to embrace' (Hell. and late epic).
•ETYM PIE word for 'arm'. Cognates: Skt. bāhú-, Av. bāzu- [m.] 'lower arm, arm, foreleg of an animal', ON bógr, OHG buog [m.] 'the upper part of the foreleg, bow', ToA poke, ToB pokai [obl.] 'arm'.

πῖαρ [n.] 'fat, tallow' (epic Ion. Il). ⊲IE piH-uer- 'fat'⊳ •DIAL Myc. PN pi-we-ri-di, -si (?)
•DER Adjective πίων [m.], πῖον [n.], πίειρα [f.] 'fat, fertile, rich' (Il.), whence πιερός, πιαρός 'id.' (Hp., Arist.); grades of comparison πιό-τατος, -τερος (Hom.), new positive πῖος (Epich., Nic.); πιότης [f.] 'fatness' (Hp., Arist.). Poetic πιήεις 'id.' (AP). Denominative verb πιαίνω (aor. πιᾶναι, also with δια-, κατα-, etc.) 'to make fat, fatten, enrich' (Pi., IA), πία-σμα [n.] 'fattening food' (A.), ποτι-πίαμμα [n.] 'remaining fat (on the altar)' (Cyrene), -σμός [m.] 'fattening' (Ael.); -ντήριος (Hp.), -ντικός (Apoll. Lex.) 'making fat, fattening'. With λ-suffix: πιαλέος 'fat' (Ion. poet.), rarely πίαλος 'id.' (probably reshaped after σίαλος [Hp.]).
Isolated: πιμελ-ή [f.] 'fat, lard' (IA), whence -ώδης 'fatty' (Hp., Arist.), -ής 'id.' (Aq., Luc.).
•ETYM Gr. πῖαρ derives from PIE piH-u̯r̥ [n.] 'fat'; the adjective πίων, πίειρα presupposes *πίϝων, *πίϝερ-ι̯α from PIE piH-uōn, fem. -uer-ih_2 'fat', which corresponds precisely to Skt. pī́van-, fem. pī́varī- 'fat, swelling'. Further cognate forms: Skt. pī́vas-, Av. pīuuah- [n.] 'fat'. Gr. πῑμελή presupposes an earlier m(o)-stem piH-m(o)- 'fat'; a cognate formation may be Av. paēman- 'mother's milk' [n.] < pe/oiH-mn-.

πίγγαλος [adj.] · σαῦρος ὁ καλούμενος χαλκίς 'horse-mackerel' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Has been compared with Skt. piṅgalá- 'reddish, brown-yellow', with a variant piñjára-. Also in the gloss πιγγανεόσσιον. Ἀμερίας γλαυκόν (which one corrects into πίγγαν· νεόσσιον)? Uncompelling.

πῖδαξ, -ᾰκος [m.] 'eruption, geyser' (epic Ion. poet. Π 825). ⊲PG?⊳
•COMP πολυ-πῖδαξ 'having many springs' (Il.).
•DER πιδακ-ῖτις [f.] 'belonging to a spring' (Hp. Ep.), -όεις 'rich in springs' (E.), -ώδης 'id.' (Plu.). Also πιδήεσσα [f.] 'id.' (of Ἴδη, Λ 183); πιδυλίς (cod. πηδ-)· πέτρα, ἐξ ἧς ὕδωρ ῥέει 'a rock from which water flows' (H.). Verbs: πιδάω (also with δια-) [v.] 'to spring, spout up' (Arist.); πιδύω (also with ἀνα-, ἀπο-, δια-) 'id.' (Hp., Arist., Thphr.); πίδυσις [f.] 'trickling through' (Hp.).
•ETYM For πῖδαξ, πιδάω, and -ήεσσα, one might assume a noun *πίδ-ᾱ-, but πιδ-ύω and -υλίς point to an υ-stem *πῖδυς. No certain cognates outside Greek. The word could well be Pre-Greek (Fur.: 259). See ►πίσεα and ►πίτυς.

πιέζω [v.] 'to press, push, beset' (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR -έω (v.l. in Hom.; Hp., Herod., Plb.), aor. πιέσαι (IA), pass. πιεσθῆναι (θ 336), also πι-έξαι, -εχθῆναι (Hp., Epidaur.); fut. πιέσω, perf. med. πεπίεσμαι (Arist.; -ίεγμαι Hp.), act. πεπίεκα; also πιάζω (Alcm., Alc., Hell.), πιάσαι (-άξαι Theoc.), πιασθῆναι, πεπίασμαι (Hell.).
•COMP Often with συν-, ἐκ-, ἀπο-, etc.
•DER 1. πίε-σις (συν-, ἀπο-; also (-)πία-) [f.] 'pressing, pressure' (Pl., Arist.); 2. -σμός (ἐκ-, συν-, etc.) [m.] 'id.' (Hp., Arist.); 3. -σμα (ἀπο-, ἐκ-, etc.) [n.] 'pressure, compressed mass' (Hp., Eub.); 4. -στήρ [m.] 'presser, press' (Att. inscr., medic.), whence -στήριος 'pressing', ntr. 'press' (Dsc.); 5. -στρον [n.] 'id.' (Hp., Gal.).
•ETYM The variant πιάζω is an innovation after the verbs in -άζω, or by phonetic development from πιέζω. The etymology is uncertain. Skt. pīḍáyati 'to squeeze, press, hurt' < pisd- is very similar both in phonetics and semantics. If from pisd-, πιέζω might be connected with Gr. πτίσσω 'to bruise, to husk', Latin pīnsō 'to crush', Skt. pinásti 'id.' < PIE pis-. However, pis-d- would be a unique kind of enlargement in PIE. Also, the passage of alleged *πίζω to πιέζω would remain unexplained. Katz Glotta 72 (1994): 151-168 assumes a compound $h_1$pi-sd- with loss of the laryngeal in composition, which is an improbable rule.

πίθηκος [m.] 'monkey' (IA since Archil.). ⊲PG?⊳ •VAR Dor. -ᾱκος (Ar. Ach., Eg. inscr.).
•COMP πιθηκο-φαγέω [v.] 'to eat monkey(-meat)' (Hdt.), χοιρο-πίθηκος [m.] "pig-monkey", 'monkey with a pig's nose' (Arist.).
•DER 1. Diminutives: πιθήκ-ιον [n.] (Plaut.), also as a plant name (Ps.-Apul.), and as a designation of a weight hung between two warships (Ath. Mech.); -ιδεύς [m.] (Ael.). 2. Adjectives: -ώδης 'monkey-like' (Arist., Ael.), -ειος 'belonging to monkeys, monkey-' (Gal.); -όεις, fem. -όεσσα in Πιθηκοῦσσαι νῆσοι [f.pl.] 'the Monkey Islands', off the coast of Campania (Arist., Str.). 3. Verb -ίζω (also with ὑπο-, δια-) 'to play the ape', whence -ισμός [m.] 'monkey-trick' (Ar.). Metaphorically πιθήκη [f.] = ψύλλα, 'flea' (Ael.); consonant stem πίθηξ, -ηκος (Aesop.). Isolated is πίθων, -ωνος [m.] 'small monkey' (Pi., Babr.), probably a hypocoristic.
•ETYM The same suffix can be found e.g. in ἱέρᾱξ, μύρμηξ, thematicized also in ψιττακός. A loanword from an unknown language.

πίθος [m.] 'large, mostly earthen vessel for storing wine, which is open at the top' (Il.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •DIAL Myc. qe-to.
•COMP πιθ-οίγ-ια [n.] 'ceremony for the opening of vessels' (Plu.).

•DER πιθάκνη (Thasos V[a]), also in Att. mss., beside φιδάκνη (A., D., Thphr., Moer.), Dor. πισάκνα [f.] (H.); πιθάκνιον [n.] (Eub., Hyp., Luc.), -νίς [f.], φιδ- (Poll.). Other derivations: 1. diminutives πιθ-ίσκος [m.] (Plu. Cam. 20), -άριον [n.] (H., EM); 2. πιθ-(ε)ών, -ῶνος [m.] 'cellar' (com., inscr. IV--III[a]); 3. -ίας [m.] 'jar-shaped comet' (Seneca); 4. -ῖτις, -ιδος [f.] 'kind of poppy' (Dsc.); 5. -ώδης 'like a jar' (Arist.).
•ETYM The word displays vowel variation e : i (see the Myc. form), and consonant variation in πιθ- vs. φιδ-. Thus, probably Pre-Greek.

πικέριον [n.] = βούτυρον 'butter' (Hp.). ◄?► •ETYM Phrygian, according to Erotian. 73,13.

πικρός [adj.] 'sharp, pointed, piercing, bitter, painful' (Il.), on the meaning see Treu 1955: 78 and 273. ◄IE pik̂-ro-* 'motley, painted'► •COMP πικρό-χολος 'full of bitter gall' (Hp.), γλυκύ-πικρος 'bittersweet' (Sapph.), see Risch IF 59 (1949): 32.
•DER 1. Abstract: πικρ-ότης [f.] 'sharpness, bitterness, etc.' (IA), -ία [f.] 'id.' (D., Arist., Hell.). 2. plant name: πικρ-άς, -ίς, -ίδιον (Arist., Thphr., Ps.-Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 63; -άς [f.] also of the soil 'acid' (pap. III[a]); -ίδιος as an adjective 'somewhat bitter' (Ath.). 3. Verbs: πικρ-αίνομαι 'to become bitter, embitter', -αίνω 'to make bitter' (IA), also with ἐκ-, ἐν-, παρα-, etc.; thence -ασμός (παρα-) [m.] 'embitterment' (LXX, Ep. Hebr.), -αντικῶς [adv.] 'in an embittering way' (S. E.); πικρ-όομαι 'id.' (Hp., Arist., Thphr.), almost only with ἐκ-, with -ωσις [f.] (Gal.); back-formation ἔκπικρος 'very bitter' (Arist.), see Strömberg 1946: 73; cf. πικρ-άζομαι, -άζω 'id.' (S. E.), also with ἐκ-. 4. Substantivization πίκρα [f.] name of an antidote (Alex. Trall.). 5. PN Πρίκων [m.] (Eretria, Tanagra) with metathesis as in MoGr. πρικός (Kretschmer Glotta 6 (1915): 304).
•ETYM Formally identical to a Slavic word for 'motley', e.g. CS pъstrъ < IE pik̂ro-*, derived from a verb 'to sting, cut, embroider, paint'; cf. Skt. piṃśáti 'to carve, cut to measure, ornament', OCS pьsati 'to write'; further cognates under ►ποικίλος. The adjective πικρός has also been compared to Skt. śilpá- 'motley' (if metathesized from piśl á-*).

πίλα [f.] 'mortar' (POxy. 1890, 12). ◄LW Lat.►
•DER πιλάριον (medic.) 'eye-salve'.
•ETYM Loanword from Lat. pila.

πίλναμαι ⇒πέλας.

πίλος [m.] · κοχλιός 'screw' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

πῖλος [m.] 'felt, felt hat', also 'felt shoe, felt blanket, etc.' (K 265); as a plant name 'touchwood, Polyporus igniarius', also 'lotus bud' (Thphr.). ◄?►
•COMP κραταί-πιλος 'with hard felt' (A. Fr. 430 = 624 M.).
•DER 1. Diminutives: πιλ-ίον (Arist., Hell.), -ίδιον (Att.), -άριον (medic.), -ίσκος (Dsc.). 2. Adj. -ινος 'made of felt' (Andania I[a], Poll.) -ωτός 'id.' (Str.), -ώδης 'felt-like, pressed together' (Ptol.). 3. Verbs: πιλέω 'to felt, press together, make dense, knead' (Att., Hell.), also with prefix, especially συν-; thence πίλ-ησις [f.] 'felting, densening, concentration by cold' (Pl., Thphr.), -ημα [n.] 'felting, felted fabric' (Arist.), -ητικός, -ή (τέχνη) 'belonging to felting, the art of felting' (Pl., Arist.); πιλ-όομαι 'to concentrate, contract (oneself)' (Thphr.), trans. -όω, also with συν-, προσ-; thence -ωσις (v.l. of -ησις, Thphr.).
•ETYM Formally similar words for 'felt' are found in Latin, Germanic and Slavic: Lat. pilleus, -eum 'feltcap', OHG filz [m.], OE felt [m., n.], ORu. pъlstь [f.] 'feltcover', Ru. polst' [f.] 'cover, carpet, felt'. The Germanic words go back to a PGm. s-stem filtiz-, feltaz-, ostensibly from IE peld-os-* / pildos-* [n.]. If, however, the Germanic words were derived from OHG and MoHG falzen [v.] 'to connect, put on, in' (etc.), they can be dismissed. The Slavic words are ambiguous because the -ti- suffix may have been preceded by either d or s. Lat. pilleus, too, is ambiguous: it can be linked with Gr. πῖλος on the one hand, or with Lat. pilus 'hair' on the other. Schmidt KZ 32 (1893): 387f. reconstructed pil-s-*, which could be a zero grade of the IE s-stem pilos-* [n.] beside pilo-* [m.] 'hair'. This solution seems no longer convincing. More probably, we here have an old culture word of unknown origin (cf. Ernout BSL 30 (1930): 115). On the phonetic developments, see Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 243.

πιμελή ⇒πῖαρ.

πίμπλημι, -αμαι [v.] 'to fill, make full', intr. 'to fill oneself, become or be full' (Il.). ◄IE pleh$_1$-* 'fill'► •VAR -άνεται [3sg.] (I 679), rare -άω, -έω (Hp.), also πλήθω (intr., late also tr.; Il., epic poet.). Aor. πλῆ-σαι, -σασθαι, -σθῆναι, (Il.), intr. πλῆ-το, -ντο (epic), ἐν-έπλητο, etc. (Att.), fut. πλή-σω, -σομαι (Od.), -σθήσομαι (Att.), perf. med. πέπλησμαι (IA), act. πέπληκα (Att.), intr. πέπληθα (poet.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα- (συν-ανα-, προσ-ανα-, etc.), ἐν- (ἀντ-εν-, παρ-εν-, etc.). As a first member in some governing compounds, e.g. πλησίστιος 'filling the sail' (Od., E.), 'with full sails' (Ph., Plu.).
•DER 1. πλέως, Ion. πλέος, epic πλεῖος (for *πλῆος), ntr. πλέον 'full' (Il.), also with ἐν-, ἀνα-, ἐκ-, etc. from the compounded verbs. For the comparison of ►πλείων with the superl. πλεῖστος. 2. πλή-μη [f.] 'high tide, flood' (Plb., Str.), -σμη [f.] 'id.' (Hes. Fr. 217), πλῆμα· πλήρωμα 'complement' (H.), -σμα [n.] 'fertilization' (Arist.); -σμιος 'saturating, causing tedium' (Epicur., medic.); -σμονή [f.] 'fullness, congestion, (over)saturation' (IA), see Chantraine 1933: 207, with -σμονώδης (Hp., Gal.), -σμονικός (Pythag. Ep.) '(over)saturating'. On ►πλήμνη, see s.v. 3. πλή-ρης 'full' (IA); as a first member in e.g. πληρο-φορέω [v.] 'to fulfill' (Ctes., LXX, NT, pap.); πληρό-της [f.] 'fullness' (Plu.), πληρ-όω 'to make full, (ful)fill, finish, pay entirely' (IA), often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐκ-, ἀπο-, συν-; thence -ωμα (ἀνα-, συν-, etc.) [n.] 'filling, filling piece, full number, full payment, (full) crew' (IA), also -ωσις (ἀνα-, ἐκ- etc.) [f.] 'accomplishment, complement, satisfaction' (IA), -ωτής (ἐκ-, ἀπο-) [m.] 'finisher, executor, collector' (Att.), -ωτικός (ἀνα-, συν-, etc.) 'fulfilling, completing' (Epicur., medic. et al.). 4. πλῆ-θος [n.] 'fullness, mass (of people), herd' (Il., Dor., Arc.); often as a second member, e.g. παμ-πληθής 'consisting of a whole mass, very numerous' (Att.); -θᾶ [f.] 'id.' (Locr., Boeot.); -θῦς, -θύος [f.] 'id.' (Ion., Cret., Locr., Hell.); see Ruijgh 1957: 110; thence πλη-θύω [v.] 'to be full, become full, increase', -θύνομαι, -θύνω 'to belong to the mass, agree with it, augment oneself; to make full, augment' (A., Arist., LXX, NT); hence -θυσμός [m.] 'increase' (Procl., Simp.), -θυντικός 'plural' (gramm.); 5. πληθ-ώρα, Ion. -η [f.] 'fullness', medic. 'plethora, full-blooded' (Ion. Hell.); on the secondary barytonesis see Wackernagel and Debrunner Phil. 95 (1942): 181f. Thence πληθ-ωριάω [v.] 'to suffer from π.', -ωρικός 'plethoric' (Gal.), -ωρέω 'to be full' (Suid.).

•ETYM The conjugation has parallels in e.g. Indo-Iranian, viz. 3sg. aor. ἔ-πλησ-ε = Skt. á-prās < *é-pleh$_1$-s-t; 3sg.pres. πίμ-πλη-σι = Av. ham-pā-frāi-ti 'fills up' < *pe/i-pleh$_1$-ti, but the zero grade 1pl.pres. πίμ-πλα-μεν cannot regularly be from IE *pi-plh$_1$-mé, because this should have become πίμπλημεν (the ablaut was restored). Some nominal suffixations can be dated back to the parent language: e.g. πλή-ρης, Arm. lir 'fullness', Lat. plērus 'for the greater part', plērī-que 'most' < *pleh$_1$-r-; πλῆμα < *pleh$_1$-mn is echoed by the Lat. gloss plēminābantur· replēbantur. The theta as a suffix occurs in a number of presumably young formations, viz. πλῆ-θος, πλή-θ-ω, πέ-πλη-θα (cf. βρῖ-θος : βρί-θω : βέ-βρι-θα), but πληθῦς is comparable with Lat. plēbēs < *pleh$_1$-d^{h}uh$_1$- (on the original inflection, see Pok. 799f., Schrijver 1991: 380f., Kortlandt 1997b: 160, and De Vaan 2008: 471). See ►πολύς.

πίμπρημι [v.] 'to blow (up), fan, kindle, burn up' (Il.). ◄IE *prh$_1$- 'blow, blaze'► •VAR Inf. -άναι (IA), also -άω (X., Plb.), ipf. ἐν-έπρηθον (I 589), fut. πρήσω, aor. πρῆσαι (Il.), pass. aor. πρησθῆναι, perf. πέπρησμαι, -ημαι (IA, also Epid.), perf. act. πέπρηκα (Hp.).
•COMP Often with prefix, especially ἐν-.
•DER 1. πρηστήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'heavy gale, hurricane accompanied by a stroke of lightning' (Hes.), also 'bellows, jugular' and name of a snake that causes inflammation (Arist., Ds.), with πρηστηριάζω [v.] 'to ignite as if by lightning' (Hdn. Epim.); ἐμπρηστής [m.] 'incendiary' (Aq., Ptol.). 2. πρῆσις (mostly ἔμ-) [f.] 'blowing up, ignition, inflammation' (IA, Aret.); 3. ἐμπρησμός [m.] 'ignition, inflammation' (Hell.); 4. πρῆσμα [n.], -μονή [f.] 'id.' (Gal., Hippiatr.); παραπρή(σ)ματα [n.pl.] 'inflammations on the legs of horses' (pap.). 5. πρηστικός 'blowing up' (Hp. apud Gal.). Also 6. πρηδών, -όνος [f.] 'inflammatory swelling' (Nic., Aret.) and, with a suffix -μ-, πρημαίνω [v.] 'to blow intensively' (Ar. Nu. 336 [lyr.], Herod.), πρημονάω 'to snore, roar' vel sim. (Herod.), as if from *πρῆμα, *πρημονή. As a second member in βού-πρηστις, gen. -ιδος or -εως [f.] "inflammatress of cows", name of a poisonous insect (Hp.); for the formation cf. on βού-βρωστις.
•ETYM The verb πίμπρημι, πιμπράναι, πρήσω, πρῆσαι, πρησθῆναι, also πρήθω forms a sub-class with ►πίμπλημι, πιμπλάναι, etc. It seems to have been heavily influenced by it. Directly related is Hitt. parai-^{i} 'to blow, inflate, ignite' < *prh$_1$-(o)i- (Kloekhorst 2008: 631), but it is hardly related to Skt. prothati 'to cough, sneeze', pruṣṇóti 'to sprinkle', ON frúsa, frýsa, etc. (see Pok. 809).

πίναξ, -ακος [m.] 'wooden plank, dish, writing table, public statement, chart, painting' (Il.). ◄PG(S)►

•COMP Some compounds, e.g. πινακο-θήκη [f.] 'collection of paintings' (Str.), λειχο-πίναξ [m.] 'dish-licker' as a jocular name (Batr.).
•DER Diminutives: πινάκ-ιον (Att.), -ίς (com.), -ίδιον (Hp., Arist.), -ίσκος (com.), -ίσκιον (Antiph.). Other derivatives: πινακ-ι-κός 'belonging to the board' (Vett. Val.), -ιαῖος 'as thick (large) as a πίναξ' (Hippiatr.), -ωσις [f.] 'timber-, tablework' (Plu.); -ιδ-ᾶς [m.] 'salesman of πινακίδες' (Hdn. Gr.); -ηδόν 'like planks' (Ar.).
•ETYM The word belongs in technical contexts, like other formations with the productive -ακ- suffix; cf. κάμαξ, κλῖμαξ, στύραξ, πύνδαξ (Chantraine 1933: 377f.). It may perhaps be akin to the Slavic group of CS pьnь, Ru. pen' [m.] 'tree-stump, bobbin, stem' (but doubts in Derksen 2008: 427). The parallel suffixation of Skt. pínāka- [n.] 'staff, stick' is coincidental in any case. The word is probably Pre-Greek, in view of the suffix.

πίνη [f.] 'pen shell', late also 'pearl shell, pearl' (com., Arist., pap.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Younger πῖνα (codd. predominantly have -νν- instead of -ν- in pap. and inscr.).
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. πινο-τήρης [m.] "pen shell guard", name of a kind of crayfish (S., Ar., Arist.), ἀληθινό-πινος 'consisting of real pearls' (pap. II^p).
•DER πιν-άριον 'pearl shell, pearl' (pap.), -ικόν 'pearl' with -ίκιος 'of pearls' (Peripl. M. Rubr.), -ινος 'belonging to the πίνη' with λίθος = 'pearlshell' (LXX), -ώτιον 'earring made of pearls' (pap. III^p); probably haplological for *πιν-[εν]ώτιον.
•ETYM Perhaps from Hebr. pěnin 'coral' (Lewy KZ 55 (1928): 28), but in view of the variation ν/νν, it is more probably Pre-Greek (not in Fur.).

πῖνον [n.] 'beer' (Arist.). ◄PG?►
•ETYM Probably a foreign word, perhaps adapted to πίνω (cf. Schwyzer: 693^8).

πίνος [m.] 'dirt', on clothes, on the body, in the hair, 'grease in wool' (trag., Paul. Aeg.), 'coating, patina on bronze or metals', metaph. of archaic style (D. H., Plu.). ◄IE? *k^{w}in- 'dirt', PG?►
•COMP As a second member (with transition to the s-stems) in ἀ-πινής 'without dirt, clean' (Ath.), δυσ-, κακο-πινής 'badly begrimed' (S., Ar.); opposite εὐ-πινής 'neat, beautiful, plain' (Cratin., E., Cic.).
•DER πιναρός 'dirty' (com., E., inscr. Delos), πιναρ-ότης [f.] (Eust.), -όομαι in πεπιναρωμένα (Suid.); πιν-ηρός (Hp. apud Erot.), -όεις (Hp., A. R., AP), -ώδης (Hp., E., Lyc.) with -ωδία· ἀκαθαρσία 'uncleanness' (H.). Denominative: πιν-όομαι in πεπινω-μένος 'dirty, etc.' (Hell. poet., D. H., Cic., Plu.), ἀ<πο>πινοῦται· ἀπορυποῦται 'is cleaned' (H.); -άω in πινῶν (Ar. Lys. 279), after ῥυπῶν.
•ETYM The connection with Lat. caenum 'mud' is phonetically impossible (De Vaan 2008: 81), but the linkage with Lat. inquināre 'to soil' and Latv. svīnīt 'id.' < *k^{w}ein- (?) seems tenable. Further, hardly related to MoSw. dial. hven [f.] 'swamp' < *hwainō- (cf. Nw. dial. kvein 'blade of grass').

πινύσκω, πινυτη ⇒πινυτός.

πινυτός [adj.] 'intelligent, sensible, reasonable, prudent, rational' (Od.). ◄PG(V)►

•VAR Variant forms are πνυτός· ἔμφρων, σώφρων 'sensible, reasonable' (H.), frequent in Cypr. PN, e.g. Πνυτ-αγόρας (O. Masson Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 7 (1956): 238ff.).

•DER πιν-ύσσω (late epic) from pinut-y-*, aor. ind. ἐπίνυσσεν (Ξ 249), ptc. pass. πινυσθείς (Pythag.) 'to make deliberate, warn to be clear-minded' with πινυ-τή [f.] 'prudence' (H 289, υ 71 and 228, Hp. Ep.), -τότης [f.] (Eust.); further -τάς, -τᾶτος [f.] (Dor., AP), after ταχυ-τής etc. (Schwyzer: 529[1]); πίνυσις· σύνεσις 'comprehension', πινυμένην· συνετήν 'wise' (H.). Also ἀπινύσσω 'to be thoughtless, rash' (O 10, ε 342 = ζ 258), = ἀπινυτέω (Apollon. Lex.), from *ἀ-πίνυτος; adverb ἀπινύτως (H.), see ►ἀπινύσσων. Also pres. πινύσκω, -ομαι (Simon., A., Call., Orph.); probably from *πινυτ-σκ-.

•ETYM The relation between the relevant forms has not been satisfactorily explained thus far. Older explanations take πινυτός to have somehow developed out of a full grade form penu-* with ε raised to ι (Schulze 1892: 323[3], Frisk Eranos 43 (1945): 215ff., Nehring Class. Phil. 42 (1947): 108ff.), so as to connect the word with Lat. putāre 'to prune, estimate, consider', OCS pytati 'to examine, scrutinize' < p(e)ut-*. These attempts must be rejected for a number of reasons. First, a form penu- is not attested. Secondly, the change ε to ι is not systematic. Third, the alternation πινυτός ~ πνυτός is unexpected. The last variation is, however, known from Pre-Greek, and must reflect the varying rendering of a palatalized cluster, viz. *p^y*nut-* (cf. Beekes 2008: 51). The etymon has nothing to do with πνέω.

πίνω [v.] 'to drink' (Il.). ◄IE peh*$_3$-, ph$_3$-i- 'drink'►

•VAR Pres. Aeol. and Dor. (Call. Cer. 95) πώνω, fut. πίομαι, aor. ἔπιον, πιεῖν (all Hom.; later πεῖν), ipv. πῖθι (com. et al.), Aeol. πῶθι, pass. ἐπόθην with fut. ποθήσομαι, perf. act. πέπωκα (all Att.), med. πέπομαι (Od.); also causat. πιπίσκω, fut. πίσω, aor. πῖσαι, πισθῆναι, also with προ-, ἐν-, συν- et al. 'to give to drink, water' (Pi., Hp., Nic.).

•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. κατα-, ἐκ-, προ-, ὑπο-, ἐν-.

•DER A. From the zero grade πο-, mostly with suffix -τ-: 1. ποτόν [n.] 'beverage' (Il.), ποτός 'drinkable' (trag., Th.), ἔμποτος 'id.' (Aret.), πότος [m.] 'drinking, beverage' (Att., Theoc.); from this πότ-ιμος 'drinkable, fresh, pleasant' (IA), -ικός 'inclined towards drinking, etc.' (Alc. com., Plu.), most with συμ- 'belonging to the bacchanalia, pot companion' (Att.), see on ►συμπότης, -σιον; ποτ-ίζω, Dor. -ίσδω 'to make drink, drench' (IA, Theoc.), also with προ- et al., with -ισμός, -ισμα, -ιστές, -ιστήριον, -ιστρίς, -ίστρα.

2. ποτή [f.] 'drink, draught' (pap.), gen. and acc. -ῆτος, -ῆτα (Hom.), metrically enlarged, originally at verse end (Schwyzer: 529), not haplological from *ποτο-τη-τος, -τη-τα (as per Fraenkel Gnomon 21 (1949): 40 et al.); πότ-ημα [n.] '(medical) drink' (medic.), on the enlargement see Chantraine 1933: 178. 3. πόσις [f.] (also with προ-, κατα- etc. in different senses) 'drinking, drink, bacchanalia' (Il.), πόσιμος 'drinkable' (pap. IV[p], Ps.-Callisth.), cf. πότιμος above; on ►πόμα see s.v. 4. ποτήρ [m.] 'drinking cup' (E.), -ήριον [n.] 'id.' (Aeol., IA); πότης [m.] 'drinker' (only in πότης λύχνος Ar. Nu. 57), fem. πότις (com.); did both arise by decomposition from frequent compounds like συμπότης (Pi.), οἰνοπότης, -τις (Anacr., etc.), as supposed by Leumann Mus. Helv. 2 (1945): 12? Superl. ποτίστατος (Ar. et al.); to this derivatives like συμπόσ-ιον 'bacchanalia' (Pi., Alc.), καταπότ-ιον 'pill' (medic.), καταπότης 'throat' (H., Suid.); οἰνοποτ-άζω 'to drink wine' (Hom.). 5. καταπό-θρα [f.] '(region of the) throat' (Paul. Aeg.).

B. From the full grade: πῶμα [n.] 'draught, drink, beverage' (Att.), ἔκπω-μα [n.] 'drinking ware' (IA), beside πόμα (also πρό-, κατά-, ἔκ-) [n.] 'id.' (Pi., Ion. Hell.); ἔκπωτις = ἄμπωτις (Cat. Cod. Astr.); εὔπωνος ὄμβρος· εὔποτος 'easy to drink' (H.), γακου-πώνης· ἡδυπότης 'fond of drinking' (H.).

C. From the zero grade πῑ-: 1. πίστρα [f.], πῖστρα [n.pl.] 'drinks' (E. Cyc., Str.), also πισμός, πιστήρ, πιστήριον (H.); the -σ- is analogical, like in 2. πιστός 'drinkable, fluid' (A.), after χριστός acc. to Leumann *Mus. Helv.*14 (1957): 79, and in πιστικός 'id.' (Ev. Marc., Ev. Io.); 3. Boeot. πιτεύω [v.] 'to drench, give water' with ἀ-πίτευτος 'unwatered' (Thespiae III[a]), from a noun *πῑτ(ο)-; cf. below. Cf. Benveniste BSL 51 (1955): 29f. with litt.

•ETYM The n-presents πίνω and πώνω have no counterparts in other IE languages, and therefore seem to be innovations within Greek. An archaic formation is the reduplicated present pi-ph*$_3$-eti; cf. Skt. pibáti, Lat. bibō, OIr. ibid (with the change of initial b-* to p-* or medial *-ph$_3$- to *-b-), but it is absent from Greek. The root also had an aorist; cf. Skt. 1sg. á-pā-m < h*$_1$e-peh$_3$-m, and especially the imperative πῶ-θι (beside πῖ-θι; see below) = Skt. pā-hí < peh*$_3$*-*d^h*i*. This aorist may have served as a basis for the n-present πώνω. The perf. act. πέ-πω-κα corresponds to Skt. pa-páu < pe-poh*$_3$-, but may also have been created within Greek on the basis of πώνω (if not the other way around).

In addition, the widespread variation between p(e)h*$_3$- and p(e)h*$_3$i- presupposes the existence of an old i-present ph*$_3$-(e)i-; cf. OCS piti < ph*$_3$-i-, Skt. pītá- 'drunk' < ph*$_3$i-to-, and further the Skt. causative pāyáyati < poh*$_3$i-éie/o-. In Greek, this secondary root gave rise to the n-present πίνω (< ph*$_3$i-n-(i)e/o-), the factitive ἔ-πῖ-σα 'I gave to drink' (modeled after ἔ-στη-ν : ἔ-στη-σα, ἔ-φῡν : ἔ-φῡ-σα, etc.) and the reduplicated present πι-πί-σκω, while the primary p(e)h*$_3$- is still found in πώνω and in nominal formations such as ποτός 'drinkable', πῶμα 'drink', etc. (cf. Skt. pā-tár 'drinker' < peh*$_3$-ter-, pā́-na- [n.] 'drink' < peh*$_3$-no-, Lat. pōculum 'cup' < peh*$_3$-tlo-, etc.). It is mostly assumed that Hitt. pāš-[i] / paš- 'to swallow' derives from poh*$_3$-s-ei [3sg.]; see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. See ►ἄμπωτις and ►πῖνον.

πιπαλίς [f.] · ἡ παρά τισι χαλκίς, παρ' ἐνίοις δὲ σαῦρα 'a migratory fish, horse-mackerel' (H.). ◄?►

•ETYM Unknown.

πιπ(π)ίζω [v.] 'to beep' (Ar. Av. 306). ◄ONOM►

•ETYM An onomatopoeia, like MoE beep. See ►πιπώ.

πιπράσκομαι, -ω ⇒πέρνημι.

πῖπτω [v.] 'to fall (off), drop down, fall out' (Il.). ◄IE petH-* 'fly, fall'► •VAR Fut. πεσέομαι (epic Ion.), -οῦμαι (Att.), aor. πετεῖν, ἔπετον (Dor. Aeol.), πεσεῖν, ἔπεσον (IA), perf. ptc. acc. πεπτ-εῶτ', -εῶτας (epic), nom. -ηώς (Ion.), which may also be from πτήσσω, πεπτ-ώς (trag.); ind. πέπτωκα, ptc. -ωκώς (Att.).

•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. εἰσ-, ἐκ-, ἐμ-, ἐπι-, κατα-, μετα-, περι-, προ-, συμ-, ὑπο-.
•DER 1. πότ-μος [m.] 'fate, destiny, (fate of) death' (Il., epic poet.). 2. πτῶ-μα [n.], often prefixed (σύμ-, etc.) in different senses, 'fall, which has fallen, corpse' (Att. A., Hell.), whence diminutive -μάτιον (inscr. Asia Minor), -ματίς [f.] 'tumbling cup' (Mosch. apud Ath.), -ματικός 'inclined towards falling, etc.' (Hell.), -ματίζω 'to bring down' (Hell.) with -ματισμός [m.] 'falling sickness' (Ptol.). 3. πτῶ-σις (σύμ-, etc.) [f.] 'fall' (Hp., Att.), i.a. 'throw of the die', whence as a grammatical term '(in)flectional form, case form' (Arist.), with -σιμος 'brought down' (A.), perhaps after ἁλώσιμος; -τικός (μετα-, etc.) 'inflectable' (gramm.). 4. πέσ-ος [n.] 'corpse' (E. [lyr.]), -ημα [n.] 'fall, which has fallen down, corpse' (trag.), see Chantraine 1933: 184; -ωμα [n.] 'plunge' (vase inscr.), after πτῶμα. 5. -πετής i.a. in περι-πετής 'falling down, blundering into something', προ-πετής 'ready, rash', with περι-, προ-πέτ-εια [f.] (IA); also in compounds like εὐ-πετής 'turning out well, convenient, fortunate', with -εια [f.] (IA); ►διι-πετής s.v. 6. -πτώς in ἀ-πτώς, -ῶτος 'not falling' (Pi., Pl.); also -πτης in ἄπτης (inscr. Olympia)? On ►ποταμός, see s.v.
•ETYM The derivational history of the different formations poses many problems. The formation πῑ́πτω represents PIE pi-pt-e/o- or pi-pth$_1$-e/o- (latter form in LIV[2] s.v. peth$_1$-), but the origin of the vowel length (noted by Hdn. Gr. 2, 377) is unclear. Influence from ῥῑ́πτω is usually assumed. The Schwebeablaut of πετ- with the roots πτω-, πτη- in πέ-πτω-κα, πτῶ-μα, -σις, πε-πτη-ώς (peth$_1$- : pte/oh$_1$-*?) is problematic, but does not have to be old; it may be a secondary innovation within Greek. The same is probably true for the n-present πίτ-νω (also -νῶ), which has an anaptyctic ι, like other n-presents (e.g. ►πίτνημι). The -σ- in the IA aorist and future is unexpected, and its origin is unclear.
The whole system seems to be a specific Greek development of the old IE verb also found in πέτομαι 'to fly', Skt. pátati 'to fly, fall'. Further details s.v. ►πέτομαι; cf. also ►πτήσσω and ►πίτυλος (the latter hardly belongs here).

πῑπώ, -οῦς [f.] 'woodpecker, Picus maior and minor' (Arist. [v.ll. πίπος, πίπρα, etc.], Lyc.). ◅PG?▻ •ETYM Formation like ἀηδώ, τυτώ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 115f.), probably onomatopoeic like ►πιππίζω, Skt. píppakā [f.] name of a bird. A similar bird name πίππος or πῖπος is supposed by Ath. 9, 368f. for ἵππους. The name may well be Pre-Greek; cf. ►πίφιγξ.

πισάκιον [n.] · περιστόμιον 'mouth of a vessel' (H.). ◅?▻ •ETYM See Schmidt's edition of Hesychius.

πισγίς, -ίδος [f.] ˜ = πύξις 'box, of box-wood' (IG 11(2), 287: B 50; 54 [Delos III^a]). ◅?▻ •ETYM The word is phonetically incompatible with πύξις within the Indo-European framework. The variation of pisg-* with puks-* (pugs-*?) could point to a Pre-Greek substrate word.

πίσεα [n.pl.] 'humid prairies' (Il.). ◅?▻
•DER πισεύς 'inhabitant of low terrains' (Theocr. 25, 201).
•ETYM Has been compared with Steph. Byz. Πῖσα· πόλις καὶ κρήνη τῆς Ὀλυμπίας. Chadwick Minos 9 (1968): 64 reconstructs *Πισϝα on the basis of Mycenaean facts.

πίσος [m.] 'pea, Pisum arvense' (com., Thphr.). ◅LW?▻
•VAR Also -ον [n.].
•DER πίσινος 'made out of peas' (Ar.).
•ETYM LW from an unknown source. Lat. pisum is identical, probably as a loan from Greek (cf. WH s.v.).

πῖσος [n.] 'meadows, pastures' (Υ 9 = ζ 124, Call. Fr. anon. 57, A. R. 1, 1266). ◅PG?▻
•VAR Only plur. ►πίσεα.
•ETYM No certain etymology. Traditionally analyzed as *πῖδ-σος, related to ►πῖδαξ, ►πιδύω, etc.; this is rejected by Fur.: 260[48] and 254[27], who takes the alternation δ/σ to point to Pre-Greek origin.

πίσσα [f.] 'pitch' (Il.). ◅IE? pik-* 'pitch, resin'▻ •VAR Att. πίττα.
•COMP E.g. πισσο-, πιττο-κοπέω 'to besmear, depilate with pitch' (Att. inscr., com., Thphr.), κηρό-πισσος [f.] 'mix of wax and pitch' (Hp.).
•DER 1. Diminutive πισσάριον [n.] (medic.); 2. Several adj. (Att. forms are not separately indicated): πισσ-ηρός (Hp.), -ήρης (A.), -ινος (Att.), -ήεις (Nic.) 'pitchy'; -ώδης 'pitch-like' (Arist., Thphr.); -ίτης (οἶνος) 'tasting like pitch' (Str.); 3. Verbs πισσ-όω, πιττ-όω, -όομαι 'to besmear, depilate (oneself) with pitch' (since IV^a), whence -ωσις, -ωτής, -ωτός (Hell.); also -ίζω [v.] 'to taste like pitch' (sch.); *-άω in πίσσᾱσις [f.] 'a pitching over' (Epid. IV^a).
•ETYM Old designation of pitch and resin, an inherited word also retained in Lat. and in Slav. The oldest form is Lat. pix, pic-is [f.] < IE pik-*; thence, Greek derived πίσσα with a suffix -i̯α, like in νῆσσα, μυῖα, etc. Slavic shows a suffix -l-, e.g. CS pьkъlъ, OCS pьcьlъ [m.]. As a loan, the word has spread further: from Lat. pix to Germanic, e.g. OHG peh, from Gm. to Lith. pìkis, Ru. pek, etc. (Pok. 794). Another option is to connect ►πίτυς.

πιστάκη [f.] 'pistachio tree' (Alciphr.). ◅LW Iran.▻
•DER πιστάκιον (also βιστ-, ψιττ-, φιττ-) [n.] 'pistachio' (Nic., Posidon., Dsc.).
•ETYM Foreign word of Oriental origin; cf. MoP pista 'pistachio (nut)'. On the suffix -(α)κ-, see Chantraine 1933: 376.

πίστις, πιστός ⇒πειθομαι.

πῖσυγγος [m.] 'shoemaker' (Sapph., Alex. Aet., Herod., com. apud Poll.). ◅PG(S)▻ •VAR Also -σσ-. See below on πεσσ-/ττ-.
•DER -ύγγιον [n.] 'shoemaking' (com. apud Poll., Hdn. Gr.). Besides πέσσυμπτον· σκυτεῖον 'shoemaker's workshop' and πεσσύπτη· σκυτεύ<τ>ρια 'female shoemaker' (H.). Cf. πεττύκια [n. pl.] 'small pieces of leather' (Moer.).
•ETYM A Pre-Greek word (Fur.: 357), as revealed by the suffix -υγγ-.

πίσυνος ⇒πείθομαι.

πίσυρες ⇒τέσσαρες.

πιτεύω 'to drench, give water'. ⇒πίνω.

πιττάκιον [n.] 'writing table, leaflet, note, letter, label, etc.', also 'list of members, society' (Dinol., Plb., Hell., pap. and inscr.). ◂LW Thrac.?▸
•COMP πιττακι-άρχης [m.] 'chairman of the society'.
•DER Diminutive -ίδιον [n.] and -ίζω 'to label' (pap.).
•ETYM Origin unknown; Friedmann 1937: 51ff. assumes that the word came from Thracia via Lesbos (cf. Πίττακος). Both πίσσα (Bq) and πεττύκια (s.v.) are unrelated. Borrowed as Lat. pittacium.

πίτυλος [m.] 'stroke of an oar', metaph. 'rhythmical, heavy beat, attack, etc.' (trag.). ◂?▸
•DER πιτυλεύω [v.] 'to make a stroke with an oar', also metaph. (Ar. V. 678, Com. Adesp. 3 D.), -ίζω 'id.' (Gal.).
•ETYM No etymology. The connection with πίπτω, πέτομαι (favored by DELG) does not convince. Cf. on ►πίτῡρα.

πίτῡρα [n.pl.] 'husks of corn, bran', also metaph. = 'bran-like rash, sediment' (Hp., D., Thphr.). ◂PG? (S, V)▸ •VAR Rarely -ον [sg.].
•DER πιτῡρ-ίς (also -ις) [f.] 'bran-colored olive' (Call.), -ίας [m.] 'bread baked of bran' (Gal., Poll.), -ίτης (ἄρτος) 'id.' (Philem. gloss. apud Ath., Gal.), -ώδης 'bran-like' (Hp., Thphr.), -όομαι [v.] 'to suffer from pituriasis' (Hp.), -ίζω [v.] 'to have bran on oneself' (pap.), with -ισμα [n.] 'scab' (Hdn. Gr.); -ίασις [f.] 'bran, scab' (medic.), from *-ιάω, cf. ψωρίασις etc. On the PN Πιτυρεύς see Boßhardt 1942: 119.
•ETYM Formation like λέπῡρον, but without a certain explanation. Dissimilation from *πύτῡρον has been assumed (cf. Schwyzer: 258, Specht KZ 61 (1934): 277 ff.), with a root etymology connecting Lat. putus 'clean', putāre 'to purify, etc.', Skt. pávate 'to purify', of grain and other things, pávana- [n.] 'winnow, sieve'; this is highly unlikely. In favor of connection with πίτυλος, Thumb KZ 36 (1900): 180 adduced semantic parallels. Note the synonymous glosses πήτεα· πίτυρα, πητῖται· πιτύρι<ν>οι ἄρτοι (H.), which are connected with πῆν, ►πάσσω. Because of its -ι-, πίτυρα cannot be combined with these, unless we assume substrate origin. The same is suggested by the suffix -ῡρ- (Fur.: 262). Cf. ►πτύον.

πίτυς, -υος [f.] 'pine, fir, spruce' (Hom., Hdt., Thphr.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Epic dat.pl. -υσσιν.
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. πιτυο-κάμπη [f.] 'pine caterpillar' (Dsc.), χαμαί-πιτυς [f.] plant name (Nic., Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 61f., 109.
•DER Diminutive πιτύ-διον [n.] (Plin., Theognost.), πιτυ-ίς, -ίδος [f.] 'pine seed' (Dsc.), -ινος 'made of pinewood' (Hp. Thphr.), -ώδης 'rich in pines' (Alcm., Str.); -ουσα (v.l. -οῦσσα) [f.] 'kind of milkweed, Euphorbia' (Dsc.), on the formation see Strömberg 1940: 43; -οῦσσαι [f.pl.] name of a group of islands on the Spanish coast; -οῦς, -οῦντος [m.] name of a town on the Black Sea (Str.), -εια [f.] town in Mysia (B 829), -ασσος [f.] town in Pisidia (Str.); cf. von Blumenthal ZONF 13 (1937): 155 and 158.
•ETYM πίτυς resembles Lat. pīnus [f.] 'fir, pine' and Alb. pishë 'fir, pine', both with an unclear basis and, on the other hand, Skt. pī́tudāru-, pūtúdru- [m.] tree name (extensive treatment in Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 137f.). Benveniste BSL 51 (1955): 29ff. argued against the procedure of collecting all kinds of phonetically similar forms that should be kept separate semantically (e.g. ►πίων, ►πίνω, ►πίτυς, etc.). Fur.: 260 compares the toponyms Πισύη = Πιτύη (St. Byz.) and concludes that the word is Pre-Greek; not very certain.

πιφαύσκω ⇒φάος.

πίφιγξ [?] name of an unknown bird (Arist., Ant. Lib., EM), acc. to H. = κορυδαλλός 'lark'; also πιφαλλίς (after κορυ-δαλλίς?) (H.). ◂PG(S,V)▸ •VAR Also -φιξ, -φηξ.
•ETYM Probably an onomatopoeia, and as such comparable to ►πιπ(π)ίζω, ►πιπώ; the suffixation is reminiscent of instances such as σάλπιγξ, πέρδιξ, etc., and the morphological variation between -ιξ and -ιγξ strongly points to Pre-Greek origin. For further details, cf. Chantraine 1933: 397ff., 382 and Thompson 1895 s.v. ►πιφαλλίς.

πίφρημι [v.] 'to let in, bring in, out, or through', intr. 'to intrude, come in, etc.' (com., E., also Th., D., Arist., Plb.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Only inf. ἐσ-πιφράναι (Arist.), beside -φρέω in εἰσ-έφρουν (D.), -εφρούμην (E.). Otherwise only future and aorist forms, always with prefix, especially εἰσ- (ἐπ-εισ-, etc.) and ἐκ-, but also δια- and ἀπο-: εἰσ-, ἐκ-, δια-φρήσω; ἀπο-, εἰσ-, ἐξ-έφρησα, ἐκ-φρησθῆναι; also (ἐπ-)εισ-, ἐξ-έφρηκα with subj. ἐπ-εσ-φρῶ, ptc. ἐπ-εισ-φρείς, inf. εἰσ-φρῆναι (for -φρεῖναι? H.), ipv. ἔκ-φρες (Ar. V. 162 with Buttmann; codd. ἔκφερε); to this ipf. ἐξ-εφρίομεν (Ar. V. 125), for -εφρίεμεν?
•ETYM The verb primarily occurs in the future and aorist, presentic formations being scant and secondary. Thus, εἰσ-έφρουν, -εφρούμην is modeled after the type ἐφίλουν, the hapax ἐσ-πιφράναι after ἱστάναι, πι(μ)πλάναι, etc. This infinitive, then, can hardly be based on a conjectured 1pl. *πί-φρα-μεν corresponding to Skt. bibhr̥más (pace e.g. Pok. 128). Most probably, the verb is to be analyzed as from *προ-ΐημι, the aspiration being taken on by the initial π after the loss of ο (cf. on ►φροῦρος). This process probably took place in the aorist forms: -φρήσω, -έ-φρηκα continuing -πρ(ο)-ἥσω, -πρ(ο)-ἧκα. Hence, the reduplicated present developed.

πίων •VAR Fem. πίειρα. ⇒πῖαρ.

πλάγγος [m.] name of a kind of eagle (Arist.; v.l. πλάνος), plancus (Plin.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Frisk assumes derivation from πλάζομαι 'to wander about', which is not evident. The word may well be Pre-Greek (Fur.: 122).

πλαγγών [f.] 'wax figure, wax doll' (Call. Cer. 91). ◂?▸

•DER πλαγγόνιον [n.] 'kind of ointment' (Polem. Hist. apud Ath. 15, 690e, Sosib., Poll.).
•ETYM Etymology unknown. According to Polem., πλαγγόνιον was named after the discoverer Πλαγγών; Frisk wonders whether the noun πλαγγών has the same origin, but on the whole, the semantic gap between 'wax figure' and 'salve' is hardly big enough to justify etymological separation of the two words.

πλάγιος [adj.] 'oblique, athwart, sloping; crooked', τὰ πλάγια 'the sides, flanks' (Pi., IA). The sense 'horizontal', misleadingly given as the first mg. by Frisk, must derive from 'transverse'. ⊲PG?⊳
•COMP E.g. πλαγιό-καυλος 'with side stalks' (Thphr.), see Strömberg 1937: 108f., παρα-πλάγιος 'sideways, oblique' (Thphr.).
•DER πλαγι-άζω [v.] 'to turn amiss, sideward; to lead astray' (LXX, Ph., Plu.) with -ασμός [m.] 'lateral direction, aberrance' (Epicur.); -όω 'id.' (X.), with -ωσις (H.) as an explanation of λόξωσις; further also πλάγος [n.] 'side' (Tab. Heracl.).
•ETYM Ostensibly from QIE pl̥g-iHo-, but the non-laryngeal root of this reconstruction is incompatible with supposed cognates like ►πέλαγος 'sea' < pelh₂g-o- (should this word be related). In view of Gm. correspondences such as OHG flah 'flat', OS flaka [f.] 'sole of the foot' (further cf. ON flóki [m]., OE flōc [n.] 'flounder'), presupposing plog-* or plag-, it may be proposed to reconstruct πλάγιος as plag-. Since PIE did not have a phoneme a*, the word may be from a European substrate. The variant ►πλάξ, -ακός [f.], too, can be understood from this perspective. However, unlike for ►πλάξ, the semantic side of this connection is not evident.
As Van Beek suggests (p.c.), a semantically better connection would be that with ►πλάζω 'to lead astray' and perhaps ►ἀμπλακίσκω 'id.', in which case the group may be from Pre-Greek (a)ᵐplaⁿk-*. Cf. on ►πλήσσω and ►πλάζω.

πλαδαρός [adj.] 'damp, watery, spongy, soft, flaccid, tasteless' (Hp., A. R., Dsc.). ⊲PG?⊳
•DER πλαδαρ-ότης [f.] 'flaccidity' (Epicur.), -όομαι [v.] 'to become soft' (Aq.), -ωσις [f.] (medic.), -ωμα [n.] (Suid.). Further πλαδάω [v.] 'to be watery, soft' (Hp., Arist., Ph.) with -ησις [f.] (Sor.); also -ωσις [f.] (Aët.), as if from *-όω; πλάδος [m.] 'dampness, sponginess' with -ώδης (Hp.), -όεις (sch.); πλάδη [f.] 'id.' (Emp.), perhaps a back-formation from πλαδάω.
•ETYM Unclear word, found especially in medical literature; an apparent derivational pattern emerges from πλαδ-αρός : -άω : -ος and the semantically close rhyming words κλαδ-αρός : -άω : -ος, μαδ-αρός : -άω : -ος; also ῥυπ-αρός : -άω : -ος (see Chantraine 1933: 227). Clearly, several words that were originally more dissimilar influenced each other formally, semantically, or both. As a result, it is risky to reconstruct the original form of πλαδ-αρός. Lith. peldė́ti 'to swim' (cf. Fraenkel 1955: 565) < IE peld-* comes into consideration, but hardly Lith. pìlti 'to pour' < plh₁-*, ►πλέω, or even ►πολύς. Alternatively, we may consider a Pre-Greek origin for the word.

πλαδδιάω [v.] 'to babble' vel sim. (Lacon.); cf. πλαδ<δ>ιῇ· ματαΐζει, σοβαρεύεται 'to speak folly, act pompous' (H.). ⊲?⊳

•VAR Only inf. πλαδδιῆν and ipv. πλαδδίη (Ar. Lys. 171 and 990).
•ETYM Perhaps modeled after verbs in -ιάω designating diseases (Schwyzer: 732), but at any rate onomatopoeic; cf. MLG pladderen 'to babble'.

πλάζω, -ομαι [v.] 'to make devious, repel, dissuade from the right path, bewilder', med.pass. 'to become devious, go astray, wander about' (Il.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Aor. πλάγξαι, pass. πλαγχθῆναι, fut. πλάγξομαι.
•COMP Also with παρα-, ἀπο-, etc.
•DER πλαγκτός 'devious, mad, bewildered' (φ 363, epic poet.), Πλαγκταί [f.pl.] (scil. πέτραι) (μ 61, etc.), meaning not quite clear; πλαγκτο-σύνη [f.] 'wandering about' (ο 343, Nonn.); πλαγκ-τύς, -ύος [f.] 'id.' (Call.); -τήρ [m.] epithet of Dionysus (AP), 'confuser' or 'wanderer'?, -τειρα ἀτραπιτός 'zodiac' (Hymn. Is.). Appurtenance of ►πλάγγος is uncertain.
•ETYM Usually connected as plang-i̯e/o-* with Lat. plangō 'to hit', Go. faiflokun 'ἐκόπτοντο' (cf. Pok. 832-833) < IE pleh₂g-. The shortness of the α is unexpected, however, as plh₂g- should have given πληγ-; in principle, it is conceivable that it spread from forms with a nasal infix by Osthoff's law, i.e. *πλᾱγγ- > *πλᾰγγ-. Frisk points at the formal agreement between πλάγξαι, πλαγκτός, and Lat. plānxi, plānctus.
However, the semantics of the Latin verb are different, 'to beat (the breast)' > 'to bewail', and it is probably rather related to ►πλήσσω. It is not evident at all that the meaning 'to drive off course' derives from 'to beat'; rather, πλήσσω and πλάζω influenced each other both semantically and formally. Van Beek (p.c.) suggests that πλάζω is related to ἀμπλακίσκω as a Pre-Greek word (a)ᵐplaⁿk-*, to which πλάγιος may perhaps also be connected.

πλάθανον [n.] 'cake mold or form' (Theoc., Nic.). ⊲PG⊳ •COMP Synthetic compounds like κορο-πλάθος [m.] 'one who forms feminine figures, doll modeller' (Pl., Isoc.).
•DER πλαθανίτας ἄμυλος 'cake baked in a mold' (Philox. 3, 17; not quite certain); πλαθά [f.] 'image, εἰκών' (Dor. in Plu.).
•ETYM See ►πλάσσω.

πλᾱ́θω 'to approach' (Dor.).
•ETYM See ►πέλας.

πλαίσιον [n.] 'long quadrangle, rectangle, rectangular frame' (Att.). ⊲LW Lyd.⊳
•DER πλαισιόομαι [v.] 'to be put into a πλαίσιον' (Delos).
•ETYM No relation with the synonymous πλιν-θίον (pace Frisk), but a direct loan from Lyd. bλaso /plʸasʸo/ 'socle'. This word is related to Hitt. palzaḫ(ḫ)a-, palzašḫa- 'pedestal, a flat base for statues', which Kloekhorst 2008: 623 reconstructs as plth₂-sh₂o-* (cf. Gr. πλατύς). Fur.: 260 also appropriately adduces πλάτας 'basis of a tomb' (inscr. Patara), which is very likely to be of Anatolian origin.

πλανάομαι, -άω [v.] 'to go astray, wander, go about, sway'; 'to lead astray, lead around, deceive' (Ψ 321). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Fut. πλανήσομαι, -ηθήσομαι, aor. -ηθῆναι, perf. πεπλάνημαι.

•COMP Also with περι-, ἀπο-, etc.
•DER 1. πλάν-ημα [n.] 'straying, going astray' (A., S.), -ησις [f.] 'leading astray, suggesting' (Th.), ἀπο- 'wandering' (Pl., LXX); a very common back-formation is 2. πλάνη [f.] 'extravagating, (pointless) wandering about, odyssey, mistake' (IA); 3. πλάνης, -ητος [m.] 'who wanders around, wanderer', also 'wandering star, planet' (Scherer 1953: 40f.), medic. 'unstable temperature', [adj.] 'wandering' (IA); thence enlarged πλαν-ήτης, Dor. -άτας [m.] 'id.' (trag., etc.), -ῆτις [f.] (Lyc.) with -ητικός 'infiltrating, misleading' (Str., sch.), -ητεύω [v.] 'to wander about' (AB).
From πλανάω probably also the back-formation 4. πλάνος [m.] = πλάνη, also 'tramp, vagabond, deceiver', as an adjective 'errant, misleading' (trag., Pl.), with πλαν-ώδης 'inconstant, irregular, sliding away' (medic.), -ιος 'wandering about' (AP); also ἀπόπλαν-ος, -ίας; περιπλάν-ιος, -ίη (AP et al.).
5. Opaque formation πλα-νύττω 'to wander about' (Ar. Av. 3); 6. As a second member very often -πλανής and -πλανος, -πλάνος, e.g. ἀ-πλανής (ἀστήρ) 'fixed star' (Pl., Arist.), ἁλί-πλανος 'wandering the sea' (Opp.), λαο-πλάνος 'leading the people astray' (J.).
•ETYM Uncertain etymology. Perhaps a thematization of a nasal present pl-néh$_2$-ti*, pl-nh$_2$-énti* > πλανᾶσι, πλανανσι, corresponding to the IE root pleh$_2$-* 'broad, flat' (cf. Lat. plānus), but the semantics are highly problematic. Borrowed as Lat. planus [m.] 'tramp', planētae [f.pl.] 'planets, etc.', implanō, -āre 'to seduce' (= πλανάω). The meaning strongly recalls ►πλάζω, but it is hard to think of a formal connection.

πλάξ, -ακός [f.] 'plane, plain, surface of a sea, a mountain' (Pi., trag.), 'flat stone, board, table' (Hell.). ◂?▸
•COMP As a second member probably in ►δίπλαξ (see s.v. and Fraenkel 1910: 37[4]), and τρί-πλαξ.
•DER 1. Diminutive πλακ-ίον [n.] (Troezen IV[a]), -ίς· κλινίδιον 'small couch' (H.). 2. -άς [f.] 'floor of a wine cellar' (pap. II[p]). 3. -ίτας ἄρτος 'flat cake' (Sophr.), -ῖτις [f.] 'kind of calamine or alum' (Gal.). 4. Adjective -ερός 'flat' (Theoc.), -όεις 'id.' (D. P.), -ινος 'made of marble slabs' (inscr.), -ώδης 'overdrawn with panes, a crust' (Arist.). 5. πλακ-οῦς, -οῦντος (from -όεις) [m.] '(flat) cake' (com., etc.), with -ούντ-ιον, -ικός. -ινος, -ᾶς, etc. 6. πλακ-όω [v.] 'to cover with slabs of marble' (Syria), with -ωσις [f.] (Asia Minor), -ωτή [f.] 'kind of calamine' (Dsc.). 7. TN: Πλάκος [m.] part of Mount Ida (Il.), with ὑποπλάκ-ιος (Z 397), -ος (Str.); Πλακίη [f.] name of a Pelasgian colony on the Propontis (Hdt.), with πλακιανόν [n.] a kind of eyesalve (Aët.).
•ETYM Apparently from a root noun plk-s*; cf. (with different vocalism) Latv. plakt 'to become flat', plaka [f.] 'low lying place, plain', ON flaga [f.] 'thin layer, flatness' < plok-eh$_2$-*; possibly directly related to a Germanic root noun with lengthened grade: ON fló, pl. flœr [f.] 'layer, stratum'< plōk-s*, plōk-es*; perhaps also OHG fluoh, MoHG Flühe, Swi. Fluh [f.] 'rockwall'. From πλακοῦς, -οῦντος came Lat. placenta 'a kind of flat cake' (phonetic details unclear). Beside plk-, we also find plg- in ►πλάγιος, pld*^{h}- in ►πλάσσω, and plh$_2$-* in ►παλάμη. It is uncertain whether any of these is related. The connection with ►πέλαγος is doubtful.

-πλάσιος •VAR in δι-, τρι-, πολλα-πλάσιος etc., late Att. Hell. -πλασίων. ➡διπλάσιος.

πλάσσω [v.] 'to knead, form, mold, shape (a soft mass); to think up, imagine, pretend' (Hes.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Att. -ττω, fut. πλάσω, aor. πλάσ(σ)αι (Hes.), pass. πλασθῆναι, perf. πέπλασμαι (IA), act. πέπλακα (Hell.).
•COMP Very often with prefix in different senses, e.g. κατα-πλάσσω 'to spread, besmear', ἐμ-πλάσσω 'to smear, stop up' (cf. below).
•DER Action nouns: 1. πλάσμα [n.] 'forming, formation, fiction' (IA) with -ματίας [m.] 'fictional', -ματώδης 'id.' (Arist.), -ματικός 'id.' (S. E.); ἔμ-, ἐπί-, κατά-πλασμα [n.] 'plaster' (medic.). 2. πλάσις (ἀνά-, κατά-, etc.) [f.] 'forming, formation, figuration' (Hp., Arist.). 3. ἀνα-πλασμός [m.] 'figuration' (Plu.), μετα-πλασ-μός [m.] 'transformation' (gramm.), etc. 4. κατα-πλαστύς [f.] 'besmearing' (Hdt. 4, 175).
Agent and instrument nouns: 5. πλάστης [m.] 'former, molder, maker' (Pl.), often in synthetic compounds, e.g. κηρο-πλάστης [m.] 'modeller in wax' (Pl.), with -έω (Hp.), etc.; πλάσ-τις (Ael.), -τειρα (Orph., APl.), -τρια (Theol.Ar.). 6. πλάστρον [n.] 'earring' (Att. inscr., etc.), ἔμπλασ-τρον [n.], -τρος [f.] 'ointment' or 'plaster' (Dsc., Gal., pap.).
Adjectives: 7. πλαστός 'formed, shaped, thought up' (Hes.), ἔμπλασ-τον [n.], -τος [f.] 'ointment, plaster' (Hp.); πλαστή [f.] 'clay wall' (pap.) with περι-, συμ-πλαστεύω [v.] 'to surround, construct with π.', πλαστευτής [m.] 'builder of a π.' (pap.). 8. πλαστικός (προσ-, ἐν-, ἀνα-) 'suitable for forming, plastic' (Pl.).
Directly from the verbal root 9. πλάθ-ανον [n.] 'cake mold or form' (Theoc., Nic.), πλάθανίτας ἄμυλος 'cake baked in a mold' (Philox. 3, 17; not quite certain); πλαθά [f.] 'image, εἰκών' (Dor. in Plu.); synthetic compounds like κορο-πλάθος [m.] 'one who forms feminine figures, doll modeller' (Pl., Isoc.).
•ETYM From πλαθ-ι̯ω < QIE pld^{h}-ie/o-. The stem pld*^{h}- cannot be Indo-European, however, because roots with both plain stops and voiced aspirates were not allowed. It has been considered an inner-Greek innovation, comparable to formations such as πλή-θω, βρί-θω, etc. (Schwyzer: 703). However, since the verb shows no traces of a laryngeal, it cannot be (directly) related to the group of pelh$_2$-* 'broad', e.g. παλάμη, OHG folma 'palm of the hand' < pélh$_2$-m*, plh$_2$-m-ós*, plh$_2$-ém-m*, Lat. plānus 'flat' < plh$_2$-no-*, etc. (pace e.g. Pok. 805ff.). Perhaps, however, this root became conflated with that of Gr. πλατύς, Skt. pr̥thú- 'flat' < plth$_2$-u-*. From ἔμπλαστρον was borrowed Lat. emplastrum, whence MoFr. emplâtre, etc.; also, MLat. plastrum 'plaster', MoFr. plâtre, OHG pflastar, etc.
The word may well be Pre-Greek, both due to the lack of etymology and in view of the anomalous root structure.

πλάστιγξ, -ιγγος [f.] 'scales' (Att.), also 'disk of the kottabos-standard' (Critias, Hermipp.), metaph. 'oyster shell' (Opp.), 'horse-collar', which hangs from the wood of the yoke, like the scales from the weigh-bridge (E. Rh. 303), also (plur.) 'surgical splints' (Hippiatr.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR πλήστιγγες [pl.] 'id.' (Hp. apud Gal. 19, 131).

•ETYM From a stem πλαστ- (the hapax πλήστιγ-γες points to a root variant *πλᾱστ- with a long vowel, but the evidentiality of this form is limited) plus the suffix -ιγγ- (Chantraine 1933: 398ff., Schwyzer: 498). The etymological base of the word is not clear. Formally there is no reason to disconnect the word from ►πλάσσω 'to knead, mold' < *pld^h-ie/o-, but this linkage is not evident on the semantic side. The same holds true for the connection with IE *$plth_2$- as in πλατύς 'flat'. In view of the suffix -ιγγ-, it therefore seems better to assume a Pre-Greek origin (not in Furnée).

πλαταγέω, -ῆσαι [v.] 'to rattle, crash, clap (one's hands)' (Ψ 102 συμπλατάγησεν [v.l. -πατ-], Hell. poet.). ◂PG?▸
•COMP Also with συν-, ὑπο-, etc.
•DER πλατάγ-ημα [n.] 'bang' (Theoc.). Also πλαταγ-ή [f.] 'rattle, steed' (Hellanic., Pherecyd., Arist., A. R.), -ών 'id.' (sch. Theoc.), -ώνιον [n.] 'broad petal of the poppy or anemone' (Theoc.), -ωνίσας· ἀποληκυθίσας καὶ ψοφήσας 'having declaimed in a hollow voice, made a noise' (H.). Cf. πλατάσσω = -αγέω (Suid.).
•ETYM It has been suggested that the verb (onomatopoeia?) is a conflation of ►παταγέω and πλήσσω (Güntert 1914: 120f.), but this is questionable. The word may well be Pre-Greek (not in Fur.). See ►πλατυγίζω.

πλάτανος [f.] 'plane tree' (Ar., Pl., Thphr.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Lat. platanista [m.] name of a great dolphin in the Ganges (Plin.); cf. Thompson 1947 s.v. πλατανιστής.
•DER πλαταν-ών, -ῶνος [m.] 'plane grove' (Dsc.), -ιον [n.] 'kind of apple, like the plane's fruit' (Diph. Siph.). Also early πλατάνιστος [f.] 'id.' (B 307 and 310, Hdt., Theoc.) with -ιστοῦς, -οῦντος [m.] 'plane grove' (Thgn.), Lacon. -ιστάς (-ιστᾶς?), dat. -ιστᾷ 'id.' (Paus.), -ίστινος attribute of an apple (Gal.).
•ETYM The word has been derived from ►πλατύς (etc.), under the assumption that the tree was named after its broad leaves or flat patches of bark (Strömberg 1940: 39, Chantraine 1933: 199f.). This etymology must be rejected in view of the opaque derivation of the oldest attested form πλατάνιστος. Instead, we may assume that the name of this Asiatic and South-East European tree was borrowed from Pre-Greek, and only secondarily became associated with ►πλατύς.

πλάταξ, -ακος [m.] Alexandrian name of the fish κορακῖνος, 'Sciaena nigra, brown meagre' (Ath. 7, 309a). ◂PG▸ •DER πλατάκιον [n.] 'id.' (pap. II-III[p]).
•ETYM Frisk refers to Athenaeus's comment that the fish was named after its considerable size, i.e. "ἀπὸ τοῦ περιέχοντος", and therefore connects it to ►πλατύς. Since, however, -ακ- is one of the most common Pre-Greek suffixes, the word is probably Pre-Greek as well. Furthermore, there is πλατίστακος (-κός) [m.], according to Dorio apud Ath. 3, 118c the greatest kind of the fish called μύλλος; however, according to Parmeno ibd. 7: 308f., it is synonymous with σαπέρδης and κορακῖνος; metaph. = τὸ γυναικεῖον αἰδοῖον (H., Phot.).

πλᾶτις, -ιδος [f.] 'wife' (Ar., Lyc.). ⇒πέλας, πελάζω.

πλατυγίζω [v.] 'to slosh the water with one's wings; to splash', also metaphorically of idle noise (A., Eub.). ◂PG▸ •ETYM Distortion of πλαταγέω (*-γίζω) under the influence of πλατύς or otherwise πτερυγίζω.

πλατύς 1 [adj.] 'wide, broad, flat, level' (Il.). ◂IE *$pleth_2$- 'broad'▸ •COMP Often as a first member, e.g. πλατύ-φυλλος 'broad-leaved' (Arist., Thphr.).
•DER πλατύτης [f.] 'width, breadth' (Hp., X.); πλατύνω [v.] 'to widen, make broad' (X., Arist.), also with δια-, ἐν- etc., with πλάτ-υσμα (-υμμα) [n.] 'dish, brick, etc.' (Herod., Hero, pap.), -υσμός [m.] 'broadening' (Arist., LXX). Also πλατεῖον [n.] 'board, table' (Plb.), after the instrument nouns in -εῖον; from πλατεῖα (χείρ, φωνή etc.): πλατειάζω [v.] 'to blow with the flat of the hand' (Pherecr.), 'to pronounce broadly' (Theoc.).
Several additional formations: πλάτος [n.] 'width, breadth, size' (Simon., Emp., Hdt., Ar.) with ἀ-πλατής 'without breadth' (Arist.); πλατ-ικός (v.l. -υκός) 'concerning the width, breadth, exhaustive, extensive' (Vett. Val., comm. Arist.); cf. γεν-ικός to γένος.
πλαταμών, -ῶνος [m.] 'flat stone, ledge of rock, flat beach, etc.' (h. Merc. 128, Hell.), with -αμώδης 'flat' (Arist.). πλάτη [f.] 'blade of an oar, oar', metonymic 'ship', also 'shoulder blade' (trag., Arist.), usually ὠμο-πλάτη (Hp.); πλάτης, Dor. -ᾶς [m.] 'pedestal of a gravestone' (inscr. Asia Minor, cf. γύης, πόρκης); πλάτιγξ· τῆς κώπης τὸ ἄκρον 'the end of a handle' (H.). TN Πλάταια (B 504 et al.), usually plur. -αί [f.] (IA) town in Boeotia, with -αιίς, -αιεῖς, etc.; change of accent like in ►ἄγυια : -αί.
•ETYM Identical to Skt. pṛthú-, Av. pərəθu- 'wide, broad' < PIE *$plth_2$-u- (for πλάτος, cf. βάρος vs. ►βαρύς); πλαταμών corresponds to Skt. prathi-mán- [m.] 'extension, breadth' < *pl(e)th_2-mon-; notably, the TN Πλάταια matches Skt. pṛthivī́- [f.] 'earth', W Llydau 'Brittany' < *$plth_2u$-ih_2. Other relevant formations outside Greek are Arm. lain, OIr. lethan, MW llydan 'broad' < *$plth_2$-no-, and the verb Skt. práthati 'to extend' < pléth₂-eti.

πλατύς 2 [adj.] 'salty' (Hdt. 2, 108 [πόματα], Arist. Mete. 358f. [ὕδωρ, ὕδατα]). ◂GR▸ •ETYM No doubt due to erroneous interpretation of πλατὺς Ἑλλήσποντος (Hom.; cf. A. Pers. 875) the 'broad Hellespont' as the 'salty Hellespont', because the epithet 'broad' was perceived as inapproprate. In Hdt. 7, 35, the Hellespont is characterized as θολερός τε καὶ ἁλμυρὸς ποταμός 'muddy and salty river' (Heubeck Glotta 37 (1958): 258ff.).

πλέθρον [n.] measure of length of 100 feet, square measure of 10000 square feet (IA); later (Plu.) = Lat. iugerum; also 'race-track' (Syrac.). ◂PG▸ •VAR πέλεθρον (Hom., also Delph. and Corc.).
•COMP As a second member in e.g. ἀ-πέλεθρος 'immeasurable' (Hom., Nonn.), δί-πλεθρος 'measuring two πλ.', -ον [n.] 'length or area of a πλ.' (Hell.). -ία [f.] 'id.' (Corc.).
•DER πλεθρ-ιαῖος 'measuring one πλ.' (X., Pl.). -ιον [n.] designation of part of the Gymnasia in Olympia (Paus., Luc.), -ίζω [v.] 'to measure, spread oneself over sth.' vel sim. (Thphr. Char. 23, 2), also ἐκ- (Gal.), with -ισμα = δρόμημα (H., Phot.).

•ETYM Etymology unclear, in spite of attempts to derive the word from πίμπλημι 'to fill' or πέλομαι 'to turn'. On the variation πέλεθρον : πλέθρον, cf. Schwyzer: 259 and Szemerényi 1964: 214f., who takes πλέθρον as a Greek syncope of πέλεθρον. Fur.: 152 adduces βλέθρον (inscr. Thespiae, LSJ 1414), a form that further complicates the issue. In all likelihood, a foreign word (Hermann IF 34: 340).

πλείων [adj.] compar. 'more, longer, larger' (Hom.). ◄IE *pleh$_1$- 'full'► •VAR Also πλέων, ntr. πλεῖον, πλέον (Il.), epic. Aeol. plur. also πλέες, Cret. πλίες, etc. (additional forms in Seiler 1950: 113, Schwyzer: 537^6; cf. also below); superl. πλεῖστος (Il.) 'most, the longest, the greatest'.
•COMP As a first member in e.g. the compounds πλεον-εξ-ία [f.] 'greed, benefit', πλεον-εκτέω, with -έκτημα, -έκτης, -εκτικός (IA), from πλέον ἔχειν, cf. εὐεξία etc. (►ἔχω 1); πλειστό-μβροτος 'very rich in people' (Pi.).
•DER From πλε(ί)ων, πλέον: πλειότης [f.] 'plurality' (Theol. Ar.), πλειονότης [f.] 'the superior length of the chord' (Nicom. Harm.); πλεον-άκις 'more often' (IA), -αχός, -αχῶς 'multiple, in multiple ways' (Arist.), -αχῇ 'in more respects' (Pl.); -άζω [v.] 'to have an abundance, be excessive, grow in number, increase' (IA), with -ασμός, -ασμα, -ασις (Arist., Hell.).
From πλεῖστος: πλειστ-άκις 'most often, very often' (IA), -αχόθεν 'from the most (or: very many) places' (Ar.), -ήρης 'the most (χρόνος), the longest' (A. Eu. 763), -ηρίζομαι [v.] 'to appoint someone as the highest authority', vel sim. (A. Ch. 1029), -ηριάζω [v.] 'to bid the highest price (in auctions), outbid' (Lys., Pl. Com., Them.), with -ηριασμός· ὑπερθεματισμός 'overbidding' (H.).
•ETYM The comparative πλέων and superlative πλεῖστος are to be reconstructed as PGr. pleihōn, pleisto- from PIE *pleh$_1$-is-on-, *pleh$_1$-is-to-; cf. ON fleiri 'more', fleistr 'most', Av. fraēštəm 'mostly' (also Skt. prāyaḥ, Av. frāiiah- 'more, much, many' < *pleh$_1$-io-); πλείων is analogical to πλεῖστος (cf. also μείων).
The seemingly archaic forms πλέες, πλίες (see Schwyzer: 537^6) are best taken as innovations from πλέον, plur. πλέα (see Leumann Mus. Helv. 2 (1945): 1f.). Att. πλεῖν = πλέον and Arc. πλος (πλως?) 'more' is unclear; see Schwyzer: 537 and Leumann l.c. The sporadic attestations with η, e.g. πλῆον (Milete, etc.), Πλήστ-αρχος (Tegea) can hardly be interpreted as testimonies of an older situation (see Seiler 1950: 113).
From the same root as ►πολύς < polh$_1$-u- and ►πίμπλημι < pi-pleh$_1$-mi.

πλειών, -ῶνος [m.] used by hellenistic poets in the sense of 'year' (cf. H.: πλειών· ὁ ἐνιαυτός. ἀπὸ τοῦ πάντας τοὺς καρποὺς τῆς γῆς συμπληροῦσθαι 'year, from its getting full with all the fruits of the earth'); the meaning in Hes. is unclear, cf. Troxler 1964: 186f. (Hes. Op. 617, Call. Jov. 89, Lyc. 201, AP 6, 93, IG 9(1), 880: 16 verse inscr.). ◄GR► •ETYM Most probably with an original meaning "full period", thence to be connected with πλέως, epic πλεῖος 'full'. The suffix -ών- is reminiscent of the formation αἰών (cf. Schwyzer: 488).

πλέκω [v.] 'to braid, knit, wind, twine' (Il.). ◄IE *plek̂- 'twine'► •VAR pres.ptc. πλεγνύμενος (Opp.), aor. πλέξαι (Il.), pass. πλεχθῆναι (Od.), πλακῆναι (IA), innovation πλεκῆναι (Tim. Pers.), fut. πλέξω, pass. πλεχθήσομαι, πλακήσομαι, perf. πέπλοχα (Hp., Att.), also πέπλεχα (Hp.), -εκα (Call.), med.-pass. πέπλεγμαι (IA).
•COMP Often with prefix, especially περι-, ἐν(ι)-, συν-.
•DER A. With e-grade: 1. πλεκτός (σύμ-, εὔ-, etc.) 'braided, knit' (Il.). 2. πλεκτή [f.] 'winding, knitwear, rope, fish trap' (A., E., Pl.). 3. πλεκτάνη [f.] 'wattling, sling, winding' (IA); enlargement of πλεκτή after δρεπάνη, etc., like βοτάνη to βοτόν (Schwyzer: 490), with -άνιον (Eub.), denominative verbs -ανάομαι (A.), -ανόομαι (Hp.) 'to be twined around'. 4. πλέγμα (ἔμ-, σύμ-, etc.) [n.] 'plait, wattling, etc.' (IA) with -μάτιον (Arist.), -ματεύεσθαι· ἐμπλέκεσθαι (H.). 5. πλέκος [n.] 'wattling, basketwork' (Ar.). 6. πλέξις (περί-, ἔμ-, σύμ-) [f.] 'braiding, twining around, etc.' (Pl., Arist.) with -είδιον (Suid.), (περι-, συμ-)πλεκτικός 'belonging to braiding, etc.' (Pl.). 7. πλέκτρα [n.pl.] 'wattling' (Samos IV^a). 8. πλέκωμα = δράγμα (sch.). 9. ἐμπλέκ-της, [f.] -τρια 'braider [m./f.] of hair' (gloss., EM). 10. (περι-, ἐμ-)πλέγδην 'entwined, interwoven' (Hell.). 11. ἀμφι-, περι-, συμ-πλεκ-ής 'id.' (Nonn., Orph.), a verbal adj. after the s-stems, with περιπλέκ-εια [f.] (Jamb.). 12. Desiderative πλεξείω (Hdn. Epim.).
B. With o-grade: 1. πλόκος [m.] 'twine, lock, wreath, collar' (Pi., trag.); adjectives διά-, σύμ- (AP, Nonn.) from δια-, συμ-πλέκω; πλόκιον [n.] 'necklace' (Hell. inscr. et al.), ἐμ- 'hair-slide, etc.' (Hell.), also plur. = ἑορτὴ παρὰ Ἀθηναίοις 'festival (Athenian)' (H.); πλόκ-ιμος 'suited for braiding' (Thphr.), see Strömberg 1937: 171, διαπλόκ-ινος 'braided' (Str.), περιπλοκ-άδην 'in a close embrace' (AP); πλοκ-ίζομαι [v.] 'to let one's hair be braided' (Hp.). 2. πλοκή [f.] (Epich., Arist.) 'plait, fabric, intertwining, complication, etc.', very frequently from prefixed compounds (περι-, ἐμ-, κατα-, συμ-, etc.) in different senses (IA). From πλοκή or πλόκος : πλοκάς [f.] 'hair plait, lock' (Pherecr.), after γενειάς, etc.; πλοκεύς [m.] 'hair braider' (Epich., Hp.). 3. πλόκαμος [m.] 'lock of hair' (epic poet. since Ξ176) with -ίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'id.' (Hell.), perhaps by decomposition from ἐυπλοκάμιδες Ἀχαιαί (Od.) after ἐυκνήμιδες Ἀχαιοί beside κνημίς (Leumann 1950: 122f.); πλόκαμα· τὰ περιόστεα νεῦρα 'the sinews around the bones' (H.), -ώδεα· τὸν οὖλον βόστρυχον 'the curling lock of hair' (H.). 4. πλόκανον [n.] 'braiding, knitwear, etc.' (Pl., X.); after ξόανον, ὄργανον, etc. 5. πλοχμός, mostly plur. -οί [m.] 'locks of hair' (P 52, A. R., AP), with a suffix -smo- (Schwyzer: 493).
•ETYM The thematic root present πλέκω < plek̂-e/o- has no parallels in other IE languages, where we usually find the extended root plek̂-t-; cf. Lat. plectō = OHG flehtan 'to braid', OCS plesti 'συρράπτειν', Ru. plestí 'to twine'. The original root is still found in isolated formations, e.g. Skt. praśna- [m.] 'turban, headband' < plok̂-no-, OHG flahs, OE fleax [n.] 'flax' < plok̂-so- (parallelism with the rare s-stem πλέκος is probably coincidental).

πλεονεκτέω, πλεονεξία, etc. ⇒πλείων.

πλεύμων, -ονος [m.] 'lung(s)' (Il.), metaph. 'jellyfish' (Pl., Arist.). ◄IE *pleu-mon- 'lung'► •VAR Mostly plur. Secondarily πνεύμων after πνέω, πνεῦμα.

•COMP Isolated compounds, e.g. πλευμο-ρρωγής 'with a rupture in the lung' (Hp.), ἁλι-πλεύμων [m.] 'jellyfish' (Marcell. Sid.).
•DER πλευμον-ώδης (also πν-) 'lung-like' (Arist.), -ία [f.] 'inflammation of the lungs, pneumonia' (Com. Adesp., medic.), much more common is the hypostasis περι-πλευμον-ία, -ίη 'id.' (IA), πλευμον-ίς [f.] 'id.' (Hp.). Professional short-form πλεῦμος [m.] 'lung-sickness', with πλευμι-άω, v.l. -όω 'to suffer from lung-sickness' (Hp., Gal.).
•ETYM Gr. πλεύμων is closely related to Skt. klomán- [m., n.] 'the right lung', [pl.] 'the lungs' < *$k^{(w)}$leu-mon-, Lat. pulmō 'lung' < pul-mon-* (with metathesis), but the correspondences all contain minor irregularities. The root pleu-* must be the starting point, as it reappears in OCS pljušta, Lith. plaũčiai [pl.] 'lungs' < pleu-t-ieh₂*, and seems to be old. Perhaps related to ►πλέω.

πλευρά [f.] 'rib(s), side of the body', metaph. 'side of an area, of a geometrical figure, flank of an army' (Il.). ◁?▷
•VAR Usually plur. -αί; also -όν [n.], usually plur. -ά.
•COMP Very often as a second member, e.g. περί-πλευρος 'going around the ribs, covering the sides' (E. [lyr.]).
•DER Diminutive πλευρ-ία [pl.] (Hp., Delph. inscr.), -ιάς [f.] 'side of an area' (Tab. Heracl.), after πεδι-άς, etc.; cf. Chantraine 1933: 354; -ιαῖος 'situated at the sides' (Boeot. inscr.), -ικός 'belonging to the ribs' (sch.); -ίτης [m.] 'connected to the ribs', designation of a bone of the spine (Poll.), -ῖτις (νόσος) [f.] 'pleurisy' (Hp., Ar.), also as a plant name = σκόρδιον (Ps.-Dsc.), because of its effects, cf. Redard 1949: 75; -ώματα [n.pl.] = πλευρά (A.), a poetic enlargement, see Chantraine 1933: 186; -ισμός [m.] meaning unclear, 'dam'? (pap.); πλευρ-ών, -ῶνος [m.] Aetol. TN (B.639, etc.), see Krahe ZNF 8 (1932): 159. Hypostasis παρα-πλευρ-ίδια [n.pl.] 'side armors' (X., Arr.).
•ETYM No clear etymology. Hardly related to πλάξ < plk-* (pace Benveniste 1935: 112f.) or παλάμη < plh₂-em-eh₂-* via *πλῆ-ϝαρ (pace Frisk 2, 559).

πλέω [v.] 'to travel by sea, sail, navigate', with prefix also 'to swim, flow' (Il.). ◁IE pleu-* 'sail, flow'▷ •VAR Aor. πλεῦσαι (Att.), fut. πλεύ-σομαι (Il.), -σοῦμαι (Att.), -σω (Hell.), perf. πέπλευκα (S.), pass. πέπλευσμαι (later Att.), πλευ-σθῆναι, -σθήσομαι (Arr.).
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, ἐπι-.
•DER πλόος, contracted πλοῦς (ἀνά-, ἐπί-, περί-, etc.) [m.] 'navigation, seafaring', also 'traveling time, traveling wind' (IA); compounds, e.g. εὔ-πλοος 'good for sailing, having a fair voyage' (Erinn., Theoc.) with -ίη, -ια [f.] (Il., epic poet.), περί-πλους [adj.] 'possible to sail around' (Th.), 'sailing around' (AP), also 'encasing' (Hp.; cf. ἐπίπλοον).
From πλόος: 1. the old inherited i̯o-derivative πλοῖον [n.] 'craft, ship' (IA), with πλοιάριον (Ar., X.), -αρίδιον (pap.); 2. πλόϊμος 'navigable' (Att.), often written πλώϊμος after πλώω, etc. (cf. Arbenz 48f.); 3. πλοώδης 'swimming, flowing', i.e. 'not fixed, mobile' (Hp.), see Strömberg 1944: 25. 4. πλοϊκός 'id.' (Suid.); but 5. πλοΐζω [v.] 'to commit navigation' (Hell.) rather for older deverbative πλωΐζω (see ►πλώω).

From πλέω stems the rare form πλεῦσις (simplex only in H. s.v. νεῦσις), i.a. in ἐπίπλευσις [f.] 'attack at sea' (Th. 7, 36 beside ἀνάκρουσις; otherwise ἐπίπλους). On ►πλοῦτος s.v.
•ETYM The primary thematic root present πλέ(ϝ)ω is a PIE formation; cf. Skt. plávate 'to swim, flow', OCS pluti 'to flow, sail', Lat. pluit 'it rains', etc. < pleu-e/o-*. The future πλεύσομαι also has parallels outside Greek, such as Skt. ploṣyati and OIr. luïd, -lú 'to drink' < pleu-s-*; further, πλοῖον (< *πλόϝιον) matches ON fley [n.] 'ship' < flauja-* < plou-io-*, and πλόος, πλοῦς corresponds to Ru. plov 'ship, barge', ToB plewe [m.] 'ship' < plouo-*. See also ►πλύνω.

πλέων 'more'. ⇒πλείων.

πλέως 'full'. •VAR πλῆθος 'multitude'. ⇒πίμπλημι.

πληγή ⇒πλήσσω.

πλημμελής [adj.] 'out of tune, faulty' (Democr., Att.). ◁GR▷ •DER πλημμελ-έω [v.] 'to fail, commit an offense', -εια [f.] 'fault, offense, mistake' (Att.).
•ETYM Compound of πλήν 'without' and μέλος 'tune', the opposite of ἐμμελής. Cf. ►πλήν and ►μέλος.

πλήμνη [f.] 'nave, drum' (Il., Hes. Sc., Hp., A. R.). ◁GR?▷
•COMP πλημνό-δετον [n.] 'hoop with which the spokes are attached to the nave' (Poll.).
•ETYM Traditionally associated with πίμπλημι (cf. H. "ἀπὸ τοῦ πληροῦσθαι ὑπὸ τοῦ ἄξονος"), but this is popular etymology. Preferably derived from k^wlh₁-mneh₂ 'part that turns about the axle' (Waanders 1992: 594), i.e. from the root of ►πέλομαι.

πλημῦρίς, -ίδος [f.] 'rise of the sea, flood' (ι 486, Ion. poet., Hell.). ◁PG? (S, V)▷ •VAR Acc. also -ιν (cf. below); -μμ- (mss.).
•DER πλημῦρ-ω [v.] 'to overflow, make flow' (Archil., B., Call.) with πλήμῦρα [f.] = πλημυρίς (Hell.); byform πλημῦρ-έω 'id.' (Hp., Plu.), like κύρ-ω beside -έω, etc. (Schwyzer: 721); thence -ίη, -ία [f.] (Aret., sch.).
•ETYM Πλημ-ῦρίς may have been derived from πλήμη 'flood-tide', like ἁλμ-ῦρίς from ἅλμη, whence the yod-present πλημῦρω with additional derivatives; the vowel length of this verb could have spread back to the primary noun πλημῦρίς. Note, however, that the forms with double -μ- are problematic. This, in combination with occurrence of the suffix -υρ-, may point to Pre-Greek origin.

πλήν [prep.] with gen. 'except', adv. and conj. 'except, aside from, save that, however' (θ 207). ◁IE pelh₂-* 'near'▷ •VAR Dor. Aeol. πλάν.
•ETYM Like the antonym ►δήν, the frozen accus. from a root noun πλής < plh₂-s, plh₂-m*, related to ►πέλας and cognates. Probably originally 'close, near', then 'aside, except' (see Schwyzer 1950: 542f.).

πλήρης 'full'. ⇒πίμπλημι.

πλησίον 'near'. ⇒πέλας.

πλήσσω [v.] 'to strike, slap, thrust, hit', pass. 'to be beaten, thrust, hit, struck' (ἐκ- 'to startle', ἐπι- usually 'to criticize, scold', παρα- in pass. 'to become crazy', etc.). ◂IE *pleh$_2$k/g- 'beat'▸ •VAR In the older language, the pres. is always prefixed. Att. -ττω (ἐκ-πλήγνυμαι Th.), aor. πλῆξαι (Il.), Dor. πλᾶξαι, redupl. (ἐ-)πέπληγον (Hom.), pass. πληγῆναι (Il.), Dor. Aeol. πλᾱγῆναι, with prefix -πλᾰγῆναι (IA), πληχθῆναι (E., late), fut. πλήξω (Il.), pass. πληγήσομαι, -πλᾰγήσομαι (Att.), perf. πέπληγα (Il.: πεπληγώς), πέπληχα (Hell.), pass. πέπληγμαι (IA).
•COMP Often prefixed in various senses, e.g. with ἐκ-, ἐπι-, κατα-, παρα-. As a first member in governing compounds, e.g. πλήξ-ιππος 'flogging horses' (Il., epic poet.).
•DER Action nouns: 1. πληγή, Dor. πλαγά [f.] 'hit, wound, etc.' (Il.). 2. πλήγανον· βακτηρία 'staff', πληγάς· δρέπανον 'curved sword' (H.). 3. πλῆγ-μα [n.] = πληγή (S., E., Arist.), -μός [m.] 'id.' (medic.), κατά- (LXX). 4. ἀπό-, ἔκ-, ἔμ-, ἐπί-, κατά-πληξις [f.] 'apoplexy, concussion, etc.' (IA); πλῆξις, Dor. πλᾶξις [f.] 'striking' (Ti. Locr.).
Agent and instrument nouns: 5. πλῆκτρον, Dor. πλᾶκτρον [n.] 'instrument for striking, mallet' (h. Hom., Pi.). 6. πληκτήρ [m.] 'id.' (Hdn. Gr.); πλακτήρ· τὸ τοῦ ἀλεκτρυόνος πλῆκτρον 'cock's spur' (H.); πλάκτωρ [m.] (Dor.) 'striker' (AP), πλήκτης [m.] 'id.' (Hp., Arist.), ἐπι- 'blamer, castigator' (gloss.), -πλήκτειρα [f.] 'id.' (AP).
Adjectives, mostly as a second member: 7. -πληξ, e.g. παραπλήξ, -γος 'stricken sideways' (ε 418), 'crazy' (IA), 'paralyzed' (Hp.) with -ηγία, -ηγικός (Hp.), οἰστρο-πλήξ 'stung by a gadfly' (trag.); πλήξ as a simplex only as a designation of a bandage (Sor.); 8. -πληκτος, e.g. ἀπόπληκτος 'stirred by strikes' with -ηξίη, -ία (IA); 9. ἐκ-, κατα-πλαγής 'startled' (Plb., Luc.). 10. πληκτικός 'striking, hitting' (Pl.), ἐκπληκτικός (Th.), etc.
Verb: 11. πληκτίζομαι 'to fight' (Φ 499 et al.), mostly 'to dally' (Ar., Herod.), with -ισμός [m.] (AP), probably an enlargement of the primary verb (cf. λακτίζω and Schwyzer: 706) rather than from a nominal τ-derivative.
•ETYM The verb πλήσσω ostensibly continues plāk-i̯e/o-, but the kappa probably arose secondarily in the verb; cf. πληγή. Therefore rather PIE *plh$_2$g-ie/o- than *plh$_2$k-ie/o-, although both variants have correspondences in other Indo-European languages; cf. *pleh$_2$k-ie/o- in OCS plačǫ 'to lament' (if from "to beat one's chest"), with which agrees Lith. plókis [m.] 'blow, stroke', as opposed to *pleh$_2$g- in Lat. plangō 'to beat, bewail' < *pl(e)h$_2$ng- with a nasal infix, and the Gm. group of Go. fai-flokun 'ἐκόπτοντο', OE flōcan 'to slap'. Lith. plàkti 'to beat, chastise' (would be IE plok-) can only be indirectly related, via secondary ablaut.
As Van Beek suggests (p.c.), it is doubtful that ▸πλάζω is related. Semantically, it may have influenced πλήσσω, but the formal connection is problematic, and πλάζω seems to be semantically closer to ▸ἀμπλακίσκω, etc.

πλίκιον [n.] 'kind of tart, pie' (Chrysipp. Tyan. apud Ath. 647e). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM No etymology; maybe Pre-Greek.

πλίνθος [f.] 'brick, air-brick', metaph. 'square building-stone, metal ingot, abacus' (IA). ◂PG▸ •COMP E.g. πλινθο-φόρος 'bearing bricks, brick-bearer' (Ar.), ἡμι-πλίνθ-ιον [n.] 'ingot in the shape of a half-brick' (Hdt., Att. inscr.).
•DER 1. Diminutive: πλινθ-ίον (Att.), -ίς [f.] (Hell.), both predominantly in metaph. use; -άριον (LXX), -ίδιον (Iamb.). 2. Adjectives: πλίνθ-ινος 'made of bricks, of brick' (IA), -ικός 'id.' (pap.), -ιακός 'busy with bricks' (D. L.), after βιβλι-ακός, θηρι-ακός, etc.; -ωτός 'brick-shaped' (Paul. Aeg.). 3. Substantive: πλινθ-ῖτις [f.] 'kind of στυπτηρία' (Gal.). 4. Adverb: -ηδόν 'shaped like a roofing tile' (Hdt.). 5. Verbs: πλινθ-εύω [v.] 'to cut out bricks, make bricks' (IA) with -εία, -εῖον, -ευσις, -ευμα, -ευτής (Hell.); -όομαι 'to cover with bricks' (AP).
•ETYM The semantic field (architecture), as well as the presence of the notoriously foreign element -ινθ-, suggest that the word is a loan from Pre-Greek; see Chantraine 1933: 371.

πλίσσομαι [v.] 'to cross the legs' (ζ 318). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. ἀπεπλίξατο 'trotted off' (Ar.), πλίξαντα· διαναβάντα (H.), perf. δια-πεπλιγμένος 'with legs spread out' (Archil.), περι- 'with legs laid around' (Stratt.), περιπεπλίχθαι· διηλλαχέναι τὰ σκέλη ἀσχημόνως 'interchange the legs indecorously' (H.), act. δια-πεπλιχός (στόμα) 'standing open' (Hp.), fut. pass. καταπλιγήσει (Ar. Fr. 198, 3), according to H. = κατακρατηθήσῃ.
•COMP ἐκ-πλίσσομαι 'to gape', of a wound, etc. (Hp.), ἀμφι-πλίσσω (Poll.), διαπλίσσοντες (v.l. Ψ 120).
•DER πλίξ = βῆμα (sch.; Dor.), πλιχ-άς, -άδος [f.] 'perineum, inside of the thighs' (medic.), πλίγμα [n.] 'sprawling, perineum' (Hp., H., EM); ἀμφι-πλίξ [adv.] 'with sprawled legs' (S. Fr. 596), περι-πλίξ· περιειληφώς 'holding embraced' (H.), περιπλίγδην· περιβάδην 'astride' (H.).
•ETYM Uncertain etymology. Perhaps related to OIr. sliassait [f.] 'shank' < *speig^h-s-ont-ih$_2$- or (without s) Skt. plehate 'to go' < *pleiǵ^h-e/o- (Pok. 1000). Not related to OCS plęsati, Ru. pljasát' 'to dance' < (?)plenḱ-e/o- (pace Pisani 1938: 181ff.).

πλοῖον, πλόος, πλοῦς ⇒πλέω.

πλόκαμος ⇒πλέκω.

πλοῦτος [m.] 'riches, wealth' (Il.), also personified (Hes.), cf. Πλούτων below. ◂IE pleu- 'run, flow, swim'▸ •VAR Late also [n.], see Schwyzer 512.
•DIAL Myc. po-ro-u-te-u /Plouteus/.
•COMP E.g. πλουτο-δότης [m.] 'who spends riches' (Hes.), καλλί-πλουτος 'with beautiful riches' (Pi.).
•DER 1. πλούσ-ιος, Lac. πλούτιος (EM) 'rich' (Hes., h. Merc.), with -ιακός 'belonging to the rich' (Alex. Com.), -ιάω = πλουτέω (Alex. Aphr.). 2. πλουτ-ηρός 'bringing riches' (X.); -ᾶξ, -ᾶκος [m.] 'a rich fool' (com.). 3. πλουτ-ίνδην [adv.] 'acc. to property' (Arist.). 4. πλουτ-έω [v.] 'to be rich' (Hes.); -ίζω 'to make rich, enrich' (trag., X.; with κατα- Hdt.), with -ιστής, -ιστήριος, ισμός (late). 5. Πλούτων, -ωνος

[m.] god of riches, i.e. of the corn provisions buried in the earth (trag.); on the motive of designation see Nilsson 1941(1): 471ff.; according to H. εὔπλουτον κανοῦν· πλοῦτον γὰρ ἔλεγον τὴν ἐκ τῶν κριθῶν καὶ τῶν πυρῶν περιουσίαν, 'πλ. was called the surplus of barley and wheat'. 6. Πλουτεύς 'id.' (Mosch., AP).
•ETYM Derivative from πλέω, i.e. plou-to-* 'flow, multitude', with the suffix -to- as in e.g. βίοτος, νόστος, etc.

πλύνω [v.] 'to wash, clean' (cf. ►λούω, ►νίζω). ◂IE pleu-* 'flow, swim'▸ •VAR Iter. πλύνεσκον (Χ 155), aor. πλῦναι (Od.), fut. πλῠν-έω (epic Ion.), -ῶ (Att.), pass. perf. πέπλυμαι (IA), aor. πλυθῆναι (Hell.), fut. -θήσομαι (Com. Adesp.).
•COMP Also with ἀπο-, ἐκ-, κατα-, etc.
•DER Adjectives: 1. νεό-, ἔκ-πλυ-τος 'newly washed, washed out' (ζ 64, A., Pl.), πλυτός 'washed' (Hp.); 2. εὐ-πλυν-ής 'washed well' (Od.); 3. πλυν-τικός 'belonging to washing' (Pl., Arist.), πλυ-τικός 'id.' (Alex. Aphr.).
Substantives: 4. πλυνοί [m. pl.] 'washing pits, troughs or sites' (Hom., Hell.), with the diminutive πλύνιον [n.] (inscr. Sicily); with barytonesis 5. πλύνος [m.] 'laundry' (pap., ostr.), see Mayser 1906-1938, I: 3, 3; unclear in Ar. Pl. 1061; with πλυνεύς [m.] 'washer' (Att. inscr., Poll.).
Action nouns: 6. πλύσις (περί-, κατά-, ἀπό-) [f.] 'washing' (IA), late ἀπόπλυν-σις (Sophon.); πλύσιμος 'belonging to laundry' (pap. III[a]); 7. πλύμα (ἀπό-, περί-; also πλύσμα Phot., also mss.) [n.] 'washing water, swilling water, swill' (Hp., Pl. Com., Arist., pap.); 8. πλυσμός· πλυτήρ '(washing) trough' (H.).
Agent and instrument nouns: 9. πλύν-τρια [f.] 'washer' (Att. inscr., Poll.), -τρίς [f.] 'id.' (Ar.), also 'fuller's earth' (botanics in Thphr., see Capelle RhM 104 (1961): 58), msc. πλύν-της (Poll.), πλύ-της (EM, Choerob.); also πλυτήρ (H.; see above) and *πλυν-τήρ in Πλυν-τήρ-ια [n.pl.] name of a purification festival (Att. inscr., X.) with -ιών, -ιῶνος [m.] month name (Thasos), if not rather analogical after other nouns in -τήρια, -τήριον (see Chantraine 1933: 63f.); likewise κατα-πλυντηρ-ίζω 'to shower with abusive words', properly perhaps 'to immerse in swilling water, to drench with swilling water'? 10. πλύν-τρον [n.] = πλύμα (Arist.) [pl.] 'payment for washing' (pap. III[a], Poll.).
•ETYM The vowel length of πλῡ́νω points to a thematicized nasal present *πλύ-ν-ι̯ω (cf. κρῑ́νω from κρί-ν-ι̯ω). The formation must be an inner-Greek creation from the IE root plu- (which gave πλέω < pleu-e/o-*), but a nasal present with the same meaning is also found in Armenian, viz. lua-na-m 'to wash, bathe'. See ►πλέω and ►πλώω.

πλώσσειν [v.] · φθειρεσθαι 'to be destroyed' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM DELG suggests a connection with πλώω, but the gloss may be corrupt.

πλώω [v.] 'to swim' (Il., epic Ion.), aor. also 'to sail, go by sea', beside πλέω as a pres.; on πλώω beside πλέω see Bechtel 1921(3): 196ff., 208. ◂IE pleu-* or pleh$_3$-*▸ •VAR Aor. πλῶ-ναι (ἐπ-έπλων, etc., Hom., Hes.), πλῶσαι (Γ 47 ptc. ἐπι-πλώσας; Hdt., Arr.), fut. πλώσ-ομαι (Hdt.), -ω (Lyc.), perf. πέπλωκα (Hdt., Lyc.; also E. Hel. 532 and Ar. Th. 878 [parody]).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-, ἐκ-, κατα-, παρα-.

•DER Probably, all derivatives are Ionic (cf. Fraenkel 1912: 3f.).
Adjectives: 1. πλω-τός (πρόσ-, ἔκ-) 'swimming, navigable' (κ 3, Hp., Hdt., Arist.) with -τίς [f.] 'raft' vel sim. (Demetr. Astrol.), -τεύομαι [v.] 'to be navigated, cruised' (Plb.); 2. πλω-τικός 'seafaring' (Hell.); 3. -σιμος 'navigable, seaworthy' (S., Diogenian.), rather from πλῶσαι than from *πλῶσις; likewise πλώϊμος alongside πλόϊμος.
Substantives: 4. κατάπλωσις [f.] 'home-coming by sea' (Herod.); 5. πλωτήρ [m.] 'sailor' (rare in E., Ar., Pl., often in Arist., etc.), 'swimmer' (Opp., Nonn.); 6. πλω-άδες, -ϊάδες (Thphr.), -ίδες (A. R.) [f.pl.] 'swimming, flowing'; also 7. πλώς, pl. πλῶτες name of a fish, = κεστρεύς (but cf. Thompson 1947 s.v. πλῶτα); but δακρυπλώειν (τ 122) is not a denominative from *δακρυ-πλώς, but modeled after δάκρυ χέων, χέουσα and built as a univerbation; cf. Leumann 1950: 36.
Verb: 8. πλω-ΐζω (-ῴζω) 'to go by sea' (Hes., Th.), with -ϊσις [f.] 'seafaring' (Just.).
•ETYM Within Greek, the derivation of πλώω, with its -ω-, is not clear, but etymological separation from πλέω < pleu-e/o-* seems unattractive. The formation has a close parallel in Germanic, e.g. ON flóa, OE flōwan 'to flow' < PGm. flōan-* < PIE plōu-* (with -ōu-* > -ō-* like in Go. sauil [sōil] 'sun' < seh$_2$u-el-*), whence Go. flodus [m.] 'river' (etc.). The apparent lengthened grade is also found in Slavic, e.g. OCS plavati, Ru. plávat' 'to swim (to and fro)'. See ►πλέω and ►πλύνω.

πνεύμων 'lung'. ⇒πλεύμων.

πνέω [v.] 'to blow, breathe, respire, smell' (Il.). ◂IE? pneu-* 'breathe, cough, smell'▸ •VAR Epic πνείω, aor. πνεῦσαι (Il.), ipv. ἄμπνυε, med. -ῦτο, -ῠ(ν)θη (Hom.), fut. πνεύ-σομαι (IA), -σοῦμαι (Ar., Arist.), -σω (Hell.), perf. πέπνευκα (Att.), pass. πνευσ-θῆναι (Thphr.), -θήσομαι (Aret.).
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἀπο-, εἰσ-, ἐκ-, ἐν-, ἐπι-, προσ-.
•DER 1. πνοή, Dor. πνο(ι)ά, epic πνοιή [f.] 'wind, breeze, breath' (Il.), also ἀνα-, δια-, ἐκ-~, etc., etc. Epic -οι- metrically conditioned after πνείω, see Wyatt 1969: 166-168. Very often as a second member, e.g. ἡδύ- (ἀδύ-)πνοος, -πνους 'with a pleasant wind, breath' (Pi., S., E.), ἐπί-πνοος, -πνους 'inspired' with ἐπίπνοια [f.] 'inspiration' (A., Pl.); -πνοια also beside -πνοή in ἀνά-, ἀπό-, διά- etc.; also ἀναπνόϊκος 'concerning breathing' (Ptol.).
2. πνεῦμα (ἄμ-, πρόσ-) [n.] 'wind, breeze, breath, ghost' (Pi., IA) with πνευμά-τιον (Hell.), -τικός 'concerning the wind, etc.' (Arist.), -τιος 'bringing wind' (Arat.), -τώδης 'like wind or breath, windy' (Hp., Arist.), -τίας [m.] 'asthmatic' (Hp.) with -τιάω [v.] 'to gasp' (sch.); πνευμα-τόω, -τόομαι [v.] 'to blow up, (cause to) vaporize' (Anaxipp., Arist.) with -τωσις, -τωτικός; πνευμα-τίζω (ἀπο-) [v.] 'to fan by blowing' (Antig., H.) with -τισμός.
3. πνεῦσις [f.] 'blowing', more usual in compounds, e.g. ἀνάπνευ-σις 'inhalation, respite' (Il.). 4. With secondary -σ-, and a suffix -τ- like in ἄ-πνευσ-τος, -τί, -τία: πνευσ-τικός 'belonging to breathing' (Gal.), more generally ἀνα- (Arist.) etc.; -τιάω 'to gasp' (Hp., Arist.). 5. εἴσπν-ηλος, -ήλας 'loving, lover' (Call., Theoc., EM), from εἰσ-πνέω 'to inspire (love)', with analogical -ηλος; cf. Chantraine 1933: 242.

•ETYM The verb and its derivatives appear to have been regularized to a large extent. The only isolated forms are epic ἄμπνυε, etc. 'take breath' = 'recover from'. The appurtenance of the perfect πέπνυμαι, -μένος 'to be mentally active, animated, be sedate' is doubtful, and ►πινυτός and cognates are certainly unrelated. Schulze 1892: 322ff. also separated ἄμπνυε and πέπνυμαι from πνέω.
From other languages, only some Germanic formations can be compared: ON fnýsa 'to sniff', OE fnēosan 'to sneeze', which may go back on IE -eu-;* however, beside them stand several variants, e.g. ON fnasa, OHG fnehan, and the whole group may be onomatopoeic in origin.
Cf. also ►ποιπνύω and ►πνῑ́γω.

πνῑ́γω [v.] 'to limit one's breath, asphyxiate by squeezing, water or vapor, to choke, drown, be drowned', also 'to muffle, smother' (Epich., Sophr., IA); on the meaning 'to drown, be drowned' see Schulze Berl.Ak.Sb. 1918: 320ff. ◄PG?►
•VAR Aor. πνῖξαι, intr. and pass. πνῐγ-ῆναι with fut. -ήσομαι, late πνιχθῆναι, perf. med. πέπνιγμαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, especially ἀπο- and κατα-.
•DER Action nouns: 1. πνῖγος [n.] 'stifling heat' (IA), opposite ῥῖγος; 2. πνῖγ-μα [n.] 'suffocating' (Hp.), -μός [m.] 'id.' (Hp., X., Arist.) with -μώδης 'suffocating' (Hp.), -μονή [f.] 'id.' (Hdn. Epim.), cf. φλεγμονή, πημονή; 3. πνῖξις (κατά-) [f.] 'choking, asphyxiation' (Arist., Thphr.), 'drowning' (PMag.Par.); 4. πνίξ, -γός [f.] 'choking, asphyxiation' (Hp., Dsc.), like φρίξ (Chantraine 1933: 2f.); 5. πνιγετός [m.] = πνῖγος (Ptol.; H. s.v. ἀγχόνη), like πυρετός, παγετός; 6. περιπνιγή [f.] 'suffocation' (Vett. Val.).
Agent nouns: 6. πνῐγεύς [m.] "suffocator", 'cover for extinguishing coals' (Ar., Arist.), 'air chamber' (Hero, Ph. Bel.), 'muzzle' (com.), probably by analogy of πνίγω, πνῐγῆναι with τρῖβω, τρῐβ-ῆναι, -ή, -εύς, etc. (Boßhardt 1942: 48); 7. πνικτήρ [m.] 'choker, choking' (Nonn.). 8. πνιγ-ῖτις (scil. γῆ) 'kind of clay' (Dsc., Plin.); 9. -αλίων, -ωνος [m.] 'nightmare, incubus' (medic.), like αἰθαλ-ίων beside αἰθ-άλη, αἴθω; 10. πνῖ-γηρός 'choking', especially 'stifling hot' (Hp., Att.), from πνῖγος or πνίγω; 11. πνῐγόεις 'id.' (Nic., AP), ῐ metrically conditioned; 12. περι-, συμ-πνῐγ-ής 'suffocated' (Nic., J., D. S., after πνῐγ-ῆναι); 13. πνικτός 'steamed, smothered' (com.), 'airtight' (Hero), 'suffocated, choked' (Act. Ap.); 14. enlarged πνιγ-ίζω [v.] 'to choke, strangle' (AP), influenced by πυγ-ίζω.
•ETYM No clear etymology. Earlier attempts to analyze the formation as a conflation of several different verbs are unconvincing. Rather onomatopoeic or, given its onset in πν-, sound-symbolic. A Pre-Greek origin cannot be excluded.

πόα [f.] 'grass, herb, grass plot', late also '(time of the) hay harvest, summer' (Il., Att.). ◄IE poiH-ueh*$_2$ 'grass, meadow'► •VAR Epic Ion. ποίη (Il.), Dor. (Pi.) ποία.
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. ποιο-νόμος 'feeding on grass', ποιό-νομος 'having grassy pastures' (A. [lyr.]), λεχε-ποίης (see ►λέχος).
•DER 1. Diminutive πο-άριον (ποι-) [n.] (Thphr.); 2. ποι-ήεις, Dor. -άεις 'rich in grass' (Hom., Pi., S. [lyr.]); -ηρός 'id.' (E. [lyr.]); 3. ποι-άζω [v.] 'to be rich in grass, bear grass' (Str.); 4. -ασμός [m.] 'weeding, clearing of weeds' (Thphr.), -άστρια [f.] 'weeder (fem.)' (Archipp.), -άστριον [n.] 'weeding tool' (Poll.), from ποάζω = 'to weed, clear of weeds' (only as a conj. in Philem. Com. 116, 4). On supposed Boeot. *πύας 'meadow', see Finley Glotta 33 (1954): 311.
•ETYM PGr. poiwā-* is formally identical to Lith. píeva [f.] 'meadow' < poiH-ueh*$_2$- or poHi-ueh*$_2$-. Connection with the root of ποιμήν cannot be shown. The deviating ποινά· ποία. Λάκωνες (H.) may be due to conflation with κοινά· χόρτος (H.).

ποδαπός [adj.] 'native of where?, whence?' (Hdt., Att.); also 'of what sort?' (D.); in this meaning Hell. ποταπός (with τ from πότερος, πότε, etc.). ◄IE k^{w}o-* 'who?'► •ETYM Formation like ►ἀλλοδαπός, etc. The first member is from IE k^{w}od* = Lat. quod (see on ►πόθεν and ►τίς), if not analogical after ἡμεδ-απός, etc. (Schwyzer: 604[1]). The form (ὁ)ποδαπός in Hdt. as opposed to (ὁ)κότερος is unclear; cf. Wackernagel 1916: 35[2].

ποδάρκης [adj.] epithet of Achilles, in ποδάρκης δῖος Ἀχιλλεύς (Il.), also of Hermes (B.), of δρόμοι and ἡμέρα (Pi.); also epithet of a remedy against gout (Gal.). ◄GR► •ETYM A compound from πούς and ἀρκέω 'to keep off, aid, suffice'; cf. ποδώκης 'quick-footed', also 'helping the feet' (Gal.). On ποδάρκης beside ποδώκης and πόδας ὠκύς, see Treu 1955: 6.

ποδηνεκής 'stretching to the feet' (Il., epic, Hdt.).
•ETYM Compound from πούς and ἐνεγκεῖν; see ►διηνεκής and ►ἐνεγκεῖν with references.

ποδοκάκκη [f.] 'foot block'. ➡κάκαλα.

πόθεν [interr.adv.] 'whence, from where?' (Il.). ◄IE k^{w}o-* 'who?'► •DER Indefinite ποθέν 'from somewhere' (Il.), Ion. κόθεν (Hdt.). Also πόθι, ποθί 'where?', 'somewhere' (Il., epic); ποῦ, που (Att.), Ion. κοῦ, κου 'id.'; ποῖ, ποι 'whither?', 'to somewhere' (Att.), πόσε 'whither?' (Hom.).
•ETYM Formations from the pronominal stem πο-, Ion. κο-, from IE k^{w}o-* with representatives in most IE languages, e.g. Skt. kás 'who?', Go. ƕas 'id.', Lat. quod 'what?'. Cf. ►ποῖος, ►πόσος, ►πότε, and ►πότερος; see also ►τίς. On the adverbial endings -θεν, -θι, -σε, see Schwyzer: 628f.; on the petrified case forms ποῦ (gen.) and ποῖ (loc.), op.cit. 621f.

ποθέω [v.] 'to desire, long for, miss' (Il.). ◄IE g^{wh}ed^h-* 'long for, desire, pray'► •VAR Inf. -ήμεναι (Od.), ind. -ήω (Sapph.), aor. ποθ-έσαι (Il.), -ῆσαι (IA), fut. -έσομαι (Att.), -ήσω (IA), perf. πεπόθ-ηκα, -ημαι (late).
•COMP Rarely with prefix, especially ἐπι-.
•DER (ἐπι-)πόθ-ησις, -ημα (Aq., Ep. Cor., et al.), ἐπιποθ-ία (Ep. Rom.) 'longing'; also ποθ-ητύς [f.] 'id.' (Opp.), -ήτωρ [m.] 'desirous person' (Man.).
Furthermore πόθος [m.] 'desire, longing, love' (Il.), also a plant name (Thphr.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 107, ποθή [f.] 'id.' (Hom., late prose), ποθεινός 'longed for' (Lyr., trag., also Att. prose), after ἀλγεινός etc.; ποθινός 'id.' (AP).

•ETYM Formally, ποθέω directly corresponds to OIr. guidid 'to pray'= PIE g^{wh}od^{h}-éie-, which is an iterative formation. Additionally, Balto-Slavic has a nasal present in Lith. pa-si-gendù, -gèsti 'to long for, miss', OCS žędati 'to desire, long for' < *g^{wh}end^{h}-. The related aorist ►θέσσασθαι can be compared to the OIr. s-subj. 1pl. -gessam < *g^{wh}ed^{h}-s-. In Indo-Iranian, the root is found in YAv. jaiδiiemi 'to ask for'. The development *g^{wh}- > b-, needed to account for the Gm. group of Go. bidjan 'to pray', is controversial. On the concept of πόθος, see now Weiss HSPh. 98 (1998): 31-61.

ποι [prep.]
•DIAL Arg., Phoc., Locr.
•ETYM See ►ποτί.

ποιέω [v.] 'to do, make, produce (also of poetry), act', med. also 'to choose, deem, appraise' (Il.). ◄IE *k^{w}i-eu-, *k^{w}ei-u- 'gather, deem'► •VAR Aor. ποιῆσαι, fut. ποιήσω, perf. med. πεποίημαι (all Il.), act. πεποίηκα, aor. pass. ποιηθῆναι (IA), fut. ποιηθήσομαι (D.), πεποιήσομαι (Hp.).
•COMP Often prefixed in different senses, e.g. with ἀντι-, ἐκ-, ἐν-, περι-, προσ-. As a second member -ποιός in productive compounds, e.g. λογοποιός [m.] 'historian, fabulist, newsmonger' (IA) with λογοποι-έω, -ία, -ικός, -ημα.
•DER 1. ποίημα (προσ-, περι-) [n.] 'production, work, poem' (IA) with -ημάτιον (Plu.), -ηματικός 'poetic' (Plu.); 2. ποίησις (προσ-, περι-, ἐκ- etc.) [f.] 'creation, production, poetry' (IA); on the meaning of ποί-ημα, -ησις see Ardizzoni Riv. fil. class. 90 (1962): 225ff., Chantraine 1933: 287. 3. ποιητός (προσ-, ἐκ-, etc.) 'made, produced' (Il.), also 'made artificially, not by nature' = 'adopted' (Pl., Arist.). 4. ποιητής [m.] (IA), fem. -ήτρια (Hell.) 'creator, producer, poet', especially of Homer, with -ητικός 'creating, poetic', ἡ -ητική (τέχνη) 'the art of poetry' (Pl., Arist.), -ητικεύομαι 'to speak poetically, etc.' (Eust., sch.). 5. desiderative ποιησείω 'to wish to do' (Hdn.).
•ETYM The verbal root must have contained a ϝ; cf. Arg. ποιϝēσανς, ἐποιϝēhε, ἐποιϝēθē, Boeot. ἐποιϝēσε, pres. opt. El. [πο]ιϝέοι (beside repeated ποιέοι), which derive from *ποιϝεjω. Usually derived from a stem k^{w}ei-u-, akin to Skt. cinóti 'to pile, arrange, erect', Av. cinuuaiti 'to select' < k^{w}i-n(e)u-ti (Pok. 637-638), but the exact derivation is unclear. It has often been argued that the verb is derived from a noun *ποιϝος (Schwyzer: 450, 726[7]), but this only occurs in compounds from the Vth c. onwards. The alternative view that it continues a root k^{w}eiu-, abstracted from the nu-present k^{w}ineuti > Skt. cinóti (Frisk, DELG), is rejected by LIV[2]. On the meaning of ποιέω and other verba faciendi, see Braun *Stud. ital. fil. class.*N. S. 15 (1938): 243ff.; also, Valesio Quaderni dell'Istituto di Glottologia (Bologna) 5 (1960): 97ff.

ποικίλος [adj.] 'varicolored, wrought in many colors (stitched, knitted, woven), manifold, versatile, cunning' (Il.). ◄IE *peiḱ- 'stitch, paint'► •DIAL Myc. po-ki-ro-nu-ka /poikil-ōnuk^{h}a/ [n.pl.].
•COMP E.g. ποικιλό-θρονος (see θρόνα and Bolling AmJPh. 79 (1958): 275ff.), πολυ-ποίκιλος 'much variegated' (E.).
•DER 1. ποικιλ-ία [f.] 'variegation, diversity, embroidering' (IA); 2. -ίας [m.] fish name (Paus.), see Strömberg 1943: 25, Thompson 1947 s.v., -ίς [f.] name of a bird that eats the lark's eggs (Arist.), Thompson 1895 s.v.; 3. -εύς [m.] 'embroiderer, stitcher' (Alex. Com.).
4. Denominative verb ποικ-ίλλω 'to make varicolored, work artfully, etc.', also with δια-, κατα- etc., whence -ιλμα [n.] 'varicolored work, stitching, etc.' (Il.), -ιλμός [m.] 'elaboration, decoration' (Epicur., Plu.), -ιλσις [f.] 'id.' (Pl.); -ιλτής [m.] 'embroiderer, stitcher' (Aeschin., Arist.), fem. -ίλτρια (Str.), -ιλτικός 'belonging to stitching' (LXX, etc.); ποικ-ιλόω [v.] 'to stitch' (A. Fr. 304 = 609 Mette); -ιλεύομαι [v.] 'to be artful, versatile' (Vett. Val.).
•ETYM The suffixation -ίλος (cf. κόϊλος, ναυτίλος, ὀργίλος, etc.) implies a root *ποικ-, which is directly comparable to Skt. péśa- [m.] 'ornament', Av. paēsa- [m.] 'leprosy', Lith. paĩšas [m.] 'smut, dust-spot' < PIE poiḱ-o-; the same formation (also as an adjective) occurs in Skt. puru-péśa-, Av. paēsa- 'leprous', Go. filu-faihs 'πολυποίκιλος'.
These derive from the verbal root *piḱ-, seen in OCS pьsati 'to write', n-present Skt. piṃśáti 'to carve, cut, ornament', Lat. pingō 'to stitch with a needle, paint' (through nasalized coda *pi^{n}g^{n}- from *pik-n-). Cf. ►πικρός 'cutting in, stitching'. The forms πεικόν· πικρόν, πευκεδανόν (H.) and ►πίγγαλος are uncertain.

ποιμήν, -ένος [m.] 'herdsman, shepherd', metaph. 'guardian, leader, master' (Il.). ◄IE peh$_2$-(i-) 'protect'► •DIAL Myc. po-me /poimēn/.
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. ποιμ-άνωρ = ποιμὴν ἀνδρῶν with ποιμανόρ-ιον [n.] 'herd, troop of men' (A. Pers. 241 and 74); φιτυ-ποίμην 'guardian of plants' (A. Eu. 911).
•DER ποιμέν-ιος (AP, APl.), earlier and more often attested is -ικός (Pl., Hell. poet.) 'belonging to herdsmen'; -ισσα [f.] 'shepherdess' (pap. III^{a}); ποίμν-η [f.] 'herd, flock of sheep' (ι 122) with -ιον [n.] 'id.' (IA); -ένιον (Opp.), -ιος 'belonging to herds' (E.), -ήϊος (B 470, Hes.), -ικός (pap. III^{p}), -ίτης (E., Poll.), -ιώτης (sch.) 'id.'; -ηθεν [adv.] 'of the herd' (A. R.).
Denominative verb ποιμαίνω 'to be a herdsman, to herd, pasture', med. 'to graze', of the herd (Il.), rarely with δια-, συν-; thence ποιμαν-τήρ = ποιμήν (S.), -τικός = ποιμενικός (Gal., H.), ποιμασία [f.] 'the grazing' (Ph.). Also πῶυ, -εος [n.] 'flock of sheep' (epic, Il.).
•ETYM Formally, ποιμήν has an exact correspondence with Lith. piemuõ, gen. piemeñs 'herdsman' = PIE *poh$_2$i-mōn, poh$_2$i-mén-s; the neuter πῶυ < *poh$_2$i-u, poh$_2$i-eu-(o)s is formally close to Skt. pāyú-, Av. pāiiu- [m.] 'herdsman, protector' < nom. poh$_2$i-u-s, gen. poh$_2$i-u-os; all are from the primary verb peh$_2$-ti > Skt. pā́ti 'to keep, protect', whence also go-pā́- [m.] 'cowherd'. The frequent i-extension seems to imply the pre-existence of an i-present, 3sg. ph$_2$-éi-ti, 3pl. ph$_2$-i-énti; from this verb probably derives Skt. nr̥-pā́y-(i)ya- 'protecting men', nŕ̥-pī-ti- [f.] 'protection of men'. Cf. ►πῶμα 1.

ποινή [f.] 'ransom, fine, penalty, vengeance' (Il., epic poet.). ◄IE k^{w}oi-neh$_2$ 'punishment, vengeance'►

•COMP E.g. ποιν-ηλατέω 'to pursue with vengeance' (see ►ἐλαύνω), νή-ποινος 'unpunished, unavenged' (Od.); on ►ἄποινα s.v.
•DER 1. ποι[ν]ίον [n.] = ποινή (Delph. IV[a]), like πεδ-ίον, χωρ-ίον, etc.; 2. adjectives ποίν-ιμος 'avenging' (S.), -αῖος 'punishing, avenging' (late); 3. verbs ποιν-άομαι 'to avenge oneself' (E.) with -άτωρ (A., E.), -ήτωρ (Nonn.), -ητήρ (Opp.) 'avenger'; fem. -ῆτις 'avengeress' (AP); -ίζομαι in aor. -ίξασθαι 'to exact a penalty' (Arc. VI[a]). 4. ποινώματα· τιμωρήματα 'vengeances' (H.), after μίσθωμα, κεφάλωμα, μηχάνωμα, etc. (cf. Chantraine 1933: 187).
•ETYM Identical with Av. kaēnā- [f.] 'punishment, vengeance', Lith. káina [f.] 'price, utility', OCS cěna [f.] 'τιμή', Ru. cená [f.] 'price, value' < *$^k^w$oi-neh$_2$-, from the verbal root *$^k^w$ei- seen in Skt. cáyate 'to avenge, punish' (cf. ἀπότισις, τίσις beside ápa-citi- [f.] 'revenge'), Av. kaii- 'to atone, make pay'. Within Greek, this root is continued in ►τίνω, etc. Borrowed as Lat. poena >> MoE pain.

ποῖος [interrog. pron.] 'of what kind?' (Il.). ◄IE *$^k^w$o- 'who?'► •VAR Ion. κοῖος.
•ETYM From interrogative *$^k^w$o- 'who?' (see ►πόθεν) with suffixal -οῖος; see ►τοῖος.

ποιπνύω [v.] 'to snort, pant, bustle about panting, be bustling' (epic since Il.). ◄GR► •VAR Thence aor. ποιπνῦσαι.
•DER Dat.pl. [π]οιπνυτρ[ο]ισι (Antim. in PMilan. 17, 43 in unknown meaning, cf. ed. ad loc.); explained by H. as σπουδαίοις 'earnest'. In ποιπνυός· θεράπων 'attendant' (H.), the ending is corrupt.
•ETYM Reduplicated intensive formation ποι-πνύω (Schwyzer: 647) from ►πνέω, ►πέπνυμαι. Cf. ►ποιφύσσω.

ποιφύσσω [v.] 'to snort, hiss, puff, blow' (Hell. poet., title in Sophr.), ποιφύξαι· ἐκφοβῆσαι 'to alarm' (H.). ◄GR► •VAR Dor. fut. -φυξῶ.
•DER ποίφυγμα [n.] 'the blowing' (A. Th. 280), ποιφύγδην [adv.] 'hissing' (Nic.); the sch. on Nic. has a pres. ποιφύζειν.
•ETYM Reduplicated intensive formation of onomatopoeic character; see on ►φῦσα.

πόκος ⇒πέκω.

πόλεμος [m.] 'battle, war' (Il.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Epic also πτόλεμος.
•DIAL Myc. e-u-ru-po-to-re-mo-jo /Euru-ptolemoio/.
•COMP E.g. πολέμ-αρχος [m.] "warlord", name of an official (IA, Dor.), φιλο-π(τ)όλεμος 'friend of battles, warlike' (Il.).
•DER A. Adjectives: 1. πολέμ-ιος 'militant, hostile', as a substantive 'enemy' (Pi., IA); 2. -ήϊος 'belonging to battle, war' (Il., epic); metrically conditioned, probably after Ἀρήϊος (Trümpy 1950: 134); 3. -ικός 'belonging to war, militant, hostile' (Hdt. 3, 4 as a v.l., Att.); 4. -ώδης 'id.' (Olymp. in Grg.).
B. Verbs: 1. πολεμ-έω 'to battle, fight a war' (IA), often with prefix, e.g. δια-, κατα-, ἐκ-; thence -ήτωρ (Antioch. Astr.), -ητής (Gytheion III[p]) [m.] 'warrior', -ητήριον [n.] 'military base, operation base, headquarters' (Plb.); διαπολέμησις [f.] 'ending of the war' (Th.). 2. πολεμίζω (also πτολ-) 'to fight' (Il., epic), metrical for -έω, see Chantraine 1942: 95; thence -ιστής [m.] 'fighter, warrior' (Il., epic), fem. -ίστρια (Heraclit. Ep.), -ιστρίς (Tz.), -ιστήριος 'belonging to warriors' (IA). 3. πολεμ-όομαι 'to become enemies' (Hdt., Th., X.), also with ἐκ-, etc., whence ἐκπολέμ-ωσις [f.] 'becoming of enemies' (Plu.). 4. Desiderative πολεμησείω 'to wish for war' (Th., D. C.).
PNs, e.g. Πολέμων, whence the plantname πολεμώνιον (Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 135; Πτολεμαῖος.
•ETYM The alternation between initial πτ- and π- (see Schwyzer: 325 with literature, as well as Trümpy 1950: 131 ff., Ruijgh 1957: 75f., and Merlingen 1956: 55f.), although echoed by ►πόλις < PIE *$^tpolh_1$-i-, must have been adopted from Pre-Greek (Fur.: 317). Formally, the word has been linked with πελεμίζω 'to shake, tremble', and more distantly to πάλλω, but this is semantically unattractive.

πολιός [adj.] 'whitish-grey', especially of hair, also of foaming seas (Il., epic, also Hell.). ◄IE? pol-io-* 'grey'► •COMP E.g. πολιο-κρόταφος 'with grey temples' (Θ 518 et al.), ὑπο-, ἐπι-πόλιος 'grizzled, mixed with grey' (Anacr., D.), probably back-formations (cf. ἐπιπολιόομαι below), see Strömberg 1946: 101ff.; on μεσαι-πόλιος see ►μέσος.
•DER 1. Fem. πολιάς (Luc. Lex.); 2. πόλιον [n.] 'Teucrium polium or creticum' (Thphr., Nic., Dsc.), named after the color of the flower (Dsc. 3, 1 10); 3. πολιότης [f.] 'greyness' (Arist.), πολιά (from πολι-ιά) [f.] 'id.', also as a disease (Arist.); 4. denominative πολι-αίνομαι 'to become whitish', of the sea (A. Pers. 109 [lyr.]); -όομαι 'to become grey', -όω 'to make grey' (Arist.), also with ἐπι-, προ-, whence -ωσις [f.] 'becoming grey' (Arist.), -ωμα [n.] 'greyness' (Eust.); -άζω 'to become grey' (sch.).
•ETYM The formation πολιός has been reconstructed as from *πολιϝο- on the basis of Myc. po-ri-wa and the link with Skt. palitá- 'grey', but the appurtenance of the Myc. word is quite uncertain, and the Sanskrit word may contain a suffix -ita-. Since, furthermore, the reconstruction pol-i-uo-* with its double suffixation is a priori improbable, the original form must rather be set to pol-io-*; cf. Arm. alikʿ [pl.] 'wave's crests, white tuft, beard' < pl-io-es*. With the suffix -uo- for color designations, we find the related formations Lith. pal̃vas 'light yellow, straw-colored', OCS plavъ 'white', ON fǫlr 'pale' < pol-uo-*. Cf. ►πελιός.

πόλις [f.] 'citadel, fort, city, city community, state' (Il.), on the meaning in Hom. Hoffmann 1956: 153ff. ◄IE tpelH-* 'fortification' from pelH-* 'pout'?► •VAR Ion. -ιος, -ηος, also πτόλις, -εως (epic, Cypr., Thess., Arc.).
•DIAL Myc. po-to-ri-jo has been interpreted as *Πτολίων.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in πτολί-πορθος (-πόρθιος, -πόρθης) 'sacking cities, destroyer of cities' (Il., epic); enlarged in IA πολιοῦχος (from -ιο-ουχ.); Dor. πολι-ᾱ́-οχος, -ιᾶχος, epic πολι-ή-οχος 'ruling a city, city protector'; unexplained is πολισσο- in πολισσοῦχος, πολισσο-νομέω (A.). Very frequent as a second member, e.g. ἀκρο-πολις = πόλις ἄκρη 'upper town, citadel' (Od.); on this and related compounds, see Risch IF 59 (1949): 261ff.

•DER 1. With a secondary suffix πτολί-εθρον [n.] (epic Il.); cf. μέλαθρον, θέμεθλα, ἔδεθλον (Schwyzer: 533). 2. Diminutive πολίχνη [f.], often as a TN (IA), with -ίχνιον (Att.); πολίδιον (ῑ) [n.] (Str.). 3. Πολιεύς (-ηύς) [m.] 'city guardian' (Thera before V^a, Arist., Hell.); fem. Πολιάς (IA, Arg.). 4. πολῑ́της (epic, Sapph., Att.) 'citizen, townsman', πολι-ᾱ́-τας, -ή-της [m.] (Dor. Aeol., B 806, Ion.), after οἰκιά-τας, -ιή-της, etc., fem. -ῖτις (S., E., Pl.); hence πολιτ-ικός 'civic, political' (Hdt. 7, 103, Att.); -εύομαι, -εύω [v.] 'to be a citizen, take part in state affairs' (Att., etc.), πολιατεύω (Gortyn), whence -εία, Ion. -ηίη, -ευμα (Hdt., Att.); also πολιτισμός 'administration' (D. L.), see Chantraine 1933: 143. 5. Denominative πολίζω 'to found (a city), cultivate a place by founding a city' (epic Ion., X.), aor. -ίσ(σ)αι, also prefixed (rare and late) with ἐν-, συν-, etc. Thence πόλ-ισμα 'foundation (of a city)' (Ion. poet., Th.), -ισμάτιον (Hell.), -ισμός 'foundation of a city' (D. H., Lyd.), -ιστής 'founder of a city' (rejected in Poll. 9, 6).
•ETYM Together with the variant πτόλις (= Arc. Πτόλις, name of the castle in Mantinea; Thess. οἱ ττολίαρχοι with assimilation) from PIE *tpolH-, to which correspond the zero-grades Skt. pū́r, gen. puraḥ [f.], Lith. pilìs [f.] < *plH-. The two forms suggest that PIE had an ablauting root noun (cf. Pok. 798-801). Original meaning 'hill top'; cf. the s-stem *pélH-s, *plH-és-os supported by OIr. all [n.] 'cliff', ON fjall [n.] 'mountain'.

πόλος [m.]⇒πέλομαι.

πόλτος [m.] 'flour porridge' (Alcm., Epich., Plu.). ◂?▸
•COMP πολτο-ποιέω 'to make into π.' (Orib.).
•DER Diminutive πολτάριον [n.] (Dsc.), adjective πολτώδης 'porridge-like' (Erot.).
•ETYM The form *pol-to- is reminiscent of ►πάλη 'fine flour' < *plH-eh$_2$- and ►πέλανος 'liquid substance (of flour)' < *pelh$_2$-no-. Outside Greek, it has been compared with Lat. puls, -tis [f.], which is reconstructed as *pol(H)-t- with the Saussure Effect, and sometimes with pollen [n.] 'flour, powder' < *polH-n- (cf. De Vaan 2008: 474). The Saussure Effect would need to be invoked in order to connect the Greek as *pol(h$_2$)-to-. The situation is obscured, however, because the nominal formations may have been derived relatively recently from the verb ►παλλω. A final alternative would be that πόλτος is a substrate word, related to e.g. παλάθη 'cake of conserved fruits' and πλάθανον 'cake mold' (suggested by Van Beek 2009).

πολύς [adj.] 'much, many, often' (Il.). ◂IE *p(e)lh$_1$-u- 'many'▸ •VAR πολλή, πολύ, Ion. poet. alo πολλός, πολλόν.
•COMP Highly productive as a first member, e.g. πολύ-τροπος 'much-wandering, much-turned, wily', of Odysseus, Hermes and others (Od., h. Merc.), 'many-shaped' (Th.). On the Homeric compounds in πολυ- see Stanford Class. Phil. 45 (1950): 108ff. Beside this, we rarely find πολλα-, e.g. πολλα-πλάσιος, -πλήσιος 'manifold' (IA), like δεκα-πλάσιος, πολλά-κις etc.; see also δι-πλάσιος. Compar. and superl. ►πλείων, πλέων, πλεῖστος (from *pleh$_1$-is-to-), s.v.; innovation πόλιστος (Tab. Heracl.), see Seiler 1950: 61.

•DER πολλότης [f.] 'plurality' (Damasc.), πολλ-οστός "the manieth", 'one of many, small' (Att.), after εἰκοστός etc.; -άκις 'often' (Il.), epic and lyr. also -κι; after δεκά-κις etc.; explanation uncertain.
•ETYM The o-grade in πολύς, -ύ < *polh$_1$-u- is flanked by a zero grade in Skt. purú- 'many' < IE *pl̥h$_1$-u- and an e-grade in e.g. OIr. il, Go. filu 'many' < *pelh$_1$-u-. The geminated stem πολλο- is not certainly explained; it is mostly assumed that it contains the same suffix as in μεγαλ-. The adjective is an old derivative of the verbal root 'to fill' as in ►πίμπλημι.

πολφοί [m.pl.] farinaceous food, 'wire noodles' (com.). ◂?▸
•VAR Also sg. -ός.
•COMP πολφο-φάκη [f.] 'dish of wire noodles and lentils' (Poll. 6, 61).
•ETYM Of unknown origin. Perhaps somehow connected with πλεφίς· σησαμίς (H.).

πομπή ⇒πέμπω.

πομφόλυξ, πομφός ⇒πέμφιξ.

πονέομαι, πόνος⇒πένομαι.

πόντος [m.] 'sea' (Il., epic), often in names, e.g. ὁ Εὔξεινος πόντος 'the Black Sea', for which also (ὁ) Πόντος (IA), also as a name of the southern coast of the Black Sea and a state in that area (App. et al.). ◂IE *pont-eh$_1$-, *pn̥t-h$_1$- 'path'▸ •COMP E.g. ποντο-πόρος 'crossing the sea' (Il., epic), with ποντοπορ-έω, -εύω [v.] 'to cross the sea' (Od.), on the formation see Chantraine 1942: 62, 95 and 368); on ►Ἑλλήσποντος see s.v.
•DER 1. πόντ-ιος 'belonging to the sea' (h. Hom., Pi.), fem. -ιάς (Pi.); 2. -ικός 'from Pontos' (IA); 3. -ίλος [m.] name of a mollusc (Arist.), cf. ναυτ-ίλος; 4. -εύς [m.] name of a Phaeacian (θ 113); 5. ποντ-ίζω [v.] (A., S.), elsewhere with κατα- (Att., NT) 'to sink into the sea', whence ποντίσματα [n.pl.] 'oblations sunk into the sea' (E.), καταποντ-ισμός [m.] 'the drowning' (Isoc., LXX), -ιστής [m.] 'one who throws into the sea, who lets drown' (Att.); 6. κατα-ποντ-όω 'id.' (IA); ποντ-όομαι 'to form a sea' (Q. S.), -όω = -ίζω (Nic. Dam.), with -ωσις [f.] (Tz.).
•ETYM Together with ►πάτος, πόντος represents an old IE *h$_1$-stem with ablaut of the root, viz. *pont-éh$_1$-s, gen. *pnt-h$_1$-ós; cf. Skt. pánthāḥ, gen. pathaḥ, Av. pantā̊, gen. paθō, Lat. pōns, gen. pontis [m.] 'bridge, passage', Arm. hun 'ford', OCS pǫtь [m.] 'road', OPr. pintis 'id.', etc. In Germanic, the root is mainly verbal; cf. Go. finþan 'to find', etc. < *pent-e/o-. See ►πατέω.

πόπανον ⇒πέσσω.

πόποι interjection of surprise, disagreement, etc. (Il., epic). ◂PG▸ •VAR Epic ὢ πόποι. Also πόπαξ (A. Eu. 143).
•ETYM Creation like ►παπαῖ, ►βαβαί, -άξ. On the reinterpretation of ὢ πόποι (also ὢ) as 'oh gods!' in Lycophr. and Euph., see Leumann 1950: 33 and Ruijgh 1957: 101.

ποπύζω [v.] 'to click with the tongue', as a calling signal, etc. (com., Thphr., Theoc.). ◂PG▸

•VAR Dor. -ύσδω.
•DER ποππ-υσμός [m.] (X., Plu.), -υσμα [n.], (Dexipp. in Cat., Juv.) 'the clicking'; enlarged in ποππυ-λιάσδω 'id.' (Theoc.), cf. βομβυλιάζω (see βόμβος).
•ETYM Onomatopoeia with reduplication.

πορεῖν [aor.] 'to provide, donate, offer, grant' (Il., epic). ◁IE perh$_3$-* 'give'▷ •VAR πέπρωται [perf.] 'it is given or decided (by fate)', ptc. πεπρωμένος (Il., epic); ptc. πρωτός (Hdn. Gr.).
•ETYM Morphologically similar to e.g. μολεῖν : μέμβλωκα < melh$_3$-. The verb is derived from the root perh$_3$-, which is also found in Skt. pūr-dhi [ipv.] 'give!' < pr̥h$_3$-d^{h}i*. Because of the color of the laryngeal, the verb cannot be related to περάω, πείρω 'to penetrate' < perh$_2$-(i̯)e/o-, nor to πέρνημι 'to sell' < pr-neh$_2$-mi.

πορθέω ⇒πέρθω.

πορθμός ⇒πείρω.

πόρις, -ιος [f.] 'calf, heifer', metaph. 'young girl' (epic since κ 410); also πόρταξ [f.] 'id.' (P 4) modeled after δέλφαξ, σκύλαξ, etc. ◁?▷
•VAR More common is πόρτις, -ιος (epic since E 162).
•DIAL Myc. po-ti-pi /portip^{h}i/ [instr.pl.].
•DER πορτι-τρόφος 'feeding calves' (h. Ap., B.); glosses πορτάκινον (or -ιον?)· μοσχίον 'young calf', πορτάζει (or -ακίζει?)· δαμαλίζεται 'is subdued' (H.).
•ETYM Presupposes IE por-i-*, an i-stem beside e.g. ON farri, OHG far(ro) 'bull' < por-só(n)- / por-nó(n)-, MHG verse, MoHG Färse [f.] 'young cow' < por-s-ih$_2$-. Perhaps from a verb prH-e/o- as in Lat. pariō 'to mate' (Lith. perė́ti 'to brood, sit on eggs', however, has no laryngeal in the root, and therefore cannot be related).

πόρκης [m.] 'ring around the shaft of a spear, holding the metal spearhead' (Z 320 = Θ 495). ◁?▷
•DER πορκώδης 'like a π.' (Eust.).
•ETYM Suffixation like in γύης, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 30, Schwyzer: 461), but no further etymology. Cf. ►πόρκος and ►πόρπη.

πόρκος [m.] 'kind of fishing-net' (Pl., com.) ◁?▷
•DER πορκεύς [m.] 'net-fisher' (Lyc.).
•ETYM Etymology uncertain: if connected with Arm. ors 'hunting, hunting-booty', it derives from PIE pork̂-o-* (Patrubány KZ 37 (1904): 428). Doubts on the meaning of the Arm. word in Clackson 1994: 164. Cf. ►πόρκης.

πόρνη [f.] 'prostitute, whore' (IA). ◁IE perh$_2$-* 'sell'▷ •COMP E.g. πορνο-βοσκός [m.] 'procurer', with -έω, -ία, -εῖον (Herod., Att.); πορνο-λύτας [m.] (inscr. Tarentum), see Parlangèli Glotta 40 (1962): 50.
•DER 1. Diminutive πορν-ίδιον [n.] (com.); 2. -ικός 'belonging to harlots' (Aesch., LXX); 3. -εῖον [n.] 'brothel' (Ar., Antipho), 4. -οσύνη [f.] 'prostitution' (Man.); 5. -εύομαι, -εύω [v.] 'to live like a harlot; to prostitute', also metaph. 'to practise idolatry' (NT), with -εία, -ευσις, -ευμα, -εύτρια (IA). From πόρνη also πόρνος [m.] 'lover-boy, lover' (Att., LXX, NT).

•ETYM Linked to ►πέρνημι 'to sell', and hence derived from porh$_2$-neh$_2$-*. The loss of laryngeal is mostly ascribed to Saussure's Law (loss of laryngeal after o-grade); for a different interpretation (loss between liquid and nasal), see Van Beek 2009.

πόρος [m.] ⇒πείρω.

πόρπη [f.] 'clasp' (Il.). ◁PG(V)▷
•DER πορπίον, -άω, -ημα, -όομαι, -ωμα; with a suffix -ᾱκ-: πόρπᾱξ, -ᾱκος [m.] 'ring or loop on the inner (bulging) side of a shield' (B., S., E. Ar.), 'part of the headgear of a horse' (E. Rh. 385) with -ᾱκιζομαι (Ar.); originally a Doric expression, see Chantraine 1933: 381, Björck 1950: 296f.
•ETYM Neither a reduplicated formation from πείρω, nor a creation pork-ueh$_2$-* from πόρκης makes sense (pace e.g. WP 2, 39). Fur.: 163 connects πορφίτῳ· περόνῃ 'buckle' (H.), and concludes that the word is Pre-Greek on account of the variation π/φ.

πόρσω [adv.] 'forward, beyond, far away from something, away' (Pi., trag. [lyr.]). ◁IE per*, or preti, proti* 'forward'▷ •VAR πόρρω (Att.). Compar. and superl. πόρσ-ιον, -ιστα (Pi.), see Seiler 1950: 106f.; πορρω-τέρω, -τάτω (Att.). Adverb πόρσω-θεν (Archyt.), πόρρω-θεν (Att.) 'from far'.
•DER Denominatives 1. πορσ-ύνω [v.] 'to accomplish, provide' (epic Ion., also X.), also with ἐπι-, συν-, originally 'to bring forth' (cf. Lat. producere, MoHG hervorbringen); 2. πορσαίνω 'id.' (Hom. v.l., h. Cer., Pi.), rejected by Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 261.
•ETYM May be identical to Lat. porrō, Praen. porod 'forward' if < p(o)rsō(d)*, with an ending like in ἄνω, κάτω, etc. DELG, however, prefers to derive πόρσω from πρόσω (< *προτι̯ + -ω) with metathesis (comparing ►πρότι beside πόρτι), because both words share the same sense. See ►πρόσω.

πορφύρα [f.] 'purple dye, purple snail, purple clothes' (Sapph., Hdt., A.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Ion. -ρη.
•COMP E.g. πορφυρό-ζωνος 'with a purple girdle' (B.), παμ-πόρφυρος 'consisting only of purple, all-purple' (Pi.), ἐπι-, ὑπο-πόρφυρος 'something purple' (Thphr., Arist.), see Strömberg 1946: 104f., 138; also ἁλι-πόρφυρος 'of sea purple, dyed with real purple, purple-red' (Od.); different Marzullo Maia 3 (1950): 132ff., Marzullo 1970: 255.
•DER 1. πορφύρ-εος (Att. -οῦς, Aeol. -ιος) 'purple, purple dye', of cloth(e)s, also of blood, etc. (Il.), cf. on ►πορφύρω. 2. πορφυρ-εύς [m.] 'purple snail fisher' (Hdt., Arist.), with -ευτικός 'belonging to the πορφυρεύς (-ευτής?)' (E., Poll.), probably after ἁλιευ-τικός, cf. Fraenkel 1912: 63[1], Chantraine 1956a: 119; πορφυρ-εύω [v.] 'to fish for purple snails' (Philostr.), -ευτής [m.] = -εύς (Poll.). 3. πορφυρ-ίς [f.] 'purple garment' (X.), also name of a bird (Ibyc.), see Thompson 1895 s.v. 4. diminutive πορφύρ-ιον [n.] (Arist.), also 'purpur cloth' (pap.). 5. -εῖον [n.] 'purple dye house' (Str.). 6. -ίτης (λίθος), fem. -ῖτις 'like porphyry, containing porphyry' (Plin., inscr., ostr.), -ιτικός 'containing porphyry' (pap.). 7. πορφυρ-ίων [m.] 'purple coot, Fulica porphyrion' (Ar., Arist.), see Thompson 1895 s.v., Chantraine 1933: 165. 8. -ική [f.]

'purple taxes (pap. II[a]). 9. πορφυρώματα· τῶν ταῖς θεαῖς τυθέντων χοίρων τὰ κρέα 'the meat of pigs offered to the gods' (H.). 10. πορφυρ-ίζω 'to make purple' (Arist., Thphr.), also with ἐπι-, ὑπο-. 11. TNs like Πορφυρ- ίς, -εών.
•ETYM There are no Indo-European connections; probably a loanword from a Mediterranean language. On πορφύρα, -ύρεος, -ύρω, see Vieillefond REGr. 51 (1938): 403ff.; further, Castrignanò Maia 5 (1952): 18ff., Gipper Glotta 42 (1964): 39ff., and Tichy 1983: 280ff. Borrowed as Lat. purpura, whence MoE purple, etc.

πορφύρω [v.] 1. 'to surge, boil', of the sea (Ξ 16, Arat., A. R.), metaph. of the heart (Od., A. R., Q. S.); 2. 'to dye purple, redden' (Hell.), 'to paint red' (Nonn.). ◂?▸
•VAR Only pres. and ipf.
•COMP With περι- (Man.).
•DER πορφύρεος (Aeol. -ιος) 'boiling, whirly', of the sea (Hom., Alc.); to be kept apart from πορφύρεος 'purple'.
•ETYM Reduplicated formation like ►μορμύρω (s.v. with lit.); for πορφύρεος, cf. μαρμάρεος from ►μαρμαίρω. Traditionally compared to Skt. jár-bhurīti 'to have convulsions, sprawl' from the primary verb bhuráti 'id.' (see further on ►φύρω). In the sense 'to dye purple', πορφύρω was adapted to πορφύρα. Discussion in Tichy 1983: 280ff.

πός [prep.] = ►ποτί, ►πρός. ◂IE pos* 'near, after', poti*▸ •VAR Before vowel also πο- (Arc. Cypr., Phr., Pisid.).
•ETYM Traditionally thought to be identical in origin with Lith. pàs 'by, near', OCS po 'behind, after' < pos*, which would also be present in Lat. post < posti*, Alb. pas 'behind, after', etc. However, DELG is quite explicit in its rejection of this comparison, arguing that all Greek variants πότ-, πός, πο- must be expained from poti* > Myc. po-si.

πόσθη [f.] 'penis' (Ar. Nu. 1014), also 'foreskin' (medic.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Cf. ἀκροβυστία below.
•DER Diminutive πόσθιον [n.] (Hp., Ar.); -ία [f.] 'foreskin' (Ph.), metaph. 'stye on the eyelid' (medic.); perhaps shortened from ἀκρο-ποσθ-ία (Scheller 1951: 43[2]); -ων, -ωνος [m.] 'provided with a π.', vulgar designation of a boy (Ar. Pax 1300; meaning unclear in Luc. Lex. 12); also PNs like -ίων, -ύλος; perhaps also Βόσθων (Halicarn.), O. Masson Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 10 (1975): 162.
Furthermore ποσθ-αλίων (Dor. inscr. around 200[a]), with a familiar enlargement -λ-; see Taillardat RPh. 87 (1961): 249f.; -αλίσκος = -ων (Ar. Th. 291; conj. Dindorf, accepted by Taillardat l.c.).
Compound ἀκρο-ποσθ-ία [f.] (Hp., Arist.) -ιον [n.] (Poll., Ruf.) 'foreskin'; for this ἀκροβυστία [f.] 'id.', coll. 'the uncircumcized people' = 'heathendom' (LXX, NT), formerly assumed to contain a folk-etymological euphemism after βύω (EM 53, 47, Blass & Debrunner 1959 §120, 4).
•ETYM Traditionally connected with ►πέος < peso-*, but the required derivation pos-d^hh_1-o-* is rather articifial. If ἀκρο-βυστία is not analogical, the word must be Pre-Greek in view of the variation. This explanation is increasingly attractive in view of the semantic field. Note that the derivation from g^{wh}osd^{h}-eh$_2$- (Szemerényi Archiv. Linguist. 5 (1953): 13ff.) is wrong, because root was g^w*osd-*; cf. OSw. kvaster [m.] 'twig, brush', OIr. bot [m.] 'tail, penis' < g^w*osd-o-*.

πόσις 1, -ιος [m.] 'husband, spouse, consort' (Il., epic poet.), cf. Chantraine REGr. 59-60 (1946-1947): 219ff.). ◂IE poti-* 'lord (of the house), husband'▸ •ETYM Old and widespread designation of the lord of the house and the husband: Skt. páti-, Av. paiti- 'lord, ruler, husband', Lith. pàts 'husband' (for older patìs), ToA pats, ToB petso [obl.] 'husband', Lat. potis 'capable, powerful', all from IE póti-*. The word is often used as a second member of a compound or with a gen., e.g. ►δεσπότης, Skt. viś-páti- 'lord of the house', Lith. viešpats 'Lord-(god)' (cf. on ►οἶκος), Lat. hos-pes 'guest, host', Ru. gos-pód' 'Lord, god', Go. bruþ-faþs 'bridegroom'.
The meaning 'lord, husband' is usually explained (see Benveniste Word 10 (1954): 256, following Pedersen) from an older meaning 'self' in Lith. pàts (and in Av. x^v*aē-paiti-*) and in the particle Lith. pàt 'self, even', Hitt. =pat 'the same, also, even, etc.'; however, the Hittite particle probably derives from -*b^h*od* (see Kloekhorst 2008 s.v.). This interpretation is extensively criticized and rejected by Szemerényi 1964: 337ff. See ►πότνια and ►Ποσειδῶν.

πόσις 2 'drink, beverage'. ⇒πίνω.

πόσος [interr. pron.] 'how great?, how much?, how many?' (Att.). ◂IE k^w*oti-* 'how much'▸ •VAR Ion. (Hdt.) κόσος.
•COMP Epic ποσσ-ῆμαρ 'in how many days?' (Ω 657).
•DER ποσό-της [f.] 'quantity' (Arist.), ποσ-ώδης 'quantitative' (comm. Arist.), -ίνδα [adv.] (X.), see Schwyzer: 627, -άκι(ς) 'how often?' (Pl., Call.), -όω [v.] 'to calculate the quantity, to count up' (Thphr.); also πόστος "the how-manieth?" (ω 288, Att.), dissimilated from *ποσ(σ)ο-στός, and accented after πόσος; hence ποστ-αῖος 'on what day?' (X.), after δευτερ-αῖος, etc. Indefinite ποσός (Att., Hell.), ποστός (late).
•ETYM From *πότι̯-ος, an adjective formed from IE k^w*óti*, found in Skt. káti, Lat. quot 'how many?'. See further on ►πόθεν and ►τόσος.

ποταίνιος [adj.] 'new, fresh, unexpected, unheard of' (Pi., B., trag., also Hp.), acc. to Eust. and Phot., Doric for πρόσφατος. ◂GR▸ •VAR ποταινί = προσφάτως (Zonar.).
•ETYM Can hardly be separated from προταίνιον· πρὸ μικοῦ, παλαιόν (H.) and ►προταινί 'in front' (E. Rh. 523), Boeot. προτηνί 'earlier'. As this stands for πρὸ ταινί (scil. ἡμέραι), ποταινί, -νιος must go back to an adverbial *ποτὶ ταινι with haplology.

ποταμός [m.] 'river' (Il.). ◂?▸
•COMP E.g. ποταμο-φύλαξ [m.] 'river-guard' (pap.), καλλι-πόταμος 'with fair rivers' (E. [lyr.]).
•DER 1. Diminutives ποτάμ-ιον [n.] (com., Str.), -ίσκος [m.] (Str.). Further substantives: 2. ποταμ-εύς [m.] designation of the east wind in Tripolis (Arist.), 3. -ίτης [m.] 'river-worker' (pap.). Adjectives: 4. -ιος 'belonging to the river' (Pi., Hdt., trag., etc.), -ιαῖος 'id.' (Arist. [v.l. -ιος], Ruf.); -ήϊος (Nonn.), fem. -ηΐς (A. R., Nic.)

'id.', both metrically conditioned. 5 -ώδης 'river-like' (Eun.); 6. -ηνή [f.] epithet of Μήτηρ, the river goddess (inscr. Pisidia), cf. Schwyzer: 490. 7. Adverb -ηδόν 'like a river, in streams' (Luc., Aret.); 8. Verb -όομαι 'to form a river' (Aq.). 9. nickname Ποτάμιλλα [m.] (Sophr.), see Schwyzer: 561.
•ETYM Formation like οὐλαμός, πλόκαμος, etc. Combined with πίπτω, ἔπετον 'to fall' in previous centuries, thus originally "waterfall" vel sim., referring to a river sweeping away things in a mountainous area. Etymological comparison with the epithet διιπετής (Π 174, δ 477) is difficult. The analysis faces the problem that the root-final laryngeal was $*h_1$, and thus cannot explain the suffix vocalism -αμ-.
Others have connected ποταμός to πετάννυμι in the sense of "extension", and supposed identity with the Germanic group of OS fathmos, OE fæðm 'extension (of the arms), embrace, fathom' (OE flôdes fæðm). A final option, formally more attractive and semantically possible, is a relation with $*peth_2$- 'to fly', as evidenced by Gr. ἔπτατο. Connection with Lith. tekù 'run', assuming metathesis from *τοπαμός (Pisani RILomb. 73 (1939-40): 502f.), should be rejected.
In sum, the etymology remains uncertain. In principle, the word could be Pre-Greek.

ποτανός, ποτάομαι, ποτέομαι ⇒πέτομαι.

πότε [interr. adv.] 'when ?', indefinite ποτε, ποτέ 'at some time' (Il., Att., Arc., Cypr.). ◄IE *$k^wo$- 'which?'► •VAR Ion. κότε, Aeol. πότα, Dor. πόκα.
•ETYM From the pronominal stem πο- with various particles added; see ►πόθεν and ►ὅτε. Formerly, ►τίπτε was also assumed to contain πότε, but this is now unlikely.

πότερος [pron. adj.] 'who or which of either?' (Il.). ◄IE *$k^wo$- 'which?'► •VAR Ion. κότερος.
•ETYM Old pronoun, identical with Skt. katará-, Go. hvaþar, Lith. katràs, etc., IE *$k^wo$-tero- (cf. on ►πόθεν); on the varying accentuation, see Schwyzer: 381.

ποτί [prev., prep.] 'towards, by' (Il., epic poet., Dor.). ◄IE poti* 'against'► •VAR ποτ' before vowel.
•DIAL Myc. po-si-.
•ETYM Identical with Av. paiti, OP patiy 'against, by'. Beside it stand ►πρότι, ►πρός, and ►πός.

πότμος ⇒πίπτω.

πότνια [f.] 'lady, mistress', especially of goddesses (Il., epic poet.). ◄IE *$pot\text{-}n\text{-}ih_2$ 'lady'► •VAR On disyllabic πότνα for older πότνια (Od. et al.), originally only in the voc. πότνα θεά, which may have been an Aeolic syntagm, see Peters 1980a: 213ff.
•DIAL Myc. po-ti-ni-ja. On the Myc. adjective po-ti-ni-ja-we-jo see Lejeune Par. del pass. 17 (1962): 401ff.
•DER ποτνιάδες [pl.] 'id.' (E.), after μαινάδες etc., see Chantraine 1933: 355 and 357; ποτνι-άομαι [v.] 'to beseech (a goddess); to wail, lament', especially of women (late prose), on the mg. see Mras Glotta 12 (1923): 67f. Thence -ασμοί [pl.] (Str.), -ασις [f.] (Poll.) 'wail', -αστής [m.] 'lamenter' (Phld.); also -άζομαι in ποτνιάζου· εὔχου, παρακάλει 'pray, call' (H.). TN Ποτνιαί [f.pl.] Boeotian town name (Paus.), called after the Πότνιαι (Demeter and Kore); hence the adjective Ποτν-ιάς (A. et al.) and the PN -εύς (Paus.).
•ETYM Identical with Skt. pátnī [f.] 'mistress, goddess', Av. paϑnī- [f.] 'mistress', OLith. vieš-patni [f.] 'lady, mistress': IE $p\acute{o}tnih_2$. This is the old feminine of IE póti- 'lord, husband' in πόσις 'husband'; πότνια 'mistress, goddess' became isolated from it.

ποῦ ⇒πόθεν.

πουκρίς [f.] 'river perch, Perca fluviatilis' (inscr. Acraiphia before 224-210 BC). ◄IE perḱ-* 'motley'► •ETYM Acc. to Taillardat (see DELG Supp.), the same word as περκίς [f.] 'small perch' (Dsc.). The word would be a metathesized form of πρυκ-ίδ- < pr̥ḱ-, with ρυ from r̥, written πουκριδ- in Boeotian. It would then be cognate with πρακνόν, πρεκνός, etc.; see on ►πρόξ and ►περκνός.

ποῦπος [m.] 'hoopoe' (Cyran. 20). ◄ONOM► •ETYM The word is onomatopoeic; cf. ►ἔποψ 'id.'.

πούριον [n.] 'kind of tart' (Chrysipp. Tyan. apud Ath. 14, 647d). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

ποῦρος ⇒πῶρος.

πούς, ποδός [m.] 'foot', also metaph. in several mgs. (Il.). ◄IE pod-* 'foot'► •VAR Dor. πώς, πός; see below.
•DIAL Myc. po-da-ko /podargos/ [n.] name of an ox (Chantraine RPh. 89 (1963): 13), ti-ri-po /tripod-/, etc.
•COMP Very frequent in compounds, e.g. Πόδ-αργος [m.] name of a horse (Il.), also as an appellative 'swift- or white-footed' (Lyc.), cf. ἀργί-πους s.v. ►ἀργός; τρί-πους (-πος) 'three-footed', msc. 'tripod' (Il.), cf. Myc. ti-ri-po. Extensive discussion on ποδ- as a second member in Sommer 1948: 28ff. Hypostases with a suffix -ιο-, e.g. ἐμ-πόδ-ιος 'at one's feet, in the way, obstructive' (IA), ὑπο-πόδ-ιον [n.] 'footstool' (LXX, Hell. inscr. and pap.).
•DER 1. Diminutives πόδ-ιον [n.] (Epich., Hp.), -άριον [n.] (com.), -ίσκος [m.] (Herod.), cf. Myc. ti-ri-po-di-ko.
Further substantives: 2. ποδ-εῖα [n.pl.] designation of a foot covering, 'leggings' vel sim. (Critias, com.); 3. -εών, -εῶνος [m.] 'foot-end of an animal skin, strip or sheet' (Ion., Theoc.); 4. -ία [f.] 'sail sheet' (gloss., Serv. ad Verg.); 5. -ίδες [f.pl.] designation of a foot covering (Poll.); 6. -ότης [f.] 'the property of being provided with feet' (Arist.); 7. -ωμα [n.] 'floor, base' (pap.).
Adjectives: 8. ποδ-ιαῖος 'measuring one foot' (IA); -ικός 'concerning a metrical foot' (Aristid. Quint.).
Verbs 9. ποδ-ίζομαι 'to be bound by the feet' (S., X.), also (metrical) 'to divide in feet, scan' (Eust.), with -ισμός [m.] 'measuring by feet' (late), -ίστρα [f.] 'foot-trap' (AP);

also with prefix, e.g. ἐμ-ποδ-ίζω 'to bind the feet' (Hdt., A.), but usually 'to hinder, obstruct' (Att.), from ►ἐμποδών, ἐμπόδιος (see above); ἀνα-ποδ-ίζω 'to make to step back, to call back, go back' (IA); 10. ποδ-όω, -όομαι 'to tighten the sail sheet, be provided with feet' (Lyc. et al.), whence -ωτός.

•ETYM The old word for 'foot' was a consonant stem *pod-. In most languages, it was either preserved as such, or enlarged: e.g. Arm. ot-k' [pl.] = πόδες, otn [nom.acc.sg.] = acc. πόδα < IE *pód-m̥. The o-grade appears also in Hitt. pāt- / pat-, CLuw. pāta/i- 'foot'. A lengthened grade is found in Gm., e.g. ON fótr, OE fēt [pl.] < PGm. *fōt-iz < IE *pṓd-es. An innovation after the u-stems is Go. fotus, acc. fotu < IE *pṓd-m̥. An e-grade is attested in Lat. pēs, ped-is, while the original color of Skt. pā́t, acc. pā́d-am, gen. pad-ás cannot be deduced.

ToA pe, ToB paiyye 'foot' contain an enlargement, but are difficult to analyze precisely (see Adams 1999 s.v. paiyye). The appurtenance of Lith. pādas 'sole of the foot, threshing-floor, etc.', Ru. pod 'bottom, ground, plank-bed' is hardly possible in view of Winter's Law (see Derksen 2008 s.v. podъ).

All this seems to point to old static ablaut IE *ped- : pod-. In Greek, the e-grade is retained in a series of derivations: ►πέδη, ►πέζα, ►πεζός, ►πέδον, ►πέδιλον, ►πεδά; further, an old zero grade is found in ►ἔπιβδα.

The originally lengthened grade of the nom.sg. is found in Greek only in πώς (Dor. apud H.). It was replaced by Dor. πός, Hom. τρί-πος after the oblique forms; Att. πούς recalls δούς, etc., but has no certain explanation.

πραγορίτης [m.] 'kind of wine' (H.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

πράμος [adj.] = πρόμος (Ar. Th. 50). ◄?► •ETYM If the tradition is correct, it could contain a zero grade form of ►πρόμος, but a form *pr̥- beside προ is improbable. The form is most often corrected to πρόμος.

πράμνειος [adj.] 'qualification of wine' (Hom.). ◄?►
•VAR -ιος (Hp.).
•ETYM Cf. the note of J. André ad Plin. 14, §54. H. has πράμνη· δίκελλα ἄμπελος; also, Poll. 7, 150 πράμνημα = vine branch of Pramnos.

πρανής ⇒πρηνής.

πρανώ [?] · ἀκρίδος εἶδος 'kind of locust' (H.). ◄PG► •ETYM Gil Fernández 1959 adduces πάρνοψ. This means that the word is Pre-Greek; see Fur.: 344, 392.

πρᾶος, -ον [adj.] 'soft, gentle, mild' (Pi., Att.). ◄?►
•VAR πραΰς, πρηΰς (epic Ion., lyr., Hell.). Grades of comp. πραό-τερος (also πραΰ-, πρηΰ-), πραό-τατος (πράϋστος Phrygia); adverb πράως, rarely -έως; also πρα-όνως (Ar., Lys.), acc. to Frisk after εὐδαιμόνως, but acc. to DELG adverb to a compar. πρᾴων.
•DIAL Att. fem. -εῖα, plur. -έων, -έσι.

•COMP Also as a first member (mostly late), e.g. πραΰ-μητις 'mild-tempered' (Pi.); on ►πρευμενής see s.v.
•DER πρα-ότης (Att.), -ύτης (LXX) [f.] 'mild temper'; πραΰνω, Ion. πρηΰνω 'to make mild, soothe' (Hes., h. Merc. 417), also with κατα- (rarely ἀπο-, δια-, etc.); thence πρά-ϋνσις [f.] (πρή-), πρα-υσμός [m.] 'the soothing', -υντικός 'soothing' (Arist., medic.), -υντής [m.] (EM).
•ETYM The o-stem πρᾶος may have developed from the older υ-stem πραΰς, probably through the adv. πράως, which was contracted from πραέως, belonging to πραΰς; extensive treatment in Egli 1954: 100ff. The subscript ι in πρᾷος is secondary, probably from ῥᾴων. The form πραΰς is regularly derived form *pr(e)h₂-i-u- by Hamp MSS 43 (1984): 52f.; see Pok. 844.

πραπίδες [f.pl.] 'midriff', mostly as a seat of intelligence and of emotions, 'sense, mind' (Il., epic poet.). ◄IE? *prep- 'appear', *kʷrp- 'body, shape'► •VAR Rarely sg. -ίς.
•COMP No compounds or derivatives.
•ETYM Formation in -ίς (like παρηΐς, σανίς, ἐλπίς, φροντίς), probably from the root *kʷrp- which may also be seen in ►πρέπω 'to be conspicuous' (but see the comments there). From this root derive words for 'body, shape', like OHG (h)rëf, OE hrif 'body, abdomen, belly', Lat. corpus, Skt. kr̥p-ā́ [instr.] 'shape, beauty'. In the OE compound mid-hrif 'midriff', the meaning (which agrees with πραπίδες) may depend on the first member mid-.

πράσον [n.] 'leek, Allium porrum', also of a kind of seaweed, like leek (com., Thphr.). ◄PG?, IE? *prs-o- 'leek'► •COMP E.g. πρασο-ειδής 'leek-like', from the color (Hp., Arist.), θαλασσό-πρασον [n.] of a seaweed (Ath. Mech.).
•DER 1. πράσ-ιος (Pl.), -ινος (Arist., LXX), -ιανός (M. Ant.), -ώδης (Thphr.) 'leek-color, blue-green'; 2. -ῖτις [f.] name of a stone, after the color (Thphr.); 3. -ιον [n.] plant name 'horehound, Marrubium, etc.' (Hp., Arist., Thphr.); 4. πρασιά, Ion. -ιή [f.] 'garden-bed' (Od., Hell.), mostly plur. -ιαί, also Att. deme name and a town in Laconia (Th.). Thence πρασ-ιάζομαι, -ιόομαι 'to be divided into beds' (Aq.); see Scheller 1951: 67; 5. πρασίζω [v.] 'to be leek-colored' (Dsc.); 6. Πρασσαῖος [m.] nickname of a frog (Batr.).
•ETYM The traditional identification with Lat. porrum leads to a reconstruction IE *pr̥so-. The maintenance of -σ- between resonant and vowel recalls ►δασύς beside Lat. densus < *dns-u-. It could be argued that the meaning points to substrate origin for this word. If the word is Pre-Greek, this would explain the -σ-.

πρᾱ́σσω [v.] 'to pass through, travel' (only epic), 'to finish, accomplish, do, exact', intr. 'to come to an end, succeed, act' (IA, etc.). ◄IE *per(h₂)- 'go through, cross'► •VAR Att. -ττω, Cret. -δδω; epic Ion. πρήσσω, fut. πράξω, Ion. -ήξω, aor. πρᾶξαι, -ῆξαι (all since Il.), pass. πραχθῆναι (S., Th.), perf. πέπρᾱγα, -ηγα (Pi., Hdt.), -ᾱχα, -ηχα (Att., Hdt.), pass. πέπραγμαι (A.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. δια-, εἰσ-, κατα-, συν-. Compounds: e.g. εὐ-πρᾱγ-ία [f.] 'prosperity, success', κακο-πρᾱγ-ία 'accident, misfortune' (Pi., Att.), whence εὐ-, κακο-πρᾶγ-έω (Att.); analogical δυσ-, κακο-πρᾶγής (Vett. Val., H.), not from πρᾶγος; also εὐ-πραξ-ία, Ion. -πρηξ-ίη [f.], after πρᾶξις, πρᾶξαι.

•DER Action nouns: 1. πρᾶξις, πρῆξις (also with δια-, κατα-, etc.) [f.] 'realization, accomplishment, advancement, act, exaction' (Il.), with πραξ-είδιον [n.] diminutive (EM), -ιμος 'realizable' (Cyprus II-III[p]), 'recoverable' (Delos I-II[p]), also πράκτιμος (from Dor. *πρᾶκτις or after πρακτι-κός?) 'liable to a monetary penalty' (Delphi II[a]). Further compounds προ-πραξ-ία [f.] 'precedence in negotiation' (Acarnan. inscr. V-IV[a]), ὑπερ-πράξ-ιον [n.] 'over-exaction, blackmailing' (Mylasa V[p]), cf. also 10. below. 2. πρᾶγμα (post-Hom.), Ion. πρῆχμα (< -κσμ-; inscr.), πρῆγμα (Hdt.) [n.] 'performed act, fact, business', plur. 'facts, affairs of state, etc.'; as a second member in ἀ-, πολυ-πράγμων, etc.; hence πραγμά-τιον, -τικός, -τίᾱς, -τᾶς, -τώδης, -τεύομαι, with -τευμα, -τεία, -τειώδης, -τευτής, -τευ-τικός.
3. πρᾶγος [n.] poetic replacement for the worn-out word πρᾶγμα (Pi., trag.). 4. πρακτύς (Dor.) = πρᾶξις (EM).
Agent nouns: 5. πρακτήρ, πρηκτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'executor, tradesman' (Hom.), 'exactor' (Hell.) with -τήριος 'effective, decisive' (A.). 6. πράκτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'executor, avenger' (A., S., Antiph.), 'exactor, tax official' (Att., pap.) with -τορ-ικός, -ειος, -εύω with -εῖον, -εία (-ία?). 7. εἰσ-, ἐκ-πράκτης [m.] 'collector, tax official' (Aq.). 8. πρηξών = ἀγοραῖος, i.e. 'notary' (Sicil.; Theognost.); probably from πρῆξις (Schwyzer: 517). 9. Adjective πρακτικός 'concerning action, skilled, practical' (Att.).
•ETYM All forms go back to a common stem πρᾶκ- or πρᾶγ-, which is a κ-enlargement of a zero grade πρᾱ- (DELG compares ἐρύ-κ-ω). Frisk connected this with the root *$perh_2$- 'to sell' in πέπρᾱμαι, πιπρᾱ́σκομαι (see ►πέρνημι), but semantically, connection with ►πέρᾱ, ►πείρω (root *per-) is much more likely, given the oldest meaning 'to travel, fare', etc. Further details are obscure.
For the function of the velar, πλήσσω : πληγή, τμήγω : τέμνω, etc. have been adduced. It is designated as terminative by Schwyzer: 702[5].

πρατήνιον [n.] designation of goats of a certain age (Ar. Byz., H., Phot.). ◄?► •VAR Also προ-, and πρητήν, ἐπιπρητήν -ῆνος [m.].
•ETYM Unknown. Anatolian, acc. to Solmsen 1909: 140f.

πρέμνον [n.] 'tree-stump, trunk, stub', also 'bole', metaph. of a column, etc. (h. Merc.). On the mg. see Strömberg 1937: 98f. ◄PG?(V)►
•VAR Also -ος [m.].
•COMP As a second member i.a. in αὐτό-πρεμνος 'together with the trunk, root and branch, entirely' (A., S.).
•DER πρέμνια· τὰ πάχος ἔχοντα ξύλα 'wood having thickness' (H.); πρεμν-ώδης 'stump-like' (Thphr.), -ίζω [v.] 'to pull up, remove the stump' (Test. apud D. et al.), ἐκ- (D. et al.), -ιάσαι· ἐκριζῶσαι 'to root out' (H.).
•ETYM Unexplained. Fur.: 65 assumes that it is a variant of ►πρυμνός, and considers the words to be Pre-Greek.

πρέπω [v.] 'to draw attention, be comspicuous, distinguish oneself, excel', also (mostly impersonal πρέπει) 'it is fitting, appropriate' (Il.+). ◄IE *prep- 'be conspicuous, appear' or *k^wrep-►

•VAR Rare fut. and aor. πρέψ-ω, -αι (A., Pl.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. δια-, μετα-, ἐν-, ἐπι-.
•DER πρεπ-ώδης (Att.), -όντως (Pi., Att.) 'fitting, appropriate', πρεπ-τός (also εὔ-) 'drawing attention' (A. et al.); often from the prefixed compounds, e.g. μετα-, δια-, ἐκ-πρεπ-ής, also εὐ-, ἀρι-πρεπ-ής 'striking, excelling, pre-eminent, etc.' (Il.), whence εὐπρέπ-εια (Att.), -έω, -ίζω (Aq.), etc. Further πρέπων, -οντος [m.] name of a fish (Opp., Ael.), properly "fit (for eating)" (Strömberg 1943: 33)? On ►θεοπρόπος, see s.v.
•ETYM Identical with Arm. erewim 'become visible, appear', traditionally reconstructed as *prep-. An old independent formation is Arm. eres, plur. eres-k' 'face, appearance' < IE *prep-s-. Celtic too seems to have maintained a derivation from this verb in OIr. richt 'form, shape', W rhith 'species' < IE *prp-tu-. The connection of OHG furben 'to purify, clean' is quite uncertain.
For Armenian erewim etc., a reconstruction *k^wrep- is just as possible as *prep- (Clackson 1994: 165f.), and it has been argued that there was in fact one root *k^wrep-, not two roots *ḱrp- and *prep- (cf. Schindler BSL 67 (1972): 67, DELG Supp.). This would mean that the group of Skt. kr̥pā́ [ins.] 'beauty', Lat. corpus 'body', etc. is related to Gr. πρέπω.

πρέσβυς [m.] 'old man, elder' (poet. Pi., trag.), 'president' (Sparta); plur. πρέσβεις mostly 'ambassador, messenger' (Att., Dor. inscr.); further πρεσβ-ῆες (Hes. Sc. 245), -εῦσιν (Lyc.), dual -ῆ (Att.); cf. below on πρεσβεύω. ◄IE *pres-g^weu-, *preis-g^weu- 'who goes in front'► •VAR Gen. (rare) -εως, -εος, acc. -υν, voc. -υ.
•DIAL Myc. pe-re-ku-ta (PY An 172.2) /presgu-/ or /prei(s)gu-/, pe-re-ku-wa-na-ka (PY Va 15.2) /preigu-wanaks/ (cf. Hackstein 2002: 109).
•COMP As a first member in πρεσβυ-γενής 'first-born' (Il.), etc.
•DER 1. Grades of comparison: πρεσβύ-τερος 'old, venerable', -τατος 'the oldest, most venerable' (Il.), also -τέριον 'council of elders' (NT); also πρέσβιστος 'most venerable' (h. Hom., A., S., etc.) after κράτιστος, κύδιστος, with a cross πρεσβίστ-ατος (Nic.). 2. Feminines: πρέσβα (θεά) 'the venerable', of Hera and others (Il., epic), reminding of πότνα (θεά); πρέσβεα μήτηρ (poetic inscr. Caria II-I[a]), metrically conditioned; πρέσβειρα, of θεῶν, etc. (h. Ven., etc.), after πίειρα, -άνειρα, etc.; πρεσβηΐς, of τιμή (h. Hom.), after βασιληΐς, etc., cf. πρεσβῆες above.
3. πρεσβ-ήϊον [n.] 'gift of honor' (Θ 289), -εῖον 'privilege (of age)' (Att., Hell.). 4. -εία [f.] 'right, privilege (of age)' (A., Pl.), usually 'embassy' (Att.), to πρεσβεύω. 5. πρεσβῦ́της [m.] 'the old, aged one' (IA), enlargement of πρέσβυς after πολίτης, etc., with fem. -ῦτις, -υτικός [adj.] 'senile' (Att., etc.). 6. πρεσβῦ́της, -ητος [f.], Dor. -τας. -τατος '(higher) age' (inscr. Messene I[a], etc.), after νεότης. 7. πρέσβις [f.] 'age, rank', only in κατὰ πρέσβιν (h. Merc., Pl., etc.); after κατὰ τάξιν, etc. 8. πρέσβος [n.] '(object of) veneration', after κῦδος, κράτος, etc. 9. πρεσβ-εύω [v.] 'to be the eldest, have precedence, be ambassador', trans. 'to attend, venerate like a πρέσβυς', med. 'to send ambassadors', also with παρα-, συν-, ἀπο-, etc. Thence -ευτής [m.] 'ambassador, messenger' (Att.), singulative to πρέσβεις. Also πρεσβ-ευτικός, -εύτειρα, -ευτεύω, -ευμα, -ευσις; partly also πρεσβεία (see 4. above) and, as a back-formation, πρεσβεῦσιν [dat.pl.] (Lyc.). 10. Shortened names like Πρέσβων (to πρέσβειρα, perhaps after πέπειρα : πέπων), Πρέσβος, etc., see Bechtel 1917b: 385. On the different spellings and formations see Lejeune 1955-1996: 239ff.

•ETYM Beside the above forms, Doric (especially Cretan) and NWGr. have several by-forms with γ instead of β and with a different initial syllable: Cret. πρεῖγυς, πρείγιστος with compar. πρείγων, also πρειγ-εύω, whence -ευτάς, -ῄϊα, -εία; also, Locr. πρείγα [f.] 'council of elders'; πρεσγευτάς, πρεγγ-; later πρήγιστος with -ιστεύω (Cos); πρεσγέα = πρεσβεία (Argos); πρισγε(ι)ες (Boeot.) is perhaps itacistic for πρεισ-; also σπέργυς· πρέσβυς and πέργουν· πρέσβεις (H.). See García Ramón Emerita 53 (1985): 51-80 for a discussion of all dialectal forms.
The common basis is probably πρεσγ- (with voiced σ; cf. Delph. πρεζβευτάς); thence the other forms arose, but the phonetic developments are uncertain in detail. The interchange β : γ may point to an original IE labiovelar $*g^w$. The preceding syllable, which should probably be taken as the first member of a compound, is generally assumed to contain a frozen adverb πρές 'in front' (see ►πρός). The origin of the final syllable is debated. It has been compared with Skt. puro-gavá- 'leader', of which the second member is derived from a root $*g^weu-$ 'go' (a variant of $*g^wem-$), so it originally means "who goes in front". Some recognize this root variant in Lith. žmogùs 'man' < "going on the earth" (Fraenkel). The connection with the Arm. u-stem erēc', gen. eric'-u 'elder, priest' is tempting. It may derive from $*preisg^wu-$, and is usually connected with Lat. prīscus 'ancient, of old'. It may also be assumed that πρεισ- is an old element, identical in origin with Lat. prīs*, in prīmus < pris-mo-* and in prīs-tinus.
De Lamberterie 1990: 909ff. comments extensively on the formation, meaning, and use of the Greek term. Clackson 1994: 165 is critical about the formal side of the Greco-Armenian comparison (claiming that $*-sg^w-$ would have to give Arm. -c- instead of -c'-). See ►μεσ(σ)ηγύ(ς).

πρευμενής [adj.] 'gentle, merciful, pleasing, welcome' (A., E.). ◅GR▻ •DER πρευμένεια [f.] 'gentleness' (A., E.).
•ETYM Probably from *πρηϋ-μενής, with diphthongization and shortening of the long diphthong. Thus, it would be an Ionism in the language of the tragedians. On this ground, DELG criticizes the etymology, and instead posits *προ-ευμενής; this poses other formal problems, however. The form προευμενής (SEG 18, 592, Soloi [Cyprus]) may support the latter view, but may also be a reinterpretation of the opaque word πρευμενής, acc. to Brixhe and Hodot 1988: 147f.

πρηγορεών, -ῶνος [m.] 'crop of a bird' (Ar., H., Poll.). ◅GR▻ •ETYM Originally means "body part where the food is collected", ἔνθα προαθροίζεται ἡ τροφή (Poll.), is a formation in -εών like ἀνθερεών, κενεών, and other designations of places and parts of the body (Chantraine 1933: 164f., Schwyzer: 488): thus from *προ-άγορος (on the compositional vowel, see Schwyzer: 398 and 402), or directly from προ-αγείρειν.

πρηδών •VAR πρήθω (ἐν-έπρηθον), πρηστήρ etc. ⇒πίμπρημι.

πρῆθμα [n.] · πολύποδος κεφαλὴ ἔνιοι πλεκτάνη 'tentacled head of an octopus' (H.). ◅?▻
•ETYM Unknown.

πρημαδίη [f.] name of a kind of olive (Nic. Al. 87). ◅?▻ •ETYM Formation in -άδιος, as if from *πρημάς (cf. ἐρινάς, κοτινάς, ἰσχάς, etc.). For further connection with *πρῆμα, πρημαίνω, πίμπρημι, there is no indication. Cf. also ►πρημάς.

πρημάς, πρημνάς [f.] name of a (young) tunny-fish (Pl. Com., Nicoch., Opp.). ◅PG?▻
•VAR Also πριμάδες, -άδιαι (Arist.), πρῆμναι (H.) [pl.].
•ETYM Strömberg 1943: 126ff. discusses the many names for 'tunny'; see also Thompson 1947 s.v. Fur.: 245 considers the variation ν/zero to be a Pre-Greek phenomenon.

πρηνής [adj.] 'leaning forward, headlong, inclined, steep' (Il., epic Ion. poet., Arist.). ◅IE? $*h_2en-os-$ 'face'▻ •VAR πρᾱνής (X. et al.).
•COMP Also κατα-, προ-, ἐπι- (cf. Leumann 1950: 77ff.).
•DER πρην-ίζω 'to throw head over heels, throw down, destroy' (Hell.), aor. -ίξαι, also with ἀπο-, κατα-; rarely πρην-όω 'id.' (AP, H.), also with κατα-; to this belongs (back-formation?) πρανόν· τὸ κατωφερές, πρανές 'leaning down, face-down or head-first' (H.).
•ETYM Cannot be seprated from ἀπ-, προσ-ηνής, so it may contain a substantive ēnos-* or ānos-* [n.] 'face'; see ►ἀπηνής for the etymology, which is rather doubtful.

πρητήν ⇒πρατήνιον.

πρηών ⇒πρών.

πρίασθαι [v.] 'to buy' (Od.). ◅IE $*k^wreih_2-$ 'buy'▻ •VAR Ptc. πριάμενος, finite forms ἐπριάμην, πρίωμαι, πριαίμην, ipv. πρίασο (-ίω, -ίᾱ).
•COMP Rarely with prefix, e.g. ἐκ-, συν-.
•DER Negative verbal adj. ἀ-πρία-τος in ἀπριάτην [acc.sg.f.] 'unbought, without ransom' (A 99, *h. Cer.*132), as an adv. 'gratuitous' (ξ 317, Agath. 4, 22), plur. ἀπριάτας (Pi. Fr. 169, 8); PN Ἀπριάτη; cf. Leumann 1950: 167f.
•ETYM An old aorist, exclusively attested in Greek. A comparable formation is OIr. ni-cria [subj.] 'emat' < PIE $*k^wrieh_2-t$. Greek does not have the nasal present that is found in Sanskrit, Celtic, and Slavic, viz. Skt. krīṇāti (for older kriṇāti*), OIr. ni [subj.], ORu. krьnuti 'to buy'. It is possible that the expected Greek reflex *πρίνημι had become awkward because of its resemblance to the antonym πέρνημι, Aeol. πορνάμεν 'to sell' (Meillet BSL 26 (1925): 14). The verbal adj. ἀ-πρίατος is close to Skt. krītá- 'bought' < $*k^wrih_2-to-$, but Greek may also continue $*n-k^wrih_2-eto-$.
Numerous post-Indo-European formations are found in the various branches, e.g. Skt. krayá- [m.] 'purchase (price)' < $*k^wroih_2-o-$, OIr. críth 'payment, purchase', OLith. krienas 'price', ToB karyor, ToA kuryar 'purchase, trade'.

πρίν [adv., conj.] 'before, previously' (Il.). ◅IE prei* 'earlier, before'▻

•VAR Rarely as a prep. with gen.; Hom. also πρῖν, Gort. πρειν (once beside frequent πριν), Locr. φριν.
•ETYM With final -ν like in νῦν, νύν, πάλιν, etc. Clearly related to ► πρό < _*pr-o-_, with ι as in Lat. _prior_, _prīscus_, etc. The base form may have been the old locative _*pr-i_. The _e_-vocalism in Cret. πρειν and perhaps in Hom. πρῖν (if itacistic) could be mirrored by Lith. _priē_ < _*prei_.

πρῖνος [f., m.] 'holm-oak, kermes oak, Quercus ilex, coccifera' (Hes.). ◄EUR?►
•VAR πρίνη [f.] 'id.' (Eup.).
•DER Diminutive πριν-ίδιον [n.] (Ar., Ael.), -εύς [m.] 'oak grove' (Erythrae IV^{a}), -ινος 'made of π., hard, tough' (Hes.), -ώδης 'π.-like, hard' (Ar.); Πρινόεσσα [f.] name of an island (Epirus).
•ETYM No Indo-European etymology. The Carian TN Πριναssός points to an Anatolian origin (Carnoy _Beitr. z. Namenforsch._ N.F. 10 (1975): 222). Machek _Ling. Posn._ 2 (1950): 155 compares Slav. _brinъ_ 'larch', assuming a loan from a common source. Fur.: 165 assumes a Pre-Roman(ce) _*brin_ 'Pinus mugus' (Machek), which would make the Greek dendronym a European loanword.

πρῖω [v.] 'to saw', medic. 'to trephine', ὀδόντας πρίειν 'to gnash one's teeth', (ὀδὰξ) πρίειν 'to bite (with one's teeth), grasp', pass. metaph. 'to experience a biting pain' (IA). ◄?►
•VAR Rare and late -ίζω, aor. πρῖσαι, pass. πρισθῆναι, perf. med. πέπρισμαι (all IA), act. πέπρικα (D. S.).
•DIAL Perhaps Myc. _pi-ri-(je-)te-(re)_, see Aura Jorro 2, 124.
•COMP Also with δια-, ἐν-, ἀπο-, etc.
•DER 1. πρίων, -ονος [m.] 'saw' (IA) with πριόν-ιον [n.] (Ph. _Bel._), -ῖτις [f.] plant name (Aret. et al.), Redard 1949: 76; -ωτός (Ar., Arist.), -ώδης (Thphr.) 'saw-shaped, jagged'. 2. πρῖσμα (παρά-, ἔκ-) [n.] 'anything sawn, sawdust' (Hp., Thphr.), 'trilateral column, prism' (Euc.), with -μάτιον (Procl.); πρισμοῖς· ταῖς βιαίοις κατοχαῖς 'in forced detention' (H.). 3. πρῖσις (ἀνά-, ἔκ-, ἀπό-) [f.] 'the sawing' (Hp., Arist.). 4. πρίστης [m.] 'sawer, saw' (Att. and Hell. inscr. and pap., Poll.), with fem. πρῖστις 'sawfish' (Epich., Arist.), see Strömberg 1943: 44; also an instrument (Att. and Epid. inscr.), etc. 5. πριστήρ [m.] 'saw, sawer' (LXX). 6. πριστός 'sawn' (Od.), Ammann 1956: 16; εὔ-, δύσ-πριστος (Thphr.). 7. πριστικός 'belonging to sawing' (Hero).
Some forms were enlarged with ω: πε-πριω-μένος, ἀ-, δια-πρίω-τος (Hp.), (δια-)πρίω-σις [f.] (Delph., Epid.), πριώμασι· πρίσμασι 'sawdust' (H.), with fut. πριωσεῖ and subj. pres. πριῷ (_Tab. Heracl._).
•ETYM πρῖω seems to point to a stem _*pris-_, perhaps older _*pri-_. It may correlate with πείρω 'to pierce' < _*per-ie/o-_, for which Frisk compared _*trī-_ in Lat. _trīvī_, _trītum_, and perhaps τρῖβω 'to rub (down)' < _*trh$_1$-i-_ beside Lat. _terō_ and τείρω 'to rub (open)' < _*terh$_1$-ie/o-_, as well as _*skī-_ in Lat. _scīvī_, _scītum_ 'to decide' beside _secō_ 'to cut'. The value of this comparison is yet unclear.
Further etymological comparison has proven fruitless; the link with Alb. _prish_ 'to spoil, break, destroy' (Meyer 1891: 353) is uncertain. WP 2, 89 assumes that πρίω is onomatopoeic. The ω-forms are probably due to contamination, perhaps by τετρωμένος, ἄτρωτος, τρώω, τρῶμα.

πρό [adv., prefix, prep.] 'forth, forward, before, for' (Il.). ◄IE _*pro_ 'forward'► •VAR With gen.
•DIAL Myc. _po-ro-_.
•ETYM Allative formation in _*-o_, with ending like ἀπό, ὑπό. A common IE adverb; cf. Hitt. _parā_ 'forward', Skt. _prá_, Av. and OP _fra-_, Lat. _pro-_, OIr. _ro-_, Go. _fra-_, Lith. _pra-_, OCS _pro-_, Ru. _pro_, from IE _*pro_. A lengthened grade _*prō_ is found in πρωΐ, etc. Cf. also ► πρόκα, ► πρόμος, and ► πρότερος. Other old case forms of the same element _*pr_ are found in πρίν and πρός < _*proti_. More remotely related are ► πάρα, ► πάρος, ► πέρᾱ(ν), ► πέρι, etc. On Gr. πρό beside παρά and related forms in Latin, see García Ramón 1997.

προαλής [adj.] of a terrain (χῶρος), over which the water flows down quickly, 'sloping, sudden' vel sim. (Φ 262), of water (ὕδωρ) itself, 'breaking forth, streaming down' vel sim. (A. R. 3, 73); metaph. 'rash, heedless' (LXX, Str., A. D.); προαλεστάτην· προπετεστάτην, προχειροτάτην 'most hasty, most ready or accessible' (H.). ◄GR► •ETYM From προ-άλλομαι, with a formation like προ-πετής.

πρόαρον [n.] 'large wooden mixing bowl' (Pamphil. _apud_ Ath. 11, 495a). ◄?► •ETYM Usually explained as a compound of πρό and ἀρύειν 'to draw water'. This is not especially illuminating for a vessel from which wine was poured into the drinking cups. See ► ἀρύω.

πρόβατα [n. pl.] 'cattle, herd, flock' (Il.), 'small cattle'; -ον [sg.] mostly 'sheep' (Att., Gort., etc.); also name of an unknown fish (Opp., Ael.), because of the similarity of the head, acc. to Strömberg 1943: 102. ◄IE _*pro-g^{w}eh$_2$-_ 'go'► •COMP προβατο-γνώμων [m.] 'knower of herds' (A.), πολυ-πρόβατος 'rich of cattle, sheep' (Hdt., X.).
•DER 1. Diminutive προβάτ-ιον [n.] (Att.). 2. Adj. προβάτ-ειος (Arist.), -ικός (LXX, N.T.) 'belonging to sheep (small cattle)', -ώδης 'sheep-like' (late). 3. -ών (-εών Hdn.), -ῶνος [m.] 'sheepfold' (Hell. inscr. and pap.). 4. -ήματα· πρόβατα 'cattle' (H.) (after κτήματα, βοσκή-ματα, etc.; Chantraine 1933: 178). 5. -εύς [m.] 'shepherd' (title of a com. of Antiph.). 6. -εύω [v.] 'to keep, tend cattle or sheep' (D. H., App.) with -ευτικός, -εύσιμος, -ευτής, -εία. 7. Plant names: -ειον, -ειος, -αία (Ps.-Dsc.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 137. On πρόβειος, a rhythmical shortening of προβάτειος (_An. Ox._, et al.) see Palmer _Class. Quart._ 33 (1939): 31ff.
•ETYM The verbal abstract πρόβασις is found once in the same sense as πρόβατα, in β 75 κειμήλιά τε πρόβασίν τε, where it designates movable cattle as opposed to immovable property. For the semantic development, cf. ON _ganganda fé_ "going cattle" = 'living stock' beside _liggjanda fé_ 'κειμήλια', or Hitt. _i̯i̯ant-_ "the going", 'sheep' ptc. of _i̯i̯a-_ 'to go'. It is plausible, therefore, that πρόβατα was derived from προβαίνειν. Cf. Benveniste _BSL_ 45 (1949): 91 ff. with extensive treatment and criticism of diverging views. In the secondary sense of 'sheep', πρόβατον has replaced older ὄϊς.

In view of the dat.pl. πρόβασι (Hdn.) instead of προβατοις (Hes.), the plural πρόβατα is considered to be old (Risch 1937: 196, Benveniste BSL 45 (1949): 91ff., Egli 1954: 41ff.); Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 178ff. opposes this idea, and remarks that participles in -το- do not necessarily have a passive sense in Greek (στατός, πλωτός). Note, however, that the attestation of πρόβασι is very weak.

προβοσκίς, -ίδος [f.] 'elephant's trunk' (Arist., Hell.), also metaph. of the proboscis of an insect and of the two tentacles of the ten-armed squid (Arist.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Formation like ἀγκαλίς, ἐπιγουνίς, κοπίς, and other names of body parts and instruments, probably directly from βόσκω rather than from the rare form βοσκός (cf. Chantraine 1933: 338). For the use of the prefix, compare πρό-δομος 'front room', etc. With a different accentuation, there is also προβοσκός (-ος) [m.] 'assistant herdsman' (Hdt. 1, 113); cf. πρόδουλος. Borrowed as Lat. proboscis, promuscis.

πρόδανις [adv.] · πρότερον 'before' (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

προηρόσιος [adj.] name of a festival before ploughing (Att.). ◂GR▸ •VAR In Προηροσία (scil. ἑορτή, θυσία) [f.], -ια (ἱερά) [n.pl.].
•DIAL Epid. Πραράτιος (inscr.), also -τριος.
•DER προηρόσιοι θεοί, -ία Δημήτηρ (Plu.).
•ETYM Hypostatic formation from πρὸ ἀρότου (with compositional lengthening). With crasis and dissimilation: πληροσία [f.] (Att. inscr.); see Schwyzer: 258 and 402, Lejeune 1972: 323[2].

προΐκτης ⇒προίξ.

προίξ, προικός [f.] 'gift, present' (ν 15, ρ 413, both gen., on which see below), 'dowry' (Att.), see Sommer 1948: 94; also late pap. as an archaizing term in juridical jargon. ◂IE *seiHk- 'stretch forth the hand'▸ •VAR Used adverbially: acc. προῖκα 'gratuitous, for free' (Att.), probably also gen. προικός (ν 15).
•COMP ἄ-προικος 'without dowry' (Att.); see Sommer l.c.
•DER Diminutive προικ-ίδιον [n.] (Plu.); adj. -ίδιος 'forming a gift' (Ph.), -ιμαῖος 'id.' (pap. VI^p), 'gratuitous' (D. C.), -ιος 'gratuitous' (AP); verb -ίζω 'to provide with a dowry' (D. S., Ph. et al.). Also προ-ΐκτης [m.] 'beggar' (ρ 352 and 449), -ΐσσομαι 'to ask, beg for a gift' (Archil. 130). Cf. also the fut. κατα-προΐξομαι in οὐ καταπροΐξεται 'he will not get away unpunished', etc. (IA com.).
•ETYM An archaic word that became extinct, but was later revived. Formation like πρόσ-φυξ, so πρό-ϊξ (πρόϊκα with dieresis is Ion., acc. to EM 495, 33), from a prefixed verb which is also the basis of προΐκτης. The yod-present προ-ΐσσομαι can be either primary or denominative from προίξ.
Original mg.: "reaching out (of the hand), presentation", related to Lith. síekti, 1sg. síekiu 'to reach out, etc.'; προΐκ-της originally means 'who reaches out his hand'; cf.

προτείνω χεῖρα καὶ προΐσσομαι (Archil. 130). See further ►ἵκω and LIV[2] s.v. *seik- for further cognates from Baltic, Tocharian, and Umbrian.

πρόκα [adv.] 'instantly, suddenly' (Hp., A. R.). ◂IE *pro-k- 'in front'▸ •VAR πρότε (Hdt., Call.).
•ETYM Temporal formation like αὐτίκα, τηνίκα, τόκα; clearly derived from ►πρό '(be)fore, forward'. The velar suffix has correspondences in OCS prokъ 'remaining', Lat. reci-procus 'returning on the same road' from *"directed backward and forward'), proc-erēs 'chiefs, nobles', procul 'far away'. The final -α is ambiguous: perhaps after ἅμα, τάχα, etc. or the ntr.pl. ending? The suffixation with -τε is parallelled by ἐπείτε, αὖτε, etc.

προκώνια [n.pl.] with or without ἄλφιτα, flour of barley (Hp., Att. inscr.); see the TLG. ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

προμάλαγγες [m. pl.] a group of flatterers and spies on Cyprus (Clearch. fr. 19 Wehrli). ◂?▸ •ETYM Indigenous term without etymology. The association with μαλάσσω points to folk etymology (DELG).

προμηθής [adj.] 'forethinking, cautious' (IA). ◂IE? *men(s)-d^{h}h$_1$- 'direct the mind to'▸ •DER 1. προμήθ-εια (Att.), also -ία (trag.), Ion. -ίη, Dor. -μᾱ́θεια [f.] 'caution, foresight'; 2. Προμηθ-εύς, Dor. -μᾱθ-, [m.] "the forethinking one", 'Prometheus' (Hes., Pi.), secondary appellative (A.); to this as an opposite Ἐπιμηθεύς (cf. Boßhardt 1942: 95f.); with -ειος 'belonging to Pr.' (Nic., AP), τὰ Προμήθ-εια 'festival of Pr.' (Att.), -ικῶς 'in a way worthy of Pr.' (Ar.), at the same time connected with προμηθής; 3. προμηθ-έομαι 'to be forethinking, cautious' (IA), also -εύομαι 'id.' (Alex. Aphr.) with -ευτικός = προμηθής (Eust.); on προμήθεσαι (ipv. aor.?, Archil.?) see Maas KZ 60 (1932): 286.
•ETYM From πρό and *μῆθος, *μᾶθος, which may be semantically associated with μαθεῖν. Since the latter is compared with μενθήρη and Go. mundon sis, etc., analogical ablaut must be assumed for προμηθής, perhaps after μήδομαι or μῆτις. This remains a bit doubtful.

προμνηστῖνοι [adj.] 'one by one, one after another' (φ 230), -αι (λ 233). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Formation like ἀγχιστ-ῖνος (from ἄγχιστα), ἔνδῖνα (from ἔνδον); see Meid IF 62 (1956): 274[13]. From a noun like *πρόμνηστις 'wooing' (from προ-μνάομαι 'woo for sbd.'), thus the original meaning is 'belonging to wooing', after the ancient custom to present several women one after another. See Hoffmann RhM 56 (1901): 474f. The hypothesis of Forssman KZ 79 (1965): 26ff. is to be rejected (cf. on ►πρυμνός).

πρόμος [m.] 'protagonist' (Hom.), 'leader, commander' (trag.). ◂IE *promo- 'first'▸ •ETYM Usually connected with U promom 'primum', Go. and ON fram 'forward', and identified as an old superlative of IE *pro in πρό, etc. The hapax ►πράμος, if not corrupt, has been compared to Go. fruma 'first'. Since the word only means 'champion' in Hom., we have to consider the possibility that πρόμος was shortened from πρόμαχος (already suggested by Aristarchus); the meaning 'leader' would be due to a misunderstanding of the epic word. The hapax ἀγοὶ πρόμνοι (A. Supp. 904 [lyr.]) presents metrical difficulties, but may be due to an error in the tradition; differently, Forssman KZ 79 (1965): 11ff. (see on ►πρυμνός).

προνωπής [adj.] 'inclined, stooping, downcast, weak' (A., E.), on the mg. Muller Mnem. 55 (1927): 101ff. ◄?►
•DER προνώπιος 'outside, in front of the house', τὰ προνώπια, τὸ προνώπιον 'front, facade of a house' (E.), ἥρωες προνώπιοι 'Lares compitales' (D. H.); see on ►νωπέομαι with νενώπηται.
•ETYM Formally, νωπέομαι is comparable to deverbatives such as πωλέομαι, ὠθέω. It may have given rise to προνωπής, προνώπιος, but προνώπια is also reminiscent of the synonym ἐνώπια; therefore, it has been suggested (Eust., Bechtel 1914 s.v. νάπη) that προνώπια is from *προ-ενώπια. At any rate, προνωπής and νωπέομαι cannot be connected with νάπη 'woodland, glen' (Bechtel l.c.) with ablaut as in κώπη : κάπτω, as suggested by Frisk.

πρόξ, προκός [f.] 'roe- or deer-like animal' (ρ 295, Archil., Arist. et al.). ◄IE *perḱ- 'spotted, motley'► •VAR Also προκάς, -άδος [f.] (h. Ven. 71), like δορκάς, κεμάς.
•ETYM Animal names of the same type as γλαῦξ, γύψ, αἴξ, etc.; see ►περκνός.

προοίμιον ⇒οἴμη.

προπηλακίζω ⇒πηλός.

πρός [adv., prep.] 'furthermore, thereto; from, by, at, to, towards, in face of' (epic IA, Aeol.). ◄IE *proti 'against'► •VAR With gen. (abl.), dat. (loc.), acc. Epic also πρότι, προτί, with metathesis πορτί (Cret.), with e-vocalism περτ' (Pamph.), πρές (Aeol. acc. to gramm.), see also on ►πρέσβυς.
•ETYM The form πρότι is identical to Skt. práti 'to, against', except for the missing effect of Brugmann's Law. This points to *preti, which is perhaps found in Pamph. περτ'. See also Lat. pretium 'price, worth' < *préti-o-, "the opposite equivalent", OCS protivъ 'against' < IE *proti-.
The usual forms πρός (and πρές) have arisen by assibilation of *-ti̯- in antevocalic position; note that final -ος is also found in πάρος and πός. An older form pres is found in Messap. prespolis (Pisani Sprache 7 (1961): 103; meaning unknown; acc. to Pisani 'lord of the house, (house) priest'). Beside προτί/ πρός, Greek has ►ποτί, ►πός. Further connection with πρό is conceivable; cf. on ►πρόσω.

προσάντης [adj.] 'ascending steeply, inclined, craggy, rough, adverse, hostile' (Pi., IA). ◄GR► •ETYM Adjectival hypostasis of the adverb πρόσ-αντα (Dicaearch.) 'upwards, up the mountain'; like ἔν-αντα from a noun 'front', which is also seen in the frozen case forms ►ἄντα, ►ἀντί, ►ἄντην. Likewise in ἄν-αντα 'up a mountain', with ἀνάντης 'uphill', and κάταντα 'downwards, downhill', with κατάντης 'going down'.

προσηνής [adj.] 'favorable, gentile, sweet' (Emp., Anacr.). ◄IE? *$h_2$en-os- 'face'► •DIAL Dor. προσᾱνής.
•DER προσήνεια (Hp.), προσηνεύομαι = σαίνω 'to flatter' (H.).
•ETYM Like ►ἀπηνής and ►πρηνής, derived from a word for 'face', which itself is of uncertain etymology.

πρόσθε(ν) [adv., prep.] 'ahead, before, formerly, yore; in front of' (Il., IA) ◄IE, GR► •VAR With gen.; also πρόσθα (Dor. Aeol.), which gave πρόθθα (Cret.); πρόστα (Delph.).
•COMP Also combined with other adverbs or prepositions, e.g. ἔμ-προσθε(ν) 'in front (of), before' (IA), -θα (Dor., Aeol.), with ἐμπρόσθ-ιος 'in the front', especially of body parts (Hdt., Att., Arist.), -ίδιος 'id.' (A. D., pap.), ἐπί-προσθεν 'close before, near' Att., Hell.) with ἐπιπροσθ-έω [v.] 'to be in the way, in front of it, to hinder, to cover' (Hp., Hell.), ὑπό-προσθε 'just before' (Hp.) with ὑπαπροσθ-ίδιος 'older inhabitant' (Locr.).
•DER πρόσθ-ιος 'in the front', especially of body parts (Hdt. v.l., trag., Arist.; cf. ἐμπρόσθιος above), -ίδιος 'id.' (Nonn.), προστ-ίζιος = προσθ-ίδιος 'earlier, the former' (El.).
•ETYM Formation in -θε(ν), -θα, which in view of the meaning and spread can hardly be derived from πρός (Kretschmer Glotta 1 (1909): 55), but rather from πρό with analogical -σ- (πρό-θεν, however, only in Greg. Cor.). The example cannot have been ὄπισθεν, as this stands for earlier ὄπιθεν itself, and probably took -σ- from πρόσθεν. Therefore, more probably after ἔκτοσ-θε(ν), ἔντοσ-θε(ν), or from πρόσ(σ)ω? Extensive discussion in Lejeune 1939: 333ff.

προσκηδής ⇒κῆδος.

πρόσφατος [adj.] 'undecomposed', of a corpse (Ω 757 ἑρσήεις καὶ π., Hdt.), 'fresh', of plants, victuals, water etc. (Hp., Arist., Hell.), metaph. 'fresh' = 'which happened lately, recently; following immediately', of actions, emotions, etc. (A. [lyr.], Lys., D., Arist.). ◄GR► •ETYM Acc. to Phot., it means νεωστὶ ἀνῃρημένος 'recently deceased', an interpretation which seems to give the best solution: the second member belongs to πεφνεῖν, φόνος, ►θείνω 'to hit, kill', with the same second member as in Ἀρηΐ-, ἀρεί-φατος, μυλή-φατος, ὀδυνή-φατος. DELG observes that it may have been a hunting or fishing term, as it is used for flesh in Hp. Acut. 49 and in Men. 397. The development of meaning to 'recent' became possible after the second member had become opaque (cf. ἀρείφατος, which also means 'martial' in trag.). The first element cannot be a verbal prefix (as if from *προσ-θείνω), and has not received a good explanation yet (Frisk's suggestion 'close to' does not really make sense).

πρόσω [adv.] 'forward, onward, further', etc (Il.). ◄IE *pro-ti-o- 'against'► •VAR Epic also πρόσσω. Compar. προσω-τέρω, -τάτω, adv. πρόσω-θεν 'from far away' (Ion. poet.), πρόσσοθεν (Ψ 533), after other adverbs in -οθεν (epic Ion. poet.).
•ETYM Contains the same formation as ὀπίσ(σ)ω, derived from *pro with a suffix *-ti̯o-, or perhaps a thematic entension of *proti > πρότι. See also ►πόρσω, ►πόρρω.

πρόσωπον [n.] 'face, countenance, mask, role, person' (Il.). ⊲IE proti* 'against' + *h_3ek^w- 'see'⊳ •VAR Epic pl. also -πατα, dat. -ασι, which can easily be explained as an enlargement favoured by the metre (Schwyzer: 515[3]).

•COMP Rarely as a first member, e.g. προσωπο-λήπτης [m.] 'who respects persons, who is partial' with -ληπτέω, -ληψία (NT). Very often as a second member, mostly late., e.g. μικρο-πρόσωπος 'small-faced' (Arist.).

•DER Diminutives προσωπ-ίδιον (Ar.), -εῖον (-ιον) [n.] 'mask' (Thphr., LXX), the plant name -ιον, -ίς, -ιάς, -ῖτις (Dsc. et al.; probably after the form of the flower; Strömberg 1940: 47), -οῦττα [f.] 'face-shaped vessel', "face-urn" (Polem. Hist., Poll.).

•ETYM Similar to ►μέτωπον 'forehead', πρόσωπον is also a hypostatic form, i.e. from *προτι-ωπ-ον "what is opposite to the eyes (of the other), the sight (of the other)". By connection with epic προτι-όσσομαι, προσ-όψομαι 'to look at', ὄπωπα, etc., πρόσωπον may have been (re)interpreted as verbal noun (cf. G Angesicht).
Formally, πρόσωπον neatly corresponds with ToA pratsak, ToB pratsāko 'breast' (containing ToA ak, B ek 'eye') and with Skt. prátīka- [n.] 'face, appearance' from práti = πρότι and a zero grade -h_3k^w-, so proti-h_3k^w- (cf. ►ὀπῑπεύω < opi*-h_3k^w-). The Greek form may continue this old compound, assuming that Cih_3C developed to PGr. C̦ōC (which is doubtful), or it may have been recreated within Greek from πρότι and ὤψ.
On the IE expressions for 'face', see Malten 1961: 1ff.

προταινί [adv.] 'ahead, in front of' (E. Rh. 523). ⊲GR⊳

•VAR Boeot. inscr. προτηνί 'earlier'; προταίνιον· πρὸ μικροῦ and παλαιόν 'for a small [time]; old' (H.; text uncertain)

•ETYM Acc. to Bechtel 1921, 1: 309f., it derives from πρὸ ται-νὶ (locatival; scil. ἡμέραι), with a suffix -νι added to the pronoun; cf. also ποταίνιον (Schwyzer: 612). See ►ποταίνιος.

πρότερος [pron. adj.] 'front, former', usually of time 'earlier' (Il.). ⊲IE pro-tero-* 'further'⊳ •VAR Adv. πρότερον 'earlier' (post-Hom.), προτέρω 'further (forward), sooner' (epic since Il.), -ωσε 'forward' (h. Hom., A. R.), -ωθε(ν) 'from before, from earlier on' (Theognost., EM); προτερη-γενής 'born earlier, elder' (Antim.), after ἀρχη-γενής, etc.

•DER ἡ προτερ-αία (scil. ἡμέρα) 'the preceding day' (IA), cf. ὑστεραία, etc., also -εία [f.] 'id.' (Tab. Heracl.), -ικόν [n.] 'priority' (pap.); προτερ-έω 'to be ahead, have the advantage, prevent' (IA), also with κατα-, συν-. Thence -ημα [n.] (Hell.), -ησις [f.] (Hld.) 'advantage, lead'.

•ETYM Opposite of ὕστερος, from ►πρό, identical with Av. and OP fratara- 'the one more in front, earlier', Skt. pratará- 'further, farther, future'.

πρότι, προτί ⇒πρός.

πρότμησις [f.] '(region of the) navel' (Λ 424, Q. S., Sinope III[a], H., Poll.); in H. also προτμῆτις· ὁ περὶ τὸν ὀμφαλὸν κατὰ τὸν λαγόνα τόπος 'area surrounding the navel, waist' and προτμητόν· τὸν ὀμφαλόν. ⊲GR⊳

•ETYM Verbal noun from προτέμνω 'to cut off in front', originally of the severing of the umbilical cord, then of the navel itself and the area surrounding it (Porzig 1942: 337). Often analyzed as "incision of the body", whence 'waist' (e.g. LSJ, Benveniste 1948: 78), which should be rejected. The form προτμῆτις in H. (also v.l. sch. Λ 424; accent uncertain) must be explained, if the accent in H. is reliable, as a fem. of *προτμής (like προβλής); cf. e.g. δασπλῆτις and προβλῆτις, ἀδμῆτις (but these forms are rare and late). A proparoxytone πρότμητις would be strange, and can hardly be an archaism (Wackernagel 1916: 236).

προύμνη [f.] 'plum tree, Prunus' (Thphr.). ⊲PG?, LW Anat.?⊳

•DER προῦμνον [n.] 'plum' (Gal. et al.).

•ETYM Probably of Anatolian origin, like the tree itself; cf. the Phryg. TN Πρυμνησσός and Schrader-Nehring 1917(2): 181f. Borrowed as Lat. prūnus, -um, perhaps from an intermediate *πρου(ϝ)νον (Fur.: 243)?

προύνεικος (-ικος) [m.] 'one who bears cargo out of the market, hired porter' (Com. Adesp., Hdn. Gr., Ael. Dion., H., Eust.), also a designation of a loafer or a person from the lower classes (Herod., H.); also adj. (AP 12, 209)? ⊲GR?⊳

•DER προυνικία (H.), see on ►σκίταλοι.

•ETYM A colloquial word without a certain etymology. Hardly derived from προ-ενεῖκαι, as suggested already by Eust. and others, nor related to νεῖκος (AB, EM); cf. also θορυβώδεις καὶ προυνείκους in D. L. 4, 6.

προυσελέω [v.] 'to ridicule, outrage, maltreat' (A. Pr. 438, Ar. Ra. 730). ⊲?⊳

•ETYM Without etymology. One doubtful hypothesis derives it from *προ-εσ-ελέω (from ἕλος) "to dump in the swamp" (Schwyzer: 724), for the semantics of which προπηλακίζειν (H., Suid.) 'id.' has been compared.

πρόφρων [adj.] 'kind, willing' (epic poet. since Il.). ⊲GR⊳

•VAR Fem. πρόφρασσα (Il., Od.).

•ETYM Bahuvrīhi compound, literally meaning "forward-minded" (cf. Sommer 1948: 110[3]). The form πρόφρασσα is after synonymous ἑκασσα (Wackernagel Gött. Nachr. 1914: 41f.); cf. on ►ἑκών and ►φρήν.

προχάνη [f.] 'pretext' (Call. Cer. 73, fr. 26). ⊲GR⊳

•VAR Dor. -ᾱ.

•ETYM Archaic or dialectal formation with unclear history. Acc. to Eust. 1109, 39, derived from a verb προχαίνω, which is further unattested and translated as προφασίζομαι 'to give a pretext'; unconvincing. More probably, it is derived from προ-έχομαι 'to pretend', thus from *προ-οχάνη with elision.

πρόχειρος [adj.] 'at hand, ready, easy, usual' (IA). ⊲GR⊳

•DER προχείρ-ιον (-ον) [n.] 'handbag' (pap.), -ότης [f.] 'readiness' (Hell.), προχειρίζομαι, -ίζω [v.] 'to provide (oneself) with, put at disposal, choose' (Att., Hell.), whence -ισις [f.] 'provision, accomplishment', -ισμός [m.] 'provision, choice' (Hell.).
•ETYM Hypostasis from πρὸ χειρῶν, possibly also a bahuvrīhi "with a forward hand" (Sommer 1948: 108, 112, 141, Schwyzer 1950: 508).

πρόχνυ [adv.] 'kneeling, on the knees' (I 570, with καθεζομένη); 'fully, thoroughly, entirely' vel sim. (Φ 460, ξ 69 with (ἀπ-)ολέσθαι; A. R. 1, 1118; 2, 249), mg. uncertain (Antim. Col. 2 P.). ◂IE *ǵon-u 'knee'▸ •ETYM In the meaning 'kneeling', πρόχνυ clearly contains the zero grade of γόνυ, as in ►γνύξ. The proper meaning is therefore "with the knees forward", a frozen ntr.acc. which stands for *πρό-γνυ = Skt. (gramm.) pra-jñú-, of which the meaning is not quite certain (Wackernagel 1916: 74). The origin of the aspiration is uncertain (cf. Schwyzer: 328). The meaning 'fully', if at all from 'kneeling', probably came about by reinterpretation of an epic expression. For a different etymology, cf. Brugmann-Thumb 1913: 127[1], who derived πρόχνυ 'fully' from χναύω 'to plane, gnaw off'; the originally independent *πρό-γνυ 'kneeling' would then have coalesced with it (an idea accepted by Wackernagel 1916: 74).

προχῶναι [f.pl.] 'buttocks, coccyx' (Archipp. 41). ◂GR▸ •ETYM Perhaps a nonce form or comic contamination of κοχώνη and πρωκτός (Güntert 1914: 122); otherwise, with πρό.

πρυλέες, -έων [m.pl.] 'heavily armed foot-soldiers' (Il., Hes. Sc. 193, Gortyn), metaph. of birds (Opp.); προυλέσι· πεζοῖς ὁπλίταις 'hoplites on foot' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER Also πρύλις [f.] '(Cretan) weapon-dance' (Call.; acc. to Arist. fr. 519 Cypr. or Cret.); πρυλεύσεις· ἐπὶ τῆς ἐκφορᾶς τῶν τελευτησάντων παρὰ τῷ ἱερεῖ (H.). From πρύλις comes *πρυλεύω 'to perform a π.', whence πρυλεύσεις [f.pl.] (H.).
•ETYM It is not entirely clear how πρυλέες (sg. -λής [Hdn.] or -λύς [Schwyzer: 572]) and πρύλις are related. According to Leumann 1950: 286f., Cret. πρύλις would have arisen through false interpretation of epic πρυλέες; Ruijgh 1957: 96f. opposes this.
In view of the formal variant προυλέσι, the word is probably of Pre-Greek origin. Unrelated to πρύτανις (Misteli KZ 17 (1868): 174; cf. Bechtel 1914 s.v. διαπρύσιος).

πρυμνός [adj.] 'utmost, hindmost, undermost', of the body part that is closest to the torso, vel sim.; also of the undermost part of a tree, a rock, etc. (epic poet. Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR With shift of accent πρύμνη, secondarily -νᾰ [f.] 'hindmost part of a ship, stern' (IA, Il.), in Hom. mostly attributive πρύμνη νηῦς.
•COMP As a first member in e.g. πρυμν-ώρεια [f.] 'lower part, foot of a mountain (Ξ 307), from *πρυμν-ώρης (Solmsen 1909: 249, Risch Mus. Helv. 2 (1945): 18). From πρύμνη e.g. πρυμν-οῦχος 'holding the stern' (E., AP), ὑψί-πρυμνος 'with high stern' (Str.).
•DER 1. πρυμν-όθεν 'from the lower end, from the bottom' (A.), also (Hell. poet.) = πρύμν-ηθεν, Dor. -ᾱθεν 'from the stern' (Il.); 2. -ήτης [m.] 'steersman', as an adj. 'standing on the stern' (A., E.) with -ητικός (Callix., pap.), -ήσιος (E.) 'id.', τὰ -ήσια [n. pl.] 'stern cables' (Hom., AP); probably analogically built to πρύμνη (Chantraine 1933: 42, Schwyzer: 466); 3. -αῖος 'id.' (A. R.); 4. -εύς [m.] PN (θ 112, Nonn.).
•ETYM Often connected with πρό, assuming υ for ο by Cowgill's Law (e.g. Forssman KZ 79 (1965): 11ff.), but this is semantically unconvincing, because πρυμνός indicates not the most foward, but the hindmost part. For the suffix -μν-, one compares Skt. ni-mná- [n.] 'depression, depth', adj. 'lying deep'.
The connection with OCS krъma 'back part of a ship' is wrong; cf. Vasmer 1953 s.v. kormá. Cf. also πρόμνος and ►προμνηστῖνοι, connected with πρυμνός by Forssman KZ 79 (1965): 11ff.; see ►πρόμος.
The most promising etymology consists of the connection with πρέμνον, the non-Indo-European interchange ε/υ pointing to a Pre-Greek origin (cf. Fur.: 65[270]).

πρύτανις, -εως [m.] title of a leading official, in Athens member of the governing committee of the council, 'foreman, chief of affairs, prytan' (Dor. IA); also name of a Lycian (E 678). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aeol. πρό-.
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. ναυ-πρύτανις = ναύαρχος (Pi.).
•DER 1. Adjecitves πρυταν-ικός (IA inscr.), -ειος (Aristid.) 'belonging to the π.'; 2. substantives -εῖον, Ion. -ήϊον [n.] 'residence of the π., city hall' (IA), in Athens also name of a court of law; τὰ πρυτανεῖα 'legal costs' (Att.); here Πρυταν-ῖτις (Herm. Hist.), -εία (Syros) [f.] epithet of Ἑστία as a protectress of the Prytaneion; 3. verb πρυταν-εύω 'to be π., lead something' (h. Ap. 68) with -εία, Ion. -ηΐη [f.] '(term of the) office of a π.' (IA, Rhodes, etc.), -ευμα = Lat. principatus (epigr. I[a]), -εύς [m.] = πρύτανις (Rhodos), back-formation acc. to Boßhardt 1942: 77.
•ETYM In view of the close resemblance to Etruscan purϑne, eprϑni 'title of an official', πρύτανις probably belongs to the Anatolian-Aegaean stratum of social designations (cf. βασιλεύς, ἄναξ, τύραννος, and Schwyzer: 62 and 462). The variation of Aeol. πρότανις (Att. inscr. incidentally have προταν-εύω, -εία) and Phoc. and Cret. βρυτανεύω, -εῖον is suggestive of borrowing from a Pre-Greek source; cf. Heubeck 1961: 67f.; Linderski Glotta 40 (1962): 157ff. also connects Hatt. puri 'lord'. The association with πρό 'in front' is secondary and folk-etymological; πρυ- is not an old by-form of προ, as has been claimed on the basis of διαπρύσιος, πρυμνός, πρυλέες.

πρώην [adv.] 'lately, the day before yesterday' (Il.). ◂IE *proH 'early, in the morning'▸ •VAR πρῴην (Il.), πρῶν (Call. fr., Herod.), Dor. πρώαν, πρόαν, πρᾶν (Theoc.); on the phonetics Schwyzer: 250.
•COMP As a first member in πρῳηρότης [m.] 'early plougher' (Hes.), like ὀψ-αρότης (see ►ὀψέ); often in Thphr., e.g. πρωΐ-καρπος 'with early fruit', compar. πρωϊκαρπότερος (see Strömberg 1937: 162f.).
•DER Also πρωΐ (Il.), Att. πρῴ (πρῷ, πρῶϊ) 'early, in the morning'. Compar. forms: πρωΐ- (πρῴ-)τερος, -τατος, usually -αίτερος, -αίτατος (IA), after παλαίτερος etc.
Other derivatives: πρώϊος, πρῷος 'at an early time' (O 470), πρωΐα [f.] 'early time, morning' (Aristeas, NT), after ὀψία; in Attic replaced by πρώ-ϊμος (X., Arist., pap. and inscr.), to ὄψιμος (Arbenz 1933: 76); also πρό-ϊμος after πρό; Hell. -ϊνός (Chantraine 1933: 200f.); πρωϊζά [adv.] 'the day before yesterday' (B 303), to πρώην after χθιζά, 'very early' (Theoc. 18, 9), to πρωΐ; πρωΐθεν 'from early in the morning' (LXX).

•ETYM Both πρώην and πρωΐ presuppose an adverb *πρώ, which is confirmed by OHG fruo 'early', Lat. prō 'for, before', Av. frā 'forward, in front', and less directly by Skt. prātár 'early, in the morning' beside Av. fra = ►πρό. It is perhaps an old instrumental *pro-h$_1$.
The form πρώην, -ᾱν may have been influenced by petrified accusatives, like δήν, δᾱ́ν, πλήν, πλᾱ́ν, ἀκμήν. Similarly, πρω-ΐ seems to have been modelled after locatives like ἦρι, πέρυσι, ἀντί. This πρωΐ served as the basis for the adjective πρώϊ-ος (= OHG fruoji 'early'), which, interpreted as πρώ-ϊος, gave rise to πρώ-ϊμος, -ινός (see above).

πρωκτός [m.] 'rump, anus' (Hippon., Ar.). ◁IE *pre/oh$_2$ḱt- 'buttock'▷ •DER πρωκτίζω 'paedico' (Ar.).
•ETYM Closely related to Arm. erastan-k' [pl.] 'buttock', an action noun in -an-, from IE *preh$_2$ḱt-. This means that Greek derives from *proh$_2$ḱt- (Beekes in Kortlandt 2003: 191). The earlier reconstruction as *p(e)rh$_3$ḱt- (see the discussion in Clackson 1994: 166f.) does not abide by the rules for IE root structure. Skt. pr̥ṣṭhá- 'back' and related forms are more easily derived from *pr-sth$_2$-o-, and are therefore unrelated.

πρών [m.] 'protruding rocks, mountain top' (Il.). ◁?▷
•VAR πρῶνος or πρωνός, plur. πρῶνες, also πρώονες (epic poet. since Il.), also πρηών (Hes. Sc. 437, Hell.), πρεών (AP), -ῶνος, -όνος.
•ETYM Starting from the later attestation πρηών (whence πρεών, πρών), the plur. πρώονες, -ας could be explained as a diectasis of πρῶνες; this would point to original *πρηϝών or *πρᾱϝών (Schwyzer: 377). On the other hand, if we assume a pre-form *πρώϝων, πρώονες becomes regular, but πρηών must then either be due to false analysis, or an old ablaut variant of πρών. A reconstruction *πρώϝων is strongly supported by ►πρῷρα 'prow, bow of a ship', which can hardly be dealt with separately. This goes back to *prh$_3$-ur-ih$_2$, beside *prh$_3$-uon- giving πρών; the adjective is probably derived from the forebear of Skt. pū́rva- 'frontmost, earlier'.
Fur.: 331 wonders whether προύνος· βουνούς is a variant, or a contamination of πρών and βουνός.

πρώξ, πρωκός [f.] 'dewdrop' (Theoc., Call.). ◁IE *prōḱ- 'drop, sprinkle'▷ •VAR Only plur. πρῶκες.
•ETYM Formation like κλώψ, ῥῶπες, τρώξ, etc. (see Chantraine 1933: 2, Schwyzer: 424); thus, originally an agent noun "dripper, sprinkler" from a lost verb for 'sprinkle', which left traces in several derived adjectives, e.g. ►περκνός. For a parallel of 'sprinkle' beside 'drop', cf. especially Skt. pŕ̥ṣan- 'spotted, speckled', pr̥ṣatá- [m.] 'spotted gazelle' (Ved.), 'drop of water' (epic class.).

πρῷρα [f.] 'forepart of a ship, prow, bow' (μ 230: gen. πρῴρης, attributive to νηός). ◁IE *prh$_3$-u(e)r-ih$_2$ 'forepart of a ship'▷ •VAR Ion. πρῴρη, secondary after πρύμνη.

•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. κυανό-πρῳρος 'dark-bowed' (Hom., B.), -πρῴρειος (γ 299, verse-final enlargement), -πρώϊρα [f.] (Simon. 241), explanation uncertain.
•DER πρῴρ-ᾱθε(ν), -ηθε(ν) 'from the bow, at the bow' (Pi., Th.); -εύς [m.] 'officer in command at the bow' (X., D., Arist.), also PN (θ 113); -άτης [m.] 'id.' (S., X.), to πρυμνήτης, κυβερνήτης (Fraenkel 1912: 206) with -ατικός 'concerning the prow' (pap., Poll.), -ατεύω [v.] 'to be in command at the bow' (Att., Hell.); -ήσια [n.pl.] 'uppermost points on starboard' (EM: πρυμνήσια); ptc. aor. πρῳράσαντες· κροτήσαντες. ἡ δὲ μεταφορὰ ἀπὸ τῶν νεῶν καὶ τῆς εἰρεσίας 'making rattle, striking; a metaphor from [the terminology of] ships and rowers' (H.), cf. Men. Sicyon. 421 Kassel.
•ETYM Apparently contracted from *πρώϝαρ-ι̯α or *πρώϝερ-ι̯α. The expected msc. *πρώϝων (cf. πίων : πίειρα) is attested as ►πρών. Discussion in Peters 1980a: 190f., who argues that a suffix -ειρα is expected on the basis of πίειρα, πέπειρα, and that it would yield the main attestation πρῷρα. Actually, *πρώϝερ-ι̯α would have to result in πρῶρα instead (which is also attested, but only as a weaker variant in the mss. and pap.). However, in this case, πρῷρα can hardly be explained, as there is no basis for a pre-form in *-αρι̯α. Therefore, Peters argues that -ῳ- was introduced, like in the presents in -ῄσκω, -ῴσκω.
It is improbable that κυανο-πρῴϊραν (Simon. 241) preserves an old uncontracted form *πρώειραν (Hdn. 2, 410); see Peters l.c.
Apart from the suffix -n-, related *πρώ-ϝων is formally comparable to Skt. pū́rva- 'foremost, earlier', ToB parwe 'first', OCS prъvъ 'first' < *prh$_3$-uo-.
Borrowed as Lat. prōra, prōreta (from Ion. *πρῳρήτης); see WH s.v.

πρῶτος [adj.] 'foremost, first' (Il.). ◁IE *prh$_3$-to- (?) 'first'▷ •VAR Dor., Boeot. πρᾶτος.
•COMP Very productive in compounding, e.g. πρωτό-γονος 'first-born' (epic poet. Il.).
•DER 1. Superlative πρώτ-ιστα [adv.] 'first of all', -ιστος (epic poet. Il.), Dor. (Thera) πράτιστος 'the very first' (Seiler 1950: 105). 2. πρωτ-εῖον [n.] 'first prize, first rank' (Att.); -ειος 'of the first rank'. 3. -εύω 'to be first' (Att.) with the back-formation πρωτεύς epithet to λαός (Tim. Pers. 248). Several short names, e.g. Πρωτ-εύς [m.] Seagod (Od., etc.), -τέας, -τίων, Πρατ-ίνας, -ύλος, etc. (Bechtel 1917b: 387). On Πρωτεσί-λαος, -λεως (Il., etc.), see Risch 1937: §71a.
•ETYM Related to Skt. pū́r-va-, Av. paur-uua- < *prh$_3$-uo-, and Lith. pìr-mas < *prh$_3$-mo-, but with a suffix -to- as in τρίτος, τέταρτος, etc. Dor. πρᾶτος is problematic, because it seems to continue *prh$_2$-to- with a different laryngeal; in spite of DELG, the two forms cannot be unified under *prH-. The postulated reconstruction *πρό-ατος, which similarly could explain πρῶτος, but not πρᾶτος, cannot have developed out of *prH- in a regular way. Cf. Beekes 1969: 214f.

πταίω [v.] 'to nudge, crash into, stumble, err, have bad luck' (IA); rarely trans. 'to knock over' (Pi. fr. 205, LXX). ◁PG?, IE? *pi(e)h$_2$-u-ie/o- 'strike'▷

•VAR Aor. πταῖσαι, fut. πταίσω, also perf. (later Att., Hell.) ἔπταικα, pass. (late) πταισθῆναι, ἔπταισμαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, especially προσ-.
•DER πταῖσμα (πρόσ-) [n.] 'push, fault, misfortune, defeat' (IA, Thgn.), πρόσπταισις [f.] 'push, stumble, collision' (D. H.).
•ETYM Rhyming formations like παίω, ῥαίω, and also -κναίω may have influenced πταίω (and vice versa); for the onset, cf. ►πτίσσω, ►πτήσσω. The word may well be Pre-Greek. Alternatively, Hackstein Glotta 70 (1992): 154-167 (see also on ►πτήσσω) reconstructs a present $pi(e)h_2$-u-ie/o- on the basis of πταίω, Lith. pjáuti 'to cut', and Lat. paviō 'to pound, strike'.

πτάκα [acc.sg.f.] 'hare' (A. Ag. 137 [lyr.]). ◄PG?, IE? $pieh_2$-k- 'duck away, shy'► •VAR The nom. is unattested.
•DER πτάκ-ις, -ιδος [f.] 'id.' (Com. Adesp. 1127), -ισμός [m.] 'shyness' (ibd. 1128: *πτακίζω), -άδις [adv.] 'shy' (Theognost.); πτακωρεῖν· πτήσσειν, δεδοικέναι 'be scared, fear' (H.), after ὀλιγωρεῖν, τιμωρεῖν etc.
•ETYM Considered to be a root noun of the aorist πτᾰκεῖν (see ►πτήσσω), from a paradigm nom. ►πτώξ < $pioh_2k$-s, analogical gen. πτακ-ός. It seems, however, that the whole complex of πτώξ, πτάκα, and πτωχός is Pre-Greek in view of the alternating root-final stops κ/ χ.

πτακάνα 'boat mat' used in boats called κάννα (Poll. 10, 166). ◄PG?►
•DIAL LSJ gives πτακάλα or πτανάκα.
•ETYM No etymology; possibly Pre-Greek.

πτάρνυμαι [v.] 'to sneeze' (Hp., X.). ◄ONOM►
•VAR Rare and late πτάρνεται, πταίρω, πτείρω, πτέρομαι; them. aor. πταρεῖν (since ρ 541), ptc. also πταρείς (Hp., Arist.), πτάραντες (Arist.; uncertain).
•DER πταρ-μός [m.] 'the sneezing' (IA) with -μικός 'causing to sneeze', -μική [f.] 'sneezewort' (Dsc., Gal.), see Strömberg 1940: 85; πτόρος 'id.' (Hdn. Gr. 1, 191).
•ETYM Onomatopoeic word, probably related to Lat. sternuō 'id.', OIr. sreod 'sneezing'; however, the reconstruction of a root pster-* remains hypothetical. Arm. p'rngam, p'rnč'em 'to sneeze' is probably onomatopoeic; see Clackson 1994: 99. An aspirate is found in the gloss ἀποφθαράξασθαι· τὸ τοῖς μυκτῆρσιν εἰς τὸ ἔξω ἦχον προέσθαι, ἀποφλάσαι, ῥογχάσαι. Κρῆτες καὶ Σάμιοι (H.), with the same meaning as Lat. stertō 'to snore'.
Strunk MSS 46 (1986): 221-242 assumes an ablauting n-present with the full grade shifting between the root (Lat. sternuō) and the ending (hence πτάρνυμαι with a zero-grade root).

πτέλας [m.] 'wild boar' (Lyc. 833, verse-final). ◄PG?►
•VAR Also πτελέα· σῦς ὑπὸ Λακώνων 'boar (Lac.)' (H.).
•ETYM The ending is the same as in ἐλέφας. A possible cognate would be ►πτελέη 'elm', but this leaves much unexplained. The connection with Lith. kiaũlė 'swine', kuilỹs 'breeding-swine', and with Skt. kirí- [m.] 'boar', suggested by Merlingen 1956: 58, should also be rejected. Holthausen's connection with πελιτνός, πελιός, etc. (Holthausen IF 62 (1956): 152) is arbitrary. The word may well be Pre-Greek (note initial πτ-).

πτελέα [f.] 'elm tree' (Il.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Ion. -έη, Epid. πελέα.
•DIAL Myc. pte-re-wa.
•DER πτελέ-ινος 'of an elm' (Att. and Del. inscr., Thphr.), -ών, -ῶνος [m.] 'elm grove' (gloss.). Πτελεός [m.] town in Thessaly, etc. (B 697 et al.).
•ETYM The suffix -έα is frequent in tree-names (cf. μηλέα, ἰτέα). The word πτέλας 'boar' is formally close, but the semantics are far off (Strömberg 1940: 140 adduces MoHG Eberesche to prove that boars may live in elm-woods). Lat. pōpulus 'poplar' cannot be related, since it deviates strongly in form and meaning; phonetically closer is Lat. tilia 'lime-tree'. For the variation πτ-: π-, cf. πόλεμος and πόλις. Arm. t'eɫi 'elm' may have been borrowed from πτελέα (Solta Sprache 3 (1956): 227[11] argued for old etymological relationship), or both may have been borrowed from a common source, like Lat. tilia (which was borrowed into Greek in τιλίαι· αἴγειροι 'black poplars' [H.]); see Clackson 1994: 169. Fur.: 226 assumes that it is a variant of μελίη 'ash'; he concludes that the word is Pre-Greek.

πτέρις, -εως [f.] 'fern, bracken' (Hell.). ◄GR► •VAR Also -ίς, -ίδος.
•COMP As a second member in δρυ(ο)-πτερίς [f.] 'oak fern' (Dsc., H.), θηλυ-πτερίς [f.] 'female fern' (Thphr., Dsc.). With the same meaning πτέριον (also with θηλυ-) [n.] (Ps.-Dsc., Alex. Trall.); see Strömberg 1940: 40f.
•ETYM The original meaning must have been "feather plant", as it is related to ►πτερόν; it was named after the form of the leaves (cf. MoHG Federkraut 'water milfoil'). Likewise, MoHG Farn (OHG far(a)n, etc.) 'fern' can be equated with Skt. parṇá-, Av. parəna- [n.] 'wing, feather, leaf'. Alb. fier 'fern' may be related as well, possibly as a loanword, acc. to Mann Lang. 28 (1952): 40.

πτέρνη [f.] 'heel', also metaphorically of the lower part of several objects, etc. (epic Ion. poet., Arist., Hell.). ◄IE *$tpersneh_2$ 'heel'► •VAR Secondarily -νᾰ (LXX).
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. πτερνο-κοπίς [f.] 'heel-pusher', nickname (middle and new com.; see Wackernagel 1916: 196); *ὑπό-πτερνος 'under the heel' in ὑποπτερν-ίς, -ίδος [f.] 'base, underlay' (Ph., Hero Bel.).
•DER πτερν-ίς, -ίδος [f.] 'foot of a bowl' (middle com.), -ίζω [v.] 'to hit with the heel, trip one up, supplant someone out of his position, provide a shoe with a new heel' (LXX, Com. Adesp.), to which -ιστής [m.] (Ph.), -ισμός [m.] (LXX). Isolated and semantically unclear is πτέρνιξ, -ῖκος [m.] 'main stalk of a cactus' (Arist.); next to it we find ►τέρνακα· τῆς κάκτου τοῦ φυτοῦ καυλόν 'stalk of the cactus' (H.), s.v.
•ETYM Old designation of the heel: Lat. perna 'calf of the leg', Gm. (e.g. Go. fairzna 'heel'), possibly Hitt. paršina- 'buttock (?)' (= paršna-; with paršnāi- 'to squat down'), from IE *$tpersneh_2$. Beside these, we find Indo-Iranian forms with secondary vowel length: Skt. pā́rṣṇi- [f.], Av. pāšnā- [n.] 'heel'. The initial πτ- must reflect an original cluster, probably tp-, i.e. tpersn- (see Lubotsky 2006). On late πτέρνα 'ham', see ►πτέρνα.

πτερόν [n.] 'feather, wing, pinion', also metaphorically of feather- and wing-like objects (Il.). ◄IE pet-* 'fly'►

•COMP πτερο-φόρος 'feathered, winged' (A., E.), ὑπό-πτερος '(swift-)winged' (Pi., IA); on ►ὑποπετρίδιος s.v.

•DER 1. πτερό-εις 'provided with feathers or wings' (epic poet. Il.); antonym ἄ-πτερος (Od.), of μῦθος (as an opposite of ἔπεα πτερόεντα); 2. πτερω-τός 'id.' (IA), -τικός 'belonging to plumage' (V^P); 3. -μα [n.] 'plumage' (A. fr., Pl. Phdr., etc.), rather enlarged from πτερόν than from πτερόομαι; 4. πτερό-της [f.] 'winged condition' (Arist.); 5. πτέρ-ων [m., n.] of an unknown bird (Com. Adesp.), -νις [m., n.] of a kind of hawk (Arist.); 6. πτερ-όομαι (also with ἐκ-συν-) [v.] 'to get wings, become fledged', -όω 'to feather, wing' (IA), whence -ωσις [f.] 'feathering, plumage' (Ar., Arist.). Next to it πτέρυξ, -ῠγος [f.] 'wing' (Il.), often metaphorically like πτερόν. Often as a second member, e.g. τανύ-πτερυξ (Il.), also -πτέρυγ-ος (Simon.) 'spreading the wings'. From πτέρυξ are derived: 1. diminutive πτερύγ-ιον [n.], designation of several wing-like objects (Hp., Arist.); 2. -ώδης 'wing-like' (Hp., Thphr.); 3. -ωτός 'provided with wings' (Arist.); 4. -ωμα [n.] 'poultry, etc.' (late); 5. πτερυγ-ίζω (also with ἀνα-, etc.) [v.] 'to move the wings' (Ar.); also -όομαι, -όω meaning unclear (Lesb. lyr., medic.), with ἀπο- 'to lose the wings' (Vett. Val.); πτερ-ύσσω (also with δια-, etc.) [v.] 'to flap with the wings' (Archil.[?], Hell.), perhaps from πτερόν.

•ETYM The word for 'feather' or 'wing' is derived from the verb for 'fly', represented in Greek by ►πέτομαι, πτέσθαι. A good formal correspondence to πτερ-όν < pt-er-* is not found in the other languages: Skt. pátr-a- [n.] 'wing, feather', Lat. acci-piter, -tris 'hawk', OHG fedara, ON fjǫðr [f.] 'feather', etc. all go back to IE petr-* (which in Greek is represented in ὑποπετριδίων ὀνείρων 'winged dreams', Alcm. 23, 49). Some connect Arm. tʿer 'side' as if from pter-* (comparing tʿir 'flight' < ptēr-* and tʿr̄-čim [v.] 'to fly', aor. tʿr̄-eay), but this is semantically dubious. A heteroclitic stem is found in Hitt. pattar (also pittar) [n.], gen.pl. -an-aš. An n-stem is seen in Lat. penna [f.] 'feather, wing' < pet-n-h$_2$* et al.

As for πτέρυξ, no convincing parallel for the suffix -υγ- can be found in Greek (ὄρτυξ and other bird names are too far off); connection with various words in other IE languages has been suggested (see Frisk), but these are all unconvincing. The old connection between πτερόν and Ru. peró [n.] 'feather', etc. cannot be substantiated; the Slavic words have cognates in Skt. parṇá- [n.] 'wing, feather, leaf', etc., Lith. sparñas [m] 'wing, paddle(?), leaf', ToB paruwa [pl.] 'feathers', and others, from a root (s)per-*.

πτῆμα •VAR πτηνός, πτῆσις. ⇒πέτομαι.

πτήσσω [v.] 'to duck (for fright)' (IA); sigm. aor. rarely trans. 'to frighten, drive away' (Ξ 40, Thgn.). ◄PG?, IE? pieh$_2$-k-* 'duck (away), shy'►

•VAR Also πτώσσω (Il., epic poet.), Aeol. (Alc.?) πτάζω, fut. πτήξω (Att.), aor. πτῆξαι (Il.), Dor. πτᾶξαι (Pi.), also them. aor. ptc. κατα-πτᾰκών (A. Eu. 252), perf. ἔπτηχα (Att.), ἔπτηκα (LXX with v.l. -χα, late); also epic forms ptc. perf. πεπτηώς (B 312, ξ 354, etc.), 3du.aor. κατα-πτήτην (Θ 136).

•COMP Also with prefix, especially κατα- and ὑπο-.

•DER πτῆξις [f.] 'fright' (LXX), enlargement πτωσκάζω 'to duck, have fear' (Δ 372) after similar ἀλυσκάζω (to ἀλύσκω, ἀλύσσω), ἠλασκάζω; perhaps from *πτώσκω; the v.l. πτωκάζω must be after πτώξ. Cf. Schwyzer: 708, Chantraine RPh. 57 (1931): 125, Chantraine 1942: 338.

•ETYM The epic forms πεπτηώς, καταπτήτην show that there was a root variant without velar. A further cognate is ►πτοέω. The comparison with Arm. tʿakʿ-čim, aor. tʿakʿ-eay 'to hide oneself' (Pedersen KZ 39 (1906): 342f.) is discussed by Clackson 1994: 169f. Photius gives πτεκάς· πτάξ.

The root is extensively discussed by Hackstein Glotta 70 (1992): 136-165. According to him, ToB pyāk-tsi 'to strike down' is related, which requires a reconstruction of the root as pieh$_2$(k)-* (he thus rejects a root pteh$_2$-k-). Greek has both ptā- and ptāk-* in πεπτηώς and πτῆξαι, respectively (from the latter, πτήσσω was derived; another present is πτώσσω). Also cognate are πτοᾶν < pi̯oh$_2$-ei̯e/o-* and πταίω 'to hit' < pi̯eh$_2$-u-* and, from other IE languages, Lith. piáuti 'to cut, mow, harvest, torment' and perhaps Lat. paviō from pi̯eh$_2$-u-* (with loss of i̯* after initial p- or by dissimilation against the second -i̯-).

There are two problems with this reconstruction: first, the semantic connection between Tocharian 'to strike down' and Greek 'to frighten' is not evident, and second, it neglects the evidence of πτωχός 'beggar', which is clearly related and shows a substrate alternation.

πτίλον [n.] 'fluff, down, insect wing', metaphorically 'leaf, etc.' (IA). ◄PG(V)►

•COMP Some compounds, e.g. πτιλό-νωτος 'with a fluffy back' (AP), τετρά-πτιλος 'with four fluffy feathers' (Ar.).

•DER 1. πτιλ-ωτός 'provided with πτίλα' (Arist., Att. inscr.); 2. -όομαι, -όω [v.] 'to be equipped with πτ.; to equip with πτ.' (late), whence -ωσις [f.] 'emergence of fluff' (Ael.), also of a disease of the eyelid and eyelashes (Gal.); πτίλος 'disease of the eyelids' (LXX, Gal.) is a back-formation on these words, whereas πτίλλος = lippus (gloss.) has expressive gemination; 3. -ώσσω [v.] 'to have a disease of the eyelids (lashes)' (Archyt.).

•ETYM The word πτίλον was connected with πτέσθαι by Frisk, with a "hypocoristic" suffix -ιλο- (Chantraine 1933: 248f.). On Dor. ψίλον (Paus. 3, 19, 6), see Bechtel 1921, 2: 319f. Fur.: 263 takes the alternation πτίλον / ψίλον as evidence for a Pre-Greek word, and he further compares Lat. pilus. In support of this, one may note that an IE pre-form pth$_2$-ilo-* does not look convincing.

πτίσσω [v.] 'to shell, grind grains by stamping' (IA). ◄IE (t)pis-* 'stamp, smash'►

•VAR Att. also πτίττω; aor. πτίσαι, pass. πτισθῆναι, perf. mid. ἔπτισμαι.

•COMP Rarely with prefix, like περι- and κατα-.

•DER πτισ-άνη [f.] (-ανον [n.] Nic.) 'peeled barley, barley groats' (Hp., com., pap.); -μός [m.] 'winnowing' (com.), -μα [n.] 'peeled barley' (Str.; περιπ[τ]ίσματα [pl.] sch.; Jacobsohn KZ 42 (1909): 276), -ις [f.] 'skin' (Gal.), -τικός 'fit for shelling' (com.).

•ETYM The word πτίσσω is an old agricultural term, retained in several languages, though exact matches of the Greek forms in πτ- are not found. Note the correspondences ἄ-πτισ-τος 'unstamped' (Hp.) with Skt. piṣ-ṭá-, Lat. pis-tus 'smashed'. All other nominal and verbal forms are based on πτισ- as well, except for the present πτίσσω, which was formed analogically after πλάσσω, πάσσω, etc. Nasal presents are found in Skt. pi-ná-ṣṭi 'to crush' (perf. pipéṣa, pipiṣe), Lat. pī-n-sō 'to pound' (with secondary perf. pīns(u)ī, next to pis-tor 'pounder, miller', etc.); Balt. and Slav. have secondary formations, e.g. Lith. paisaũ, -ýti 'chop off ears of corn' (beside primary pisù, -ti 'to copulate'), Ru. pixát' 'to thrust, stamp' (next to primary pšeno 'millet' from pьšenъ* [ptc.] 'stamped'). On Greek πτ- against p- elsewhere, cf. on ► πτέρνη.

πτοέω [v.] 'to frighten, scare', pass. 'to become shy, scared, passionately excited' (Thgn.). ◂?▸ •VAR epic πτοιέω (πτοιῶμαι Thgn. 1018), fut. πτοιήσω (AP), aor. πτο(ι)ῆσαι (σ 340); ἐπτόαισ' (Sapph. 22, 14), ἐπτόασεν (31, 6 codd., cf. Hamm 1957: §49b3), mostly pass. πτο(ι)ηθῆναι (χ 298); ἐπτοάθης (E. IA 586 [lyr.]), perf. ἐπτο(ί)ημαι (Hes. Op. 447).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. δια-, ἐκ-.
•DER 1. πτο(ί)η-σις [f.] 'excitement, passion' (Pl., Ph., NT); 2. πτοία (epic -η, rarely πτόη, -α) [f.] 'fright, passion' (Hell.), πτοι-ώδης (Hp.), -αλέος (Opp.) 'scared, frightened'.
•ETYM The verb πτοέω is a secondary formation, probably an iterative-intensive of the primary verb retained in καταπτήτην, πεπτηώς (see on πτήσσω). It goes back to older *πτω-έω (cf. πτώξ); πτοιέω and other forms are derived from it by metrical lengthening (cf. e.g. ὀλοιός and πνοιή).
Next to πτοέω, we find the rare πτοάω (see above), like for example πονάω next to πονέω (see πένομαι). The old combination with Lat. paveō 'to tremble' (Froehde KZ 22 (1874): 259ff.) is accepted by Merlingen 1956: 56, starting from IE tpou-*. However, see Hackstein Glotta 70 (1992): 154-167, who reconstructs ptoh$_2$-eie/o-*; see also on ► πτήσσω.

πτολίεθρον
•ETYM See ► πόλις, and further Ruijgh 1957: 77f.

πτόρθος [m.] 'sprout, shoot, young twig, branch' (ζ 128). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Also πόρθος· πτόρθος (H.).
•COMP Rare and late as a second element, e.g. φιλό-πτορθος 'loving offshoots' (Nonn.). The assumption that πτόρθος would have an older abstract meaning 'sprouting' in Hes. Op. 421 (e.g. Porzig 1942: 50) is unnecessary.
•DER πτορθ-εῖον [n.] 'id.' (Nic.), -ιος [m.] epithet of Poseidon (as promotor of vegetation, = φυτάλμιος, Chalkis V[a]).
•ETYM There is a variant πόρθος, and Arm. ortʿ 'vine' may somehow be related, as well. Fur.: 317 attributes these matches rather to independent borrowing from a common origin.

πτύον [n.] 'winnowing shovel' (N 588, A., S. in Fr., Theoc.). ◂PG?(V)▸

•VAR Att. πτέον, acc. to Ael. Dion. et al.
•DER Diminutive πτυάριον [n.] (Hdn., EM) and δίπτυον· Κύπριοι μέτρον, οἱ δὲ τὸ ἡμιμέδιμνον 'measure (Cypr.), half a μέδιμνος' (H.).
•ETYM Traditionally (e.g. Curtius 1858: 498) compared with Skt. pávate, punā́ti 'to purify', e.g. of corn, and also with OHG fowen < PGm. fawjan-* 'to sieve, purify corn' (Pok. 827), which supposes a secondary πτ-. If an old full grade is accepted for πτέον (only mentioned by grammarians, who label it Attic), πτύον could be secondary after πτύω. However, the variation υ/ε seems rather to point to Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 314).

πτύρομαι [v.] 'to get scared, become shy' (Hp., D. S., Ep. Phil., Plu.); ἀπο-πτύρω 'to scare' (gloss.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. πτυρῆναι (late).
•COMP Also with κατα-.
•DER πτυρτικός 'fearful, scared' (Arist., Str.), πτυρμός as an explanation of πτοία (H., Phot.).
•ETYM Unexplained. The initial agrees with πτήσσω, πτοηθῆναι, which is also close in meaning (this connection is mentioned in Persson 1912(1): 429[1] and Merlingen 1956: 56), while the ending recalls the semantic group ὀδύρομαι, μύρομαι, etc. However, πτύρομαι can hardly be a contamination of the two, contrary to what Frisk proposed.

πτύσσω, -ομαι [v.] 'to plead, fold (up)', med. 'to fold around oneself' (Il.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Fut. πτύξω, -ομαι, aor. πτύξαι, -ασθαι, pass. πτυχθῆναι, πτυγῆναι, perf. πέπτυγμαι, ἔπτυγμαι.
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, περι-, προσ-.
•DER 1. πτυκτός 'folded' (Z 169 etc.), πυκτή [f.] (Cod. Inst.), πυκτ-ίς [f.] (AP, Gal.), -ίον [n.] (sch., Suid.) 'tablet' (dissimilated from πτ-, see Schwyzer: 260); 2. πτύγμα (πρόσ-, περί-, etc.) [n.] 'fold, loop of a garment, compress' (E 315, E., Arist., medic.), with (προσ-)πτυγμάτ-ιον [n.] 'compress' (medic.); 3. πτύξις (also ἀνά-, διά-, etc.) [f.] 'folding, fold' (Hp., Arist.).
Further πτύχ-ες [pl.], acc. -ας, dat.sg. -ί (Hom.), acc. -α (E. [lyr.]) [f.]; with enlargement πτυχ-ή, mostly plur. -αί [f.] (post-Hom. poet.) 'fold, ply, layer', metaph. 'gorge, valley'; it also functions as verbal noun to πτύσσω, especially to the prefixed compounds (e.g. ἀναπτυχή to ἀνα-πτύσσω); as a second member in δί-, τρί-, πολύ-πτυχος (Il.), see Sommer 1948: 65f.), with transfer to the s-stems in περι-πτυχής 'folding around' (S.), δι-πτυχής (Arist.), etc.
From πτυχή are derived: 1. πτυχ-ίς, -ίδος (ὑπο-) [f.] 'layer, joint' (Plu.); 2. -ιον [n.] 'folded table, etc.' (Hdn. Gr., pap.), -ιος = πτυκτός (EM); 3. -ώδης 'fold-like, ply-like' (Arist.); 4. Πτυχ-ία [f.] name of an island near Corcyra (Th.).
•ETYM Beside πτύσσω, there are also relatively rare forms with -ττ- (δια-πτύττω Pl. Lg. 858e, προσ-ανα- Arist.). Therefore, the -σσ- is perhaps rather a Ionism than a strategy to avoid the co-occurrence of τ and ττ in πτύττω (Schwyzer: 319[1]; cf. 755[2]). As an old yod-present, πτύσσω goes back to *πτύχ-ι̯ω. It can be considered a denominative from πτύχ-ες.

The etymology is unclear: the connection with Skt. pyúkṣṇa- (only in the compound pyúkṣṇa-veṣṭita-), which stems from Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 1: 277, is highly questionable (see Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 173). Fur.: 318 considers the word Pre-Greek, which may well be correct, although his connection with πυκνός, etc. is not convincing.

πτῦω [v.] 'to spew, spit' (Hom.). ◂IE tspi(e)uH-* 'spew, spit'▸ •VAR Aor. πτύ-σαι (Hom.), pass. πτυ-σθῆναι, -ῆναι (Hp.), fut. πτύσ-ω, -ομαι (IA), perf. ἔπτυκα (late).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐκ-, ἐν-.
•DER 1. ἀπό-, κατά-πτυστος 'worth spitting upon, abominable' (Anacr., trag., also Att. prose); 2. πτύσις (also ἔκ-, ἔμ-, ἀνά-) [f.] 'spewing' (Hp., Arist.); 3. πτυσμός [m.] 'id.' (Hp.); 4. πτύσμα (ἔμ-, ἀπό-, κατά-) [n.] 'spittle' (Hp., Plb., LXX); 5. ἀπο-πτυστήρ [m.] 'spitter' (Opp.); 6. πτυάς, -άδος [f.] designation of a venomous snake (Gal. et al.); 7. πτύ-αλον, -ελον [n.] (-ος [m.]) 'spittle' (Hp., Arist.); from there -αλώδης 'spittle-like', -αλίζω, -ελίζω 'to secrete spittle' with -αλισμός (-ελ-) [m.] (Hp.).
•ETYM Beside the present πτῡ́-ω with long vowel (Schwyzer: 686, Chantraine 1942: 373), we find the aorist πτῠ́σαι with short vowel, just as in ἐρῠ́σαι, ἀρῠ́σαι etc. This stem is further found in πτῠ́σις and, with analogical σ, in πτύσ-μα, -μός, etc.
Since the onset has several variants in Indo-European cognates, it was often concluded that no preform can be reconstructed, which was attributed to the onomatopoeic origin of the word (e.g. E-M s.v. spuō). The sequence sp- is found in Lat. spuō, Germanic (e.g. Go. speiwan), Lith. spiáuti, 1sg. spiáuju (from spieuH-?*), and perhaps in Skt. (niḥ-)ṣṭhīvati, if ṭ v is dissimilated from p̣ v. No s- is shown by CS pl̥vati, 1sg. pljujǫ, Arm. t'uk' 'spittle' with t'k'-anem 'to spew, spit'; a different order of sounds is attested in Alb. pshtyn (Mann Lang. 26 (1950): 387).
Greek πτ- could agree with Arm. t'; if for older πι̯-, OCS pljujǫ and Lith. spiáuti can be compared. Others prefer to derive the deviating forms from one preform. It seems that a heavy cluster such as tsp-* accounts best for the forms attested.
Even within Greek, several variants are attested: ἀπο-, ἐκ-πῡ-τίζω (Hp., com., Arist.; the simplex πυτίζω is found only in EM), probably extended expressively, and subsequently dissimilated (borrowed into Lat. as pytissāre; cf. Leumann 1959: 159[1]); Dor. ἐπι-φθύσδω = ἐπιπτύω (Theoc.); ψύττει· πτύει and σίαι· πτύσαι, Πάφιοι (H.), with ►σίαλον.

πτῶμα •VAR πτῶσις. ⇒πίπτω.

πτώξ, -κός [m.] 'hare' (P 676, Thphr., Theoc.), attributive to λαγωός (X 310, Babr.), of Orestes seeking refuge (A. Eu. 326), of a coward (Lyc. 944). ◂PG?, IE? pteh*$_2$-k- 'duck away, shy'▸ •COMP As a second member in πολυ-πτώξ 'with many hares', ἀ-πτώξ 'without hares' (Call., Hdn. Gr.).
•DER πτωκάς, -άδος [f.] epithet of αἴθυιαι (Hom. Epigr.), of κύπειρος (Simm.), as a substantive referring to birds (S. Ph. 1093).
•ETYM The original meaning must have been "who ducks away, the shy one", an agent noun beside πτώσσω, πτήσσω; this meaning still filters through in πτωκάς and is also possible for πτώξ in certain attestations (e.g. X 310). A broader use of πτώξ is also suggested by the various explanations in H.: πτῶκες· δειλοί, λαγωοί, δορκάδες, ἔλαφοι, νεβροί. The alternation κ/χ evidenced by ►πτωχός 'beggar' points to substrate origin; cf. also on ►πτάκα and ►πτήσσω (where an alternative is mentioned).

πτώσσω ⇒πτήσσω.

πτωχός [m., f.] 'beggar', also [adj.] 'begging, poor' (Od.). ◂PG?(V), IE? pteh*$_2$-(k-) 'duck away, shy'▸ •COMP Some compounds, e.g. πτωχο-ποιός 'drawing beggarly characters' (Ar.), 'making beggars' (Plu.), ὑπέρ-πτωχος 'very poor' (Arist.), see Sommer 1948: 170[3].
•DER πτωχ-ικός 'beggarly' (Att.), -εῖον [n.] 'almshouse' (Cod. Iust.), -εύω [v.] 'to beg' (Od.) with -εία, Ion. -ηΐη [f.] 'beggary' (IA), -ίζω 'to make a beggar' (LXX).
•ETYM πτωχός is a formation in a velar like ►πτώξ, ►πτώσσω (see s.v. and on ►πτοέω). It seems that its aspiration cannot be explained in an IE framework (there is no direct connection with the much later perfect ἔπτηχα). Since it is highly probable that πτώξ, πτωκός 'hare' is related, we are dealing with a typical Pre-Greek alternation κ/χ.

πύανος ⇒κύαμος.

πύαρ ⇒πυός.

πῡγή [f.] 'behind, rump' (Archil.). ◂PG?▸ •COMP Several compounds, e.g. πυγο-στόλος 'decorating the rump' (Hes.), see Martinazzoli Par. del pass. 15 (1960): 209ff., κατά-πυγος (H., Phot.) with -πυγότερος, -πυγότατος (Sophr., Epigr. Gr.), and -πύγων, -ωνος [m.] 'voluptuous, lewd' (Arist.); [f.] κατα-πύγαινα (Att. amphora), see Fraenkel Glotta 34 (1955): 42ff. with literature); on the insect name πυγο-λαμπίς (Arist.), see Strömberg 1944: 13f.
•DER 1. Diminutives πυγ-ίον [n.] (Tab. Defix.), -ίδιον [n.] (Ar.); 2. substantive πυγ-αῖον [n.] 'buttocks' (Hp., Arist.), -εών, -ῶνος [m.] 'buttocks, arse' (Hippon. 92), after κενεών, cf. Masson ad loc.; 3. adverb -ηδόν 'with the tail foremost, rump to rump' (Arist.), -ιστί '?' (Hippon. 92), cf. Masson ad loc.; 4. -ίζω [v.] 'to inculate, sodomize' (Ar.) with -ισμα (Theoc.). Hypostasis ἐμ-πύγ-ια [n.pl.] 'buttocks, region of the buttocks' (pap. I[a]).
•ETYM A slang word, completely avoided in epic poetry and higher literature (Wackernagel 1916: 225f.). It has no convincing etymology. Connection with Skt. pūga- 'multitude, mass', etc. is phonetically fine, but the semantics are not compelling (see Mayrhofer EWAia s.v. and below on πύννος). Holthausen IF 20 (1906-1907): 329 connects πύξ, ►πυγμή, like MoHG Steiß 'rump' beside stoßen 'to bump', which in turn is formally difficult because of the long vowel of πῡγή. Differently, Bezzenberger BB 27 (1902): 176f. (to ►πύματος, etc.; s.v.). Connections with Germanic by Holthausen KZ 74 (1956): 244 are to be rejected. The word πυγή could well be Pre-Greek, due to the variation ῡ / ῠ, but it is not mentioned by Fur.

πυγμή [f.] 'fist, fist-fight' (Il.); as measure of length, 'the distance from the elbow to the knuckles', equivalent to 18 δάκτυλοι (Thphr., Poll.). ◂IE? puk-, pug- 'sting'▸ •DER πυγμαῖος 'as large as a π., dwarf-like' (Hdt., Arist.), nom.pl. "the fistlings", name of legendary people of dwarves (Γ 6, Hecat., etc.); πυγμ-ικός 'belonging to a fist-fight' (An. Ox.); name Πυγμᾶς [m.] (Chantraine 1956a: 18). On Πυγμαλίων, probably a popular adaptation of a foreign word, see Ruijgh 1957: 136.
πυγών, -όνος [m.] measure of length, 'the distance from the elbow to the first finger-joint', equivalent to 20 δάκτυλοι (Hdt., X.); from this πυγούσιος 'one π. long' (κ 517 = λ 25, Arat.), probably analogical (Risch 1937: 125), since *πυγοντ- (cf. Schwyzer: 526) is not probable; regular πυγον-ιαῖος 'id.' (Hp., Thphr.); πύκτης [m.] 'fist-fighter' (Xenoph., Pi., Att.) with πυκτ-ικός 'belonging to fist-fight(ers), brave in fist-fighting' (Att.), -οσύνη [f.] 'skillfulness in fist-fighting' (Xenoph.), see Wyss 1954: 31; -εύω [v.] 'to be a fist-fighter, have a fist-fight' (Att., Boeot.) with -ευσις, -ευτής (gloss.), -εῖον (Suid.); also with analogical λ-extension -αλεύω [v.] (Sophr.), -αλίζω (Anacr.) 'id.'.
πύξ [adv.] 'with the fist, in a fist-fight' (especially epic poetry, Il.); derived from it πυγ-μάχος [m.] 'fist-fighter', -μαχέω, -μαχία, -ίη (Hom., epic poet.), a univerbation from πὺξ μάχεσθαι; cf. Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 180.
•ETYM The above words are all built on a root πυγ-, which was probably both verbal and nominal. As parallels for πυγ-μή, primary formations like ▸παλάμη, στιγμή, and δραχμή could be adduced. The form πυγ-ών recalls ἀγκών and λαγών, the first perhaps being verbal, the last probably nominal (see on ▸λαγαίω). The form πύκ-της, too, can be either primary or secondary, whereas for πύξ a nominal origin seems most probable (see Schwyzer: 620); cf. still πύξ· πυγμή (H.).
A corresponding l-derivative is seen in Lat. pug-il [m.] 'fist-fighter', an n-formation in pug-nus [m.] 'fist' (pugnāre, pugna are secondary derivations). Thus we arrive at an isogloss pug- 'fist' between Latin and Greek. This etymon has been further connected with Lat. pungō, pupugī 'to sting' (see WH s.v. pugil), for which we would have to assume a specialisation 'to sting' > 'to sting with clenched fist and knuckles stretched out forward', i.e. 'to box'. The word pug- 'fist' could be a suffixless agent noun, originally * "the stinger, the boxer". The meaning 'to sting' can still be seen in Lat. pūgiō 'dagger'. The same meaning is found in ▸πεύκη, but this word is probably not related, since it has a voiceless stop κ.

πυδαρίζω [v.] 'to fling with the foot, hoof' (App. Prov.), acc. to EM = λακτίζειν, acc. to H. = τὸ μὴ ἀνέχεσθαί τινος, ἀλλ' ἀποπηδᾶν, χαλεπαίνειν 'to leap off, be angry'; with ἀπο- (Ar. Eq. 697), δια- (Com. Adesp.), both with ῡ (metrically conditioned?). ◂?▸ •VAR -αλίζω (Suid.).
•DER πυδαρισμός = δυσχέρεια (Zon.).
•ETYM A popular expressive formation in -αρίζω (-αλίζω), further isolated. Grošelj Živa Ant. 3 (1953): 205 compared Lat. pudet (if from 'strikes down, is struck down'), Gr. ▸σπεύδω, and Lith. spáudžiu, spáusti 'to press'. Cf. WH under tripudium, with further literature.

πύελος [f.] 'water-trough' (with soaked corn? See τ 553, where grain is washed), 'bath-tub' (Hp., com., pap.), 'coffin' (Hell.), cf. Schulze 1892: 515 and Schulze 1933a: 380[1]. ◂PG?▸
•VAR Hell. and late πύαλος.
•DER πυέλ-ιον [n.] 'coffin' (Crete, Diogenian.), -ίς (-αλίς), -ίδος [f.] 'id.'; also 'setting of a jewel, eye-socket, etc.' (Att., Hell.); -ώδης 'trough-like, hollow' (Arist.).
•ETYM Sometimes thought to be related to ▸πλύνω through dissimilation from *πλυ-ελος (cf. Kretschmer Glotta 6 (1915): 308; Renehan Class. Rev. N.S. 18 (1968): 133). However, although the suffixal variation -ελος/ -αλος could perhaps be explained, the etymology with πλύνω is almost certainly wrong: it is very likely that πύελος is a Pre-Greek word.

πυετία ⇒πυός.

πυθμήν, -ένος [m.] 'bottom of a vessel, the sea, etc.', 'ground, base, underlay, foot (e.g. of a cup), plant, i.e. root-end, stick, stem' (epic since Il., also Hell. and late prose), 'the lowest number (base) of an arithmetic series' (Pl., etc.). ◂IE b^hud^h-m(e)n- 'bottom'▸ •COMP Infrequently as a second member, e.g. ἀ-πύθμεν-ος 'bottomless, footless' (Thphr.), see Sommer 1948: 99; also (gramm.) ἀ-πύθμην 'id.' (Theognost.), etc. without the thematic vowel.
•DER Diminutive πυθμέν-ιον [n.] (pap.), -ικός 'belonging to the base', -έω [v.] 'to form a base' (late).
•ETYM The formation of πυθμήν is identical to λιμήν and ποιμήν (it is not productive in Greek, see Chantraine 1933: 174). The form πυθ-μήν agrees with Skt. budh-ná- [m.] 'bottom, ground, foot, root', from IE b^hud^h-. The suffixes match, if one derives budh-na- from b^hud^h-mn-o- (where the m was lost at an early stage). In Germanic, b^hud^h- became PGm. bud- (seen in OE bodan, MLG bōdem(e), etc.); then, after mn > n, bud-n- became butt- > bot(t)- according to Kluge's Law (seen in OE botem > MoE bottom), ON botn; we also find evidence for PGm. buþ- (OHG bodam, OS bothme, ME bothme). The developments in Germanic, including the forms with þ, have now been explained in detail by Kroonen ABäG 61 (2006): 17-25. Metathesis occurred in Lat. fundus 'bottom, etc.', MIr. bond, bonn 'sole, basis' < b^hund^ho- < PIE $b^hud^hnó$-. On ▸πύνδαξ, see s.v.

πύθομαι [v.] 'to putrify, decay' (Il.). ◂IE puH- 'rot'▸
•VAR Only pres. stem except καταπέπυθα· κατερρύηκα 'has flown down' (H.); further causative πύθω, fut. πύσω, aor. πῦσαι (πύσαι Call.) 'to cause to rot', both also with κατα- (Il.); on the date of the attestations see Wackernagel 1916: 133.
•DER We further find πύον, πύος [n.] 'purulence' (Hp., Arist.); as a second member in σαρκό-πυον [n.] 'the festering of flesh' with -πυώδης (Hp.); adjectives, e.g. ἔμ-πυος 'festering, full of festering ulcers' (Hp., Att.) with ἐμπυόομαι [v.] 'to fester' (Hp.); πυθεδόνες [f.pl.] 'festering ulcers' (Hell.), after σηπεδών, etc.
Denominatives with prefix: ἐκ-, ἐμ-, ἀπο-, δια-πυέω (-έομαι), -ίσκομαι (late -ίσκω) 'to fester', with -πύ-ησις, -ημα, -ηματικός, -ητικός, -ικός (Hp., medic.); late simplicia: πύ-ησις, -ητικός (Aret., Gal.).

•ETYM Beside the θ-enlargement in πῡ́-θομαι, -θω (cf. βρί-θω, πλή-θω, etc.; Schwyzer: 703), which can also underlie πύσω and πῦσαι, Sankrit has a yod-present pū́yati 'to rot' with a back-formation pū́ya- [m., n.] 'festering, pus' (thus pū́ya- is not identical with πύον). Baltic has a nasal present Lith. pūnù and pūvù (i.e. pųvù) 'id.'; in Germanic, we find an isolated ptc. ON fúinn 'rotten'. The nouns πύον and πύος go back to an unextended primary verb; they have their closest agreements in Arm. hu, gen. huoy (o-stem) 'festering blood', and in Lat. pūs [n.] (from puH-os*). Further related are e.g. Lat. pūteō 'to rot', pūter, -tris, -tre 'rotten', Go. fuls 'rotten'. Here also belongs ► πῡός 2 'beestings', s.v.

πύκα [adv.] 'dense, solid', metaph. 'careful, sensible' (Hom.). ◄?► •DER We further find πυκάζω, Dor. -άσδω (Theoc.), aor. πυκάσ(σ)αι, pass. -σθῆναι, perf. med. πεπύκασμαι, quite rarely with περι-, etc., 'to tighten, enclose tightly, encase compactly, cover' (epic poet., late prose); thence πύκασμα [n.] 'encased, covered object' (Sm.); adjective πυκνός, epic and lyr. also πυκινός, 'dense, solid, compact, numerous, strong, brave, clever' (Il.). This often occurs as a first member, e.g. πυκνό-σαρκος 'with solid flesh' (Hp., Arist.).
From πυκνός are derived πυκν-ότης [f.] 'density, closeness, etc.' (IA), -άκις = πολλάκις (Arist.), -όω [v.] 'to make dense, tighten, etc.' (IA) with -ωμα, -ωσις, -ωτικός; -άζω [v.] 'to be numerous' (EM, gloss.). As a first member πυκι- in πυκι-μηδής (-μήδης) = μήδεα πυκνά (Γ 202, 208) ἔχων, 'with a dense mind, considerate, sensible' (α 438, h. Cer., Q. S.), see Bechtel 1914 s.v. On ► ἄμπυξ, see s.v.
•ETYM The forms πύκα : πυκνός : πυκι-μηδής form a system; πύκα : πυκνός can be especially compared with ► θαμά : ► θάμνος, which are also semantically close. The form πυκινός may, acc. to Schwyzer: 490, have been formed analogically to πύκα and πυκνός, after θαμινός, ἀδινός, etc. Szemerényi's theory (Szemerényi 1964: 82ff., 87ff.) that πυκνός and θάμνος are syncopated from πυκινός and *θάμυνος should be rejected.
Further analysis remains hypothetical. The connection of ἄμπυξ with Av. pus-ā- 'diadem' is highly doubtful; the same holds for a primary verb IE puḱ-* 'to fasten, etc.' (Pok. 849), from which πύκα was considered to be a denominative (Schwyzer: 734). Greek only has a secondary verb πυκάζω. Alb. puth 'kiss' and puthtohem 'to clothe tightly, string oneself, embrace' are unrelated.
In sum, the evidence for IE puḱ-* (Pok. 849) remains meager. Fur.: 317 assumes that πυκνός, etc. are Pre-Greek, but this assumption, too, is based on scanty evidence.

πυκτή •VAR Also , -τίον, -τίς. ⇒πτύσσω.

πυλεών, -εῶνος [m.] 'wreath' (Alcm., Call. fr., Pamphil. apud Ath.). ◄PG?(S)► •VAR πυλών (H.), also πύλιγγες· αἱ ἐν τῇ ἕδρᾳ τρίχες. καὶ ἴουλοι, βόστρυχοι, κίκιννοι 'the hair/wool in the seat (?); down, locks of hair, ringlets' (H.).
•ETYM The formation of πυλεών and πύλιγγες has been compared with that of ποδ-εών, λυχν-εών and θώμ-ιγγες, λά-ιγγες respectively. On this basis, a pre-form *πύλος has been assumed. This *πύλος is then connected with Skt. pulaka- [m.pl.] 'erection or bristling of the hairs of the body', pula- 'id.' (Lex.), and pulastí(n)- 'wearing the hair straight', which point to < pula-*. From Iranian, Kurd. pūr 'hair of the head' is adduced, and from Celtic MIr. ulcha 'beard', ul-fota 'with long beard'. However, Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 151 doubts the connection between the Greek and the Sanskrit words, and the whole remains rather uncertain. In fact, the suffix -ιγγες may even point to a Pre-Greek origin for this etymon.

πύλη [f.] 'wing of a door, gate', mostly plur. 'door, gate', especially of town gates, gates of a camp and the like (Il.); 'entrance, access, bottleneck, etc.', also as a TN (Pi., Emp., IA). ◄PG?►
•COMP Several compounds, e.g. πυλ-άρτης [m.] 'gate-closer', epithet of Hades, also as a PN (Hom.), where the second member is related to ἀρ- in ἀραρίσκω, with a univerbating suffix -τη- (Bechtel 1914 s.v., Fraenkel 1910: 31); πυλ-ωρός 'gate-keeper, guard' (Il.), epic πυλᾰ-ωρός, Hdt. πυλ-ουρός, also H. πυλ-αυρός (Dor.), -ευρός (Ion.); on the compositional vowel and the second member see on ► ὁράω; ἑπτά-πυλος 'with seven gates' (Il., epic, lyr.); TN Θερμο-πύλαι [pl.] (Simon., Hdt., etc.), called Πύλαι by Attic orators and others, cf. Risch IF 59 (1949): 267.
•DER 1. Diminutive πυλ-ίς, -ίδος [f.] (IA); 2. -ώματα [n.pl.] 'gate' (A, E.), an extension (Chantraine 1933: 186f.); 3. -εών (late), -ών (Arist., Hell.). -(ε)ῶνος [m.] 'gate-space, gateway, gate-building'; 4. Πυλ-ᾶτις, -ιδος [f.] 'belonging to Πύλαι' (S. [lyr.]), -αῖτις, -ιδος [f.] 'belonging to a gate' (Lyc. 356), perhaps for Πυλᾶτις; cf. Redard 1949: 10 and 212; 5. πυλαῖος 'belonging to a gate' (late), 'belonging to Πύλαι' (Demeter; Call.); PN Πύλαιος (Β 842); Πυλαία, -ίη [f.] epithet of the amphictyonian meeting in Πύλαι (IA); derived from Πυλαία: Πυλαιασταί [m.pl.] originally *"members of the Πυλαία" (on the formation Fraenkel 1910: 175ff.; hardly correct Bechtel 1921, 2: 655), metaphorically 'mountebank, liar' (Phot., Suid.; Rhod. acc. to H.); probably also πυλαϊκός 'like a conjurer' (late); 6. Denominative verb πυλ-όομαι 'to be provided with gates' (Ar., X.).
•ETYM As opposed to inherited θύρα, πύλη is without etymology. It is probably a technical loanword, like many other architectural terms (e.g. μέγαρον); possibly of Pre-Greek origin.

πύματος [adj.] 'utmost, last' (Il.). ◄?►
•ETYM A frozen superlative without correspondences outside Greek. A remote connection with Skt. púnar 'back, again, further' has been proposed, but this is unlikely. It has been argued that the preposition ἀπο has a variant pu*, but the intermediate form ἀπυ, which is attested in Arc.-Cypr., Lesb., and Thess., may have arisen phonetically from ἀπο. See also ► πύννος and ► πρυμνός.

πύνδαξ, -ακος [m.] 'bottom of a vessel' (Pherecr., Arist. et al.), metaph. 'hilt of a sword' (S. Fr. 311). ◄?►
•VAR ἀπυνδάκωτος· ἀπύθμενος 'without bottom' (H.).
•ETYM The word πύνδαξ is formed like κάμαξ, πίναξ, στύραξ, etc.; it further recalls Lat. fundus with the same meaning, and so it is close to πυθμήν. However, the medial -νδ- for expected -νθ- is highly problematic: it cannot be explained as a regular development (pace Schwyzer: 333); cf. on -μβ- in ► ὄμβρος. Likewise, initial π- for expected φ- is puzzling (since it was no longer followed by θ), and most explanations offered (reshaping after ► πυθμήν; a borrowing from a Germano-Macedonian loan word [Kretschmer Glotta 22 (1934): 115ff.; cf. on ►πύργος], or a borrowing from Macedonian [Pisani Rev. Int. ét. balk. 3 (1937): 18ff.]) are not convincing. The suffix -ακ- is typical for Pre-Greek words; of course, the suffix may have been taken over from Pre-Greek words, but this seems to have occurred only rarely (the word is not discussed by Fur.). If an inherited Indo-European form was adapted to Pre-Greek, this could explain π- and -νδ-, and the connection with Lat. fundus, etc. could be upheld.

πυνθάνομαι [v.] 'to find out, learn, ask, inquire, investigate' (Il.); act. πεύθω, πεῦσαι 'to announce, cite' (Crete). ◄IE *$b^h eud^h$- 'become awake or attentive'► •VAR Epic also πεύθομαι (which was metrically easier, see Chantraine 1942: 111, 282, 308), fut. πεύσομαι, them. aor. πυθέσθαι, redupl. opt. πεπύθοιτο, perf. πέπυσμαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, ἐκ-, προ-.
•DER With zero grade: 1. πύστις [f.] 'questioning, inquiry, tidings' (Att., A.) with πυστι-άομαι [v.] 'to interrogate' (Plu., Phot., H.); 2. πύσμα [n.] 'question, interrogation' with -ματικός 'interrogative, asking' (late); 3. πυστός (EM, Eust.), always as a second member, or in prefixed compounds, e.g. ἄ-πυστος, ἀνά-πυστος (Od.).
With full grade: 4. πευθώ [f.] 'tidings' (A. Th. 370); 5. πεῦσις (ἀνά-) [f.] 'information' (Ph., Plu.), older πύστις, cf. Fraenkel Glotta 32 (1953): 27 with literature; 6. πευθήν, -ῆνος [m.] 'spy' (Luc., Arr.), see Solmsen 1909: 143;
7. Adjective πευστικός 'interrogating' (A. D., Ph.); 8. As a second member -πευθής, after the stems in -ες (Schwyzer: 513), e.g. ἀ-πευθ-ής 'uninvestigated, unaware' (Od.); 9. φιλό-πευσ-τος (Phot., Suid.), -της (Ptol.) 'who loves questioning' with -πευστέω, -πευστία (Hell.).
•ETYM The full grade thematic present πεύθομαι has exact morphological matches in several languages: Skt. bódhati, med. -te 'to watch, perceive, understand', Av. baoδaiti, -te 'id.', also 'to smell', the Germanic group of Go. ana-biudan 'to order, arrange', faur-biudan 'to forbid', ON bjóða 'to offer, present, make known', and in Slavic, e.g. OCS bljusti, 1sg. bljudǫ 'to preserve, guard, observe', Ru. bljustí, 1sg. bljudú 'to observe, perceive'; all go back to a thematic present PIE *$b^h eud^h$-e/o- 'to observe, be awake'. The deviating meaning of the Germanic verbs agrees with the (probably secondary) active Cret. πεύθω, and it is related to an old opposition of diatheses; a corresponding meaning is shown e.g. by the Skt. causative bodháyati 'to wake up, instruct, inform'. The meaning 'to find out, ask' is a Greek innovation. An exact agreement is found between (ἐ-)πύθοντο and Skt. budhánta, and these are in origin identical; a complete formal match is also found between (ἄ-)πυστος, Skt. buddhá-, and Av. hupō.bus-ta- 'well scented'; likewise, between πύστις and Skt. buddhi- [f.] 'insight, intelligence, spirit', and between (ἀ-)πευθής and Av. baoδah- [n.] 'observation'. However, in all these cases we have to reckon with independent innovations. A nasalized present like πυνθάνομαι is also found in Lith. bundù, inf. bùsti 'to wake up' (suffixed caus. bùd-inu, -inti) and in Celtic, e.g. OIr. ad-bond- 'to give notice, announce'. Here, too, original identity is made doubtful by the strong productivity of these formations.

πύννος [m.] · ὁ πρωκτός 'anus' (H.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Besides πουνιάζειν· παιδικοῖς χρῆσθαι. πούνιον γὰρ ὁ δακτύλιος (= anus) (H.).
•ETYM The remote similarity with ►πυγή, Skt. putau 'the two hindmost parts' (only Lex.), Latv. pun(i)s 'lump, bump', Lith. putà [f.] 'foam-bubble' has attracted attention, but see Mayrhofer KEWA s.v. putau. In view of its semantics and lack of certain cognates, the word may rather be Pre-Greek.

πύξ ⇒πυγμή.

πύξος [f.] 'box tree, box wood' (Arist., Hell.). ◄LW Italy► •DIAL Myc. pu-ko-so (cf. Scardigli Minos 6:2 (1960): 1f.)
•COMP Few compounds, e.g. παρά-πυξος 'inlaid with π.' (Cratin.).
•DER 1. πυξ-ίον [n.] 'writing-table (made of π.)' (com.); 2. -ίς [f.] 'box (made of π.)' (Hell.); 3. -ίδιον [n.] diminutive of πυξίον and πυξίς (Ar., pap.); 4. πύξ-ινος [adj.] 'made of π., π.-colored' (Ω 269, Att.); 5. -ίνεος [adj.] 'id.' (AP); 6. -ώδης [adj.] 'π.-like', of the color (Dsc.); 7. -(ε)ών, -(ε)ῶνος 'box tree grove' (gramm.); 8. -ίζω [v.] 'to be π.-colored' (medic.); 9. Πυξοῦς, -οῦντος [m.] river and town in Lucania, in Latin Buxentum (Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 2 (1950-1951): 233 with literature); perhaps also 10. Πυξίτης [m.] river near Trapezus in Asia Minor (Arr., etc.), see Redard 1949: 175.
•ETYM Unconvincing attempts by Scardigli Sprache 6 (1959): 220ff. (extensive treatment with literature), who derives it from Asia Minor (but ultimately from IE *b^h*Hu*- 'grow'; cf. ►φύω and Arm. boys 'plant'), and by Carnoy Ant. class. 24 (1955): 22 and Carnoy REGr. 69 (1956): 284 (who connects IE *$b^h eug^h$- 'bend'). A further counterargument against an origin in Asia Minor is adduced by Fur.: 157, who stresses that the tree is at home in Italy, not in Asia Minor or Greece (Schrader-Nehring 1917 under Buxus). Therefore, we are rather dealing with a loanword from Italy.
The forms πύξος, -ίς, and -ινον were the source of Lat. buxus (or both are independent borrowings; see Fur. 157), Lat. pyxis, and Lat. pyxinum (see WH s.vv. with further literature); the modern European forms (MoFr. buis, MoHG Büchse, E box, etc.) were in turn borrowed from Latin.

πύον 1 'pus'. •VAR Also πύος. ⇒πύθομαι.

πῦός 2 [m.] 'animal milk, first milk after birth' (com.). ◄IE? puH*- 'rot, pus'► •VAR Also πύον (Emp.), πύαρ (Ael. Dion.), πύας (H.) 'id.'.
•DER Besides we find πυετία, with contraction πυτία, and with vowel metathesis πιτύα [f.] 'clotted milk, rennet' (Arist., Hell.), from *πυετός, which relates to πυός like παγετός to πάγος, etc. (thus Schwyzer: 501; differently Scheller 1951: 52).
•ETYM Connection with Skt. púṣyati 'to thrive' < pu-s*- 'swell' is improbable. Probably originally identical with πύον, πύος 'pus' (s.v. ►πύθομαι), but with gender and accent after ὀρός or τυρός, which belong to the same semantic field. The by-forms πύαρ and πύας (if their tradition is correct) may have been formed after ἔαρ, πῖαρ, and ἅλας, κρέας respectively. Both the substance and its properties (smell, fermentation, etc.) may have caused the transference of meaning from 'pus' to 'milk':

expressions for 'congeal, getting sour, ferment', and also for 'rotting', affect each other now and then: Skt. śara- [m.] 'sour cream', also śáras- [n.] 'skin on cooked milk', from the verb 'to break' in Skt. śṛṇā́ti, ►κεραΐζω, with a ptc. śīrṇá- 'rotten, spoiled'. However, the other example given by Frisk, Lat. cariēs 'decay', Lat. colostra 'beesting', probably does not belong to that root (cf. De Vaan 2008 s.v.).

πύππαξ [excl.] exclamation of admiration (Pl., Com. Adesp.). ◄ONOM► •DER παππάζω (Cratin. 52).
•ETYM The word πύππαξ is an exclamation of onomatopoeic character; ultimately, it could be Pre-Greek.

πῦρ, πῦρός [n.] 'fire' (Il.). ◄IE peh$_2$-ur, ph$_2$-uen-s* 'fire'► •DIAL Myc. pu-ka-wo /pur-kawoi/?
•COMP Many compounds, e.g. πυρ-καϊά, Ion. -ιή [f.] 'fireplace, pyre' (Il.), from *πυρ-καϝ-ιᾱ́, a compound of πῦρ and καίω (aor. καῦσαι) with a suffix -ι̯ᾱ-, the accent being the same as in σποδιά, ἀνθρακιά, etc. (cf. Scheller 1951: 93 with a different interpretation), see also Myc. pu-ka-wo above; πυρ-φόρος 'fire- or torch-bearing, -bearer' (Pi.), later also πυρο-φόρος (cf. Schwyzer: 440); πυρι-γενής 'born, worked in fire' (E., etc.); ἄ-πυρ-ος 'untouched by fire, without fire' (Il.); on πυρ-πολέω see ►πέλομαι; on πυρ-αύστης, etc. see ►αὔω 2; on ►πυριήκης s.v.
•DER A. nouns: 1. πῦρά [n.pl.] 'watch-fires' (Il.), dat. πυροῖς (X.), originally the plur. of πῦρ, with transition to the o-stems and shift of accent (cf. Egli 1954: 18 and 22f.); 2. πυρ-ᾱ́, Ion. -ή [f.] 'fireplace, pyre' (Il.); 3. ►πυρσός (see also s.v.) [m.], plur. also -σά [n.] 'firebrand, fire-signal' (with remarkable oxytonesis), -σώδης 'firebrand-like' (E. [lyr.]), -σεύω [v.] 'to ignite, give a fire-signal' (E.; X.), -σεία, -σευτήρ, σευτής (Hell.), -σίτης 'fire-color' (Philostr.); 4. πυρ-ετός [m.] 'burning heat, fever' (X 31), perhaps after νιφετός (Porzig 1942: 245); thence πυρ-έσσω, Att. -έττω, aor. -έξαι; adjectives -εκτικός; -ετιάω, -εταίνω, -ετώδης, -έτιον, -ετικός; 5. πυρ-εῖα, Ion. -ήϊα [n.pl.] 'lighter, firesticks' (h. Merc.), not from πυρή 'pyre' as per Zumbach 1955: 14; 6. πυρ-ία, Ion. -ίη [f.] 'vapor bath, steam bath, etc.' (Ion., Arist.), 'fishing by torchlight' (Arist.), -ιάω 'to prepare a vapor bath, foment, warm' (Hp.), whence -ίαμα, -ίασις, -ιατήρ, -ιατήριον (Scheller 1951: 55); also -ιάτη [f.] 'warmed animal milk' (com.); 7. πυρ-ίδιον [n.] 'spark' (Thphr.); 8. πυρ-ίτης [m.] 'copper ore, ore' (Dsc., pap.), "fireman", epithet of Hephaistos (Luc.), see Redard 1949: 36, 60, 245; 9. πύρ-εθρον, -ος, -ωθρον 'pellitory, Anthemis pyrethrum' (because of its warming effect, see Strömberg 1940: 82 and 146f.); 10. ►πυραλλίς; 11. Πυρ-ωνία epithet of Artemis (Paus.).
B. Adjectives: 1. πυρ-ώδης 'fire-like, fiery' (IA); 2. -ινος 'fiery' (Arist., Plb.); 3. -όεις 'id.' (Hell.), also a name of the planet Mars (Arist., Hell.); 4. on ►πυρρός.
C. verbs: 1. πυρ-όομαι [v.] 'to catch fire', -όω 'to set on fire' (Pi., IA), also with ἐκ-, etc.; see Wackernagel 1916: 124, whence πύρ-ωσις (also ἐκ-, δια-, etc.) [f.], -ωμα, -ωτής, -ωτικός; 2. πυρ-εύω [v.] 'to make fire, kindle' (Pl.); ἐμπυρ-εύω, -ίζω from ἔμ-πυρος; thence -εύς, -ευτής, -ευτικός (more in Boßhardt 1942: 83); 3. πυρ-άζω (EM) as an explanation of 4. ►πυρακτέω.

•ETYM The word πῦρ, πῦρ-ός was originally a heteroclitic r/n-stem, still inflected this way in Hitt. paḫḫur, gen. paḫḫuenaš < PIE peh$_2$-ur*, gen. ph$_2$-uen-s. Traces of this formation can still be seen in Germanic: Go. fon, gen. fun-ins and ON funi are built on ph$_2$uen-s*, while OHG fuir, fiur, MoHG Feuer, and ON fúrr, fýrr are from PGm. fūr(-i)-* < pHur*. Armenian preserves hur, gen. hr-oy 'fire' < pHur-o-* with secondary thematization, beside hn-oc' 'fireplace, furnace' < pHun-*.
In Tocharian, we find ToA por and ToB puwăr, pwār. Italic has U pir [nom.acc.] < pūr*, abl. pure < pur-ed*, and perhaps Lat. pūrigō 'to clear, clean' if < pūr-ago-*. Lat. pūrus may or may not be related.
The ablaut was eliminated in Greek; the change in the quantity of υ is secondary.

πυρακτέω [v.] 'to harden in fire, burn to coal' (ι 328, Nic. Th. 688). ◄GR► •VAR Later πυρακτόομαι, -όω 'be singed, carbonized' (D. S., Str., Plu.).
•ETYM Although πυρακτέω is traditionally taken as a compound of πῦρ and ἄγειν with the meaning 'to rotate in fire' (e.g. Bechtel 1914 s.v.), this is both semantically and morphologically unsatisfactory, since ἄγειν cannot mean 'to rotate', and an intermediate form *πύρακτος 'rotating in fire' (thus Bechtel) is without parallel.
The form πυρακτέω is without a doubt an expressive extension in -(α)κτέω, derived from πυρ-άζω (EM 697, 16; Stolz Wien. Stud. 25 (1903): 234), or from *πυρ-άσσω vel sim., like ὑλακτέω from ὑλάω 'to bark' (beside ὑλαγμός, etc.), or ἀλυκτέω from ἀλύω, ἀλύσσω; for the last examples, cf. Frisk Eranos 50 (1952): 8ff. The word πυρακτόομαι is formed after the numerous intransitives in -όομαι with a factitive -όω.

πυραλλίς [f.] name of an unknown bird, probably a kind of dove (Arist., Call., Ael.); a kind of olive (medic.); name of an insect that supposedly lives in the fire (Plin.). ◄GR► •VAR v.l. -αλίς, H. πυρραλίς.
•ETYM Diminutive formation in -αλ(λ)ίς (Chantraine 1933: 251f., Niedermann Glotta 19 (1931): 9f.), probably from πῦρ after the reddish color; it is also associated with πυρρός (πυρραλίς). However, according to Niedermann (l.c.) it derives from πυρός 'wheat' after its nutrition; cf. συκαλλίς, from ►σῦκον.

πῦραμίς, -ίδος [f.] 1. 'pyramid' (Hdt. et al.); 2. 'kind of cake of roasted wheat-grains preserved in honey' (Ephipp.), mostly πυραμοῦς, -οῦντος [m.] (Ar., Ephipp., Call. et al.), also πυραμοί [m.pl.] (Artem.); acc. to H. πύραμος also = χόρτος 'food'. ◄GR►
•DER Besides, we find πυράμη [f.] 'sickle' (sch.), a back-formation from πυρᾱμητός [m.] 'wheat-harvest' (Arist. et al.); πυραμιδο-ειδής 'pyramidal' (Epicur.), usually haplologically πυραμο-ειδής 'id.' (Thphr. et al.), -ιδικός 'id.' (Iamb.).
•ETYM In the sense of 'cake', πῦραμίς is derived from πυρός 'wheat', after σησαμίς, -οῦς. According to Diels KZ 47 (1916): 193ff. (with literature), the Egyptian pyramids were named after the form of the cake; it must be noted, however, that the form of the cake is actually unknown (Kretschmer Glotta 10 (1920): 243).

πύργος [m.] 'tower, wall-tower', also the fortification wall itself (Il.), metaph. 'closed division of warriors, column' (Il.), 'siege tower' (X.), 'farm-building' (LXX, pap., NT). ◂PG(V)▸

•COMP E.g. πυργο-δάϊκτος 'destroying towers' (A. Pers. 105 [lyr.]; originally 'with destroyed towers'? See Fraenkel 1910: 82; Williger 1928: 45[1]), εὔ-πυργος 'with fair towers, well-towered' (H 71, etc.).

•DER 1. Diminutives πυργ-ίον, -ίδιον, -ίς, -ίσκος, -ίσκιον, -ισκάριον (mostly Hell. and late); 2. πύργ-ωμα, mostly plur. -ώματα [n.] 'tower structures' (Orac. apud Hdt., A., E.); 3. πυργιτρον [n.] form and meaning unclear (pap. VI[p]); 4. πυργ-ίτης [n.] 'kind of sparrow' (Gal., etc.), see Redard 1949: 84, also on σποργίλος; -ῖτις· βοτάνη 'pasture' (H.); 5. adjective πύργ-ινος 'consisting of towers' (A. [lyr.]), -ειος 'tower-like' (Ion., trag.), -ώδης 'id.' (S.), -ῶτις 'towered' (A. [lyr.]; feminine built on *-ώτης, Redard 1949: 8); πυργ-ήρης 'provided with towers, enclosed within towers or walls' (Orac. apud Paus.), with -ηρέομαι [v.] 'to be enclosed within towers or walls, be besieged' (A., E.); 6. adverb -ηδόν 'columnwise' (Il.), 'towerwise' (Aret.); 7. verb πυργ-ῶσαι, -όω 'to fence with towers, pile up' (λ 264), with -ωτός 'piled up' (Str., etc.); 8. Πυργαλίδαι [m.pl.] name of a guild in Kameiros (inscr.); after Ταντalίδαι?

•ETYM The word πύργος is a technical term of construction (architecture). It has been wrongfully taken as a Germanic loan word by Kretschmer Glotta 22 (1934): 100ff., because of the striking similarity with MoHG Burg, Go. baurgs 'town, tower'. The Germanic word is from the root *b^her$ǵ^h$- 'high' found in MoHG Berg, Hitt. parku- 'high', etc.

Likewise, Πέργαμος (-ον, -α) 'the citadel (of Troy)', also as a TN, is considered a loan word related to this root (see Heubeck 1961: 63ff., Pok. 140f.).

Others have taken it as a loan from Pre-Greek. The glosses φύρκος· τεῖχος 'wall' and φ<ο>ύρκορ· ὀχύρωμα 'stronghold' (H.) attest a variant form with different stops; the same variation is found in the TNs Πύργος (Elis, in Hdt. 4, 148 and Str.) and Φύρκος (Th. 5,49). Urart. burgana 'palace' may point to an origin in Asia Minor. Although the exact morphology of Περγαμον remains unclear, the suffix -αμο- is otherwise attested as Pre-Greek (cf. κάρδαμον).

That πύργος was not inherited from Proto-Indo-European is further confirmed by the place names Περγασα, Παργασα, and Βαργασα (cf. Fur.: 64[268] on πάγασα). In conclusion, the word is clearly Pre-Greek.

πυρήν ⇒πυρός.

πυριήκης [adj.] 'with a fiery point', i.e. 'provided with a glowing top' (πυριήκεα μοχλόν ι 387). ◂GR▸

•VAR Also -ής.

•ETYM After ἀμφ-ήκης, τανυ-ήκης, etc. (see ►ἠκή); πυρι- is analogical after πυκι-, λαθι-, etc. To be rejected, Bechtel 1914 s.v.: πυρι-(ήκης) like πυκι-(μηδής), as a "replacement" of πύρινο-.

πύρνος [m.] · ψωμός 'morsel' (H.); meaning debated already in antiquity; cf. e.g. H.: πύρνοι· ζειαὶ καὶ σιτώδεις(?) 'one-seeded wheat, cereal'. ἢ ὁ κατειργασμένος σῖτος

'cultivated grain'. ἄλλοι χόρτος, ἄλλοι μαγίδα 'food; cake'; πύρνα· δρύφη, κλάσματα, σιτία 'was torn; morsel; grain'. ◂PG?▸

•VAR πύρνον [acc.sg.] (ο 312, ρ 12: coordinated with κοτύλην; Lyc. 639), πύρνα (σῖτα : σῖτος) [acc.pl.] (ρ 362), φηγίνων πύρνων [gen.pl.] (Lyc. 482).

•COMP As a first member in πυρνο-τόκος ἄρουρα (Hymn. Is.).

•DER πύρνηται· ἐσθίηται 'will be devoured' (H.).

•ETYM The word πύρνος is obsolete and without etymology. It was compared with πορύναν· μαγίδα and τορύνη· σιτῶδές τι (H.) by Fick BB 16 (1892): 284, adducing Skt. cárvati 'to grind, masticate' and cūrṇa- [n.] 'powder, flour', as well. This would lead to the reconstruction PIE *k^weru- (Pok. 642), which requires a pre-form *τερύνα for τορύνη. However, this leaves the υ-vowel in πύρνος unexplained (Bechtel 1914 s.v.).

According to Szemerényi 1964: 29ff., πύρνος is syncopated from πύρινος (and derived from πυρός 'wheat'), but this is contestable for several reasons.

Fur.: 370 connects the word with Basque ap(h)ur 'crumb', Béarnais (Pyrenees) purre 'small bread of maize'. This etymology seems unreliable, but in any case, the word may well be Pre-Greek.

πῡρός [m.] '(grain of) wheat' (Il.). ◂IE pHu-ro- 'corn, wheat'▸

•VAR Mostly plur. πῡροί (Chantraine 1953: 30), Dor. (Cos, Thera, Syracuse, etc.) σπυρός.

•COMP E.g. πυρο-φόρος 'wheat-bearing' (Il.), διόσ-πυρον [n.] 'the cherry-like fruit of Celtis australis' (Thphr.), -πυρος [m.] = λιθόσπερμον (Dsc.) (Strömberg 1940: 128 and 138); on the gender cf. ►βούτυρον, -ος.

•DER Diminutive πυρίδια [n.pl.] (Ar., pap.); adjectives πύρ-ινος (E., X., Hell.), -ικός (pap.), -ώδης (Str.), -άμινος (Hes. fr. 117, etc.), after κυάμ-, σησάμ-ινος (Forbes Mnem. 4:11 (1958): 157) 'of wheat'; on ►πυραμίς, -αμοῦς see s.v.; πυρ-ίτης ἄρτος 'wheat-bread' (Aët.), αὐτο-πυρίτης (Phryn. Com., Hp.) = αὐτό-πυρος, etc. (Redard 1949: 90). Also πυρήν, -ῆνος [m.] 'pip, pit, stone of fruit' (Ion., Arist., Hell.), see Solmsen 1909: 125f., with ἀ-πύρηνος 'pitless' (Ar. Fr. 118, Thphr., etc.), etc.; πυρην-ίς (Tanagra III[a]; written πουρεινις), -ιον (Thphr.), -ίδιον (Delos III[a], pap.) 'kernel, knag, knob'; also πυρην-άδες [f.pl.] name of a guild in Ephesus (inscr.); -ώδης 'pit-like' (Thphr.).

•ETYM An old term puH-ro- 'wheat' is also retained in Balto-Slavic, e.g. Lith. pūraĩ [pl.] 'winter corn', pūras [m.sg.] 'single winter corn', SCr. pȉr [m.] 'spelt', CS pyro 'ὄλυρα, κέγχρος', Ru. pyréj 'dog-grass, Triticum repens'; OE fyrs 'dog-grass' (with a deviating suffix) also belongs here.

The initial σ- in σπυρός may have been taken over from ►σῖτος or σπόρος, σπέρμα (Fraenkel Phil. 97 (1948): 169f., Fraenkel IF 59 (1949): 304f.). In spite of the connections with Balto-Slavic and Germanic, πῡρός may be an old 'Wanderwort' (Schwyzer: 58[3]). According to Nieminen KZ 74 (1956): 170f., however, it can be connected to Lith. pūraĩ 'to cut, mow' and Lat. paviō 'to strike' as "what is beaten, threshed". Janda 2000: 39-43 accepts the derivation from peh$_2$-u- 'to strike' in Lat. paviō, but assumes a semantic development from 'striking' to 'cleansing': wheat was called pure because the grains could easily be separated from the husks. This is possible, but not compelling.

πυρρός [adj.] 'blazing red, tawny', especially of hair (of the head) (IA, poet.). ◁?▷
•VAR πυρσός (E., Mosch.).
•DIAL Myc. pu-wo, -wa, -wi-no Gallavotti Par. del pass. 12 (1957): 11.
•COMP E.g. πυρρό-θριξ (also πυρσό-) 'red-haired' (E. [lyr.], Arist., Poll.), ἐπί-πυρρος 'reddish' (Arist., Thphr.), see Strömberg 1946: 106.
•DER 1. πυρρίας [m.] 'red-haired man', especially of slaves (Ar.), Πυρϝίας PN (Corinth VI[a]), see Latte Glotta 35 (1956): 296f., Πυρϝαλίων PN (Argos), see Schulze 1933a: 115; πυρράκης 'with reddish hair-color; redskin' (LXX, Hell. pap.), πυρρίχος 'red', of a bull (Theoc.), also as a PN; hence perhaps πυρρίχη [f.] name of a war dance (Att.) with -ίχιος, -ιχίζω, etc. 2. πύρρ-α [f.] name of a bird (Ael.), -αία [f.] 'red robe'? (Halic. III[a]); 3. πυρρό-της [f.] 'red hair-color' (Arist.); 4. verbs: πυρσ-αίνω 'to color red' (E. [lyr.]), πυρρ-ίζω (LXX), -άζω (Ev. Matt.) 'to be red', of heaven, -ιάω 'to redden, blush' (late).
•ETYM The relation of the Corinthian horsename Πυρϝος (cf. perhaps Myc. pu-wo, etc.) and Πυρϝ-ίας, -αλίων (see above) to IA πυρρός is not quite clear: PGr. purwo-* should have given IA πῡρός or πῦρός. Therefore, PGr. purswó- is usually posited (after Hoffmann 1898: 589). Frisk asks if πυρρός could derive from *πῠρός by expressive gemination, which seems ad hoc. On the suffix -ϝο- in color adjectives, see Chantraine 1933: 123 and Schwyzer: 472; on the phonetics, see Lejeune 1972: 138[5] and Forbes Glotta 36 (1958): 262f. See further ► πῦρ and ► πυρσός.
Schulze 1933a: 115f. connected Lith. pur̃vas 'dirt, muck'; on this, see Fraenkel 1955 s.v. with further literature.
On derivatives from πυρρός in Latin and Romance, cf. Kahane Glotta 39 (1960-1961): 133ff.

πυρσός [adj.] 'firebrand, torch'. ◁EUR?▷ •ETYM Fur.: 157 derives ► πυρρός from this form, adducing the personal names Πύρρων and Πύρσων of Epeirotic kings as cognates. In Latin, we find burrus and birrus, and in Romance, būrius (REW 1410); Lat. būricus 'small horse' is probably named after the color, as is Romance burrīcus* beside burriccus* 'hinny' (REW 1413). Fur.: suggests that it is an old Pre-European word for the color of a horse, which was only later associated with πῦρ 'fire'.

πυτίζω ⇒πτύω.

πυτίνη ⇒βυτίνη.

πω [pcl.] 'ever, still' (Il.), enclitic, almost always after negation: οὔπω, μήπω, οὐ πώποτε, Dor. (Epich.) οὐ πώποκα, post-Hom. also in negating questions τί πω, etc. ◁IE k*ʷ*oh₁* 'ever, still'▷ •VAR Ion. κω; further Dor. πη in ἄλλη πη 'anywhere else' (Cyrene), πήποκα 'ever' (Sparta V[a], Theoc., etc.).

•ETYM A fixed instrumental, identical to OP kā (confirming pcl.); cf. also Go. hve 'anyhow', from a PIE instrumental k*ʷ*o-h₁*, *k*ʷ*e-h₁*, formed from the pronominal stem k*ʷ*o-*; see ► πόθεν.

πώγων, -ωνος [m.] 'whisker, chin-beard' (IA). ◁PG?▷
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. τραγο-πώγων [m.] 'with a goat's beard' (Cratin.), also as a plant name 'goat's beard, Tragopogon' (Thphr., Dsc.), see Strömberg 1940: 56.
•DER Diminutive πωγών-ιον [n.] (Luc., etc.), -ίας [m.] 'the bearded one' (Cratin., etc.), also [n.] of a comet (Arist.; Scherer 1953: 107), -ίτης, -ιήτης [m.] 'id.' (Hdn., Suid., etc.), -ικός, -ιαῖος 'bearded' (gloss.).
•ETYM The origin of πώγων is unexplained. A connection with ► πήγνυμι, πηγός fails on semantic grounds (ω vs. η). Adams Glotta 64 (1986): 16f. explains the word from ποϝα-γ-ον < pou̯m̥-g-on-, derived from his reconstruction for Skt. púmāṃs- 'male'; this, too, remains quite dubious.

πωλέομαι [v.] 'to go to and fro, go somewhere frequently'. ⇒πέλομαι.

πωλέω [v.] 'to offer for sale, sell' (IA). ◁IE? pel-* 'sell'▷ •VAR Fut. πωλ-ήσω, aor. -ῆσαι, pass. -ηθῆναι.
•COMP Often with prefix (especially Hell. and late inscr. and pap.), e.g. προ-, δια-, ἀνα-, ἀντι-.
•DER 1. Action nouns: πώλ-ησις [f.] 'sale' (X., etc.), -ημα [n.] 'sale, sold merchandise' (inscr. Tauromenion, etc.); back-formation -ή, Dor. -ά [f.] 'sale' (Sophr., Hyp. fr.).
2. Agent nouns: πωλ-ητής [m.] 'seller', designation of a financial official (Att., etc.), also -ητήρ [m.] 'id.' (Delph. IV[a], etc.), fem. -ήτρια 'seller' (Poll.), as a second member with λαχανο- (Ar.), etc.; -πώλης [m.] and -πωλις [f.] enjoy unlimited productivity in compounds, e.g. ἀλλαντο-πώλης 'sausage-seller' with ἀλλαντο-πωλ-έω, etc., ἀρτό-πωλις 'bread-seller, baker' (Ar., etc.), cf. Fraenkel 1912: 26 and 109, Schwyzer: 451; the simplex πώλης was extracted from this compound (Ar.);
3. πωλ-ητήριον 'shop' (X., etc.); 4. adjectives -ητικός 'belonging to sale' (Pl.), see Chantraine 1956a: 134; -ιμος 'for sale' (Hell. pap.).
•ETYM In view of its formation, πωλέω must be an iterative-intensive deverbative, although neither in Greek nor in related languages is a corresponding primary verb attested with certainty. Skt. páṇate 'purchase, buy' may represent an old nasal present in MInd. shape (reflecting older PIAr. pr̥ṇāti*), but this is considered unlikely by Mayrhofer EWAia 2: 69. An -n- is further found in a Balto-Slavic noun: Lith. pel̃nas 'gain, profit, merit', OCS plěnъ 'λάφυρον', Ru. polón 'captivity, booty' < PIE pel-no-*. Germanic provides two isolated adjectives: ON falr 'for sale' < IE polo-*, OHG fāli 'id.' < IE pēlio-*, next to OHG feili, MoHG feil with unexplained vocalism. Semantically, πωλέω is close to ► ἐμπολή 'trade(ware), purchase, gain', which is usually connected with πέλομαι, originally 'to turn' (for the connection of πωλέω to πέλομαι, see Schwyzer: 720). If πωλέω is indeed related to ἐμπολή, the derivation from IE pel- of the words mentioned above should be abandoned. Cf. also the literature on ► πέρνημι.

πῶλος [m., f.] 'young horse, foal, filly' (Il.), secondarily also of other young animals (Arist., etc.), poetically also 'horse' in general, metaph. 'young girl, youth, etc.' (Anacr., A., E.). ◀IE *pōlH-, plH- 'foal'▶ •VAR Myc. po-ro.
•COMP Compound πωλο-δάμνης [m.] 'foal-tamer; horsebreaker' (X.) with πωλοδαμνέω (S., E., X.), etc.; λευκό-πωλος 'with white foals' (Pi., trag.).
•DER 1. Diminutives πωλ-ίον [n.] (Att., Arist., etc.), -άριον (Pl. apud D. L., etc.); 2. adjectives -ικός 'belonging to, concerning foals' (S., E., Arc., etc., inscr.), 'virginal' (A. [lyr.]), see Chantraine 1956a: 116ff.; -ειος 'id.' (Suid.); 3. Πωλώ [f.] epithet of Artemis in Thasos (Nilsson 1941(1): 483[3]); 4. Denominative πωλ-εύω [v.] 'to break in a young horse' (X.), with -εία, -ευσις, -ευμα, -ευτής, -ευτικός (X., Max. Tyr., etc.).
•ETYM Semantically, πῶλος corresponds exactly with MoHG Fohlen, Füllen, and cognates, e.g. Go. fula, ON foli, OHG folo < PGm. *fulan-, with the diminutive ON fyl [n.] < PGm. *ful-ja-, OHG fulīn [n.] < PGm. *ful-īna-. Contrary to πῶλος < IE *pōlH-, PGm. *fulan represents the zero grade *plH-. Alb. pelë 'mare', must be related as well, reflecting *pōl-n-. Certainly unrelated (contra Frisk) are παῖς, Lat. puer, etc. The appurtenance of Arm. ul 'small goat', connected by Meillet REArm. 10 (1930): 184f. and others (including Arm. amul 'infertile' < IE *n̥-pōlo-), is rather doubtful because of the deviating meaning (cf. Lidén 1906: 25, with older literature). Thieme's theory (Lidén 1897: 48[2]) that πῶλος, etc. are related to PIE *k^{w}el- (see ►πέλομαι), via an original meaning 'meadow-animal', should be rejected.

πώλυπος (-ύπος) [m.] 'sea polyp, cuttlefish', metaphorically 'nose polyp' (Hp., Thphr., etc.); also substantivized adjective τὰ πολύποδα 'many-footed', of insects (Arist.). ◀PG(S)▶ •VAR Plur. -οι (Semon., Epich., Hp. [v.l.]), also πῶλυψ, -υπος (Diph. Siphn., Dsc., Poll.), πόλυψ, -υπος (Paul. Aeg.); more usual is πουλύπους, -ποδος (ε 432), acc. -πουν (Ion. Trag.), also gen. -που, etc. (Thgn., etc.), πολύπους, -ποδος (Arist.).
•DIAL Myc. po-ru-po-de.
•DER Diminutive πωλύπιον [n.] (Hp.).
•ETYM The word πώλυπος is a Mediterranean word of unknown origin. The form with ω, confirmed by the borrowing Lat. pōlypus, -i (since Plaut.), is clearly the oldest; it is the basis for the folk-etymological formations πουλυ- and πολυ- after πολύς and πούς (Fraenkel 1912: 164[1], with older literature; Specht KZ 59 (1932): 129). Note, however, that the inflexion with ποδ- is already attested in Mycenaean and in Homer. The word is not treated by Fur.

πῶμα 1 [n.] 'lid, cover' of a chest, pot, tube, etc. (Il., epic Ion., Arist., Hell.). ◀IE *peh$_2$- 'guard, protect'▶ •DER πωμ-άτιον [n.], diminutive (Sor.); -ατίας [m.] 'kind of snail' (Dsc.), and two denominatives: 1. πωμάζω [v.] 'to cover, close with a lid' (Arist., Hero, etc.), also with ἐπι-, περι-, etc., with ἐπιπωμασμός (Eust.) and the back-formation ἐπίπωμα 'lid' (Gal.), ἐπιπωματικός (sch.); 2. πωματίζω 'id.' (Arist., Thphr., etc.), mostly ἐπι-, περι-, ἀπο-, with ἐπιπωμάτισις (VI^p); the seemingly primary ἐπιπωμάννυμαι 'to be covered' (Hero) is derived from the latter.

•ETYM πῶμα is an old verbal noun from IE *poh$_2$-mn beside *poh$_2$-tro-m [n.], reflected in Skt. pā́tram 'case, barrel' (if related, this word was certainly influenced by *peh$_3$- 'to drink'), and in the Germanic group of Go. fodr 'sheath, cover', MoHG Futter 'lining' (of cloth). The primary verb is retained in Skt. pā́ti 'to guard, protect' < IE *peh$_2$-; see also ►ποιμήν.

πῶμα 2 'drink'. ⇒πίνω.

πωμάριον [n.] 'orchard' (pap. [III^p]). ◀LW Lat.▶
•DER πωμαρίτης 'merchant of fruits' (pap. [VI^p]); -ιτισσα (VI^p).
•ETYM Borrowed from Lat. pōmārium.

πωρέω •VAR πωρητύς. ⇒πῶρος, ταλαίπωρος.

πῶρος [m.] 'tuff' (Arist., Thphr., Hell. inscr., etc.), in Anatolia 'stone- or chalk-formation, concretion, stone in the bladder, kidney, etc.' (Hp., Arist., etc.). ◀PG?(V)▶ •VAR Also ποῦρος (inscr. Delphi), πόρος (Thphr. Lap. 7, Gal. 6, 57).
•COMP As a first member in e.g. πωρ-όμφαλον [n.] 'concretion in the navel' (Gal.).
•DER 1. Diminutive πωρ-ίον, -ίδιον [n.] 'callosity' (medic.); 2. adjectives πώρ-ινος 'of tuff' (Hdt., Ar., Hell. inscr., etc.), -εία λίθος 'tuff' (Str.), -ώδης 'π.-like' (Gal.); 3. verb πωρ-όομαι, -όω 'to petrify, harden, grow together in a concretion, grow hard' (Hp., Arist., Thphr., NT), also with δια-, ἐπι-, συν-, with (ἐπι-)πώρ-ωμα, -ωσις 'petrification, concretion' (Hp., Gal., NT); 4. πωρ-ίασις [f.] 'callus on the eyelid' (Gal.), as if from *πωρ-ιᾶν (Schwyzer: 732).
•ETYM Originally, πῶρος and derivatives indicated a kind of stone, and it was used as a construction term; later, however, it was used especially as a medical term. It has no etymology. According to Haupt 1912: 84f., it was borrowed from Assyr. pûlu 'shell-lime'. However, no connection seems possible with πωρεῖν· κηδεύειν, πενθεῖν 'to worry, mourn', πωρῆσαι· λυπῆσαι 'to be grieved' (H.), and πωρητύς [f.] 'pain' (Antim.). Cf. also ►ταλαίπωρος. Fur.: 328 connects *ψῶρος in ψωρίτης λίθος, a kind of marble (Cyran 46) and Hitt. purut- 'loam, chalk, mortar'. This may point to Pre-Greek origin.

πωρός ⇒ταλαίπωρος.

πῶς [interr. adv.] 'how?', πως [indef.] 'somehow' (Il.). ◀IE *k^{w}o- 'which?'▶ •VAR Ion. κῶς, κως (Hdt., etc.).
•ETYM The form πῶς is a frozen ablative from the pronominal stem πο-, Ion. κο- from IE *k^{w}o-; see ►πόθεν and ►ὡς 1.

πωτάομαι ⇒πέτομαι.

πῶυ ⇒ποιμήν.

πῶυξ [f.] name of an unknown bird, cf. πῶυξ· ποιὸς ὄρνις. ὁ Ἀριστοτέλης ἐν τῷ περὶ ζῴων (H.); attempts at an identification in Thompson 1895 s.v. φῶυξ. ◀PG(S,V)▶ •VAR φῶυξ (Arist.), πῶυγξ, plur. -υγγες (Ant. Lib., EM).

•ETYM In spite of the fact that the meaning is unknown, the word must be Pre-Greek; cf. especially the variation φ ~ π in the initial, the variation γ ~ γγ in the suffix, and the suffix -υγγ- itself.

P

ῥα •VAR Before vowel ῥ'. ⇒ἄρα.

ῥᾶ [adv.] 'easily' (Alcm., S. Fr. 1086, Ion. Trag.). ◄?►
•VAR Epic ῥῆα (written ῥεῖα), ῥέα (monosyllabic reading necessary or possible; does it stand for Aeol. ῥᾶ?), Ion. ῥέᾶ (Simon.), Aeol. βρᾶ (= ϝρᾶ, gramm.); ῥῆα (Alc.) must be a Homerism or a mistake.
•COMP As a first member in ῥᾴ-θυμος 'light-hearted, carefree' (Att.) from *ῥαΐ-θυμος, if not secondary for well-attested ῥά-θυμος (Wackernagel 1907: 26).
•DER Comparative: epic ῥηΐτερον, Ion. ῥήτερον (Thgn.), Dor. ῥᾴτερον (Pi.), also Ion. ῥήϊον, Att. ῥᾷον; ῥᾶσσον (gramm. in EM) analogical for θᾶσσον; superlative epic ῥηΐτατα, Ion. ῥήϊστα, Dor. ῥάϊστα (Theoc.), Att. ῥᾷστα. The adverb served as a basis for the adjectival forms ῥηΐτερος, ῥήϊστος, ῥᾴων, ῥᾷστος; from ῥῆα, ῥᾶ, the positive ῥη-ϊδίως, Att. ῥᾳδίως, Aeol. βρα-ϊδίως (Alc.) was derived, and from there in turn the adjective ῥηΐδιος, ῥᾴδιος (like μαψ-ιδίως, -ίδιος, etc.); hence ῥᾳδιέστερος, etc. Denominal from ῥήϊον, ῥᾷον are: ῥηΐζω, ῥαΐζω [v.] 'to recover' (IA), aor. -ίσαι; ῥαΐαν· ὑγείαν 'health' (H.). From ῥήϊστος, ῥᾷστος are derived: ῥηστώνη, ῥᾳστώνη [f.] 'recovery, leisure' (IA).
•ETYM Starting from epic ῥῆα and Aeol. βρᾶ, we may reconstruct PGr. wrāha* or wrāja*. The word is no doubt old and inherited, but a good etymology is lacking. A connection with the root *$\underset{\circ}{u}$reh₂- that has to be assumed for ἄπηυρα has been suggested, but this cannot be proven. Specht KZ 59 (1932): 93ff. unconvincingly connected ►ἀραιός 'thin'.

ῥᾶ a plant name. ⇒ῥῆον.

ῥαβάττειν [v.] · ἄνω καὶ κάτω βαδίζειν· τινές δὲ τύπτειν καὶ ψόφον ποιεῖν [καὶ φράσειν] τοῖς ποσί, καὶ ῥάσσειν 'to walk upwards and downwards; to beat and make noise with [and to be about to indicate with] the feet, and to strike' (H.). ◄PG(V)►
•VAR In Photius 479, 18: σοβεῖν καὶ τρέχειν καὶ συντόνως ποδοκτυπεῖν 'to drive away, run, strike the earth vigorously with the feet'.
•ETYM Has been compared with ἀρράβακα· ὀρχηστήν· ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀρραβάσσειν ὅ ἐστι ὀρχεῖσθαι. οἱ δὲ τὸν βλάσφημον 'dancer, after ἀ., which means to dance; others: slanderer' (H.). Fur.: 142 connects ►ἄραβος and ἀροπῆσαι· πατῆσαι. Κρῆτες, and concludes that the word is Pre-Greek.

ῥάβδος [f.] 'twig, rod, staff, magic wand; line, stripe, groove' (Il.). ◄PG(V)►

•COMP Compounds like ῥαβδ-οῦχος [m.] 'staff-bearer', name of an official (Ar., Th., Hell.), πολύ-ρραβδος 'having many stripes' (Arist.).
•DER 1. Diminutive ῥαβδ-ίον [n.] (Arist., Thphr.); 2. ῥαβδ-ωτός 'having rods, streaks, grooves' (X., Arist.), -ωμα (H.) as an explanation of σκυτάλια; -ωσις [f.] 'cannelure' (Att. inscr. late V[a]); 3. Denominatives: a) ῥαβδ-ίζω [v.] 'to beat with a rod, thresh' (com., Thphr.), to which -ισμός [m.] 'treshing', -ιστήρ [m.] 'thresher' (pap.); b) -εύομαι [v.] 'to fish with a rod' (Arist.); c) -όομαι [v.] 'to have stripes' (Lyd.).
•ETYM A suffixal element -δο- is only found in a few nouns indicating sounds (e.g. κέλαδος) and in isolated, etymologically unclear words (cf. ►κλάδος, which is close in meaning). Analyzed as ῥάβ-δος, it has been compared with Lith. vìrbas 'twig, rod' and Ru. vérba (OCS vrьba) 'willow' (zero grade IE urb-*), and Lat. verbera [pl.] '(rods for) punishment', verbēnae [pl.] 'twigs of the laurel, etc.', with full grade. However, in view of the variants ►ῥάμνος and ►ῥαπίς, we can be certain that the word is Pre-Greek (the word is not treated by Fur.).

ῥαγή [f.] 'tore, chink, gap, cleft' (Hp.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Also with δια-; more usual ῥαγ-άς, -άδος [f.] 'id.' (Hell.).
•DER Diminutive ῥαγ-άδιον [n.] (Celsus); further ῥάγ-δην 'torrential, fierce, vehement' [adv.] (Plu.), ῥαγδ-αῖος 'id.' (com., Arist.), -αιότης [f.] (Poll.); for the meaning cf. ῥαγά (ῥάγα cod.)· ἀκμή, βία, ὁρμή 'point or prime, force, impulse' (H.) (see also Erot. on ῥαγή).
•ETYM The words ῥαγή, etc. are sometimes seen as derivatives of ῥαγῆναι, ►ῥήγνυμι, but ῥαγῆναι is analogical. The word may instead be Pre-Greek. Note also ῥαγδ-αιος with the problematic cluster -γδ-, which can hardly be taken from ῥάγδην.

ῥάδαμνος [m.] 'branch, twig, shoot' (LXX, Suid., H.). ◁PG(S,V)▷ •VAR Also ῥόδαμνος (H.) and ῥάδαμον· καυλόν, βλαστόν 'stalk, shoot' (conj. Nic. Al. 92), ῥαδαμεῖ· βλαστάνει 'sprouts' (H.).
•DER ῥαδαμνώδης (sch.).
•ETYM The ending of ῥάδαμνος can be compared with θάμνος and ῥάμνος, as well as σφένδαμνος, στάμνος, etc. The Aeol. form ►ὀρόδαμνος points to a pre-form ϝρόδ-. In view of all alternations, the word is no doubt Pre-Greek.

ῥαδινάκη Persian name for a foul-smelling oil found in Arderikka, east of Susa (Hdt. 6, 119). ◁LW Iran.▷ •ETYM Probably a pre-Iranian loanword.

ῥαδινός [adj.] 'taper, bendable, slender' (epic since Ψ 583). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR βράδινος (Sapph.); ῥοδανός epithet of δονακεύς (Σ 576; v.ll. ῥαδινός, ῥαδαλός); ῥοδάν-η [f.] 'weft thread' (Batr.), to which -ίζω [v.] (sch.), -ιστήριον (gloss.); also ῥαδανός, -η, -ίζω (Il.), -ᾶται· πλανᾶται 'wanders, strays' (H.), βραδανίζει· ῥιπίζει, τινάσσει 'bursts, shakes' (H.).
•ETYM The formation is like in πυκινός, but the basis is unknown. Some connect ῥαδινός with the semantically unclear ►περιρρηδής or with ►ῥάδαμνος; Lobeck 1837: 156 also connects ῥαδές· τὸ ἀμφοτέρως ἐγκεκλιμένον 'bent to both sides' (H.). Further connected is perhaps also the Arc. PN ϝράδων, but ῥαδανῶροι· οἱ τῶν λαχάνων κηπουροί 'watchers of vegetable gardens' (H.) remains unclear (rejected by Bechtel 1921, 2: 420).
Other forms that have been hesitantly adduced are Skt. ávradanta [3pl.ipf.] 'loosened, became mellow' (hap. leg. RV 2, 24, 3; see LIV[2] s.v. ured-*), Go. wraton 'πορεύεσθαι, διοδεύειν', ON rata 'id.'; also, Lith. randù, ràsti 'find' (see Fraenkel 1955 s.v.). However, all these proposals remain hypothetical (details in Bechtel 1914 s.v. περιρρηδής). The variation urad- / urod-* shows that ῥαδινός is a Pre-Greek word.

ῥᾶδιξ, -ῖκος [m.] 'branch, twig' (Nic.), 'palm leaf' (D. S.). ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM A formal match is found between ῥάδιξ and Lat. rādīx 'root', if they reflect wrād-*. Lat. rāmus 'branch, twig', which may go back to wrād-mo-* or wrā-mo-*, is semantically closer. Go. waurts, etc. can probably be compared as well. Cf. also on ►ῥάδαμνος, where the short α certainly does not reflect a PIE urh₂d-, since this would have yielded long ᾱ instead. The pre-form wrad- / wrād-, suggested by these forms, is probably non-Indo-European. Cf. also ►ῥίζα.

ῥᾴδιος ⇒ῥᾶ.

ῥάζω [v.] 'to growl, grouch', originally of a dog; secondarily also of men (Cratin. 25). ◁ONOM▷ •ETYM Perhaps of onomatopoeic origin; cf. ►ἀράζω and ►ῥύζω. See also ►ῥώχω.

ῥάθαγος ⇒ῥαθαπυγίζω.

ῥαθάμιγξ, -ιγγος [f.], mostly [pl.] 'drop' (Λ 536 = Υ 501, Hes., Pi.); also 'dust particle' (κονίης ῥ. Ψ 502), 'spot' (Opp.). ◁PG(S)▷ •DER ῥαθαμίζω [v.] 'to besprinkle' (Opp., Nonn.; like σάλπιγξ to -πίζω). Variants are ῥαθμίζεσθαι· ῥαίνεσθαι 'to be besprinkled' (H.); ῥαθαίνεται· ῥαίνεται, βρέχεται 'is besprinkled, gets wet' (H.); ῥαθασσόμενοι· ῥαινόμενοι (H., Phot.).
•ETYM ῥαθάμιγξ has the same suffix -ιγξ as λάϊγγες, στροφάλιγξ, ►πύλιγγες, etc. (see Chantraine 1933: 398ff.), but it cannot be analyzed any further. We find a variant *ῥαθμός in ῥαθμίζεσθαι (probably by syncope of α, as is often found in Pre-Greek words). Frisk suggests an analogical proportion *ῥαθμός : ►ῥαίνω to βαθμός : βαίνω, which leads him to assume that contaminations or extensions led to the creation of ῥαθαίνω (to ῥαίνω) and ῥαθάσσω (to σταλάσσω). This is far-fetched. Although the word is not treated by Fur., ῥαθάμιγξ is clearly Pre-Greek, if only because of the suffix.

ῥαθαπυγίζω [v.] 'to kick someone's buttocks' (Ar. Eq. 796). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR Also ῥοθοπυγίζω, to which -ισμός (Suid., Thom. Mag.).
•ETYM Possibly based on πυγή 'bottom', apparently with an onomatopoeic first element that is also seen in ῥάθαγος· τάραχος 'agitation' (H., sch.). Yet the precise morphological relation with πυγή remains to be clarified. Haplology from *ῥαθα[γο]-πυγίζω (Ehrlich 1910: 7) has been assumed, but this seems unlikely. The o-vocalism in ῥοθο-πυγίζω can hardly be secondary after ῥόθος 'roar'; it is much more likely that the variation α ~ ο is caused by the Pre-Greek origin of the word.

ῥᾴθυμος ⇒ῥᾶ.

ῥαιβίας [?] · ἀζήμιος δῆμος 'deme that has impunity' (H.). ◂?▸
•VAR ῥαμβάς· ὁ δήμιος 'public executioner' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown.

ῥαιβός [adj.] 'crooked, bent inward', especially of legs (Arist., Nic.). ◂PG(V)▸ •COMP As a first member in ῥαιβο-ειδής 'of crooked shape' (Hp.).
•DER ῥαιβ-ηδόν 'in bendings' (Euph.), -όω [v.] 'to bend' (Lyc., Gal.), -ότης [f.] 'bendedness' (Eust.).
•ETYM The words in -βός often designate a physical defect, e.g. κολοβός, κλαμβός, σκαμβός, ὑβός. The best comparison until now was with the Germanic group of Go. wraiqs 'σκολιός', which led to IE uroig^{w}o- or uroig-uo-. However, the Greek α-vocalism remains difficult, and neither ► κλαμβός, etc. above, nor ► λαιός, ► σκαιός (with old uo-suffix) offer a solution for it. Since the vocalism can only be explained if we assume ureh$_2$ig-u-, whereas the Germanic suggests uroig-u-, the word is probably non-Indo-European. It is probably Pre-Greek; see on ► ῥάμφος. Cf. also ► ῥοικός and ► ῥυβός.

ῥαίνω [v.] 'to besprinkle, spray, strew' (Il.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aor. ῥῆναι (Hp.), ῥᾶναι (Att., Hell.), pass. ῥανθῆναι (Pi., etc.), ipv.2pl. ῥάσσατε (υ 150), ptc. περι-ρασάμενοι (Pergamon II^a) after κεδάσσαι, κεράσ(σ)αι, etc.(?), perf. act. δι-έρραγκα (LXX), med.3pl. ἐρράδαται (υ 354), plpf. -δατ(ο) (M 431), with analogical -δ- acc. to Schwyzer: 672, but see below; ἔρραμμαι (Hell. and late), -ασμαι (sch.).
•COMP Often with prefix, especially περι-.
•DER 1. ῥανίς, -ίδος [f.] 'drop' (trag., Ar., Arist.) with ῥανίζω = ῥαίνω (Poll.); 2. ῥαντός 'besprinkled, spotted' (Hp.) with ῥαντίζω (also with περι-, etc.) = ῥαίνω (LXX, Ep. Hebr., etc.); (περι-)ῥαντ-ισμός [m.] (LXX, NT), -ισμα [n.] (Vett. Val.); 3. ῥαντήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'sprinkler' (Nic.), to which (περι-, ἀπο-)ῥαντήριον [n.] 'vessel with sprinkling water' (IA); 4. (περι-)ῥάντης [m.] 'sprinkler' (pap.); 5. (περί-)ῥανσις [f.] 'sprinkling' (Pl., pap.); 6. ἀπό-ρ(ρ)ανθρον = ἀπορραντήριον (Anaphe, Priene); 7. ῥάσμα [n.] 'sprinkling, spray' (Hell.).
•ETYM The stem pattern of ῥαίνω is based on a stem ῥαν- which, if inherited, represents the zero grade of IE u̯ren- or sren-. Previous etymological attempts have been: Solmsen KZ 37 (1904): 59off. (connecting a Slavic verb 'to let fall, shed', in Ru. ronít', Cz. roniti, Pol. ronić, etc., which may - but need not - go back to u̯ron-); Szemerényi KZ 73 (1956): 74 (connecting Hitt. ḫurnāi- 'to besprinkle', but this has to be read as ḫarnāi-; see Kloekhorst 2008); connection with ► ῥαθάμιγξ (improbable).
None of these etymological attempts accounts for the variation ν and δ (in the perfect), which is a well-known Pre-Greek phenomenon (Kuiper 1956: 216). This proves that the verb is Pre-Greek.

ῥαίω [v.] 'to smash, break to pieces, shatter' (Il., epic). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. ῥαῖσαι, pass. ῥαισθῆναι, fut. ῥαίσω.
•DIAL Myc. o-pi-ra$_3$-te-re /opi-raistēres/ (?), see Baumbach Minos 11 (1970): 388-90.
•COMP Also with δια-, ἀπο-.

•DER ῥαιστήρ, -ῆρος 'hammer', both [f.] (Σ 477; after σφῦρα?) and [m.] (AP 6, 117). Elsewhere the gender is unknown (A. Pr. 56, Call. Dian. 59, etc.); ῥαιστήριος 'shattering, destroying' (A. R., Opp.); ῥαίστωρ· κραντήρ 'boar's tusk' (H.). Several compounds in -της, e.g. θυμο-ρραίσ-της 'life-destroying' (Il.), κυνο-ρραίσ-της 'dog louse' (ρ 300, Arist.).
•ETYM The form ῥαίω rhymes with παίω, πταίω (which are semantically close) and with κναίω, ψαίω. The -σ- in ῥαισθῆναι, etc. can be analogical. The etymology is unknown; it can hardly be a contamination of ῥήγνυμι and παίω.

ῥάκος [n.] 'rag, shred, wrinkles, remnants' (Od.). ◂?▸
•VAR Often plur. ῥάκεα, -η.
•COMP As a first member in ῥακό-δυτος, originally 'clothed in rags', 'shabby' (E. [lyr.]).
•DER Diminutive ῥάκιον, plur. -ια [n.] (Ar., etc.); 2. ῥακώματα [pl.] = ῥάκη (Ar.); 3. ἀπορ<ρ>ακίσματα (H.) to ῥάκη (: *ἀπο-ρρακίζειν); 3. adjective ῥάκ-ινος (Hell. inscr.), -όεις (AP), -ώδης (D. C., AP) 'tattered, wrinkled'; 4. uncertain (corrupt according to Debrunner IF 23 (1908-1909): 14) ῥακωλέον· ῥάκος 'rag' (H.), cf. ῥωγαλέος, etc.; 5. denominative ῥακ-όομαι [v.] 'to become ragged, wrinkled' (Hp., Plu.), to which -ωσις [f.] 'wrinkling, wrinkledness' (Sor.).
ῥάκεα, -η corresponds to Aeol. βράκ-εα (Sapph. 57), -η (Theoc. 28, 11), but in the sense of '(long) ladies' garments', cf. also βράκος· κάλαμος, ἱμάτιον πολυτελές 'expensive garment' (H.). Other formations are: βράκαλον· ῥόπαλον 'staff, rod', βράκετον· δρέπανον, κλαδευτήριον 'sickle, pruning knife' (H.), dissimilated from *-τρον; without dissimilation ῥάκετρον 'chopping-knife' (Poll.), v.l. ῥάχ- (after ῥάχις), with -ετρίζω [v.] 'to split, cut through' (Pl. Com.).
•ETYM The deviating meaning 'ladies' garments' casts doubt on the appurtenance of βράκεα, -ος. The other words can easily be connected with ῥάκος (i.e. from *ϝράκος), with βράκαλον formed after ῥόπαλον, σκύταλον; βράκετ(ρ)ον seems to be a primary instrument noun which, just like ῥάκος, presupposes a primary verb (for instance *ῥακεῖν).
Evident morphological cognates lack outside Greek. The traditional comparison with Skt. vr̥ścáti 'to hew, fell (trees), split', with yūpa-vrask-á- 'post-cutter' and the ptc. vr̥k-ṇá- 'hewn, felled' fails to give one too, since it is probably related to Skt. varj- 'to turn around, avert' < h$_2$uerg-.
IE uresk-, urosk-, which we may reconstruct, has a variant in the Slavic word for 'rumple' (cf. ῥάκος, also 'rumple'), e.g. CS vraska < u̯orsk-ā. ToA wraske 'disease' is phonologically and semantically far-fetched. For this IE uresk-, uersk-, one could reconstruct an older urek̑-sk- or uerk̑-sk-, which enables us to establish connections with u̯r̥k̑-, the pre-form of ῥάκος. A pre-form IE u̯r̥k̑- may also be found in the Indo-Iranian word for 'tree' (originally 'felled tree'), Skt. vr̥kṣá-, Av. varəša- [m.], IE u̯r̥k̑-s-o-, beside u̯r̥k̑-os- in ῥάκος (see Lidén in WP. 1, 286). Everything remains highly uncertain. The word could well be Pre-Greek.

ῥακτήριος •VAR ῥάκτρια. ⇒ῥάσσω.

ῥακτός ⇒ῥήγνυμι.

ῥαμβάς ⇒ῥαιβίας.

ῥάμνος [f.] 'briar, rhamnus' (Eup., Hell. and late). ◂PG?▸
•DER Ῥαμνοῦς, -οῦντος [m.] name of an Att. deme, with -ούσιος [adj.] (Att.).
•ETYM The form ῥάμνος may have developed from *ῥάβνος, and thus belong with ▸ῥάβδος and cognates; see s.v. with literature. It is quite possibly a Pre-Greek word. The nasal suffix may be the same as in θάμνος (or taken over from it). Cf. also ▸ῥαδινός and ▸ῥέμβομαι.

ῥάμφος [n.] '(hooked) bird beak' (com., Call., Plu.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Further ῥαμψόν· καμπύλον, βλαισόν 'crooked or bent, distorted'; ῥαμψὰ γόνατα· βλαισὰ γόνατα, τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ καὶ ῥαιβά 'curved knees' (H.).
•COMP λεπτό-ραμφος 'having a thin beak' (Paul. Aeg.).
•DER ῥαμφή [f.] 'crooked knife' (Plb., H.). From ῥάμφος are derived ῥάμφ-ιον [n.] diminutive (sch.), -ίς, -ίδος [f.] 'crooked clasp' (Hero), also = νεὼς εἶδος 'kind of ship' (H.) (cf. κορωνίς), -ιος = πελεκανός (Cyran.), -ώδης 'beak-like' (Philostr.), -ησταί· ἰχθῦς ποιοί 'kinds of fish' (H.) (Strömberg 1943: 43), -άζομαι 'to poke with the beak' (H., Phot.).
•ETYM Next to ῥάμφος, ῥαμφή (cf. e.g. γράφος : γραφή), we find ῥέμφος· τό στόμα, ἢ ῥίς 'mouth or nose' (H.); this cannot be interpreted as a regular full grade, but is a variant (see below). Initial ῥαμφ- has been compared with καμπ-, γναμπ-, κραμβ-, etc. The words ▸ῥέμβομαι 'to turn round, roam' and ῥόμβος '(magic) wheel' are phonetically comparable and semantically similar. Cf. further ▸ῥάβδος, ▸ῥέμβομαι, and also ▸ῥομφαία.
Germanic words have been further compared: MLG wrimpen 'to turn up one's nose', wramp-achtich 'curled, crooked' (i.e. IE *uremb(ʰ)-; however, these comparisons are based on virtually nothing. The variation between β and ψ rather points to Pre-Greek origin, as does the α-vocalism. Moreover, ▸ῥαιβός is also clearly a variant (see Fur. 286, 335, 338). This means that ῥάμφος has prenasalization, beside ῥαιβός with the frequent variation α/ αι, where ι is from a following palatalized consonant.

ῥανίς •VAR ῥαντήρ. ⇒ῥαίνω.

ῥάξ, ῥᾱγός [f.] 'winegrape, -berry', secondarily also 'berry' in general, metaph. 'kind of spider', plur. 'fingertips' (Att., Hell. and late). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR LXX also [m.]. ῥώξ, ῥωγός (Archil., LXX, Nic.).
•COMP As a first member in ῥαγο-ειδής 'grape-like' (medic.).
•DER ῥαγ-ίον [n.] diminutive (Philum., etc.), -ικός 'belonging to the grape', -ώδης 'grape-like' (Thphr.), -ίζω 'to pick grapes' (Theoc.).
•ETYM The form ῥάξ is reminiscent of ῥάματα (this may come from *ῥάγμ-)· βοστρύχια, σταφυλίς. Μακεδόνες 'bunch of grapes (Maced.)' (H.), as well as of Lat. racēmus 'stalk of a cluster of grapes, grapes'. The word is further isolated; it is probably a Mediterranean word (cf. Schwyzer: 425 with literature, also 310). The IE etymologies that have been proposed should all be rejected (WH s.v.; also incorrectly, Carnoy REGr. 69 (1956): 286 and Carnoy Ant. class. 27 (1958): 326). It is most probable that ῥάξ is of Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 126); ῥώξ would then be a Pre-

Greek variant. Demiraj 1997: 196 adduces Alb. rrush 'resin', which is identical to Rrush, the old name of Ragusa; if related, this would rather suggest a substrate origin of the word.

ῥαπίζω, -ομαι [v.] 'to beat with a stick, a rod, by hand', pass. 'to be beaten' (IA). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Aor. pass. ῥαπισθῆναι, act. ῥαπίσαι, perf. ptc. pass. ῥεραπισμένα.
•COMP Rarely with prefix, e.g. ἐπι- (also 'to reproach').
•DER ῥάπ-ισμα [n.] 'stroke, slap in the face, box on the ears' (Antiph., NT, Luc.), -ισμός [m.] 'id.' (Corn., Sor.); ἐπιρράπ-ιξις [f.] 'reproach' (Ion. Hist.), -ισμός 'id.' (Plb.). Besides, as a second member, -ραπις in χρυσό-ρραπις, voc. -ι 'with a golden rod', epithet of Hermes (Od., h. Merc., Pi.), ἐΰ-ρραπις (Ἑρμῆς) 'with a beautiful rod' (Nonn.); ῥαπίς as simplex = ῥάβδος only H., Phot.
•ETYM As the simplex ῥαπίς may have been extracted from χρυσό-ρραπις, where -ις can be explained as a compound suffix (cf. ἄν-αλκ-ις, ἵππ-ουρ-ις), the direct basis of ῥαπίζω is uncertain. It may have been formed from a noun (*ῥάψ, *ῥαπ-ή, vel sim.), but it can also be a transformation of a primary verb (cf. the examples in Schwyzer: 735f.). Formally, ῥαπίζω could be a zero grade formation of ῥέπω, ῥόπαλον; it would have indicated, if deverbative, a sweeping movement (of a rod, the hand, etc.). See further ▸ῥέπω; cf. ▸ῥώψ 1, ▸ῥάβδος, ▸ῥάμνος, and also ▸ῥάπτω. Alternatively, a Pre-Greek origin is a serious option for this etymon, as well.

ῥαπίς kind of shoe. ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM The variation with ἀρπίς (Fur. 392) points to Pre-Greek origin. See ▸ἀρπίς.

ῥάπτω [v.] 'to sew (together), stitch, instigate' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Aor. ῥάψαι (Il.), them. aor. ἔρραφον (Nonn.), pass. ῥαφῆναι, fut. ῥάψω, perf. pass. ἔρραμμαι (IA), plpf. act. ἐρραφήκει (X. Eph.).
•DIAL Myc. ra-pte(-re) may stand for *ῥαπτήρ [m.] (see Morpurgo Davies 1963 s.v. with literature; differently Heubeck IF 64 (1958-1959): 119ff.); also Myc. e-ra-pe-me-na /(ʰ)e-ʰrapmena/ 'stitched'. Myc. wa-ra-pi-si-ro, which was thought to stand for ϝράψιλος, can no longer be connected, since erapemena shows that the verb had no initial ϝ-.
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. συν-, κατα-, ἐν-.
•DER 1. Action nouns: ῥαφή (also συν-, κατα-, etc.) [f.] 'hem, seam' (χ 186), here and below, -φ- is analogical; ῥάμμα [n.] 'id.' (Pi., IA); 2. Agent nouns: ῥαφεύς [m.] 'sewer, stitcher, instigator' (A., Poll.), acc. to Boßhardt 1942: 40 from ῥαφή; ῥάπτης [m.] 'stitcher' with -τικός (late), fem. ῥάπτρια (Eust.), with περι- [m.] of a priestess in Piraeus (inscr.); ῥαπτήρ 'id.', see above on Myc.; δικο-ρράφ-ος [m.] 'hack lawyer' (D. Chr. et al.), with -ρραφέω [v.] 'to instigate a lawsuit' (Ar.), -ρραφία (Man.); 3. instrument nouns ῥαφίς, -ίδος [f.] 'sewing needle' (Hp., Archipp., Hell.), ῥαφιδ-εύς [m.], -εια [f.] 'stitcher', -ευτής [m.] 'id.', -ευτός (LXX), -ᾶς [m.] 'id.' (pap. IVᵖ); cf. Boßhardt 1942: 40; ῥαφίς also fish name = βελόνη (Arist., Opp.), see Strömberg 1943: 37; beside it ῥαπίς as a fish name (Epich 51 v.l.), = κρηπίς (H., EM), see on ▸ἀρπίς; 4. verbal adj. ῥαπτός 'stitched, sewn together' (ω 228f.); 5. Ῥαψώ [f.] name of a goddess or nymph (Phaleron IVᵃ). On ▸ῥαψῳδός, see s.v.

•ETYM Since Myc. e-ra-pe-me-na shows that ῥάπτω does not go back to a form with initial ϝ-, the older etymology with Baltic (Lith. verpti, 1sg. verpiù 'to spin', Lith. vefpti (vìrpti), virpěti 'to tremble, shudder, vibrate', Latv. virpêt 'to spin with a spindle; shudder', vèrpt 'to spin, turn round about') must be abandoned. Cf. further ►ῥέπω, ►ῥέμβομαι.

ῥάπυς •VAR ῥάφυς. ⇒ῥάφανος.

ῥᾱ́σσω [v.] 'to beat, smash, thrust, stamp' (also of dancers), intr. 'to strike, dash' (Hell.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Att. ῥάττω, Ion. ῥήσσω (epic since Σ 571), with ἐπι- (Ω 454, 456, h.Ap. 516, also LXX, NT), fut. ῥάξω, aor. ῥᾶξαι (Att., Hell.), ῥαχθῆναι (LXX).
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-, συν-, κατα-.
•DER 1. σύρ-, πρόσ-ραξις [f.] 'crash, impact' (Arist., pap.), ἀπό- name of a ball game (Poll., Eust.); 2. κατα-ρράκτης [adj.] 'rushing down, precipitous' (S., Str.), [m.] 'waterfall' (D. S., Str.), 'portcullis, boarding bridge' (LXX, App., etc.), name of a bird that sweeps down (Ar., Arist.); Κατα-ρρήκτης [m.], name of a river in Phrygia (Hdt.); κατα-ρρακτήρ 'rushing down' (Lyc.), of a bird; 3. ῥακτήριον· ὄρχησίς τις 'kind of dance', -τήρια· τύμπανα 'kettledrums' (H.), ῥακτήριος 'suitable for beating' vel sim., also 'clamorous'? (S. Fr. 802 and 699); ῥάκτριαι [f.pl.] (-ια [n.pl.]?) 'poles for beating olive trees' (Poll., H., Phot.). On ῥάγ-δην, -δαῖος, see ►ῥαγή; on ►ῥαχία s.v.
•ETYM The form ῥάσσω was rare, and in Koine it became confused with ῥήγνυμι; it has no certain etymology. Since a consonant must have been lost before the ῥ-, a pre-form PGr. *ϝρᾱ́χ-i̯ω (cf. ῥαχ-ία) can perhaps be identified with a Slavic verb for 'beat' (also with loss of *u̯-), i.e. Ru. razít', Cz. raziti, with Cz. ráz 'stroke, stamp', Ru. raz 'turn' < *$ureh_2ǵ^h$-. The Slav. words, however, have also been connected with Ru. rézat' 'to cut, slaughter', OCS rězati 'κόπτειν', etc., which are related to ῥήγνυμι (see Vasmer 1953 s.v. raz II and Fraenkel 1955 s.v. rěžti 1). The semantically attractive connection with ►ἀράσσω (Bechtel 1914 s.v. ῥήσσω) would require PGr. *$warak^h$-je/o- (with different development of *CRHC, perhaps conditioned by the accent?), but for ►ἀράσσω, there is no indication for ϝ-. Cf. ►ῥάχις.

ῥᾳστώνη ⇒ῥᾶ.

*ῥατάνη [f.] 'stirring spoon, scoop', only in (Dor.) ῥατάναν· τορύνην 'stirrer, ladle' and βρατάναν· τορύνην.Ἠλεῖοι (H.). ⊲PG?, IE? uert- 'turn'⊳ •ETYM Instrument name in -άνη like πατ-, δρεπ-, οὐρ-άνη, etc., either from a zero grade verb (e.g. aor. *ϝρατ-εῖν) or from a noun (e.g. *ϝρατ-η). An extended verb form is perhaps found in βρατάνει· ῥαΐζει ἀπὸ νόσου. Ἠλεῖοι 'to recover (El.)' (H.), originally 'gets well again'; cf. e.g. βλαστάνω from βλαστ-εῖν, αἰσθάνομαι from αἰσθέσθαι. The word ►ἄρρατος is formed from a noun, like ἄμαχος from μάχη, etc. Traditionally, this etymon was connected to Skt. vártate, Lat. vertō 'to turn (intr.)', etc. (cf. Pok. 1156ff.), and ῥοταρία (-άρια?)· τορύνιον (H.) was explained as having Aeol. ρο for ρα (Bechtel 1921, 2: 864). However, the variants βρατ- ~ βροτ- and the suffix -αν- may also point to Pre-Greek origin.

ῥάφανος [f.] 'cabbage, Brassica cretica' (Att., etc.), 'radish, Raphanus sativus' (Arist., pap.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR Also -άνη (Batr. v.l.), etc. Cf. ῥάφυς, ῥάπυς [f.] 'turnip', ῥέφανος (Hp. Mul. 2, 115).
•DER 1. ῥαφανίς, -ῖδος [f.] 'radish' (com., etc.) with -ίδιον [n.] 'id.' (Pl. Com.), -ιδώδης 'like a radish' (Thphr.), -ιδόομαι [v.] 'to be treated with radish' (Ar.); 2. ῥαφάν-ιον [n.] 'radish' (pap.), also ῥαπάνιον; 3. -ινος 'of radish' (pap., Dsc., etc.), -ῖτις [f.] 'kind of iris' (Plin.), see Redard 1949: 76; 4. -ηδόν [adv.] 'in a radish-like way' (medic.).
Besides, ῥάφυς, ῥάπυς [f.] 'turnip' (Ath. 9, 369b, 371 c). Uncertain is the appurtenance of ῥάφας ([acc.pl.] acc. to H. s.v. ῥαφανίς, with Tryphon Dor.), probably miswritten for ῥαφάνους or ῥαφ<άν>ας; cf. Phot. ῥάφανον· τὴν ῥαφανῖδα. Ἐπίχαρμος (Fr. 204; improbable).
•ETYM With ῥάφανος, compare πύανος, λάχανον, πήγανον and other plant names; ῥάφυς and ῥάπυς are reminiscent of σίκυς, κάχρυς, στάχυς, etc.
Since the word is widespread only in Europe, and since it has variant forms, it cannot be an inherited word from PIE, but must have been borrowed instead, or otherwise belong to a substrate: cf. Lat. rāpum [n.], -a [f.], OHG ruoba [f.], Lith. rópė [f.], which all point to a pre-form rāp-;* beside these, we find OHG raba, CS rěpa, Ru. répa [f.], which point to rēp-* (cf. Machek Ling. Posn. 2 (1950): 158ff.). The Greek words, in turn, require rap-*, or rap^h-, respectively: ῥάπυς, ῥάφυς, ῥάφανος. The transformation of the old word for 'turnip' to black radish and cabbage would be due to the decline of the cultivation of the turnip in Greece; for 'turnip', a new word γογγυλίς then came into use.
Since the variation π ~ φ and the suffix -αν- are evidently Pre-Greek features, the word may originally be of Pre-Greek stock; thence teh European cognates cited above were borrowed.

ῥάφοι [m.] · ὄρνεις τινές 'birds' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳ •ETYM The etymology is unknown. Probably Pre-Greek.

ῥαχία [f.] 'breakers of the sea, high tide, spot in the surf, rocky beach' (IA); Hell. also 'bustle, clamor of a mob'. ⊲GR⊳ •VAR Ion. ῥηχίη.
•DER ῥαχι-ώδης 'full of breakers' (Str.).
•ETYM Related to ►ῥᾱ́σσω, ῥάττω, and ῥήσσω 'to beat, bump, etc.' (s.v. with further literature), i.e. either as an action noun directly from the verb (with -ία from the yod-present *ϝρᾱ́χ-i̯ω? See Scheller 1951: 39f.), or as an original abstract or a collective formation (οἰκ-ία, ἀντλ-ία, etc.) from *ῥᾶχος 'stroke, bump'.

ῥάχις, -ιος [f., m.] 'spine, back', often metaphorically 'ridge, etc.' (I 208). ⊲PG⊳ •VAR Att. -εως.
•DER 1. ῥαχ-ίτης [m.] 'belonging to the spine' (Arist., medic.), ἐπιρραχ-ίτιδες ἀρτηρίαι (Hippiatr.), Redard 1949: 101f.; 2. ῥαχι-αῖος 'id.' (medic.); 3. ῥαχ-ίζω [v.] 'to crack, chop up (the spine)' (trag.), also 'to show off, boast' (Din., H.), also with δια-, κατα-; thence -ιστής [m.] 'splitter' (pap.), 'showoff, boaster' (Theopomp. Com.), -ιστήρ· ψεύστης, ἀλαζών 'liar or cheat, vagrant' (H.).

With transformation of the stem: 4. ῥάχ-ετρον = ῥάχις (H.), also designation of a certain part of it (Poll., Phot.), perhaps after ἄγκιστρον, δέρτρον, ἦτρον (cf. Fraenkel Glotta 4 (1913): 43, Schwyzer: 532), -ετρίζω = ῥαχίζω (Poll.); besides, we find ῥάκ-ετρον, etc. (see ►ῥάκος?); 5. ῥαχάς· χωρίον σύνδενδρον καὶ μετέωρον 'thickly-wooded place on high ground' (H., Phot.), after δειράς, σπιλάς, etc., with ῥαχάδην· ἐπὶ τῆς ῥάχεως 'on the spine' (H.); 6. gen.sg. τοῦ ῥαχα, from ῥαχας 'id.?' (Halaesa; Roman times).
Besides, ῥαχός (also ῥᾶχος; codd. also ῥάχος, probably after ῥάχις), Ion. ῥηχός [f.] 'briar, thorn hedge, (thorny) sprig' (Hdt., S., X., Thphr.), εὔ-ρρηχος, ῥηχώδης 'thorny' (Nic.); denominative ῥαχῶσαι [v.] 'to cover with sprigs' (Att. [307-6^a]). For the meaning 'briar, spine, back', cf. e.g. ἄκανθα, Lat. spina, etc. Unclear is ῥάχνος [n.] (pap. IV-VI^p), 'cloak' vel sim.?
•ETYM The word ῥάχις was compared with Lith. ražis 'stubble' (beside more usual rãžas 'stubble, [fork]tooth, barren twig'), from a preform uraǵ^h-i-*; the initial u̯- is confirmed in Greek by ὀρήχου (where ὀ- stands for ϝ-)· τῆς αἱμασιᾶς 'wall' (H.). A full or lengthened grade urāǵ^h-* was seen in ῥᾶχός, ῥηχός (e.g. Pok. 1180). However, since ϝρᾰχ-/ϝρᾱχ- cannot be derived from an IE form (the ablaut in the above reconstructions being impossible), it may instead be Pre-Greek.

ῥαψῳδός [m.] 'rhapsodist, performer of epic (Homeric) poems' (Hdt., S., Pl.). ◁GR▷ •DER ῥαψῳδ-ικός 'belonging to the rhapsodist', -έω [v.] 'to recite epic poems', -ία [f.] 'reciting epic poems, epic poems' (Att., etc.).
•ETYM The word ῥαψῳδός is a verbal governing compound of ῥάψαι ᾠδήν (ἀοιδήν), thus originally 'who sews a poem together', referring to the uninterrupted sequence of epic verses as opposed to the strophic compositions of lyrics; cf. Hes. Fr. 265 ῥάψαντες ἀοιδήν, Pi. N. 2, 2 Ὁμηρίδαι ῥαπτῶν ἐπέων ... ἀοιδοί (see Patzer Herm. 80 (1952): 314ff.; Sealey REGr. 70 (1957): 312ff.).

ῥέγκω [v.] 'to snore, snort' (A., E., com., Arist. v.l.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR ῥέγχω (Hp., Arist., Herod., Hell. and late); note the variants ῥεγχ-, ῥοχμ-, and ῥωχμ-.
•COMP Rarely with ἀπο-, ὑπο-, παρα-.
•DER ῥέγκ-ος (also -χ-) [n.] 'snore' with -ώδης 'snore-like', ῥέγξις [f.] 'id.' (Hp.); ῥογκιῆν· ῥέγκειν. Ἐπίχαρμος (H.) (after the verbs of disease in -ιάω); ῥογχάζειν (H.) as an explanation of ῥυγχιάζειν, whence ῥογχ-ασμός = ῥέγχος (Gal.), -αστής = nasator (gloss.); ῥογχ-αλίζω 'to snore' (gloss.), after γαργαλίζω, etc.; also ῥόγχος (Cael. Aur.), ῥωχμός = ῥέγχος (Erot.); ῥωγμός, ῥοχμός, ῥογμός 'to hiss' (late medic.); ῥώχω 'to hiss, chatter one's teeth' (Sor., H.).
•ETYM The etymon is clearly onomatopoeic; cf. ►ῥύγχος. Although the variation is certainly due in part to the onomatopoeic character of the word, many of the alternations would also fit a Pre-Greek origin. The Celtic forms compared in Frisk (OIr. srennim 'to snort', MIr. sréimm 'snoring') may derive from sreg^h-n-*.

ῥέζω 1 [v.] 'to act, perform', especially of a sacrifice, 'to sacrifice' (Il., epic). ◁IE uerǵ-* 'work'▷ •VAR Fut. ῥέξω, aor. ῥέξαι, pass. ῥεχθῆναι.

•DIAL Myc. wo-ze [3sg.pres.] /worzei/, seeAura Jorro 1985-1993(2): 451.
•COMP Rarely with ἐπι-, κατα-, etc.
•DER Verbal adjective ἄ-ρεκ-τος 'undone' (T 150, Simon.), agent noun ῥεκτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'doer' (Hes., Man.), -τήριος 'effective' (Ion Hist.), [f.] -τειρα (Man.); ῥέκτης [m.] 'id.' (Plu., Aret.), -τικός 'capable of sth.' (Porph.), also ῥέκτας 'sacrificer' (Tauromenion; Rom. times); παρρέκτης· πάντα πράττων ἐπὶ κακῷ 'doing all for mischief' (H.); cf. Fraenkel 1910: 150 and 175; on ῥέζω with derivatives, see Kretschmer Glotta 18 (1929): 85f.
•ETYM Next to (ϝ)έργον with full grade, IE had a zero grade yod-present urǵ-ie-ti* (Av. vərəziiāmahī, etc.), of which the Greek representative *ϝράζω (= Myc. wo-ze) was replaced by the full grade ἔρδω < *ϝέργ-ι̯ω (after ϝέργον). This form was substituted by the secondary full grade ϝρεγ-, with a different position of the liquid, at first in the aor. and fut. ῥέξαι, ῥέξω, then also in the pres. ῥέζω, the verbal adj. ἄ-ρ(ρ)εκτος, etc. (cf. Schwyzer: 716[2] with literature). On traces of the same full grade in Albanian and Celtic, cf. Pok. 1168 with literature (cf. also Bader 1965: 1ff.; on ἔρδω and ῥέζω, Hamp MSS 45 (1985): 106-109). See further ►ἔρδω and ►ἔργον.

ῥέζω 2 [v.] 'to color, βάπτειν' (Epich. 107, Phot., EM). ◁IE sreg-* 'paint'.▷ •VAR Aor. ῥέξαι.
•DER ῥέγος (ἁλιπόρφυρον, Anacr.), more usual ῥῆγος [n.] 'blanket, carpet' (Hom.) = τὸ βαπτὸν στρῶμα (Et. Orion.), τό πορφυροῦν περιβόλαιον (EM); ῥέγματα (ποικίλα, Ibyc.); χρυσοραγές· χρυσοβαφές 'gold-embroidered' (H.); agent noun = 'βαφεύς, colorer': ῥεγεύς (EM v.l. beside ῥαγ-, ῥηγ-), ῥηγεύς (sch., H.), ῥογεύς (inscr. Sparta, H.); see Boßhardt 1942: 83.
•ETYM This etymon can hardly be separated from Skt. rájyati 'to paint oneself, get red, get excited', rāga- [m.] 'painting, paint, excitement'. In view of the lack of an initial vowel in Greek, we have to consider a reconstruction sreg-*. The stem form ῥηγ- is problematic, however.

ῥέθος [n.] 'face, countenance' (S. Ant. 529, E. HF 1205 [both anap.], Theoc. 29, 16, Lyc. 1137), 'body' (Lyc. 173), meaning uncertain (Sapph. 22, 3); plur. 'faces' (A. R. 2, 68), 'limb' (Theoc. 23, 39); older meaning unclear (ἐκ ῥεθέων Π 856 = Χ 362, Χ 68); cf. ῥεθέων· σπλάγχνων, μελῶν, σωμάτων 'innards, limbs, bodies' (H.); the sch. on Χ 68 proposes 'face, mouth', also 'nostrils', the last of which is preferred by Leumann 1950: 218ff. (with older literature) because of the plur. Cf. Snell 1948: 24-6, who demonstrates the transition from the literal meaning, namely a body part, to the more general mg. 'body'. ◁?▷ •COMP As a first member in Aeol. ῥεθο-μαλίδας, literally 'with face-apples', acc. to sch. Χ 68 = εὐπροσώπους.
•ETYM Since the meaning 'face, countenance', given as Aeolic by grammarians, is certain, we have to depart from this when explaining the word. Both an older epic meaning 'mouth' and 'figure, body' seem possible (cf. e.g. Lat. ōs 'mouth, face', faciēs 'figure, face'); the pl. could have been formed after μέλεα, στήθεα, στέρνα, νῶτα, etc. On the meaning in Hom., cf. Vivante Arch. glott. ital. 40 (1955): 41f. An original meaning 'nostril(s)' fits well, and the transition to 'face' or 'body' is unproblematic.

The form ῥέθος has no convincing etymology. The lack of the ϝ- (β-) in Aeol. ῥέθος makes a connection with Skt. várdhati 'to grow' difficult. Fraenkel's suggestion to connect ►ῥίς and ►ῥέω (Frisk Glotta 32 (1975): 31ff.; also, Treu 1955: 190[4]) is neither morphologically nor semantically convincing.

ῥεῖα, ῥέα ⇒ῥᾶ.

ῥειτος [m.?] an unidentified object from Delos (BCH 54, 1930, 121). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

ῥελατωρία 'receipt' (POxy. 3125). ◂LW Lat.▸
•ETYM Formed from a borrowing from Lat. rēlātor 'registrator'.

ῥέμβομαι [v.] 'to go about, wander, roam around, act at random' (Hell. and late). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Only pres. except ῥεμφθῆναι· ῥέμβεσθαι (H.).
•COMP Rarely with ἀπο-, etc.
•DER ῥεμβώδης 'walking about, aimless, idle' (Plb., Plu.), with the back-formation ῥέμβος [m.] 'wandering about' (Plu., Aret.), adj. ῥεμβός (late), fem. -άς (LXX v.l.). Extensions: ῥεμβ-εύω (also κατα-) = ῥέμβομαι, -ασμός [m.] 'roaming' (LXX; *-άζομαι).
With ablaut ῥόμβος [m.] 'circular movement, top, hummingtop, magic wheel, tambourine' (Pi., Critias, E.), geom. 'rhombus' (Arist., Euc., etc.), also name of a flat-fish, 'turbot' vel sim. (Ath., etc.), see Strömberg 1943: 38, Thompson 1947 s.v.; also ῥύμβος (Att. according to grammarians); ῥομβο-ειδής 'rhombus-like, rhomboidic' (Hp., Euc., etc.); ῥυμβ-ίον [n.] 'little top' (sch.); ῥομβ-ωτός 'having the form of a rhombus' (Hell. and late); -ηδόν 'in the way of a ῥ.' (Man.); ῥομβ-έω (also ῥυ-) [v.] 'to go in circles' (Pl., etc.) with -ητής [m.] 'top' (Orph.), ἐπι- 'to whirl like a humming-top' (Sapph.); ῥομβόομαι 'to be turned into a ῥ.' (Hero); ῥυμβ-όνες [f.pl.] 'wrigglings' of a snake (A. R.), cf. ἀγκ-όνες, etc.; -ονάω (also ῥεμβ-) 'to sway, hurl away' (Phld., Ael.), after σφενδονάω.
•ETYM The word ῥόμβος is attested already in Pi., and it proves that the primary form ῥέμβομαι, which is attested much later, must have existed at an earlier stage, too. The by-form ῥύμβος recalls cases like ῥοφέω : ῥυφέω (cf. Schwyzer 351f.); note also ῥυβόν· ἐπικαμπές (EM, Hdn. Gr.). The form ῥέμβομαι was compared with MLG wrimpen 'to contract (one's face)' (Persson 1912(1): 498), but an IE pre-form uremb-* is highly doubtful. At least as uncertain is the comparison with Lith. reñgtis 'to bow', etc. (de Saussure MSL 8 (1894): 443; Lidén 1899: 14f.).
It is difficult to combine ῥέμβομαι with ῥάμφος, ῥέμφος, ῥάμνος, ῥάβδος, and ῥέπω in traditional Indo-European terms, in view of the various different labials (β, φ, π). Because the meanings deviate, an etymological analysis remains hazardous. However, the forms with ῥυμβ-, ῥυβ- seem to point to a Pre-Greek word, as does the interchange π/ β/ φ.

ῥέπω [v.] 'to decline, descend', especially of the balance, 'to sway down, turn out, gain the upper hand', with prefix also trans. 'to lower, let tilt' (Il.). ◂?▸
•VAR Rare fut. ῥέψω and aor. ῥέψαι (IA).

•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-, ἀντι-, κατα-.
•DER 1. ῥοπή [f.] 'lowering, tilting (of the scales), swing' (Alc., IA), to which (among others) ἀντί-ρροπος 'equipoising, counterweighing' (Att.), with ἀντιρροπ-ίη (v.l. -ή) [f.] 'counterweight' (Hp.); 2. περί-ρρεψις [f.] 'tilting' (Hp.); 3. ῥόπαλον [n.] 'bludgeon, mace' (Il.), with ῥοπάλ-ιον [n.] (Hell. inscr. and pap.), -ωτός 'equipped with a club-like rounding' (D. C.), -ώδης '(pulsing) like a club', of the pulse, -ωσις [f.] designation of a hair disease (medic.), -ικός 'club-like', as a designation of a verse (gramm.), -ίζει· στρέφει, κινεῖ ὡς ῥόπαλον 'turns, moves like a club' (H.) with -ισμοί [pl.] (Ar. Lys.); 4. ῥόπτρον [n.] 'the wood in a trap, knocker, ring at the door, tambourine' (Archil., Att.); dissimilated to ῥόπτον of unclear meaning (Epid. IV[a]), -τίον· κλειδίον 'little key' (H.); 5. περι-, ἐπι-, κατα-ρρεπής 'tilting, etc.' (IA), ἑτερο-ρρεπής, originally 'tilting to (one or) the other side', hence 'indecisive, unbiased' (A. [lyr.], Hp.); 6. ῥεπτικός 'tilting' (Stoic.).
•ETYM Attempts have been made to connect ῥέπω with ►ῥάπτω, ►ῥαπίζω, and even ►ῥώψ, but see s.v.v. The alleged common semantic denominator 'to twist (together), wind, bend' was sought in ῥόπαλον, ῥόπτρον, but these words are perhaps not related (see Chantraine 1933: 246), and the supposed meaning 'throwing stick', which was needed for that connection, is unwarranted. Cf. ►ῥέμβομαι with references. The word may instead be Pre-Greek. The word καλαῦροψ (compared by DELG), which is certainly Pre-Greek, is unrelated.

ῥέω [v.] 'to flow, stream', also metaphorically, 'to stream off, fall off', of hair, ripe fruits, etc. (Il.). ◂IE sreu-* 'flow, stream'▸ •VAR Aor. ῥυῆναι (γ 455), Dor. ἐρρύα̃, fut. ῥυήσομαι, perf. ἐρρύηκα (Att.); fut. ῥεύσομαι (Thgn., com., Hp.), ῥευσοῦμαι (Arist.), ῥεύσω (AP), aor. ῥεῦσαι (Ar., [anap.], Hp., Hell.).
•COMP Very often with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, δια-, ἐκ-, κατα-, περι-, ὑπο-.
•DER Many derivatives, also from prefixed compounds:
A. with full grade 1. ῥέεθρον (Il., epic Ion.), ῥεῖθρον (Att.) [n.] 'stream, river, water'; 2. Ῥεῖτος [m.] name of a stream or brook (Eleusis V[a], Th., Paus.), see Krahe Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 5 (1954): 89; 3. ῥεῦμα [n.] 'current, stream' (IA), cf. Porzig 1942: 267f., 'stream, rheumatism' (medic.), with -μάτιον, -ματώδης, -ματικός, -ματίζομαι, -ματισμός; 4. ῥέος [n.] 'stream' (A.), cf. on ἐυ-ρρεής below; 5. ῥεῦσις [f.] (Hell. for ῥύσις); 6. ῥευστός 'streaming, fluid' (Emp., Arist., etc.), -στικός (Plu.), -σταλέος (Orac. apud Eus.); 7. -ρρεί-της (from -ρρεϝέ-της) in compounds, e.g. ἐϋ-ρρείτης 'streaming beautifully' (Hom., etc.), ►ἀκαλαρρείτης; 8. -ρρεής only in gen. ἐϋ-ρρεῖος = ἐϋ-ρρεϝέος (Il.) from ἐϋ-ρρεής 'id.'; rather to ῥέω than to ῥέος (Schwyzer: 513).
B. With o-grade: 1. ῥόος (κατά-, etc.), Att. ῥοῦς, Cypr. ῥόϝος [m.] 'stream, flow'; 2. ῥοή (ἐκ-, etc.), Dor. -ά, Corc. ρhoϝαῖσι [f.] 'flowing, stream, outflow' (Il.); ῥοΐσκος [m.] 'brooklet' (Halaesa), ῥοώδης (ῥοι- Gal.) 'flowing, suffering of flux, having strong currents, watery, falling off' (Hp., Th., Arist., etc.), ῥοϊκός 'fluid' (Hp., Dsc.), ῥοΐζω 'to drench', of horses (Hippiatr.) with ῥοϊσμός (H.); 3. ῥοῖαι [f.pl.] 'floods' (Hp.); 4. -ρροια [f.] in prefixed compounds, e.g. διάρροια (to δια-ρρέω) 'flowing through, diarrhoea' (IA); on the formation Schwyzer: 469.

C. With zero grade: 1. ῥυτός 'streaming, pouring out, flowing strongly' (trag., etc.; with ἀμφί-, περί- since Od.); ῥυτόν [n.] 'drinking horn' (Att., Hell.); 2. ῥύσις (ἔκ-, etc.) [f.] 'flowing, flow' (IA); 3. ► ῥύμα = ῥεῦμα (late) s.v.; 4. ῥύαξ, -ᾱκος [m.] 'strong current, rushing stream, stream of lava' (Th., Pl., Arist., etc.), probably Sicil. (Björck 1950: 61 and 285); cf. ῥύαγξ (cod. ῥοί-)· φάραγξ 'cleft, chasm' (H.); 5. ῥυᾱ́χετος [m.] 'multitude of people' (Lac.; Ar. Lys. 170), expressive enlargement of ῥύαξ after ὀχετός, συρφετός? 6. ῥυάς [f.] (also [m., n.]) 'fluid, falling off' (Arist., Thphr., etc.), also an epithet of ἰχθῦς or a designation of certain fishes that live in swarms and follow the currents (Arist., etc.), see Strömberg 1943: 50f., Thompson 1947 s.v., also 'flow', with ῥυαδικός, 'suffering flux, etc.' (medic.); 7. ῥυδόν (ο 426), ῥύδην (Crates, etc.) 'flooding, abounding'.
On ► ῥυθμός, see s.v.; on ῥύτρος, ῥόα (ῥοιά), ῥοῦς as plant names see ► ῥόα.
•ETYM The thematic present ῥέω (< *ῥέϝω; cf. ῥόϝος, etc. above) agrees with Skt. srávati 'flow' < IE sréu-e-ti*. There are other exact morphological matches as well, but their age is uncertain because of the strong productivity of the relevant categories. Examples are: ῥόος = Skt. srava- [m.] 'flowing' (cf. OCS o-strovъ, Ru. óstrov 'island', from *'surrounded by stream[s]'); ῥοή = Lith. sravà [f.] 'flowing, flow of blood, menstruation' (cf. Skt. giri-sravā- [f.] 'mountain brook'); ῥύσις = Skt. sruti- [f.] 'way, street'; ῥυτός = Skt. srutá- 'flowing' (cf. Lith. srùtos [f.pl.] (dial. -tà [sg.]) 'liquid manure, [animal] urine'); (ἐΰ)-ρρεής, related to Skt. (madhu)-sravas- [m.] 'dripping of honey', plant name (lex.). The neuter ῥεῦμα (IE sreu-mn*) is mirrored by a corresponding masculine in Balto-Slavic, e.g. Lith. sraumuõ, gen. -meñs 'rapid' (IE srou-mon-*). An m-suffix is also found in Germanic, e.g. ON straumr 'stream' (IE srou-mo-*), in Celtic, e.g. OIr. sruaim 'stream', and in Alb. rrymë 'stream' (Mann Lang. 28 (1952): 37).
Genetic connection between the Dor. aor. ἐ-ρρύᾱ and the Lith. pret. pa-srùvo 'flowed' < *-āt (Schwyzer: 743) seems unlikely. Also formally identical are the futures ῥεύσομαι (-σω) and Skt. srosyati. Apart from that, the Greek and Sanskrit, as well as the Baltic verbal systems go different ways. Cf. ► ῥώομαι.

ῥήγνυμι [v.] 'to tear (up), break (to pieces), burst' (Il.). ◄IE ureh*$_1$ǵ- 'break'► •VAR Fut. ῥήξω, aor. ῥῆξαι (all Il.), perf. med. ἔρρηγ-μαι (θ 137), act. (intr.) ἔρρωγα (Archil., Hp., trag.), ptc. ἐρρηγεῖα (Tab. Heracl.), trans. ἔρρηχα (Hell.), aor. pass. ῥαγῆναι (Il.), with fut. ῥαγήσομαι (A., etc.), ῥηχθῆναι (late); new pres. ῥήσσω, ῥήττω (Hp., Hell.; to ῥῆξαι, ῥήξω).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, δια-, ἐκ-, κατα-, περι-. As a first member in verbal governing compounds ῥηξ(ι)-, e.g. ῥηξ-ήνωρ epithet of Achilles, 'breaking the (rows of) men' (Hom.) with -ηνορίη (ξ 217), cf. Sommer 1948: 180; Jernstedt Idg. Jb. 14: 151 connects ῥήσσω 'to throw (down)'.
•DER A. With e-grade: 1. ῥῆγμα (ἔκ-, σύν-) [n.] 'tore, cleft, breach' (IA) with ῥηγματίης, -τώδης (Hp.); 2. ῥηγμός 'id.' (pap. III[a]); 3. ῥηγμίν (-μίς), -μῖνος [f.] 'breaking down of a cart, breaking of the sea' (Il., epic), a derivation in -ῑν-, cf. Chantraine 1933: 168, Schwyzer: 465; Pisani RILomb. 73:2 (1939-40): 40 assumed influence of ► θίς; 4. ῥῆξις (also κατά-, περί-, etc.), Aeol. ϝρῆξις [f.] 'breaking through, breach' (Alc., Hp., E., Arist.) with ῥηκτικός (κατα-) 'fragile, brittle' (Hp., Aët.); 5. ῥήκτης [m.] "the disruptor", designation of a certain form of earthquake (Arist., Lyd.); 6. ϝρηγαλέον (cod. τρ-)· διερρωγότα 'broken through' (H.); cf. below B 4; 7. αὔρηκτος = ἄ-ϝρηκτος 'unbroken' (Hdn. Gr.).
B. With o-grade: 1. ῥώξ [f.] only ῥῶγας [acc.pl.] (χ 143) 'tore' = 'narrow passage' (cf. Wace JHS 71 (1951): 203ff.), further in prefixed compounds, e.g. ἀπορρώξ 'torn off', fem. 'torn-off piece, outflow' (Il., epic poet.); 2. διαρρωγή [f.] 'gap, interspace' (Hp.); ῥωγαί· ῥήξεις (H.); 3. ῥωγάς, -άδος 'torn up, cleft' (Hell. poetry.); 4. ῥωγαλέος 'torn up, full of holes' (Hom.); 5. ῥωγμή [f.] 'breach, tore' (Hp., Arist.) with ῥωγματίης (Hp. apud Gal.; cf. A 1); ῥωχμός [m.] 'tore, cleft, gap' (Ψ 420, Hell.), containing a suffix -σμο- (Schwyzer: 493), -μαί [pl.] 'id.' (Marc. Sid.).
C. With zero grade: 1. ῥαγή (δια-), ῥαγάς, ῥάγδην, ῥαγδαῖος (s.v. ► ῥαγή); 2. ῥάγος [n.] 'rag, shred' (pap. II[p]), ῥαγόεις (Nic.) after ► ῥάκος, -όεις; 3. περιρραγής 'broken all around' (AP), from περι-ρραγῆναι.
•ETYM The form ῥήγνυμι < *ϝρήγνυμι (cf. ϝρῆξις, ϝρηγαλέος) corresponds semantically and phonologically with the primary stem in Arm. ergic-anem, aor. ergic-i with the usual caus. ergic-uc'anem 'to tear apart, break'. Phonetically adequate, but semantically less convincing, is the comparison (since Meillet MSL 9 (1896): 142) with a Balto-Slavic verb for 'to beat, etc.' in Lith. rėžti 'to cut, incise, beat', OCS rězati 'κόπτειν', Ru. rézat' 'to cut, slaughter', etc. It seems impossible to connect ► ῥάσσω in view of the different laryngeal. Forms with ῥαγ- must contain a secondary zero grade, since urh*$_1$ǵ- would give ϝρηγ-.

ῥῆγος ⇒ ῥέζω 2.

ῥῆμα •VAR ῥῆσις, ῥήτρα, etc. ⇒ εἴρω 2, ῥήτωρ.

ῥήν [m.] 'sheep, lamb' (A. R.). ◄GR► •VAR ῥῆνα [acc.] (Nic.), ῥήνεσσι [dat.pl.] (A. R.).
•COMP As a second member, e.g. in πολύ-ρρην-ες [nom.pl.] (I 154 = 296), thematic extension in πολύ-ρρην-ο-ς [nom.sg.] (λ 257) 'rich in sheep'; ὑπό-ρρην-ο-ν [acc.sg.] (K 216) 'having a lamb underneath, suckling a lamb'. As a first member in ῥηνο-φορεύς [m.] 'bearer of sheep fleece' (AP), see Boßhardt 1942: 29; extracted from there ῥηνικός 'from the sheep', ῥῆνιξ, -ικος [f.] 'sheep fleece' (Hp.).
•DER Several glosses in H.: ῥήνεα· πρόβατα 'cattle' (cf. κτήνεα); ῥᾶνα· ἄρνα 'lambs, sheep' (Elean?), ῥύεινα· ἄρνα. Κύπριοι (does it stand for ϝρην-?); probably also τρανόν (if for *ϝρ-)· ἑξαμηνιαῖον πρόβατον 'six-month-old cattle' (but then the α remains unexplained). The island name Ῥήνεια (near Delos) may be related, too.
•ETYM The above forms differ only in ablaut from ► ἀρήν < ϝαρήν; as a basis, one would best assume a formation urh*$_1$-ēn > ἀρήν, zero grade urh*$_1$-n- > (-ρ)ρην-. Lat. rēnō (mentioned by Frisk) should remain separate.
The forms ῥήνεσσι and ῥῆνα (Hell. epic) may well have been built after πολύ-ρρην and other compounds, but this explanation does not seem to fit Hippocratic ῥηνικός and ῥῆνιξ, nor the glosses in Hesychius (cf. Sommer 1948: 66ff.; Ruijgh 1957: 161; Schwyzer: 568).

ῥῆον [n.] 'rhubarb' (Gal.).

•VAR Also ῥᾶ (Dsc.).
•ETYM The word would come from the river called Rha (i.e. the Wolga; Amm. Marcell. 22, 8, 28). Cf. André 1956 s.v. rhā and reum.

ῥησός = ἀρχός ? (Epich. 205, cited by Phot., Suid.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

ῥήσσω ⇒ῥήγνυμι.

ῥητῖνη [f.] 'resin, fir resin' (Hp., Arist., Thphr.), on the neuter gender cf. βούτυρον. ⊲PG⊳ •COMP ῥητινό-κηρον [n.] 'wax dissolved in resin' (medic.).
•DER ῥητιν-ώδης 'resinous', -ίτης οἶνος 'resinous wine' (Dsc.), denominative verbs -ίζω 'be resinous' (Dsc.), -όομαι 'to be made resinous' (Hp., Dsc.).
•ETYM The suffixes -ῖνος and -ῖνη are found both with inherited and with Pre-Greek words (Chantraine 1933: 204f., Schwyzer: 491). Since there are no good cognates, however, the word is probably Pre-Greek. The comparison with Lat. rasis [f.], a kind of raw pitch pulverized to dust that was mixed with wine (WH s.v., as a supposed loan word from *ῥάσις), is uncertain. Lat. rēsīna gives proof of a dialectal Greek by-form *ῥησίνα (Leumann 1963-1979: 141); the variation attested by this form shows that it is a Pre-Greek word (cf. Fur.: 261).

ῥήτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'speaker, annunciator' (S., E.), especially 'orator in public, public speaker' (Att.), 'master speaker, discourse artist' (late). ⊲IE *$uerh_1$- 'speak'⊳ •COMP Some rare and late compounds, e.g. φιλο-ρήτωρ 'who loves orators' (Phld.).
•DER ῥητορ-ίσκος denigratory diminutive (pap. II[p]), -ικός 'oratorical, silver-tongued, rhetorical', ῥητορ-εύω [v.] 'to act as an orator, practice the art of oratory', rarely with κατα-, ἐπι-, etc.; thence -εία [f.] 'oratory, artful discourse' (Att.). ῥητορ-ίζω 'id.' (Hell.). Further ῥητήρ, -ῆρος [m.] 'speaker' (I 443), 'orator' (AP 7, 579, metrical inscr.), so metrically conditioned?
•ETYM As a term for a profession, ῥήτωρ was created in the Attic official language (Fraenkel 1912: 9); the original function as an agent noun from εἴρω 'speak' can still be seen in E. Hec. 124 (anap.) μύθων ῥήτορες, which mirrors Hom. μύθων ῥητῆρα (I 443); a doubtful attempt to find a semantic differentiation can be found in Benveniste 1948: 52ff.). See ►εἴρω 2.

ῥήτανον [n.] name of a plant (Gp. 12, 1, 1). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

ῥῖγος [n.] 'frost, cold, shivering fit' (ε 472). ⊲IE *sriHg-os 'cold'⊳ •COMP Some compounds, e.g. ῥιγο-πύρετος [m.] (-ον [n.]) 'tertian fever, ague' (Gal., Ptol., etc.) for older πυρετὸς καὶ ῥῖγος (Hp.), see Strömberg 1944: 85; ἀ-ρριγής (-γέως [adv.]) 'not sensitive to cold' (Hp.); also ἄ-ρ(ρ)ιγος 'id.; not shivering' (Arist., Aret.); δύσ-ριγος 'to tolerate cold badly' (Hdt., Arist., Thphr.); both connected with ῥιγέω like e.g. δύσ-φορος with φορέω, φέρω.
•DER Denominative ῥιγώω, -ῶσαι [v.] 'to freeze' (ξ 481), rarely with ἐπι-, ἐν-, etc., formed after the antonym ἱδρώω (not from *ῥιγωσ- as per e.g. Schwyzer: 724). Further the perfect ἔρρῖγα 'freeze, congeal, shudder', aor. ῥιγῆσαι (Il., epic), fut. ῥιγήσω (E 351), pres. ῥιγέω (Pi.); rarely with ἀπο-, ἐπι-, κατα-.
Primary comparative ῥίγιον 'colder, ghastlier, more terrible' (Hom., Hes., Semon.), superlative ῥίγιστα (E 873), -ος, -ον (A. R., Nic.).
Further adjectives: 1. ῥιγεδανός 'ghastly, terrible' (T 325, A. R., Opp.), to ῥιγος after an unknown example, or from *ῥιγεδών (Chantraine 1933: 362)? 2. ῥιγαλέος 'id.' (Emp.); to ῥῖγος like ἀργαλέος to ἄλγος; 3. ῥιγηλός (κατα-) 'id.' (ξ 226, Hes. Sc., Nic., Nonn. Ap), from ἔριγα, ῥιγέω; 4. ῥιγώδης 'causing a shivering fit' (Hp., Gal.), from ῥῖγος; 5. Ῥῖγμος [m.] name of a Thracian (Υ 485); to ῥῖγος like θερμός to θέρος?
•ETYM The proportion ἔρριγα : ῥῖγος is matched by γέγηθα : γῆθος, λέληθα : Dor. λᾶθος, or (ablauting) γέγονα : γένος, etc. The pair ῥίγιον : ῥῖγος has a parallel in ἄλγιον : ἄλγος, κέρδιον : κέρδος (Schwyzer: 539).
The form ῥῖγος corresponds exactly to Lat. frīgus [n.] 'cold, frost, shivering', from IE sriHg-os [n.]. The form ῥῖγέω in turn is identical to Lat. frīgeō, but this identity may be due to parallel innovations.

ῥίζα [f.] 'root', also metaphorically 'origin, stem, base' (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Aeol. βρίζα, βρίσδα.
•DIAL Myc. wi-ri-za /wriza/.
•COMP Several compounds, e.g. ῥιζο-τόμος [m.] 'root-cutter, -gatherer, herbalist', πολύ-ρριζος 'having many roots, rich in roots' (Hp., Thphr.).
•DER 1. ῥιζίον [n.] 'little root' (Ar., Thphr.), plur. -έα (Nic., -εῖα Al. 265), probably after ὀστέα beside (Dor.) ὀστία; 2. ῥιζίας (ὀπός) [m.] 'root juice' (Thphr.), opposed to καυλίας; 3. adjectives ῥίζ-ώδης 'root-like' (Thphr., Hero), -ικός 'belonging to roots' (Plu.), -ινος 'made of roots' (PHolm.), -αῖος 'serving as a base' (Sardes); 4. adverbs ῥίζ-ηθεν (A. R.), -όθεν (Nic., Luc.) 'out of the root'; -ηδόν 'in a root-like way' (Hld.); 5. verb ῥιζόομαι (ἐρρίζωται), -όω (-ῶσαι) 'to strike root, root, provide with roots, affirm, consolidate' (Od.), also with ἐν-, ἐκ-, κατα-, etc., whence ῥίζ-ωμα [n.] 'original soil, origin, roots' (A., Emp., Thphr.), -ωσις [f.] 'striking root' (Philol., Thphr., etc.). On ῥίζα, compounds and derivatives, cf. Strömberg 1937: 5, 8ff.
•ETYM Aeol. βρίζα requires a pre-form PGr. *ϝρίδ-ι̯α, which differs in vocalism from Lat. rādīx; in both cases we have a derivative in *-ih_2- of a noun that is also found in Germanic and Celtic: ON rót [f.] 'root' from PGm. wrōt-* < PIE *$ureh_2d$-. An i-stem is found in Go. waurts, OE wyrt, OHG and MHG wurz 'herb, root' < PGm. wurt-i-* < *u̯r̥d(-i)-, with zero grade, and in Celtic, e.g. W gwraidd [coll.] 'roots' < wradi-* (see Matasović 2009 s.v. wridā-*). Since the vocalisms are not reconcilable, we have to reckon with borrowings in case most of these words are considered related. The attempt at a regular solution (schwa secundum) by Vine 1999a: 5-30 does not solve all problems. ToB witsako 'root' is difficult to explain (Adams 1999 s.v.). See ►ῥάδαμνος and ►ῥάδιξ.

ῥικνός [adj.] 'bent, crooked, shrivelled (of age, dryness, cold), stiff' (epic poet. since h.Ap.); ῥικνοφυεῖς· τὰς στρεβλὰς καὶ πεπιεσμένας 'which are crooked and pressed' (H.). ⊲IE *uroik- 'turn, envelop, make crooked'⊳ •COMP ἐπί-ρρικνος 'somewhat bent' (X., Poll.).

•DER ῥικν-ήεις 'id.', enlarged form (Nic.); -ότης = καμπυλότης 'crookedness' (H.); -ώδης 'shrivelled' (Hp., AP); ῥικνόομαι [v.] 'to shrivel, contract, contort' (S., Arist., Opp.), rarely with κατα-, δια-, whence ῥίκνωσις [f.] 'shrivelling, wrinkledness' (Hp.). Further ῥοικός 'crooked, bow-legged' (Archil., Hp., Arist.) and ῥικάζεται (H.) as an explanation (beside στροβεῖται) of ῥιξικάζεται.
•ETYM The pair ῥικ-νός : ῥοικ-ός can be compared with e.g. πικ-ρός : ποικ-ίλος. The form ῥοικός matches Lith. ráišas (also raĩšas) 'limping, lame' (for the semantic difference, cf. κυλλός 'crooked, crippled'), Germanic words like ME wrāh 'wrong, stubborn', NDu. wreeg 'stiff', and (as far as the form is concerned) also Av. uruuaēsa- [m.] 'vortex, etc.'; all these words reflect IE uroiḱo-* [m.] 'turn, curvature' vel sim., [adj.] 'twisted, crooked'. An e-grade variant ureiḱo-* is attested in MLG wrīch 'forbidden, distorted, fixed, stiff, etc.'.
Corresponding primary verbs are the zero grade yod-present in Av. uruuisiia- 'to turn (around)'; a full grade root-present in OE wrēon < PGm. wrīhan* < IE ureiḱ-* with pret. wrāh < PGm. wraih* < IE uroiḱ-* 'to envelop' (for the meaning, cf. ► εἰλύω and ► εἰλέω 2), and a zero grade root present in Lith. rìšti, 1sg. rišù 'to bind'. Within Greek, the hapax legomenon ῥικάζεται (H.) is a denominative or deverbative; the form ῥιξικάζεται, if transmitted correctly, must be an expressive enlargement (cf. Baunack Phil. 70 (1911): 370).

ῥίμβαι ⇒ σΐδη.

ῥίμφα [adv.] 'rapid, agile, nimble' (Il., epic). ◁?▷
•COMP ῥιμφ-άρματος 'with a quick cart' (Pi., S. [lyr.]).
•DER ῥιμφ-αλέος (EM, Suid., Hdn. Gr.), cf. ὀτραλέος.
•ETYM The word ῥίμφα is formed like τάχα, ὦκα, etc., but the root is unclear. Since a sequence -ιμφ- cannot have been inherited, the ι has been analyzed as from ε before nasal (see Schwyzer: 275). PGr. wrenk^{wh}a* (vel sim.) has been connected with Lith. rangùs 'dexterous, flexible', rangiúos, rángtis 'to hasten', rengiúos, reñgtis 'to prepare oneself, be prepared', under a reconstruction PIE ureng^{wh}-*. It must be said that the connection between Baltic and the Germanic group of OE wringan 'to wind, wring', OHG ringan 'to make an effort, fight' (thus e.g. LIV² s.v. u̯reng^h-*) is much more attractive. In sum, although there are parallels for ε > ι, the proposal is quite shaky.

ῥινεστήρ [m.] probably 'halter' (P. Tebt. 886, 68 [II^a]). ◁?▷
•ETYM Unknown.

ῥΐνη [f.] 'file, rasp' (X., Arist., Delos III^a), acc. to Hdn. Gr. in the same meaning ῥινή, also 'shark', the rough skin of which was used to polish wood and marble (Hp., Epich., com., Arist.). ◁?▷
•VAR Hell. ῥῖνα Moer.
•COMP As a first member in ῥινό-βατος, -βάτης [m.] designation of a kind of ray, which stands between ῥίνη and βάτος (Arist.), see Strömberg 1943: 123 with references, Thompson 1947 s.v.
•DER 1. Diminutive ῥιν-ίον (Gal.), -άριον (Aët.) 'little file'; 2. denominatives: a) ῥινάω [v.] 'to file' (Ar., Arist., Ph. Bel.), also with κατα-, δια-, etc., whence (ἀπο-)ῥίνημα [n.] 'filing, swarf' (Hp., Herod.), (δια-)ῥίνησις [f.] 'filing' (Gal.); b) ῥινίζω [v.] 'id.' (pap. III^p), whence ῥίνισμα [n.] 'swarf' (Ctes., medic.).
•ETYM The meaning 'file' is original, and 'shark' is derived from it (see above); Strömberg 1943: 86. ῥινός 'skin' especially denotes a fine, soft cowhide.
Frisk saw a primary formation with a suffix -ν- in ῥίνη from a verb that is not directly attested in Greek, but only in the derived Germanic verb evidenced by OS wrītan 'to tear apart, scratch, write', OE wrītan 'to dig in, scratch, write'. This root etymology must be rejected, since the Greek form requires uriH-, whereas for the Germanic words, urei- without laryngeal must be reconstructed (see on ► ῥινός).

ῥινός [f.] 'skin of man and animal, hide; (esp.) cow skin, cow hide; shield made of cow hide' (epic Il.; cf. Leumann 1950: 314f.). ◁PG?▷
•VAR Rarely [m.] (Nic., Opp.) and -όν [n.] (after δέρμα, σκῦτος). The feminine gender is analogical after βοέη, αἰγέη, etc. The gloss γρῖνος· δέρμα (H.) attests a ϝ-.
•DIAL Myc. wi-ri-no /wrīnos/, adj. wi-ri-ne-jo.
•COMP E.g. ῥινο-τόρος 'shield-piercing', epithet of Ares (Φ 392, etc.), of the θύρσος (Nonn.); ταλαύρινος (= ταλά-ϝρινος) 'shield-bearing' (possibly 'shield-enduring', referring to the weight, as argued by Richardson Hermathena 55 (1940): 87ff.); usually an attribute of πολεμιστής, epithet of Ares (Il.); on this expression see Leumann 1950: 196 ff.; Trümpy 1950: 38 with Nachträge.
•DER γρίντης (= ϝρίντης)· βυρσεύς 'tanner' (H.), formation probably after primary ξάντης, ὑφάντης, etc.
•ETYM The Aeol. gloss γρῖνος· δέρμα (γρινός Hdn. Gr.) confirms the initial ϝ-, which is also evidenced by ταλαύρινος, so we can safely posit ϝρῖνός*. Frisk connected the same Germanic verb as he did for ► ῥΐνη, but the Germanic -ī- must derive from PIE -ei-* in view of Go. writs with a short i; this is impossible for the Greek form. Moreover, the parallel that he adduces for the difference in meaning, δέρμα ~ δέρω, is imperfect, since the latter means 'to flay', whereas urei-(d-)* rather means 'to scratch'. Therefore, his etymology must be rejected. Instead, the word could be Pre-Greek.

ῥίον [n.] 'mountain peak, foothills' (Hom.); also as a TN in Achaia and other regions (Th.). ◁PG?▷
•DIAL Myc. ri-jo TN.
•ETYM The form ῥίον is isolated within Greek, and has no certain etymology. If it originally had an initial ϝ-, it would recall Thrac. βρία 'πόλις, τεῖχος', and perhaps also ToA ri, ToB riye 'town' (see the literature on βρία). The connections with Germanic are no better, e.g. OS wrisil 'giant' (WP 1, 267), nor those with Skt. várṣman- [n.] 'height', Lat. verrūca, OCS vrьxъ, Ru. verx, etc., or with Hitt. šēr 'above' (Heubeck Orbis 13 (1964): 266f.; Risch Mus. Helv. 22 (1965): 194⁴). As an alternative to all these problematic suggestions, we should consider the possibility that the word is of Pre-Greek origin.

ῥῖπος 'wickerwork'. ⇒ῥίψ.

ῥίπτω [v.] 'to throw, hurl, thrust, bolt' (Pi., IA). ◁PG?▷

•VAR Also ῥιπτέω (IA since ν 78), iterative pret. ῥίπτασκον (Hom., Hes. Sc., -εσκον Nic. Fr.), fut. ῥίψω, aor. ῥῖψαι (Il.), pass. ῥιφθῆναι, ῥῖφῆναι (Att.) with fut. ῥιφθήσομαι (S.), -ήσομαι (LXX), perf. med. ἔρρῖμμαι (Orac. apud Hdt., E., Ar.), ῥερῖφθαι (Pi.), see Schwyzer: 649; act. ἔρρῖφα (Lys.).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἀνα-, ἐν-, δια-. As a first member e.g. in ῥίψασπις, -ιδος 'throwing the shield away, coward' (Ar., Pl.), -άσπιδος 'id.' (Eup.); cf. Sommer 1948: 93.
•DER 1. ῥῑπή [f.] 'throw, thrust, gust of wind, sway, press, heavy movement' (epic Il.) with ῥιπίζω (δια-, ἐκ-, etc.) [v.] 'to cause a gust of wind, kindle, fan' (Hp., Ar., Arist.), 'to hurl' (Hld.); ῥίπ-ισις, -ισμός, -ισμα 'fanning' (late); back-formed from ῥιπή; ῥιπίς, -ίδος [f.] 'fanner' (com., AP); on εὔ-ρῖπος s.v.;
2. ῥῖψις (διά-, ἀπό-, etc.) [f.] 'throwing, hurling' (Hp., Att., Arist.) with (ἀπο-)ῥίψιμος 'to be thrown away' (late); also ϝριψίδας (Mantinea), cf. Kretschmer Glotta 5 (1914): 265; 3. (δια-)ῥίμματα [n.pl.] 'heavy movements, bolts' (Arion, X.); 4. ῥῖφή (δια-, ἀπο-) [f.] 'cast, throwing back and forth' (Pratin. Lyr., Lyc.; after ῥῖφῆναι); 5. ῥιπτός 'cast, thrown' (S. Tr.), μητρό-ρριπτός (Dosiad.); 6. ῥιπτικός 'capable of throwing' (comm. Arist.); 7. frequentative ῥιπτάζω, -άσαι [v.] 'to thrust back and forth' (epic Ξ 257), with -ασμός (Hp., Plu.), -αστικός (M. Ant.).
•ETYM The regular character of the morphological system, which is completely built on an element ϝρῑπ- (secondarily shortened to ϝρῐπ-), shows that it is a (relatively) late creation. The root has no convincing etymology. Although MLG wrīven 'to rub, wipe, scour, draw', MHG rīben 'to turn rubbing' matches formally (Pok. 1159), the semantic gap is considerable; moreover, the IE preform ur-iH-p-* then needed is highly implausible. Instead, we could consider Pre-Greek origin for this etymon. See also ►ῥίψ.

ῥίς, ῥῑνός [f.] 'nose', of man and animal, plur. ῥῖνες 'nostrils, nose' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Late also ῥῑν.
•COMP ῥιν-ηλατέω 'to seek out with the nose, trace' (A.), cf. on ►ἐλαύνω; εὔ-ρις, -ρινος 'having a good nose, examining keenly' (A., S.), also εὔ-ρινος 'id.' (late); the second member is extensively dealt with in Sommer 1948: 87ff.
•DER ῥινία [pl.] 'nostrils' (Arist.), ῥινάω [v.] 'to lead by the nose' (com.).
•ETYM The word ῥίς replaced the old IE designation of the nose (e.g. Lat. nārēs, nāsus, Skt. nas-). It is formed like ἴς and θίς (cf. Schwyzer: 570[2]), but has no certain etymology. The proposal by Meier-Brügger MSS 51 (1990): 125-128 to reconstruct sr-ih₂-n-*, a derivative of the root for 'top, point' seen in Hitt. šer 'above', is interesting, but not compelling either. The word may well be Pre-Greek.

ῥίσκος [m.] 'chest, box' to preserve adornment and money (Antiph., Hell.). ◄PG?►
•COMP ῥισκο-φύλαξ, -άκιον 'treasurer; treasure room' (Hell.).
•ETYM Probably a loan word, like MoE chest, coffer and other synonyms. According to Donatus (on Ter. Eun. 754), it is of Phrygian origin, a path followed by Thumb 1901, who considers Celtic to be the ultimate source (cf. OIr. rúsc '[basket made of] bark'); the word would have reached Greek from Galatian through Phrygian because of the change u > i. The word was borrowed as Lat. riscus (note the synonymous rhyming word fiscus, of debated origin).

ῥίψ, ῥῑπός [f.] 'willow rod, wickerwork, wattled mat, wattle' (Od., Hdt., Ar.). ◄?►
•VAR Later also [m.], also ῥῖπος [f.] (v.l. Hdt. 2, 96, Cyrene IV[a]), [m.] (Hell.).
•ETYM No agreement outside Greek. It was connected with ῥίπτω long ago (Persson 1891: 165), assuming a basic meaning 'turn, wind' for both. However, this connection fails due to the weak semantics; cf. also ►ῥίπτω.

ῥόα [f.] 'pomegranate', tree and fruit (Od.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Accented ῥοά by Hdn. Gr.; epic Ion. ῥοιή; also ῥοιά (Ar., Arist., etc.).
•DER ῥοΐδιον [n.] 'little pomegranate' (Men., pap. II[p]), ῥοΐδια (cod. ῥυδία)· ῥοὰ ἢ ῥοιά (H.); ῥοιάς, -άδος [f.] 'poppy' (Dsc.), after the flowers, see Strömberg 1940: 52; ῥοών, -ῶνος [m.] 'pomegranate plantation' (LXX).
•ETYM The series ῥοιή : ῥοιά : ῥόα can be compared with χροιή: -οιά : -όα. If not a loan word (Schwyzer: 348 and 469), it is perhaps related to ῥέω (Strömberg 1940: 52) because of the richness of the juice. The original form may have been *ῥοϝ-ιά, i.e. a ιᾰ-derivation from ῥοῦς 'stream'; cf. σκοπ-ιά (: σκοπός), ἐσχατ-ιά (: ἔσχατος), etc. Cf. further the plant names ►ῥοῦς [m.] 'sumach' and ►ῥύτρος; they are certainly not related to ῥέω (Strömberg l.c.). Apart from a connection with ῥέω, a Pre-Greek origin remains a serious option for ῥόα.

ῥόβιλλος [?] · βασιλίσκος ὄρνις (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM According to Specht KZ 68 (1943): 35 and Specht 1944: 146, related to Pol. wróbel 'sparrow'. On -ιλ(λ)ος in bird names, cf. Chantraine 1933: 249; cf. also Thompson 1895 s.v. Is the word instead Pre-Greek?

ῥογός [m.] = σιτοβόλιον, i.e. 'depot of cereals' (Tab. Heracl. 1, 102, Epich.). ◄?► •ETYM Attributed to the Sicilians by Poll. 9, 45. Etymology unknown.

ῥοδάνη, ῥοδανός ⇒ῥαδινός.

ῥόδον [n.] 'rose' (h. Cer.). ◄LW Iran.?►
•VAR Aeol. βρόδον.
•DIAL Myc. wo-do-we /wordo-wen/, epithet of oil (Chadwick and Baumbach Glotta 41 (1963): 243; Lejeune 1958-1963: 26).
•COMP E.g. ῥοδο-δάκτυλος 'rosy-fingered', epithet of Ἠώς (Hom.), βροδο-δάκτυλος of the moon (Sapph.), cf. Leumann 1950: 18[9]; κυνό-ρροδον [n.] 'dog rose, Rosa canina' (Thphr.), see Strömberg 1940: 30 and 98.
•DER 1. ῥοδ-έα, -έη, -ῆ [f.] 'rose tree' (Archil.); 2. -(ε)ών, -(ε)ῶνος [m.] 'bed of roses' (AP, pap.) with -ωνιά [f.] 'bed of roses, rose garden, rose tree' (Hecat.); 3. -ιη [f.] 'bed of roses' (Mycale IV[a]); 4. -όεις 'of roses' (Ψ 186, B., E. [lyr.]), -εος 'id, roselike' (poet. h. Cer.), -ινος 'of roses' (Anacr.); on the adjectives see S. Schmid 1950: 47[1], Zumbach 1955: 14, and Forderer Gnomon 30 (1958): 96; 5. -άριον [n.] 'rose ornament' (pap.), -ίς, -ίδος [f.] 'rose pastille' (Dsc.); 6. -ίτης [m.] 'rose wine' (Dsc.), -ῖτις [f.] name of a stone, because of the color (Plin.); 7. -ουντία [f.] 'dish flavoured with roses' (Ath.), as if from *ῥοδοῦς; 8. -ίζω [v.] 'to cover with roses', of a tomb, with -ισμός, -ίσια [pl.] =

Lat. Rosalia (Asia Minor), also 'to make smell like roses' (Thphr., Alex. Aphr.), intr. 'to resemble a rose' (Dsc.); 9. Perhaps also the name of the island Ῥόδος (Georgacas Beitr. z. Namenforsch. 6 (1955): 155)?
•ETYM On the basis of Aeol. βρόδον, we can reconstruct PGr. ϝρόδον. The word is certainly borrowed from the East, probably like Arm. vard 'rose' from OIran. u̯r̥da-* (cf. MoP gul 'id.'; Schwyzer: 344[2]; on Aram. wardā and Arab. ward 'id.', Arab. warada 'bloom', waruda 'be red', cf. Mayrhofer Arch. Orbis 18 (1950): 74; Mayrhofer Sprache 7 (1961): 185). Lat. rosa was probably borrowed from Greek, but the details are unlear (see WH s.v.).

ῥόθος [m.] 'roar (of waves, of oars)', metaphorically 'noise' in general (Hes., A. Opp.); 'path, trail' (Nic.; Boeot. acc. to Plu. in Hes. 13). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR See below.
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. ἁλί-ρροθος 'roared around by the sea' (trag., Mosch.), ταχύ-ρροθοι λόγοι 'quickly rushing words' (A.); παλι-ρρόθιος 'rushing back' (Od., Hell. epic). On ▸ἐπίρροθος, see s.v.
•DER ῥόθιος, [f.] -ιάς 'roaring, clamorous' (epic ε 412, also late prose), mostly -ιον [n.sg.] and -ια [n.pl.] 'roaring wave(s), breaking(s), high-tide; loud stroke of the oar', metaphorically 'noise, bluster, rush' (poet. Pi., trag. [mostly lyr.], also late prose). From ῥόθος are derived (probably denominative, cf. Schwyzer: 726) ῥοθέω [v.] 'to roar, clamour' (A., S.), also with ἐπι-, δια-; ὁμο-, κακο-ρροθέω = ὁμο-, κακο-λογέω (Hp., S., E., Ar.); from ῥόθιον: ῥοθι-άζω [v.] 'to make a rushing sound (with the oar)' (com.).
•ETYM This etymon has no convincing etymology. Segmentation as sr-ed^h-* (to ser- 'stream') makes little sense. In view of the variation attested in the gloss ῥάθαγος = ῥόθος (sch. Nic. Th. 194, H.) and ῥαθα- = ῥοθο-πυγίζω, we have to assume that ῥόθος is a Pre-Greek word. On ▸ῥάθαγος, see ▸ῥαθαπυγίζω.

ῥοῖβδος [m.] 'buzzing, whistling, hissing noise', of arrows, winds (S., Ar.). ◂PG▸ •DER Besides ῥοιβδέω [v.] 'to buzz (etc.); make buzz' (A., Q. S., AP), also with ἀπο-, ἐπι-; prefixed also of birds, 'to squawk, caw' (S., Thphr., Nonn.); ῥοίβδημα [n.] = ῥοῖβδος (S.), -ησις [f.] 'whistling' (E. [lyr.]); -ηδόν 'with a hissing noise' (Q. S.), also connected with ῥοῖβδος; ἐπιρροίβδην < -βδ-δην 'in a rushing attack' (E. [troch.]).
•ETYM The word ῥοῖβδος, a poetic onomatopoeia, has the same suffix as κέλαδος, ἄραδος, and other words for sounds; for the -β-, one may compare φλοῖσβος, ὄτοβος, etc. (on the root, cf. Haas 1956: 132 f.). Since the word strongly recalls ▸ῥοῖζος and ▸ῥυβδέω and, moreover, the -βδ- in the suffix is certainly not of Indo-European origin, the word is probably Pre-Greek.

ῥοῖζος [m.] 'buzzing, rushing, humming', of arrows, wings, water, etc. (epic Π 361, Hell.). ◂PG▸ •VAR [f.] in ι 315; cf. Schwyzer 1950: 34[1].
•COMP As a second member in ἁλί-ρροιζος 'roared around by the sea' (Nonn.).
•DER 1. Adjective ῥοιζ-ώδης (medic.), -ήεις (Hell. inscr., Nonn.), -αῖος (Orac. Chald.) 'buzzing, rushing, humming, etc.'; 2. adverb -ηδόν (Nic., Lyc., 2. Ep. Pet.), -ηδά (Nic.) 'with rushing, with humming'; 3. ῥοιζέω [v.] 'to buzz, hum, hiss, rush; make buzz, etc.' (epic Κ 502, Hell.), also with ἐπι-, ἀνα-, etc.; thence ῥοίζ-ημα [n.] (Ar.), -ησις [f.] (Aq.) 'buzz, buzzing', -ήτωρ [m.] 'noisemaker' (Orph.).
•ETYM An onomatopoeic word, similar to ▸ῥοῖβδος, and likewise without etymology. If related to ῥοῖβδος, ῥοῖζος is certainly of Pre-Greek origin, but even if unrelated, such an origin may still be considered.

ῥοικός ⇒ῥικνός.

ῥόμβος ⇒ῥέμβομαι.

ῥόμος [?] · σκώληξ ἐν ξύλοις (Arc. apud H.). ◂?▸
•VAR Cod. -οξ, which probably intruded from the following entry.
•ETYM Frisk tried to connect the Indo-European word for worm; cf. Lat. vermis, Go. waurms 'worm', ORu. vermie 'locust, worms' (all < PIE urm-*), Lith. var̃mas 'gnat' < PIE uorm-* (Pok. 1152). However, this is based on difficult assumptions: either ῥόμος is a dialectal form for ῥάμος, which would reflect PGr. wr̥mo- (allegedly seen in the Boeot. PN ϝάρμιχος), or a non-dialectal form *ϝρόμος has a wrong o-grade for IE uorm-*.

ῥόμιξα [?] · εἶδος ἀκοντίου (H.). ◂PG?▸
•ETYM The ending -ιξα is compared with σόρνιξα by Fur.: 360; the word may be Pre-Greek.

ῥομφαία [f.] a large broad sword, used by the Thracians acc. to Phylarch. and Plu. Aem. 18 (LXX, NT, J., etc.); also = 'νυκτερίς, bat' (Cyran.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The origin is unclear; as so many weapon terms, it was perhaps borrowed from Thracian. However, the formation may be Greek, as -αία is also found in κεραία, καμιναία, αὐλαία, and other instrument names and concrete objects. The word ῥομφεῖς· ἱμάντες, οἷς ῥάπτεται τὰ ὑποδήματα 'straps by which shoes are stitched' (H.) is formally closer.
Boßhardt 1942: §228 posits a noun *ῥομφή [f.] 'curving, curvation, hook', from a verb *ῥέμφω 'curve', as the basis for both ῥομφεῖς and ῥομφαία. Cf. ῥέμφος and ▸ῥάμφος,; see also WH on rumpus.

ῥομφεῖς ⇒ῥομφαία.

ῥόπαλον, ῥοπή, ῥόπτρον ⇒ῥέπω.

ῥοῦς [m., f.] 'sumach, Rhus coriatia' (Dsc.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Etymology unknown; the connection with ῥέω is wrong (André Latomus 15 (1956): 304ff.).

ῥούσ(σ)εος, ῥούσιος [adj.] 'reddish', especially as a designation of the red faction in the Circus (Lyd., late inscr.); also οἱ ῥουσσᾶτοι (Lyd.). ◂LW Lat.▸
•DER ῥουσίζω [v.] 'to be reddish' (Gp.).
•ETYM Borrowed from Lat. russeus, russātus.

ῥοφέω [v.] 'to slurp, gulp', also nasalized ῥυμφάνω (Hp.), see Bechtel 1921(3): 198. ◂IE s(e)rb^h-* 'slurp'.▸

•VAR Fut. ῥοφήσομαι, -ω, aor. ῥοφῆσαι (Ar., X., Arist.; also Hp.), Ion. (Hippon., Hp.) ῥυφέω, -ῆσαι, also ῥυμφάνω (Jouanna RPh. 55 (1981): 205-13); rarely -άω (late).
•COMP Also with ἐκ-, ἀνα-, κατα-, etc.
•DER ῥόφ-ημα (ῥύφ-) [n.] 'thick broth, soup' (Hp., Arist.), originally a 'slurped meal', with -ημάτιον (A. D.), -ηματώδης 'soup-like' (medic.); -ησις (ἀνα-, κατα-) [f.] 'slurping' (Arist., medic.), -ητός 'apt for slurping' (Str., medic.), -ητικός 'slurping' (Str.); also ῥόμμα = ῥόφημα, ῥοπτός = ῥοφητός (Hp. apud Gal.), as if from ῥόφω (EM); ῥόφισμα [n.] (Cyran.).
•ETYM The word ῥοφέω is an iterative-intensive formation. Most cognates represent a zero grade IE *srb^h-: Arm. arbi [aor.] 'I drank', Lith. sur̃bti, 1sg. surbiù 'to suck', OCS srъbati, Ru. serbát' 'to slurp', Lat. sorbeō 'id.'. However, instead of being a zero grade form, ῥυφέω is rather an (onomatopoeic) by-form (see Tichy 1983: 84, pace Schwyzer: 351f.). A primary full grade present is retained in Lith. srebiù, srẽbti 'to eat (liquid food) with a spoon' < IE *sreb^h-, another full grade IE *sorb^h- is found in Alb. gjerp 'slurp' (probably < *sorb^h-eie/o-, Huld 1984: 143). The forms ῥόμμα and ῥοπτός seem to go back to a primary verb with remarkable o-vocalism, probably after ῥοφέω.
Perhaps the root is also found in Iranian (Psht. rawdəl 'suck', etc.; Morgenstierne 1927 s.v.). Cf. ► ῥυβδέω.

ῥοχθέω [v.] 'to rush, roar', especially of sea-waves (Od., A. R., Opp.), also ἀνα- (Orph.). ◂ONOM▸ •DER ῥόχθος [m.] 'rushing, roaring' (Lyc., Nic.), probably a back-formation (Schwyzer: 726^5).
•ETYM Sound words without etymology. Note the formal similarity with semantically close ῥόθος, ῥοῖζος, ῥοῖβδος; the medial -χθ- may be compared with μόχθος, βρόχθος, ὀχθέω, etc. Cf. on ► ὀρεχθέω.

ῥύαξ, ῥυάχετος ⇒ῥέω.

ῥυβδέω [v.] 'to slurp in, up'; καταρυβδήσας· καταπιών, ῥοφήσας 'having swallowed, having gulped down' (H.). ◂GR?▸
•VAR Aor. ῥυβδῆσαι (μ 106), the simplex only here.
•COMP With ἀνα- (μ 104f., 236), ἐκ- (Mnesim. 4, 17).
•ETYM The variant with υ, more frequently written οι in the manuscripts (after ῥοιβδέω), is confirmed by the word-play with Χάρυβδις (Bechtel 1914 s.v. ῥοιβδέω, Wackernagel 1916: 83). The word is without doubt related to ῥυφέω (see ► ῥοφέω); the cluster βδ may be analogical after ῥοιβδέω. An adverb ῥύβδην (written οι) = δαψιλῶς is cited by Phot. (accordingly, Bergk corrects Hippon. 35 ῥύδην to ῥύβδην, which is hardly correct; see Masson ad loc.).

ῥυβόν [n.] = τὸ ἐπικαμπὲς παρὰ τοῖς Αἰολεῦσιν (Hdn. Gr., EM). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Ῥυβᾶς (II^a), see Bechtel 1917a: 43.
•ETYM The form ῥυβόν might have been adapted analogically from ῥαιβός after a word that is semantically close, perhaps ὑβός or γρυπός (Bechtel 1921, 1: 125). Alternatively, it may be a Pre-Greek word.

ῥύγχος [n.] 'snout of a pig, snout, beak' (Stesich., com., Arist., Theoc.). ◂ONOM, IE *srung^h- 'snore'▸ •COMP Often as a second member (with transition to the o-stems), e.g. ὀξύ-ρρυγχος 'with a pointed beak' (Epich.), name of an Egyptian fish (Str., etc.), see Strömberg 1943: 43.
•DER ῥυγχ-ίον [n.], diminutive (Ar.), -αινα = nasuta (gloss.), -άζω = μυκτηρίζω (Phot.), -ιάζειν· διαστρέφειν, ῥογχάζειν 'twist about' (H.).
•ETYM The word ῥύγχος can hardly be separated from Arm. r̄ng-un-k' [pl.] 'nostrils, nose' which, if inherited, must go back to IE *srung^h- or *sring^h- (with secondary nasalization). Hübschmann 1897: 486f. assumed borrowing from ῥύγχος. A connection with ῥέγκω, ► ῥέγχω 'to snore' has been considered.

ῥύζα · βία. ἡ τοῦ τόξου τάξις 'strength, force; the arrangement of a bow' (H.). ◂?▸
•ETYM Unknown.

ῥύζω [v.] 'to growl, grumble', of a dog (Hermipp., Poll.), also 'to screak', of a falcon (Poll.). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Or -έω.
•ETYM A sound word, like ► ῥάζω; for the υ-vocalism, cf. ἰύζω, γρύζω, μύζω, etc.

ῥυθμός [m.] 'regular movement, beat, rhythm, measure, consistence, proportion, form' (IA, Archil., Thgn., A.), defined as ἡ τῆς κινήσεως τάξις by Pl. Lg. 665a. ◂IE *sreu- 'stream', *sru-d^{h}mo-▸ •VAR Ion. ῥυσμός.
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. εὔ-ρυθμος 'with a beautifully regular movement, rhythmical, well-proportioned', with -ία [f.] (Att.).
•DER ῥυθμ-ικός [adj.] 'rhythmic' (Pl.), see Chantraine 1956a: 135; -ιος 'id.' (Hdn. Gr.); -ίζω [v.] 'to make regular, organize, set up, instruct, form' (IA), also with prefix, esp. μετα-; -έω 'to organize, determine' (Athens V^a), -όομαι 'to develop' (Democr. 197 [-σμ-]; -όω uncertain ibd. 33).
•ETYM The short ῠ (e.g. A. Ch. 797) forbids connection with ἔρυμαι, ῥύομαι 'to avert, protect' and ῥῦτήρ 'protector, guardian', with or ἐρύω 'to draw' and ῥῦτήρ 'rein'. Instead, the connection with ῥέω 'flow, stream' must be correct, 'streaming' typically being a quiet and steady movement. For the meaning of ῥυθμός, cf. Wolf 1947, Leemans Ant.class. 17 (1948): 403ff., and Waltz RELat. 26 (1948): 109ff.; cf. also Sandoz 1971: 58-77.

ῥῠκάνη [f.] 'plane' (AP 6, 204). ◂PG?▸
•DER ῥυκάν-ησις [f.] 'planing' (Bito III-II^a, ῥυχ-), from *ῥυκαν-άω; ῥυκαν-ίζω [v.] 'to plane' (gloss.).
•ETYM The word ῥῠκάνη has the same formation as σκαπάνη, δρεπάνη, and other instrument names, but the root is unknown. Wackernagel's suggestion (Wackernagel KZ 67 (1942): 176) to connect Skt. srúc- 'offering spoon' fails to account for the meaning. Lat. runcina 'plane' (with -n- after runcāre 'to weed', or perhaps with distant assimilation) is certainly borrowed from Greek: since ῥυκάνη has no initial vowel, a genetic relation with the Lat. word can be excluded. A Pre-Greek origin is certainly a possibility for this word.

ῥῦμα 1 [n.] 'tow, towing rope' (Plb., D. H.).
•DER ῥύμη 'pull, press', ῥυμός 'tension wood, pole of a chariot', ῥύσιον 'spoils', ῥυστάζω 'to drag to and fro', ῥυτήρ 'rein', etc. ⇒ ἐρύω.

ῥῦμα 2 [n.] 'protection'.
•DER ῥύσιος 'freeing, saving', ῥυσί-πολις 'protecting the city', ῥυτήρ 'protector', etc. ⇒ ἔρυμαι.

ῥύμβος ⇒ ῥέμβομαι.

ῥύμη [f.] 'street, alley' (since IV[a]).
•ETYM From ῥύμη 'tow, press' (s.v. ► ῥῦμα 1), with a semantic development to a more concrete meaning, i.e. 'where the crowd presses'. See ► ἐρύω.

ῥύμμα ⇒ ῥύπος.

ῥυμουλκέω [v.] 'to pull the towing rope, tow, take in tow' (Hell.). ◂GR▸ •ETYM A technical term of the nautical language, ῥυμουλκέω may derive from *ῥυμ-ουλκός 'who draws by a line; who tows a boat', or directly from ῥύματι ἕλκειν 'draw the tow-line' after other verbs in -ολκέω, e.g. νεωλκέω (to νεωλκός, ναῦν ἕλκειν), πλινθουλκέω (to πλινθουλκός); cf. Schwyzer: 726. The first member is ῥῦμα 'tow-line', rather than ῥυμός 'pole (of a chariot)', as argued by Georgacas Glotta 6 (1958): 180f. Borrowed into Latin as remulcum [n.] 'tow-rope' (since Caes.), -āre 'to take in tow' (Non.).

ῥύομαι ⇒ ἔρυμαι.

ῥύπος [m.] 'filth, uncleanliness (e.g. in the ear)' (Semon., Att.), metaphorically 'sealing wax' (Ar. Lys. 1198). ◂?▸
•VAR ῥύπα [n.pl.] 'filthy clothes, laundry' (ζ 93); ῥύπος [n.] 'whey' (Hp. Mul. 1, 64), after λίπος, etc.
•COMP ῥυπο-κόνδυλος 'having filthy knuckles' (com.), ἡμί-ρρυπος 'half dirty' (Hp.).
•DER 1. Adjectives: ῥυπ-όεις 'dirty' (Nic., AP), -ώδης 'id.' (Dsc., Vett. Val.); on ῥυπαρός see below.
2. Verbs: a) ῥυπ-άω (epic lengthening to -όω, -όωντα) 'to be dirty' (Od., Ar., etc.; because of the meaning hardly with Chantraine 1942: 357 from ῥύπα, rather from ῥύπος with analogical -άω); b) ῥυπ-όομαι (ῥερυπωμένος ζ 59), also with κατα-, 'to be smudged' (Hp., Hell. inscr.), -όω 'to smudge' (late); c) ῥύπτ-ομαι, -ω, also with ἀπο-, etc., 'to clean (oneself), wash (oneself)' (Ar., Antiph., Arist.) with ῥυπτ-ικός 'apt for washing' (Pl. Ti., Arist., etc.), -ήριον = καθαρτήριον (Suid.), ῥύψις (ἀπό-) [f.] 'cleaning, washing' (Pl. Ti.). Besides, ῥυπαρός 'dirty' (IA) with -ία [f.] 'filth, dirty convictions' (Critias, late), -ότης [f.] 'id.' (Ath.); ῥυπαίνω, also with κατα-, etc., 'to besmudge, dishonor' (Att.) with ῥύπασμα [n.] 'filth' (Apollon. Lex.) as μίασμα: μιαίνω.

•ETYM No convincing etymology. The word ῥυπαρός may have been formed from ῥυπαίνω after the synonymous pair μιαρός : μιαίνω, but it remains uncertain whether it was an old r/n-stem (Benveniste 1935: 19), or built analogically from ῥύπος. The seemingly primary ῥύπτομαι, -ω can be secondary to ῥύπος after τύπτω : τύπος, etc. (possibly also influenced by synonymous νίπτομαι, -ω).
The connection with the Slav. word for 'scab, itch, crust of a wound', e.g. OCS strupъ, Ru. strup < IE sroupo-* or sreupo-*.

ῥυππαπαῖ [interj.] 'cry of Athenian rowers' (Ar.). ◂ONOM▸ •VAR Also ῥυπαπαῖ (AB).
•ETYM An onomatopoeia.

ῥύσιον ⇒ ἔρυμαι.

ῥύσις ⇒ ῥέω.

ῥῦσός [adj.] 'shrivelled, shrunk, wrinkled' (I 503). ◂?▸
•VAR In the manuscripts, variants with -σσ- are attested. On ῥῦτίς, -ίδος, see below.
•COMP Some compounds, e.g. ἔν-ρυσος 'somewhat wrinkled' (Dsc.), see Strömberg 1946: 128.
•DER 1. ῥυσ-αλέος 'id.' (Nic.), see αὐαλέος, etc.; 2. -ώδης 'with a wrinkled appearance' (AP, etc.); 3. -ότης [f.] 'wrinkledness' (Plu.); 4. ῥυσίλλας· τὰς ῥυτίδας 'wrinkles' (H.), cf. Chantraine 1933: 252, Schwyzer: 485; 5. ῥυσ-όομαι, -όω 'to shrivel, wrinkle (oneself)' (Arist.), with -ωσις [f.] (Gal.); 6. -αίνομαι 'id.' (Nic., AP).
Further: ῥῦτίς, -ίδος [f.] 'wrinkle, fold' (Ar., Pl.), Aeol. βρύτιδες (EM); ῥυτιδ-ώδης = ῥυσώδης, ῥυτιδ-όομαι, -όω = ῥυσόομαι, -όω (Hp., Arist.), ῥυτίδ-ωσις [f.] 'wrinkling' (medic.), -ωμα [n.] 'wrinkle' (sch.). Probably related too are ῥυτίσματα [pl.] (Men.), acc. to Phot. = τῶν διερρυηκότων ἱματίων τὰ ἀποπληρώματα 'patch, piece of cloth'.
•ETYM The word ῥυσός can be compared with λοξός, κομψός, γαυσός, and other expressive adjectives in -σός (Chantraine 1933: 434, Chantraine 1956a: 17). For ῥυτίς, DELG and Frisk adduce πηκτίς, ξυστίς, δοκίς, etc., assuming derivation from *ῥυ-τή, -τόν vel sim. with a diminutive suffix -ίδ-.
Solmsen's comparison (IF 31, 463) with ► ἐρύω 'draw, pull, snatch' < ueru-* is formally possible, but this does not furnish an IE etymology. The (imperfect) similarity with Lat. rūga 'wrinkle, fold' and Lith. raūkas 'id.' is accidental.

ῥῡτή [f.] 'rue, Ruta graveolens' (Nic., Ps.-Dsc.); acc. to sch. Nic. Th. 523, Peloponnesian for πήγανον; cf. ῥυτά· ... πήγανον λευκόν 'white rue' (H.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM The etymology is unexplained; Osthoff MU 5 (1890): 76ff. connected Lat. rūmex 'sorrel' (cf. WH s.v.). Lat. rūta is probably borrowed from Greek (Krogmann WuS 19 (1938): 133 considers both to be independent loans from a Mediterranean language); English rue is borrowed from French rue, which continues the same Latin word.

ῥῡτός [adj.] only in ῥυτοῖσιν λάεσσι (ζ 267, ξ 10), for which the sense 'dragged stones' does not make really good sense. ◂PG?▸

•ETYM The connection with ►ἐρύω 'to draw' is formally possible, but not semantically evident; Schulze's suggestion (Q. 318) to connect Lat. rūta (caesa) 'dug out (and felled)' must be dismissed because the latter derives from ruō 'to dig' < HreuH-* (cf. De Vaan 2008 s.v.). According to Deroy REGr. 67 (1954): 1ff., it is of Pre-Greek origin and cognate with Lat. rūdera (which would be Etruscan; cf. Chamoux REGr. 65 (1952): 284).

ῥύτρος [n.] 'plant with pricking extremities, Echinops Viscosus' (Thphr.). ◅?▻ •ETYM Strömberg 1940: 52 derived the word from ῥέω, which is a mere guess.

ῥῶ [n.] name of the letter ρ (Ar., Pl., etc.). ◅LW Sem.▻
•VAR Indeclinable.
•DER ῥωτακίζειν = τῷ ῥ στοιχείῳ συνεχῶς χρῆσθαι (Suid.) after *ἰωτα-κίζειν in ἰωτακισμός (see on ἰῶτα); ῥωβικός [adj.] 'unable to pronounce the ῥ' (D. L.), after συλλαβικός, τριβικός, etc.
•ETYM Borrowed from Sem. rōš (beside rēš); see Schwyzer: 140.

ῥωβίδας [m.] name of seven-year-old Spartans (Λέξεις Ἡροδότου). ◅?▻ •ETYM The formation is the same as that of the patronyms in -ίδας (Schwyzer: 509), but the root is unexplained.

ῥώδιγγες [?] · πληγαὶ ὕφαιμοι διακεκομμέναι. οἱ δὲ μώλωπες 'spots bloodshot by hitting; bruises' (H.). ◅PG(S,V)▻ •VAR ῥώτιγγες.
•ETYM Frisk's suggestions that the variant ῥώτιγγες (H.) is secondary for ῥώδιγγες, or that the latter is analogical after σμώδιγγες, can be dismissed. Instead, the variation δ/τ and the suffix -ιγγ- point to Pre-Greek origin.

ῥώθωνες [m.pl.] 'nostrils' (Nic., D. H., Str., etc.), rarely -ων [sg.] (Heracl. apud Gal., etc.); ῥώθυνες· μυκτῆρες 'nostrils' (H.). ◅PG?▻ •ETYM The formation is the same as in πώγων, γνάθων, etc., but the root is unknown. Usually, ῥόθος 'roaring' is connected, which presupposes an original meaning 'snorer, rattler' (Pok. 1002); Fraenkel Glotta 32 (1953): 31ff. recalls ῥέθος. Alternatively, one could consider a Pre-Greek origin for this word.

ῥώκομαι [v.] · ὀργίζομαι, λυποῦμαι 'to be distressed' (H.). ◅?▻ •ETYM Perhaps related to ►ῥωχω, s.v.

ῥώννυμι [v.] 'to strengthen, invigorate'; med. 'to be(come) strong; insist on sth., be determined' (Pherecyd., Hp.). ◅?▻
•VAR Also pres. -ύω (Ti. Locr., etc.), aor. ῥῶσαι (Hdt., Att.), pass. ῥωσθῆναι, fut. ῥώσω (Att.), very often perf. med. with pres. meaning ἔρρωμαι (Att.).
•COMP Also with ἐπι-, ἀνα-.
•DER ῥώ-μη [f.] 'strength, vigour, power' with -μαλέος 'strong' (IA), -σις (ἐπί-, ἀνά-) [f.] 'strengthening', -στικός 'strengthening, strong' (late), -στήριον· παρορμητήριον 'stimulation' (Phot.), -σταξ [m.] 'hold, support, bearer' (Tz.), ἄ-ρρωστος 'weak, indisposed', with ἀρρωστ-ία, -έω, -ημα, etc. (IA); ῥωρός· σφοδρός 'vehement' (H.).

•ETYM The regular stem formation with generalized ῥω(σ)- cannot be old; in any case, the present is an innovation (literature in Schwyzer: 697). The form ῥωσκομένως 'with power' (Hp.) indicates a newly built present *ῥώσκομαι. A connection with ►ῥώομαι seems possible. Alternatively, Rikov Glotta 66 (1988): 124f. has proposed a connection with Skt. sāra-: ῥώμη, ῥῶσις would continue srh₃-*, whereas the Skt. could derive from a secondary aniṭ root.

ῥώξ 1 'tore'. ⇒ῥήγνυμι.

ῥώξ 2 'grape'. ⇒ῥάξ.

ῥώομαι [v.] 'to move intensively or with effort, brisk about; dance' (Il.). ◅IE srh₃-ie/o-* 'move violently' vel sim.▻ •VAR Almost exclusively 3pl.ipf. and aor.: ῥώοντο, ἐρρώοντο, ἐρρώσαντο (Il., epic); further, also epic (late and rare) ῥώετο (Nic.), ῥώονθ' (= -ται, D. P.), ῥώσονται (Call.), ἐπίρρωσαι (AP).
•COMP Often with ἐπι- (rare and late ἀνα-, συν-).
•ETYM The words ῥῶσαι, ἔρρωμαι, and ῥώννυμι can perhaps be connected; ῥέω, on the other hand, is rather not related (Schwyzer: 349 and 722); on ῥωσκομένως, see ►ῥώννυμι. Kloekhorst 2008 s.v. šarḫiie/a-[zi] follows a proposal of Čop (1955a: 398) to connect ῥώομαι to the Hittite word, the meaning of which is not completely certain, but must be something like 'to attack'. The Hittite and the Greek suggest a preform srh₃-ie/o-*.

ῥῶπος [m.] 'odds and ends, tinsel, trumpery' (A., D., Arist.). ◅?▻ •COMP As a first member in ῥωπο-πώλης [m.] 'seller of petty wares' (LXX, H.).
•DER ῥωπ-ικός 'belonging to tinsel, false, worthless' (Plb., Plu., AP), -εύειν· ῥωποπωλεῖν 'to deal in petty wares' (H.); also -ίζω (Ion Trag.; meaning unclear)?
•ETYM No etymology; perhaps related to ►ῥώψ.

ῥωχμός ⇒ῥήγνυμι.

ῥώχω [v.] 'to hiss, rattle' (Sor.). ◅?▻
•VAR ῥώχειν· βρύχειν τοῖς ὀδοῦσι 'to bite with or grind the teeth' (H.); ῥωχμός [m.] (v.ll. ῥωγ-, ῥοχ-, ῥογ-) 'hissing' (medic.).
•ETYM These are all sound-imitating words; cf. ►ῥάζω.

ῥώψ 1 [f.] · βοτάνη ἁπαλή 'a delicate grass' (H.). ◅PG?▻
•VAR Plur. ῥῶπες [f.] 'brushwood, low shrub wood, shrubbery, bush' (Od., Lib.).
•DER ῥωπ-ήϊα [pl.] (Il.), -ίον [n.] (D. C.), -άς [f.] (Opp.), -αξ [m.] (Suid.) 'id.'; -ήεις 'overgrown with bush' (Q. S.).
•ETYM The word ῥώψ may be related to ►ῥαπίζω, χρυσό-ρραπις (with ►ῥάβδος, ►ῥάμνος), and also to ►ῥέπω, ►ῥέμβομαι, but connections outside Greek are not found. The word may be of Pre-Greek origin.

ῥώψ 2 [?] Egyptian word for 'ship'; cf. πλοῖον παπύρινον, ὃ καλεῖται Αἰγυπτιστὶ ῥώψ (UPZ 81: II 7 [Ptol.]); also ρωμισις 'id.' (pap.); miswritten in ῥώνιξις· ποταμίας νεὼς εἶδος 'kind of river ship' (H.), see Lidén Glotta 42, 149 with literature. ◅LW Eg.▻

•ETYM Borrowed from Eg. rms 'ship' (see also Schwyzer: 277).

Σ

σά [interr. pron.] = τίνα, in σά μάν = τί μήν 'how so?' (Megar. in Ar. Ach. 757, 784). ⊲IE $*k^wi$- 'who?'⊳ •ETYM Like Boeot. τά (Pi. O. 1, 82), σά reflects *κι̯-α, ntr.plur. of τίς 'who?'. It is formally identical to OLat. quia-nam 'why?', going back to IE $*k^wi\text{-}h_2$. It is also found in Ion. ἅ-σσα, Att. ἅ-ττα (see Schwyzer: 616, 319); cf. on ► τίς.

σαβακός [adj.] 'damaged, rotten', of inner organs (Hp.), 'effeminate, womanish' (AP), = ὁ σαθρός. Χῖοι 'unsound (Chios)' (H.); on the meaning Luck Phil. 100 (1956): 275f. ⊲PG(V)⊳ •DER Besides, σαβάξας· δια-σκεδάσας, διασαλεύσας 'scattering through, shaking through' (H.); σαβάκτης [m.] 'the shatterer', a house-goblin (Hom. Epigr. 14, 9), fem. σαβακτίδες· ὀστράκινα ζῴδια 'earthen figures' (H.); σαβακῶς· αὐστηρῶς, ξηρῶς, τραχέως 'harshly, dry, roughly' (H.).
•ETYM The formation can be compared with μαλακός, τριβακός, etc., but the etymology is unknown. Fur.: 241 connects ► σαυκόν · ξηρόν. Συρακόσιοι 'dry; lean' (H.), which very strongly suggests Pre-Greek origin for this word.

σάβανον [n.] 'large linen cloth' (pap., Alex. Trall.). ⊲LW Sem.⊳
•DER Diminutive -ιον [n.].
•ETYM The word σάβανον is a loan from Semitic, cf. Arab. sabanijjat 'cloth produced in Saban (near Baghdad)' (see Lewy 1895: 127; cf. Schwyzer: 308). Borrowed as Lat. sabanum (see WH s.v.); from Latin, or from Greek, were borrowed Go. and OHG saban 'σινδών, pall, linen cloth', Ru. sávan 'pall', etc.

σαβαρίχις [f.] 'vagina' (Telecl.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Also -ίχη (H., Phot.), σαμαρίχη (Theognost.); also σάραβος (H., Phot.; with metathesis?).
•ETYM A diminutive formation in -ιχ-, characteristic of lower registers. Wrong etymologies by Grošelj Živa Ant. 2 (1952): 215 and Brugmann IF 39 (1917-1921): 114ff. If the variation β/μ is old, the word is Pre-Greek; cf. Fur.: 221.

σαββάτωσις [f.] referring to a groin disease in Alexandria (Apion, J.). ⊲LW Sem.⊳ •VAR Shortened form σαββώ [f.].
•ETYM The word is derived from σάβαττα 'sabbath', as it originally denoted a 'sabbath-disease' (on the meaning, see Scheller Glotta 34 (1955): 298ff.). Ultimately of Aramaic origin.

σάβυττος [m.] · εἶδος ξυρήσεως εἰς καλλωπισμόν ... τινὲς δὲ τὸ γυναικεῖον 'kind of shaving for ornamentation; female genitals' (H.). ◁PG?(S)▷ •VAR Also -ττης (Phot.), -ττα [f.] (Com. Adesp.).
•ETYM Although there is a certain similarity with ►βύττος · γυναικὸς αἰδοῖον 'female genitals' (H.), that connection remains uncertain. Cf. also σαβαρίχις and σάκαν· τὸ τῆς γυναικός (H.); compare further the literature on σαβαρίχις, and see Kretschmer Glotta 13 (1924): 271, Sommer 1948: 192, and s.v. ►σαίνω. For σάβυττος, Pre-Greek origin is certainly worth considering.

σάγαρις, -ιος, -εως [f.] 'axe, battle axe', used by Scythians, Persians and other peoples (Hdt., X., etc.); acc. to H. = πελέκιον μονόστομον 'little one-edged axe'; called ἀμφιθηγής by AP 6, 94. ◁?▷ •ETYM A foreign word without etymology. Alessio Studi etruschi 18 (1945): 142 compared Lat. sagitta 'arrow', Berb. zaġāja 'javelin', but one would rather of course expect Iranian origin.

σαγή [f.]⇒σάττω.

σαγήνη [f.] 'large fishing net, trawl' (LXX, NT, Babr., Plu., etc.). ◁PG▷ •VAR Cypr. ἀγάνα (H.), see Bechtel 1921, 1: 412.
•COMP As a first member e.g. in σαγηνο-βόλος [m.] 'who casts a net' (AP).
•DER σαγηναῖος [adj.] 'belonging to the net' (AP); σαγην-εύω [v.] 'to catch with the net', mostly metaphorically, e.g. of soldiers that catch everything alive as they form a line and sweep over a country (Hdt., Pl., Str., Luc., etc.), with -εύς [m.] 'net fisher' (D. S., Plu., AP, etc.), back-formation (Boßhardt 1942: 76), -ευτής (Plu., AP), -ευτήρ (AP) 'id.'; -εία [f.] 'catch by net' (Plu., Him.).
•ETYM The ending of σαγήνη recalls ἀπήνη, εἰρήνη, etc. The connection with σάττω (Pok. 1098) is semantically insufficiently founded. Because of the Cypr. by-form and the attractive connection with ►σάγουρον with a different suffix, the etymon is without a doubt Pre-Greek (foreign origin was suggested already by Schwyzer: 490, 322, Lamer IF 48 (1930): 231, and Chantraine 1956a: 10). The word was borrowed into Latin as sagēna.

σάγος [m.] 'woollen cloak, soldier's cloak', e.g. used by Gauls, Hispanics (Plb., D. S., App., etc.). ◁LW Celt.▷ •ETYM The word σάγος was borrowed from Lat. sagus, -um 'id.', in turn a loan word from Celtic (see WH s.v.).

σάγουρον [n.] · γυργάθιον 'net' (H.); LSJ gives 'net for suspending substances in fluids', but see also their Supp. ◁?▷ •ETYM Because of the probable etymological connection with ►σαγήνη, σάγουρον is likely to be of Pre-Greek origin.

σαθέριον [n.] a marine quadruped, not further defined (Arist. HA 594b). ◁PG▷ •VAR σαθρίον (v.l.).
•ETYM Fur.: 190 supposes that the word denotes a beaver, and compares σατύριον, probably 'sorex moschatus' (Arist. l.c., 32); according to H., ζῷον τετράπουν ἢ λιμναῖον 'four-footed water-animal'. He further adduces Basque satefo 'field-mouse' and sator 'mole'. It is possible that σάθραξ· φθείρ 'louse; a sea-fish' (H.) is somehow related as well.

σάθη [f.] 'penis' (Ar. Lys. 1119, probably also Archil. 67). ◁?▷
•COMP ἀνδρο-σάθων, -σάθης [m.] name of Priapus (AB, H., etc.).
•DER σάθων, -ωνος [m.] = πόσθων 'penis; foreskin' (Telecl. etc.).
•ETYM The formation can be compared with πόσθη, etc. (cf. Chantraine 1933: 367). Perhaps related to ►σαίνω, if from 'tail' (compare MoHG Schwanz 'tail; penis').

σαθρός [adj.] 'unsound, broken, broke; unhealthy, weak' (IA). ◁PG(V)▷ •DER σαθρ-ότης [f.] 'unsoundness' (late), -όομαι, -όω [v.] 'to be unsound; make unsound' (LXX, pap. VI^p), with -ωσις, -ωμα (pap. VI^p, H.).
•ETYM The etymology is unexplained: Chantraine 1933: 224 and 373 thinks of σήθω (rejected by Benveniste 1935: 202); perhaps a contamination of σαπρός with an unknown word? Fur.: 196 connects ψαθυρός 'brittle' and ψαιδρά· ἀραιότριχα 'with thin hair' (H.), and concludes that the word is Pre-Greek.

σαίνω [v.] 'to wag with the tail, waggle', metaphorically 'to blandish, flatter' (Od., Hes.). ◁?▷
•VAR Rare aor. ἔσηνα (e.g. ρ 302), ἔσᾶνα (Pi. O. 4, 6, P. 1, 52).
•COMP Also with περι-, προσ-, etc.; as a first member in σαίνουροι καὶ σαινουρίδες· οἱ τὰς οὐρὰς συνεχῶς κινοῦντες ἵπποι καὶ κύνες 'horses and dogs shaking their tails continuously' (H.).
•DER σάννιον· τὸ αἰδοῖον ἀντὶ τοῦ κέρκιον. τὸ γὰρ αἰδοῖον ἐσθ' ὅτε οὐρὰν ἔλεγον, ὡς Εὔπολις (H.), so originally 'tail' (the -νν- is hypocorrect gemination); also σαν-νίων (Arr.), σάννας (Cratin.), σάννορος (Rhinth.) [m.] 'fool', σαννάδας· τὰς ἀγρίας αἶγας 'wild goats' (H.).
•ETYM The etymology is unexplained. We must reject the suggestion of Solmsen IF 30 (1912): 38 ff., who reconstructs a word for 'penis' and connects Lith. tvìnstu, tvìnti 'to swell out (of a river)', etc., which seems to go back to tunH-*, and connects other words in σα- as well, e.g. ►σάτυρος.

σαίρω 1 [v.] 'to sweep (out)' (S., E.), metaphorically 'to clear away' (BCH 29, 204; Crete). ◁?▷
•VAR Aor. σῆραι, Cret. σᾶραι, fut. σαρῶ (H.).
•COMP As a first member perhaps in σαράπους (Gal.), acc. σαράποδα, σάραπον (Alc.); acc. to D. L. 1, 81: διὰ τὸ πλατύπουν εἶναι καὶ ἐπισύρειν τὼ πόδε (cf. Bechtel 1921, 1: 125, Sommer 1948: 26[4] and 188); acc. to Gal., however, to σέσηρα (►*σαίρω 2); the word σαραποδ- is unexplained.
•DER 1. σάρον [n.] 'brushings' (Sophr., Ion Trag., Call.), 'broom' (Epid. IV[a], etc.) with σαρ-όομαι, -όω 'to be swept out; sweep out, sweep clean' (Lyc., NT, pap., etc.), -ωσις [f.] 'sweep out' (pap.), -ωμα [n.] 'brushings' (AB et al.), -ωται [m.pl.] 'sweeper' (Phanagoria), -ωτρον [n.] 'broom' (Suid.); 2. σάρματα [n.pl.] 'brushings' (Rhinth.), σαρμός· σωρὸς γῆς, καὶ κάλλυσμα ... 'heap of earth; sweeping' (H.).

•ETYM The word σαίρω is commonly connected with σύρω 'draw, drag (along)'. The initial was always thought to have been *tu̯r̥-, with σαρ- and συρ- (with analogical σ-) as different vocalizations of a PIE zero grade *tur- (σαίρω < *tur-ie/o-, like e.g. ► σάρξ 'flesh' < *turḱ-).
A full grade thematic present *tuer-e/o- is found in Germanic, e.g. OHG dweran 'turn around quickly, stir', OE þweran 'id.', and in Indic: Ved. (KS) tvárate 'to hurry'. Connection within Greek with ὀτρύνω 'to encourage' (see ► ὀτραλέως) is highly improbable, as the existence of a prefix ὀ- is doubtful.
Perhaps nominal derivations like zero grade Lat. turma 'troop, squadron', turba, and ► σύρβη, ► τύρβη belong here, as well. The word ► τορύνη is not related.

σαίρω 2 'to show one's teeth'. ⇒σέσηρα.

σάκκος [m.] 'bag (made of goat hair); sieve; burlap, a large cloak made of the same', e.g. used as a wedding dress (Hdt., Hippon., Ar., LXX, NT, inscr. and pap.). ⊲LW Sem.⊳
•VAR Also σάκος (Att.?).
•COMP As a first member e.g. σακκο-φόρος [m.] 'bag bearer' (pap., etc.).
•DER 1. Diminutive σακ(κ)-ίον (Hp., Ar., X., Men., etc.), -ίδιον (pap.), -άλιον (gloss.); 2. -ούδια [n.pl.] meaning unclear (pap.), after λινούδιον, see λίνον; 3. -ᾶς [m.] 'sack bearer' (inscr. Corycos, pap.); 4. -ίας οἶνος 'sieved wine' (Poll.); 5. -ινος 'made of burlap' (sch.); 6. Denominative σακ(κ)-έω 'to sieve' (Hdt. 4, 23), -εύω acc. to Ael. Dion. et al., -ίζω 'id.' (Thphr., etc.). Also σακτός 'sieved' (Eup. 439), seemingly a primary ptc.
•ETYM The word σάκκος is a loan from Semitic; cf. Hebr. (Phoen.) śaq 'cloth of hair, bag, mourning-dress' (Lewy 1895: 87; Bertoldi ZRPh. 68 (1952): 73ff. calls it Mediterranean). Lat. saccus (cf. also MoE sack), etc. are borrowed from Greek.

σακνός [m.] 'broken, leaky' (πίθοι). ⇒σαχνός.

σάκος [n.] 'shield (made of leather); long shield, tower shield' (Hom., also A., etc.), cf. on ► ἀσπίς. ⊲LW Sem.⊳
•COMP Some compounds: e.g. σακέσ-παλος 'shield-swaying' (E 126, Call., Nonn.), σακέσ-φόρος 'shield-bearing' (B., S., E.), φερε-σσακής 'id.' (Hes. Sc., Nonn.), cf. Trümpy 1950: 20ff., and extensively Ruijgh 1957: 94f.
•ETYM Usually argued to be of Indo-European origin, and connected with Skt. tvác- [f.] 'skin, hide' and Hitt. tuekka- 'body'. However, it might instead be borrowed from Semitic, since e.g. Akk. saqqu and Hebr. śaq are formally and semantically very close (E. Masson 1967: 24).

σάκτας ⇒σάττω.

σάκχαρ, -αρος [n.] 'sugar' (Gal.). ⊲LW Ind.⊳
•VAR σάκχαρι [n.] (Peripl. M. Rubr., Orib.), after μέλι, etc.; also -ις [f.], -ον [n.] (Dsc.).
•ETYM Borrowed from MInd. (Pāli) sakkharā- 'sugar' (itself going back to Skt. śárkarā- [f.] 'grit, granulated sugar'; cf. ► κρόκη 2). MoP šakar was also borrowed from Indic and, through Arab. sukkar, it also reached e.g. MoE and Du.: sugar and suiker, respectively. Lat. saccharum was borrowed from Greek σάκχαρον.

σαλαγέω, σαλάκων, etc. ⇒σάλος.

σαλαΐζειν [v.] = θρηνεῖν (Anacr. 167), = κόπτεσθαι (H.); σαλαϊσ-<μός>· κωκυτός 'wailing' (H.). ⊲?⊳ •ETYM Etymology unclear; cf. also ► σαλάμβη.

σαλαμάνδρα [f.] 'salamander, kind of newt' (Arist., Thphr., etc.). ⊲?⊳
•DER σαλαμάνδρειος 'in the way of a salamander' (Nic.).
•ETYM Given its non-Indo-European structure, σαλαμάνδρα may be Pre-Greek. Cf. also on σαύρα, which is probably Pre-Greek, as well.

σαλάμβη [f.] 'light opening, vent-hole' (S. Fr. 1093, Lyc., H.). ⊲PG?(V)⊳ •VAR Also σαλάβη (H., Phot.), -βος (H.).
•ETYM Semitic origin has been proposed for this word; cf. Syr. ṣelpā 'rima portae', *ṣ*ᵊ*laf* 'split, tear apart' (Lewy 1895: 96). Further, similarity with Σαλαμβώ· ἡ Ἀφροδίτη παρὰ Βαβυλωνίοις (H.), Σαλαμβάς· ... ὅτι περιέρχεται θρηνοῦσα τὸν Ἄδωνιν (EM, referring to ► σαλαΐζειν [s.v.]), and Σαλαβακχώ (Ar.) has been observed by Lewy l.c. and Solmsen IF 30 (1912): 42. However, the alternation β/μβ would receive a good explanation under the assumption of Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 203, 286).

σαλαμίνθη [f.] 'spider' (Byzant.). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •ETYM The suffix -ινθη is clearly Pre-Greek, but further connections are unknown.

σάλος [m.] 'turbulent movement of the sea, flushing of the waves; anchorage, roads (as opposed to a protected harbor)' (S., E., Lys., Hell.), metaphorically of an earthquake (E. IT 46), 'turbulent emotion' (LXX, Gal., Max. Tyr.), cf. ἀσαλής, σάλη below. ⊲PG(S,V)⊳ •COMP Some late compounds, e.g. ἐπί-σαλος 'exposed to the σάλος' (Seqund., Peripl. M. Rubr., etc.); probably also in epic κονί-σαλος 'cloud of dust' (see κόνις). With transfer to the s-stems: ἀ-σαλής 'unshaken, unconcerned' (A. Fr. 319 = 634 M.) with ἀσάλ-εια [f.] = ἀμεριμνία, ἀλογιστία (Sophr. 113), ἀσαλεῖν· ἀφροντιστῆσαι 'to be heedless' (H.); σάλη, σάλᾶ [f.] = φροντίς (Et. Gen., H.) is probably a back-formation to the latter.
•DER Denomininatives: 1. σαλεύω, originally of the ship, 'to roll (on the waves)', then 'to throw oneself about, oscillate'; trans. 'to make oscillate, shock' (Att. since A., also Hp., Hell.), also with prefix, e.g. ἀπο-, ἐπι-, δια-; thence σάλευσις (δια-) [f.] 'oscillation' (Arist., etc.), σάλευμα [n.] 'id.' (D. Chr.); 2. σαλόομαι 'to go with a rocking motion' (EM, explaining σαλάκων).
With a velar suffix: 1. σάλαξ, -ακος [m.] 'large sieve of mineworkers' (Arist. or Thphr. apud Poll.), also an Att. name of a potter (Σάλαχς; Krahe IF 57 (1940): 113), -αγξ· μεταλλικὸν σκεῦος 'metallic vessel or implement' (H.); σαλάκων, -ωνος [m.] 'boaster, swaggerer, dandy' (Arist.), with σαλακων-ία (-εία) [f.] (Arist., Alciphr.), -ίζω (δια- Ar.), -ίζομαι, -εύομαι (H., Phot., Suid.); denominative σαλάσσω (ἐκ-) [v.] 'to shake' (Nic., AP), probably directly from σάλος after τινάσσω, ταράσσω, etc.; 2.

σαλαγέω = σαλάσσω, σαλεύω (Opp., Orac. apud Luc.), σαλαγή· βοή 'shout' (H.); cf. παταγέω, πατάσσω.
•ETYM Originally, σάλος was a technical nautical term. Fur.: 256 connects ►θάλασσα / *σάλασσα and ζάλη, ζάλος 'tornado, whirlpool', and concludes that the word is Pre-Greek. Already the velar suffixes, and especially the variation they display, prove Pre-Greek origin for this word: -αγ-, -ακ-, -αγκ-; cf. ►σηλαγγεύς. Lat. salus, salum were possibly borrowed from Greek.

σαλούσιον [n.] 'pot, measure' (POxy. 3060) cf. Mayser-Schmoll 1970 I, 1: 79. ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also -ώσιον, -ώτιον, -ώδιον.
•ETYM In view of the suffix variants, the word is probably Pre-Greek.

σαλός [adj.] 'foolish' (H. s.v. ὑσθλός, sch. Ar. Nu. 397). ◄PG► •VAR Also δαλός (Cyr.) and *ζαλός; the latter is seen in the derivative ζαλαίνω (H., EM 406, 43), see Fur.: 255.
•ETYM Cf. Lat. dalīvus, from *δάλαιος. The variation in the initial (σ-/ζ-/δ-) proves Pre-Greek origin; the root can be reconstructed as *t^yal-.

σάλπη [f.] sea fish, 'Box salpa' (Epich., Arist., etc.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also -ης [m.] (Archipp.), -ος (Arist. v.l.), σάρπη [f.] (Arist.); also σάλπιγξ (Arist.), folk-etymological transformation.
•ETYM The variation ρ/λ is typical for Pre-Greek (Fur.: 387; see also Neumann 1961: 42). Cf. also Lat. salpa (Plin., Ov.), Ital. salpa, sarpa, Fr., MoE saupe (cf. Hubschmid 1963: 13f.; Thompson 1947 s.v.).

σάλπιγξ, -ιγγος [m.] 'trumpet' (Σ 219). ◄PG(S)►
•DER σαλπίζω [v.] 'to blow the trumpet, trumpet' (IA), dialectical innovations -ίσσω, -ίττω, -ίδδω, aor. σαλπ-ίγξαι (Φ 388), -ίσαι (LXX etc.), fut. -ίσω (NT), -ιῶ (LXX), perf. med. σεσάλπι(γ)κται, -ισται (late), rarely with ἐπι- etc.; σαλπιγκτής (Th., X. et al.), -ικτής (Att. etc., inscr.), -ιστής (Hell. and late) [m.] 'trumpet player', -ισμός [m.] -ισμα [n.] (Thd., Poll.) 'trumpet call', -ιστικός 'belonging to the trumpet' (Poll.). Further derivatives: σαλπίγγ-ιον [n.] 'pipe' (Gal.), -ωτός 'trumpet-shaped' (Teos).
•ETYM For the formation, σῦριγξ and φόρμιγξ can be compared (cf. also λύρα, κιθάρα, σαμβύκη, etc.). On the onomatopoeic Lith. švil̃pti 'to pipe' etc., see Fraenkel 1955 s.v. (with references); cf. further Hester Lingua 13 (1965): 364. As a word of Mediterranean culture, σάλπιγξ remains without IE connection; the suffix is Pre-Greek (not in Fur.).

σάμαξ, -ᾰκος [m.] 'bulrush, mat of bulrush' (com. V[a]). ◄PG(S)► •DER -άκιον [n.], a female ornament (Com. Adesp.).
•ETYM Formation like οἶσαξ, etc. (see on ►οἶσος), but further unexplained. Belardi Doxa 3 (1950): 219 rightly rejects a connection with pre-IE sam-* 'water, sea, swamp' (?) by Alessio Studi etruschi 19 (1946-1947): 152. The suffix is Pre-Greek (not in Fur.).

σαμβύκη [f.] 'triangular instrument with four strings' (Arist., etc.), metaph. 'scaling ladder' (Plb., etc.), on the semantic motivation, see Ath. 14, 634a. ◄LW Sem.?►
•VAR Also ζ- (H.).

•DER σαμβυκ-ιστής, fem. -ίστρια 'sambuca-player' (Hell. poet., Plu.), after κιθαριστής, -ίστρια.
•ETYM An Oriental loan word of unknown source; see E. Masson 1967: 91ff. (with extensive treatment and criticism of earlier views, for example on Hebr. $š^e$bākā 'lattice'). On the secondary nasalization, see Schwyzer: 231f. with litt. Borrowed into Lat. as sambūca (WH s.v.).

σάμος [f.] 'hill' (Str. 8, 3, 19; 10, 2, 17); also the island names Σάμος, Σάμη. ◄PG► •ETYM Without a doubt Pre-Greek, as argued by Fick 1905: 54 and 112. Likewise, but with a different interpretation (connected to ἀσάμινθος), Alessio Stud. ital. fil. class. N. S. 20 (1956): 121ff. The IE etymology by Persson 1912(1): 471 can be rejected.

σαμψήρα [f.] an oriental sword (J. A.J. 20, 2, 3). ◄LW Iran.►
•VAR σαμψῆραι· σπάθαι βαρβαρικαί 'broad blades of the barbarians' (Suid.).
•ETYM An Oriental loanword; cf. MoP šamšīr.

σάμψ(ο)υχον [n.] 'marjoram' (Nic., Dsc., Paus. et al.), on the meaning see Andrews Class. Phil. 56 (1961): 78. ◄?►
•DER σαμψ(ο)ύχ-ινος 'made of σ.' (Dsc., Gal. et al.), -ίζω 'to be like σ., season with σ.' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Foreign word of unknown origin (the plant was especially at home in North Africa). Borrowed into Lat. as sampsūc(h)um, -us (WH s.v. sambūcus; see Hester Lingua 13 (1965): 364).

σάν the Doric variant of the Ion. letter σίγμα (Hdt. 1, 139). ◄LW Sem.► •COMP σαμ-φόρας, -ου [m.] 'horse in which a σάν was branded' (Ar.), see Fraenkel 1912: 143.
•ETYM Borrowed from Semitic (e.g. Hebr. šīn). On the sign σαμπῖ (= 900), from Byz. σὰν (= ὡς ἄν 'like') and πῖ, cf. Schwyzer: 149.

σάνδαλον [n.] 'sandal(s)' (h. Merc.); name of a flat fish (Matro), see Strömberg 1943: 37. ◄PG► •VAR Also σάμβαλον (Eumel., Sapph., AP).
•COMP σανδαλοθήκη 'sandal case' (Men., Delos II[a]); σαμβαλ-ούχη, -ουχίς [f.] 'sandal chest' (Herod.), -ίσκα [n.pl.] (Hippon. 18 = 32 Masson; see below).
•DER σανδάλ-ιον (IA), -ίσκον (Ar.); also -ίς, -ίδος [f.], a kind of date (Plin.), -ώδης 'sandal-like' (sch.).
•ETYM For the alternation νδ ~ μβ, compare κορίαμβλον ~ κορίανδρον, which may also be the result of different adaptations of a foreign word (already Schwyzer: 303; see also Kronasser 1962-1987: I 91). Compare further σαγγάριος (H.; s.v. ►σκυτεύς) and τζαγγάριος (τσ-) [m.] 'manufacturer of Parthian τζάγγαι' (pap. VI[p]). Lat. sandalium, MoFr. sandale, MoP ṣandal, etc. were borrowed from Greek. Fur.: 153, 389 also mentions σέμπαδα· ὑποδήματα (H.), perhaps to be read *σέμπαλα?

σανδαράκη [f.] 'sandarac, red arsenic sulphide, realgar, red orpiment' (Hp., Arist., Thphr. etc.), 'bee-bread' (Arist.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also -άχη.

•COMP σανδαρακ-ούργιον [n.] 'sandarac pit' (Str.).
•DER σανδαράκινος 'sandarac-colored, bright red' (Hdt. etc.), σανδαρακίζω 'to be sandarac-colored' (Dsc.).
•ETYM Long taken to be an Oriental loanword from an unknown source. Uhlenbeck PBBeitr. 19 (1894): 327ff. implausibly derived it from OInd. candra-rāga-* 'moon-colored' (Cuendet adapted this to candana-rāga-* 'sand-colored', which is likewise hypothetical; see Mayrhofer KEWA s.v. candanaḥ). LSJ mentions Assyr. šindu arḳu 'green paint', 'yellow sulphide of arsenic'. The variation κ/χ could also point to Pre-Greek origin. Cf. on σάνδυξ.

σάνδυξ 1, -υκος [f.] designation of a bright red colorant, a bright red mineral color, a red transparent fabric, etc. (Str. 11, 14, 9 [conj.], Dsc., Gal. etc.); also a women's cloth. For an extensive discussion of the meaning, see Flobert RPh. 90 (1964): 228ff. ◂PG?(S)▸ •DER σανδύκ-ιον [n.], meaning uncertain, -ινος 'sandyx-colored' (pap.); σανδών, -όνος [m.] designation of a transparent fabric (Lyd. Mag.), formed after σιν-δών?
•ETYM The formation can be compared with βόμβυξ etc.; σανδαράκη seems to be related in some fashion (but cf. also Skt. sindūra- 'red-lead, cinnabar', Assyr. sâmtu, sându 'red stone'?). Borrowed into Lat. as sandyx (Prop., Verg., Plin.). As far as the formation is concerned, Pre-Greek origin is certainly a possibility (cf. ►σάνδυξ 2).

σάνδυξ 2 [?] · κιβωτός 'box, chest' (H.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Also σενδούκη; diminutive σενδούκιον (sch. Ar. Pl. 711 and 809).
•ETYM The formation of the word is Pre-Greek.

σανίς, -ίδος [f.] 'board, plank, wooden scaffold, etc.', plur. also 'tablets used for writing, writing boards' (Att.), 'planks of a gate, wing of a door' (epic). ◂?▸
•DER 1. diminutives σανίδ-ιον [n.] (Att., etc.), σαν-ίσκη [f.] 'painting' (Herod.); 2. σανίδ-ωμα [n.] 'planking' (LXX, Thphr., Plb., etc.), see Chantraine 1933: 187; 3. -ώδης 'plank-like' (late); 4. -όω 'to provide with planks', -ωτός (Hell. and late).
•ETYM The formation is like σελίς, δοκίς, and other technical terms (Chantraine 1933: 337), but the etymology is further unexplained. The connection with ►σαίνω by Solmsen IF 30 (1912): 46f. should be rejected for semantic reasons.

σαννάκιον [n.] 'a kind of cup' (Philem. 87). ◂?▸
•VAR Also -ακρον.
•ETYM Unknown.

σαννᾶς [m.] epithet and personal name, 'μωρός, stupid person' (Cratin., cf. Clark Class. Rev. 69 (1955): 245f.; Colophon). ◂GR?▸
•VAR σαννίων 'id.' (Arr.), σάννορος = μωρός (Rhinth.), probably for -υρος (Kaibel ad loc.); cf. Σαννυρίων. As a PN also Σάνν-ος (Hippon.), -αῖος, -ιος, -υρίων, fem. -ώ (V-IV[a]); Σαννίδωρος nickname of Ἀντίδωρος (Epicur.).
•DER Besides σαννίον = αἰδοῖον 'private parts' (Eup.), σαν<ν>ιόπληκτος· αἰδοιόπληκτος 'struck with shame'(?) (H.); σαννάδας· τὰς ἀγρίας αἶγας 'wild goats' (H.) (formally patronymicon of *σάννος vel sim.); probably also ἐσαθνύριζεν· ἤκαλλεν 'was flattering' (H.) for ἐσαν(ν)-.

•ETYM The names are based, at least in part, on the meaning 'shame'. Frisk and DELG derive it from ►σαίνω; cf. also extensively O. Masson 1962: 165f. Borrowed as Lat. sanna 'grimace', sanniō 'buffoon' (WH s.v.).

σαντονικόν [n.] 'a variety of wormwood from the Santones in Gaul'. ◂GR▸ •ETYM The word is clearly derived from the name of the people.

σάος ⇒σῶς.

σαπέρδης -ου [m.] name of a fish that is identified with the κορακῖνος and the πλατίστακος, which is thought to originate from the Nile and the Black Sea, but also from other waters (Hp., com., etc.). ◂PG(V)▸ •DER σαπερδ-ίς (Arist.), -ιον (Apollod. apud Ath.).
•ETYM Certainly a borrowing. Thompson 1947 s.v. (with extensive treatment) plausibly points to Arab. ṣabār, Copt. šabouri, name of a well-known fish of the Nile, Tilapia nilotica (there is no indication that the Lyd. PN Sa-par-da-a-a has anything to do with this fish, pace Grošelj Živa Ant. 7 (1957): 43). Fur.: 153 adduces σάβειρος· κόραξ 'tub-fish' as a variant. Lat. saperda, a fish, is probably borrowed from the Greek.

σαπρός ⇒σήπομαι.

σαπύλλειν [v.] · σαίνειν. 'Ρίνθων (Fr. 24) 'to fawn (Rhinthon)' (H.). ◂?▸ •ETYM Of unclear etymology (connection with ►σαίνω can be discarded).

σάπφειρος [f.] 'lazurite; sapphire' (Thphr., LXX, etc.). ◂LW Sem.?▸
•DER σαπφείρ-ιον (-ππ-) [n.] 'coloring made of σ.' (pap.), -ινος 'made of σ.' (pap., Philostr., etc.).
•ETYM Certainly somehow related to a similar Semitic word; cf. Hebr. sappīr. Since the Semitic word is probably borrowed itself (E. Masson 1967: 66[2]), we might also consider Pre-Greek origin, in view of the elements -πφ- and -ειρ-ος. Through Lat. sapphirus the word reached the European languages, e.g. as MoE sapphire, MoDu. saffier, etc.

σάπων, -ωνος [m.] 'soap'. ◂LW Celt.?▸
•DER With -ώνιον [n.] 'id.', -ωναρικός 'soap-like, belonging to soap' (late medic. etc.).
•ETYM The word σάπων is usually seen as a borrowing from Lat. sāpō 'id.' (since Plin.), ultimately from Gm. (OHG seifa, OE sāpe, etc.; see WH s.v.). Also worth considering is the alternative proposal by André Ét. celt. 7 (1955-1956): 348ff., who argues that it was borrowed from Asia Minor Celtic instead.

σαραβᾶρα [n.pl.] 'a pantalon worn by the Scythians' (Antiph. 201). ◂LW Iran.▸ •ETYM Certainly borrowed from Iranian; cf. MP šalwār 'trousers' (Knauer Glotta 33 (1954):100-118).

σάραβος ⇒σάρων.

σαράπους, -ποδος [m., f.] 'splayfooted'. ◂PG?▸

•ETYM If the first element σαρα- is not in some way formed from ►σαίρω 1, we might also consider Pre-Greek origin (final -πους could have been adapted secondarily).

σαργάνη [f.] 'plaited basket' (since IV^{a}). ◂PG(V)▸
•DER σαργαν-ίς [f.] (conj. in Cratin.), -ιον, -ίδιον [n.] (pap.) 'id.'. Besides, ταργάναι· πλοκαί, συνδέσεις, πέδαι 'twinings, bindings, shackles' (H.) with τεταργανωμένη = συμπεπλεγμένη, συνειλημμένη 'plaited, gathered together' (H. EM).
•ETYM Instrument term without etymology (cf. Chantraine 1928: 23f.), the formation of which can be compared with πλεκτάνη, ὀρκάνη, etc. (the traditional connection with ►σορός leaves the -γ- unexplained; cf. also on ►τάρπη). The variation σ-/τ- is Pre-Greek (see Fur.: 124; the suggestion of a hyperatticism by Schwyzer: 319 can be discarded) and points to a pre-form t^yarg-an-*.

σαργός [m.] name of a fish, 'Sargus Rondeletii' (com., Arist. etc.). ◂PG?▸
•DER -ίον [n.] 'id.' (Gp.), -ῖνος [m.] name of a sea fish that appears in schools, perhaps 'garfish' (Epich., Dorio, Arist.); cf. κεστρ ῖνος, σαρδῖνος, etc.
•ETYM Word of unknown, perhaps Pre-Greek origin (on the realia, cf. Thompson 1947 s.v.).

σάρδα [f.] 'salted and corned fish' (Diphil. Siph. apud Ath. 3, 120f., Xenocr., Gal.). ◂PG▸ •DER σαρδῖνος, -ίνη 'pilchard, sardelle' (Arist. Fr. 329, Epainet., Gal.), Lat. sarda, sardīna.
•ETYM Probably originally 'the Sardian fish', derived from Sardus 'Sardian, Sardinian', Σαρδώ = Sardinia, named after the place of origin (Strömberg 1943: 86; on the realia, Thompson 1947 s.v.).

σαρδάνιον [n.] of μειδιᾶν, γελᾶν 'to laugh', σαρδάνιος γέλως 'sneering laughter' (υ 292, Pl., Plh., etc.); as a v.l. and late also -όνιον, -όνιος (also -ώ-) after Σαρδόνιος 'Sardinian'; σαρδάζων· μετὰ πικρίας γελῶν 'laughing with bitterness' (Phot., Suid.). ◂?▸ •ETYM The origin of this etymon is debated. In antiquity, it was sometimes connected with σέσηρα, sometimes with a plant from Sardinia (σάρδιον, -άνη, -όνιον) that caused spasmodic laughing. The alternative suggestion by Kretschmer Glotta 34 (1955): 1ff. to connect the name of the Šardana people (neighbours of Egypt), referring to σαρδανάφαλλος· γελωτοποιός (H.), remains unclear in its details.

σάρδιον [n.] name of a gem, 'carnelian, sardine' (Pl., Thphr., etc.), also = 'seal' (inscr.). ◂?▸
•VAR σαρδώ, -οῦς [f.]; λίθος σάρδιος, σάρδινος or σαρδόνιον 'id.' (rare and late).
•COMP As a first member in σαρδ-όνυξ, -υχος [m.] 'sardonyx' (Hell. and late).
•ETYM Probably originally 'stone from Sardes', named after the place of origin (the Semitic etymology by Lewy 1895: 57f. is doubtful). In Latin, we find several loanwords: sarda, -ius, -inus lapis, sardonyx. See, however, Hester Lingua 13 (1965): 375.

σαρδόνες, -όνων [f.pl.] 'the rope sustaining the upper edge of a standing hunting net' (Poll., H.). ◂?▸
•VAR σαρδόνια [n.pl.] (X. Cyn. 6, 9: gen. σαρδονίων wrong for -όνων?).
•ETYM A technical term without etymology.

σάρι ⇒σίσαρον.

σάρῖσα [f.] 'Macedonian lance' (Thphr., Plb.); Lat. sarīs(s)a. ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Etymology unknown (the hypothesis by von Blumenthal 1930: 21 is insufficiently founded). Perhaps Pre-Greek (Fur.: 387).

σαρκάζω [v.] a rare verb of controversial meaning: related to dogs that are stubborn and bite ravenously (γλισχρότατα σαρκάζοντες Ar. Pax 482), to grazing horses (Hp. Art. 8); to biting the lips angrily (Gal. 19, 136), with which seems to agree the meaning given in lexica 'to mock bitterly, grimly' (ἐπι-, Ph.), e.g. H.: σαρκάζει· μειδιᾷ, εἰρωνεύεται, καταγελᾷ, ἀπὸ τοῦ σεσηρέναι 'smiles, feigns ignorance, derides'; σαρκάσας· μετὰ πικρίας ἢ ἠρέμα τὰς τῶν χειλέων σάρκας διανοίξας, γελάσας 'revealing the flesh of the lips gently or with bitterness; laughing'. ◂GR?▸
•DER σαρκασμός [m.] 'grim scorn' (Hdn., Phryn.); unclear is the com. formation σαρκασμο-πιτυοκάμπται [pl.] (Ar. Ra. 966).
•ETYM No completely convincing argumentation for the most obvious connection with σάρξ has been given yet. In Ar. Pax 482, a meaning 'to remove the flesh, gnaw the flesh from the bones' (cf. σαρκίζω) is quite possible; the word would then have been transferred to grazing horses (Hp.). In its further semantic development, it may have been influenced by ►σέσηρα (see H. above σαρκάζων ... καὶ σεσηρώς Ph. 2, 597). The form σύρκιζε· σάρκαζε (H.) can either be Aeolic (σύρκες = σάρκες), or it may show influence from ►σύρω.

σάρμα [n.] 'chasm, abyss' ◂PG?▸
•DER Perhaps σάραβος· τὸ γυναικεῖον αἰδοῖον 'female private parts' (H.) and σάρων. λάγνος. τινὲς δὲ τὸ γυναικεῖον 'lustful; the female pudenda' (H.). See on ►σῆραγξ.
•ETYM Sometimes connected with the verb ►σέσηρα 'to show one's teeth, to grin' via a meaning "yawning chasm", but if the connection with σάραβος 'female private parts' is correct, the interchange between β and μ, as well as the extra α in the latter form, could rather point to a Pre-Greek origin (not mentioned in Fur.).

σαρμεύω [v.] 'to raise a heap (of earth, of sand)' (Tab. Heracl. 1, 136 οὐδὲ γαιῶνας θησεῖ ... οὐδέ σαρμευσεῖ). ◂?▸ •ETYM From σαρμός· σωρὸς γῆς καὶ κάλλυσμα. ἄλλοι ψάμμον, ἄλλοι χόρτον (H., Hippon. 165a); see ►σαίρω 1 (O. Masson 1962: 180).

σάρξ, σαρκός [f.] 'flesh, piece(s) of meat' (Il.). ◂IE turḱ-* 'cut'▸ •VAR Often plur., in Hom. almost exclusively (see Schwyzer 1950: 43, Chantraine 1953: 30). Aeol. σύρκες [pl.] (H., EM).
•COMP Many compounds, e.g. σαρκο-φάγος 'eating flesh' (Arist.), λίθος σαρκοφάγος, a stone quarried at Assos (Troas), which was used for funeral monuments and said to have eaten the corpse (Poll. 10, 150, Plin., etc.); from there 'coffin' (inscr.), Lat. LW sarcophagus, OHG sarch, etc.; ἄ-σαρκος 'without flesh, thin' (IA); on -φάγος, see Sommer 1948: 94f.

•DER 1. σαρκ-ίον (Hp., Arist. et al.), -ίδιον (Arist., etc.) [n.] 'piece of flesh', -ίς [f.] 'meat, food' (late pap.); -ῖτις [f.] name of a stone (Plin.); 2. σάρκ-ινος (Att., etc.), -ικός (Hell. and late), -ειος (late) 'fleshy, made of flesh'; -ώδης 'flesh-like' (Hp., X., etc.), -ήρης 'consisting of flesh' (Trag. Adesp.); 3. σαρκ-ίζω 'to scrape clean of flesh' (Hdt.), on the privative meaning see Hudson-Williams Class. Rev. 26 (1912): 122f.), also περι- (medic.), with -ισμός, and ἐκ- (LXX); 4. -όω (περι-, ἐκ- etc.) 'to make fleshy, change into flesh', with -ωμα, -ωσις, -ωτικός (medic. etc.); 5. -άζω s.v.
•ETYM Generally connected with Av. ϑβarəs-, pres. ϑβarəsaiti, properly 'to cut' (upa-, us- etc.), as a simplex 'to shape, create, destine, etc.', from IE turḱ-. Lubotsky Sprache 36 (1994): 94-102 has shown that Skt. tváṣṭar- contains a zero grade (with a < r̥), like Av. ϑβōrəštar- (from ϑβarəštar-*); for OIr. torc 'boar' of the same origin, he reconstructs turḱos*. Discussing the rise of -αρ-, -υρ- as well, Lubotsky rejects a reconstruction tu̯orḱ-*. Different views in Vine 1999b. Alb. shark 'flesh of a fruit' (Jokl IF 44 (1927): 13 ff.) is borrowed from Greek.

σάρων [adj.] λάγνος· τινὲς δὲ γυναικεῖον 'feminine (parts)' (H.). ◂?▸
•VAR Cf. σάραβος· τὸ γυναικεῖον αἰδοῖον 'the female pudenda' (H.).
•ETYM Etymology unknown.

σαρωνίς, -ίδος [f.] 'old hollow oak' (Call. Jov. 22 etc., H.), also with -ο-: σορωνίς· ἐλάτη παλαιά 'old silver fir' (H.); cf. δρυμὸς Σόρων (Paus. 8, 23, 8). ◂PG(V)▸ •ETYM Acc. to Strömberg 1944: 29, from σαρῶνες· τὰ τῶν θηρατῶν λίνα 'the net of hunters' (H.), which remains unconvincing in spite of the parallels adduced. Since the variation between α and ο cannot be explained as e.g. vowel harmony, we have to assume Pre-Greek origin for this word.

σατίναι [f.pl.] 'coach, carriage for women, equipage' (h. Ven., Sapph., Anacr., E. [lyr.]); for the plural, cf. e.g. ὄχεα; for the meaning, see Leumann Herm. 68 (1933): 359f. ◂PG?▸
•DER σάτιλλα· π[η]λειὰς τὸ ἄστρον (H.), the 'cart'; see Scherer 1953: 145.
•ETYM There is a certain similarity between σάτιλλα and Arm. sayl 'car' (also as a constellation, from satili̯a*). This should perhaps be explained as borrowing through e.g. Phrygian. Schmitt Glotta 44 (1966): 148ff. rather argues for a Thracian origin of σάτιλλα, whereas remote resemblance of Arm. sayl with Georg. etli 'car, constellation' is pointed out by Adontz 1937: 5ff. Whatever the precise origin of the words, σατίναι and σάτιλλα are certainly related, but defy derivation from Proto-Indo-European.

σατράπης, -ου [m.] 'satrap', governor of the Persian king (since X.). ◂LW Iran.▸
•DER σατραπ-ικός 'belonging to the satrap' (Arist., etc.), [f.] -ίς (Philostr.), -εύω [v.] 'to be a satrap, rule as a satrap' (X., etc.) with -εία, Ion. -ηΐη [f.] 'the office or province of a satrap, satrapy' (since Hdt.); -εῖα [n.pl.] 'the palace of a satrap' (Hld.).
•ETYM From OIran. xšaϑra-pā-* 'protecting the empire' (OP xšaça-pāvan-), from xšaϑra- (see ►κτάομαι) and pāiti (see ►ποιμήν). The frequent variants in inscriptions ξατρ-, ἐξα(ι)τρ-, ἐξαιθρ- (also σαδρ-) represent the OP initial xš- (and partly also the internal dental) in a more exact way, but they are also partly due to folk etymology: ἐξατρ- must have its initial ἐ- from ἐξ- (Schwyzer: 206 and 329); conversely, the explanation of the αι-diphthong by Kretschmer Sprache 2 (1950-1952): 70 is hardly convincing. Cf. also Skt. kṣatrapa-, etc. (Schmitt ZDMG 117 (1967): 131).

σάττω [v.] 'to stuff, compress, pack, load, equip' (IA, Cret.). ◂IE tuenk-* 'press together'▸ •VAR Ion. σάσσω (Hp.), Cret. (Gortyn) συνεσσάδδη, aor. σάξαι, pass. σαχθῆναι, perf. med. σέσαγμαι.
•COMP Also with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-.
•DER 1. σαγή or σάγη [f.] (acc. after Hdn. 1, 309) 'pack, equipment' (since A.), also 'packsaddle' (pap., Babr. etc.); 2. σάγμα (ἐπί-) [n.] 'coat, cloak' (E., Ar.), 'packsaddle' (LXX, Str., pap., etc.), diminutive -άτιον [n.] (Arr.); -ατᾶς [m.] 'saddler' (pap.); 3. σάκτας [m.] 'bag, pouch' (Ar. Pl. 681, Poll.), probably from 'stuffer' (Björck 1950: 68), also = ἰατρός (Boeot., Stratt.), probably as a nickname (Bechtel 1921, 1: 310); 4. σακτήρ = θύλακος 'sack' (H.); 5. σάκτωρ, -ορος [m.] 'crammer' (A. Pers. 924 [anap.]), 6. σάκτρα [f.] = φορμός (Phot.); 7. σάξις (ἐπί-) [f.] 'cramming' (Arist., Thphr.); 8. σακτός 'crammed' (Antiph., pap.).
•ETYM The forms σάττω, σάξαι, and σέσαγμαι form a regular morphological system, which includes the nominal derivations. Of the latter, σαγή and σάγμα have analogical -γ- (Bechtel 1921, 2: 745 implausibly argues for the converse, claiming that γ is original as in Cret. σάδδη, whereas σάττω would be analogical after σάξαι). The root tuenk-* is found in Germanic (OHG dwingan 'to compress, coerce') and in Lith. tveñkti, 1sg. tvenkiù 'to dam up, etc.'; see LIV² s.v. The connection with ToAB twāṅk-, however, which is maintained by Adams 1999 s.v., is difficult, both because of the difference in the preforms needed (IE tue-n-k-* for Tocharian, the vocalism being arrived at through an intermediate noun) and because of the uncertain meaning (traditionally 'to force in') of the poorly-attested Tocharian verb. Skt. tvanakti (lex.) 'to draw together' is unreliable; see Mayrhofer KEWA s.v. Cf. also ►σηκός and ►σωκός; also ►συχνός.

σάτυρος [m.] 'Satyr', mostly plur. as a designation of mythical beings, which belong to the company of Dionysus and are often represented as (male) goats (since Hes. Fr. 198, 2); metaphorically of apes with a tail (Paus., Ael.). ◂PG(S)▸ •DER 1. Diminutive σατυρ-ίσκος [m.] (Theoc. et al.), also as a plant name (Ps.-Dsc.), -ίδιον [n.] (Stratt.); 2. -ικός 'satyr-like, belonging to the satyr play' (Pl., X., Arist., etc.), -ιος 'id.' (pap.), -ώδης 'satyr-like' (Luc. et al.); 3. -ιον [n.] name of several plants, which were used for means of sexual arousal (Dsc., Plu., Gal. etc.), see Strömberg 1940: 93 and 100, also name of an aquatic animal (Arist.); 4. -ιστής [m.] 'actor in a satyr play' (D. H.), after κιθαριστής, etc.; 5. -ιάω 'to suffer from satyriasis' (Arist., medic.) with -ίασις, Ion. -ίησις, also -ι(α)σμός [m.] (medic.); also -ιακός 'causing satyriasis' (Ruf.), -ιακή [f.] 'remedy against satyriasis' (medic.).

•ETYM The etymology of σάτυρος is unknown. A number of hypotheses have been proposed, but none of them makes sense: from a word *σήν 'penis' and a second member 'swell' (see ►σαίνω), by Solmsen IF 30 (1912): 36ff.; a strengthening prefix σα- and the same element 'swell' (Brugmann IF 39 (1917-1921): 114ff.); from ψῆν with a suffix -τυ-ρο-ς (Grošelj Živa Ant. 2 (1952): 215ff.); borrowed from Illyrian, going back to *seh_1- 'sow' and cognate with Lat. sator (Krahe 1955: 37ff.); borrowed from Illyrian, but ultimately from *seh_2- 'satiate', identical with Lat. satur (Kerényi Studi e materiali di storia delle religioni 9 (1933): 151 ff., Kerényi Rev. Int. ét. balk. 2 (1934-1936): 21).
Yet for such a mythical word, Pre-Greek origin seems likely in the first place, and this idea is even corroborated by the suffix -υρ-. Cf. ►Σιληνός and ►τίτυρος.

σαυᾶδαι · σαῦδοι· Ἀμερίας τοὺς σειλεινοὺς οὕτω καλεῖσθαι φησιν ὑπὸ Μακεδόνων (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown. See Kalléris 1954: 259f.

σαυκόν [adj.] · ξηρόν. Συρακούσιοι 'dry (Syracusian)' (H.). ◁PG(V)▷ •ETYM A number of wrong etymologies have been proposed, e.g. borrowing from an originally Italic word related to ►αὖος; other hypotheses can be found in Pisani RILomb. 73:2 (1939-40): 25, Bechtel 1921, 2: 287, and Carnoy Ant. class. 24 (1955): 23. Conversely, Fur.: 110, 134, 229, 241 convincingly compares σαυχμόν· σαχνόν, χαῦνον. σαθρόν, ἀσθενές (H.), ►σαβακός 'weak, moldered, smashed' (H.), and σαβακῶς· αὐστηρῶς, ξηρῶς, τραχέως (H.) with σαβάξας· διασκεδάσας, διασαλεύσας (H.). It follows that the word is Pre-Greek.

σαυκρόν [adj.] · ἁβρόν, ἐλαφρόν, ἄκρον 'delicate, light, highest'; σαυκρόποδες· ἁβρόποδες 'delicate-footed' (H.). On the combination of suffixes -κρ-, see Chantraine 1933: 225, Schwyzer: 496. ◁PG(V)▷ •DER In H. also σαυχμόν· σαχνόν, χαῦνον, σαθρόν, ἀσθενές 'tender, porous, unsound, feeble'; with ψ-: ψαυκρός· καλλωπιστής, ταχύς, ἐλαφρός, ἀραιός 'dandy, swift, light, thin'; ψαυκρὸν γόνυ· κοῦφον 'light', ψαυκρόποδα· κουφόποδα 'light-footed' (folk-etymologically connected by H. with ἄκρος and ψαύειν).
•ETYM The combination of σαυκρός with ψαυκρός (and σαυχμός; s.v. ►σαυκόν) shows that the word is Pre-Greek.

σαῦλος [adj.] Poetical adjective of unclear and varying meaning, referring to walking and movement (Treu 1955: 253 and 295): σαῦλα βαίνειν h. Merc. 28 (of a tortoise), Anacr. 168 (Bacchantes), Semon. 18 (horse), σαῦλαι Βασσαρίδες (Anacr. 55), explained by H. with κοῦφα, ἥσυχα, τρυφερά 'light, quiet, dainty' and with ἁβρόν, κοῦφον, ἄκρον, τρυφερόν 'delicate, light, highest, dainty'; acc. to sch. Ar. V. 1169 = τὸ φαῦλον καὶ διερρυηκός, so 'light, dainty, delicate, prancing' vel sim.? ◁PG▷ •COMP As a first member in σαυλο-πρωκτιάω (Ar. V. 1173).
•DER σαυλόομαι (E. Cyc. 40: κῶμοι ... ἀοιδαῖς βαρβίτων σαυλούμενοι), acc. to H. τρυφᾶν, θρύπτεσθαι, ἐναβρύνεσθαι 'delicacy, to be broken small, to be effeminate', δια-σαυλόομαι (Ar. Fr. 624), διασαυλούμενον· διακινούμενον καὶ ἐναβρυνόμενον, ἢ διασειόμενον (H.), with σαύλωμα· θρύμμα 'piece' (H.).

•ETYM The word σαῦλος rhymes with φαῦλος; the words have possibly influenced each other (other barytone adjectives in -λος are μάχλος, κτίλος, ἕωλος). Moreover, we find σαυνά (σαῦνα?)· ἁπαλά 'weak' (H.) with a suffix -ν-. It is difficult to offer an etymological explanation (cf. on ►σαύρα), first and foremost because of the unclear meaning. The word σαῦλος presumably belongs to a group of Pre-Greek words (see ►σαυκός).

σαυνίον [n.] designation of a javelin used by foreign peoples (Men., Str., D. S.), 'penis' (Cratin. 443). ◁?▷
•VAR Also σαύνιον.
•DER σαυνιάζω 'to throw a σ.' (D. S.), with -αστάς (Dor.) [m.] (Lyr. Alex. Adesp.).
•ETYM The etymology of this word is unexplained; cf. on ►σαύρα.

σαύρα [f.] 'lizard' (A. Fr. 92 M., Hdt., Arist., Theoc.), also = σαλαμάνδρα (Thphr.), metaphorically as a plant name = κάρδαμον (Nic.), 'penis of a boy' (AP), 'plaited case made of palm bark, used in setting dislocated fingers' (medic.). Also σαῦρος [m.] 'id.' (Hdt. [v.l.], Hp., Epich., Arist., Nic.); metaphorically as a fish name = τράχουρος (Alex., Arist., Gal.), after the color (cf. Strömberg 1943: 121). ◁PG▷
•VAR Ion. -ρη.
•COMP As a first member in σαυρο-κτόνος [m.] 'killer of lizards' (Plin.); on σαυρο-βριθές, see below.
•DER 1. plant names σαυρ-ίδιον [n.] (Hp., Gal.), -ίγγη [f.] (H.), cf. e.g. φυσίγγη = φῦσιγξ to φῦσα, also -ῖτις [f.] (Ps.-Dsc.), cf. Strömberg 1940: 130. 2. fish name -ίς [f.] (Suid.). 3. -ῖται· εἶδός τι ὄφεων 'a kind of serpent' (H.). 4. -ίγγη also = τὸ ζῷον ἡ σαύρα (H.), saurītis also a precious stone that was allegedly found inside a lizard (Plin.). 5. -ήτης [m.] 'keeper of crocodiles' (pap.). 6. σαυρωτή· ποικίλη 'dappled', -ωτοῖς δόρασι· τοῖς σαυρωτῆρας ἔχουσι κατὰ τῆς ἐπιδορατίδος (H.). 7. σαυρωτήρ, -ῆρος [m.] (K 153, Hdt. 7, 41, Plb.) 'lance shoe, bottom end of a lance that could be stuck into the ground, vel sim.'; cf. instrument names like τροπωτήρ, σφυρωτήρ, to this σαυρωτός and σαύρα = 'case' (see above); in the same meaning also σαῦρος in σαυρο-βριθὲς ἔγχος (Trag. Adesp. 264); the lance-shaft was probably compared with the long tail of a lizard (cf. οὐρίαχος). 8. PN Σαυρίας, Σαύρων etc. (IA, etc.).
•ETYM Without etymology, like many other words for 'lizard'. The words σαύρα, σαῦρος, etc. are often connected with a group of other words starting with σαυ-: σαῦλος, σαυνός, and σαυνίον, as well as σαυκρός (see Frisk), but there seems no reason for this. As the animal was not a part of the PIE world, the word must be of local, i.e. of Pre-Greek origin; it is not mentioned by Fur. The word dinosaur was coined in 1841 by the English paleontologist R. Owen, with dino- from δεινός 'terrible'.

σαύσαξ [acc.pl.] a leguminous plant (Com. Adesp.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR σαύσακας· τυροὺς ἁπαλοὺς εὐτρόφους. καὶ δοκοῦσι δὲ οὗτοι ἐπιφόρους ποιεῖν πρὸς συνουσίαν 'soft, nourishing cheeses' (H.).
•ETYM Older etymologies involve connections with σαυκρόν, σαυχμόν, etc. (see Solmsen 1909: 133, who is hesitant about this), and with σαυσαρόν· ψιθυρόν 'whispering, slanderous' (H.; Pisani RILomb. 73:2 (1939-40): 25[1]), interpreted as 'dry' and connected with ►σαυκόν. The word σαυσαρόν is clearly onomatopoeic, however, in view of the meaning.

Fur.: 301[32] is without a doubt correct in connecting σώσικες· οἱ ἑφθοί κύαμοι 'cooked beans' (H.), which shows that the word is Pre-Greek (interchange ω/αυ).

σαυσαρόν · ψιθυρόν 'whispering, slanderous' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•DER -ισμός 'paralysis of the tongue' (Arist. Probl. 647b).
•ETYM See Pisani RILomb. 73 (1939-40): 509.

σάφα [adv.] 'surely, certainly, definitely', especially with οἶδα, but also with other verbs of knowing and saying (Il.). ⊲?⊳
•DER σαφής [adj.] 'sure, definite, apparent, clear, evident' (Pi., A.), on σαφές (h. Merc.) see below; adverb σαφέως, σαφῶς 'id.' (h. Cer.). An extension is found in σαφ-ηνής, Dor. -ᾱνής (Pi., trag.), adverb -ηνέως (also Hdt.), after ἀπ-, προσ-ηνής etc., with σαφήν-εια [f.] 'clarity, clearness' (Att. since A., Alcmaion), opposed to ἀσάφεια from ἀ-σαφής, σαφην-ίζω 'to make clear, explain' (IA) with -ισμός, -ιστικός (late). Doubtful is σαφήτωρ· μάντις ἀληθής, μηνυτής, ἑρμηνευτής 'genuine seer, informer, interpreter' (H.), as if from *σαφέω (διασαφέω exists since E.); probably arisen from a v.l. at I 404 (for ἀφήτωρ).
•ETYM Of the above words, the adverb σάφα has the earliest attestations and seems to be oldest (Leumann 1950: 112[77]); σαφέως is derived from there (after τάχα : ταχέως), as is the ntr. σαφές (σαφὲς δ' οὐκ οἶδα h.Merc. 208) and σαφέστερον. The form σαφής would be the latest.
The etymology is unexplained. The form σαφής was often analyzed as having a second member related to φάος, φαίνω, the first member being a "strengthening" element σα-, but such an element does not exist. Luther 1935: 61ff. has an extensive treatment of σάφα. Fur.: 344 etc. (see index) suggests several connections (e.g. with σόφος, on the basis of which he concludes that the word is Pre-Greek), but none of them is really evident.

σαχνός [adj.] 'tender, mellow', of κρέα (Gal.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR σαχνόν· ἀσθενές, χαῦνον 'feele, porous' (Il.). Also ►σακνός, MGr. and MoGr. ψαχνός 'thin', σαχρός.
•ETYM Derivation from σώχω, ψώχω 'to rub down' has been assumed, but the details remain unclear. The variations σ-/ψ- and -κ-/-χ- point to Pre-Greek origin; also note σαυχμόν· σαχνόν (H.).

σάω ⇒σήθω.

σβέννυμι [v.] 'to quench, extinguish', pass. 'to be extinguished, become extinct' (IA). ⊲IE *(s)gʷes- 'extinguish'⊳ •VAR σβεννύω (Pi., Hp.), aor. σβέσ(σ)αι (Il.), pass. σβεσθῆναι (IA), fut. σβέσω (A., E.); med. σβέννυμαι (Hes.), aor. σβῆναι (Il.), fut. σβήσομαι (Pl.), perf. ἔσβηκα (A.), ἔσβεσμαι (Parm.). Deviating aor. κατα-σβῶσαι (Herod.).
•COMP Also with prefixes, especially ἀπο- and κατα-.
•DER σβέσις (ἀπό-, κατά-) [f.] 'extinction, putting out' (Arist., etc.), σβεσ-τήρ, -τῆρος [m.] 'extinguisher' (Plu.), -τήριος [adj.] 'useful for extinguishing' (Th., etc.), -τικός [adj.] 'id.' (Arist., etc.); ἄ-σβεστος [adj.] 'unextinguishable' (Hom. et al.), σβεστός (Nonn.), fem. 'unslaked lime' (scil. τίτανος) (Dsc., Plu.), also ἀσβεστήριοι and -ωσις in H. as explanations of κονιαταί and κονίασις 'plastering'.
Glosses in H.: ζείναμεν· σβέννυμεν 'quench', ἐζίνα· ἐπεσβέννυεν (for -είν-?), ἀποζίννυται (written -ξ-, for -ζείν-)· ἀποσβέννυται 'is extinguished'; ζόασον· σβέσον; ζοάσ<εις>· σ[ε]βέσεις.
•ETYM The root of all these forms is σβεσ-, as found in σβέσ-σαι and ἄ-σβεσ-τος. On the basis of the aorist σβέσ(σ)αι, the other forms were created: σβέννυμι < *σβέσ-νυ-μι, σβέσω, σβεσθῆναι, ἔσβεσμαι. Later on, the secondary aorist ἔσβην, σβῆναι was created after ἔστην, ἐκάην, ἐάγην, etc., and then σβήσομαι, ἔσβηκα were formed after this. The form κατα-σβῶσαι falls outside this system. It could be interpreted as an iterative (*σβοῆσαι), for which we could compare ζόασον, ζοάσεις as attested in H. The glosses with ζ- may indicate that σβέσ- < PIE *sgʷes- developed into σδεσ- dialectally. If correct, this *sgʷes- may be compared with e.g. Skt. jásate 'is extinguished', jāsayati 'to exhaust', Lith. gèsti 'to be extinguished, go out', caus. gesýti 'to extinguish, put out', OCS u-gasiti, 1sg. u-gašǫ 'to extinguish' < PIE *gʷōs-, Go. qist 'destruction', ToAB käs- 'to extinguish'. However, Hitt. kišt-ᵃʳⁱ 'to be extinguished, perish' is incompatable with the labiovelar in σβέννυμι. If we posit a pure velar g, which is possible for all other languages, σβέννυμαι and Go. qist must be separated. The initial σ- in Greek is aberrant; cf. e.g. Brugmann-Delbrück 1897-1916 1: 590 and Schmidt Sprache 22 (1976): 40-49, who assumes that σβ- is metathesized from *βσ-, the regular outcome of an aorist *gʷsē-. This seems unneccesarily complicated.

σβέν(ν)ιον [n.] 'fibrous spathe of a male date-palm' (pap.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

σέβις [?] = πυξίς 'box (of box-wood)' (H.). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

σέβομαι [v.] 'to shy, feel ashamed' (Δ 242), post-Hom. 'to be in awe, honor, worship', especially with regard to the gods. ⊲IE *tiegʷ- 'leave alone, give up'⊳ •VAR Also σέβω (Pi., trag.), rarely in prose (cf. Schwyzer 1950: 234). Non-presentic forms are quite rare: aor. pass. σεφθῆναι (S. Fr. 164, Pl. Phdr. 254b), fut. σεβήσομαι (pap. IIᵖ).
•COMP Rarely with προσ-, ἀντι-.
•DER σέβας [n.] 'awe, amazement, worship, object of awe, object of worship' (epic poet. Il.), only nom. and acc.; plur. σέβη at A. Supp. 755; as a second member of compounds -σεβής (but possibly derived directly from σέβομαι), e.g. εὐ-σεβής 'god-fearing, pious' (Thgn., Pi.), εὐσέβ-εια, -έω, -ημα (from this form and from ἀσέβημα, also a simplex σέβημα [n.] 'worship' (Orph.) is formed). σέβας served as a basis for the aor. σεβάσσατο (Il.), whence pres. σεβάζομαι, aor. pass. σεβασθῆναι (late) = σέβομαι and derivatives σεβάσεις [pl.] 'deferences' (Epicur.), -σμα [n.] 'object of worship, shrine' (D. H., NT), -σμός [m.] 'worship' (Hell. and late), with -σμιος, -σμιότης, -στός 'venerable, reverend, elevated', = Lat. Augustus (D. H., Str.), with -στιος, -στικός, -στεύω, -στεῖον, and a pres. σεβίζομαι, -ίζω = σέβο-μαι (Pi., trag. et al.), which could also be an enlargement of σέβομαι, with -ισμα [n.] (sch.). Verbal adjective σεπτός 'venerable' (A. Pr. 812, late prose), mostly in compounds, ἄ-, περί-, θεό-σεπτος, etc. (trag.); σεπτ-ικός, -εύω (H.). Agent noun θεο-σέπτωρ [m.] 'worshipper of gods' (E. Hipp. 1364 [anap.]). σέβερος· εὐσεβής, δίκαιος (H.). See also ►σεμνός and ►σοβέω.

•ETYM Traditionally compared with Skt. tyajati 'to desert, leave alone, abandon' < tieg*^{w}-e/o-. Although this seems semantically remote at first sight, the fact that the causative ►σοβέω < tiog*^{w}-eie- means 'to scare away, chase away' indicates that σέβομαι originally may have meant 'to run away, flee' vel sim. Formal Greco-Aryan matches like σεπτός ~ tyaktá-, θεο-σέπτωρ ~ tyaktar-, σέβας ~ tyajas- are rather due to parallel development than to common inheritance. The origin of the -α- in the s-stem σέβας is unclear, but perhaps analogical after γέρας (cf. Chantraine 1933: 422).

σεῖν [v.] 'to let children urinate' (Ar. fr. 850). ⋖ONOM⋗ •ETYM Onomatopoeic.

σειρά [f.] 'cord, rope, snare, lasso' (Il.). ⋖IE tuerH-* 'grasp, seize, fence in'⋗ •VAR Ion. -ρή (Dor. σηρά gramm.).
•COMP σειρα-φόρος [m.], Ion. -ρη-, of ἵππος 'a horse which draws by the trace only, trace-horse' (Hdt., A., Ar.), παρά-σειρος 'tied or fastened alongside; a horse harnessed alongside the regular pair; (metaph.) companion' (E. [lyr.], X., Poll.).
•DER σειραῖος 'equipped with a rope, walking by the rope' (= σειραφόρος; S., E., D. H.); σειράω [v.] 'to tie or to pull with a rope' (Phot.); ἀνα-σειράζω 'to pull backwards (with a rope)' (E., A. R.); σειρ-ωτός 'girded with a cord' (Sm., Thd.), -όω 'to gird, hem' (Dosith.), -ωσις (Phot.). Diminutive σειρίς [f.] (X.); σερίδες· σειραί 'ropes', σερί<ς>· ζωστήρ 'girdle' (H.), with -ε- for -ει-?; σειράδιον [n.] (Eust.).
•ETYM Usually connected with Lith. tvérti, 1sg. tveriù 'to grasp, fence in' and reconstructed as tuer-ieh*$_2$-, lit. 'seizing' (cf. also ►σορός). Note that the acute accentuation in Lithuanian points to the presence of a laryngeal, tuerH-, which means that σειρά should reflect tuerH-ieh$_2$- (with loss of laryngeal before i̯* according to Pinault's Law; Pinault 1982). Connection with εἴρω 'to put in order, connect', Lat. serō 'to link, connect' would be better semantically, but would leave the Gr. σ- unexplained. Hitt. tūrii̯e/a-^{zi} 'to harness' is unrelated (thus e.g. Risch apud Mayrhofer Sprache 10 (1964): 197 and Mayrhofer IF 70 (1965-1966): 253), and rather belongs to Skt. dhur- 'yoke, pole of a carriage' and Gr. ►θαιρός (cf. Kloekhorst 2008: 900).

Σειρήν -ῆνος [f.] 'Siren(s)', mythical destructive bird-like creatures (woman-birds), who in the Odyssey attract sailors on passing ships with their beautiful chant, and then kill them (Od.); also a designation of various seductive women and creatures (Alcm., E., Aeschin., etc.); a designation of a wild kind of bees (Arist. et al.); see Gil Fernández 1959: 214f. ⋖?⋗
•VAR Σιρ- (Att. vase-inscr.); see Kretschmer Glotta 10 (1920): 61f. Often pl. -ῆνες, gen. du. -ήνοιιν (Od.). By-forms Σειρην-ίδες (Dor. Σηρην-) [pl.] (Alcm. et al.), -άων [gen.pl.] (Epich. 123, verse-final).

•COMP Has been assumed as a first member in Myc. se-re-mo-ka-ra-o-re, -a-pi (Mühlestein Glotta 36 (1958):152ff.); but well-founded doubts by Risch SMEA 1 (1966): 53 ff. SeeAura Jorro 1985-1993: 255.
•DER Σειρήν(ε)ιος 'like a siren' (LXX, Hld.).
•ETYM Formally, it is possible to compare σειρά as "the ensnaring one" or Σείριος, as a personification of the mid-day blaze and mid-day magic; see Solmsen 1909: 126ff. In favor of Pre-Greek / Mediterranean origin is e.g. Chantraine 1933: 167; further hypotheses in Brandenstein 1954a: 56f. Fur.: 172 takes the name of the wild bees as Pre-Greek.

Σείριος [m.] 'Sirius, the dog star' (Hes.), also appositive or attributive Σείριος ἀστήρ (Hes. Op. 417), as an epithet of stars (Ibyc. et al.) and of the sun (Archil. et al.), 'glowing, burning, desiccating'; also an epithet of the νᾶες (Tim. Pers. 192), probably reinterpreted as 'devastating, destroying' (cf. von Wilamowitz ad loc.). ⋖IE? tuis-ro-* 'sparkling', PG?⋗
•DER σειριόεις 'scorching, glowing' (ἥλιος, ἀτμός, Opp., Nonn.); σειρι-άω [v.] 'to glow, scorch' (ὀξέα σειριάει, of Σείριος, Arat. 331), also 'to get a heat stroke (σειρίασις)' (medic.); further σειρ-αίνω [v.] 'to scorch, parch' (Oros apud EM), -όω (ἀπο-), also -έω (-εόω) 'to desiccate, drain, filtrate' (medic., pap.; cf. Lagercrantz 1913: ad loc.), whence -ωμα, -ωσις (late); σειρ-άζω 'to strike', of lightning (Ael. Dion.).
Further some designations for a thin, transparent (summer) garment: σειρόν, σείριον, σείρινα, σειρήν (Harp., Phot., Hes.); cf. Solmsen 1909: 128. Artificial back-formation σείρ, σειρός· ὁ ἥλιος καὶ Σείριος (Suid.).
•ETYM Assuming an original meaning 'sparkling, flickering', Σείριος has been connected with ►σείω, which is compared to a verb 'to be excited, sparkle, gleam' in Skt. tviṣ-, whence tvíṣ- 'excitement, gleam', tveṣá- 'tempestuous, sparkling', and especially Av. ϑβisra- 'glitter'. The basis for the Greek form would then be tueis-ro-* or, if σει-stands for σῑ- (Götze KZ 51 (1923): 151f.) tuis-ro-* (like the Avestan word). Fur.: 262 compares τίριος· θέρους. Κρῆτες 'summer (Cretan)' (H.); if correct, the word could be Pre-Greek.

σειρόω ⇒Σείριος.

σείω [v.] 'to shake, agitate, sway', med. and pass. also 'to quake, shiver'. ⋖IE tuei(s)-* 'excite, sparkle'⋗ •VAR Epic ἐπι-σσείω (see below), aor. σεῖσαι (Il.), them. aor. ptc. acc. σιόντα (Anacr.), pass. σεισθῆναι, fut. σείσω (IA), perf. med. σέσεισμαι (Pi., etc.), act. σέσεικα (Hell. and late).
•COMP Often with prefix, e.g. ἀνα-, κατα-, ἀπο-, δια-, ἐν-, ἐπι-. Seldomly found in compounds, e.g. σεισ-άχθεια [f.] i.e. 'the casting off of burdens, i.e. of debts', designation of a law of Solon (Arist., Plu.); on δορυ-σσόος, see ►δόρυ and Schwyzer: 450^{4}.
•DER σεῖ-σις (ἀπό-, κατά-, etc.) [f.] 'shaking' (medic.), -σμός (ἀνα-, δια-, etc.) [m.] 'shock, earthquake, extortion' (IA), whence -σμώδης 'like an earthquake' (late), -σμα (παρά-, διά-, etc.) [f.] 'shaking' (LXX), 'extortion' (pap.), whence -σματίας [m.]

'concerning an earthquake' (D. L., Plu.); -στρον [n.] 'rattle' (taken over in Latin as sistrum), -στρος [m.] plant name 'Rhinanthus maior' (Arist., Plu.), -σων, -σωνος [m.] a kind of vase, "shaker" (middle com.), formation like in καύσων, cf. καίω; -στης [m.] a kind of earthquake (Lyd.), -στός 'shaken' (Ar.), 'rattling', used of ear-pendants (Delos III-II[a]).
•ETYM Because of its aberrant vocalization, the zero grade ptc. σιόντα must be interpreted as an aorist. Except for this form and nominal -(σ)σόος, all forms show the stem σει(σ)-. The geminate -σσ- in epic ἐπι-σσείω, ἐ-σσείοντο must go back to an original consonant group, which means that σείω can be connected with Skt. tvéṣati 'to excite; (med.) to be excited, inflame, sparkle' (cf. Mayrhofer EWAia 1: 686), which points to a reconstruction tueis-e/o-*. In Avestan, besides ϑβaēšå 'fears' < tueis-* we also find forms without -s-, viz. ϑβaiiah- [n.], ϑβiiā [f.] 'fright, danger' < tuei-os-, tui-eh$_2$-. Also possibly related is ►Σείριος.

σελαγέομαι, -έω ⇒σέλας.

σέλας, -αος [n.] 'light, glow, beam' (Il., epic poet., Arist., etc.); on the use in Hom. see Graz 1965: 310ff. ◂?▸
•COMP σελασ-φόρος 'bringing light' (A.), with analogical -η-: σελαη-φόρος (Man.), -γενέτης (AP).
•DER σελά-ω 'to shine, glow' (Nic. Th. 691), whence -σμα, -σμός 'glow' (Man.); -γέομαι (E., Ar.), -γέω (Opp.) 'to glow, radiate', whence -γησις [f.] 'glow' (Zonar.) and by back-formation -γος [n.] 'beam' (Hymn. Is.); enlarged -γίζω 'id.' (Nonn. et al.), whence -γισμα [n.] 'lightning, flash' (Man.); -σσομαι 'to shine, glow' (Nic. Th. 46), -σκω 'to glow' (Theognost.). See also ►σελήνη, ►σέλαχος.
•ETYM Etymology unclear. Frisk s.v. states that a connection with Av. x^{v}arənah- 'glory of fame' is semantically attractive, but the interpretation of the latter word is debated (see Lubotsky 1998b for discussion). Moreover, the initial σ- of σέλας is incompatible with Av. x^{v}-. A different but unlikely etymological proposal can be found in Pisani Rend. Acc. Linc. 6:7 (1931): 75.

σελάτης [?] = κοχλίας 'snail with a spiral shell' (H.); the form has been corrected to *σιαλίτης, see Redard 1949: 86.

σέλαχος [n.] 'cartilaginous fish' (Hp., Arist.). ◂PG?▸
•VAR Mostly plur. -άχη.
•DER Diminutive σελάχ-ιον [n.], also a designation for small crustaceans (com.), -ιος 'cartilaginous', of fishes (late), -ώδης 'belonging to the cartilaginous fishes' (Arist.).
•ETYM The formation resembles τέμαχος, τάριχος, στέλεχος. Connected with σέλας 'light, glow, beam' already by Galen, because of the phosphorescent light of certain cartilaginous fishes (Strömberg 1943: 55); yet the suffix -αχ- may also point to Pre-Geek origin (cf. κύμβαχος). The old connection with OHG selah 'seal', etc. is untenable; cf. Pisani RILomb. 73:2 (1939-40): 24f.

σελήνη [f.] 'moon' (Il.). ◂GR▸ •VAR Dor. -άνα, Aeol. -άννα.
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. ἀ-σέληνος 'moonless' (Th. et al.).

•DER σεληv-αίη, Dor. σελαναία [f.] = σελήνη (Il., epic poet.), like Ἀθηναίη (cf. Schwyzer: 469); -ιον [n.] 'phase of the moon, contour of the moon, etc.' (Arist., Thphr.), plant name -ῖτις; -άριον [n.] designation of moon-shaped ornaments, -ίς [f.] 'id.', -ίσκος [m.] 'id.' (late), -ίτης (λίθος) [m.] "moonstone", 'selenite' (Dsc. et al.), also fem. -ῖτις (Redard 1949: 60), 'moon dweller, etc.' (Luc., Ath. et al.), -ιεῖα [n. pl.] 'moon festival' (pap. II[a]; Mayser 1906-1938, I: 3: 95), -αῖος 'moonlit, concerning the moon' (Orac. apud Hdt., A. R.), -ιακός 'belonging to the moon' (Plu. et al.), after ἡλι-ακός; -ιάζομαι (Ev. Matt., Vett. Val.), also -(ι)άζω, -ιάω (Man.), 'to be moonstruck, i.e. to be epileptic', whence -ιασμός [m.] 'epilepsy' (Vett. Val.).
•ETYM This etymon derives from σελασ-νᾱ, a derivative in -νᾱ from ►σέλας 'light, glow, beam'. The formation may be compared with the PIE word for 'moon', l(o)uksneh$_2$-, as attested in e.g. Lat. lūna 'moon' (compare ►λύχνος).

σέλῑνον [n.] 'celery, Apium graveolens' (Il.), also metaph. 'vagina' (Phot.); on the meaning, cf. Andrews Class. Phil. 44 (1949): 91ff. ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Aeol. -νν- (gramm.).
•DIAL Myc. se-ri-no.
•COMP Often as a second member, e.g. πετρο-σέλινον [n.] 'rock celery' (Dsc.), taken over in Latin as petro-selīnum, MLat. petrosilium > MoHG Petersilie; see Strömberg 1940: 33.
•DER σελίν-ινος 'of celery' (late, rare), -ίτης οἶνος, -ᾶτον [n.] = Lat. apiātum, Σελινοῦς, -οῦντος [m., f.] HN and TN, -ούντιος 'of S.' (Megar., Th., Str.), -ούσιος (Thphr.) 'id.' (on the formation see Schwyzer: 528 and 466), -ουσία· κράμβης εἶδος 'kind of cabbage' (H., Eudem. apud Ath.).
•ETYM Probably a foreign word like ►κύμινον, ►ῥητίνη. Strömberg 1940: 37 proposed a connection with σέλμα 'deckplank', σελίς 'crossbeam', after the coarse, hollow stalk. Note that Fur.: 351 suggests a connection with Myc. sa-ri-nu-wo-te, which would point to a form *σάλινον, indicating Pre-Greek origin.

σελίς, -ίδος [f.] 'crossbeam of a building or ship, cross-piece, transverse wall, transverse row of benches or seats in a theatre, cross stripe or column in a papyrus roll' (Att. inscr., Hell. and late inscr. and pap., LXX, Plb., AP). ◂PG?(V)▸ •VAR Frequently plur. -ίδες.
•DER Diminutive σελίδ-ιον [n.] 'papyrus column' (Ptol., Vett. Val.), -ωμα [n.] 'broad plank' (sch.); σέλμα, often plur. -ατα [n.] 'deck-plank, rowing plank, rowing bench, deck, scaffolds' (h. Bacch., Archil., trag., Str.), metaph. of the seat of the gods (A. Ag. 183 [lyr.]). As a second member (with transfer to the o-stems) ἐΰ-(σ)σελμος (εὔ-) 'with beautiful σέλματα' (epic poet. Il.).
Glosses σελμίς· ... καὶ τὰ ἴκρια '... and the half-deck' (H.), σελμῶν· σανίδων 'planks, boards' (H.).
•ETYM This word could be denominative as well as deverbal (formation like ►σανίς, ►δοκίς, etc.), whereas σέλμα is a verbal noun in -μα (δέρμα, βῆμα, etc.). Hesychius's gloss σελμίς seems to be a cross of the two, whereas σελμῶν seems to belong under an o-stem *σελμός.

Schmidt 1875: 78 compared these words with OHG swelli [n.], MoHG Schwelle 'till, threshold' < PGm. swalja-*, and ON súl, OHG sūl, etc. 'pillar' < PGm. suljō-, but phonetically this etymology is unconvincing, since su̯- does not yield Gk. σ-. Frisk (s.v.) instead connects σέλμα with OE selma, sealma, OS selmo [m.] 'basis of a bed', but this too is phonetically impossible. If the gloss ἕλματα· ... σανιδώματα 'planking' (H.) is cognate, the alternation between σέλμα and ἕλμα may point to Pre-Greek origin.

σελλίζομαι [v.] = ψελλίζεσθαι· τινὲς δὲ σελλίζει· ἀλαζονεύει 'make false pretentions' (H.). In Phryn. Com. 10 'to imitate Aeschines, son of Sellos', on which see DELG. ◁?▷
•ETYM Unclear.

σέλμα ⇒σελίς.

σέμελος [m.] Lacon. for κοχλίας 'snail with a spiral shell' (Apollas apud Ath. 2, 63d). ◁?▷
•DER σεμελοιρίδαι· οἱ ἄνευ κελύφους οὓς ἔνιοι λίψακας 'those without shell, which some call λ.' (H.).
•ETYM Unknown. See ►σέσῑλος.

σεμίδᾱλις, -ιος [f.] 'finest wheat flour, fine flour' (Hp., com., etc.). ◁LW Sem.▷
•VAR Gen. also -εως, -ιδος.
•DER σεμιδάλ-ιον (also -ιν) [n.] 'id.', -ίτης ἄρτος (Hp., pap., etc.), see Redard 1949: 90f.
•ETYM Loanword from Semitic; cf. Syr. s^{ə}mīdā and Assyr. samīdu 'fine flour' (Lewy KZ 58 (1931): 28f.), whence also Lat. simila 'id.', etc. are derived. The Greek word was the source for Georg. semi(n)dali 'wheat'.

σεμνός [adj.] 'venerable, honored, holy, noble', also 'haughty, proud' (h. Cer.). ◁IE tieg^w-no-*▷ •COMP Many compounds, e.g. σεμνό-μαντις [m.] 'venerable seer' (S.), ἄ-σεμνος 'unworthy, ignoble' (Arist., etc.).
•DER σεμν-ότης [f.] 'dignity, nobility, pride' (Att.), -εῖον [n.] 'holy building' (Ph.), after ἀρχεῖον etc.; -ύνομαι, -ύνω [v.] 'to exalt oneself, be proud; to make venerable, exalt, praise' (Hdt., Att.), also with ἀπο-, ἐπι-, ὑπερ-, etc.; formation after θρασύνομαι, -ύνω, αἰσχύνομαι, etc.; back-formations ὑπέρ-, ἐπί-σεμνος (late), cf. Strömberg 1946: 98; -όω = -ύνω (Hdt.), with derivative -ωμα [n.] 'dignity, majesty' (Epicur.).
•ETYM This word reflects σεβνός < tieg^w-no-, an original verbal adjective from ►σέβομαι 'to shy, feel ashamed; to be in awe, honor'.

σεργοί = ἔλαφοι 'deer' (H.). ◁?▷ •ETYM Unknown; cf. Hester Lingua 13 (1965): 376 and Fur.: 247.

σέρις, -ιδος, -εως [f.] 'endive, chicory' (Epich., Dsc., AP et al.). ◁?▷
•COMP ὑό-σερις (Plin.), with pejorative ὑο-, see Strömberg 1940: 31.
•ETYM Unexplained.

σέρῑφος ⇒σέρφος.

σερός [adv.] · χθές.'Ηλεῖοι 'yesterday (Elean)' (H.). ◁IE d^{h}ǵ^{h}ies* 'yesterday'▷ •ETYM Perhaps from *χ̯εσ-ός, related to Skt. hyás 'yesterday' < PIE d^{h}ǵ^{h}ies*, with Elean rhotacism and -ός after νυκτός, etc. Cf. ►χθές.

σέρφος [m.] 'small winged insect, gnat, winged ant' (Ar. et al.). ◁PG(V)▷ •VAR Also σύρφος· θηρίδιον μικρόν, ὁποῖον ἐμπίς 'small animal, a kind of gnat' (H.), σέριφος [m.], -ίφη [f.] 'a kind of locust' (Zen., Suid.), -ιφον [n.] = ἀψίνθιον θαλάσσιον 'maritime wormwood' (Dsc., Gal.).
•ETYM For the formation, compare other animal names in -φος, -ιφος (ἔλαφος, ἔριφος, etc.), and cf. Chantraine 1933: 263. According to Fur.: 384, the variation in forms points to a Pre-Greek origin. The forms σέρφος/σέριφος could reflect a form ser^{y}p-o-* or even sar^{y}p-o-*, but the -υ- in σύρφος is then hard to explain. Do we have to assume two separate words?

σέσελι [n.] 'small hartwort, Tordylium officinale' (Hp., Arist., Thphr., Dsc. et al.) ◁LW Eg.▷
•VAR -ις [f.], also σίλι [n.] (Plin.); cf. also σιλλικύπριον [n.], an Egyptian tree (Hdt. 2, 94), see Strömberg 1940: 127.
•ETYM A foreign word like πέπερι, κιννάβαρι, etc. According to Ps.-Dsc., an Egyptian name for καυκαλίς. Taken over in Latin as seselis, sil.

σεσερῖνος [?] a fish. ◁?▷
•ETYM See Thompson 1947 s.v.

σέσηρα [v.] 'to show one's teeth, to grin' (IA), also 'to gape', of a wound (Hp.), an isolated perf. with pres. meaning.
•VAR Ptc. σεσηρώς, Dor. σεσᾱρώς, epic σεσᾱρυῖα [f.] (Hes. Sc. 268).
•DER See on ►σῆραγξ.
•ETYM As an old perfect, the verb looks inherited, but no cognates in the other IE languages are known. Sometimes ►σάρμα 'chasm, abyss' is regarded as cognate.

σέσῑλος [m.] 'land slug' (Ath. 2, 63c, Dsc. 2, 9, H. [cod. -σηλ-]). ◁?▷
•VAR Also σεσέλιτα [acc.[(Dsc. l.c.); compare ►σέμελος 'id.' (Ath. 2, 63d [Lacon.], H.).
•ETYM Unexplained.

σεύομαι [v.] 'to charge in, huddle, hurry, hasten, chase', act. 'to chase (away), rush, incite' (Il., epic poet., also Hp., Aret. [as συθῆ, ἐσύθη]). ◁IE kieu-* 'start to move'▷ •VAR Also (B., Hell. epic) act. σεύω; aor. ἐσσύμην, ἔσσυτο, σύτο; ἐσ(σ)ύθην, σύθην, σύθι; also σεύατο, ἐσσεύαντο, act. ἔσσευα, σεῦα, perf. ἔσσυμαι, ptc. ἐσσύμενος (cf. Chantraine 1942: 190 on the accentuation), 3pl. σεσύανται (H.), verbal adj. ἐπί-σσυτος; also σοῦμαι, σοῦνται, ipv. σοῦ, inf. σοῦσθαι (trag.), Dor. σοώμην, σῶμαι, etc. (H.), perf. ptc. ἐσσοημένον (H.), act. 3sg. σόει (B.), a deverbative derived from σοϝοῦμαι < *σοϝ-έομαι, cf. Wackernagel KZ 25 (1881): 277; with lengthened grade σώοντο, σωομένους (A. R.); σεῦται (S. Tr. 645 [lyr.]).
•COMP With prefixes, especially ἐπι-.

•DER As a second member in compounds: αὐτό-σσυτος 'self-sped' (A., S.), often -σ(σ)όος in e.g. λαο-σσόος 'inciting the men' (Hom. et al.); σοῦς (from *σόϝος) [m.] '(fast, upward) movement' (Democr., Lacon. acc. to Pl. Cra. 412b, H.); ὑποσευαντήρ [m.] 'expeller (of the plague)', epithet of Apollo (metr. inscr. Callipolis), derived from ὑπο-σεύω in analogy after e.g. λυμαν-τήρ from λυμαίνομαι; σῶτρον in ►ἐπίσσωτρον; ►πανσυδί; ►ἐπασσύτερος. Cf. also ►τευμάομαι and ►τευτάζω.
•ETYM This verb is directly cognate with Skt. cyávate 'to move, stir, undertake', Av. šiiauuaite 'to enact, commit' < PIE kiéu-e-to*, with correspondences -σσυτος ~ Skt. cyutá- 'moved', Av. mainiiu.šūta- 'driven by mind' < kiu-tó-* and σοῦμαι < *σοϝέομαι ~ Skt. causative cyāváyate < kiou-éie/o-*. Another cognate is Arm. aor. č'ogay (pres. ert'am) 'I went', from an o-grade kiou-. In spite of the clear cognates, the exact prehistory of the Greek forms is unclear. A preform kiéu-e-to should have regularly given σέεται. The preservation of -ευ- in σεύομαι must therefore be analogical. LIV² (s.v. kʷi̯eu̯-) assumes that it was rebuilt on the s-aorist ἔσσευα. Yet this form is difficult to explain as well, since a preform kiéu-s-m̥* should regularly have yielded (-σ)σῆα. Harðarson 1993a: 190 assumes that σεύομαι reflects kieu-ie/o-, a recently formed present on the basis of the original s-aorist, but this is phonetically unlikely: kieu-ie/o-* should have given σείομαι. Perhaps we should assume that an original athematic middle kiéu-to(i) (perhaps preserved as such in the rare form σεῦται) was the basis on which the -υ- was preserved and generalized in the other forms. On the aorists ἔσσευα and ἔχευα, see Hettrich MSS 35 (1976): 47-61; see also Peters Sprache 21 (1975). See ►κινέω, ►κίω.

σεῦτλον ⇒τεῦτλον.

σήθω [v.] 'to sieve, sift' (Hp., Dsc., Hell. and late pap.). ◄IE kieh₂-* 'sieve'► •VAR Aor. σῆσαι, σησθῆναι, perf. σέσησμαι, verbal adj. σηστός.
•COMP Also with δια-, κατα-, etc.
•DER σῆσις (Suid.), σᾶσις (Delph.) [f.] 'sieving', σῆστρα· κόσκινα 'sieve' (H.), whence σηστρίδιον [n.] (pap. IIᵖ).
•ETYM This verb seems to be a θ-present (compare πλήθω, and especially the synonym ἠθέω) to a root ση- < σᾱ-, which is attested as such in 3pl. pres. σῶσι (Hdt. 1, 200), aor. σῆσαι, etc., and (with analogical -σ-) σησθῆναι, which all point to a verb *σάω (cf. EM σῶ). This is related to Att. δια-ττάω (EM τῶ), from kieh₂-*. See ►διαττάω for further discussion.

σηκός [m.] 'enclosure, fence, pen, stable, enclosed sacred space' (Il.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Dor. (Epid.) σακός.
•COMP σηκο-κόρος [m.] 'stableman' (ρ 224, etc.).
•DER σηκ-ίς (Ar.), -ύλη, -υλλα (Ael. Dion., H., Phot.) [f.] 'house-slave', -ίτης (Dor. σακ-) [m.] (ἀρήν, ἔριφος) 'fed in the stable, weaned' (Theoc., Long.), σῆκα· οὕτως ἐπιφθέγγονται οἱ ποιμένες εἰς τὸ συγκλεῖσαι τὰ ποίμνια 'thus the herdsmen call out in order to enclose the flocks' (H.), -άζω 'to drive into the pen, confine' (Θ 131 etc.), σηκόω (with ἀντι-, ἀνα-) 'to weigh against, balance, equalize, compensate' (Hp., trag., Arist.), whence σήκ-ωμα (Dor. σάκ-) [n.] 'enclosed sacred space' (E., inscr.), usually 'weight, counterweight, calibrated weight or measure' (E., Hyp., Plb., Hell. and late pap. and inscr.); -ωτήρ [m.] 'balance beam' (H.); ἀντισήκ-ωσις [f.] 'counterweight, equalization' (Hdt., Plot.), with backformation ἀντί-σηκος 'equalizing' (Eust.); σάκωσε· κατέκλεισεν 'enclosed' (H.), ἀποσηκώσας· ὡς ἐν σηκῷ κατακλείσας 'like "having enclosed in a pen"' (H.).
•ETYM Since Bezzenberger BB 12 (1887): 240, commonly connected with ►σάττω 'to stuff' through a preform tu̯ākó-, which in laryngeal terms would be tueh₂k-os. Yet σάττω would then reflect tu̯ak-i̯ō*, which cannot be explained in laryngeal terms (tuh₂k-* should have yielded *τῡκ-). Perhaps the alternation rather points to Pre-Greek origin.

σηλαγγεύς, -έως [m.] 'gold refiner, gold washer' (Agatharch.). ◄PG► •ETYM For *σαλαγγεύς (from σάλαγξ; see ►σάλος), with -η- after ►σῆραγξ?

σῆμα [n.] 'sign, symbol, trait, omen, mark, character, feature, gravestone' (Il.). ◄?►
•VAR Dor. σᾶμα.
•COMP E.g. σηματ-ουργός [m.] 'mark maker' (A.); often as a second member with regular transition into the o-stems, e.g. ἄ-σημος, Dor. ἄ-σᾶμος 'without signs, unimpressed, unintelligible' (IA, Dor.), taken over as MP asēm '(uncoined) silver', MoP sīm '(silver) thread', cf. Bailey TPS 1933: 50), isolated ἀ-σήμων 'id.' (S.), ἐπί-σημος (Dor. -ᾱ-) 'provided with a mark' (IA, Dor.), ntr. -ον 'mark, weapon' (Ion. Hell. and late), also -α (Simon., A.); after σῆμα.
•DER σημα-λέος 'sending signs', epithet of Zeus (Paus.), -τόεις 'full of gravestones' (AP); denominative σημαίνω [v.] 'to give a sign, show, order' (Il.), Dor. (Pamphyl.) σᾶμ-, often with prefix, e.g. ἐπι-, ὑπο-, δια-, ἀπο-. Hence σημάν-τωρ, -τορος [m.] 'commander, ruler, guide' (epic Il.), a military official (Hdt. 7, 81), 'annunciator, announcing' (late poet.), -τήρ, -τήριον, -τρον, -τρίς, -τρια, -τικός, -σις, also σημασία [f.] 'announcement, etc.' (Arist., Hell. and late), σηματίζομαι = σημαίνομαι (sch.), diminutive σημάτιον [n.] (Eust.), σημ-εῖον, Ion. -ήϊον, Dor. σᾶμ- [n.] 'sign, mark, standard, signal, signet' (IA, Dor.), formation like μνημ-εῖον beside μνῆμ-α, with -ειώδης 'noteworthy' (Arist., Hell. and late), σημ-ειόομαι, -ειόω 'to note, notice; to provide with a seal' (Hp., Thphr., Hell. and late), also with ἐπι-, etc.; thence -είωσις, -είωμα, -ειωτικός. σημ-εία (-έα, -αία) [f.] 'standard, banner' (Hell. and late), formation like βασιλ-εία, etc. PN Σαμιχος [m.] (Boeot. inscr.), etc.
•ETYM Although the word looks inherited, no good etymology exists. Brugmann (e.g. Brugmann 1886-1900 II: 348) equated it with Skt. dhyāman- [n.] 'thought', but semantically, this is not compelling. If correct, however, σῆμα would reflect dʰiéh₂-mn-*.

σήμερον ⇒τήμερον.

σημύδα [f.] 'Judas-tree, Cercis siliquastrum' (Thph.). ◄?►
•ETYM Unknown.

σηπία [f.] 'squid' (Hippon., Epich., Ar., Arist.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Ion. -ίη.
•DER Diminutives σηπ-ΐδιον (Hp., com., Arist.), -ῑδάριον [n.] (Philyll.), -ιάς [f.] 'squid' (Nic.), -ίον or -ειον [n.] 'Os sepiae, bone of the cuttlefish, pounce' (Arist.).

•ETYM The formation of this word is unclear. Normally, words in -ία are abstracts, which does not match this word's meaning. A connection with σήπομαι 'to rot' is semantically possible (perhaps referring to the ink that smells as if it is rotten), but formally problematic, as σηπία occurs in Epich. (61 and 84) with -η-, whereas σήπομαι has Doric forms with -ᾱ-. If the forms of Epich. are corrupt or Ionicisms, the connection would be possible. However, it may be more likely that σηπία is a Pre-Greek word (not mentioned in Fur.). The word was taken over in Latin as sēpia.

σήπομαι [v.] 'to rot, become rotten', act. 'to make rot' (Il.). ◂IE? Kieh$_2$p- (vel sim.) 'rot', PG?▸
•VAR Perf. σέσηπα, aor. σαπῆναι (Il.), fut. σαπήσομαι (Hp., Pl.), also act. σήπω (IA), non-present forms are rare: fut. σήψω (A. Fr. 275 = 478 M.), aor. σῆψαι (Ael.).
•COMP Also with prefixes, especially ἀπο-, κατα-, δια-.
•DER σηπεδών, -δόνος [f.] 'decomposition', plur. 'rotting juices' (Hp., Antipho Soph., Pl.), formation like τηκεδών, etc.; also a designation of snakes, since their bites cause putrescence (Nic., Ael.), like τερηδών, etc. (cf. Chantraine 1933: 360f.); thence derivatives -δονώδης, -δονικός (medic.); σῆψις (ἀπό-, σύν-, etc.), Dor. (Ti. Locr.) σᾶψις [f.] 'decomposition, fermentation' (Emp., Hp., Arist.), σήψ, σηπός [f.] 'festering sore' (Hp., Dsc.), [m.] 'snake (also lizard), the bite of which causes intense thirst' (Arist., Nic.), σήπη [f.] 'decomposition' (Aq.), σηπο-ποιός = σηπτικός (Alex. Aphr.), σηπετοῦ· σηπεδόνος 'decay' (H.), σηπ-τός 'rotten' (Arist.), 'causing rot' (Dsc. et al.), earlier and more frequent ἄ-σηπ-τος 'not rotting' (Hp., X., Arist., Thphr.), -τικός 'causing rot' (Hp., Arist.), -τήριος 'id.' (Hp.), σηπ-εύω = σήπω (Man.) (rather enlarged from σήπω than derived from σήπη).
With a different ablaut grade: σαπρός 'rotting, rotten, rancid', 'matured' of wine (IA), also σαπρίας οἶνος (Hermipp.); σαπρ-ότης [f.] 'decomposition' (Pl., Arist., etc.), -ίζομαι (Hp.), -ύνομαι (Nic.), -όομαι (sch.) 'to rot', -ίζω 'to make rot' (LXX).
•ETYM The alternation σηπ-/σαπ- has been taken to point to IE origin (so tueh*$_2$p-, tieh*$_2$p-, or kieh*$_2$p-; the last is chosen in LIV^2 s.v. k̑ieh*$_2$p-), but no cognates are known. However, Kih*$_2$p-ro- does not yield σαπρός, so we either have to assume a secondary zero grade (which is unlikely), or we have to accept that the verb is of Pre-Greek origin. Older connections with Skt. kyāku- [n.] 'mushroom' and Lith. šiùpti 'to putrefy' must be rejected. See on ►σηπία.

σῆραγξ, -γγος [f., m.] 'cave hollowed out by water, hollow rock' (S., Pl., Arist.), also used of cavities and pores of the body (medic.), metaph. = ἐπιθυμία 'desire' (H.). ◂PG(S)▸ •VAR Also σήραγγος.
•DER σηράγγ-ιον [n.] washing place in Piraeus (Att.), -ώδης 'full of σ.' (medic., Paus.), -όομαι, -όω 'to be hollow, make porous' (late).
•ETYM Formally similar to synonymous φάραγξ; cf. also φάλαγξ, etc. (Chantraine 1933: 399f.). Sometimes connected with ►σέσηρα 'to grin', but this is semantically unlikely. It is rather a Pre-Greek word, in view of the suffix (not mentioned in Fur.).

σήραμβος [?] · εἶδος κανθάρου 'a kind of beetle' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸

•ETYM Strömberg 1944: 23 considered this to be Laconian for θήραφος 'spider'. Fur.: 171 compares the word to σίραμφος· τὸ ῥύγχος 'snout', assuming that σήραμβος denotes a 'snout beetle'. This is semantically unlikely, but in view of the connection with θήραφος (the suffix -αμβ- seems to be Pre-Greek; cf. κεράμβυξ 'longicorn beetle'), the word could be of Pre-Greek origin.

σής [m.] 'moth, mite' (Pi.). ◂?▸
•VAR Gen.sg. σεός (gramm.), nom.pl. σέες, acc.pl. σέας (Luc. Ind. 1), gen.pl. σέων (Ar. Lys. 730, etc.); later σητός, σῆτες, σητῶν (Arist., etc.).
•COMP σητό-βρωτος 'eaten away by moths' (LXX, NT).
•DER σητάω 'to eat away, gnaw', in σητώμενα· βιβρωσκόμενα 'being eaten' (Suid.).
•ETYM The older inflected forms, gen.pl. σέων (after which arose σέας, σέες), follow the type σαφής, -έων. The accentuation of gen.sg. σεός follows the pattern of monosyllables. The younger forms σητός, etc. are rebuilt after θής, θητός, etc.
The etymology is unclear. The comparisons with ψήν 'date wasp', σίνομαι 'to rob, damage', and Lat. tinea 'tinea' are semantically and/or formally weak. It is rather a loanword from Semitic; cf. Hebr. sās 'moth', Akk. sāsu, etc. (Lewy 1895: 16f., Scheftelowitz BB 28 (1904): 289), and Arm. c'ec' 'mite'.

σήσαμον [n.] 'seed and fruit of the sesame plant', also referring to the plant itself (IA). ◂LW Sem.▸
•VAR Also -ος [m.], -η [f.] 'id.' (Gp.). Dor. σάσαμον, Lac. σάαμον.
•DIAL Myc. sa-sa-ma [pl.].
•COMP As a first element e.g. σησαμο-πώλης [m.] 'sesame merchant' (Att. inscr.).
•DER σησαμ-ίς, -ίδος [f.] 'dish made of roasted sesame seeds and honey' (Stesich., com.), -ῆ (-έα Hdn.) [f.] 'id.' (com.), -ιον [n.] 'id.' (Hdn.), -ίτης [m.] 'sesame cake' (Poll., Ath.), -ῖτις (γῆ) [f.] 'planted with σ.' (Hell. pap.), see Redard 1949: 91 and 109; -όεις, -οῦς [adj.] 'made of σ.', msc. 'sesame cake' (Hp., Ar.), -ινος 'made of σ.' (X., Hell. pap., Str., etc.), -αῖος 'id.' (Luc.), -ικός 'concerning σ.' (pap.), -ώδης 'sesame-like' (Thphr.), -ούντιος 'made of σ.' (sch.), -εύω 'to sow σ.', whence -εία [f.] (Hell. pap.).
•ETYM Loanword from Semitic; cf. Akk. šammaššamu 'sesame', Aram. šūmšᵉmā, etc. (Lewy 1895: 28f.), with a formation like κάρδαμον, βάλσαμον, etc. Taken over in Latin as sēsamum, sēsuma.

σητάνιος, σῆτες ⇒τῆτες.

σθένος [n.] 'strength, power, ability, might' (almost only epic poet. Il.). ◂?▸
•COMP Very frequent as a second member, e.g. ἀ-σθενής 'without strength, strengthless' (Pi., IA), whence ἀσθέν-εια, -έω, -ημα, -όω, -ωσις, -ικός (Arist.) and the secondary simplex σθενής· ἰσχυρός, καρτερός 'powerful, strong' (H.); also as a first member, e.g. σθενο-βλαβής 'damaging the strength' (Opp.), after φρενο-βλαβής; PN Σθενέ-λαος (after Μενέλαος), Σθένελος (Il.).
•DER σθεν-αρός 'powerful' (epic poet. I 505, also Hp.), formed like βριαρός, στιβαρός, etc.; Σθέν-ιος [m.], -ιάς [f.] epithet of Zeus and of Athena in Argolis (Paus.), -εια [n.pl.] name of an Agon in Argos (Plu.), also fem.sg. epithet of Athena (Lyc. 1164), formed after women's names in -εια; σθέν-ω (with ἐπι- Q. S.) 'to be strong, be able' (back-formation, only pres. and ipf.; trag., also late epic and prose; cf. Schwyzer: 723), -όω 'to strengthen' (1. Ep. Pet. 5, 10).

•ETYM No clear etymology. The suffix of σθένος has been analyzed as *-(e)nos- and compared with ἄφενος, κτῆνος, etc., but the existence of an old IE suffix of this shape is unlikely. The initial σθ- is taken as the root by Bolling AmJPh. 21 (1900): 316 and compared with Skt. saghnóti 'to be a match for, be equal to (a task)', Av. a-zg-ata- 'irresistible (?)', which would point to PIE sg^{wh}-énos*.

σιᾱγών [f.] 'jawbone, jaw, cheek' (Hp., Att., Arist., LXX, NT). ◂PG▸ •VAR Ion. σιη- (σεα-, συα- late pap., etc.), -όνος.
•DER σιᾱγ-όνιον [n.] 'region of the jaw, cheek piece' (Hp., LXX, Ath. Mech.), -ονίτης μῦς 'jaw muscle' (Alex. Trall.); Redard 1949: 101.
•ETYM Synonym for γνάθος (which is the more usual word). Connection with ψίομαι 'to chew' is semantically attractive, but the formation is quite unclear. The latter part, -ων, may be compared to the -ων in λαγών, κενεών, πυγών, ἀγκών, and other words for body parts, but the former part is obscure. Since IE origin is formally hardly possible, the word could well be of Pre-Greek origin, possibly reflecting s^{y}āg-* (cf. Beekes 2008: 52).

σιαλενδρίς [?] a bird (Call. fr. 419, acc. to H.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Origin unclear. Perhaps reflecting Pre-Greek s^{y}al-*.

σίαλον [n., m.] 'spittle, slobber', metaph. 'joint fluid, synovitis' (Hp., Pherecr., X., Arist., Hell. and late). ◂?▸ •VAR σίελον (-ος).
•DER σιαλίς· βλέννος 'slime' (H.), σιαλώδης 'like saliva' (Hp.), σιαλ-ίζω (σιελ-) [v.] 'to form spittle, slobber, foam' (Hp., Archig.), -ισμός [m.] 'water-brash' (medic.), -ιστήριον [n.] 'bridle-bit' (Gp.), σίαι· πτύσαι· Πάφιοι 'to spit (Paph.)' (H.), cod. πτῆσαι, cf. Schwyzer: 752[4].
•ETYM Probably an onomatopoeic word. A connection with Skt. kṣīvati 'to spit' is formally difficult. Note that the verb ►σικχαίνω, -ομαι 'to feel disgust, detest' shows the rare and late forms σιαίνομαι, aor. σιάνθην 'to meet antipathy, disgust' (pap. VI-VII^p, H., Suid., gloss.), and σιαίνω 'to cause antipathy' (sch.), which seem to be transformations on the basis of σίαλον.

σίαλος [m.] 'fat pig, porker', also appositive to σῦς 'id.' (Hom., Q. S., Thphr apud Porph.); metaph. 'fat, grease' (Hp. Acut. [Sp.] 37). ◂PG▸ •DIAL Myc. si-a_2-ro.
•DER σιαλ-ώδης 'porker-like, fat' (Hp.), -οῦται· τρέφεται 'is fattened' (H.).
•ETYM The one attestation that means 'fat, grease' (Hp. Acut. [Sp.] 37) may have arisen out of 'fat pig' by ellipsis, and cannot be used as an argument in favor of the view that the original meaning of σίαλος is 'grease, fat'. Therefore, the connection with σίαλον 'spittle, slobber', which otherwise would be semantically attractive, becomes doubtful. Other etymological proposals are unconvincing. The connection with OE þwīnan 'to become weak, to die away' is semantically weak; the connection with RuCS tyti 'to become fat' (Bechtel 1914 s.v.) is formally difficult, as the latter reflects teuh$_2$-* (Skt. tav^i- 'to be strong', Gr. ►ταΰς 'great, many', ►σῶς 'safe and sound'). The word is probably of Pre-Greek origin.

σιβῡ́νη [f.] 'hunting spear, javelin' (Alex., D. S., AP). ◂LW▸ •VAR Also -ης [m.]; συβίνη (pap. III^a); also ζιβύνη (LXX, Ph. Bel.).
•DER Diminutive σιβύνιον [n.] (Plb.), ζι- (H.).
•ETYM Clearly a word of foreign origin; cf. MoP zōpīn, Arm. səvin, and Syr. swbyn 'javelin'. According to Fur.: 247, these words show that the original form was συβίνη, which was possibly metathesized to σιβύνη on the basis of other words for instruments in -ύνη, like κορύνη, τορύνη. Compare also ►σιγῡ́ν(ν)ης 'hunting spear', which however cannot be related. Taken over into Latin as sibyna (sub-, syb-).

σῖγα [adv.] 'silently, in silence', also interj. 'be quiet!' (trag.). ◂?▸
•DER σιγάω (Hom. only ipv. σίγα; ind. since h. Merc.), fut. σιγήσομαι (S., E., Ar.), -ήσω (AP, D. Chr.), perf. σεσίγηκα (Aeschin.), pass. σιγ-άομαι (S.), aor. -θῆναι (Hdt., E.), -ᾱθῆναι (Theoc.), fut. -ηθήσομαι (E.), perf. σεσίγ-ημαι, Dor. -ᾱμαι (Pi., E.) 'to be quiet, keep secret', pass. 'to be kept secret', sometimes with κατα-, etc., whence σιγηλός, Dor. (Pi.) -ᾱλός 'silent' (Hp., S., Arist.), -ηρός 'id.' (Men., LXX), -ητής [m.] 'silent person' (Latium II^p), -ητικός 'silent' (Hp.), -ημονᾷς· σιγᾷς 'keep silent' (H.), σιγή, Dor. -ά (Pi.) [f.] 'silence, secrecy' (Il.; Hom. only σιγῇ; cf. below); σῖγος [n.] 'id.' (late innovation, An. Ox.), whence σιγ-αλέος 'silent' (AP, Orph.), -άζω (Pi., X., D.C.), κατα- (Arist. et al.) 'to make silent', κατασιγαίνει, gloss of πραΰνει (H.), σιγάρνης [m.] '?' (Call. Epigr. 45, 6), cf. Schwyzer RhM 75 (1926): 447 and 77, 105.
•ETYM It is probable that the interjective adverb σῖγα formed the basis for all these words. First, the ipv. σίγα and instrumental dat. σιγῇ were formed, on the basis of which the verbal and nominal paradigms were built (Schwyzer: 722, 726, Schwyzer 1950: 257[1], Chantraine 1942: 357). The origin of σῖγα is unclear, however. The Hesychius gloss ῥίγα· σιώπα 'keep silent!' (H.) has been analyzed as ϝίγα and taken to point to a pre-form *σϝῑγ-. Frisk s.v. suggests a connection with OHG swīgēn 'to be silent', but this is formally impossible: the latter would reflect sueig^h-*, which would regularly yield Gk. εἰχ-. Therefore, it is probably of onomatopoeic origin. Cf. also ►σιωπάω, -ή.

σῑγαλόεις [adj.] epic epithet of ἡνία, χιτών, εἵματα, θρόνος, etc., 'brilliant, gleaming' vel sim. (Hom.), later of ἀμύγδαλα, μνία (Hermipp., Numen. apud Ath.). ◂?▸
•DER νεο-σίγαλος 'with a new brilliance', of τρόπος (Pi.), after the pattern παιπαλόεις : πολυ-παίπαλος, etc. (Leumann 1950: 214[8]); σιγαλόω [v.] 'to smoothen, polish' (Apollon. Lex. s.v. σιγαλόεντα, sch. Pi.), σιγάλωμα [n.] 'polishing tools of a cobbler' (Apollon. ibd., H. s.v. σιγαλόεν), also 'border, edging of a pelt' (H. τὰ περιαπτόμενα ταῖς ᾤαις), σιάλωμα 'iron mountings of a Roman longshield' (Plb. 6, 23, 4; H.), with loss of the γ, cf. Schwyzer: 209.
•ETYM Formation like αἰθαλόεις, ὀμφαλόεις, etc., which are also epic epithets. The technical noun σιγάλωμα belongs to a different style category and cannot be derived from σιγαλόεις directly, but may be formed on the basis of σιγαλόω (if this verb is not a construct of grammarians), or forms an enlargement of an unattested noun *σίγαλος (like e.g. ἀέτωμα to ἀετός). Etymology unclear. Older, unconvincing attempts in Frisk s.v.

σιγαλφοί [m.] · οἱ ἄφωνοι καὶ οἱ ἄγριοι τέττιγες 'wild cicadas that do not make any sound' (H.). ⊲PG?⊳
•VAR Cf. σίγιον· εἶδος τέττιγος 'a kind of cicada' (sch. Ar. Av. 1095).
•ETYM The reading of this word is not fully certain; some scholars prefer a reading in -αλοί (cf. Frisk s.v.). Because of the muteness of this type of cicada, this word was connected already in classical times (Plin. HN 11, 92) with σιγή 'silence' (see ►σῖγα), which could make sense. Strömberg 1944: 18 rather connects the word with σίζω 'to hiss'. Fur.: 369 compares the words ἀδιγόρ· τρωξαλλίς. ὑπὸ Σκυθῶν 'grasshopper (Skythian)' (with prothetic vowel?) and ζειγάρη· ὁ τέττιξ παρὰ Σιδήταις 'id. (Sidetian)' (H.), which would point to a Pre-Greek origin. This would be supported if the word should indeed be read σιγαλ(λ)οί, as Furnée cites it, since words in -αλλο- are Pre-Greek (Beekes 2008).

σίγιστρον [n.] 'chest' (Eust. 956, 6; 1604, 10). ⊲?⊳
•ETYM Unknown.

σίγλος [m.] weight and coin (in X. = 7.5 Att. obols), 'shekel' (Att. inscr. end IV^a, X.), also used as an ear-pendant (e.g. in σιγλο-φόρος Com. Adesp. 792); in this meaning also σίγλαι [f.pl.] (PMasp. VI^p, Poll.). ⊲LW Sem.⊳
•VAR σίκλος (LXX, J.).
•ETYM Loanword from Semitic; cf. Hebr. šekel, etc. Taken over in Latin as siclus.

σίγμα [n.] indecl. name of the letter (Pl., Arist., etc.). ⊲?⊳
•VAR Also -ῑ-.
•DER σιγμ(ατ)ο-ειδής 'sigma-shaped' (late), σιγματίζω 'to write with a sigma' (Eust.).
•ETYM The name of this letter is without an evident Semitic precursor (Hebr. sāmekh is formally remote). Therefore, it is more probably a verbal noun from the verb σίζω 'to hiss' (Schwyzer KZ 58 (1931): 186ff.).

σίγραι · τῶν ἀγρίων συῶν οἱ βραχεῖς καὶ σιμοί 'small and snub-noised wild swine' (H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •ETYM Pre-Greek, in view of the gloss σίκα· ὗς. Λάκωνες 'swine (Laconian)' (H.).

σιγῡ́ν(ν)ης [m.] 'hunting spear, javelin' (Hdt. 5, 9, Opp.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR -ος [m.] (A. R., AP), -ον [n.] (Arist. Po. 1457b 6, AP), -υμνον (Lyc.).
•ETYM According to Herodotus and Aristotle (l.c.), the word is Cyprian, whereas a sch. on A. R. 4, 320 states it is Scythian. The word resembles the ethnonym Σιγύνναι, -οι, -ιννοι (Hdt., A. R., Str.), a people on the other side of the middle Danube, which must have been Iranian (Scythian). According to Herodotus, retail dealers (κάπηλοι) were called σιγύνναι by the Ligyes in the neighborhood of Massilia, clearly after the people (cf. Dunăreanu-Vulpe in Bonfante BSL 37 (1936): 78 and Kretschmer Glotta 27 (1939): 245). Fur.: 247 assumes that σιγῡν- reflects *σιγυϝν-, which is a variant of σιγυμν-, with the typical Pre-Greek alternation -μ/ϝ-. Cf. ►σιβύνη, which however cannot be cognate.

σῑ́δη [f.] 'pomegranate (tree)' (Emp., Hp., Thphr.; Nic. also ῐ by metrical lengthening); also the name of a Boeotian water-plant = νυμφαία (Thphr., Nic.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR ξίμβαι· ῥοιαί. Αἰολεῖς 'pomegranates (Aeolian)' (H.). Also -α (Boeot.), Schwyzer: 30; -έαι [pl.] (Halaesa), perhaps after συκέαι; σίβδη (Call., H.), σίλβια· σίδια 'pomegranate peels' (H.).
•DER σῑ́δ-ιον [n.] 'pomegranate peel' (Hp., Ar., Thphr.), σίλβια· σίδια (H.) with -ιο-ειδής 'σίδιον-like' (Hp.), -ιωτόν [n.] 'medicine produced with σ.' (Paul. Aeg.), -όεις (Nic.), -ειος (Hdn. Gr.) 'from the pomegranate peel'; Σῑδ-οῦς, -οῦντος (X.), -όεις, -όεντος (Euph.) [m.] TN near Corinth.
•ETYM Cf. PNs like Σίδη, Σίδυμα, and also Alb. shegë 'pomegranate', etc. See also on ►σίδηρος. On the by-forms σίβδη and ξίμβαι, see also Brandenstein 1958: 80ff. with references. Fur. (index) accepts all forms as real, including ξίμβρα (286). Analyzing σίβδη as < *σιϝδ-, he argues that the group is Pre-Greek. The gloss ῥίμβαι· ῥοιαὶ μεγάλαι. ἄμεινον δὲ διὰ τοῦ ξ· ξίμβαι (H.) is unclear.

σῑ́δηρος [m.] 'iron, steel', also 'iron tool, sword, iron weapon, etc.', metaph. '(iron) toughness' (Il.). ⊲UNKNOWN⊳ •VAR Fem. in Nic. Th. 923; Dor. -ᾱρος.
•COMP E.g. σιδηρό-φρων 'iron-minded' (A., E.), σιδηρο-κόντρα [f.] 'hunting spear' (Gortyn, Sagalassos), ὁλο-σίδηρος 'made completely of iron' (Attica, Delos, etc.).
•DER Doric forms are not indicated separately: σιδήρ-ιον [n.] 'iron tool' (IA, Cret.), -ίσκος [m.] a medical instrument (Crete V-IV^a), formation like ὀβελίσκος, etc., cf. Chantraine 1933: 408; -εῖα, -εῖον [n.] 'iron mine' (Arist., Delos, etc.), -εύς [m.] 'iron smith' (X. et al.), -ίτης [m.], -ῖτις [f.] 'made of iron, iron' (Pi., Eup. et al.), also name of a stone (Plin., Orph.) and several plants, "vervain" (J., Dsc.), because they are supposed to heal stab wounds, cf. Strömberg 1940: 89; -ε(ι)ος, -οῦς, -ιος [adj.] 'iron' (Il.), -ήεις 'id.' (Nic.), -όεις (EM), -εόεις (Ep. Alex. Adesp.), -ώδης 'id.' (sch.), -όομαι, -όω 'to be provided with iron' (Th., inscr., etc.), whence -ωσις [f.] 'ironwork' (Att. inscr., etc.), -ώματα [n.pl.] 'iron mountings' (pap. V^p), -ωτός 'studded with iron' (Edict. Diocl.)), -εύω [v.] 'to work with iron, forge' (Poll.), whence -εία [f.] 'ironwork' (X.); -ίζω [v.] 'to resemble iron, contain iron' (medic.).
•ETYM Origin unclear. The Greeks got to know iron from Asia Minor, the Pontus and Caucasus, and it is likely that they took over the word for it from these areas as well. In that sense, the resemblance with the Caucasian word (Udian) zido 'iron' may be relevant (cf. also Fur.: 105). Some scholars assume that σίδηρος originally referred to meteoric iron, and is derived from Lat. sīdus 'constellation' (cf. Kretschmer Glotta 26 (1938): 64). Others assume that the word refers to the redness of the metal, and assume a connection with σίδη 'pomegranate' (Deroy Ant. class. 31 (1962): 98ff., Crepajac KZ 80 (1966): 249ff.). Still others assume a connection with words for 'silver', like e.g. Lith. sidābras 'silver' (because both metals have a white color); cf. e.g. Mallory & Adams 1997: 313-4.

σίζω [v.] 'to hiss' (ι 394, com., Arist.). ⊲ONOM⊳ •VAR Only the pres. stem is securely attested; aor. σίξα (Theoc. 6, 29) is a conjecture, further only ἐπισίξῃ (Ar. V. 704 v.l.) besides -σίζῃ.

•COMP Rarely with ἐπι-, δια-.
•DER σιγμός [m.] (Arist., Phld., Plu.), σισμός [m.] (Suid.), σίξις [f.] (Arist.) 'hissing'; also ▸σίγμα?
•ETYM Onomatopoeic, just like Lat. sibilō, etc. Cf. Schwyzer KZ 58 (1931): 186ff.

σίκα · ὗς. Λάκωνες (H.). ⇒σῦς and σίγραι.

σίκερα [n.] a kind of fermented drink (LXX). ◂LW Sem.▸ •ETYM Loanword from Semitic; cf. Hebr. šekar.

σίκιν(ν)ις, -ιδος [f.] 'dance of the satyrs' (S. fr. 772, E. Cycl. 37, D. H.). ⇒κηκίς, κηκίω.

σικύα [f.] 'bottle-gourd, Lagenaria vulgaris' (Hp., Arist., Thphr., etc.), metaph. 'bleeding cup' (Hp., com., Pl., etc.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Ion. -ύη (σεκούα H.).
•COMP σικυ-ήλατον [n.] 'patch of gourds, cucumbers' (Hp.), -ήρατον (pap.).
•DER σίκυος (σικυός) [m.] 'cucumber or melon, Cueumis (sativus)' (Hp., com., Arist., etc.), σίκυς [f.] 'id.' (Alc., Dsc., Gal.). Diminutive σικύ-διον [n.] (Phryn. Com., pap. II-III^{p}), -ώδης 'cucumber-like, etc.' (Hp., Thphr.), -ηδόν 'like a cucumber' (medic.), -ών [m.] 'cucumber patch', -ώνη [f.] = σίκυος ἄγριος 'wild bottle-gourd', also 'bleeding cup' (Hdt.), formation like κροτώνη, etc.; -ωνία [f.] = κολοκύνθη 'round gourd' (Hp., Plu.). Also Σικυών (Σεκυ-), -ῶνος [m., f.] "cucumber city", city not far from Corinth (Il.) with -ώνιος, -ωνικός.
From the second meaning: -υάζω 'to cup' (Arr.), with -ύασις, -υασ-μός (late).
•ETYM For other plant names in –υς, compare e.g. ῥάφυς, κάχρυς; for plant names in -ύα, compare οἰσύα, ὀστρύα, etc. The Hesychius gloss σεκούα· σικύα, as well as the toponym Σικυών/Σεκυών, shows an alternation σικ-/σεκ-, which cannot be explained from an IE point of view. Together with the forms συκύα = σικύα (Edict. Diocl., cf. Fur.: 367), κύκυον· τὸν σικυόν (H.), and κυκΰϊζα· γλυκεῖα κολόκυντα 'sweet round gourd' (H.), as well as Lat. cucumis 'cucumber' and ORu. tyky 'pumpkin', we seem to be dealing with a Wanderwort that might also have Semitic cognates, e.g. Hebr. qiššu'ā 'cucumber'. Exact origin and preform unclear.

σικχός [adj.] 'disgusted, picky, especially concerning food' (Arist., Plu., Ath.). ◂?▸ •COMP ἄ-σικχος 'not picky concerning food, not easily causing satiety (of food)' (Plu.), see Frisk 1941: 16.
•DER σίκχ-ος [n.] 'disgust, tedium' (Sm.), formed like e.g. μάκρος [n.] from μακρός, cf. Schwyzer: 512; -ότης [f.] 'id.' (Eust.), -αίνω, -αίνομαι [v.] 'to feel disgust or tedium, to detest' (Call., Plb., Arr.), whence -αντός 'provoking disgust' (M. Ant.), -ασία, -ασμός (gloss.), σικχαζόμενος· σκωπτόμενος 'being mocked' (H.).
•ETYM The cluster -κχ- makes an IE origin unlikely. Further unclear.

σίλβη [f.] · εἶδος πέμματος <ἐκ> κριθῆς, σησάμης καὶ μήκωνος 'a kind of cake made of barley, sesame and poppy' (H.). ◂PG?▸ •ETYM Neumann 1961: 98 compares this word to Hitt. šiluḫa- 'a kind of cake', which may have variants in šiluu̯a- and šiliu̯a-. If cognate, it is clearly a loanword or a Pre-Greek word. Yet the -β- of σίλβη is difficult to reconcile with the Hittite forms.

σιληπορδέω [v.] 'to behave with vulgar arrogance' (Sophr. 164, Posidon. 36 J., H., Phot.). ◂?▸ •VAR Dor. σιλᾱ-, aor. -ῆσαι.
•DER σιληπορδία [f.] (Luc. Lex. 21).
•ETYM The element -πορδέω is clearly cognate with ▸πέρδομαι 'to fart'; compare also MoGr. τσιληπουρδῶ 'to spring, leap, kick with the heel (of young horses); to fart' and τσιληπούρδισμα 'farting (of horses)'. The first element, σιλη-, is of unclear origin. On the basis of the toponym Πορδοσιλήνη (an island), it has been suggested that σιλη- must belong with ▸Σιληνός.

σίλιγνον [n.] 'winter wheat', Lat. silīgō (pap. II-VI^{p}). ◂LW Lat.▸
•VAR Also σελ-, -ιον.
•DER σιλιγν(ι)-άριος [m.] 'baker or seller of σ.', also σιλιγινάριος = Lat. silīginārius (ibid.); σίλιγνις (σέλ-) [f.] 'flour made of σ.' (Chrysipp. Tyan., Gal., etc.), -ίτης (ἄρτος) 'bread made of σ.' (Gal., inscr. Ephesus I-II^{p}), -ίας [m.] 'id.' (Eust.).
•ETYM Loanword from Lat. silīgō, -inis [f.] with transformation to the ο-, ιο-, and ι-stems.

σίλλος [m.] 'satire, satirical poem' (Str., Ael., D. L. et al.). ◂?▸
•COMP σιλλο-γράφος [m.] 'poet of σ.' (Ath., Jul.).
•DER σιλλ-αίνω (rarely with δια-, κατα-, ἐπι-) 'to mock, ridicule' (Hp., Herod., Ael., Luc.), -όω (δια-) 'id.' (Com. Adesp., Gal., D. C.), PNs e.g. Σίλλος, -αξ, -εύς.
•ETYM Unclear origin. According to Solmsen IF 30 (1912), it is derived by hypocoristic gemination from a preform *σῖλός (= Lat. silus 'pug-nosed'), besides σῑ-μός 'snub-nosed', through the meaning 'with a turned-up nose > mocker' (Σιλ-ηνός would belong here as well, then). Kretschmer Glotta 4 (1913): 351ff. rather derives σίλλος from Σιληνός, referring to ἀνάσιλλος 'having erect hair, with which Satyrs are often depicted' (compare also σιλλέα· τρίχωμα 'hair growth' H.). Both etymologies are formally unattractive. The interpretation of the hapax σίλλος 'squinting' in Luc. Lex. 3 is unclear: the word is preceded by ὅς, and may therefore be a corrupt spelling for ἰλλός 'squinting', but compare also σιλλόω, which according to Phot. (from Archipp. 52) = τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἠρέμα παραφέρειν 'to gently turn away the eyes'.

σίλλυβον [n.] an edible thistle (Dsc., Ruf. apud Orib., H.). ◂?▸ •DER σίλλυβα [pl.] 'fringes, tassels' (Poll., H.), σίλλυβος 'strip of parchment or paper attached to scrolls' (Cic. Att.), σιλλυβιᾶν (cod. σικυλλιᾶν)· τὸ τοὺς κροσσοὺς ἀποσείεσθαι 'to shake the tassels, fringes' (H.).
•ETYM Origin unclear. For the formation, compare plant names like ὄροβος, σκόλυβος, ὄχθοιβος, κόσυμβος, etc., which usually have no etymology (cf. Chantraine 1933: 261 f.). Fur.: 67 compares Lat. titulus, originally an appendix to the scroll, and reconstructs tit(o)l-ob^{h}- > sisl-ub-*.

σίλουρος [m.] a big river fish, probably 'catfish' or 'sturgeon', Lat. silūrus (mid. com., Hell. pap., Str., etc.). ◂PG(S)▸ •DER σιλουρισμός [m.] 'serving a σ.' (Diph.).

•ETYM In the older literature, it is derived from οὐρά 'tail' and an unclear first element (compare μελάν-ουρος for the formation), the first element being connected by Solmsen IF 30 (1912): 9ff. with *σιλος, as in ► σίλλος and ► Σιληνός. However, the word is rather formed with the Pre-Greek suffix -ουρος.

σίλφη [f.] an insect, 'cockroach, carrion beetle' (Arist., Gal., Ael., AP). ◅PG(V)▻ •VAR τίλφη (Luc.).
•ETYM Etymology unclear. The variant τίλφη in Luc. could be an artificial Atticism (cf. Schwyzer: 319) or show a Pre-Greek alternation τ-/σ-. The form formally and semantically resembles ► σέρφος, a small winged insect, 'gnat, winged ant'. Fur.: 167, etc. connects Lat. delpa (an insect) as well, all of which would point to Pre-Greek origin.

σίλφιον [n.] a plant known especially from Cyrene, 'silphium'. ◅PG(V)▻ •VAR σέλπον· σίλφιον (H.).
•DER σιλφιωτός (Ar.), σεσιλφιωμένος (Philox., not certain) 'prepared with σ.', σιλφιόεις 'made of σ.' (Nic.).
•ETYM The variants σίλφιον, σέλπον, together with Lat. sirpe 'id.', point to a loanword of unknown origin. Fur.: 163, etc. also mentions Berb. aselbu 'iuncus maritimus'.

σίμβλος [m.] 'beehive' (Hes., Ar., Arist., Theoc., A. R.). ◅PG?▻
•VAR -αι (H.), plur. also -α (Opp.).
•DER σιμβλ-ήϊος, [f.] -ηΐς 'belonging to the beehive' (A. R., AP), -ιος 'id.' (Dsc., Ruf. apud Orib.; uncertain), -εύω [v.] 'to seek shelter in a beehive' (AP), -ωσις [f.] an eye-disease (Hippiatr.).
•ETYM Origin unclear. Older proposals (cf. Frisk s.v.) are all uncompelling. Fur.: 286 compares words like σιπύη 'box for keeping flour and bread', σίφνις 'id.', σιβαία 'wallet' and Lat. simpulum 'a small ladle', simpuvium 'vessel for offering liquids, a sacrificial bowl'. Also uncertain.

σιμίκιον [n.] musical instrument with five strings (Poll. 4, 59). ◅?▻
•ETYM Unknown.

σιμός [adj.] 'having an impressed, pouting nose, snub- or flat-nosed' (opposite of γρυπός), 'bent upward, rising, concave, hollow' (opposite of κυρτός), metaph. 'impudent, mischievous' (IA). ◅PG? ▻ •COMP Also with modifying or further characterising prefixes like ἀνα-, ἐν-, ὑπο-.
•DER σιμ-ότης [f.] 'snub-nosedness, upward bending' (Pl., X.), σιμ-όομαι, -όω 'to become snub-nosed, bend upward, bend off' (Hp., Th., X., Arist., etc.), also with ἀπο-, ἐπι-, ὑπο-; thence -ωσις [f.] 'snub-nosedness' (Gal.), ἀπο- 'bending off course of a ship' (App.), -ωμα [n.] 'curved upward prow of a ship' (Plu.)), -αίνω [v.] 'to bend the nose upward' (Call. Iamb.), σίμιον· αἰγιαλός 'sea-shore, beach' (H.), PN Σῖμ-ος, -ύλος, -ιχος, etc., also -ίας, whence the appellative *σιμίας [m.] probably "flat-nose", 'monkey' (taken over in Latin as sīmia 'monkey'), HN Σιμόεις, -εντος (Il., etc.), appurtenance uncertain.

•ETYM Oxytone adjectives in -μός are rare (Chantraine 1933: 151), but note that e.g. θερμός and δοχμός are both of IE origin. The word σιμός may theoretically be Indo-European, and Janda 2005 derives it from tih*$_2$-mó- literally "struck" > 'flattened (nose)', from the root tieh*$_2$- 'to strike', which he also assumes for σῆμα 'sign, mark' < tiéh*$_2$-mn "what is carved", σῶμα 'corpse' < tióh*$_2$-mn "the killed one" and σῖτος 'grain, food' < tih*$_2$-tó- "threshed", and which is attested as such in Hitt. zāḫ-ⁱ / zaḫḫ- 'to hit, beat' < tioh*$_2$- (cf. Kloekhorst 2008: 1019). This construction seems highly improbable in view of the wide range of attested meanings, and the fact that a meaning 'strike' is not attested in Greek. Moreover, neuters in *-mn do not regularly take the o-grade, so σῶμα must be left out in any case.
Older connections with Germanic words like OHG swīnan, ON svína 'to disappear, decrease' or MHG swīmen 'to stagger, be suspended', ON svíma 'to float, stagger, swoon' (Pok. 1041) are formally impossible (su̯-* does not yield Gr. σ-) and semantically remote. In conclusion, σῑμός is most likely Pre-Greek, although there are no further indications for this. It was taken over in Latin as sīmus 'id.'.

σῖμος [m.] a fish (Opp., Ath.).
•DER Diminutive σιμ-άριον (pap. VI-VII^p).
•ETYM Sometimes connected with σῑμός 'snub-nosed, bent upward', with which it is formally identical, apart from the opposite accentuation. Nevertheless, semantically such a connection cannot be proven.

σίνᾱπι [n.] 'mustard, mustard plaster'. ◅PG▻ •VAR σίνηπι, -απυ, -απις, -ηπυς (Hell and late). A variant is ► νᾶπυ.
•COMP *σιναπο-πηκτή may be found in Lat. senpecta (late).
•DER σινάπιον (EM, gloss.), -ίδιον (Alex. Trall.), -ινος 'of mustard' (Dsc., Gal.), -ηρός 'spiced with mustard' (pap.). -ίζω 'to apply a mustard plaster', whence -ισμός (medic.).
•ETYM Σίνᾱπι(ς) / σίνᾱπυ(ς) cannot be separated from νᾶπυ 'mustard'. An alternation σι-/ zero is also found in loans from Egypt (σίλι : σέσελι, σάρι : σίσαρον), on the basis of which Egyptian origin for this word has been suggested (Hehn-Schrader 1911: 211, André Latomus 15 (1956): 296ff; rejected by Mayrhofer Sprache 7 (1961): 185ff.). Instead, the words can be better explained from a Pre-Greek form sʸnāpi*. Pre-consonantal palatalized consonants yielded both Cι and C (e.g. κνώψ : κινώπετον < kʸn-, λασιτός : λάσται < lasʸt-); cf. Beekes 2008. In this case, sʸnāpV* yielded both σίνᾱπ- and *σνᾱπ-. In initial position, σν- regularly yielded Gr. ν- (cf. e.g. PIE sneh₁ur- > Gr. νεῦρον 'sinew'). Gr. νᾶπυ is taken over in Latin as nāpus 'turnip' (Plin.) and σίναπι(ς) as sinapi(s) 'mustard', from which Go. sina(s), OHG senf 'mustard', etc., have been borrowed.

σινδών, -όνος [f.] 'fine woven cloth, fine linen, garment; blanket, etc. made thereof' (Hdt., Th., trag., Hell. and late). ◅LW Sem. (Anat.?)▻ •COMP σινδονο-φόρος [m.] 'wearer of a σ.' (Delos, Tegea).
•DER σινδόν-ιον [n.] 'garment, etc. made of σ.' (Hell. and late), -ίσκος [m.] diminutive (Samos IV^a), -ίτης, Dor. -ίτας [m.] 'wearer of an σ.' (Str.), 'garment made of σ.' (Hell. and late), also attributive (τελαμών, χιτών (Poll., Phot.), -ιάζω 'to cover in σ.' (pap.).

•ETYM Possibly a loanword from Semitic, e.g. Hebr. sādīn 'linen undercloth, kind of shirt' (Lewy 1895: 84f., E. Masson 1967: 25f.), although the formal connection is rather weak. Taken over in Latin as sindon 'id.'.

σινίον [n.] · κόσκινον 'sieve' (H.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR = σεννίον (PRyl. 139, 9 [I^{p}])? σείνιος τόπος 'sieving, winnowing area' (pap. IV^{p}).
•DER Aor. σινιάσαι 'to sift, sieve' (Ev. Luc. 22, 31, H., Phot., EM, Suid., gloss.), whence σινί-ασμα [n.] 'recrement, detrimentum', = ῥυπαρία τοῦ σίτου 'waste product of grain' (gloss.), -ατήριον· κόσκινον 'sieve' (H.)?
•ETYM A connection with ►σήθω, σάω, ►διαττάω 'to sieve' < PIE *kieh$_2$- seems phonetically impossible. Instead, the alternation σιν- : σενν- : σειν- rather points to a Pre-Greek origin (Fur.: 357).

σίνομαι [v.] 'to rob, pillage, destroy, damage' (Od., epic, Sapph., Ion., X., Hell. and late, also Argos, Crete, Herakleia; Hdt., Hp. also -έομαι; not in Att.). ◂?▸
•VAR Very rarely attested in aorist: ἐσίναντο (Hdt.), ἐπεσίνατο (Nic.), προσίναντες· βλάψαντες 'disabling, hindering' (H.).
•DIAL Rarely with ἐπι-, κατα-, προ-.
•COMP σιν-όδων, -όδους, -οντος [m.] a fish (Arist., Dorio), folk-etymological for συν-όδων (see Strömberg 1943: 45). Unclear however is σινάμωρος 'harmful, baneful, wicked, mischievous, sweet-toothed, lustful' vel sim., with -ία, -έω, -ευμα (Ion., com., Arist. et al.); because of its short ι, it is not derived from the verb, but from the noun σίνος.
•DER σίνος [n.] 'damage, harm, disaster' (Ion., A., Arist.), whence ἀ-σινής 'unharmed, harmless' (λ 110, Sapph., Ion., A., Pl., X., Hell. and late), with opposite ἐπι-σινής (Thphr.), σίντης [m.] 'destroyer, robber', mostly of beasts of prey, 'thief' (Il., Hell. and late epic), σίντωρ [m.] 'id.' (Crete IV^{a}, AP), Σίντιες [m.pl.] EN of the old population of Lemnos (Hom. et al.) (appurtenance uncertain, according to Kretschmer Glotta 30 (1943): 117 lit. "the robbers" and to be distinguished from the Thracian Σιντοι), Σίνις, -ιδος [m.] PN of a mythical robber (B., E., X.), also appellative 'robber, destroyer' (A. Ag. 217, Call., Lyc.), σιναρός 'damaged' (Hp.), formation like ῥυπαρός, etc.; σινότης [f.] 'damage, flaw' (gloss.), ἐπισίνιος· ἐπίβουλος 'treacherous' (H.), σινόω (προ-) = σίνομαι (Man., Vett. Val.), whence σινωτικός 'harmful' (late), σίνδρων = πονηρός 'toilsome' (Phot.), also 'slave born of a slave' (Seleucus apud Ath.), also PN, σινδρῶν· πονηρῶν, βλαπτικῶν 'toilsome, hurtful, mischievous' (H.).
•ETYM Because of its long -ι-, the present σίνομαι is best regarded as a yod-formation *σίν-i̯ομαι (the present σινέομαι must be secondary, for which cf. Schwyzer: 721; on the unclear form σίνονται Sapph. 26, 4, see Hamm 1957: §217a). If it is of IE origin, σίνομαι must contain a presential -ν-, just as κλίνω and κρίνω, which spread not only to the aorist forms (quite possible in view of their rarity), but also to nominal derivatives like σίνος, σίντης, etc. (which is more problematic). Assuming a preform *τϝι-ν-i̯ε/ο-, the verb has been connected with OE þwīnan, etc. 'to become weak, disappear' (Wood Mod. Phil. 5 (1907): 268), but these should rather be derived from the root *d^{h}g^{wh}ei-, together with dwīnan 'id.', Gr. ►φθίνω 'to decline, decay'. Further etymology unclear.

σίνων, -ωνος [m.] 'stone parsley, Sisum amomum' (Dsc., Plin.), σίνων ἄγριος = πευκέδανον 'sulphurwort' (Ps.-Dsc.). ◂?▸ •VAR V.l. σίσων.
•ETYM According to Dsc. 3, 55, this plant is at home in Syria (cf. André 1956 s.v. sinōn). Origin unexplained.

σίον [n.] name of several marsh- or meadow-plants, 'Sium' (Speus. apud Ath., Theoc., Dsc.), also identified with σισύμβριον and ἄνησσον (Dsc., Ps.-Dsc.). ◂?▸
•DIAL Myc. TN si-jo-wo-te /sijo-wontei/.
•ETYM Unexplained. See CEG 3 = RPh. 72 (1998): 138.

σιπαλός ⇒σιφλός.

σίππιον ⇒στυππεῖον.

σιπταχόρας [m.] 'lac-tree, Schleichera trijuga' (Ctes.). ◂LW Orient.▸ •ETYM Oriental loanword.

σιπύη (-ύα) [f.] 'box for keeping flour and bread' (com., AP, Poll.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR συπύη (pap. III^{a}), σιπυΐς [f.] (Hp.), ἰπύα (H.), σίπυδνος (Orac. apud Luc. Alex., cf. Fur. 177); note hομοσεπυοι (inscr. Selinous, RPh. 69: 128, l. 3).
•ETYM Taken to be a loanword from Semitic by E. Masson 1967: 44f., based on comparison with Hebr. sap, etc. This may explain variants like σίφνις 'id.' (Poll., H.) and σιβαία = πήρα 'wallet'. Perhaps Lat. simpulum, simpuvium belong here as well. The variation may also be explained by Pre-Greek origin.

σίραιον [n.] 'boiled wine' (Antiph., Alex. Nic.); also as adjective: σίραιος οἶνος. ◂?▸ •ETYM Perhaps derived from σειρόω (see ►Σείριος). Fur.: 255 considers this word to be Pre-Greek because of the element -αιον.

σιρός [m.] 'pit for keeping corn, silo' (Att. inscr. V^{a}, S. Fr., E. Fr., D., Hell. and late), also (metaph.) 'pitfall' (Longus) and = δεσμωτήριον 'prison' (H.). ◂PG▸ •VAR The quantity of -ι- is unstable: usually short, later also σειρός.
•COMP σιρο-μάστης [m.] lit. "seeker of pits", 'probe, gauge' (Ph. Bel., LXX).
•ETYM Technical word without etymology. The variation between σῐρ-, σῑρ-, σειρ- is hard to explain from an IE point of view. Connection with ►σιμός 'stub-nosed, bent upwards' through a meaning 'bending in, falling in' (thus Solmsen IF 30 (1912): 11 et al.) is improbable.

σίσαρον [n.] 'Pastinaca sativa' (Epich., Diocl. Fr., Dsc.). ◂?▸
•VAR -ιον [n.] piece of jewelry (com. after Poll. 5, 101, H., Phot.).
•ETYM The word recalls ἄσαρον 'hazelwort', ἡδύσαρον 'axe-weed'. Strömberg 1940: 157f. interprets σίσαρον as a reduplication of σάρον as attested in Call. Del. 225, but this is semantically improbable (cf. Frisk s.v.). WH s.v. siser compares σάρι [n.] (Thphr.), a kind of rush. Unclear.

σισύμβριον [n.] 'bergamot mint, Mentha aquatica' (com., Arist., Thphr., Dsc.), 'watercress, Nasturtium officinale' (Dsc., Plin.), (metaph.) a piece of jewelry (com. after Poll.). ◄PG?►
•DER σίσυμβρ-ον [n.] 'id.' (Nic., AP, back-formation), -ινος 'made of σ.' (Antiph., Thphr.).
•ETYM Etymology unclear. Strömberg 1940: 158[1] regards the word as a reduplicated formation from ►θύμβρα, a sweet-scented plant, with dialectal development of θ > σ. Sometimes seen as a variant of ►σισυρίγχιον [n.] 'barbary nut, Iris sisyrinchium'. Probably a Pre-Greek word.

σισύρα [f.] 'thick, villous cloak (made of goat fur), fleece cloak' (Ar.). ◄PG(S)► •VAR σίσυρνα (also -νη, cf. Solmsen 1909: 259), -νος [m.] (H.), also -ος and σίσυς (H.).
•COMP E.g. σισυρνο-φόρος 'wearer of a σ.' (Hdt.), of the Iranian Πάκτυες.
•DER σισυρ-ωτός 'made into a σ.' (Athen IV[a]), -νώδης 'like a σ.' (S. Fr. 413).
•ETYM Unclear etymology; according to Fur.: 215, it is of Pre-Greek origin.

σισυρίγχιον [n.] 'barbary nut, Iris sisyrinchium' (Thphr.). ◄PG?► •ETYM Etymology unclear. Strömberg 1940: 158[1] regards the word as a reduplicated formation from ►σῦριγξ 'quill, flute, syrinx' with a χ-suffix. Sometimes connected with ►σισύμβριον 'bergamot mint, watercress'. Probably a Pre-Greek word.

σίσων ⇒σίνων.

σίτλα [f.] 'pail' (Ulp., Alex. Trall.). ◄LW Lat.► •ETYM Borrowed from Lat. situla.

σῖτος [m.] 'corn (especially wheat), bread, food' (Il.), see Moritz Class. Quart. 49 (1955): 135ff. for the semantics. ◄?►
•VAR Plur. σῖτα [n.].
•DIAL Myc. si-to.
•COMP Numerous compounds, e.g. σιτ-αγωγός 'conveying corn' (Hdt., Th.), σιτ-ηρέσιον [n.] 'provision of grain, (money for) victualling, pay' (X., D., Hell. and late), σύσ-σιτος [m.] 'table companion, messmate' (Thgn., etc.), whence συσσίτ-ια [pl.], -ία, -ικός, -έω, -ησις.
•DER σιτία [n.pl.], rare -ίον [sg.] 'bread, fare, provision', also 'corn' (IA prose, com.), diminutive σιτ-άριον [n.] 'corn, bread' (Hp., pap.), -ανίας (πυρός) [m.] 'kind of wheat' (Thphr.), formation like κριθανίας; -ώματα [pl.] 'provision' (pap. II[p], cf. Chantraine 1933: 186f.), -ών, -ῶνος [m.] 'granary, cornfield' (Plu. et al.), -ώ [f.] epithet of Demeter (Hell. and late), σιτ-ηρός (Hp., Arist., etc.), -ικός (Hell. and late), -ινος (late) 'concerning the corn', -αῖα [n.pl.] 'corn-rents' (Olymos), -ώδης 'cornlike', σιτώδη [n.pl.] 'corn' (Thphr., etc.), σιτ-έομαι [v.] 'to feed' (ω 209 [σιτέσκοντο]), also with κατα-, etc.; thence -ησις [f.] '(public) maintenance' (IA); also -εύω, -εύομαι [v.] 'to feed, supply' (Hdt., Hell. and late), whence -ευτός (X., etc.), -ευσις, -εύσιμος, -ευτής, -εία (Hell. and late); -ίζω, -ίζομαι 'id.', often with ἐπι-, whence ἐπι-σιτ-ισμός 'victualling' (X., D., etc.).

•ETYM Often explained as a loanword from other IE languages, e.g. from Ru. žíto 'corn', OPr. geits 'bread' (Wiedemann BB 27 (1902): 213) or from Go. hvaiteis 'wheat', etc. (Meyer 1892: 51[2]), or as a substrate word (taken with e.g. Basque zitu 'corn, harvest' or Sum. zid 'flour').
Nevertheless, the word looks IE, and Janda 2005 has suggested to reconstruct it as a substantivization of an adjective *σῖτό- 'threshed' derived from *tih$_2$-tó-, literally "struck", a *-to-ptc. from a PIE verbal root *tieh$_2$- 'to strike, hit' as attested in Hitt. zāḫ-[i] / zaḫḫ- 'to hit, beat' < *tioh$_2$- (cf. Kloekhorst 2008: 1019). This root *tieh$_2$- would also be visible in ►σῆμα 'sign, mark' < *tiéh$_2$-mn "what is carved", ►σῶμα 'corpse' < *tióh$_2$-mn "the killed one", and ►σῖμός 'snub-nosed' < *tih$_2$-mó- "flattened". As explained under ►σῖμός, this etymology is of doubtful value.

σίττα [interj.] cry of herdsmen (Theoc.). ◄PG► •VAR Also ψίττα (sch.); similar ψύττα (E. Cyc. 49, Luc., AP); φιττα (Poll. 9, 122 and 127) cf. Fur.: 329.
•ETYM Elementary interjection; see Schwyzer KZ 58 (1931): 170ff. and Kretschmer Glotta 21 (1933): 172.

σίττη [f.] 'kind of woodpecker or nuthatch' (Arist., Call.). ◄PG?►
•VAR Dial. also ἴττα, ἵπτα (H.).
•ETYM Clearly onomatopoeic; cf. Thompson 1895 s.v. with important details. Fur.: 325 also connects βίττακος, ψίττακος 'parrot'.

σιττύβαι [f.] δερμάτιναι στολαί, τὰ μικρὰ ἱμαντάρια 'leather garments, the small halyards' (H.). Further σίττυβα [n.pl.] · χιτὼν ἐκ δερμάτων 'frock made of hide' (Poll. 7, 70), σίττυβον· τὸ μικρὸν δέρμα 'small hide' (Hdn. Gr. 1, 378) and σίττυβοι· κροσσοί, ἱμάντες, θύσανοι 'tassels, leather straps, fringes' (Phot., Eust.). ◄PG(S)► •ETYM Cf. Grošelj Živa Ant. 5 (1955): 230.

σίττυβος [m.] a κάκκαβος-like cauldron (Antiph. 182, 7). ◄PG(V)► •VAR σίττυβον, -α, -αι 'skin, leather, leather strap, leather jacket' (H., Poll., Phot., Hdn. Gr.), σίσυβοι = κροσσοί, ἱμάντες, θύσανοι 'tassels, leather straps, fringes' (Phot., Eust.).
•DER Besides σίττυβον, -α, -αι as expressions for 'skin, leather, leather strap, leather jacket' (H., Poll., Phot., Hdn. Gr.). Also σίσυβοι = κροσσοί, ἱμάντες, θύσανοι (Phot., Eust.); in the same mg. also ►σίλλυβα, probably through contamination.
•ETYM If we assume that the original meaning of this word was 'leather bag', which developed into 'kettle, pan', then the appurtenance of σίττυβον 'skin, leather' and σίσυβοι 'leather straps' makes sense. See Frisk s.v. for improbable attempts at etymologizing. This word is clearly Pre-Greek instead, reflecting *sit^{y}ub-.

σίφαρος (σεί-) [m.] 'topsail, topgallant sail' (Arr.), 'curtain in the theatre' (Ephesus). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also σῖπαρος (v.l. Arr. Epict. 3, 2, 18).
•ETYM Technical word without etymology. The variations σιφ- : σειφ- : σῖπ- clearly point to a non-IE origin (cf. Fur.: 163). Perhaps connected with Sem. šap^{e}rīr, Assyr. šuparraru 'to spread out' (Frisk s.v.). Taken over in Latin as sīp(h)arum, -rium.

σιφλός [adj.] describing physical and psychological defects, 'crippled, lame' vel sim. (πόδα σιφλός A. R.), 'blinded, foolish (Γλαῦκος, Eleg. Alex. Adesp. 1, 2; of fishes Opp.); also 'porous, hollow' (νάρθηξ, Eust.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR σιπαλός, σιφνός, see below.
•DER σιφλώσειεν [aor.opt.], verb used in a curse (Ξ 142), σίφλος [m.] 'infirmity' (Lyc.), -ωμα [n.] 'porosity, hollowness' (Eust.).
•ETYM For the formation, compare τυφλός, χωλός, etc. (cf. Chantraine 1933: 238). Besides σιφλός and derivatives, we also find σιφνός· κενός 'empty, void, bereft' (H.), σιφνύει· κενοῖ 'empties' (H.), σιφνεύς [m.] 'mole' (Lyc.), although these words with ν-suffix could be derived from ▸σίφων 'tube'. More importantly, we find σιπαλός 'blinded(?), maimed(?)' (Call. Fr. anon. 106, Ĥ., Eust.). Because of the variants σιφλ- / σιφν- / σιπαλ-, the word is probably of Pre-Greek origin. The late meaning 'hollow' may have been based on the formal similarity with σίφων [m.] 'tube, etc.'.

σιφνεύς [m.] 'mole'. ⇒σιφλός and σίφων.

σίφων, -ωνος [m.] 'tube (especially for draining water), fire-engine, fountain, wine siphon, siphon, etc.' (Hippon., E., Hell. and late); also plant name = αἰγίλωψ 'oat-grass' (Ps.-Dsc.). ◂?▸
•COMP σιφωνο-λογία 'weeding of σ.' (pap.).
•DER σιφών-ιον [n.] = σίφων (H.), -ίζω 'to draw off wine with a siphon' (Ar.), σιφνεύς [m.] 'mole' (appurtenance uncertain, perhaps through "digger of tubes"?), σιφνός· κενός 'empty, void, bereft' (H.) (appurtenance uncertain).
•ETYM Technical term, formation like ἄμβων, δόλων, etc. (cf. Chantraine 1933: 162). Etymology unclear; possibly onomatopoeic?

σιωπάω [v.] 'to be silent, keep secret', also 'to silence' (Hom.). ◂PG(V)▸ •VAR Aor. -ῆσαι (Il.), fut. -ήσομαι (Att.), -ήσω (Aeschin., Hell. and late), perf. σεσιώπηκα, pass. σιωπηθῆναι, -ηθήσομαι (Att.); also σωπάω in διασωπάσομαι, σεσωπαμένον (Pi.), εὐσωπία· ἡσυχία 'rest, quiet' (H.).
•COMP Also with κατα-, δια-, παρα-, etc.
•DER σιωπ-ή [f.] 'silence' (Pi., Att.), often attested in dat.sg. -ῇ 'in silence, silently' (also Hom.); -ηλός (E., Arist., Call., etc.), -ηρός (X., AP) 'silent', -ησις [f.] (also ἀπο-, παρα-, ὑπο-) 'taciturnity' (Rhet. et al.).
•ETYM Although superficially resembling σιγάω, σιγή, ▸σῖγα, a connection is unlikely. Because of the alternation σιωπ- / σωπ-, an IE origin is improbable (connections with e.g. Go. sweiban 'to stop, suspend' (see references in Frisk s.v.) < suiop-* are unconvincing. It is rather of Pre-Greek origin, reflecting sʸōp-* or sʸup-* (cf. Beekes 2008).

σκάζω [v.] 'to limp' (Il., epic poet., also Hdt., LXX). ◂IE sken(ǵ)-* 'limp, be slanting' or IE skend-* 'jump'▸ •COMP Also with ἐπι-, ὑπο- (only pres. and ipf.).
•DER σκασμός [m.] 'limping' (Aq.).
•ETYM The noun σκασμός is attested very late (II^p), and can easily be a back-formation on the basis of σκάζω. The verb itself can go back to earlier *σκάγ-ιω or σκάδ-ιω. Usually reconstructed as skn̥(ǵ)-ie/o- and connected with Skt. khañjati 'to limp', OHG hinkan 'to limp' < (s)ken(ǵ)-e-*, ON skakkr 'limping' (thus Frisk s.v., LIV² s.v. (s)ken(ǵ)-*). Alternatively, one could assume a connection with Skt. skándati 'to jump', Lat. scandō 'to ascend', OIr. sceinnid 'to jump' < skend-* 'to jump', which would mean that σκάζω reflects skn̥d-ie/o-*.

σκαιός 1 [adj.] 'left, western' (especially epic poet., rarely attested in this meaning since Il.), 'unfavorable, left-handed, inapt' (IA). ◂IE skeh$_2$-i-uo-*▸ •DER σκαι-ουργέω 'to do wrong' (Ar.), σκαιό-της [f.] 'improper behavior, inapt' (IA), -σύνα [f.] 'id.' (S. [lyr.]).
•ETYM Formally and semantically identical with Lat. scaevus 'left, inauspicious', on the basis of which we can reconstruct skeh$_2$iuo-*. According to Steinbauer 1996 (unpublished presentation, cited in Janda 2000: 118 and Stüber IJDLLR 3 (2006): 61-72: 68), this word could be identical to σκαιός 'shady', derived from PIE sḱ(e)h$_2$-ieh$_2$-* 'shade' as attested in Gr. ▸σκιά [f.] 'shadow', Skt. chāyā́- 'shadow, reflection', YAv. a-saiia- [adj.] 'that does not cast a shadow', etc. The semantic development may have been 'shaded' > 'western', and when referring to hands, 'shaded hand' > 'improper hand = left hand'. Cf. also the rhyming word ▸λαιός 'left'.

σκαιός 2 'shady'. ⇒σκιά.

σκαίρω [v.] 'to hop, jump, dance' (epic Il.), only pres. and ipf. ◂IE? sker-* 'jump'▸ •VAR καρθμοί· κινήσεις 'motion, dance, movement' (H.).
•COMP Also with ἀνα-, δια-, ὑπο-, etc.
•DER σκαρ-θμός [m.] 'jump' (Hell. epic), also in compounds, e.g. ἐύ-, πολύ-σκαρθμος 'with fair, many jumps' (Il.); σκάρος [n.] 'id.' (EM), whence ἀ-σκαρές· ἀκίνητον 'unmoved, motionless' (H.), σκαρία· παιδιά 'childish play, amusement, fun' (H.), diminutive -ιον [n.] (pap.). σκαρ-ίζω [v.] 'to hop, tap, flounce' (Gp.), whence -ισμός [m.] (Eust., H.), ἀσκαρίζω (Hp., Cratin.). Perhaps also σκάρος [m.] 'Scarus cretensis, parrot-fish' (Epich., Arist., pap., etc.), if named after its lively movements, cf. Strömberg 1943: 52; σκαρῖτις [f.] a stone (Plin.), if named after its color, cf. Redard 1949: 61. See ▸ἀσκαρίς and ▸σκιρτάω, and cf. also ▸σκαρδαμύσσω.
•ETYM Etymology unclear. LIV² (s.v. 1. (s)(ḱ)er-*) connects W cerddaf 'to walk', and reconstructs σκαίρω as s(ḱ)r-ie/o-*. Although the latter reconstruction would indeed regularly yield the Greek verb, the interpretation of W cerddaf as reflecting ker-ie/o-* is not ascertained. Moreover, the semantic connection is quite weak. Other connections, e.g. as mentioned in Frisk s.v., do not make more sense. The alternation σκαρίζω / ἀσκαρίζω is unexplained.

σκαλαθύρω [v.] Cf. σκαλαθύρων· ἀκολασταίνων, ὁ σκαλεύων 'licentious, stirring, poking' (H.). ◂GR▸ •DER σκαλαθυρμάτια [n.pl.] 'petty quibbles' (Ar. Nu. 630).
•ETYM The verb is used as a euphemism for 'to copulate' in Ar. Ec. 611, and is possibly built on a combination of σκάλλω, σκαλεύω 'to stir, hoe, poke' and ἀθύρω 'to play' (cf. Schwyzer: 645 on the type of compound). See ▸σκάλλω.

σκαλαπάζει [v.] ῥέμβεται 'roams, rolls about' (H.), σκαλπάζειν· ῥεμβωδῶς βαδίζειν 'to wander about roamingly' (H.). ◄PG► •ETYM The alternation σκαλαπ-/ σκαλπ- is suspicious, and if the noun ►κάλπη 'trot' is cognate (thus Fur.: 379), we probably are dealing with a Pre-Greek word.

σκαληνός ⇒σκάλλω.

σκαλίας [m.] 'fruit shell of the κάκτος' (Thphr.). ◄PG► •ETYM Frisk s.v. connects OHG scala 'shell, pod', but Fur.: 373 rather adduces ἀσκαλία, ἀσκάληρον 'fruit of the artichoke', which would point to a Pre-Greek origin.

σκαλίδρις [f.] a speckled water-bird, probably 'redshank, Scolopax calidris' (Arist. HA 593b). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also καλίδρις (v.l.).
•ETYM The variation σκ-/ κ- may point to a Pre-Greek origin.

σκαλλίον [n.] a small cup (Philet. apud Ath., H.). ◄?► •ETYM According to Bechtel 1921, 1: 125 possibly connected with ON skalli [m.] 'brain-pan, skull'. Quite uncertain, however.

σκάλλω [v.] 'to stir up, hoe' (Hdt., Arist., Thphr., LXX). ◄IE skelh*$_{2/3}$- 'split, tear'► •VAR Only pres. and ipf. (aor. ipv. περίσκαλον Gp.).
•COMP Rarely with δια-, etc.
•DER σκαλ-ίς, -ίδος [f.] 'hoe' (Att. inscr. IV^a, Str., J.), whence -ιδεύω 'to hoe' (gloss.), -σις [f.] 'hoeing' (Thphr.), -μός [m.] 'id.' (pap. III^p), -μός [m.] 'thole' (h. Hom., A., E., Arist., Plb.), -μίδιον [n.] 'id.' (Com. Adesp.), -μη [f.] 'short sword, knife' (S. Fr. 620), = μάχαιρα Θρᾳκία 'Thracian knife' (H.), -ηνός (-ηνής) 'craggy, rough, uneven', (of numbers) 'odd', (of triangles) 'scalene', (of cones) 'slant' (Democr. apud Thphr., Hp., Pl., Arist., etc.); thence -ηνία, -ηνόομαι (Plu.); ἄ-σκαλος 'unhoed' (Theoc.), probably metrical for ἀσκάλευτος; verb σκαλ-εύω 'to hoe, scrape, stir up' (Hp., Ar., Arist.), aor. σκαλεῦσαι, also with ἀνα-, ἐκ-, ὑπο-, etc. Thence σκαλ-εύς [m.] 'hoe' (X., Poll.), -ευσις [f.] 'scraping' (Aq.), -ευμα [n.] 'scrapings' (sch., H.), -ευθρον [n.] 'poker' (Poll.), -εία [f.] 'hoeing' (Gp. tit.). Also σκαλ-ίζω (ἀ-) [v.] 'id.' (Phryn.), whence -ισμός [m.] 'hoeing' (pap., Eun.), -ιστή-ριον [n.] 'hoe' (sch.).
•ETYM This verb has generally been connected with Lith. skeliù, skélti 'to split; strike fire', Arm. c'elum 'to split, tear' and Hitt. iškalla-ⁱ / iškall- 'to slit, split, tear'. The acute intonation of the Lithuanian verb points to the presence of a laryngeal, skelH-, and Kloekhorst 2008: 399f. argues that on the basis of Hittite the laryngeal cannot be h$_1$, which means that the root must have been skelh*$_{2/3}$-. The geminate -λλ- of σκάλλω seems to go back to either *σκάλ-ι̯ω (with a yod-present as in Lith. skiliù 'to strike fire') or *σκάλ-νω (with a nasal present like in Lith. skįlù 'to split off, separate oneself'). In the first case, we could assume loss of H* before i̯* (Pinault's Law), thus sklh*$_{2/3}$-ie/o- > skl-i̯e/o-* > σκάλ-ι̯ω. In the latter case, we could assume that an original skl-ne-h$_{2/3}$- first yielded *σκαλνᾱ-/*σκαλνω-, on the basis of which a thematicized *σκάλν-ε/ο- was formed (similarly in ►βάλλω; note, however, that the latter derives from a root in *-h$_1$, and that a nasal present from a root skelh*$_1$- would be easier for σκάλλω). It is unnecessary to assume that σκάλλω reflects a laryngeal-less root skel-*, pace LIV^2. The derivatives of σκάλλω all show a stem σκαλ- with single -λ-, but this need not reflect an old situation; compare σφαλ- from σφάλλω and θαλ- from θάλλω, etc. See on ►σκαλαθύρω; appurtenance of ►σκῶλος and ►σκόλοψ is uncertain.

σκάλοψ ⇒σκόλοψ.

σκαμβός [adj.] 'crooked, bandy-legged' (LXX, Hell. pap., Gal.). ◄PG(S)► •DER σκαμβό-πους 'with crooked feet' (Ps.-Archyt.), σκαμβόομαι 'to curve' (Aq.), σκάμβυκες· σκόλοπες, χάρακες 'pointed object, stake' (H.), σκαμβάλυξ· σκαμβός, στρεβλός 'crooked, twisted' (H.), σκαμβηρίζοντες· ὀλισθαίνοντες 'slipping and falling' (H.).
•ETYM This word cannot be separated from ►σκιμβός 'lame', and the variation σκαμβ-/ σκιμβ- as well as the derivatives with the non-IE suffixes -υκ- and -αλ- point to a Pre-Greek origin of this word (unless OIr. camm 'crooked' < kamb-* points to an European substrate word). Etymological proposals as mentioned in Frisk s.v. are unconvincing.

σκαμμάδες [f.?] πόρναι 'prostitutes' (H.). ◄PG?► •ETYM No etymology. Given the meaning, it is probably a Pre-Greek word.

σκαμ(μ)ωνία [f.] kind of scammony, 'Convulvulus scammonia' (Eub., Arist.). ◄PG(V)► •VAR Also ἀσκαμωνία (Gp.).
•DER -ώνιον (Nic. Al. 565) 'juice of the σ.', -ῑ́της οἶνος (Dsc., Plin.), also κάμων (Nic. Al. 484).
•ETYM On the formation, cf. Chantraine 1933: 208. The variants σκαμ-/ σκαμμ-/ ἀσκαμ- point to a Pre-Greek origin for this word. Not related to ►κύμῑνον.

σκάνδαλον [n.] 'trap', usually (Semitism) 'temptation, scandal' (LXX, NT; PCair. Zen. 608, 7; III^a [-άνων gen. pl.]). ◄PG?, LW IE?► •DER σκανδαλ-ίζω 'to tempt, be offensive, annoy', -ίζομαι 'to be tempted to sin, to be offended' (LXX, NT), whence -ιστής [m.] an acrobat, e.g. 'trapeze artist' (SIG 847, 5 [II^p]), -όω 'id.' (Aq.), σκανδάλ-η [f.] 'stick of a trap' (Alciphr. 3, 21, 1: κρεᾴδιον τῆς σκανδάλης ἀπαρτήσας; reading not quite certain), σκάνδαλος· ἐμποδισμός 'hindering' (H.), σκανδάληθρον [n.] (Ar. Ach. 687: σκανδάληθρ' ἱστὰς ἐπῶν, according to sch. ad loc. τὸ ἐν ταῖς παγίσι ἐπικαμπὲς ξύλον 'the crooked stick in a trap'; accoding to Poll. 7, 114: τὸ τῇ σπαρτίνῃ προσηρτημένον 'that which is bound with the cord', in Poll. 10, 156 σκανδάληθρον is identified with παττάλιον.
•ETYM Since this noun, on the one hand, means 'trap', but on the other hand also has a derivative σκανδαλιστής 'acrobat', it is likely that σκάνδαλον is originally a technical term, possibly referring to a construction with a piece of wood hanging on ropes, which could be used as a trap as well as as an acrobat bar. Often interpreted as an IE word and connected with Lat. scandō 'to ascend', Skt. skándati 'to jump, hop, hurry' (cf. Frisk s.v.). Apart from the semantic arbitrariness of this connection, it is formally problematic as well: Gr. -α- would remain unexplained. Therefore, and since we are dealing with a technical term, it is not unlikely that it is of Pre-Greek origin, or alternatively a loan from another Indo-European language.

σκάνδιξ, -ῑκος [f.] 'wild chervil, Scandix pecten Veneris' (Ar., And., Thphr., Dsc.). ⊲PG(S)⊳ •VAR Also σκάνδυξ (v.l. Dsc. 2, 138).
•DER σκανδ-ικώδης 'like σ.' (Thphr.), σκανδικο-πώλης [n.] 'chervil-seller', nickname of Euripides (Ar.[?] in H.).
•ETYM The formation of the noun resembles ῥάδιξ, πέρδιξ and other plant names (cf. Chantraine 1933: 382). Clearly of Pre-Greek origin, cf. κασκάνδιξ, a kind of onion, which could well be a variant of it.

σκανθαρίζειν ⇒σκινθαρίζειν.

σκαπέρδα [f.] a game at the Dionysia, during which two young men sitting with their backs to each other try to lift up the other using a cord running through a pole (Poll. 9, 116, H.). ⊲PG(V)⊳ •VAR σκαπαρδεῦσαι see below, also καπαρδ-, σκαρπαδ-.
•DER σκαπερδεῦσαι (Hippon. 3, 3), acc. to H. = λοιδορῆσαι 'to rebuke', acc. to Tz. An. Ox. 3, 351 = συμμαχῆσαι 'to help, assist', καπαρδεῦσαι· μαντεύσασθαι 'to draw divinations' (H.), σκαρπαδεῦσαι· κρῖναι 'to separate, decide' (H.), σκάπαρδος· ὁ ταραχώδης καὶ ἀνάγωγος 'disturbing and ill-bred' (H.), λακκοσκάπερδον· λακκόπρωκτον 'loose-breeched' (H.). Also: καὶ πᾶν τὸ δυσχερὲς σκαπέρδα λέγεται καὶ ὁ πάσχων σκαπέρδης, 'all that is hard to manage is called σ., and he who suffers it is called σ.'.
•ETYM It is not clear exactly what the term σκαπέρδα refers to (perhaps to the cord; cf σκαπέρδαν ἕλκειν 'to draw the σ.' in Poll.). If the mentioned derivatives are cognate, the terms must be Pre-Greek in view of the variants σκαπερδ-/σκαπαρδ-/καπαρδ- (cf. Fur.: 351, 393).

σκάπετος [m.] 'digging' (Megara). ⊲PG⊳ •VAR Also κάπετος 'id. (Il., Hp.).
•ETYM Most probably Pre-Greek; see the discussion under ►σκάπτω.

σκάπτω [v.] 'to dig, dig out, work the earth', with κατα- 'to inter, bury', usually 'to demolish, raze to the ground, destroy' (h. Merc., Pi.). ⊲EUR⊳ •VAR Aor. σκάψαι (IA), fut. σκάψω, perf. ἔσκαφα, med. ἔσκαμμαι (Att.), aor. pass. σκαφ-ῆναι (E., Hell.), fut. -ήσομαι (J. et al.).
•COMP Often with prefixes, especially κατα-.
•DER σκάφη [f.] 'winnow, bowl, trough, dish', also 'ship' (IA), σκάφος [n.] 'hull of a ship', poet. also 'ship' (IA), rarely action noun 'digging' (Hes. Op. 572, Gp.), diminutive σκαφ-ίς, -ίδος [f.] 'cup' (ι 223, Hp., Ar. et al.), also 'barge' and 'spade' (Hell. and late), -ίον [n.] 'bowl, cup' (com., Hell. and late), also as a designation of a hairdress (Ar.), 'barge' (Str., Hld.), -ίδιον [n.] 'winnow, ship' (Hell. and late), σκαφ-ίτης [m.] 'boatman' vel sim. (Anon. apud Demetr., Str.), σκαφή [f.] 'digging' (Hell. pap., etc., Hdn. Gr. 1, 345), also 'grave' (Bithynia), or σκάφη?; κατα-σκαφ-ή [f.] 'tomb, demolition, destruction' (trag., also Att. prose), often plur. -αί; κατα-σκαφ-ής

